Library of Congress–Central Charge File

Call No. PN1993.M6 Date 7-16-68

Author

MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Vols 4-42, -(Vol 9) including: Studio Directory 1917
Title

Motion Picture Section, Prints & Photos Division

John B. Kuiper Employee

LW 5/58 (See LCR 813 4/23/58)

☆ GPO: 1964-756-216

Scanned from the collections of
The Library of Congress

Packard Campus for Audio Visual Conservation www.loc.gov/avconservation

Motion Picture and Television Reading Room www.loc.gov/rr/mopic

Recorded Sound Reference Center www.loc.gov/rr/record

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

311
884

Volume IV
No. 1

January 7
1911

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

SCENE FROM
"OLD CURIOSITY SHOP"
THANHOUSER'S RELEASE,

GREAT NORTHERN

THE RED LIGHT

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JANUARY 7TH

A superb military drama from the time of the Russo-Japanese war. Exciting and thrilling scenes throughout. Photographic quality unsurpassed. Lose no time in booking this headliner!

A HOMELESS BOY

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JANUARY 14TH

A well acted dramatic story full of pathos.

"Exhibitors make no mistake in demanding Great Northern films, as they can always be depended upon to lend tone to the program."—Moving Picture World.

ALL FIRST CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR FILMS.

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

(Nordisk Film Co. of Copenhagen)

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY.

RELIANCE FEATURE FILMS

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

"A COUNTRY GIRL"

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 18

A SWEET, SIMPLE, COMEDY-DRAMA SPLENDIDLY ACTED AND PHOTOGRAPHED

"THE VOWS" RELEASED SATURDAY, JANUARY 21

A STORY OF THE CHURCH

INTENSELY DRAMATIC MAGNIFICENT SETTINGS

TWO REELS PER WEEK—WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY

Place your order with your Exchange.

CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES, - - - 1 Union Square, New York City

BISON FILMS

FIVE REELS A WEEK

TUESDAY---BISON. WEDNESDAY---AMBROSIO. THURSDAY---ITALA. FRIDAY---BISON. SATURDAY---ITALA

TWO WESTERN REELS

"AN INDIAN TRAPPER'S PRIZE"

Examining his set traps, Swiftwater is amazed to find that he has caught a beautiful Indian maid, Swanfoot. He carries the girl to her village and a romantic courtship occurs, in which Swiftwater has some exciting adventures with a rival for Swanfoot's hand.

AMBROSIO RELEASE
Wednesday, January 11
"CLOUDS AND ICE FIELDS"
Rare views of the Alps peaks.
"HOW TWEEDLEDUM PAYS HIS BILLS"
A comedy.
Two subjects on one reel.

"THE CREEK CLAIM"

Rogers, the prospector, is wounded and driven off his claim by the gambler. Mrs. Rogers tries to save the claim by filing the papers, but her decrepit horse breaks down, and by a ruse she secures assistance from the gambler's wife and foils the plot.

ITALA RELEASES
"JOHANNA OF BRAGANZA"
Thursday, January 12
Spectacular historical production.

"THE RECALL"
Saturday, January 14
A humorous comedy.

TWO WESTERN REELS

Sold Exclusively Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO., 1 Union Square, New York City

First Public Exhibition

THE MARVEL OF THE CENTURY

KINEMACOLOR

(Moving Pictures in Nature's Own Colors)

EDEN MUSEE

Every Day at 3 to 4 and 9 to 10 P. M.

He's an "IMP."

She's an "IMP."

Remember, Everybody!

The first "Imp" film with the popular "Little Mary" as leading lady appears Monday, January 9th, and is entitled "Their First Misunderstanding." It is the first of a series of "Little Mary Imps" which you simply must have—every blessed one. The fact that the "Imp" is spending money like water to produce the best possible films does not do you an earthly bit of good unless you get "Imp" films. Get two a week or go to an exchange which will supply what you ask for! Remember!

Three More Imps!

On Monday, Jan. 16th, we release "MELODY," one of our most excellent efforts. Make sure you receive it! Thursday, Jan. 19th, we release a split reel. The first half is "HIS FIRST PATIENT," a corking good doctor story. The second half is "THE REV. GOODLEIGH'S COURTSHIP," a howling comedy. Every subject named in this advertisement is high class and worthy of the name "Imp." If you don't get them all, start something!

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP AMERICA

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.
102 West 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All Imp Films Are Sold Through the Sales Co.

Demand Two Imps Every Week

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

European Agents: INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., Breams Building, Chancery Lane, London, E. C.

Chicago Representative: J. J. Sullivan, 866 Graceland Ave. 'Phone Graceland 5053

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV | January 7, 1911 | Number 1

Notes of the Week

OUR FRONT COVER ILLUSTRATION.

The picture this week illustrates a scene from The Old Curiosity Shop shortly to be released by Thanhouser Company. We are given to understand that this film has been very carefully arranged and rearranged so as to make everything exact and perfect to agree with the story as written by Dickens and to keep in accord with the old curios as exhibited in the Old Curiosity Shop.

VOLUME IV, NO. 1.

Will our readers kindly date the last issue of the 31st of December, 1910, Volume III, No. 53, instead of the error that crept in giving it Volume IV, No. 1, which commences with this issue.

THE OPERATORS' FRIEND.

It is needless for us to tell the operators that they have our sympathy and good will, and in wishing them every prosperity for the New Year we do it from a full heart. We have always had their interests in mind, and we wish to advance their prospects and help them gain better opportunities as the men behind, or beside we should say, the machine. With this object in view we had a chat the other day with an expert electrical writer, Mr. William E. Smith, who is well known as a writer in other fields of electrical enterprises. He is a member of the Institute of Wireless Engineers and has been connected with the United States government for a number of years, and has written several popular articles of advantage to the operator and with a view of helping the still more by becoming their "Oracle" or "Friend" to assist them out of their difficulties, we suggested he write a page each week specially for the operators. He agreed to do this on one condition, that if such page was edited by him, he would like the operators to express their opinion of the value and utility of such a page. He is willing to answer all questions regarding the difficulties met with by the operator in his every-day work both on the Electrical and Mechanical ends of the projecting apparatus.

On another page will be found an introductory article from tthe pen of Mr. Smith, and it will depend entirely upon the responses of approval we obtain that this page will be continued. We say this advisedly, because we do not want to bore our readers or occupy valuable space, or pay away valuable money, if it does not meet the needs of the men for whom it is especially designed. We do not want a trouble column, but just a column of plain matter-of-fact friendly chat. Questions will be dealt with from a practical standpoint, and answers given such as any man can fully understand. Illustrations will be given to assist in making this end plain. We now leave the matter with the operators and offer this to them as a New Year's gift.

COMPLIMENTS AND HOW TO CONFER THEM.

The superlative compliment is imitation, which is a form of duplication. The very act of imitating, most reprehensible when concealed, displays an appreciation of merit which, in and of itself, is sublime. And while it displays appreciation it, is an inherent acknowledgment of weakness—a sort of mental inferiority or inability from the same general basis to produce and build up an equally good result. Nature seeks to excel, never to copy; in its efforts toward supremacy it frequently reproduces its own species, but if its environment be stimulating, it in the end advances into better conditions. No human being will copy another if he be able to improve upon the work which may have addressed itself to his attention; given the ability and every human will create rather than copy.

Now, the foregoing is merely the premise whereupon to establish a conclusion; as such premise it is next to impregnable; it is so entirely sound that the structure to be established upon the foundation need have no fear of the mental assaults or the pen pushing of the journalistic crook who may see fit to advertise a challenge because in the eyes and minds of friends, nothing else remains to be done. And by way of interpolation, no such challenge, if offered, by any exponent of such untruthfulness as "A Liar and His Lies," also "A Liar and More of His Lies" will be even so far dignified as to receive acknowledgment until and unless an outright, downright, up and down apology and retraction be publicly offered and announced by the perpetrators of the heinous and vicious misrepresentation which was once published and circulated under the captions above quoted.

PN1993
.M6

But digression has protruded itself and it must be stayed. The conclusion toward which our mentality was bending its effort is this in the first instance: if the publisher of the facts and information so exhaustively and authoritatively originally uttered in our way back numbers had the ability to produce an equally good grammatical result, those same facts and that same information would wear clothes of a different verbal stripe, so much so, in fact, that it might be next to impossible for the father to recognize his own child. What an absurdity it seems to take our own ideas in our very own English composition expecting to get away with it all and escape detection!

And in the second place: what an awkward position that Friese-Greene deposition forces upon the great inventor who tried to appropriate a confiding scientific investigator's invention. It leads to the conclusion that had he possessed the native ability to invent he would not have endeavored to imitate. That affidavit is a revelation in the world of invention; it shows plainly how confidences are abused by those who feel themselves secure in the greatness of their positions or possessions and makes clear a known fact that men with money or allied with the money kings not infrequently take advantage of others both for reasons of pecuniary gain and the eclat of public praise.

Of course we founded these words upon the papers in a Court proceeding, prefacing them all with the observation that if the content of that affidavit be true then a gross imposition has been practiced as much upon the public as upon Mr. Friese-Greene and again upon the United States Patent Office authorities. And it is for the Court to determine the truth or falsity of the statements made, but the deposition is so clear in expression, in detail and in circumstance that we feel keenly alive to the more than probable result thereof upon the judicial mind.

And, if our surmises be confirmed; if our forecast prove to be true, we weep no tears of the crocodile or other type because the TRUST has paid out its good money and receives in return useless, powerless, emasculated documents issued by the Patent Office, formidable in appearance but ineffective in the Courts.

He laughs best who laughs last; and this last slap in the face will at least transfer the laugh from the one to the other side of the TRUST face, and likely remove all evidences of humor from that face with the possible exception of the sardonically sarcastic smile.

How we laugh! The merry Ha Ha to the TRUST and its once publicist, the buncombe news vender! May joy be added to their several brands of discontent. The TRUST dissatisfied with patents and litigation involving the same; the dismissed vender of unreliable information disgruntled toward his former much-lauded master, and the people having been grossly deceived and contemptibly treated by both, are alike disgusted with both. What a merry vessel they are in for a trip on the high seas! If some one should rock the boat, the resulting catastrophe would be reported preferentially by underground rather than wireless, because neither of the sailors could long endure exposure to the clear and open atmosphere.

YANKEE FILM RELEASES

Bully for you, best of good wishes and fuller prosperity are hereby offered. Mr. Herbert Miles informs us that their last issue in releases amounted to 108 copies. A splendid finish for the old year.

THE TRUST "CANCELS."

For Months the Swaab Film Company License Has Been Attacked by Trust-Made Rumors Through Their Agent—An Interesting Legal Battle Predicted.

It is understood that the Motion Picture Patent Company have notified the Swaab Film Service Company, of Philadelphia, that they have "cancelled" their contract. The story, of course, has been discounted. The minions and messengers of The Trust have been variously promising, predicting and threatening this step for some time, and it is not impossible that the fine line of demarcation between "business" and "Conspiracy" has been overstepped in this instance.

Those who know Lewis M. Swaab, the owner of The Film Service, alleged to have been "cancelled," will undoubtedly realize that Mr. Swaab is the kind of a man who can always see two sides to a contract, and will undoubtedly give the courts an opportunity to review this situation. If he does this the story will be more than interesting. We will publish particulars in our next issue.

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY.

On another page of this issue will be found a judgment handed down by Judge Lacombe in favor of the M. P. P. Co., granting them an injunction against the Champion. In this decision, Judge Lacombe declares that the Gaumont camera is an infringement upon the Edison, and we wonder if we have now to write the funeral notice of the Champion Film Company, and finish up with "Requiescat in Pace." Yet, except that we know, some five injunctions have already been granted against Mark M. Dintenfass, which does not seem to keep him down, but Phoenix-like he rises from the ashes each time, and seems to have, like a proverbial cat, nine lives. We wait with a great deal of interest the final outcome of this case, which will, of course, be taken on appeal. We wonder how it would be for all the Independents to obtain licenses under Friese-Greene patents and work under this license; and further wonder, if they did such as we suggest, whether action would be brought against Friese-Greene. The situation is extremely interesting, and we would like to see it tried out.

MOVING PICTURES TO EDUCATE THE CHILDREN.

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

Moving pictures as a source of education for children is one of the simplest and clearest methods of imparting knowledge to them.

Children love to look at pictures. We know that from infancy, or at least as soon as it will notice anything, a child is attracted by pictures, especially tinted ones—first the color attracts it—then as the brain develops different objects are noted and distinguished from one another: as language begins to assert itself, the names of the different objects are learned, and so the primary education of the child is derived from its environment and the objects placed before it, through the different senses of the body in its contact with its surroundings, and we may safely say that its education is derived at first principally through the sense of sight. Therefore, what a wonderful aid to the education of the children the world of pictures can be made—motion pictures especially!

From the primary classes to the Collegiate branches the motion picture could be used with great efficacy. Things beautiful in the idealistic life could be brought before the children in a manner which would make school a paradise rather than a bore, and the burden of the teachers would be much lighter because of the increased interest induced in the pupils by the pictures.

Intermingled with the more laborious lessons of the day, such as mathematics, for instance, pictures could be shown touching on the lessons; scenes such as the poorer children in the City of New York never have a chance of seeing outside the city limits—the farmer tilling the soil, or harvesting the grain—the birds building their nests—the frolicking of the young animals—the life and work of the busy bee, and many other object lessons could be placed before them in a manner almost as interesting as though they were in reality rambling out in the open country, in the forest or in the fields.

And not only pastoral scenes could be made of interest to them, but also scenes from everyday life in the city in which they live, which could be made object lessons for practice in everyday life. Many suggestions could be taught with much more ease for the teacher, and infinitely more pleasure for the pupil should this method be carried into practice, and the effect of injurious environment might be largely eliminated in the lives of many of the children of the city. An hour of pleasure among the forest trees, or on the beautiful green sward, can be given the children each day when their little hearts can be stirred by the voice of nature, and they can at least dream that they are among the beautiful dolls and distant hillsides without, while they are still among the high brick walls and stolid cement streets of one of the largest of the world's cities.

Though in the city of New York there has been much attention paid to the education of the poorer classes, and facilities of all kinds have been placed within the reach of the people, so that a comparatively free education is offered to all, still there are yet many avenues open, but practically untraveled, by which education can be dealt out to children in a manner which will not only please them, but will enable them to imbibe more easily the knowledge placed before them.

For some years free lectures have been given in the public schools for the benefit of the parents of the children, which were originated by a man invaluable to the city of New York (Dr. Henry M. Leipziger) in that he has opened an easy and enticing means of education for adults. Thousands of men and women are being enlightened each year by means of these lectures, which are illustrated by means of lantern slides only, moving pictures being unfortunately barred by the fire authorities.

Up to date the children have not been admitted to these lectures, which seems a pity. For some reason or other they have not been permitted to attend with their parents these entertaining and instructive lectures which they would so much enjoy, principally on account of the illustrations, and which would, no doubt, be a means of elevating their minds and of guiding their thoughts into proper channels.

Why could there not be a course of this sort instituted for the little ones, or at least for the half grown children?

The purely recreative moving picture entertainment is well taken care of throughout the city by the numerous moving picture and vaudeville houses scattered indiscriminately along the city byways and thoroughfares. Would that a happy combination could always be found therein of education and entertainment!

In New York City, not so far from our beloved Broadway, have appeared nightly scenes during the summer, quaint in that they were far removed in character from the usual elaborate preparations for receiving visitors to the moving picture show in the play houses of the great city. On many a back lot in this thickly populated city, as did the traveling circus so dear to our hearts in the olden days, camped the moving picture man. Crowds from the neighboring flats, many unable by reason of a shortage of funds to hie them to the seashore for recreation with the cool sea breezes, found a boon of comfort and enjoyment near at hand, for here on the empty back lots furnished with folding chairs, with tables at the side where refreshments might be partaken of if desired, the blue sky above them, and all the breeze the city could afford on a summer evening, they could sit with their family and friends and enjoy the music which was provided along with the entertainment of pictures.

Many scenes could be looked upon in New York City during the past season of just such a character, and to those hurrying along on the elevated train, attracted by the little flicker of light, it seemed a thing apart. Thousands must unconsciously in their hearts have blessed the picture man with his simple contrivance for making a living. It may be that he had never a thought apart from the dollars and cents which the scheme brought in, nor of the garden in the desert which he had instituted; he may not have thought of the many hearts he had gladdened, nor of the little children who saved every penny so that on Saturday night they might spend it on a substantial bunch of peanuts and a ticket to the picture show next door.

Could not some picture man be induced to open something of this sort specially for children, with nothing but wholesome pictures, and scenes which would imbue their little minds with good thoughts? There they could be taught apart from school hours something of the big world they live in, and become familiar with scenes and sights upon which in reality their eyes might never look and of which but for this remarkable invention they would have but an imperfect conception.

And so even the picture man on the empty lot can do not only the present generation but future generations as well a great service if he will, and while he gathers in the dimes with a consciousness of a sincere and tried belief in the old saying, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," he can give through the season, with a little bit of thought given to the selection of subjects, a course of instructive motion pictures which will in reality be worth much more to the individuals, and especially the children, than the few nickels and dimes which they have paid out.

Rex
LEARN TO SAY IT—

STRAY NOTES FROM OTHER LANDS.

Walton.

Our Russian contemporary, Cine-Phono, is certainly an eye-opener. I have a very vivid remembrance of more than one experience in the realms of the Czar when trying to get a picture—even with a pencil and a pad, let alone so diabolic-looking a thing as a camera. In going up the Gulf of Finland when nearing Cronstadt, some friends wished to snap-shot me; H. I. M.'s yachts just then steamed past—we never developed those films! In Petersburg itself, although my position gave me many privileges, I took no chances on miscellaneous picture taking—experentia docet!

In many cases it was difficult even to get a glimpse, let alone anything else. My carefully censored papers that came from America, etc., daily looked up at me from my desk from their blackened column and silently warned of unseen eyes and ears.

Now all is changed and there is no greater proof of the mighty power of the moving picture. Where, not so many years ago, visions of Siberia floated if a man did not keep "eyes front," now the moving picture man marches in and, "as bold as brass," cranks away merrily before an interested and delighted crowd. Even the inner life of "pales" and "Ghettoes" is taken to be exhibited before the barbarian hereties of other lands.

Nothing, to my mind, is more marvelous than the way in which "the camera with a crank" marches in in triumph where "the camera without a crank" would mean bulldogs or bayonets, according to locality, However, more of that anon, and to return to our muttons, the Russian end of it is perfectly marvelous.

Most of us know something about the way newspapers have to mind their P's and Q's in Russia, and here again moving pictures show their wondrous power. The Cine-Phono just to hand; our Russian comrade makes a man rub his eyes, and pinch himself to see if he be awake. I make bold to say it is one of the most comprehenive, well-edited and altogether satisfactory papers published on the Continent. Brother Ed'tor, allow me to congratulate you upon a paper that is a credit to you and to the whole trade, 54 pages—besides the back—and an ad display that would be hard to beat. Technical articles, thoughtful editorials and live news from all parts of the empire.

Films are criticised, yes, criticised in a way that shows grip, knowledge, enthusiasm, terseness and independence that cheers the soul of a "brother sinner."

When one comes to the synopses, saints defend us, how happy we ought to be. Happy, one of friend Pathes is over a column, wide measure. Gaumont, Pathe, Ambrosio and Cines appear to be the favorites ——foreign—four American firms being "synopsized" into a quarter column. I must add that I am only writing with regard to the last issue. Our friends Lux and Milano are not forgotten, and I wish to make it clear that further knowledge of our Russian friend might modify, to some extent, my present opinion.

One thing is irrefragably true. There is no more striking example of the power of moving pictures than the cleverly edited and well "dressed" Cine-Phono published and printed in Russia.

Anyone who saw our German friend Projektion laid on a table, would pick it up. It has one of the quaintest and most striking backs imaginable. A kind of converted nightmare that attracts, that's the clever part of it. Now it goes one better and sends the copies out in a black wrapper with a comic figure in white, so that even when going through the mail it will attract. The best of it is, that while the back attracts, the contents repay the reader. It is dignified and reliable. I would like the "saints" who see nothing good in us to read "Kinematograph und Schule," and see what thoughtful people think. The get-up of Projektion is excellent. Hats off to the printers. N. B.—The smiling Imp looks quite at home here pointing out the wonders of "Das Opfer der Eehwester" and "Der Fatale Weeker."

La Cine-Fono ,of Naples, is always a welcome visitor. The last issue has an article I would like to reproduce; unfortunately I cannot, as it will not bear "boiling down." Mayhap some day I may be able to find space. It is "Cinematography: Art and Morals," by Giovanni Nicotra. Roughly, it is a plea for more liberty of action, broader means of development and so to reach the highest planes of life. The article is, of course, Latin in sentiment, but might enlighten many who do not quite grip some of the situations in the beautiful films Ambrosio, Itala and Cines send to us.

Lux calls our attention to the fact that moving pictures are climbing heights undreamed of not so long ago. At first it was anybody performing anything, anyhow. Now we have the best actors and actresses. Alas, some firms think that mere machine made scenarios, weak, often illiterate, oftener still a kind of hash made of odds and ends, like Methusaleh without beginning or end of days, which the poor actors try to make passable. How often one's heart bleeds to see first-class artists trying to make rubbish presentable. Wise firms are realizing the world has a magnificent literature and that the giants of history can grip to-day's folk as no story-maker of the sausage order can. Some firms so stick to their "experts" that when they realize the above and send out the story of a genius they give it another name!

The Italians, with their glorious literature, have realized this, but they give the film the name of its author.

It requires the Latin to interpret Latin plays; we may kick as we like, but it's so. In spite of my love for Ambrosio, Itala, and Cines, it never dawned upon me what Milano would do. The world bows before Dante, his Divina Comedia whose marvels were so real that even in his lifetime the folk said as the stern faced poet passed, "he has been in hell." The Inferno with its wondrous teachings of passion, torture, remorse, tenderness, the whole gamut of human struggle, this has been brought upon the screen. This is one of the highest flights of moving picturedom. Dante is entirely different to anyone else. Magnificent staging, acting of the highest has been used to produce what "scholars" call a "superb production." Personally I can only judge from a photograph illustrating the stanza beginning which presents a wondrous scene of bosky shade, wherein stands Dante and his guide with beings of the underworld scattered around. Artistically beautiful, thrilling with the spirit of the stanza. If thus in a dead photo, what in the moving picture! Would that I some day see it.

"Stavvi Minos orrivilmente e ringhia,"

Lux calls attention to the search of the Moving Picture News for a word to cover moving pictures, understandable of all men, and not a hybrid mongrel.

The funny story of "La Famiglia Sassolini," a cinematographic romance, with its humorous cuts, runs on merrily.

A despatch from Paris says:

Dr. Arthur Korn, Professor of Physics at the University of Munich, whose experiments in long-distance photography attracted much attention a few years ago, on December 31st, exhibited his invention for synchronizing the phonograph and cinematograph by means of which moving pictures appear to speak.

Many are my friends, I am proud to say, amongst all sorts and condition of men on the Long Island R. R. Many know my love for the moving picture and all connected with it. Not so long ago one of them saluted me with this: "Got some good news for you!" Right eagerly I demanded, "What is it?" "Oh, only Jim X and I were talking the other day, and we're one on a Brooklyn train and the other on New York, our passengers our subject. We both noticed a good many folks reading the Moving Picture News, whenever they travel, and they discuss what pictures to have from that paper. And I'll tell you another thing, on my run one fellow gets on at ———, and he has a lively time with the other fellows. He's the only 'trust' fellow, and others pound away at him and quote the News to beat the band."

"Thanks, Ted," quoth I, "give me some more good news like that."

I know many of our readers on the Island, and hope they'll all read the News on the train and thus "roll the old chariot along" to the confusion of General Flimco who has about reached the age limit of efficient service.

TO THE OPERATORS IN CHARGE OF PROJECTING MACHINES.

As you will note on another page of the News, it has been suggested by the Editor that I write a page each week for the benefit of the operators in charge of projecting machines.

The following will give you an outline of what the writer proposes to do:

We will have an "Oracle Column" where queries and questions pertaining to the causes and effects of both the Electrical and Mechanical ends of the projecting machine will be answered from the practical standpoint in "plain English."

We also will have a "series of talks on practical electrical subjects which are of interest to the operator, such as:—Ohm Law, The Use and Abuse of the Rheostat, How to Get the Best Results with Alternating and Direct Currents, The Arc Lamp and Its Adjustments, The Uses and Abuses of Transformers, Economizers, and Choke Coils as Applied to the Projecting Machine, How to Comply with the Fire Underwriters' Rulings, Talks on Practical Wiring, etc., etc.

The continuation of this page, as you will have already noted, depends upon your approval of the above. Do you want this line of talk by a Practical Engineer or are you satisfied to go along, as in the past, by getting your information as best you can, not knowing whether it is reliable or not? Write in at once and let me know if you want this page.

WM. E. SMITH, E. E., c/o Moving Picture News.

THE PASSING OF THE LAUGH.

H. Jeanval.

Things are ever on the move. Change is the thought of the day. Drop out of life for a few weeks and one is faced by a dozen changes on the streets between home and office. The changes on the street are the material. There are other greater, deeper, more sweeping movements, silent—often never thought of. Changes of thought and of manners of thought. Take one of them, how rare it is these days to hear a good, whole-souled, hearty laugh! Not a snigger, nor a snicker, not a fleshing of the teeth in an imitation smile—imagine a tiger smiling—not a smug chuckle, nor a throttled cachinnation, but a great, big, honest guffaw.

I have sat in the theaters where rattling good jokes were sprung, and heard a gentle soughing as of last year's leaves; whilst in abodes of the cultured, such a vulgarity was beyond toleration. To think of a laugh, say on Wall street, that is a hearty one, is as absurd as to think of a sour-faced Puritan enjoying a decent vaudeville show.

The desire to laugh is with us; the laugh will soon be as extinct as the dodo, or the ichthyosaurus. At our present rate the only real laughs will be found like the Siberian mastodon, frozen—or shall we say canned in Mr. Somebody's early phonograph.

The cry of those who cater to the amusement of the people is for laugh-makers, real laugh-getters, not things that puff over the sea of life, raising a few straggly ripples, but good strong breezy breezes, raising a turmoil and sending the spume all a-flying far away. The moving picture manufacturers are calling everywhere for fun; and well they may. "Chasers" running up houses, tumbling through floors, upsetting this, that or the other, ending with a bath. This in a hundred variants is sent out as fun. Truly the laugh is as ghostly as the funny film is ghastly.

To begin with, the truest humor and fun is folk-fun, and folk-fun is the same as the folk-tale, simply a series of variants of the mother-stories. I have come across the same joke on Southern plantations that I heard amongst the Finns and in the tents of the Lapps. Stories of my school days I have heard amongst Magyars, Bedouins, Cingalese and Japanese. Every group of nations has a certain section to which all wit is ascribed, and the stories are simply variants.

Our funny papers rejoice weekly in jokes hoaring in the days of Moses, or that set beards wagging by the Euphrates a few centuries ago. Fortunately folk-humor is a mighty field, the worst of it is, scenario sharps do not seem to know much about it. In this as in other things they appear to be in such a hurry to get done, they never begin.

If we had time to laugh and not snicker; if we could afford time to think, to think of something, not grab, the lighter side of life would take its rightful place.

Our moving picture "comics" show the laugh in passing; a few copies of newspaper cartoons, a long string of rubbish, and a rare piece of fun make up the list.

Let me humbly commend to the scenario experts, the unworked field of folk-humor in a dozen tongues real fun, something to make people laugh.

Please, Mr. Scenario "Expert," save us from a ghastly, ghostly, and laughless future!

CORPORATION NEWS

The Kinotype Company, of Rochester, has been incorporated to deal in motion pictures. The capital is $10,000 and the directors are: Tiffany Barnard, James H. Westcott and Herbert T. Ranney, of Mt. Morris.

Rex
LEARN TO SAY IT—

THE CHAMPION FILM COMPANY LOSES

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.
Motion Picture Patents Company
vs.
The Champion Film Company.
MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION
Lacombe, C. J.

This is an application for preliminary injunction under Re-issue Patent No. 12037 to Thomas A. Edison for a kinetoscope, which was sustained and its claims construed by the Circuit Court of Appeals in this circuit in Edison v. Am. Mutoscope & B. Co. 151 F. R. 767. An earlier decision of that court discussed the original patent, 114 F. R. 926. Nothing that was said in either of these opinions need be repeated here: it is assumed that they will be consulted. They describe the device of the patent and analyzed the claims so fully, illustrating the decision by describing the cameras which were held, the one to infringe, the other not to, that it seems not difficult to apply the principles of the decision to the Gaumont and Champion-Gaumont cameras now before the court. The differences between these two alleged infringing cameras are unimportant, defendant apparently does not contend otherwise, therefore this discussion will be confined to the Champion-Gaumont type, of which an operative camera has been submitted for inspection. The film-moving mechanism of both, however, is so well shown in the drawing and blue print, filed with the papers, that their operation may be easily understood. The film passes from the delivery roll to a delivery wheel whose sprockets engage positively with holes in the sides of the film; this wheel revolves, not intermittently, but continuously, and in operation there is always a loop or slack part of the film between it and the film guide. In consequence the delivery wheel does not itself advance the film through the guide. In the Mutoscope case it was held that these circumstances did not negative infringement. The film passes through the guide, around a cam eccentrically mounted on a continuously moving wheel, to the take-up reel where it engages with sprockets, the latter reel revolving continuously. The operation is as follows: The device being at rest, there is the loop or slack above the guide entirely free to be drawn down through the guide, the same as in the Biograph and in the Warwick cameras, which were considered in the Mutoscope case. In the Biograph instrument this slack was pulled through by two friction rollers revolving continuously, the movement of the film being intermittently checked by a so-called tension leaf. "The engagement with the film was wholly frictional;—no such interlockng as will hold the film firmly, advancing it with mathematical accuracy; there was the possibility of slip." In the Warwick the film was pulled through by a bifurcated fork which engaged with holes and advanced the film mathematically a certain distance and then disengaged: the court of appeals held that the bifurcated fork was a fair equivalent of the wheel with sprockets. In the Champion-Gaumont when at rest the film is stretched taut between the guide and the take-up sprocket wheel, resting snugly against the cam. We may assume that at that time the outer edge of the cam is on the side of the wheel farthest away from the film. Its position is not essential; substantially the same cycle of movement may be worked out if it be in the reverse position. The machine being started, what happens in a given space of time? The moving sprocket wheel revolves through a predetermined arc and, carrying the film on its sprockets, advances the film a predetermined distance. During the same time the outer edge of the eccentric cam is brought into engagement with the taut film and, revolving, pushes it out a distance predetermined by the amount of the cam's eccentricity. The film thus pushed out cannot come from the side of the take-up wheel, where it is held firmly on sprockets; it can readily come and does come out of the film-guide, the slack above the guide allowing it to move easily forward. As the revolving eccentric cam recedes to the inner side of its wheel axis it leaves the film which it has pushed out and for a brief interval there is no movement of the film out of the guide, because the cam is no longer pushing on it, and the sprocket wheel cannot pull on it till it has first taken up slack. During that period the film is at rest for receiving impressions from the lens.

Defendant contends that this operation of advancing the film is wholly frictional, that there is every possibility to slip and that the spacing cannot be mathematically accurate. This contention is not found persuasive. There is friction between the cam and the film, but it is very different from the action of two rollers whose frictional contact alone gives a grip and produces a pull. One end of the film (the part on the sprocket wheel) is firmly held; it cannot slip back and in reality it is this which causes it to advance when the cam pushes it. It must advance or break. I find it impossible from a study of the drawings or from a manipulation of the exhibit to see any possibility of slip. Why the spacing should not be mathematically accurate is not apparent. The arc through which the sprocket wheel will move in a given time is predetermined, the equivalent in linear movement of the film is known. The additional length of film which will be hauled out of the guide to accommodate the eccentric cam is also predetermined by the measure of the cam's eccentricity. The total distance the film will advance past the lens, being the sum of these two predetermined items, is itself predetermined. The period of rest may also be predetermined, it would seem with mathematical accuracy. It is the time necessary for a sprocket wheel, of a given diameter revolving at a given speed, to reel up the amount of film required to accommodate a protruding cam, the extent of whose eccentricity is accurately known.

The conclusion is reached that the Champion-Gaumont and the Gaumont machines infringe. It is conceded that the Pathe machine, one of which is owned by defendant, also infringes. This and its Champion-Gaumont may, as suggested, be impounded in the custody of defendant's counsel until final hearing.

Preliminary injunction may issue.

A CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENT

Great credit is due to our good friend, Milton Gosdorfer, of the Odeon Theater, Clinton street, for his charitable disposition during the Christmas Week and his thoughtfulness in entertaining the children of the Henry Street Settlement. This was a change from the general run of the annual entertainments of the Settlement and 1,000 children were shown some beautiful pictures. Miss Lillian Wald addressed the children and spoke her appreciation of the value of motion pictures from an educational standpoint. Six reels of Independent manufacture were shown, including Italian Cavalry, Delightful Dolly, which latter was talked by Baroness Blanc and her company, adding zest to the pictures. Another item was the engagement of Peter DeNoto's Band, which rendered sweet music. Songs were rendered by Sidney Falk and Dorothy Dainton, and to voice the sentiment of some of the children, they wished Christmas would come every week. It was good.

IMP'S NEW RELEASES

It was our privilege to see two films shortly to be released. The first is entitled "At the Duke's Command," a story set in England during the sixteenth century, and representing that period when a Duke had absolute power over the lives and persons of his subjects. The scene opened with a dance where the old Duke's nephew and daughter support him on the Throne, the daughter occupying the place of honor by his side. One of her maids is introduced and the Duke's nephew immediately falls in love with her, which is reciprocated. The old Duke is also smitten by her charms and sends his hunchbacked serf to her apartments, commanding her appearance before him. The hunchback finds that his master has been forestalled by the nephew, is evidently an accepted lover and carries this information back to his master, the Duke. When the girl appears before the Duke, he tries to make love to her and is repulsed. He vows venegance, while the frightened girl runs to the Duke's nephew and tells her story. This hot-headed young man immediately appears before his uncle and demands an explanation and the hunchback, fearing bodily harm to his master, stands aside with a drawn sword. Angry words follow in quick succession and the nephew draws his sword to attack the old Duke and is circumvented by the hunchback. Commands are immediately given to disarm the nephew, take him to the dungeon and torture him. The girl is immediately informed of the state of affairs and taken to the cell, where a mock trial is given and the nephew ordered to the torture chamber. During the time of torture the hunchback is pacing quickly to and fro between the dungeon, reception-room, and the girl's chamber. The Duke commands the girl to appear before him, where she pleads for the life of her lover. The only price to save his life is herself. She refuses again, and a trapdoor in the floor is opened, disclosing to her view her lover on the rack, being seared and tortured in the way so well known in those days. Screaming with affright, she consents to sacrifice herself and the torture is immediately commanded to cease. In a little while the hunchback carries the Duke's command to the girl to appear in his bedchamber. Before doing this, in a fit of distraction, she sears her face with a red-hot poker, and throwing a veil over her head, she appears before the amorous Duke, who, in his dotage, tries to be gallant and, lifting the veil, is horrified at the face presented to his view. He repulses her, commands his nephew to appear in the audience-chamber, where all are assembled in state, and he is commanded to marry the girl, who, in spite of her blemished face, is dear to him, and the malice of the Duke loses its sting by the acceptance on the part of the nephew of the girl who sacrificed so much for him, and the Duke's daughter is not to marry the nephew, as originally arranged. The story is one that should appeal to a picture-loving public.

Rex
LEARN TO SAY IT—

The next subject, "The Dream," shows a typical husband of to-day, neglecting his wife, frequenting cafes in company with his stenographer and drinking, not wisely but too well; he returns home to the neglected wife, who has prepared him a beautiful dinner and awaits in agony his belated appearance. In his drunken fit he upsets the table and almost breaks his wife's heart by his conduct, and she leaves him to himself. He then throws himself on a couch and sleeps, and in the sleep dreams, and in this dream sees a reversal of his wife's whole nature, she becoming, as his companion was, a heartless coquette, sits on the table, drinks wine, smokes cigarettes, throws her wedding ring at him, goes away with her lover to the same cafe where he took his stenographer, and carries through the exact antics as did his companion. In a fit of desperation at seeing her thus he writes a letter saying all is off and shoots himself, and at the crash of the revolver he wakes up, finds himself on the floor, rubs his eyes and cannot understand his position. His wife coming in at this moment, he tells her of his dream, which she denies, showing the ring still upon her finger. He begs forgiveness and the final scene shows reconciliation and the eating of chunks of love cake together. Both films show the histrionic ability of the new acquisition.

Chicago Letter

By the time you read this a new year, and, let us hope, a new era for the moving picture, will have been launched; but if things, during the coming year, progress as rapidly as they have during the one just closed, greater than the greatest will be the future of the Independent product.

One year ago had you asked 95 per cen of Chicago's exhibitors what they thought of Independent pictures, or why they did not use them, they would have laughed at you or else thought you were crazy, but to-day in the short space of a year the Independent product has advanced by leaps and bounds in quality and quantity and system, and 70 per cent of Chicago moving picture shows are using it in preference to the Trust pictures.

The Boston theater, on Madison street, the first house downtown to put on the Independent picure, now has a partner in the cause, as the Bijou Dream, one of Chicago's largest and most beautiful houses, has contracted for first-run Independent service.

Genial Sig. Fowler, the manager of the Bijou Dream, is cutting down one act of his vaudeville and putting the money thus saved into his pictures; so, through the energetic work of Julius Singur, of the Laemmle Film Service, State street, throngs will view good Independent pictures after Jan. 1st.

Among other city and out-of-town exhibitors who have taken up the cause of the Independent pictures are George Bachman, 5-cent theater, 2841 Archer avenue, Chicago. Mr. Bachman formerly used Laemmle's service, and after an absence of two weeks from their list returned Saturday, which proves the saying true, "They all come back."

Michaelstadter Bros., who own and operate a moving picture show at Fourteenth street and Crenshaw avenue, have joined the happy crew of satisfied showmen who deal with "The Biggest and Best Renter."

J. P. Adler, who is lessee and manager of Adler's opera-house, Marshfield, Wisconsin, was in town the other day and closed a contract for Independent Film Service, machine, etc., to take the place of road attractions and vaudeville. Lux Graphicus, N. B.

Rule & Coady, managers Princess theater, Muskegon, Mich., send us glowing reports of business with high-class Independent service; also a photo of their front ad display as shown.

Another county heard from, also in Michigan. I am appending hereto a letter from A. L. Cooley, proprietor People's Theater, Larium, Mich. It speaks for itself and needs no explanation:

Larium, Mich., Dec. 29, 1910.

Laemmle Film Co.,

Gentlemen:

This will let you know that I was well pleased with your first program. I cannot begin to tell you how much I enjoyed running film through my hands that did not feel like a SAW. And I did not have to stop my show once during either of the performances. The film that I had been receiving from the Gen. Film Co. was the worst that I had ever run, and I used to run some rotten stuff in the old days when there were only a few of us in the business. Instead of the General FILM it should be the General FLIM Co., as they have the world by the ear, as far as Association Film is concerned, and they do not treat their customers all alike. If they did, it would be a good thing for the Independents, as I believe that they would try to FLIM all of them. I received some beautiful promises from them, but the fellow that wrote them must have been a dreamer, as nothing ever materialized from those beautifully worded letters. I am going to keep a tab on the daily difference that the box office shows, and I will let you know the result. I have the largest and most comfortable house up here, and am doing a splendid business, but it was almost ruined by the Gen. F. Co., because of the junk that they sent me. I usually had to scrub the atmosphere after each show, as it was so blue from certain poetical exclamations that no one could see the pictures. Keep up the good work and I will be one of the best and strongest boosters that you have. And up here it is said, "Better ask Cooley" when any question concerning the business comes up. So I guess a good boost from the People's Theater will count some.

Kindly submit your bill each week, as I do not want to let it run over a week. In the event that it does not get here, I will send certified check, and you can send bill at your leisure.

Trusting that you had a merry Christmas and wishing you a Happy and Successful New Year, and Confusion to the Association, I am,

Very truly yours,

A. L. COOLEY.

You are at liberty to publish this letter if you so desire.—A. L. C.

Gillespie & Bouillett, two enterprising young men of Ellwood, Ind., opened a new moving picture theater in that town Dec. 22nd with Independent service furnished by Laemmle, in opposition to three houses using Trust films, and are doing top business of the town. It is a 284-seat house, and is handsomely decorated both inside and out, the plastic work being done by a well-known Chicago firm. A Powers, No. 6 has been installed. The novel mode of advertising their house ahead was to open a contest as to a name for it, and although I have as yet been unable to find out what name has been selected, I understand over 2,000 different people submitted names for the prize. Excuse me. I am just informed it is to be called "The Superba."

Rex
LEARN TO SAY IT—

Mr. Coon, an old-time moving picture showman, has opened a house in Petoskey, Mich., with Independent service.

The benefits for the relicts of firemen who were killed in the stock yards' fire, December 22nd, still go on, and from the outlook the moving picture houses are making a grand showing.

We had a sad occurrence in losing Harry Dodd, one of Chicago's oldest operators, last Wednesday. Dodd was one of the oldtimers, and for nine years held the operating job at the London Museum, on State street, and after this house closed he took the operator's position at the Ideal Theater, Sixty-third and Halsted streets, where he was working up to the time of his last illness. Pneumonia contracted through a cold caused his death. He was 25 years of age and leaves a widow, a performer known to the stage as Kitty Sherman. The funeral was in charge of a committee from Local 145, I. A. T. S. E., of which he was a charter member. The pallbearers were also members of the operators' union, B. P. White, H. Wambold, F. Schuler, E. P. Smith, Lee M. Forbes and Jack Fuqua represented the union. According to the by-laws of the operators' union, each member is assessed 50 cents as a death benefit. The widow will receive in the neighborhood of $250. The floral offering by the organization was the I. A. T. S. E. emblem. President Nemo, of the Actors' Union, Local No. 4, of which the widow is a member, said a few words of condolence before the funeral left the house. Services were held at Salem Evangelical Church and burial was at Waldheim.

My attention has been called to a matter which concerns all operators. There are several different book agents traveling from one 5-cent theater to the other, trying to induce operators to subscribe for electrical books and correspondence courses on moving picture operating. An instructor in a so-called "Trade School for Operators" is sending out circular letters about one of these books, and while we at all times like to see a man improve his time and keep abreast of the ever-increasing electrical and mechanical improvements, we would advise all operators to be particular when seeking this knowledge, and to read the works of recognized authorities, or at least be sure the man who compiled the book you read knew what he was writing about.

Read a notice in Hearst's Chicago Examiner, Dec. 31st: "Important to Boy Bandits. Don't forget that women are carrying Rare Bargains in watches, jewelry and money in their handbags." No, dear reader, this was not copied from a moving picture sub-title, far be it from such. It was on the editorial page of the above mentioned paper, and yet at times it tells the public boys get bad ideas from moving pictures. Now wouldn't that get your Angora?

The electrical show will open at the Coliseum, in this city, Jan. 7th and run till Jan. 21st. We hope to see the moving picture and its various appliances and devices well represented.

The greatest move in moving picture exhibition is now being attempted by several Chicago financiers, and if successfully carried out will mean the uplifting of moving pictures, although it will spell doom for the small store show in the small towns. The arrangement is to secure the opera-houses or large theaters and form a chain reaching from coast to coast, embracing all the small towns within this radius. This will mean over 700 theaters.

"The Squaw and the Man," released Dec. 29th by the American Manufacturing Co., is a most beautiful story, well acted, and with its excellent photography should go down in motion picture history as a masterpiece.

Moving picture and slide manufacturers should be careful about treading on Uncle Sam's toes. Several manufacturers of film and slides alike were not careful, hence the confiscation of film showing photographs of money, which will mean a loss running into the thousands.

I also saw a slide illustrating a song entitled "Sister Juliet," which showed a man with a handful of bills. These slides were also taken up by Secret Service agents.

I have a communication from the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union, Local No. 6, I. A. T. S. E., covering two towns, Lowrence and Haverhill, Mass., in which Secretary Fred. L. Taylor gives reports of the operators' progress, and also tells of the successful ball they ran. We are glad to hear of your success, Brother Taylor, and hope other I. A. locals throughout the country are also prospering and hope to hear from more of them soon.

The writer invites correspondence—little notes, news items or anything pertaining to the trade from managers, operators or others connected with moving picture theaters through Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan. We want to know what the smaller towns are doing as well as the larger ones, and will always be glad to give publicity to any little news items.

The little giant of the Independents, or, to use his own phrase, "The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World," is coming in next week, and I suppose the big surprise in store will be forthcoming.

J. J. SULLIVAN.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., Jan. 3.—"And the greatest of these is charity!" Well, could you have strolled along the picture and theater district Sunday you would have thought so, for "charity" succeeded in doing what our leading citizens failed to accomplish—open the theaters for Sunday amusement. The managers decided to start the New Year right, so they took matters into their own hands, put on the "Passion Play," "The Holy City" and pictures as nearly appropriate as it was possible to get for the Sabbath, and let it go at that.

No, they didn't all open at the same time. Dick Beard, manager of the Scenic, took an early trip about town, noted the side doors of numerous saloons were swinging to and fr, remarked that it looked "pretty good for Sunday," got his operator, seated himself in the booth and the show was on. The Majestic followed suit about half an hour later. In the afternoon the Lyric kept the ball rolling and the Princess, with Mrs. Slatter, the reform sister, as the big headline, was there strong for the matinee. This left the Orpheum and the Lyceum dark during the afternoon. One of the directors of these two houses came along, noted the other theaters were doing a great business, called up the Sunshine Home and asked if the officials of that institution would like a little charity coin, received an answer in the affirmative, and by night the Orpheum and Lyceum were also shooting pictures on the screen. Oh, it was a lovely New Year's Day.

Up to the present writing no arrests have been made. One cannot tell, though, whether the managers will be permitted to slip this one over on Judge Wood, but they are likely to hear from him during the week.

The various charitable institutions of the city never realized before how deeply the managers felt for their welfare. It was touching, believe me, and all of them are many, many dollars richer by the first Sunday opening, not only of the New Year but also of many weeks.

Some of the theaters ran just straight pictures, while others put in a full orchestra, which played sacred selections. Down at the Majestic Raymond Peer, a young actor with quite a good voice, sang several ballads which are not found in the Hymnal.

I understand there is to be a meeting very shortly of all managers handling Sullivan & Considine acts. This firm is rapidly acquiring some excellent time in the great Southwest. The meeting is to be held in Chicago. The Princess has not as yet arranged its split week, due to the inability of acts to leave here in time for the matinee Thursday, but this difficulty will likely be solved. The Princess has a great bill on this week, and featured among the acts is Mrs. Peter Maher and her talented little son, "Cupid." This is some kid. Mrs. Maher is the wife of the prize fighter.

Among the great men who graced the resort with their presence during the week was H. E. ("Punch") Wheeler, who is probably the best-known publicity agent in the country. "Punch" is still hale and hearty. At present he is doing some high flying for the International Aviation Company, a syndicate which has under contract all the well-known aviators performing in the United States. Mr. Wheeler first heard of the death of Moisant while in this city, and was all broken up by the news.

R. R. Dickenson, the Missouri ranchman, who was entertaining Stanley Ketchel when the latter was shot by a jealous farmhand, is also taking the baths here. Mr. Dickenson has with him a number of photographs which were taken of him and Ketchel a few days before the shooting. The prize fighter and he were great friends. "Ketchel," he told me, "was sincere in his intention to try and regain his old-time form, and that's why he came to my ranch. I fully believe, had he followed faithfully the plans we had outlined for him, that he would have 'come back' and surprised those who were calling him a baek number; but he was killed, and I feel his death keenly."

Rex
LEARN TO SAY IT—

Saw little Milton Henry, the popular American jockey, entering one of the pieture shows this week. This young man, for the past seven years, has been sporting the colors of Baron Rothschild on the French tracks. He is still an Americaan, however. He is registered at the Majestic along with Floyd McFarland, who was interested in the reeent six-day bieyele raee held in Madison Square Garden. Henry is sorry that there has been such a deeided "crimp" placed in the raeing game in this country, and informs me that that is where the French "have it on this country." He elaims that the French guard against the races becoming illegal and that France is the greatest racing country in the world. He leaves with a party of friends on the 17th inst. for gay Paree, going direct to the French capital, where he will resume riding for Baron Rothschild.

A new attraction came to town for the winter and located at Whittington Park. It was Van's horse show. "Forest Tempest," the greatest educated horse in the world, is included in this aggregation, together with ten beautiful snow-white Arabian high-school horses. The comedy has been turned over to "He Haw Maud," a mule, the exact eounterpart of the one F. Opper has made famous in his reeent cartoons. This mule can "Hee Haw" like its pictorial namesake, and go that one a few better; and as for kick—brethren, that mule can kick in the side of the Ozark mountains, and that's some kicking, believe me.

One of the best laughs of the week was furnished by Duncan, the hypnotist, who opened the Grand for a week's engagement. Dunean, on the quiet, earried quite a little company. Its always best in an attraction of this kind, when you want to get your comedy across, to have your own "subjeets." The audienee wasn't wise. They came to laugh and went away with tears rolling down their eheeks. Duncan, aside from the time he was getting through with his "frame up" features, really did some very clever work. One thing that interested me was the fact that Bob Breece, a moving picture operator, fell for the cold gleam of Duncan's magnetie eye and for seven hours rode a stationary bicyele in the window of a prominent Central avenue drugstore. "Bob" came here a few weeks ago from Cleveland and went to work at the Lyeeum. He got tangled up with a lot of germs and bad liquor and took a vacation, and the next we heard of him was when he pulled off the six days' stunt on the "bike." Duncan told him when he was hypnotized that he had it on all six-day riders and from the manner in which Bob kept his legs going for over six hours it seemed as if Duncan had the right "dope." After the ride—Bob was "awakened" that night on the stage of the Grand—he appeared none the worse for his long grind. In fact, he smiled and remarked that he wished Duncan had hypnotized him when he was grinding out films, for he wouldn't mind it in the least. Bob made such a hit with the hypnotist that Duncan took him with him when he left this city.

In the advertisement of the Princess this week I noted the following: "Get wise and see this show." The next day, in the display of the Lyric, was this: "After you get wise eome to the Lyric and see a good show." The "retort courteous," gentlemen, made famous some time since by dear old Andy Carnegie.

The first week of the New Year promises some very good attraetions. The Lyrie and the Prineess have strong bills, while at the Auditorium "The Midnight Sons," Lew Fields' great musical eomedy success, promises to startle us Thursday night. Viola Allen, presenting "The White Sister," was received by a great soeial audience during the week, and Friday "The City," the last play by the late Clyde Fitch, makes its first appearance here. Next week we have "The Sins of the Father," the latest sensation by Rev. Thomas Dixon, which some good men in the South tried to stop without success, and what the press agent of this attraction is doing is a shame to relate. If there is standing room when this eompany gets in town I am very much mistaken.

I understand the Motion Picture Patents Company is going to district its various exchanges eontrolled by the General Film Company, so that no two exchanges will be serving houses in the same locality. This will make it interesting for houses in this eity. The Scenic, which recently installed first-run Trust pictures, and the Lyceum, which is using seeond run. The former house gets service from Louie Mitchell, in Memphis, while the Yale Film Company has been giving excellent satisfaction from St. Louis. This, according to the alleged plans of the Trust, will make this eity in Mitchell's territory. The people eontrolling the Lyceum and Mr. Mitchell are not on speaking terms, I hear, and it is said Mitehell would not care to take up their business. The Lyceum wants to keep Trust pictures. Independent exchanges which have heard of this move on the part of the General Film Company have not been slow to call attention of the various Trust houses to what they may expect. Nothing definite, however, could be learned. We'll have to wait and then we shall see what we shall see. In the meantime I hope all of you had a very happy New Year and that accounts will continue to ereep on the right side of the ledger, realizing for you greater prosperity than you have ever before known.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

BIG BUILDINGS FOR FIREPROOF FILM COMPANY

The contract for the erection and completion of the first group of buildings for the Fireproof Film Company, whose present offices are at 27 Church street, Rochester, N. Y., has been awarded.

The buildings now under contract will call for an expenditure of $200,000, including mechanical equipment, etc.

The company has taken advantage of the very latest and tried-out machinery, apparatus, etc., some of it being their own invention. The markets of the United States and Europe will supply a number of features which will greatly add to the efficiency of the plant.

About a year ago the company acquired the large estate which is bounded by Lake, Dewey, Ridgeway and Knickerbocker avenues. This comprises over seventeen acres, and is undoubtedly one of the best building sites of Rochester.

Will Make Fireproof Film

The company's first product to be put on the market is the fireproof film, which is a non-inflammable film that insures absolute safety for moving picture shows. The invention of this film is the result of long and patient investigation by some of the most expert chemists in the world, and has cost a large amount of money to perfect. Although little has been heard of the company since its incorporation over a year ago, those behind the scenes have been aware of the careful methodical work which it has been quietly doing in its temporary experimental factory to perfect the chemical and mechanical means for manufacturing this product, the difficulties of which are well known by many Rochester residents who have been more or less familiar with the photographic industry.

At some recent demonstrations of the fireproof film experts declared it to be the best motion picture film they had seen.

The eompany has been organized by practical men who have had long experience in photographic materials manufacture, and have made successes of their past undertakings. The president is Gustav Cramer, head of the G. Cramer Dry Plate Company, St. Louis. The treasurer is Henry Kuhn, late vice-president of the Defender Company, of Rochester, The secretary is J. E. Thornton, late of the Thornton-Pickard Company, England.

AN EXAMPLE FOR OTHER LADIES TO COPY

Mrs. Mattie B. Love, president of the Sunshine Club, of Louisville, Ky., took about 100 children yesterday to the picture show at the Majestic Theater for a Xmas treat. It was a day of sunshine for the youngsters, who enjoyed the performance thoroughly.

Mrs. Love recently escorted a number of children to a circus held in the city, and is arranging to bring a little sunshine into the lives of the children by taking them to some place of amusement each week.

MOVING PICTURE MEN ELECT

The Chattanooga branch of the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Protective Union of the United States and Canada held a regular meeting December 19 and were addressed by John O'Brien, secretary of Central Labor Union.

The annual election of officers was also held, the following being elected for the ensuing year: President, S. C. Sands; vice-president, W. L. Brown; recording secretary, Julian C. Harkins; financial secretary and treasure, Edwin Healy; business agent, C. W. Smith; trustees, Sam Donaldson, T. C. Thompson and George D. Overend.

Rex
LEARN TO SAY IT—

Manufacturers' Synopsis of Films

A CITY WOLF

Atlas—Released January 18

Here's a gripping story of the Adirondacks in which living, sinewy, red-blooded characters are found. A story of the deer hunting season in that famous hunting ground, in which the actual stalking of the deer and other wild game is shown with vivid realism.

As the sturdy guides and huntsmen glide over the snow-capped mountains and into camp you see them skinning the slain deer and preparing an appetizing meal.

However, the story itself is most interesting because it deals with the struggles of a pure girl, the daughter of a French-Canadian trapper, against the wiles of a city libertine who would ruin her.

Local color is added to the narrative by the introduction of many characters familiar to those who have visited the "Big Moose" region, such as Tom Baxter, who runs the "Baxter House," and is noted for his generosity and big heart; "Jean," the rough guide with a smooth and untroubled conscience, and many others who might be found among the simple, rugged mountain folk.

One of the most powerful and lasting lessons ever conveyed to moving picture film is "A City Wolf." A story which runs the entire gamut of human emotion, literally digging down to your very soul. Besides, it has scenic features of surpassing beauty, many scenes being photographed for the first time at heavy outlay and no little risk of life and limb. Deer hunting in the Adirondacks is shown in all its natural realism, while the interior settings, built in our own workshops, faithfully depict the trapper's cabin, the mountain hotel and other inside scenes necessary to the story with minute attention to details.

A superlative cast of prominent dramatic artists interpret the characters found in this exciting and interesting film-tale, each having been selected with a view to securing accurate and appropriate types as well as unusual dramatic ability.

"MELODY."

"Imp." Release, January 16th, 1911.

Old Dan Burns, a poor, but clever, violinist, has a hard time to make both ends meet. He is compelled to repair musical instruments for his daily bread, while his wife and daughter take in sewing. At last, he is reduced to the extremity of pawning his old friend and comrade, his violin.

Robert Hart and his wife have a little girl, Ella, of whom they are anxious to make a violinist, and they have employed as her teacher, a noted instructor, Prof. Dupre. Dupre is too high strung and particular to teach children, and accusing Ella of being dull and careless, Hart pays him off and discontinues the lessons.

It so happens that Dan Burns' wife and daughter are doing some sewing for Mrs. Hart, and old Dan goes to deliver some of it and is paid for it. After he returns with the money, his wife insists upon his getting his violin out of pawn and he goes to the shop to regain it. The pawnbroker tells him he has not allowed for the interest and has not enough money and consequently cannot let him have his instrument. Dan is grievously disappointed, and begs permission to play upon it one last time before he loses it forever.

The pawnbroker gruffly consents, and Dan begins playing, putting his whole soul into the music. As the strains of music float out upon the air, passersby on the street stop and listen to them, a tramp and a newsboy becoming especially affected. One of the most interested is Robert Hart, who stands outside the pawnshop enchanted by the melody.

The influence of the music even steals over the pawnbroker, who stops his work to listen. When Dan finally ceases playing and returns his violin, the pawnbroker hands it back to him and even refuses to accept the money, and the old man goes out happy.

Outside, he is met by Hart, who has been struck by the idea that Dan will make a capital teacher for little Ella, and he takes him home with him. Dan and Ella become close friends at once, and Dan's patience and goodness of heart soon make of her a most promising scholar, much to the delight of Mr. and Mrs. Hart.

HIS FIRST PATIENT.

"Imp." Release, January 19th, 1911.

Young Dr. Dick Ainsworth, a fledgling from a medical school, has just been made a member of a hospital staff. While attending to his duties, he meets and falls in love with Fannie Jones, one of the nurses. Dick proposes to her, is accepted and decides to marry her at once. But, as he has been largely dependent for his support upon his father, he concludes he had better obtain the paternal blessing upon his matrimonial alliance, so, escorts his intended to his father's office and, after introducing her, he introduces the subject of his marriage.

Mr. Ainsworth has always had a very poor opinion of Dr. Dick's mental capacity, and when he learns the nature of his son's intentions, he puts his foot down good and hard, explaining that he has no desire to be compelled to support two, instead of one. The young couple take their departure in a very unhappy frame of mind. But after their return to the hospital, the spirit of rebellion rises in Dr. Dick's bosom, and he telephones his father that he is going to marry Miss Jones anyway. His parent, of course, receives this message in no very gentle frame of mind, and the result is that the telephone communication between father and son becomes a veritable battle at long range, and places a terrific strain upon the wires.

Mr. Ainsworth finally decided to carry the war into the enemy's country and starts for the hospital at high speed.

In the meantime, a terrible railroad accident has occurred, and all of the medical staff, with the exception of Dr. Dick, are hurriedly summoned to the scene of the disaster.

Mr. Ainsworth arrives hurriedly in front of the hospital, and in rushing up to the entrance, slips, falls and breaks his leg. He is carried into the hospital, unconscious from pain, and is duly operated upon by his son, assisted by Miss Jones and other attendants.

The operation over, the limb duly set, the other physicians return and some of them visit the new case and examine the work done by the young doctor. Mr. Ainsworth, having recovered consciousness, and hearing their commendations upon the surgical work on his case, asks to see the surgeon who performed the operation. They send for Dr. Dick, who immediately appears, and when he is introduced as the clever young man who did the work, the old man's heart is filled with thanksgiving at having such a gifted son, who is, evidently, so well equipped with money-getting ability.

Dick seizes this auspicious moment to again introduce his fiancee and the subject of his approaching nuptials and is rewarded by receiving the long-sought paternal blessing.

Also on same reel ?

"THE REV. GOODLEIGH'S COURTSHIP."

"Imp." Release, January 19th, 1911.

Arthur Ames and Cora Rogers are sweethearts, but her family will not allow any of her young men friends to enter their house. Arthur enters it, however, but at such times when the old folks are not looking, and the young lovers are able to snatch a few moments of bliss only occasionally.

Then arrives a terrible day for the sweethearts, when Cora is told that she is expected to marry the son of old friends of her parents, the Rev. Harold Goodleigh, who has written that he is to arrive at once to begin his courting. He arrives soon after his letter, and is at once shown up to his room by the butler. Realizing that his clothes need pressing, he sends the man out with them, arraying himself in a blanket taken from his bed.

The butler passing the disconsolate young couple on his way to the street, Arthur spies the clothes and is seized by a sudden idea, which he hastens to explain to the butler, accompanying the explanation with a liberal tip. The happy butler escorts him to another room in the house, where Arthur sacrifices his lovely mustache and clothes himself in the clerical garments of his rival and coming down stairs, surprises Cora by the daring nature of his ruse. Mr. and Mrs. Rogers have never met either Arthur or the Rev. Goodleigh and so, when Arthur is introduced by Cora as the reverend suitor for her hand, they suspect nothing, and Arthur goes in with the family to dinner, which he gets through with very nicely, except that he has great difficulty in saying grace.

In the meantime the Rev. Goodleigh, attired in his blanket, is having a mournful wait, being almost torn asunder by conflicting emotions—filled with anxiety regarding the fate of his clothing, and driven almost to desperation by his sensations of emptiness and hunger. The latter feeling, however, he soon assuages by means of an old and decrepit sandwich, which he finds in a corner of his traveling bag.

Then a new element is injected into the plot. "Mad Harry," a lunatic from a neighboring asylum makes his escape. Now, Harry imagines he is an Indian chief, and proceeds to decorate himself with feathers from the tail of a turkey hanging outside of a butcher shop, and with a horse blanket and hatchet which he takes from a hardware store.

Running swiftly down the street, he comes to the Rogers' home and, climbing up, he pries open the window of the room which contains the Rev. Goodleigh and, springing in upon the terrified clergyman, he compels him to join in a war dance. The reverend gentleman finally breaks away and rushes out of the room into the street, closely pursued by Harry, uttering blood-curdling war whoops. Harry, getting sidetracked, runs into the midst of the Rogers family, and soon has them all busily dancing in a circle, he dashing everywhere, fiercely brandishing his bright new hatchet.

The Rev. Goodleigh, clad in his primitive garments, breathlessly meets the keeper, who is seeking Harry, and leads him to the house. But before keeper can overtake him the clergyman, who arrives at the height of the war dance, is compelled to join in it. The keeper arrives, Harry peacefully surrenders to him and quiet is restored.

Then explanations follow as to who is who, and Arthur is duly unmasked as a bogus minister. But, nothing daunted, he puts in his claim for Cora's hand, and after strenuous begging on the part of the young lovers, he is finally accepted as the son-in-law, that is—to be. And the Rev. Goodleigh's sad but exciting courtship is over.

BERTIE'S BRAINSTORM

Thanhouser—Released Tuesday, January 17

Bertie Fawcett is a dudish chap, who believes that he has won the heart of May Vernon, the belle of the co-eds. May, however, regards Bertie as very much of a joke and is in love with Jack Mace, who is her ideal of manly beauty. May's father has no objection to Jack, personally, but does not propose that the daughter he idolizes shall wed a weakling or a ne'er-do-well. Therefore, he tells May in a letter that if "that young man wants to marry you, he must show his ability by earning his own living during vacation."

Unfortunately for Bertie, he sees the letter, and egotistically jumps to the conclusion that he is the person referred to. So he hastens to Mr. Blake's house, tells the surprised old man that he accepts the offer, and starts out to make good. Blake is naturally much surprised, never having seen or heard of Bertie before, but his anger changes to mirth when May tells him how the youth has jumped at conclusions too hastily and incorrectly.

Bertie finds that earning a living is not so easy as it sounds, particularly if you are a fop, and even though a fop is in earnest. He is successively a waiter, a billposter, a village constable and a living target in a baseball sideshow, but fails to shine in any one sphere, although he smarts in all of them. And then, to cap the climax, when he returns to claim his bride, he finds that May has married Jack.

Bertie's troubles were due to his own overweening conceit, which explains why no one sympathized with him, and everybody laughed at him.

Rex

LEARN TO SAY IT—

THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP

Thanhouser—Released Friday, January 20

An old man, keeper of a quaint curiosity shop in London, lavishes all his love upon his granddaughter, Little Nell, the only person in the world for whom he really cares and who really cares for him. Poverty galls him, not because of himself, as his tastes are simple, but he wishes to see Nell surrounded by every luxury. And he finally believes he has found a way to make her wealthy.

His few acquaintances wonder what it is, for he talks mysteriously, yet happily, of his plans; but his secret is only found out by accident. He is gambling, always with his darling's name upon his lips, for he cannot see how the blind goddess can withhold her favors from one so lovable as Little Nell.

But the result of his gambling is the usual one; the man loses all, and is finally left without a cent that he can call his own. Nell, who has heard of his folly, fears that her grandfather will be taken away from her and placed in an asylum, and flees with him in the night. They have no money and no destination; fear drives them along.

Mrs. Jarley, the kind-hearted proprietor of a waxwork show, befriends and shelters them, and for a time it seems that their troubles are over. But the old fascination holds the old man. He robs his granddaughter of the tiny money she has, and gambles it away, hoping to return it tenfold. He loses, of course. Then the men who have robbed the helpless old man urge him to steal from his benefactress. He finally consents, but is saved from that crime by Little Nell, who sees that the only way to save him is to fly with him from temptation. So the feeble old man and the delicate child become wanderers again.

When Nell's strength is exhausted she meets a kindly schoolmaster and appeals to him for aid. Then she falls unconscious at his feet. The schoolmaster, although poor himself, takes the pair into his own home. But it is too late to save Nell. Wanderings and privations have sapped her vitality, and she dies. Her grandfather, broken-hearted, is found lifeless on her grave a few days later. The lesson that Dickens teaches in this story is that gambling does not pay, even when conducted for the best and most noble of purposes.

A HOMELESS BOY

Great Northern—Released January 14

A well-acted story, full of pathos. In a little seacoast village an artist is painting a picturesque cottage, before which a widow and her little son are working. A few years later the mother dies, and the boy is taken charge of by a fisherman, who shamefully ill-treats him. The boy runs away, and in dire straits breaks into a large house, hoping to find some food. In one of the rooms he is fascinated by a picture with a familiar scene. Before the home of his boyhood he sees a picture of his mother and himself. As he looks, the artist enters and grasps the intruder by the arm. The boy relates his story, and the artist generously adopts him as his son.

RETURNED TO THE FOLD

Yankee—Released Friday, January 20

Did you ever pass by a church on Sunday morning, just when the reverberating notes of the pipe organ were borne to your ears, while many voices chanted some heavenly strain?

Well, if you have, you can appreciate the feeling that steals over you and you can also appreciate the limits to which we have gone to make a similar scene a part of this picture.

We have constructed, perhaps, the most realistic church interior ever seen in a film. Not only were the seating facilities faithfully copied but the pulpit, choir loft and altar were reproduced accurately, besides we went to the expense of introducing a real, full-size pipe organ in the scene. This latter was conveyed to our studios in sections by means of heavy wagons and then erected by the organ builders. It is needless to add that this item in settings represented a cost equal to the entire expense involved in producing a complete film of the average importance.

While particular stress is laid on the above-mentioned scene, the production as a whole is novel throughout when you consider the vast variety of unusual scenes and situations it contains; in fact, we have made "Returned to the Fold" more as an advertising film, to show what we are capable of, than anything else.

Of course the story is brimming with real heart-interest and literally teems with sentiment. The sort of plot which makes us all better men and women in its unfolding. Nor have we sacrificed dramatic situations for sentiment, as there are many tense and exciting moments in the story and these have been transferred to intelligent action by a thoroughly competent cast of experienced people.

Altogether, we are quite proud of the effort and believe you will easily please your most critical audiences with the film.

We might suggest that you invite the clergy to see "Returned to the Fold." At any rate, induce churchgoers to visit your theater when you show it. You can make regular patrons of them if you do.

THE OLD FOLKS BACK HOME

Yankee—Released Monday, January 16

The lure of the city, with its lights and glitter, its busy streets and general atmosphere of bigness and continual rush and confusion, has changed the lives and habits of not a few young men who were reared 'mid the quiet simplicity of a rural atmosphere, so it is no wonder the principal figure in our present picture found himself engulfed in the maelstrom and went down life's torrent with some of the rest.

His little country sweetheart back on the farm gleefully journeyed to the post-office at regular intervals eager to receive a letter from the city where her best lover had gone.

These she read with a face glowing with excitement and interest, happy in the thought that sometime she would join him there; but soon the letters came less frequently and finally ceased entirely. Mother and sweetheart alike suffered along in silence, hoping against hope that all was well.

Meanwhile, the country boy had luckily risen to a position of prominence and gradually wormed his way into the gay society which frequented the vari-colored resorts along the Gay White Way.

He developed a taste for wine and grew fond of women in the lower strata. So he went on with the tide until brought to his senses by the arrival of a telegram bringing the news that his old mother was very low and expected to die. The message came when he was boisterously entertaining his friends in a glittering cafe. But his senses were not dulled by liquor sufficiently that he failed to realize his duty as it stared him in the face. In spite of entreaties from his companions, he rushed from the place and finally reached home after traveling all night.

There's a great deal more to the story which the film must tell for lack of space in this week's booklet; nevertheless, the sight of her boy brought health to the mother again and roses to the cheeks of the girl, who was disconsolately feeding the chickens when the news of his arrival came. Then the old courting days were revived and you can guess what followed.

The simple life, pictured in all its beauty and rustic goodness, is worth a visit to the theater in itself. Combine these wondrous scenic qualities with a story pointing a grand moral and incorporating more or less sensation with the carrying out of a strong plot by a notable acting cast, and you will agree "The Folks Back Home" is needed on your program.

200,000 SEE MOVING PICTURES EVERY DAY

Since the moving picture industry of this city was placed on a high moral and educational plane, more than 200,000 persons every day have found amusement and instruction in the many theatres where pictures are shown in great variety.

For 10 cents, every man, woman and child can explore the uttermost parts of the earth and study the manners and customs and standards of living of many countries at close range. Then, too, little dramas of the home strike deep into the heart of the unthinking father and mother, making a lasting impression where countless lectures and talks would fail utterly. It is the actual seeing of things that more completely educates a man, and it is in this way that the moving pictures educate and point their moral lessons.

All earnest reformers believe that the new moving picture theaters will do more toward abolishing the saloon than anything else, and in substantiation of this it seems already as if these theaters were beckoning to the saloon's former patrons with arguments too strong to be withstood.

Of course the very best possible advertisement the moving picture shows can have is a clean, wholesome entertainment in a pleasant hall. People who go there, if impressed, tell their friends; the whole people are constantly reminded by the newspaper advertising, and so the nucleus of steady patronage is developed. It must be acknowledged that it is still the minority of the entertainment-seeking public that supports the moving picture shows.

The great majority has to be convinced. They do not know what a moving picture theater is like.

It is by proper advertising and the maintaining of clean entertainments that these prejudices can be overcome. Because the price of admission to the moving picture theaters is only ten cents, it does not mean that the entertainment offered is cheap and undesirable. One gets more for his money in these theaters than in any other places of amusement.

Countless electric lights brilliantly illumine the thoroughfare, where nightly an army of men and women march and countermarch. They pause in the garish glare, attracted by the gay posters—the music from within, the general whiteness of the carved oriental decoration of the entrance, and lured by it all groups of two and three leave the ever-moving throng and enter to inspect the mysteries on the inside.

Although the attractive interiors, shown to the best advantage by subdued artistic lighting, can be admired at all times—it is never totally dark—it is the screen ahead which attracts the newcomer, for people are moving about. Horses dash by—there is the world in motion again on a tiny stage. In rapid order come the pictures. First a comic one where scores of people chase madly around after a baby carriage which has run away by itself. They fall down, scramble over each other, wave their arms, and before one is aware he is shouting with laughter. Then there appears before the eyes another title, this time of a serious nature. Perhaps the scene shows a happy home, with the father playing with two little tots, while a fond mother stands close by. The scene then shifts to the shop where the father works. Lunch hour comes and one of the men produces a bottle of liquor. He offers it to the father, who refuses. The workmen taunt him for being afraid to take a drink. To show them that he is not, he tastes it. He likes it, and after work he goes to a saloon where the pictures show the men lined up before a bar. The father gets intoxicated and returns home. The scenes at the home are dramatically enacted. Terribly real is the horror of the young wife, the sadness of the little ones, who wonder why the father does not play with them as usual.

Then the picture changes to years later. The father has become an habitual drunkard. Instead of the pretty home in the first picture it is now a scene of poverty and squalor. The faithful mother looks tired and ill—the little children half fed and half clothed—the room desolate and barren. But all the good in the father is not quite dead. There is a spark of good which is fanned into a flame by the awful shame of it all and he resolves to make a new start—to start a new home. He succeeds and the picture finally disappears, leaving in the memory the happy home again, with the children having the merriest kind of time with the father, while the good wife stands close by. The man who went in feels a bit queer. He has seen what he before had only heard talked of.

Rex
LEARN TO SAY IT—

A man appears and sings a song, brilliantly colored lantern slides depicting the song.

Then comes another picture—this time perhaps of the far West, with its rugged country, its cowboys, miners, and western scenes. They are real scenes, too, and for the first time the onlooker wonders how it is all done—how those wonderful pictures so absolutely true to life are taken.

In turn come pictures of foreign lands. Street scenes with the people of different nationalities moving about just as the American tourist sees them, are thrown on the canvas. One sees the countless windmills of Holland and the people with their wooden shoes just as they have read about. Then one actually sees the great mountains of Switzerland—sees the American and European tourists scaling the high peaks—the snow and all the wonders that would cost fortunes to see.

Perhaps some great royal celebration of pomp and grandeur has occured a month before. There it appears just as it was before your eyes in this little theater. There are the splendid platoons of soldiery—the people crowding and waving their hats on the sidewalks—the mounted policemen forcing them back, and then the crowd becomes more excited and afar off can be seen a carriage approaching. A man or perhaps a woman is seen bowing to the right and left—smiling and acknowledging the reception of the people. And the onlooker thrills as he realizes that he is seeing the king or queen or prince just as they are—the real person.

The man has paid ten cents to see all this reality, and it is no wonder when he goes out once again to the crowded thoroughfare that he rehearses it all over in his mind, and that he goes again.

That is why the moving pictures are getting such a hold on the American people. They are real.

The public at large are mistaken when they believe there is a mint of money in such an enterprise. The expenses are tremendous. It is a business like any other, and it is the constant and ever-increasing attendance which makes them pay, just as patronage in any other business would do.—N. Y. Globe.

Better Light in Moving Picture Theaters

With the passing of the "Store" moving picture theaters, and the erection of more expensive and complete theater buildings, has come the demand on all sides for better lighted screens. In the early days of the business, houses operating on alternating current used rheostats, choke coils, or cheap current-saving devices—anything so they got a picture. Now the changed conditions and competition have forced exhibitors to use nothing but the best devices. The surest proof of this is in the constant and increased demand for the Hallberg Economizers. Mr. J. H. Hallberg, the "Economizer Man," reports that he is every day replacing inferior makes with his Standard Economizer for alternating current circuits. He is the pioneer in the business and the only manufacturer of a successful direct-current Economizer.

WIFE WANTS M. P. MACHINE AS ALIMONY

Chattanooga, Dec. 23.—To ask for a moving picture machine as alimony was the unusual request in a bill for divorce filed in chancery by Mamie B. Nickerson against W. T. Nickerson, a traveling negro preacher. Nickerson, it is alleged, mortgaged his wife's home on Mission Ridge for $250 with which he bought the "motionograph machine." He said he was going to do great work in making money with the machine, but on the contrary his wife alleges he has not supported her.

Rex

LEARN TO SAY IT—

THE ONLY BIG SUCCESS

among motion picture machines is the

MOTIOGRAPH

and you can't show the best pictures without it.

The quality of pictures will increase your patronage.

GET A MOTIOGRAPH

The wearing qualities will save repair bills and breakdowns.

It will encourage your operator to use a motiograph, because it is so simple, accessible, and durable. Remember the Motiograph is not an experiment—it has proven what it can do.

Send for catalog.

Manufactured and Jobbed by ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO. 564 West Randolph St. Chicago, U. S. A.

J. H. Hallberg, Agt. 36 E. 23rd Street, New York City

Edw. H. Kemp, Agt. 833 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

J. F. Brockliss, Agt. London, Paris and Berlin.

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH NO. 6

The perfect motion picture machine.

"In regard to your Power's No. 6 machine, can frankly say that we have and show the best, clearest and absolutely flickerless pictures, and that is more than any other picture house people around this part of the city can say."
(Signed) Gus A. Miller, Mgr. & Prop.,
Lenox Theatre.

Dated: New York, Dec. 22nd, 1910.

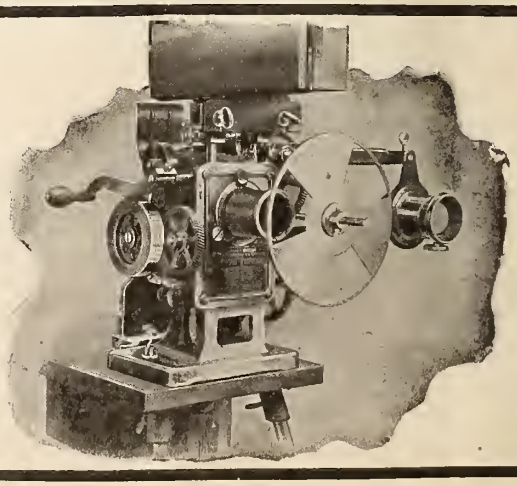
"I assure you that I am sincere in what I say about this No. 6 as it certainly has all other makes cheated to death in its projection and is absolutely noiseless and flickerless. I think it will wear longer, if properly taken care of, than any other machine."
(Signed) F. E. Whitmer,
Vaudette Theatre.

Dated: Springfield, Ills., Dec. 21st, 1910.

"I have used your No. 6 for the past six months and consider it the GREATEST machine on the market."
(Signed) H. Ling, Mgr.,
Ling & Ling Amusement Co.

Dated: Paullina, Ia., Dec. 21st, 1910.

Send for Catalogue D describing it.



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115 Nassau St., New York

For thirteen years the leading manufacturers of Motion Picture Machines.

Vaudeville Music

VARIETIES IN MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

BY FRA.

Illustrated Songs

CHURCH VAUDEVILLE

At spasmodic intervals we have one-sided, unfair, unbalanced, often illiterate, attacks upon moving pictures, whilst the very name of vaudeville is anathema to a group who prate of holiness—that is healthfulness—but do not show any practical signs of their preachment.

Sundry placards and announcements I have seen lately upon the billboards of places of "worship" here, there and everywhere, set me a-thinking: why such things?

The business man after the toil, and moil, and struggle of the day, seeks relaxation. Our make-up demands it. He does not want to struggle with intellectual puzzles; he needs amusement. Clean amusement is no sin. With moving pictures he can revisit old scenes or revel in new ones; a delightful form of education. He can see strong and noble scenes from the lives of other men and ought to be able to have a good laugh thrown in. Then clean vaudeville, with its exhibition of musical and athletic experts, and the genuine funny folk we have, rounds out a restful and elevating hour or so.

This is denounced in some quarters, and yet, lo! they are doing the self-same thing. Churches cry over their empty benches, and failing influence. What they offer does not meet the needs of the tired man and women. It is not what gives rest to the weary. Not that the subject-matter is wanting, for a church, whatever its name, possesses the highest and noblest. The presentation is feeble, there's the weakness. What happens? The pulpit denounces moving pictures and then uses them. I'd like to know the Sunday school that would not be the better for some of the Biblical gems the film-makers have produced.

The church is getting colder and colder, empty and emptier. What is done? Church vaudeville and nothing else. Choirs to sing ornate music, soloists, sometimes with senational themes, brass bands, blaring phonographs, and so forth, with "Sermons," on "Sitting on the Stoop," "Ice Cream Parlors," "Fans for Hot Weather" and sundry other ecclesiastical themes. If all this isn't vaudeville I'd like to know what it is. When the young people of a district call a certain church "the ——— Casino," the effect is beyond dispute.

Homiletic mosaic and profound discussions on what concerns nobody's everyday life, mixed up with sociological statistics, is out of date. All I want to point out is that it is not just to condemn vaudeville and then "go and do likewise."

True religion, expounded by true men, will always have its just reward.

Meanwhile, clean vaudeville—and we have it—is excellent, and we have managers who watch every turn that appears in their theaters as carefully as any preacher.

If our critics realize the value of vaudeville, we surely are right to follow such high exemplars; no, not follow, but lead, for if our vaudeville was not better than the "church vaudeville," the theaters would close their doors in short order, even if the admission were gratis, and "no collection taken."

VAUDEVILLE

Chas. W. Ritter, of Red Bank, N. J., has made a flattering success of his moving picture show and has developed into a manager of no small proportions. His Empire Theater at Red Bank is his second venture, he having owned the Bijou, which was recently destroyed by fire.

Mr. Ritter has had plans prepared and will build a terra cotta theater with all the latest safeguards against fire, etc., at Rahway, N. J., and will manage this in connection with his Red Bank house. His shows are up-to-date and only good, clean pictures and acts are given.

KEITH & PROCTOR'S FOURTEENTH STREET THEATER

A good, strong bill is given this week at Keith & Proctor's and acts of unusual merit are being presented to appreciative audiences. Manager Buck is to be complimented upon his good judgment in securing talent of such drawing powers.

As a headliner the Aeroplane Girl is a decided novelty—a clever one—and immensely pleasing to the patrons. This act is kept on for the entire week. Other atractions are Norman, the Frog Man; Wheeler & Harcourt, and the Caucasian Russian Dancers for the first part of the week, with Walters & Violet, Wilson & Franklin, and White's Comedy Mules as the specialties for the latter part.

THE UNIQUE

The Unique is playing to big houses and the audiences are well repaid, as the acts and pictures presented are of a fine order. The Vaudeville is made up of the following: DeVeau Sisters, singing and dancing; J. S. Black, violinist and cornetist; Paine & Lee, Billiken dancers; Addie St. Alva, character singing comedienne; Vento & Vento, comedy ventriloquists.

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATER

Manager Rosenquest, of the Fourteenth Street Theater, reports business as the best the house has ever known, and judging from the attendance this week his statement is correct. A good, strong list of vaudeville is given and the pictures are fully up to the standard of this house, which is A-1.

Connors & Edna, Floyd & Russell, Olive Eaton and her players in Man Proposes—Woman Disposes, the Four Lagards, the Four Magnanis, Gould & Baldwin, and Jack Driscoll, complete the list. We would like to review them all, but they're all good, and what more could be said.

HAMMERSTEIN'S VICTORIA

Out of a strong bill the sensation that gets the claps and the laughs as they do whenever they go are Morton and Moore, the "Dude Clowns." Their turn of eccentric dancing and singing with sundry "frills" dance past like a moving picture. A good, clean, high-class piece of vaudeville. Valeska Suratt is a winner.

GREENPOINT

The bill that Manager Percy G. Williams presents to his Greenpoint patrons for the coming week blends jollity with pathos. Julius Steger, who is playing his farewell engagement in vaudeville preparatory to starring in the legitimate, heads the bill with "The Way to the Heart," in which he shows his ability as a vocalist and his talents as an actor. He is supported by an adequate company. A sketch of contrasting spirit is "A Fool's Errand," the vehicle with which Lancton, Lucier and company keep their auditors in a continuous roar of laughter. May Elinore, one of the noted Elinore Sisters, appears in the droll life studies that made them famous. McPhee and Hill, aerialists, present a novel act styled "The Clown and the Tired Man," in which the "tired" man loses his languor while being whirled through the air. This act was a hit at the London Hippodrome, and is presented here for the first time. Another act that combines comedy and skill is that of the Koner Brothers, four young men who roll hoops and manipulate the diabolo.

FULTON TO RESUME VAUDEVILLE

The Fulton Theater will resume regular vaudeville next week. The management have arranged to put on twelve acts nightly. The moving picture entertainments have proven good from a business standpoint, but the demand from all over the borough and especially from the section and the adjoining sections to that in which the theater is located, has been persistently made for a resumption of first-class vaudeville. It is in response to this demand that the management has decided to take this step.

SONG SLIDES

F. B. HAVILAND PUB. CO.
125 West 37th St., N. Y. City.

The Tipperary Twirl. Jack Drislane and Geo. Meyer.
Oh, Oh, Oh. Victor Smalley.
Dreaming of You. H. W. Petrie.
The Arabian Ooze. James T. Duffy.
It's Time to Close Your Drowsy Eyes and Sleep. Henry Frantzen.
Haviland's Mandolin Folio No. 8.
Haviland's Dance Folio No. 10.

THEODORE MORSE MUSIC CO.
1367 Broadway, New York.

Letty Lane. Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse.
Oh! You Rah! Rah! Boy. Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse.
What Is a Night Without Dreams. Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse.
Phoebe Jane. Richard Henry Buck and Theodore Morse.
Good-by, Betty Brown. Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse.
If This Rose Told You All It Knows. Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse.

LEVI COMPANY, INC.

Cristo Columbo. Words by Thomas J. Gray and music by Fred Fisher, writers of "Any Little Girl That's a Nice Little Girl," etc. A fine character song with both clever lyrics and a good melody. The set contains a dozen novelties, all well done, and every singer can bank on twelve good laughs every time he sings it.

Turn Those Eyes Away. Words and music by Billy Brent; published by Shapiro. Another good song by Billy Brent with a fine set of lyrics and a very pretty melody. The slides are highly artistic in every detail. This song has already made good.

Don't Wake Me Up, I'm Dreaming. Words by Beth Slater Whitson and music by Herbert Ingraham, writer of "Roses Bring Dreams of You," "You Are the Ideal of My Dreams" and "All I Ask Is Love," published by Shapiro. The senorial was written by Mr. Shapiro and it was illustrated under his personal supervision. He expects it to be a bigger seller than any of Ingraham's other numbers, and judging from the way he is going after it, it can't be otherwise. The scenes are beautiful, showing some of the richest interiors ever used in a set of slides, and it will rank as one of the best sets of slides ever produced.

Steamboat Bill. Words by Ren Shields, music by Leighton Bros., published by F. A. Mills. "Steamboat Bill" is some character, and in a short time will claim intimate acquaintance with everybody. Entirely different from the average song and the singer can bank on a hearty reception with it. The slides are great, as the photography is good and the ideas well carried out.

NOTES FROM STERN & CO.

The Benedict Sisters are presenting an act on the United Time which the "big time" managers of the United should lose no time in booking. The dancing and singing of the Benedict Sisters cannot be too highly praised, while their wardrobe is excellent. The hit of their act is Henry & Branen's audience song, "I'm Looking For a Nice Young Fellow."

Paul Durand played his new "Girl" act at the Prospect Theater last week, the criticisms of his fellow vaudeville agents being most favorable. Mr. Durand has interpolated in the act two "Stern" songs, namely, "You Can Win Me If You Woo Me," and "I'm Looking For a Nice Young Fellow." He says that both songs are a feature of his act.

The "Rathskeller Duo," Messrs. Burns and Lawrence, have just added "My! What a Funny Little World This Is!" to their repertoire of songs, and inform us that it is the best "spot-light" and "talking" song they have ever used. The boys are very popular with the audiences of all the big vaudeville theaters in and around New York City, on account of their originality in "putting over" their songs.

Spiegel & Dunn are playing return dates in New York City, and proving more popular with their audiences than ever. They have introduced new songs, dances and comedy, which no doubt accounts for their continued popularity. Mr. Spiegel is singing Jeff. T. Branen's new coon song, "If I Could See As Far Ahead."

Mr. Earl Norton, the well-known character singer and comedian, is having great success with Al. Solman's new waltz song, "You Can Win Me If You Woo Me," and "Follow the Car Tracks," also composed by Mr. Solman.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

REPAIRED

by skilled mechanics at short notice and reasonable prices. Work guaranteed.

Supplies of All Kinds.

CHAS. E. DRESSLER,
388 2nd Ave., City, near 23rd St.
Take elevator.

We want all old friends as well as new ones to remember we want your $2.00 per year, or $1.00 for six months subscription.

If you are not satisfied with the results in next three months your money returned.

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

INDEPENDENT FILMS

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

	Feet
Nov. 23—Gounod's "Ave Maria"	788
Nov. 23—The Story of a Pair of Boots	207
Nov. 30—The Judas Money, or, An Episode of the War in Vendee	965
Dec. 7—The Tell Tale Portrait	602
Dec. 7—Tweedle Dum Learns a Tragical Part	374
Dec. 14—Dido Forsaken by Aenea	1027
Dec. 21—Little Peter's Christmas Dinner
Dec. 28—Drama of the Engine Driver and Grandfather's Pipe
Jan. 4—The Wall Partition	500
Jan. 4—Trials of Tweedledum as a Policeman	500

AMERICAN.

Dec. 15—The Binding Shot (Dr.)
Dec. 19—Her Fatal Mistake (Dr.)
Dec. 22—Her Husband's Deception (Com.)
Dec. 22—A Troublesome Parcel Com.)
Dec. 26—Girlies (Com.)
Dec. 29—The Squaw and the Man (Dr.)
Jan. 2—Mrs. Gay Life's Visitors (Com.)
Jan. 5—The Tenderfoot's Round-up (Com.)
Jan. 9—An Arizona Romance	990
Jan. 12—Lucy's Lover	560
Jan. 12—The Borrowed Flat	420
Jan. 16—The Battered Bridegrooms	525
Jan. 16—A Dental Disaster	450
Jan. 19—The Bonanza King	990

ATLAS FILM CO.

Nov. 2—Turning of the Worm (Dr.)
Nov. 2—That Dog Gone Dog (Com.)
Nov. 2—That Doggone Dog (Com.)
Nov. 9—The King of Beggars (Dr.)
Nov. 16—The Hand of Providence (Dr.)
Nov. 23—Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters (Dr.)
Nov. 30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.)
Dec. 7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.)
Dec. 14—Brothers (Dec.)
Dec. 21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.)
Dec. 28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)
Jan. 4—A Straw Ride (Dr.)

CAPITOL FILM CO.

Sept. 10—The Messenger Boy's Sweetheart.
Sept. 17—Round Trip $5.98
Sept. 24—Bill Mason's Ride	700
Oct. 8—All's Fair in Love and War
Oct. 15—A Shot in the Night
Oct. 22—The Locket (Dr.)

CHAMPION.

Nov. 9—The Ranchman and the Miser (Dr.)	950
Nov. 16—The Way of the West (Dr.)	950
Nov. 23—Let Us Give Thanks (Dr.)	950
Nov. 30—The Indian Land Grab (Dr.)	950
Dec. 7—Hearts of the West (Dr.)	950
Dec. 14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.)	950
Dec. 21—His Mother (Dr.)	950
Dec. 28—The Golden Gates (Dr.)	950
Jan. 4—Days of the Early West (Dr.)	950

CINES.
Eclair.

Oct. 21—The Last of the Savelli Dr.)	800
Oct. 28—Tontolini in Love (Com.)	480
Oct. 28—The Pretty Dairy Maid (Dr.)	480
Nov. 4—A Wooden Sword (Dr.)	800

COLUMBIA

Oct. 29—In the Web (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.)
Nov. 19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 26—Stage Coach Tom (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 3—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.)
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.)
Jan. 7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.)

DEFENDER FILM COMPANY

Oct. 13—The Tale the Camera Told
Oct. 20—The Heart of a Cowboy (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 27—A Clause in the Will (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 3—Cohen's Generosity (Com.)
Nov. 10—The Last Straw (Dr.)
Nov. 17—The Education of Mary Jane (Dr.)
Nov. 24—Forgiven (Dr.)

ECLAIR.

Nov. 28—The Wreck (Dr.)	565
Nov. 28—A Di cult Capture (Com.)	380
Dec. 5—The Price of a Sacrifice (Dr.)	833
Dec. 5—The Laundry Girl's Good-Night (C.)	82
Dec. 12—The Bowling Craze (Com.)	445
Dec. 12—Our Dear Uncle From America (Com.)	470
Dec. 19—The Child of Two Mothers (Dr.)	545
Dec. 19—The Museum of Sovereigns (Dr.)	400
Dec. 26—The Lock-Keeper (Dr.)	537
Dec. 26—The Fear of Fire (Com.)	390
Jan. 2—The Great Medal Competition (Com.)	485
Jan. 2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.)	480

GREAT NORTHERN.

	Feet
Nov. 26—Kean, or the Prince and the Actor.
Nov. 21—Their Day of Thanks (Dr.)
Nov. 24—The Country Boarder (Com.)
Nov. 28—The Revolving Door
Dec. 1—A Child's Judgment (Dr.)
Dec. 3—The Birthday Present (Dr.)
Dec. 3—The Ohami Troupe of Acrobats (Sc.)
Dec. 10—The Poacher (Dr.)
Dec. 17—A Christmas Letter (Dr.)
Dec. 17—Dickey's Courtship (Com.)
Dec. 24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.)
Dec. 31—The Scarecrow (Dr.)
Dec. 31—Bear Hunting (Sc.)

IMP.
Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Nov. 7—Keeping His Word (Dr.)	990
Nov. 10—The Model's Redemption (Dr.)	995
Nov. 14—The Double (Dr.)	995
Nov. 17—Fortune's Wheel (Dr.)	990
Dec. 5—Aspirations of Gerald and Percy (Dr.)	995
Dec. 8—'Twixt Loyalty and Love (Dr.)	990
Dec. 12—Faithful Max (Dr.)	500
Dec. 12—A Clever Ruse	500
Dec. 15—The Poor Student (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 19—The Crippled Teddy Bear
Dec. 22—Little Nell's Tobacco (Dr.)
Dec. 26—The Unexpected Honeymoon (Dr.)	995
Dec. 29—Unreasonable Jealousy (Dr.)	990
Jan. 2—The Wise Druggist (Dr.)	995
Jan. 5—Reunited (Dr.)	995

ITALA.

Nov. 19—Foolshead Victim of His Honesty	669
Nov. 19—An Original Palette	210
Nov. 24—Sacrificed	875
Nov. 26—A Chosen Marksman approx.	500
Nov. 26—A Windy Day approx.	500
Dec. 3—The Big Drum	598
Dec. 3—The Dog Sweeper	360
Dec. 1—A Painful Debt	1,000
Dec. 8—The Soldier of the Cross	890
Dec. 10—Foolshead Knows How to Take His Precautions	588
Dec. 10—The Good Samaritan	408
Dec. 15—The False Accusation	774
Dec. 17—The Mother's Shadow	456
Dec. 17—Thieves as Quick-Change Artists	594
Dec. 22—Who Was the Culprit? (Com.)
Dec. 24—Greediness Spoiled Foolshead's Christmas (Com.)
Dec. 29—The Rustic
Dec. 31—Norwegian Water Falls	500
Dec. 31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day	500
Jan. 5—Antonio Toscarino	900
Jan. 7—Foolshead as Inspector of Hygiene	900

LUX.
By Prieur.

Oct. 27—Where You Go, I Go	367
Nov. 3—Fatty Buys a Bath (Com.)	279
Nov. 3—Her Diary (Dr.)	670
Nov. 10—The Truth Revealed (Dr.)	639
Nov. 10—Bill as a Boxer (Com.)	327
Nov. 18—Bill as a Lover (Com.)	462
Nov. 18—Bloppa in Search of the Black Hand (Com.)	468
Nov. 25—In Friendship's Name (Dr.)	901
Dec. 2—Bill as an Operator (Com.)	485
Dec. 2—Necessity Is the Mother of Invention (Dr.)	449
Dec. 9—What It Will Be (Com.)	491
Dec. 9—And She Came Back (Com.)	452
Dec. 16—How He Won Her (Com.)	344
Dec. 16—Her Favorite Tune (Dr.)	550
Dec. 23—Bill Plays Bowls (Com.)	423
Dec. 23—Rosalie's Dowry (Com.)	492
Dec. 30—Aunt Julia's Portrait (Com.)	547
Dec. 30—Tim Writes a Poem (Com.)	375

NESTOR FILM CO.

Sept. 28—Where the Sun Sets	976
Oct. 5—The Golden Hoard	930
Oct. 12—Silver Plume Mine	970
Oct. 19—The Boys of Topsy-Turvy	960
Oct. 26—Rev. John Wright of Missouri	970
Nov. 2—The Girl from the West (Dr.)
Nov. 9—The Woodsman (Dr.)	960
Nov. 16—The Ranchman's Bride (Dr.)
Nov. 23—A Deal in Indians	1000
Nov. 30—Valley Folks
Dec. 7—The Conquering Hero
Dec. 14—The Pilgrim (Dr.)
Dec. 21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.)

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
("Bison")

Nov. 8—The Branded Man	985
Nov. 11—Bud's Triumph	950
Nov. 11—Bud's Triumph	971
Nov. 15—The Fight of Red Wing	970
Nov. 18—An Indian Maiden's Choice	950
Nov. 22—True Western Honor	957
Nov. 25—A Cheyenne's Love for a Sioux. ap.	975
Nov. 29—The Ranchman's Personal	972
Dec. 2—A Child of the Wild	991
Dec. 6—A Sioux's Reward	875
Dec. 9—A Brave Western Girl approx.	975
Nov. 25—A Cheyenne's Love for a Sioux	980
Dec. 9—A Brave Western Girl	965
Dec. 13—An Indian's Test	950
Dec. 16—A Girl of the Plains approx.	975
Dec. 20—The Cattle Baron's Daughter
Dec. 23—The Pale Faced Princess
Dec. 27—An Indian's Elopement
Dec. 30—Taming Terror
Jan. 3—In the Heart of the Sierras	900
Jan. 6—A Savage Girl's Devotion	900

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Nov. 29—Wanted: A Baby (Com.)
Dec. 3—When the World Sleeps (Dr.)
Dec. 6—The Medicine Man (Com.)
Dec. 6—The Rehearsal (Dr.)
Dec. 10—The Ride to Death (Dr.)
Dec. 13—A Plucky Western Kid (Dr.)
Dec. 17—His Gypsy Sweetheart (Dr.)
Dec. 20—Jack Logan's Dog (Com.)
Dec. 20—The Bachelor's Finish (Com.)
Dec. 24—A Father's Love (Dr.)
Dec. 27—The Station Agent's Daughter (Dr.)
Dec. 27—Freddie's Courtship (Com.)
Dec. 31—A Daughter of Virginia (Dr.)
Jan. 3—The Pinkerton Man (Dr.)
Jan. 3—Beaux Not Wanted (Com.)
Jan. 7—A Woman Without a Heart (Dr.)
Jan. 17—A Montana Love Story (Com.)
Jan. 17—Lovers' Trials (Com.)
Jan. 21—A Noble Heart (Dr.)

RELIANCE

Dec. 3—When Woman Wills approx	975
Dec. 3—When Woman Wills	975
Dec. 10—The Dispensation approx.	975
Dec. 3—When Woman Wills	990
Dec. 10—The Dispensation	975
Dec. 17—The Thin Dark Line approx.	975
Dec. 24—The Refuge
Jan. 7—As the Master Orders	900
Jan. 11—The Hour of Fate	900

SALES CO.
Film D'Art

June 30—Fort Du Bitche.	921
July 7—Jemmy	805
July 14—The End of a Dynasty	920
July 21—Mateo Falcone	694
July 21—Andromache	356
July 28—The Hiding Place	900
Aug. 4—The Eagle and the Eaglet	1000
Aug. 11—Charles le Temeraire	518
Aug. 11—Oedipus King	457
Aug. 18—Carmen	995
Aug. 25—In the Days of the First Christians.	1000
Sept. 1—King of a Day	975
Sept. 8—The Minister's Speech	500
Sept. 8—The Conscience of a Child	500
Sept. 15—The Temptation of Sam Bottler	1000

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Oct. 25—Young Lord Stanley (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 28—The Fairies' Hallowe'en (Com.)	1000
Nov. 1—Mistress and Maid	1000
Nov. 4—The American and the Queenhrdlumfw
Nov. 8—The Little Fire Chief	1000
Nov. 11—The American and the Queen (D.)	1000
Nov. 15—Paul and Virginia (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 18—The City of Her Dreams (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 22—A Thanksgiving Surprise (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 25—The Wild Flower and the Rose (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 29—Value Beyond Price (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 2—John Halifax, Gentleman (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 6—Rip Van Winkle (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 9—The Girls He Left Behind Him
Dec. 9—The Iron-Clad Lover
Dec. 13—Love and Law (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 16—The Millionaire Milkman (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 20—Looking Forward (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 23—The Childhood of Jack Harkaway (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 27—The Vicar of Wakefield (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 30—Hypnotized (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 3—The Pasha's Daughter
Jan. 6—Baseball and Bloomers

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Oct. 31—Italian Sherlock Holmes (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 7—Spirit of the West (Dr.)
Nov. 14—The Case of the Missing Heir (D.)	1000
Nov. 21—Lone Wolf's Trust (Dr.)
Nov. 28—The Heart of an Actress (Dr.)
Dec. 2—Queen of the Nihilists (Dr.)
Dec. 5—In the Czar's Name (Dr.)
Dec. 9—Western Justice (Dr.)
Dec. 12—A Fight for Millions (Dr.)
Dec. 16—The Old Miner's Doll (Dr.)
Dec. 19—A Ward of Uncle Sam (Dr.)
Dec. 23—The Terror of the Plains (Com.)
Dec. 26—The Insane Heiress (Dr.)
Dec. 30—The Missing Bridegroom (Dr.)
Jan. 6—The Royal Wishbone (Dr.)

TRUST FILMS

BIOGRAPH.

		Feet
Nov.	17—Love in Quarantine (Dr.)	505
Nov.	21—The Song of the Wildwood Flute (Dr.)	996
Nov.	24—His New Lid (Com.)	563
Nov.	24—Not So Bad as It Seemed (Com.)	432
Nov.	28—A Plain Song	997
Dec.	1—Effecting a Cure	997
Dec.	5—A Child's Strategem	998
Dec.	8—Turning the Tables	416
Dec.	8—Happy Jack, a Hero	576
Dec.	12—The Golden Supper (Dr.)	998
Dec.	15—His Sister-in-Law Dr.)	998
Dec.	19—The Lesson	994
Dec.	22—The White Roses	588
Dec.	22—The Recreation of an Heiress	410
Dec.	26—Winning Back His Love (Dr.)	994
Dec.	29—His Wife's Sweethearts (Com.)	682
Dec.	29—After the Ball (Com.)	311
Jan.	2—The Two Paths	992
Jan.	5—When a Man Loves	998

EDISON.

Nov.	23—Through the Clouds (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	25—A Daughter of the Mines	995
Nov.	29—The Greater Love (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	30—Arms and the Woman (Dr.)	975
Dec.	2—The Cowpuncher's Glove	1000
Dec.	6—The Winning of Miss Langdon	995
Dec.	7—The Life of a Salmon	440
Dec.	7—Amateur Night	550
Dec.	9—The Captain's Bride	1000
Dec.	13—An Old Silver Mine in Peru (Ind.)	250
Dec.	13—A Mountain Maid (Dr.)	750
Dec.	14—Pigs is Pigs (Com.)	1000
Dec.	16—The Red Cross Seal (Dr.)
Dec.	20—The Police of New York City	995
Dec.	21—The Joke They Played on Bumptious	990
Dec.	23—A Christmas Carol	1000
Dec.	27—Eldora, the Fruit Girl (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	28—A Family of Vegetarians (Com.)	990
Dec.	30—The Romance of Hefty Burke (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	3—In the Days of Chivalry	1000
Jan.	4—Sleep, Gentle Sleep	990
Jan.	6—The Fire Department of New York City	400
Jan.	6—A Western Night	600

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Nov.	5—A Westerner's Way (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	8—The Masquerade Cop (Com.)	428
Nov.	8—Hank and Lank "Life Savers" (Com.)	560
Nov.	12—The Marked Trail (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	15—Love at First Sight (Com.)	978
Nov.	19—The Little Prospector (Dr.)	960
Nov.	22—That Popular Tune
Nov.	22—Hank and Lank
Nov.	26—A Western Woman's Way	1000
Nov.	29—The Tie That Binds	953
Dec.	3—"Circle C" Ranch Wedding
Dec.	6—Love's Awakening	1000
Dec.	10—A Cowboy's Vindication	950
Dec.	13—A Tangled Masquerade (Com.)	1000
Dec.	17—The Tenderfoot Messenger (Dr.)	997
Dec.	20—Hank and Lank	265
Dec.	20—The Greater Call	730
Dec.	21—The Bad Man's Christmas Gift	975
Dec.	27—Girls Will Be Boys (Com.)	1000
Dec.	31—A Gambler of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	3—The Redeemed Criminal	1000
Jan.	7—The Count and the Cowboys	1000

GAUMONT.
G. Kleine.

Oct.	22—The Cheat (Dr.)	958
Oct.	25—The First Gray Hair (Dr.)	654
Oct.	25—The Amazon (Com.)	348
Oct.	29—The Life of Moliere (Dr.)	965
Nov.	1—Both Were Stung (Com.)	698
Nov.	1—Picturesque Majorca (Scenic)	269
Nov.	5—The Fishing Smack (Dr.)	961
Nov.	8—Pharoah; or, Israel in Egypt (Dr.)	1050
Nov.	12—Faithful Unto Death (Dr.)	693
Nov.	12—A Trip to the Blue Grotto, Capri, Italy (Scenic)	309
Nov.	15—Both Were Stung (Com.)	696
Nov.	15—Picturesque Majorca (Scenic)	276
Nov.	19—Lisbon, Before and During the Revolution (Scenic)	727
Nov.	19—Spanish Loyalty	280
Nov.	22—Cast Into the Flames (Dr.)	381
Nov.	22—A Woman's Wit (Com.)	595
Nov.	26—Samson's Betrayal	519
Nov.	26—Calino Travels as a Prince	489
Nov.	29—The Flat Next Door	722
Nov.	29—Tarascon on the Rhone	243
Dec.	3—Lured by a Phantom	712
Dec.	3—Nancy's Wedding Trip	273
Dec.	6—A Man of Honor	834
Dec.	6—Professor's Hat	171
Dec.	10—The Revolt	942
Dec.	13—The Phantom Rider	279
Dec.	13—Closed Gate	676
Dec.	17—Herod and the New Born King (Biblical)	965
Dec.	20—The Cinderella Girl (Dr.)	769
Dec.	20—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical)	220
Dec.	24—The Old Home (Dr.)	732
Dec.	24—Cain and Abel Biblical)	279
Dec.	27—The Adventuress (Dr.)	995
Dec.	31—The Doctor's Secretary (Dr.)	981
Jan.	3—The Artist's Pay Day	969
Jan.	7—The Woman Wins	945

KALEM CO.

		Feet
Nov.	16—A Drama of the Present (Dr.)	990
Nov.	18—Jim Bridger's Indian Bride (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	23—The Lad from Old Ireland (Dr.)	1009
Nov.	25—The Roses of the Virgin (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	30—The Touch of a Child's Hand	870
Nov.	30—Up the Thames to Westminster	125
Dec.	2—Elder Alden's Indian Ward	945
Dec.	7—Rachel	1000
Dec.	9—The Rescue of Molly Finney	1007
Dec.	14—Seth's Temptation (Dr.)	955
Dec.	16—Her Indian Mother (Dr.)	995
Dec.	21—The Little Spreewald Maiden	985
Dec.	23—When Lovers Part	963
Dec.	28—The Girl Spy Before Vicksburg (War Dr.)	935
Dec.	30—The Stranger (Dr.)	1005
Jan.	4—The Bolted Door	975
Jan.	6—The Runaway Engine	955

LUBIN.

Nov.	3—Mike the Housemaid	990
Nov.	7—The Taming of Wild Bill (Dr.)	990
Nov.	10—The Mystery of the Torn Note (D.)	550
Nov.	10—The Gambler's Charm (Dr.)	450
Nov.	14—The Street Preacher (Dr.)	990
Nov.	17—Right in Front of Father (Com.)	990
Nov.	21—Caught by the Camera (Dr.)
Nov.	24—Romance of the Lazy K Ranch (D.)
Nov.	28—Shadows and Sunshine (Dr.)
Dec.	1—Spoony Sam (Com.)
Dec.	12—An Exile's Love (Dr.)	990
Dec.	15—The Musical Ranch (Dr.)
Dec.	19—The Dead Leter (Dr.)
Dec.	22—An American Count (Dr.)
Dec.	26—Making a Man of Him (Dr.)	990
Dec.	29—Blue Horse Mine (Dr.)	990
Jan.	2—Art and the Legacy	950
Jan.	5—His Last Parade	390
Jan.	5—A Mix in Masks	600
Jan.	5—The Crimson Scars	980
Jan.	5—Fire! Fire! Fire!	980

G. MELIES.

Oct.	27—Under the Stars and Bars (Dr.)	970
Nov.	3—Birthday Cigars (Com.)
Nov.	3—Generous Customers (Com.)
Nov.	10—A Mountain Wife (Dr.)	986
Nov.	17—His Sergeant's Stripes (Dr.)	950
Nov.	24—The Cowboy's and the Bachelor Girl (Dr.)
Dec.	1—Pals (Dr.)
Dec.	8—What Great Bear Learned
Dec.	15—Old Norris' Gal
Dec.	22—A Western Welcome	980
Dec.	29—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.)	980

PATHE.

Dec.	2—The Tale the Mirror Told	446
Dec.	2—What a Dinner	344
Dec.	3—The Maid of Niagara	995
Dec.	5—The Clever Domestic	485
Dec.	5—The Mexican Tumblers	476
Dec.	7—An Animated Armchair	650
Dec.	7—Cocoanut Plantation	348
Dec.	9—Saved in the Nick of Time	800
Dec.	9—Soap in His Eyes	184
Dec.	10—Her First Husband's Return	990
Dec.	12—In Her Father's Absence (Com.)	544
Dec.	12—The Julians	387
Dec.	14—Hoboes' Xmas (Com.)	550
Dec.	14—Charlie and Kitty in Brussels (Sc.)	400
Dec.	16—Little Snowdrop	1000
Dec.	17—Saved by Divine Providence (Dr.)	985
Dec.	19—Get Rich Quick	735
Dec.	19—Hunting Sea Lions in Tasmania	266
Dec.	21—The Runaway Motor Car	555
Dec.	21—Max Goes Ski-ing	430
Dec.	23—The Lucky Charm (Colored Fairy Tale)	607
Dec.	23—Betty's Fireworks	394
Dec.	24—Sunshine in Poverty Row	1000
Dec.	26—The Atonement (Da.)	656
Dec.	26—The Bowling Fiend (Com.)	344
Dec.	28—Running Away From a Fortune (American Com.)	540
Dec.	28—The American Fleet in French Waters (Topical)	125
Dec.	28—In Full Cry (Scenic)	331
Dec.	30—Catalan, the Minstrel (Dr.)	768
Dec.	30—Carnival of Japanese Firemen in Tokio (Sc.)	230
Dec.	31—The Yaqui Girl (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	2—The Misplaced Petticoat	790
Jan.	2—Dutch Kids	497
Jan.	4—The Cowboy's Innocence	994
Jan.	6—An Intrigue	997
Jan.	7—Love Under Difficulties	781
Jan.	7—The Funeral of Count Tolstoi	220

SELIG.

Nov.	14—Mr. Four Flush (Com.)	990
Nov.	17—Gratitude (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	21—No Place Like Home (Com.)
Nov.	21—The Dull Razor (Com.)
Nov.	24—The Merry Wives of Windsor (D.)	1000
Nov.	28—The Queen of Hearts	1000
Dec.	1—The Stepmother	1000
Dec.	5—The Widow of Mill Creek Flat	1000
Dec.	8—In the Wilderness	1000
Dec.	12—A Tale of the Sea	1000
Dec.	15—County Fair (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	19—John Dough and the Cherub (Mystical)	1000
Dec.	22—Overland to Fremont	1000
Dec.	26—The Rustlers (Dr.)	990
Dec.	29—Justinian and Theodora (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	2—The Argonauts	1000
Jan.	5—Ramona's Father	1000

URBAN-ECLIPSE.
G. Kleine.

Sept.	7—Military Kite-Flying	256
Sept.	28—Reedham's Orphanage Festival 1910 (Scenic)	394
Oct.	5—The Dishonest Steward (Dr.)	699
Oct.	5—City of a Hundred Mosques, Broussa, Asia Minor (Scenic)	296
Oct.	12—Foiled by a Cigarette (Dr.)	991
Oct.	19—In the Shadow of the Night (Dr.)	502
Oct.	19—Tunny Fishing Off Palermo, Italy (Ind.)	500
Oct.	26—The Signet Ring (Dr.)	868
Oct.	26—In the Spreewald (Scenic)	132
Nov.	2—Tragical Concealment (Dr.)	640
Nov.	2—Crossing the Andes (Scenic)	350
Nov.	9—Secret of the Cellar (Dr.)	788
Nov.	9—A Trip Through Scotland (Scenic)	217
Nov.	16—The Rival Barons (Dr.)	860
Nov.	16—An Alpine Retreat (Scenic)	142
Nov.	23—Behind a Mask (Dr.)	516
Nov.	23—Nantes (Scenic)	450
Nov.	30—The Return at Midnight	634
Nov.	30—Ramble Through Ceylon	319
Dec.	7—Death of Admiral Coligny	992
Dec.	5—On the Mexican Border
Dec.	8—Reggie's Engagement
Dec.	14—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.)	749
Dec.	14—Scenes in British India (Sc.)	253
Dec.	21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.)	676
Dec.	21—A Chamois Hunt	332
Dec.	28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.)	650
Dec.	28—Coaching in Devonshire, England (Travelogue)	348
Jan.	4—A Lock of Hair	978

VITAGRAPH.

Nov.	1—A Double Elopement (Dr.)	999
Nov.	4—The Children's Revolt (Dr.)	992
Nov.	5—On the Mountains of Kentucky (D.)	978
Nov.	8—A Tale of a Hat (Com.)	954
Nov.	11—The Nine of Diamonds (Dr.)	990
Nov.	12—Jean Goes Fishing (Dr.)	988
Nov.	15—Drumsticks (Dr.)	998
Nov.	18—A Modern Courtship (Com.)
Nov.	18—The Bum and the Bomb (Com.)
Nov.	19—Francesca Da Rimini (Dr.)
Nov.	22—Suspicion (Dr.)
Nov.	25—A Four-Footed Pest (Com.)
Nov.	25—The Statue Dog
Nov.	26—Love, Luck and Gasoline (Dr.)
Nov.	29—A Woman's Love (Dr.)
Dec.	2—Jack Fat and Jim Slim at Coney Island (Com.)	951
Dec.	3—The Poacher's Wife (Dr.)	1001
Dec.	6—A Tin-Type Romance (Com.)	996
Dec.	9—He Who Laughs Last (Com.)	927
Dec.	10—The Color Sergeant's Horse (Dr.)	978
Dec.	13—The Law and the Man (Dr.)	1010
Dec.	16—Playing at Divorce (Dr.)
Dec.	16—The International Motor Boat Race (Sc.)
Dec.	17—A Dixie Mother (Dr.)
Dec.	20—The Light in the Window	997
Dec.	23—Clancy	995
Dec.	24—Jean and the Waif	989
Dec.	27—In Neighboring Kingdoms (Dr.)	995
Dec.	30—Crazy Apples (Com.)	988
Dec.	31—Where the Wind Blows (Dr.)	987
Jan.	3—All Is Fair In Love and War	973
Jan.	6—The Misses Finch and Nephew Billy	979
Jan.	7—The Old Water Jar	984

INDEPENDENT FILMS

The following films have been relcased week of January 2nd by the Empire Film Co., 150 East 14th Street, New York:

Jan.	2—The Wise Druggist (Imp)	996
Jan.	2—Mrs. Gaylife's Visitors (American)	995
Jan.	2—The Medal Competition (Eclair)	479
Jan.	2—A Well-Matched Marriage (Eclair)	491
Jan.	2—Mrs. Danver's Divorce (Yankee)	1000
Jan.	3—In the Heart of the Sierras (Bison)	971
Jan.	3—The Pinkerton Man (Powers)	603
Jan.	3—Beaux Not Wanted (Powers)	396
Jan.	3—The Pasha's Daughter (Than)	985
Jan.	4—Wall Partition (Ambrosio)	588
Jan.	4—Tweedledum as a Policeman (Amb)	364
Jan.	4—A Straw Ride (Atlas)	912
Jan.	4—Days of the Early West (Champion)	875
Jan.	4—At Cedar Ridge (Nestor)	985
Jan.	5—Antonio Toscarino (Itala)	990
Jan.	5—Reunited (Imp)	1000
Jan.	5—The Tenderfoot Roundup (Amer)	1000
Jan.	6—A Savage Girl's Devotion (Bison)	995
Jan.	6—Baseball and Bloomers (Than)	1000
Jan.	6—How They Tricked Father (Lux)	500
Jan.	6—The Rival Engine Drivers (Lux)	500
Jan.	6—The Royal Wishbone (Yankee)	1000
Jan.	6—The Night Cap (Solax)	500
Jan.	6—Salmon Fishing in Canada (Solax)	500
Jan.	7—Foolshead Inspector of Hygiene (Itala)	985
Jan.	7—The Red Light (Great Northern)	1000
Jan.	7—The Hour of Fate (Reliance)	1000
Jan.	7—A Woman Without a Heart (Pow)	1000

HALLBERG

THE "ECONOMIZER MAN"

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

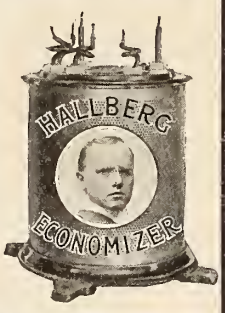
I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. N 1



J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.

SCENARIOS
FOR MANUFACTURERS

The Moving Picture News has a good original writer who will be pleased to write on any subject submitted. Address S. Greene, care of M. P. News, 30 West 13th Street, New York.

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We taech you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars. ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS, 908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., Chicago.

Machines Overhauled. Improved Stars, Cams, Etc.

E. W. LEVEZZI
3042 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Announcement, Advertising, Travelogue, Recitation
and slides for every purpose made to order

GEO. J. GOLDTHORPE & CO.
244 West 14th Street New York

WANTED

Situation by cameraman having enviable record for quality and certainty of results.

Several first class references upon request.

Apply "Camera,"
c/o M. P. News.

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES
Powers Cameragraph $75, Edison Kinetoscope $45, Cineograph $45, Optigraph No. 4 for $45, Optigraph $35, Mechanism $25, Electric Lamps, Rheostats, Calcium Jets, Low $215, Motiograph $165, Standard, Edison Model B, etc. Many Others. Machines Wanted. Send for Supplement 33 of Bargains.
HARBACH & CO.,
809 Filbert Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Rex

LEARN TO SAY IT—

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone: 3790 Oxford

The Big Song Hit

"Don't wake me up, I am dreaming"

by Herbert Ingraham

Opening order from Shapiro, the publisher, 100 sets.

Illustrated by

The LEVI CO., Inc.

24 Union Square :: :: New York, N. Y.

MANHATTAN SLIDE CO.

124 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

OUR PRICES ON ANNOUNCEMENT AND SPECIAL ADVERTISING SLIDES WILL OPEN YOUR EYES.

STOCK SLIDES, 25c EACH; $15.00 A HUNDRED. SPECIAL SLIDES, MADE FROM YOUR OWN DESIGN, 50c TO $1.00.

CATALOGUES FOR MOVING PICTURE MANUFACTURERS

Unique Printers - Charles Francis Press

30 West 13th Street. Printers of the M. P. News

FLIMCO'S DROLL TRICK

Old General Flimco, the village skeezix, just pulled one of his drollest tricks. He fined "his" Memphis office $500 for releasing a film before release date, the money being paid in spot cash by the manager of that office, so I am told. This wouldn't be so funny except for the fact that when Old Gen. Flimco "bought" his adopted offices, he didn't pay all in cash but mostly in paper and promises. Wouldn't it be a delicious trick if he would pay for all of his adopted offices in fines!!! I'd feel sorry for Flimco's poor victims if it badn't been for the fact that I gave them public warning long before they consented to become victims. To exhibitors I say this:—Avoiding trickery is not the only reason why you ought to become independent, by a long shot. The best reason for asserting your independence is that by doing so you'll get a blamed sight better program of films than you ever got in all your born days. But you won't get it unless you patronize an independent exchange which is buying all the good independent stuff and not "junking." To be dead certain you are in the right pew, hook up with me. Buy your Powers, Edison and Motiograph machines of me. Buy all your accessories of me. Get your films from me. In other words—PLAY SAFE!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

HEADQUARTERS : 196-198 Lake Street, CHICAGO

MINNEAPOLIS OMAHA

"The biggest and best film renter in the world"

ATTENTION!

Discredit any rumor regarding my inability to protect your service. Have made arrangements with the SWAAB FILM SERVICE CO. to assume my obligations to you, and shall see that you have your full quotient of film, although not of the Motion Picture Patents Co. manufacture. Can we serve you with GOOD Independent Film? Write to us.

LEWIS M. SWAAB,

338 Spruce Street,

Philadelphia.

YANKEE FILMS 344 East 32nd Street, New York

ISSUED MONDAY, JAN. 16

THE FOLKS BACK HOME

FRIDAY, JAN. 20

RETURNED TO THE FOLD

Coming, Wed. Jan. 18

Big Story of the Adirondacks

A CITY WOLF

ELEGANT POSTERS. BULLETINS MAILED.

ATLAS FILM CO.

10 East 15th Street

New York

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE INDEPENDENT MANUFACTURERS AND THE N. I. M. P. A.

Circulates over the Motion Picture World with a guaranteed larger circulation than any other trade paper.

Correspondents wanted in all large centers

Accepted Articles paid for monthly—(No waiting for cash.)

Contributed Articles and correspondence of general interest invited.

Advertisers may use a number, replies to which will be sent to them, unopened.

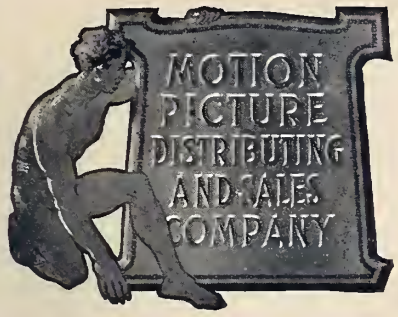
Agents and Solicitors wanted. Write for special commission terms.

Week of May 21st, 1910, News circulation reached 10,120 copies.

News Agents supplied through the American News Agency.

CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY

30 WEST THIRTEENTH STREET : : : : NEW YORK



RESOLVED AND RESOLUTE

That resolution you made to start the New Year with Independent Service was a good one, and that it was carried out by hundreds of Exhibitors is proven by the fact that our increase in orders for next week's deliveries is the largest weekly increase in the history of our Company. That every week, excepting two, since June 16th, 1910, has shown a weekly increase, proves conclusively that the public emphatically and resolutely demands our goods. We have doubled our total sales twice since last June.

If you haven't joined this happy prosperous throng, resolve to do it today—write us what class of Service you need and we shall connect you with an Exchange that can give you

OUR PROGRAM

MONDAY	American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co. Eclair—Eclair Film Co. Imp—Independent M. P. Co. Yankee—Yankee Film Co.
TUESDAY	Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co. Powers—The Powers Co. Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.
WEDNESDAY	Ambrosio—N. Y. Motion Picture Co. Atlas—Atlas Film Co. Champion—The Champion Film Co. Nestor—David Horsley Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories
THURSDAY	American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co. Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co. Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
FRIDAY	Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co. Lux—R. Prieur Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co. Solax—Solax Company Yankee—Yankee Film Co.
SATURDAY	Capital—Capital Film Co. Gt. Northern—Gt. Northern Film Co. Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co. Powers—The Powers Co. Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

List of BUYING EXCHANGES, Jan. 10th, 1911

All others offering these brands for rent can supply only dupes or worn-out subjects.

ALABAMA

Dixie Film Co..... 503 Chamber of Com. Bldg..Birm'ham

CANADA

Applegath, L. J., & Sons..... 145 Yonge St.....Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange..... Calgary .....Alberta
Gaumont Co..... 154 St. Catherine St..Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co..... Winnipeg .....Man.

CALIFORNIA

California Film Exchange...1065 Mission St...San Francisco, Cal.
Miles Bros..... 790 Turk St.....San Francisco, Cal.
Western Film Co..... 514 S. Los Angeles St....Los Angeles

COLORADO

Co-operative Film Exchange.. Barclay Block.....Denver
W. H. Swanson Film Exch... 301 Railroad Bldg.....Denver, Colo.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

B. & W. Film Exchange..... 426 Ninth St., N. W.....Washington
Paramount Film Exchange.... 428 9th St., N. W.....Washington

GEORGIA

Consolidated Film Exchange.. Rhodes Bldg.....Atlanta, Ga.

ILLINOIS

Anti Trust Film Co..... 79 So. Clark St.....Chicago, Ill.
Eugene Cline ..... 59 Dearborn St.....Chicago, Ill.
Globe Film Service..... 107 E. Madison St.....Chicago.
H. & H. Film Service Co.... 98 Jackson Blvd.....Chicago, Ill.
Laemmle Film Service..... 196 Lake St.....Chicago, Ill.
Standard Film Exchange..... 155 E. Washington St...Chicago, Ill.

INDIANA

Central Film Service Co..... 119 N. Illinois St.....Indianapolis

KANSAS

Wichita Film & Supply Co.... 122 N. Market St.....Wichita, Kan.

LOUISIANA

Dixie Film Company..... 720 Maison Blanche Bldg.New Orleans

MASSACHUSETTS

Boston Film Rental Co..... 665 Washington St.....Boston, Mass.
W. E. Green Film Exchange.. 228 Tremont St. .....Boston, Mass.

MARYLAND

B. & W. Film Exchange..... 412 East Baltimore St.Baltimore, Md.
Consolidated Amusement Co.. 28 W. Lexington St..Baltimore, Md.

MINNESOTA

Laemmle Film Service..... 400 Sykes Block...Minneapolis, Minn.

MICHIGAN

Michigan Film & Supply Co..1106 Union Trust Bldg..Detroit, Mich.

MISSOURI

Bijou Film & Amusement Co.1222 Grand Ave.....Kansas City, Mo.
J. W. Morgan.....1310 Walnut St.....Kansas City, Mo.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co... Century Bldg.....St. Louis, Mo.

NEBRASKA

Laemmle Film Service.....1517 Farnam St.....Omaha, Neb.

NEW YORK STATE

Albany Film Exchange..... 418 Broadway.....Albany, N. Y.
United Film Co..... 1 First St.....Troy
Victor Film Service..... 39 Church St.....Buffalo, N. Y.

NEW YORK CITY

Empire Film Exchange..... 150 East 14th St.....New York City
Great Eastern Film Exchange. 21 East 14th St.....New York City
Hudson Film Company..... 138 East 14th St.....New York City
Peerless Film Exchange..... 94 Fifth Ave.....New York City
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange.. 110 Fourth Ave.....New York City

OHIO

Capitol Film Service Co..... 422 No. High St.....Columbus
Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co.. 309 Arcade Bldg.....Dayton, Ohio
Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co.. 315 West 4th St.....Cincinnati, O.
Toledo Film Service..... 319 Superior St.....Toledo.
Victor Film Service..... Prospect & Huron Sts..Cleveland

OREGON

Independent West. F. Ex.... Swetland Bldg.....Portland, Ore.

OKLAHOMA

United Motion Picture Co... 112 Main St....Oklahoma City, Okla.

PENNSYLVANIA

Eagle Film Exchange..... 143 N. 9th St.....Philadelphia
Independent Film Exchange.. 415 Ferry St.....Pittsburg, Pa.
Philadelphia Film & Pro. Co.. 44 North 9th St....Philadelphia, Pa.
Philadelphia Film Exchange.. 934 Arch St.....Philadelphia, Pa.
Pittsburg Photo Play Co..... 332 Third Ave.....Pittsburg

TEXAS

Texas Film Exchange..... 311 Elm St.....Dallas, Tex.

UTAH

Co-operative Film Exchange.. 320 Atlas Block.....Salt Lake City

WASHINGTON

Pacific Film Exchange..... Globe Bldg.....Seattle, Wash.

WISCONSIN

Western Film Exchange..... 307 Enterprise Bldg.....Milwaukee

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

111 East 14th Street NEW YORK CITY

"The Vote That Counted," 1911's Best Reel, Out Friday, the 13th!

2-4-U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!

The Thanhouser 2-a-Week

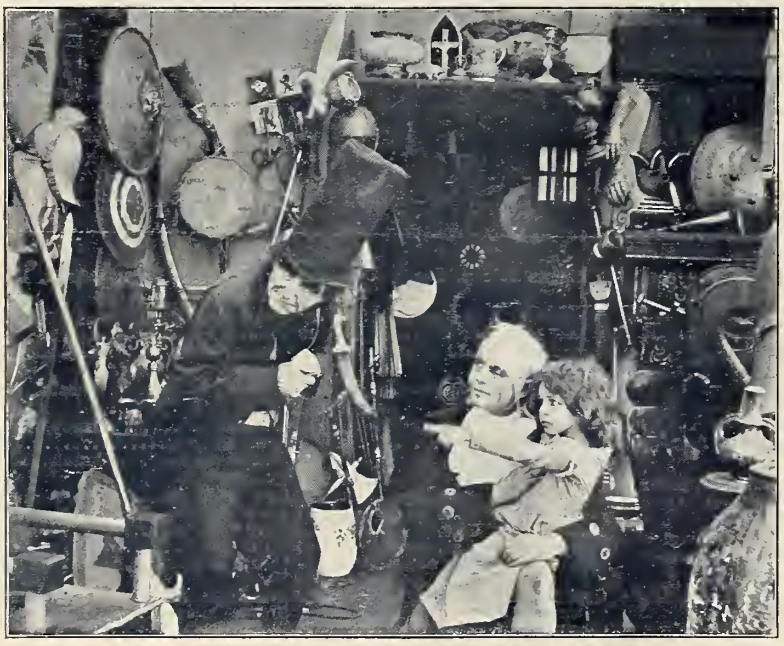
RELEASE OF TUESDAY, JAN. 17.

The Doings of a Deluded Dude!

Bertie's Brainstorm

was funny to see and you'll roar when it reaches your screen. Bertie was a foolish young fop (but then all fops are fools!) and the things he did to prove himself a wise man are just too ludicrous for anything! It all began in a surreptitious peep at a note addressed to his lady love—a note which contains some slighting remarks about Bertie's rival—but which Bertie thinks are intended for himself. For Bertie was not only a fool, but a meddling one. He deserved his brainstorm! Why, the picture shows, along with the magnificent mess into which it got him. No. 177. Code word, Sto m.

SCENE FROM "BERTIE'S BRAINSTORM"



SCENE FROM "THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP"

RELEASE OF FRIDAY, JAN. 20

Thanhouser HAD to "Classic" It!

The Old Curiosity Shop

By CHARLES DICKENS

The announcing of this for release will come as good news to every exhibitor who correctly estimates the popularity of Dickens' works. The Thanhouser producers have long had designs on the tale and just the other day, when conditions were best, they made it into a splendid moving picture. They waited until the best players in both Thanhouser acting campanies were available, together with the best costumes and the best sittings—in short they utilized the best of everything at the best time. The result will be appreciated by every lover of Dickens, every true admirer who wants the true Dickens Spirit in play and picture as well as story.. No. 178. Code Word, Shop.

Is your exchange giving you "variety," or "The Old Curiosity Shop," "The Vote That Counted," and THE OTHER GREAT FRIDAY THANHOUSER RELEASES?

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock" framed in solid oak, mission finished, 33 inches in width and 43 in depth, complete with glass and easel (6 feet high), GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN. For system's sake address: PHOTOFRAME DEPT.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

2-4-U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!

"The Vote That Counted." Sensation of Season, Out Friday, the 13th!

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 2

January 14
1911

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

SCENE FROM
"LIFE OF A MUSCHIK"
Great Northern, Release January 28

GREAT NORTHERN

A HOMELESS BOY

(Release for Saturday, January 14th)
A well acted dramatic production.

THE TRUNK MYSTERY

(Release for Saturday, January 21st)

A sensational and intensely interesting story of impersonation to secure an inheritance. The fraud is brought to light by a clever detective who will win the admiration of every spectator. Get busy at once in getting a booking of this big feature.

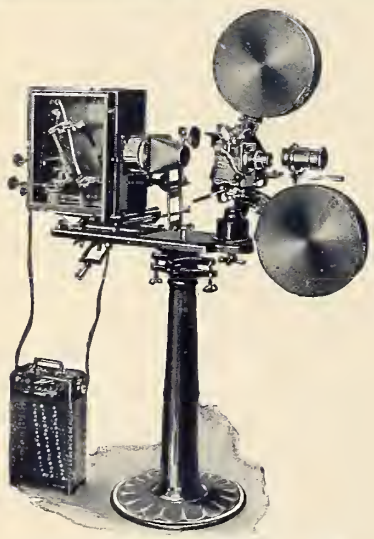
"Exhibitors make no mistake in demanding Great Northern films, as they can always be depended upon to lend tone to the program."—Moving Picture World.

ALL FIRST CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCTS

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY.



THE "1A MOTIOGRAPH" 1000A

Manufactured by The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., Chicago
Sales Offices in New York, London, San Francisco

NEW YEAR'S ANNOUNCEMENT
ONE HUNDRED MOTIOGRAPHS

AND MORE IF NEEDED FOR NEW ENGLAND TRADE

THE MACHINE WITH A RECORD.
THE MACHINE THAT HAS MADE GOOD IN EVERY REGARD.

THE MOTIOGRAPH—THE BEST

DID WE HESITATE? NO. WE HAVE WATCHED AND—WE HAVE LEARNED.

WE HAVE LEARNED THAT THERE IS ONLY ONE BEST—THE MOTIOGRAPH M. P. MACHINE.

NOW LISTEN TO OUR PROPOSITION—

THROUGH A SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE MANUFACTURERS THEY HAVE PLACED AT OUR DISPOSAL FOR THIRTY DAYS THE TWO MOST EFFICIENT DEMONSTRATORS IN THEIR EMPLOY—MR. SWETT and MR. CLARK.

WE ARE PREPARED TO DEMONSTRATE TO THE EXHIBITORS IN THE NEW ENGLAND STATES THAT THE MOTIOGRAPH IS NOT ONLY THE BEST MOTION PICTURE MACHINE—BUT—THE MACHINE OF THE FUTURE.

25% MORE ILLUMINATION, meaning BETTER and BRIGHTER PICTURES, EASE OF OPERATION, ACCESSIBILITY OF EVERY GEAR AND SCREW BUILT FOR THE HARD, HEAVY GRIND IN SUCCESSFUL THEATRES—STEADY, FLICKERLESS, MONEY-DRAWING PICTURES.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT—SOMETHING BETTER—SOMETHING PERMANENT—SOMETHING TO BE PROUD OF You Won't Need Vaudeville to Hide the Defects in Your Show
REMEMBER—WE HAVE THESE TWO DEMONSTRATORS FOR ONLY THIRTY DAYS. COME IN TO-DAY. DROP US A LINE. TELEPHONE ANY OF OUR OFFICES.
Don't wait until they have gone elsewhere. DO IT NOW.

BOSTON FILM RENTAL COMPANY

665 WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., 389 Main St.
PROVIDENCE R. I., Case Meade Bldg.
PORTLAND, ME. 547A Congress St.

Mr. Exhibitor:

Let us tell you why YOU should purchase

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH NO. 6

You want—

DURABILITY, so that you will get long service and have no expense for repairs.

"Power's No. 6" is absolutely guaranteed for one year.

RELIABILITY, so you won't have to stop your show to tinker with your machine.

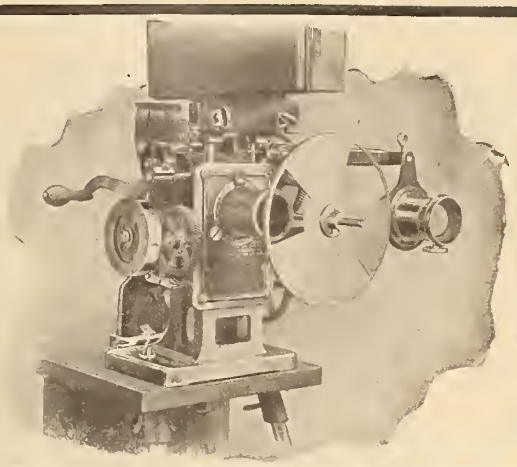
"Power's No. 6" has fewer things to adjust and is more massive in construction than any other machine in America.

PERFECT PICTURES to please your patrons.

"Power's No. 6" has received the enthusiastic endorsement of over a thousand purchasers in the past year for its splendid pictures.

Bear all these facts in mind when you buy and insist on having "Power's No. 6."

Catalogue D tells all about it.



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115 Nassau St., New York

For thirteen years the leading manufacturers of Motion Picture Machines.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone: 3790 Oxford

AMERICAN STANDARD DOUBLE DISSOLVING MOVING PICTURE MACHINE. ALL COMPLETE, $200.00

A POWERS No. 5, SLIGHTLY USED,

$100.00

MANHATTAN SLIDE CO.

124 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

CONSPIRACY

IS THE KEYNOTE OF TRUST EXISTENCE.
SLANDER AND ABUSE THROUGH UNDERSTRAPPERS, STOCK IN TRADE.
TREACHERY IS REWARDED WHILE HONESTY OF PURPOSE IS CONDEMNED.
THE UNLAWFUL COMBINATIONS WILL COME INTO THEIR OWN IF YOU WILL

BE INDEPENDENT

TRY THE

SWAAB FILM SERVICE COMPANY

338 Spruce Street Philadelphia, Pa.

PROOF, NOT GUESS WORK, COUNTS

During its three years of life the

MOTIOGRAPH

Has proven constantly that it has no equal

WHY DELAY

when it is well known that the Motiograph is essential to the best projection work—get one, be convinced, and rejoice in your increased patronage, for remember the Motiograph Pulls.

(Send for catalog of reasons.)

Manufactured and Jobbed by ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO. 564 West Randolph St. Chicago, Ill.

J. H. Hallberg, Agt. 36 E. 23rd Street, New York City

Edw. H. Kemp, 833 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

J. F. Brockliss, Agt. London, Paris and Berlin.

BISON FILMS

FIVE REELS A WEEK

TUESDAY---BISON. WEDNESDAY---AMBROSIO. THURSDAY---ITALA. FRIDAY---BISON. SATURDAY---ITALA

"TEXAS TED'S DEFENSE"

Released Tuesday, January 17

ITALA RELEASES
"A SAD FASCINATION"
Thursday, January 19
"A NEW KIND OF AN ARM CHAIR"
"THE VISIT OF A FRIEND"
Saturday, January 21

2 WESTERN REELS

"THE REDSKIN'S SECRET"

Released Friday, January 20

AMBROSIO RELEASE
Wednesday, January 18
"THE BLUE DOMINO DISGUISE"
"A TAILOR'S QUEER ADVERTISEMENT"
Two subjects on one reel

Sold Exclusively Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO., 1 Union Square, New York City

RELIANCE PICTORIAL PLAYS

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

ACTED BY AN ALL-STAR STOCK COMPANY

"The Vows"

Released Saturday, January 21

A story of the Church. Intensely dramatic. Magnificent settings.

"For Remembrance"

Released Wednesday, January 25

The story of a sweet girl whose adversity became the stepping stone to happiness.

Coming: "The Command From Galilee"

The Most Magnificent Film Ever Produced!

SPECTACULAR FIRE SCENES :: :: 100 PEOPLE IN THE CAST! :: :: WATCH FOR RELEASE DATE

TWO REELS PER WEEK—WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY

Place your order with your Exchange

CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES, 1 Union Square, New York City

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

European Agents: INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., Breams Building, Chancery Lane, London, E. C.

Chicago Representative: J. J. Sullivan. 866 Graceland Ave. 'Phone Graceland 5053

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV | January 14, 1911 | Number 2

Notes of the Week

OUR FRONT COVER ILLUSTRATION.

The picture this week illustrates a scene from "The Life of a Muschik." Great Northern Co. need no further comments from us. They, "like old wine, need no bush," and the picture will speak for itself.

PATENT LITIGATION.

On other pages will be found abridged reports of the court proceedings brought by the Patents Company against the Independents, and taking the first one of the Patents Company vs. Yankee Film, William Steiner, and others, and taking the second clause in that motion for preliminary injunction which reads, "The defense of prior invention of Friese-Greene, now presented for the first time after the patent has been for several years in litigation and long since sustained by the circuit court of appeals, is one to be passed upon at final hearing." This clause opens to our mind the commencement of the litigation in its final stages between Edison and Biograph, and while this defense has only just been brought before the courts, we want to say most emphatically that this evidence was available as much in those years as it is now; in fact, when the first meeting was convened at Buffalo we distinctly stated to manufacturers before they were tied up as Edison licensees, that Friese-Greene was willing to come over here and testify in their behalf if they desired it. We also informed Biograph Company, through Mr. Van Guysling, the then manager, of all the particulars and data that have just been published, and told him that they were at his service if he desired. His answer was very, very characteristic, but we must refrain from quoting his exact words; however, we want to go on record as saying that while it is new evidence it is old and should not be new to the courts of New York if justice had been done to the right parties at the time we referred to.

THE YANKEE-ATLAS-WAGNER CAMERA.

Referring to the decision of Judge Lacombe in the last paragraph of "What They Got,"," our readers will see that these companies have in their possession the only adjudicated non-infringing camera which puts them in a very unique position of being exempt from all further litigation from the Patents Company. We congratulate the Yankee-Atlas on their victory.

THE VICE OF INGRATITUDE.

We have done so much for some people, going out of our way to get them situations or money to boost their schemes and now!— Well, we will let the Cincinnati Enquirer say what it thinks of such:

The Enquirer says:

"Our people despise a man who betrays his friends to forward his interest with enemies, and there exists in every human breast the assurance that such a man is unworthy of either personal or public confidence. However profuse his professions, however attractive his suggestions or sound and forceful his promises, the knowledge that a man has abandoned or betrayed those who assisted and aided him in his career stamps him as unworthy of them and repels for all the approval of the populace.

"Never yet lived the man who abandoned friends for enemies but found his hopes were but illusions and his ambitions were as naught. Ingratitude in any form by every human being is regarded as an index to a despicable character, and when exhibited by the mendicant who has been given a crust or by one who has been raised to official position through the efforts of sincere friends, it is equally dishonorable, detestable and odious to all fair thinking persons."

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH MOVING PICTURES? WHY, THEY'RE ALL RIGHT, BUT—

By a Brooklyn Mother.

Why cannot I send my kids when I'm busy without I go myself to take 'em? How is it, moving pictures are good for kids with their mother and father and not good for them alone. It's very hard for a woman who wants to be a good wife, to have to leave a fry or a frizzle for the gude man to get for himself, and so put on her best bonnet and take the bairns for their bit of fun. Moving pictures are all right, but— why cannot we have a children's hour when any and all little folks can go in and enjoy and be better for what they see? Why cannot the pictures be always bright and beautiful that all bairns can feel better for seeing them as well as amused? Why cannot it be instilled by all fathers and mothers into their children that good behavior gives them the privilege of entrance "alone" to the ennobling moving picture show?

My little granddaughter, three years old, says, "Me must be dood and me can see the moving picture show when my mammy takes me."

The whole pith of the matter is in that little one's sentence, "Me must be dood." I often think the small boys are never allowed a show. I have two young boys who, when they meet their mother in the street, have to raise their hats and say good morning Mrs. ———. Boys in this city are voted a nuisance, and yet there is an immense amount of good in them, and it is this we mothers want help to bring out, and we appeal to the moving picture movement to do this. If children are educated by school and home that upon their good behavior depends one of the most enjoyable hours of the day or week, they will soon cotton to the situation and appreciate their privileges. Moving pictures are all right, but——

The manufacturers must take care that their films are such as will be educating and elevating to the young ideas, and such as will make our future citizens try to emulate the good, eschew the bad, avoid evil companions, and respect and love their parents, and thus the moving picture show will become a blessing not only to the kids, but to the hard worked mothers and tired fathers.

MONTE CRISTO.

The other evening it was our privilege to see the above picture of the Power Company, and it is with great pleasure that we mete out to them the praise that is due for staging such a magnificent piece of work. It is extremely difficult for any one manufacturer to thoroughly grasp the life of the Count of Monte Cristo, and still more difficult to fit scenes round the story. The Powers Company have done this to perfection. The photography is magnificent, and we feel sure that this will not be a cold copy film but one that can be utilized again and again, as in the form of a repeater, it may still be fresh to the patrons of the theater.

THE VOTE THAT COUNTED.

This was another picture we saw at the same time, and when we saw it through we turned to Mr. Thanhouser and asked how it was that Thanhouser Company could obtain the whole of the railroad service to be placed at their disposal to photograph such a film. The plot is unique and extraordinary ,and is a picture that changed the attention of the audience from its start to the finish.

THE "IMPS" LATEST EXPLOITS.

Inspired by the spirit of interprise, which has always actuated this progressive concern, the "IMP" company has sent its entire large stock company of players, directors and camera men to the island of Cuba, where a studio in every way suitable to its needs has been erected.

The irrepressible Carl Laemmle, realizing some time ago the embarrassing atmospheric conditions under which moving picture concerns labor in this latitude at this season of the year, especially in the matter of exterior scenes, decided, regardless of the tremendous expense involved, that he would have to beat the laws of Nature some day, and after mature deliberation concluded it could not be better done than by annexing the tropics to his domain.

As the result of this move, he promises us pictures of a quality never surpassed, even by his own former products, the opportunities for novel and startling effects and situations being unlimited, while the splendid tropical light guarantees the clearest of negatives.

The company consists of about thirty people, including Miss Mary Pickford, Mr. King Baggot, Mr. Owen Moore, and the balance of the well-known members of the organization.

INNOVATIONS IN THE USE OF THE MOVING PICTURE: EDUCATIONAL AND CURATIVE.

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

Edward Bellamy, in his book "Looking Backward," written several years ago, anticipated many wonderful and seemingly impossible things. In the progress of invention, ingenuity, and economics, his mind conceived the most extraordinary possibilities. He solved the social and financial problems in the simplest and most lucid way. Could this voluminous mass of mind and matter, so diverse in its various constitutions and organisms, mental and physical, its joys and sorrows, its hopes and fears, and in consequence its opinions, be made pliable to the master hands of the master minds of the creation, and could the master minds themselves agree on all points in question, all the conceptions of Bellamy, and more, might be made realities, and the abolishment of the financial stigma result in a millennium of such sudden and awesome a character as to completely paralyze the workings of this parti-colored conglomeration of brain action surging tumultuously over the face of the globe.

In the pressure of buttons and the emission of sweet sounds—in all the devices for adding to the pleasure and convenience of the human race, he forgot one thing: his prophetic mind slipped a cog at the arrival on the scene of progress of the moving picture film, for, if my memory serves me aright, there is no mention of this mode of advancement in the prophecies of Bellamy; yet, here we are, not twenty years after the projection of his theories, plunged into an age not only of electric buttons, and phonographs, but of moving pictures of various kinds put to as varied a number of uses, serving "God and Mammon" in spite of the teachings of the old adage, "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."

What could be more unique than the recent plan of the Pennsylvania railroad to entertain and make less tedious the hours of waiting at the depot by giving free divertisement of moving pictures. The news came as a beam of sunshine to commuters and the traveling public in general; the wait at the depot can now be something else than the distracting pacing up and down, like fretted animals, or sitting staring at blank walls, brooding over business cares or other distractions of the human race.

Here is an excellent example of the combination of finance, convenience and pleasure. The Pennsylvania railroad, no doubt, had an eye to the welfare of the exchequer in attempting such a remarkable innovation, for, while the weary traveler is soothed into restfulness, forgetful of the lapse of time, suddenly before his surprised vision is flashed the announcement of the departure of his train some five minutes before it is due to leave, sending him bustling off, post haste, to secure a seat—the company is a few dollars richer by being able to dispense with the service of an announcement officer.

Here again does the moving picture prove a vehicle of education, providing the supervision of the choice of the films is properly attended to by a competent person. It has been promised that films depicting train robberies shall be barred. Train robberies, let me say, are not the only pictures which should be barred. In fact too much care could not be given to the choice of the pictures which are to be used as a matter of diversion for passengers at railroad stations. Here congregate alike the rich and poor, the old and young, the intellectual and the non-intellectual, the righteous and the vicious, and should such a mode of passenger diversion and train announcement become general, it will be found by thoughtful supervisors to be a method par excellence of dealing out sugar-coated pills of useful information, for what the eye sees the mind will remember: the reflex made on the cells of memory, supplying food for thought and reason, be it of such shape and color as to nourish the mental forces, may be of invaluable assistance in the advancement of the race. On the other hand, its influence may be as damning as it may be good, should pictures of inferior subject matter be allowed to be shown. Through misuse the moving picture film could, in this instance, be quite as substantial a vehicle of vice as it otherwise may be of advancement and education.

Probably the most peculiar use to which the moving picture can be put is that of a healer. Not long ago a suggestion was made by one of the officials of a Chicago asylum for the insane to inculcate in the everyday routine of the life of the afflicted ones an entertainment of moving pictures as a curative means. Ridiculous as may seem the theory at first sight, still there may be more than a grain of common sense in it after all, especially in connection with some forms of insanity. The method seems to me a very commendable one, inasmuch as that certain forms of insanity are contracted by allowing the mind to dwell inadvertently on one subject so as to absorb almost entirely all the attention of the individual. In such cases there can be no doubt but that a daily contemplation of the motion pictures with their varied scenes, and as varied sentiments, touching now and then a lost chord, or a sympathetic nerve, may tend to dispose of the suspension of reason. True, different scenes would in all probability require to be used for different patients, for what would affect one might not in the least affect another. Apart from the curative side of the question, what a source of comfort it must necessarily prove to the prove, wandering faculties.

In the advancement of the human race the motion picture shall surely have a high and honored place. As a means of conveying knowledge to the masses; what simpler, more pleasant method could be used? Gradually the securing of education is being made an easier and more palatable thing, and the day is rapidly approaching when moving pictures will be used in instances we never dreamed of: in colleges, asylums, hospitals, and in various other unthought-of uses for the advancement of humanity.

WATCHING THE PICTURES.

By H. Jeanval.

Moving picture films imported into the United States during the period from Aug. 6, 1909, to June 30, 1910, inclusive:

	Linear Ft.	Value
France	9,051,112	$555,603
England	1,254,813	74,001
Italy	1,174,738	65,806
Denmark	1,084,519	65,543
Germany	100,416	4,257
Canada	87,101	2,983
All Others	77,216	2,832
Totals	12,829,915	$771,025

It is only since Aug. 6, 1909, that moving picture films have been separately enumerated in the imports of the United States; so we are but beginning to be able to use the material in that most important branch of all business—comparative statistics. Nothing is more fascinating than statistical studies, nothing is more important to all connected with the branch of business dealt with, although we must bear in mind that the biggest liars on earth are statistics when founded on false figures. We don't need to go far these days to prove this; vide some bank statistics before and after the smash. The Moving Picture News has the privilege of having the most reliable of all guides. For many years my ever-faithful, ever-courteous and ever-exact friend, in many branches of the work, has been the Hon. O. P. Austin, Chief of the Bureau, in Washington. To his kindness, care and trouble these figures are due. We can be sure of one thing—they are correct. Further articles will use figures obtained from the best authorities, here and abroad.

I think the picture table at the head will be of interest as a start—I hope so. The enormous lead of the French importations for the ten months prior to June 10 is noteworthy. In the next trio, England, Italy and Denmark, I confess to some surprise as to the position of one nation and disappointment as to the place of another—I speak as a theater-goer. However, lines are out in many directions, and I hope to write more definitely ere long. Meanwhile if any manufacturers' agents will give me a helping hand to make the figures useful, I will be grateful.

For the five months ending November 30, 1910, the imports were 5,018,416 linear feet, valued at $289,240. These figures show—proportionately—a slight falling off both in quantity and value. However, one cannot judge five months against ten in different times of the year.

Itala's Toscarini film certainly is a beauty. I would like to make a suggestion; while the title and subtitles are all right for those who know the history of Venice, it would be well—in the export films—to make these more suggestive. The ambassadorial incident required more elucidation. The vividness of the portrayal in this reel carried the audience on, but more explicitness in title and sub-titles would have been a great help.

Who writes the synopses for the Imp releases? Whoever does had better compare that for "Reunited" with the film. Care will show the two do not agree in more than one place.

I must protest against the music used at the Bijou-Dream whilst Pathe's "An Intrigue" was running. To have a woman in mental agony on the screen, while the piano thundered martial chords—fortissimo—with drum, etc., banging and clanging, is beyond a joke. The Bijou-Dream has such a well-established character for doing the right thing rightly—that those who admire that bright, well-run house do not wish to see it, in any way, besmirched. This blunder was commented upon freely by my neighbors, although someone at the back applauded.

It's about time somebody looked after the alignment of the sub-title; more than 25% of those seen last week are as crooked as a dog's hind leg.

That shipwreck scene in Vitagraph's "Where the Winds Blow" is altogether too artificial. Any "old salt," or, indeed, anyone who has been "on the great waters," could say much as to detail.

Say, Mr. Sypnopsis Man of the Thanhouser Company, what do you mean by talking about Harvard when the film says Cornell? Please have mercy on our limited gray matter!

Also, Messrs. American Film Company, how did it happen last week that when I went to see one of your releases, I saw "cold copy" because the reel hadn't come? Wake up, this will never do!

Moreover, last week I saw—a big, real Indian, with a gray moustache!

Likewise, two firms must look after their perforations. One does not wish to have to shut one's eyes—in self defense—when the markers' names appear. Verbum sap.

Brother Selig, how do you spell daguerreotype out your way? See "Shadows of the Past."

I am glad to notice considerable improvement in the English of our foreign friends. Evidently more care has been given to translations, and there have been fewer of those hideous and inexcusable "typographicals" which disgrace so many—even on this side.

American Institute Science Lecture

On Tuesday evening, January 10th, Mr. William Friese-Greene lectured before a full audience on the early stages and the latest results of animated pictures in colors. He had on exhibit the first cinematograph camera made and the perforated film taken therein, and among other things he said:

Every invention has its romance and life in shadow Cinematography, or, as we call it to-day moving pictures perhaps, has more curious incidents and coincidents than any other invention, because we see ourselves as others see us, and we can bring the beautiful places and movement that is going on around our globe before the children's eyes to widen their imagination which was not permitted to us twenty years ago. It would take years to go and see what can be brought before us in a few hours, with every minute detail which would take a lifetime to paint. Where would be our knowledge to-day without photography? There are one or two incidents connected with the early experiments of animated pictures which I can well remember. I said to my assistant, let me take a picture of you taking off your hat as if you were going to acknowledge a lady. Well, you know, that hat would not appear in the picture as if the movement was graceful, but merely as jerks and jumps. I tried taking the picture over and over again. It was a very hot day and my poor assistant fainted over the constant trial, and I did not succeed at that time in photographing the natural movement of the hat. Street scenes photographed at that time, when we ran them through the machine, we did not know which was the right way up, and many times we took a picture of a person dancing, which, when exhibited on the screen, we could only see the feet and part of the legs kicking about, and by adjusting the machine which we were experimenting with at that time we could only get the face and a bit of the body, never the whole picture at the same time.

MR. WILLIAM FRIESE-GREENE

Of course, at that time our struggles and trials were the registration, the shrinking of the film, the perforations and the machines were not made so accurately as they are now, and finding out which was the right speed for the average eye, leave alone the film sensitizing, developing and drying, we had to invent everything as we went along. There were no books to consult at that time, theory, no doubt, was a great help, but actual practice a thousand times better. I remember well trying the phonograph with the pictures. I took one of my boys saying, Little Jack Horner, Sat in a corner, Eating an Xmas pie. When I would try to adjust the phonograph to the picture his mouth would open when it ought to shut, and shut when it ought to be open, so one can imagine the troubles and trials at the early stages of black and white and what puzzles me mostly is, it seems so simple, but the technique has been so difficult and failure so constant that if an ox goes mad over a red color one might sympathize with a human being getting heartsick over trying to produce all the colors naturally in nature, and you may know we had books written about color and the splendid results of one of your countrymen, who I might say here is one of the fathers of color photography and whose work is not only appreciated here, but all over the world. I refer to Mr. F. E. Ives. I have a few of his early pictures at home which I value very much; although they were still life. they gave the hint for trying moving pictures in natural colors. The great difficulty was obtaining the orthochromatic film sensitive enough to take a picture at the rate of sixteen a second through the red, what we called in the early experiments the red of a dark-room lamp, and when I first showed a negative to a friend of mine, an old photographer, and said to him, look! I have taken pictures at the rate of sixteen a second through this glass; he looked at me, I shall never forget that look, and his words were, sixteen hours you mean. Well he would not believe it; he does now. It was the sensitizing and color screens that took so many years to prove anything like accuracy. I remember one face I took in color. I was so delighted to see the colors there, but it always had four colored eyes and two colored noses to me. This showed the difficulty of regestration for color work, something similar to the flicker we had at first in black and white, which has taken such a long time and so many brains and careful workers to get rid of. Now this accurate registration for color work orthochromatic sensitive film and color screens to obtain a true color balance is gradually being solved and those great difficulties in natural color work is what is taking the time to produce nature as we see it, when we have accomplished this thoroughly, our knowledge of nature will advance by leaps and bounds, for nature is full of color, and it acts upon our senses with such force and we may say it is inherent in all things. Its actions on substance around in the evolution of nature will be found out by photography color movement. I don't mean only the bright and brilliant colors; I mean the faint and dusty colors as well. We shall have pictures of performed interest, also the color motion of the whole universe as I mentioned in a paper I gave before the Bath Photographic Society, July, 1889. I imagine the beautiful sunrise and sunsets brought in from all parts of the world, what a valuable vehicle of instruction cinematography in natural colors will be for the teacher of the future. The rippling tones of the water and the fields will be shown, grass, trees, foliage and landscape, and all the beautiful coloring of the flowers will be something for the teacher to enlighten the student upon. Besides the pictures in color are more pleasing, less fatiguing to the eye, instead of an uninteresting mass of black and white. What are flowers and flags without their colors, or birds, fishes and fruit, leave alone the color of the bacteria, and their movements; truly may it be said Cinematography in Natural Colors will open up nature secrets and be a hand-maid to science, when one uses the best element. We have the ebb and flow of reason and the light that is within us which inspires and guides us with all opposition to facts and truths.

MR. AND MRS. FRIESE-GREENE AND FAMILY

There are different ways of producing natural color cinematography. You may resolve two primary colors red and green, or, better still, a yellow red and blue green, or the three primary colors red, green and blue violet while taking the negative on an orthochromatic sensitized film. The extent of each individual color division exposed must be equal to the area of the orthochromatic sensitive film exposed. In projecting from the positive or transparency produced from the negative you must see that the same color the picture was taken through is used for projection. I prefer to use a transparency screen band or color filter divided into successive series of primary colors deposed between an orthochromatic sensitized film and the lens—the primary colored screen band being located in close contact with the sensitive film, and being intermittently travelled in conjunction with the film between each period of exposure in such a way that successive exposures are affected through successive primary color divisions; you may use a revolving color disc for projecting, or you may color the transparency or positives with the same color they were taken through, and when projecting at the rate of sixteen a second the color selects to the average eye its own individual color; reproduces nature as we see it, without any alterations on existing machines. Why I prefer to use the three primary translucent colored band for taking the pictures is, glass no matter how smooth it is planed and optically worked introduces elongation and reflecting faults in taking the pictures, whereas a three primary colored translucent band is always in contact with the sensitized orthochromatic film during exposure given a clear pass for the colors and sharpen image and you can vary the density of the three primary colors out of the sixteen which you produce before the eyes in a second of time, giving more latitude for the different subjects one takes, also taking into consideration the orthochromatic sensitized film, and the color and density of deposit. Besides any variation with glass filters will throw the image out of register which shows very much when enlarged upon the screen. The best effects are due to the skill of the photographer obtaining the correct exposure to each filter to give the true color balance in a given time of sixteen to twenty-five per second, if under sixteen per second the movement will be too fast when projected, and if over twenty-five the movement will be too slow; so you want to keep as near as possible to sixteen per second through filters transmitting the scarlet and orange to 5,800 per spectrum test and not transmitting the green and blue. This is the red filter—the green filter should overlap the red and also to somewhat greater extent the blue from 6,000 to 4,000 (spectrum test). The blue filter should not transmit red and if the dye used in it absorbs the ultra violet to some extent there will be less difficulty in making the compensative filter. The blue filter should transmit from 5,000 to 4,000 (spectrum test).

Chicago Letter

The last stand has been taken by the Trust and in their attempt to start on their feet and keep in the business. The General Film Co., General Producing Co. or whatever alias it is known by at this writing has boosted the rent on their Chicago customers.

Last week all customers who are doing any business at all with the Trust pictures got a polite notice that they would have to kick more dough into the Trust coffers in order to keep Gen. Flimco out of the coffin being prepared for him by the Independent exchanges and around the busy centers of inactivity (Gen. Flimco's offices) the salutation you receive is "Good morning, did they boost your service, too?"

From the present outlook a great number of exhibitors who have been going along blindly are commencing to get next to themselves, as I met two men in an Indepdent exchange the other morning who have several theaters in town and heretofore have been staunch supporters of the Trust, but too much is plenty I suppose. Oh, Shades of Carl, the Prophet, wait until we read the wording of his next message. Well you have to hand it to him. He is some prophet and deserves a great part of the credit for progress made by the Independent people.

The Yogi says: "A wise man who wants water goes to the well." Very good for the wise man, but on top of that comes "The story of the pitcher that went to the well too often." So it will be with Gen. Flimco. "He will never miss the water till the well runs dry" or else turns Independent.

We saw the first release of the Imp Co. with Miss Pickford in the leading rôle.

Their "First Misunderstanding" is the title of this film and, although it is not as we expected, a heavy drama, it pleased us to see her in something so different from rôles she has played heretofore with the Biograph Co. Owen Moore should also be given credible mention as this young gentleman is surely showing his versatile ability since he has been given a chance at leading rôles.

Miss Rhea, also of the Imp Stock Co., gives great promise as a leading lady. Her performance in the last pictures which she has appeared in was excellent, especially "The Wise Druggist" in which she played the jealous bride.

Julius Stern, manager of the Laemmle theaters, has just returned from a trip through Iowa where Laemmle owns and operates several picture theaters.

The Bijou Theater, in Iowa City, Ia., was disposed of by Mr. Stern during his trip. The purchaser is William H. Englert, a local business man.

Moline, Rock Island, Davenport and Muscatine were also visited on the trip. The Family Theater in Muscatine is running first-run Independent films in connection with Wm. Morris vaudeville and is doing a thriving business.

The Independent picture houses in Moline, Rock Island and Davenport are doing a far better business, according to Mr. Stern, than the houses using the Trust product.

Mr. Grossman, the pioneer of the Yiddish Theater and who has successfully operated several five-cent theaters on S. Halsted street, has added a new one to his already large list of successes.

He has leased and remodeled the old Olympic Theater on Walnut street near Seventh in Milwaukee, Wis., and renamed it Grossman's Casino, where he will produce and present Yiddish dramas and moving pictures, Independent ones, of course.

The Standard Film Exchange reports a heavy increase in business during the past month. At the present time their list of customers is far in advance of the number at any time during their tenure with the Motion Picture Patents Co. and Mr. Hopp seems very well satisfied with results.

The Anti-Trust Film Exchange is also in for their share of prosperity with Independent film. The Buffalo Bill pictures are reaping a rich harvest for Father Plough.

A certain exhibitor in a small town in Illinois was, or, at least, thought he was, slipping one over on his exchange by sub-renting the films sent him for his own use. However, the exchange became aware of the conditions and had the exhibitor arrested and placed in jail for "Larceny of Goods" and obtaining goods under false pretenses. The exchange in question intends to make a test case of this, as this practice among exhibitors causes a serious injury to business for the exchange man, not to speak of the extra wear and tear on films.

The Star Theater, on Milwaukee avenue, which has been operated for several years by the Western Vaudeville Managers Association, has been taken over by Jones, Linick & Shaefur Co., who own and operate so many moving picture and vaudeville houses throughout the city, including the famous Orpheum Theater on State street.

The policy of the house has also undergone a change and hereafter will give two shows each night, prices ranging from five to thirty cents.

Chas. Hagedorn, well known in vaudeville circles and one of the staff of managers connected with Jones, Linick & Shaefer, succeeds Tom Carmody as house manager.

The Star has suffered reverses in business of late owing to the influx of picture shows on Milwaukee avenue and the change of policy is an effort to compete with the fast-growing popularity of the distinct picture show.

We paid a visit to Wm. H. Havill, city examiner of moving picture operators, Monday and found him to be the busiest man imaginable, as the time limit for operators to renew their licenses was at hand and more than 200 of these operators were lined outside his office waiting to receive their credentials for 1911 license. The Civil Service Commission held an examination last week for examiner's position on this board, but no notice of appointee has been given out as yet. Mr. Havill has held the position since appointed by Mayor Busse over three years ago and took the examination for reappointment.

For the benefit of other departments of this kind throughout the country, as well as for operators who should thoroughly understand them, I quote below a section from the city code pertaining to operators' licenses.

This ordinance was passed by the city council July 13, 1908, and subsequent ordinances amending same.

Ordinances Governing Moving Picture Shows in the City of Chicago

Ordinance Passed by the City Council July 13th, 1908, as Amended January 10th, 1910.

Section 1. Bureau of Examiners of Moving Picture Operators. There is established a Bureau in the Department of Electricity to be known as the Bureau of Examiners of Moving Picture Operators, which shall be under the supervision and control of the City Electrician. Said Board of Examiners shall consist of two members, one of whom shall be the City Electrician, who shall be (ex-officio) Chairman of said Board of Examiners. The other member of said Board shall be appointed by the City Elecrician according to law.

Sec. 2. It shall be the duty of said Board of Examiners of moving picture operators to examine all applicants for a license as moving picture operators, in regard to their several qualifications to operate moving picture machines or devices, and, if found competent, to issue a certificate to said applicant, certifying that he is competent to operate moving picture machines and devices, and such applicant shall then present said certificate to the City Clerk and pay a license fee of Ten Dollars ($10) to the City Collector, and thereupon the City Clerk shall issue a license to said applicant for a period which shall terminate on the 31st day of December of each year. Said license, when issued, must be posted in a conspicuous place within the premises. A record shall be kept of all the actions and proceedings of the Board of Examiners, and said Board of Examiners shall make an annual report to the City Council.

Sec. 3. It shall be unlawful for any person to operate any moving picture machine or device within the limits of the City of Chicago, unless such person so operating shall first have passed examination and obtained city license.

Operators licensed by the city are also held responsible for proper fullfilment of the following ordinance governing the showing of immoral pictures or other pictures not passed by the City Censorship Department.

Obscene and Immoral Pictures

Passed November 4, 1907.

Be it ordained by the City Council of the City of Chicago:

Section 1. That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to show or exhibit in a public place or in a place where the public is admitted anywhere in the City of Chicago any picture or series of pictures of the classes or kinds commonly shown in mutoscopes, kinetoscopes, cinematographs and such pictures or series of pictures as are commonly shown or exhibited in so-called penny arcades, and in all other automatic or moving picture devices, whether an admission fee is charged or not, without first having secured a permit therefor from the Chief of Police of the City of Chicago.

Sec. 8. Anvone violating the terms of this ordinance shall be fined not less than fifty ($50) dollars nor more than one hundred ($100) dollars for each offense. Every day's exhibition of each picture or series of pictures without a permit shall be a distinct and separate offense.

Sec. 9. This ordinance shall apply to all pictures or series of pictures whether the same are now being shown or exhibited or may hereafter be shown or exhibited.

Sec. 10. All ordinances and parts of ordinances in conflict with this ordinance are hereby repealed.

Sec. 11. This ordinance shall take effect at the beginning of the fifteenth day after its passage and publication.

The Sheridan Theater, on Irving Park Boulevard and Sheridan Road, has again opened its doors; this time with moving pictures exclusively. This house as a vaudeville proposition has proven a hoodoo to several managers and during the past two months has remained dark.

Louis Laemmle, brother of Carl, has decided to give up bachelorhood and in consequence of said decision a young lady, Miss Freida Hellar, recently from Bavaria was the recipient of "some" diamond ring and Louis these days is so happy he is walking on air around the headquarters of the "Biggest and Best"—(see ad on another page).

Oh, yes, Julius Singer wishes the public to know there is no letter "u" in his last name, although there happens to be two in his front cognomen. (Only the printer's mistake.)

A local weekly paper has decided to devote a page each week to the moving picture as an amusement. It will be edited under the following caption:

"The Moving Picture Plays and Players."

Going some for the picture well I guess.

J. J. SULLIVAN.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., January 10.—"The Law Supreme; or, Charity Takes the Count" could aptly apply as the title for the little Sabbath drama that was pulled off here last Sunday, when Judge Wood, the prosecuting attorney, and the moving picture managers hooked up for the first personal set-to since he was inducted into office. It is true that while in New Orleans for an operation his deputy, Mr. Cotham, looked after his interests in thorough fashion, and the past two Sundays Judge Wood was too busy with court matters to give the theaters a personal inspectios and some masuagers opened for charity, but the past Sabbath he was on the job and the curtain was rung down on the little comedy drama with the judge victorious.

I have written so much on the Sunday closing question in this community that it does not seem possible that there could be anything new, but the events of the last crusade are, I think, of sufficient interest to deserve mention. During the week the judge was asked what he would do in case the managers opened for charity the past Sunday, and he replied in the most emphatic manner:

"If they open for charity or any other cause I'll close them up."

"He's got to show us," declared several of the picture promoters, and, believe "muh," they were shown. It was to laugh.

Just at the picture opening hour the judge began his personally conducted tour through the picture district. He was alone. His first stopping place was at the Orpheum, where he noted the blinds down and the house as silent as a country graveyard during a blizzard. He next went to the Lyceum. Ah, here was activity, so he stopped. He noticed employees of the house getting ready to open. Posters were being put out. The judge was recognized; activities ceased on the instant.

"What are you going to do?" inquired the judge in his mildest tones.

"We are thinking of opening," sweetly replied the man with the posters.

"Really," commented Judge Wood. "Well, then I'll wait and see," and he drew from his pocket a little book and pencil.

"Take it from me, judge," said the one addressed, "you have a long wait coming." And the posters were yanked back in the theater, down came the blinds, the doors were locked and it was all off.

"Awfully good of you," commented the judge, continuing his tour up Central avenue.

The next stopping place was at the Lyric, where it had been publicly announced a show would be given, the proceeds to go for the benefit of "The Home of the Good Shepherd," an institution for fallen women. In fact, it was all arranged for the officials of the home to come down and take charge of the house, but some one must have put a "bug in their ear," for they got wise quick that they would likely be arrested, and, not being desirous of suffering such humility even for the inmates they represented, they wisely passed up the day's receipts and kept away. The Lyric was also dark. Above the Lyric and situated nearly opposite the fashionable Arlington Hotel was the Scenic, so Judge Wood wended his way thither.

Here he struck "pay dirt," as they say out in these diggin's. Mr. Morrison, one of the owners, was seen selling tickets, while from overhead came the music of the picture machine as it unfolded the wonders of motion photography.

"Will you kindly let me have your name, please," asked the judge, as if he did not know Mr. Morrison, who is numbered among the resort's leading citizens.

"Say, judge, come inside and let's talk this thing over," replied Mr. Morrison.

In the operator's apartment this conversation was overheard by Dick Baird, who looks after the managerial interests of the Scenic.

"Zip" went the blind in the operating room. The picture ceased most abruptly. Off went the light and Dick decided he needed a little mountain air. Now, the Ozart Mountain comes in a slope down to the rear of the Scenic. From its base at the back door of the theater to the top is about one hundred and fifty feet, at an angle of forty-five degrees. Dick made the top in three leaps. The next seen of him he was walking in a dignified manner down Central avenue, pushing his baby carriage in which nestled his pretty little baby, looking serene and happy as if there was never such a thing as moving pictures in existence. Yes, the judge won out. There will be no Sunday shows in this burgh for some time to come. Charity has taken the count in this respect. Poor, long-suffering, badly-abused charity! Silently we draw the curtain over your remains and murmur: "Quand on voit la chose, on croit," which, interpreted in the vernacular of the street, meaneth, "When your walloped you want to believe it—sec."

Moving pictures, according to the statement made here this week by gentlemen prominently identified with the gold mining industry of Alaska, have made quite a hit in the Far North. These gentlemen have come all the way from Cordova and Valdez, Alaska. They are registered at the Waukesha, one of the resort's leading hotels. Thinking that a little picture news might be of interest to the trade in general when given by these gentlemen I interviewed Mr. D. O. Bollinger and Tony Carlson.

"Sure we have moving picture shows in Alaska," replied Mr. Bollinger, "and they are doing a great business. Cordova is only seven years old, and there are two houses there. These houses show three reels of pictures and change three times a week. You see, they have to get their films from Seattle, and the boats only come from that city about twice a month during the winter. One house is running Independent pictures and the other is using Trust material, but the shows are good.

"Cordova is about 1,500 miles from Seattle. Recently the Guggenheims have been building their railroad into the copper district and some 8,000 men were in Cordova at that time. The town is wide open and everything goes."

"Must be pretty cold up there about this time," I ventured.

Oh, my, no,"replied Mr. Bollinger. "It's quite warm—only about eight or ten degrees below zero. You see, it don't actually get cold until one goes into the interior, where it drops to forty or fifty below, and then, if you are not careful, you feel it." Help!

There were several parties here the past week looking at the Orpheum but the week ended without a deal being closed. This house is owned by the Arkansas Amusement Association. Its owners want $1,500 for it. That is, they want that much, but as yet no one has been willing to come across with that amount. Don't blame them.

The "C. Q. D." signal was flashed from Argenta, a little town opposite Little Rock, the latter part of the week. This cry went up from a colored minstrel show that had stranded there. The company was a good one, but patronage was not coming their way. The call was received by the wireless operator at the Majestic Theater, and Mr. Millmine, the owner, brought the company to this city, where they opened Monday night of this week and gave excellent satisfaction. If they can change their show each week they will likely enjoy an indefinite run at this house.

Dreamland Theater, Peekskill, N. Y.

Messrs. Cuff and Anderson, who have two photoplay theaters in Paterson, N. J., will open their new Dreamland Theater in Peekskill, N. Y., Saturday, January 14th. They purchased their full equipment from J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," the same including a new model motiograph moving picture machine with extra mechanism, a Standard "Hallberg Economizer" and 300 opera chairs.

WE HAVE MADE A RESOLUTION

(See Page 15)

—Rex

PROGRESS

In the year 1910 we succeeded in splitting the business of the country between the trust and ourselves on a 50% basis. At the beginning of 1910 this was thought an impossibility. In one more year, with your help, we will take another 50% of the business they have remaining, or we will have an open market—they selling to our exchanges and we selling to theirs.

You may formerly have used Independent service and found it unsatisfactory. We are positive you would NOT find such a case NOW, especially if you take service from an exchange that is buying our entire output.

The next time a solicitor from an independent exchange approaches you open up to him, tell him what has been your experience with independent service and what you must have to keep your people coming. If he is connected with a "live one" he will surely be able to give you a satisfactory service.

We suggest also that you write us telling us your troubles. We may be able to offer at least one valuable suggestion

Motion Picture Distr

111 East 14th Street

List of Exchanges Buying Through the

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

111 East 14th Street NEW YORK CITY

All others offering these brands for rent can supply only dupes or worn-out subjects.

CANADA

Applegath, L. J., & Sons	145 Yonge St.	Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange	Calgary	Alberta
Gaumont Co.	154 St. Catherine St.	Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co.	Winnipeg	Man.

ALABAMA

Dixie Film Co.	503 Chamber of Com. Bldg.	Birm'ham

CALIFORNIA

California Film Exchange	1065 Mission St.	San Francisco
Miles Bros.	790 Turk St.	San Francisco
Western Film Co.	514 S. Los Angeles St.	Los Angeles

COLORADO

Co-operative Film Exchange	Barclay Block	Denver
W. H. Swanson Film Exch.	301 Railroad Bldg.	Denver

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

B. & W. Film Exchange	426 Ninth St., N. W.	Washington
Paramount Film Exchange	428 9th St., N. W.	Washington

GEORGIA

Consolidated Film Exchange	Rhodes Bldg.	Atlanta, Ga.

ILLINOIS

Anti Trust Film Co.	79 So. Clark St.	Chicago
Eugene Cline	59 Dearborn St.	Chicago
Globe Film Service	107 E. Madison St.	Chicago
H. & H. Film Service Co.	98 Jackson Blvd.	Chicago
Laemmle Film Service	196 Lake St.	Chicago
Standard Film Exchange	155 E. Washington St.	Chicago

INDIANA

Central Film Service Co.	119 N. Illinois St.	Indianapolis

KANSAS

Wichita Film & Supply Co.	122 N. Market St.	Wichita

LOUISIANA

Dixie Film Company	720 Maison Blanche Bldg.	New Orleans

MASSACHUSETTS

Boston Film Rental Co.	665 Washington St.	Boston
W. E. Green Film Exchange	228 Tremont St.	Boston

MARYLAND

B. & W. Film Exchange	412 East Baltimore St.	Baltimore
Consolidated Amusement Co.	28 W. Lexington St.	Baltimore

MINNESOTA

Laemmle Film Service	400 Sykes Block	Minneapolis

MICHIGAN

Michigan Film & Supply Co.	1106 Union Trust Bldg.	Detroit

MISSOURI

Bijou Film & Amusement Co.	1222 Grand Ave.	Kansas City
J. W. Morgan	1310 Walnut St.	Kansas City
Swanson-Crawford Film Co.	Century Bldg.	St. Louis

NEBRASKA

Laemmle Film Service	1517 Farnam St.	Omaha

NEW YORK STATE

Alhany Film Exchange	418 Broadway	Alhany
United Film Co.	1 First St.	Troy
Victor Film Service	39 Church St.	Buffalo

NEW YORK CITY

Empire Film Exchange	150 East 14th St.	New York City
Great Eastern Film Exchange	21 East 14th St.	New York City
Hudson Film Company	138 East 14th St.	New York City
Peerless Film Exchange	94 Fifth Avenue	New York City
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange	110 Fourth Ave.	New York City

OHIO

Capitol Film Service Co.	422 No. High St.	Columbus
Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co.	309 Arcade Bldg.	Dayton
Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co.	315 West 4th St.	Cincinnati
Toledo Film Service	319 Superior St.	Toledo
Victor Film Service	Prospect & Huron Sts.	Cleveland

OREGON

Independent West. F. Ex.	Swetland Bldg.	Portland

OKLAHOMA

United Motion Picture Co.	112 Main St.	Oklahoma City

PENNSYLVANIA

Eagle Film Exchange	143 N. 9th St.	Philadelphia
Independent Film Exchange	415 Ferry St.	Pittsburg
Philadelphia Film & Pro. Co.	44 North 9th St.	Philadelphia
Philadelphia Film Exchange	934 Arch St.	Philadelphia
Pittsburg Photoplay Co.	332 Third Ave.	Pittsburg
Swaab Film Service Co.	338 Spruce St.	Philadelphia

TEXAS

Texas Film Exchange	311 Elm St.	Dallas

UTAH

Co-operative Film Exchange	320 Atlas Block	Salt Lake City

WASHINGTON

Pacific Film Exchange	Globe Bldg.	Seattle

WISCONSIN

Western Film Exchange	307 Enterprise Bldg.	Milwaukee

buting & Sales Co.

New York City

Manufacturers' Synopsis of Films

IRISH HEARTS.

Atlas Release—Jan. 25.

"But the heart will sigh for the absent land
Where the lovelight first illumined it."

Ireland, the land of romance, of pretty colleens, of loving, and of fighting, of merry-making and of sorrow; where, in spite of persecution, there is always a wealth of sunshine and gladness, for the "Son of Old Erin" is always hoping for better things to come, and is not easily discouraged.

Here we build a story, out of Irish timber and situations, a story so quaint and beautiful, yet tragic at times, as to leave no doubt in the minds of those who see the film that we are capable of handling this type of picture wonderfully well.

The story deals with the persecution of God-fearing Irish peasants by the British soldiers. It unfolds a tale of love and loyalty on one side, surrounded by malice, treachery and greed on the other, with the sublime influence of the Church inspiring peace in the hearts of all.

No prettier story was ever written for a moving picture, as it affords opportunity for the introduction of perhaps the most elaborate and beautiful settings of the character ever constructed. The costuming of this picture demonstrates how thoroughly able the company is to cope with the problem of dressing a big production properly, while great care was used in selecting artists to impersonate the characters in the picture. As an example of the latter, the Old Priest of the story is portrayed by a noted actor who has reached the ripe old age of seventy-five.

THE TRUNK MYSTERY.

Great Northern Release—Jan. 21.

A sensational story of impersonation to secure an inheritance, the fraud being brought to light by a detective. The Count Telemarch receives intimation of his brother's death in London, leaving him a legacy of £50,000. The count is asked to go personally to receive it, taking with him letters of identification. His servant accompanies him, and when on board ship he drugs his master, places him in a trunk in the cabin, and secures the legacy. He keeps the count bound in the trunk, but gives him sufficient food to keep him alive. The countess has a vision of her husband being ill-used, and forced into the trunk by the servant. She visits a detective and tells him of her vision. He takes up the case, and traces the false count to his hotel, follows him on board ship, and by a ruse obtains access to the cabin. The detective finds the imprisoned count, and gets into the trunk himself. The villain drags the trunk to the side of the vessel, and is just pushing it into the sea, when the detective jumps out, arrests the swindler, and restores to the real count his inheritance.

THE DREAM

Imp—Release January 24

Will Herbert has a beautiful and affectionate little wife, Nell, but he has grown weary of her "cute" ways and soft voice and longs for excitement. A fascinating typewriter in his employ named Bess finally catches his eye to the extent that he not only flirts with her, but one evening asks her to have dinner with him at a famous road house and cafe.

Bess gladly accepts the invitation, and they have a jolly time, Will drinking a great deal more champagne than is good for him. In the meantime, dear little Nell has prepared his supper for him at home, taking great pains in making a lovely cake for him that she knows he will enjoy. She waits patiently for him, occasionally consulting the clock, or walking to the window to look for him and finally sinking into his seat at the table and inserting one of her hands in the sleeve of his smoking jacket, which she has hung on the back of his chair, she falls asleep.

Will and Bess at last leave the cafe, and bidding her "good night," he arrives at home. Nell treats him affectionately, but he, under the influence of wine and thinking only of the charms of Bess, treats her cruelly. He shoves the cake aside, throws some dishes on the floor and kicks over his chair. Nell stands gazing at his strange actions, stupefied with horror, but at last, completely overcome, she staggers from the room sobbing as if her heart would break.

Then Will falls on a couch and goes to sleep—and dreams.

He sees Nell re-enter the room dressed in a flashy gown and wearing a large picture hat. She laughs carelessly at him, and going over to the buffet, gets a decanter and glass and proceeds to drink glass after glass of wine. Then seated on the corner of the table she lights a cigarette and tells him she is tired of his stupid ways, and, removing her wedding ring, she throws it at him. Then she rises and going to the door angrily jerks down the portieres, and leaves the house while he blindly follows. Outside she is joined by a handsome man who helps her into an automobile and away they go.

Will follows in another machine and sees them enter the same cafe and sit at the same table he had occupied with Bess but a few hours before. The dream man is very attentive to her and anticipates her every wibs while she seems completely devoted to him. And Will stands near them and tears his hair in impotent rage, but they notice him not and grow more and more hilarious. Finally, he can stand it no longer and rushes off home. Arriving there, he writes her a note, telling her he did not think she was that kind of a woman, and then going to the buffet he takes from a drawer a revolver and pressing it against his heart, pulls the trigger and falls upon the couch.

He awakens lying on the floor at the foot of the couch.

Rising to his feet, he looks for the bullet wound, but does not find it. Still believing, however, in the reality of his dream, he calls loudly for Nell, and when she timidly enters the room he demands an explanation of her conduct. She shows him her wedding ring and tells him she has not changed her clothes nor left the house tha tnight.

Convinced that after all it was only a horrible nightmare, his heart is filled with joy and with penitence for his own misdeeds, and he begs her forgiveness, realizing her true value at last. She generously pardons him, and seated upon his lap at the table eats a piece of the neglected cake he cuts for her.

PHONE 1707 CHESTER

Imp—Release January 26

Ralph Vincent is an all round sport, in spite of the that he has a charming wife and lovely baby at home. His wife, Effie, trusts him implicitly, although she has heard some rather ugly rumors concerning him.

Ralph receives a tip on a horse by wire from the city and wants to play it, but has not the money. He tries to borrow it from a fellow employee in the office, but, not succeeding, he at last obtains it from Hiram Hayes, the old man who runs the grocery store over which the Vincent's have rooms. He tells Hiram he needs it for his family.

He wires the money on and shortly after, receiving word that his horse has won, he hastily packs a bag and goes to the city. Here, inflated by his winnings, he joins a gay crowd and has the time of his life. He plays poker with the boys and joins a merry crowd of fast men and women at supper.

In the meantime, he has mailed the amount of his loan to Hiram and his wife, Effie, is down in Hiram's store when it arrives. There is, however, no letter for her.

Putting two and two together, she fears the worst, and Hiram kindly offering to look after the baby, she departs for the city in search of Ralph. Knowing the address of his hotel from the letterhead enclosing Hiram's money, she goes straight there and reaches the cafe at the height of the festivities, arriving at the very moment that Ralph is distinguishing himself by drinking a toast out of one of the women's slippers.

Effie takes one look and then burying her face in her hands she rushes from the room and hastens home heartbroken.

Ralph is instantly checked in his mad career by the sight of his little wife, and, despite the pleadings of his companions, he leaves the cafe, accompanied by a good-hearted friend named Fred Strong.

Some hours later, Ralph comes to his senses in a Turkish bath surrounded by his friends of the evening. Realizing the baseness of his recent actions, he wants to call up his wife on the telephone to ask her pardon but he lacks the courage. There he sits a humiliated man, blankly staring at the picture of his baby in a locket. He has spent all of his winnings during his debauch, and has lost the love and respect of his wife and possibly his position. Overcome by remorse, he lays down the locket and leaves the room, wandering aimlessly through the bath.

Then Fred Strong, who has found the telephone number, calls up Hiram at the grocery store, who responds dressed in his night clothes. Effie and baby are soon brought down to the 'phone and negotiations for the return of Ralph are begun. Fred and the balance of Ralph's friends at one end of the wire in their bath costumes, and Effie, Hiram and the baby at the other, all in dishabille. Then Ralph is brought to the 'phone, he talks to Effie and she and the baby talk to him. Effie tells him to come home.

While Ralph is dressing, Fred starts a collection for the baby, which proves a generous one, and enclosing the bills with the locket in an envelope, directed to the child, they hand it to Ralph and wish him "God speed."

Ralph arrives and regaining his wife's love and his position, he swears off from a sporting life and the next time he receives a tip by wire he tears up the telegram and throws it in the waste basket.

WHEN LOVE WAS BLIND

Thanhouser—Released January 24

May Read is the daughter of a wealthy widow. May has been blind from childhood, but bears her affliction bravely. While her mother is out of the house one day, the building catches fire. The cowardly servant forgets May and runs out of the house. The blind girl, unable to help herself, would have perished had it not been for the bravery of Frank Carson, who fights his way into the house and carries May into the street. But in so doing Frank is disfigured for life.

The young couple fall in love and the mother consents to their marriage as Frank, outside of his physical affliction, is an eligible man. Two years later, when the couple are possessed of a child, their family physician finds that he can restore May's lost sight. Frank consents to the operation, although he fears that when May sees, the sight of his scarred face will lose him her love.

After the operation, which is successful, the doctor warns May not to remove the bandages, as it may mean that her sight will be lost again. But the desire to see her baby and her husband are too strong. May removes the bandages, and finds that her child is as beautiful as she had expected. Then she glances at her husband, who is standing in the strong light. It blinds her, and she never sees again. But she knows that her baby is all she hoped it to be, and she believes her husband looks as she had pictured him. So, despite her great affliction, she is thoroughly happy.

PROMPT PAYMENT

Thanhouser—Released January 27

When a young lawyer starts in business he needs clients. If he does not get them, he is likely to accumulate creditors. And that was exactly the fix that Jack Hunt found himself in.

Jack wanted to practice law, he was eager to plead in court; but all the pleading he was able to do consisted of pleading with stony-hearted men to whom he owed money. And it must be confessed that his arguments were almost invariably overruled.

Matters reached a crisis when the creditors called in a body to demand what they called their rights. Jack was in the inside office when they appeared, but did not care to come out. Also they objected to going away.

But Jack, like most lawyers, was resourceful. His creditors, to while away the time, began a game of cards, and that gave Jack an idea.

For with the cards he was an expert. If legal preferment were based on ability as a poker player, Jack would be the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

So Jack departed by way of the fire-escape, and through the aid of a friendly costumer, returned looking like a perfectly unhappy creditor. And he sat in that poker game and won a surprising amount of money to the sorrow of the others.

Then Jack excused himself, slipped out to return in a short time in his own garments. And he greeted his creditors affectionately, and paid each man his bill in full, whereat they rejoiced. For Jack was an honest lawyer, even if he did have to hold a full house to prove it. On the same reel

STEALING A RIDE

Two little youngsters, Susie Gay and Johnny Eddy, are out tobogganing, when they see Susie's parents start out for a drive in a sleigh. The children ask to be taken along, but are refused. Unknown to the grownups, they hitch their little sleds on behind the big sleigh, and accompany the party anyway. Going at a good speed on an upgrade, Susie loses her hold on her little sled and Johnny, trying to save her, falls off with her. By the time the little ones scramble to their feet, the big sleigh is a long distance off, and they are unable to overtake it.

The children wander into a nearby wood, hopelessly lost, and spend an anxious afternoon together. Mr. and Mrs. Gay discover the two empty sleds when they are some distance from the town. Recognizing Susie's sled, they turn back, fearing some harm has befallen their little one. They track the children by their footprints into the woods, where they find them asleep in the snow. The children have had a bad fright, but are otherwise no worse off for their experience. This time they get their wish, and are driven back home in the big sleigh.

THE CONVICT'S LAST CHANCE.

Yankee Release—Jan. 23.

Have you a baby in your home; a blue-eyed, rosy-cheeked girl, just old enough to trip gaily about the house and spread sunshine wherever she appears? You love her, don't you, and you'd give up everything you possess to make her happy, wouldn't you?

Even if you haven't such a jewel, your heart's big enough to like the story about some one else who has, and you'd like to see the story pictured on the screen just because it's about a sweet kid who taught her papa a few lessons about being "a good fellow."

Nobody knew he was a convict when he returned from prison, and began a ceaseless search for work, to keep the bodies and souls of a wife and child together, until a former guard recognized him on the street and "tipped off" his record to the very man who had just employed him. After that they knew him everywhere he went, and he gave up in despair. Besides, the baby was sick, and there wasn't a penny in the house to buy food or medicine.

Finally desperation got the better of John Rance, and he went out to steal. An accident in the street swerved him from his purpose, and he forgot his mission while he saved a sweet little girl from the jaws of death. Then he hurried home to tell his wife about it and wait for midnight.

John did not realize how close he was to the old prison cell when he heard a stern voice call out, "Hands up," nor did he seem to care much until he heard the maid in the house he was trying to rob telephone for the police. Then he begged for mercy as he thought of his starving wife and sick baby. His wild pleadings awakened the household. A little golden-haired tot of five came running in to find her papa standing over a masked man, holding a shining revolver. When the mask was removed and she saw his face, John Rance cried like a baby when he heard the little one tell her father he was not a burglar, but the man who had saved her life, that very day.

Do you think John went back to a cold and cheerless cell? Not on your life. The kid's mother hid him away until the police came and went, without their man; then somebody gave him a chance, with the money to back it up.

Employees Dined

The Chateau Lafayette, Denver, Colorado, was the scene of an enjoyable banquet given by the management of the Princess Amusement Company, of that city, as a slight token of their appreciation of the efforts and assistance of their employees and friends in the successful results obtained in the new Princess venture launched October 11, 1910.

The manager of their various other theaters were also present. Mr. Arch Gifford represented the Theatorium, Denver; Mr. Frank Kelley represented the Bijou, Denver; Mr. M. C. Farnsworth represented the Lyric, Cheyenne, Wyoming. Owing to the distance the managers of Colorado Springs and Wichita, Kansas, houses were unable to be present.

Mr. Greaves was unanimously chosen as toastmaster. This selection proved him to be the right man in the right place.

Among the others present were: H. T. Nolan, G. H. Greaves, E. A. Shields, J. Gerbose, Bud Graham, C. E. Merter, G. H. Clark, G. S. Stewart, B. Pepper, J. L. Durkee, S. O. Erickson, Arch Gifford, Frank Kelley, A. P. Markey. A very enjoyable evening was spent, and good fellowship prevailed until the last word was spoken.

A vote of thanks was given to the Princess Amusement Company by those present, which was responded to in a few well-chosen words by Mr. Greaves.

A vote of thanks was also given to the William H. Swanson Film Company for their efforts in providing the service, which in no small measure brought about the results obtained. This was responded to by Mr. Nolan in an appropriate manner in behalf of the William H. Swanson Film Company.

Story of Swaab Film Service

Philadelphia, Jan. 10, 1911.

Gentlemen:—

On the third day of August last Mr. S. called at the office of the General Film Co. at the request of Mr. Berst, of the Pathe Co. A proposition to buy this exchange was made by one Kennedy, but, before making the offer, he stated that it would be necessary for him to go to the Patents Co. office, accompanied by Waters and Swaab ,in order to ascertain the amount of business Swaab was doing. He said, by the way, that he did not think the Patents Co. would object. When he arrived there, he suggested that we go into the private office so that one Scull would not butt in.

Mr. Swaab was then offered a sum for his exchange, one-third in stock of the General Film Co. and the balance in notes payable quarterly but extending over a period of five years. While the proposition did not appeal to Mr. Swaab, he, nevertheless, accepted same and returned to this city to prepare an inventory of his stock.

A few days after the above conversation took place, Mr. Swaab wrote to the General Film Co. asking for a copy of the agreement that he might submit same to his legal adviser. The reply came after a few days which read: "PLEASE HURRY FORWARD YOUR INVENTORY." Several letters were exchanged but the General Film Co.'s stereotyped reply was the same, "PLEASE HURRY FORWARD YOUR INVENTORY."

They, the General Film Co., then had the audacity to notify Mr. Swaab that a manager had been appointed to take charge of his business on the 27th day of August, Saturday, and he replied that he would not turn over his place of business unless his request (which any sane person will admit was a reasonable one) was complied with, whereupon he received an offensive letter signed by Kennedy calling off all negotiations

The emissaries of the Trust then spread broadcast the report that SWAAB WOULD BE CANCELLED, that he was in bad repute with the Patents Co. and that some charge would be made in order to find him guilty. Then began a campaign of slander and abuse by the understrappers. We have affidavits to that effect and will bring forth witnesses at the proper time who will testify to the truth of the above statements.

Finally Mr. Swaab received a letter signed Marvin requesting him to call at the office of the Patents Co., which he did. No other person or persons were present at the interview but Marvin and Swaab. The latter was accused of sub-renting film, that is, the charge was collusion with Mr. W. H. Kelly at York, Pa. In spite of the fact that Swaab knew absolutely nothing about the matter until accused wrongfully by Marvin in the name of the Patents Co. he was found guilty and was informed that the matter would be brought before the board for action in the course of a few days.

The Patents Co. had replevined two reels at York and Mr. Kelly placed a counterbond and took the reels away and returned them to Mr. Swaab. One Church, representing the Patents Co., called on Mr. Swaab and not alone told him to send the reels on merely for examination by his masters when they would be immediately return but called again later in the day during Swaab's absence and told his manager in the presence of two female and three male witnesses the same story and, in addition to the above testimony, he, Church, left a note for Mr. Swaab to the same effect all of which testimony will be forthcoming at the proper time. Church also told the above-mentioned witnesses that he found some of Lubin's reels in Mr. Kelly's possession but we know nothing about this.

After the reels came to hand, before sending them to the M. P. P. Co., we wrote asking if they still wanted to examine them and they replied in the affirmative when we sent them on to them on the fifteenth day of December, 1910. When they had the reels in their possession for a number of days, Mr. Swaab requested their return and they replied that they would require them for a few days longer. They now refuse to surrender the reels and advise us that if we insist on the return of our reels they, the Patents Co., will be obliged to press the suit against Mr. Kelly. As we had not been in collusion with Mr. Kelley, we insisted on the return of the reels and the Patents Co. then had the Biograph Co. claim the reels and advise us to that effect. At a glance, one can readily see that the entire charge was a frameup. They were unable to make inroads in our business in spite of the slander used as a business getter. Mr. Berst called here personally about six weeks ago and spent fully three hours with Mr. Swaab. He said when Swaab was ready to sell out, he, Swaab, should come to him direct and he would give him the contract before he turned over his place of business to the General Film Co.

WE HAVE SIGNED THE PLEDGE

(See Page 17)

—Rex

An appointment was made by wire and mail for Mr. Swaab to meet Mr. Berst in his, Berst's, office about two weeks ago but when Swaab presented himself Mr. Berst sent out word that he had an important meeting to attend and could not see him, Swaab, that day. During Mr. Berst's conversation with Mr. Swaab while in this office, he, Berst, condemned Kennedy for his arbitrary methods and stated in no uncertain language that Kennedy had no authority to buy any exchange without the consent of Berst or Smith, of the Vitagraph Co., and that he, Berst, would investigate the matter immediately on his return.

You know the rest. I was peremptorily cancelled without an opportunity to justify myself before the board and in consequence of their unlawful action was driven out of business. I am succeeded, however, by the SWAAB FILM SERVICE CO., who will assume my obligations insofar as serving my old friends and customers are concerned, fully seventy-five per cent of whom are with me to-day. I am sure that all good-thinking men will agree that the Patents Co., together with their subsidiary company, have conspired against me and I have no fear of the outcome when it is brought before the proper tribunal. Yours very truly,

LEWIS M. SWAAB.

PATENT LITIGATION

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT,
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

MOTION PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY

vs.

YANKEE FILM COMPANY.

MOTION PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY

vs.

WILLIAM STEINER AND OTHER.

MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

Lacombe, C. J.

The Defense of failure to disclaim as to claim 4 was disposed of in decision on the demurrer.

The defense of prior invention of Freise-Greene, now presented for the first time after the patent has been for several years in litigation and long since sustained by the Circuit Court of Appeals, is one to be passed upon at final hearing.

The defense that the suit against the Mutoscope Company, in which the Circuit Court of Appeals sustained the validity of the patent, was a collusive one must be reserved for final hearing.

As to infringement. Defendants have been engaged in one way or another in having moving pictures taken by two different cameras or in selling or leasing the reproduction of exposures thereon. Apparently, on their own admissions, they were satisfied with the statements of the persons taking the pictures that the machines did not infringe; they took no steps to assure themselves that these statements were correct. It was so easy to demonstrate non-infringement by showing either that the film moved continuously, or that the lens (or lenses) moved—a demonstration which might have been made to the court, if not to the adversary—that the failure to do so arouses suspicion. Undoubtedly the detectives who testify for complainant were able to give but a hasty glance at the interior on the two occasions when the covering cloth was disarranged, but the affidavit of the defendant Henkel, in connection with the other testimony, seems to indicate sufficiently to make out a prima facie case that these two cameras are really of the Gaumont or so-called "beater" type, which have been held to infringe in Motion Picture Patents Company vs. The Champion Film Company recently decided.

Injunction may be taken against all the defendants.

What They Asked For

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT,
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

Motion Picture Patents Company,
Complainant,
vs.
William Steiner, Herbert L. Miles, Joseph Miles (trading under the name ATLAS FILM COMPANY), and William Steiner, Charles V. Henkel, Herbert L. Miles and Joseph Miles, Defendants.

SEWARD DAVIS, Esq.,
1 Liberty street, New York City.
Counsel for defendants.

Sir:—

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on Friday, January 6, 1911, at two o'clock in the aternoon of that day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, at his chambers in the Post-office Building in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, we will move before His Honor Judge Lacombe for the settlement and entry of the annexed order for Preliminary Injunction, a copy of which is herewith served upon you.

New York, N. Y.,
January 5, 1911.

PHILIP FARNSWORTH,
Solicitor for complainant.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT,
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

Motion Picture Patents Company,
Complainant,
vs.
William Steiner, Herbert L. Miles, Joseph Miles (trading under the name ATLAS FILM COMPANY), and William Steiner, Charles V. Henkel, Herbert L. Miles and Joseph Miles, Defendants.

ORDER.

Complaint's motion for preliminary injunction and for further relief having come on to be heard on the bill of complaint and the affidavits of George F. Scull, Mrs. Minerva Mullen, Edwin I. Standish, Joseph F. McCoy, Charles H. Wilson and Thomas A. Edison for complainant, and Seward Davis, Alfred H. Saunders, Herbert L. Miles, William Steiner, Joseph R. Miles, Leon Wagner, Charles Meyer, H. C. Matthews, Leonard Day, Karl S. Dietz, Edmond Quincy Moses and William Friese-Greene for defendants, and after hearing, orally and by briefs, J. Edgar Bull, Esquire, and Philip Farnsworth, Esquire, for the motion, and Seward Davis, Esquire, in opposition thereto, and, after due consideration, it is hereby ORDERED that a preliminary injunction issue herein enjoining the defendants and each of them, until the final hearing and determination of this cause from directly or indirectly making, using or selling any apparatus containing or embodying, or adapted to contain or embody, the inventions patented and secured to the complainant by claims 1, 2 and 3 of the Reissue Patent Number 12037 issued September 30, 1902, to Thomas A. Edison, being the patent here in suit; and from making, using or selling any camera like or substantially like the Gaumont or so-called "Beater" type of camera; and from otherwise infringing upon the rights of complainant under said claims of said patent in suit; and from selling, giving away, renting or otherwise disposing of any picture or films, either positive or negative, which have been made directly or indirectly by or for them or either of them by the use of any infringing camera; and it is further

ORDERED that any and all cameras in the possession of the defendants, or either of them, or under their control, which infringe the said claims of said patent in suit, and any and all pictures or films, both positive and negative, which have been made directly or indirectly by or for them, or either of them, by the use of any infringing camera, be forthwith by them delivered to their counsel as an officer of this court to be impounded in his custody until the final hearing of this cause; and said counsel is hereby authorized and directed forthwith as an officer of this court to take possession of said cameras and said picture or film, and to keep them in his care and custody unused until the further order of this court; and it is further ORDERED that the bond filed herein by the complainant on the fourth day of January, 1911, be and the same hereby is cancelled.

What They Got

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT,
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

Motion Picture Patents Company,
Complainant,
vs.
William Steiner, Herbert L. Miles, Joseph Miles (trading under the name ATLAS FILM COMPANY), and William Steiner, Charles V. Henkel, Herbert L. Miles and Joseph Miles, Defendants.

ORDER.

Complainant's motion for preliminary injunction and for further relief having come on to be heard on the bill of complaint and the affidavits of George F. Scull, Mrs. Minerva Mullen, Edwin J. Standish, Joseph F. McCoy, Charles H. Wilson and Thomas A. Edison for complainant, and Alfred H. Saunders, Herbert L. Miles, William Steiner, Joseph R. Miles, Leon Wagner, Charles Mayer, H. C. Matthews, Leonard Day, Karl L. Dietz, Edmund Quincy Moses and William Friese-Greene for defendants, and after hearing, orally and by briefs, J. Edgar Bull, Esquire, and Philip Farnsworth, Esquire, for the motion, and Seward Davis, Esquire, in opposition thereto, and the following affidavits submitted on settlement of this order: Steiner, Jan. 9; Freeman, Jan. 9; Wagner, Jan. 9; Smith, Jan. 9; Moses, Jan 9; Henkel, Matthews, Golden and Miles, Jan. 9; Henkel, Jan. 9; W. H. Kenyon, Jan. 9; and, after due consideration, it is hereby ORDERED that a preliminary injunction issue herein enjoining the defendants and each of them, until the final hearing and determination of this cause from directly or indirectly making, using or selling any apparatus containing or embodying, or adapted to contain or embody, the inventions patented and secured to the complainant by claims 1, 2 and 3 of the Reissue Patent Number 12037 issued September 30, 1902, to Thomas A. Edison, being the patent here in suit; and from making, using or selling any camera like or substantially like the Gaumont or so-called "Beater" type of camera; and from otherwise infringing upon the rights of complainant under said claims of said patent in suit; and from selling, giving away, renting or otherwise disposing of any picture or films, either positive or negative, which have been made directly or indirectly by or for them or either of them by the use of any infriging camera; except in fulfillment of contracts specifically made for the sale or renting of any such film prior to the date of this order; and it is further.

ORDERED that any and all cameras in the possession of the defendants, or either of them, or under their control, which infringe the said claims of said patent in suit, be forthwith by them delivered to their counsel as an officer of this court to be impounded in his custody until the final hearing of this cause; and said counsel is hereby authorized and directed forthwith as an officer of this court to take possession of said cameras, and to keep them in his care and custody unused until the further order of this court; and it is further ORDERED that the bond filed herein by the complainant on the fourth day of January, 1911, be and the same hereby is cancelled.

This order does not apply to the camera of Leon Wagner, exhibited to the court on the settlement of this order, nor to any films, negative or positive, produced through the operation of said camera.

Jan. 10, 1911. E. HENRY LACOMBE,
U. S. C. J.

SEEN ON THE CURTAIN

Walton

Antonio Toscarino—(Itala).—As a work of art this film is altogether delightful. One feels the splash of the waters of the Venetian canals, paces in the halls of the past and mixes with the throngs around the Doge in the city's palmy days. The staging is exact, the costumes correct, the acting splendid. The heroine always adorns any Itala film she is in, but in this film she excels anything I have seen of her's. Even an audience that, presumably, did not know much of Venetian history, were gripped and held by the power of her acting. A splendid reel and an honor to all concerned in its production.

Reunited—(Imp).—A thoroughly satisfactory production. The children are just a couple of kids—don't quite understand why the boy "hooked it" when he saw the gipsy. The representation of gipsy life, in the main, is well done. The faithfulness of the lover to the gipsy maid and her love and self-sacrifice for her husband are refreshing amidst the spume of intrigue and vice some folk deem "the spice of filmdom." The gipsy girl sustains her rôle with dignity, tenderness and power. The end is peace and the whole reel was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience.

An Intrigue—(Pathe).—A vivid and sustained tale of love and intrigue in the days of Napoleon III. The staging is good, the acting, especially of La Savelli, the gipsy girl, of a high order. To watch her as she finds herself caught by love and her struggles in the borderland of former hate and present love is well worth while. The story is one of fierce hate, wild love, intrigue and blood. Why the girl was shot is the touch that is better suited for Paris than New York. However, labor unstinted has been lavished on the work that is clear, and I am glad to be able to add my feeble praise.

The Gambler of the West—(Essanay).—A vigorous and breezy presentation of life in the out-in-the-open West. There are realistic gambling scenes where the weak man falls. Essanay has an actor who always fills the rôle of the good genius to a T, his face looks the part. He comes to the rescue with, of course, the inevitable girl. There's lots of excitement, also some humor, and a generally satisfactory wind-up. The audience liked this reel.

Where the Winds Blow—(Vitagraph).—Full of the salt sea breezes, and instinct with the deeper and nobler traits of humanity. The story is pretty; it is pathetic, and Jean sustains an all-important part. There are several very pretty scenes well handled. The reel will be a favorite—it deserves to be.

Fire Department of New York—(Edison).—This fell flat. What spoilt all was the engine that had arrived at "the fire" with one hose playing into space. Stagey, stagey, gentlemen. The combination of land and water forces, as a presentation is inadequate. The work of the fireboats and the representation of their power—splendid in every way. The practice work of the fire "laddies" is, of course, excellent.

Baseball and Bloomers—(Thanhouser).—Good old Fourteenth Street Theater was just full of laughs the whole time the reel was running. I cannot describe this film without telling all, and every bit of it is good. Girls in bloomers challenge boys to play baseball—and win! How? Go and see the film, that's where all the fun comes in.

Savage Girl's Devotion—(Bison).—There's one thing about Bison, you're sure of a rattling, realistic, breezy film full of go and ginger "twa ends twa." Here you have scenery—beautiful; the last picture is a gem—and a strong story running through it all. The Indian maiden sustains her trying part to the life. A thoroughly good and thoroughly enjoyable film worthy of Bison.

WE HAVE CONSUMMATED OUR PLANS

(See Page 19)

—Rex

Vaudeville Music

VARIETIES IN MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

BY FRA.

Illustrated Songs

VAUDEVILLE

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATRE

Things are going with a bang at the Fourteenth Street just now. It's not to be wondered at. Here are some of the good things seen there:

Connors and Edna. A man and a woman in street costumes, comedians, singers and dancers. Fairly pleasing No. 1 that got one bow.

Floyd and Russell. Colored entertainers. Songs, dances and patter. The audience was pleased.

Four Magnanis. Musical barbers. Full stage to represent a barber shop. This quartette were thoroughly funny fellows and their musical selections were good and very well rendered considering the extraordinary instruments used. Every mortal thing in the shop was an instrument of some sort, so we were treated to an orchestra made up of razors, shaving pots, spittoons, strops, chairs and even the barber poles. The whole turn deserves commendation and won the good will of the folks.

Olive Eaton and Her Players in "Man Proposes—Woman Disposes," by Victor H. Smalley. Cast—Mr. Henry Bodkin, Will J. Slider; Clem Short, his chum, Robert Strauss; Mrs. Bodkin, Henry's wife, Miss Olive Eaton. Time—Evening. Scene—Home of the Bodkins. A sketch where a man tries to get the better of his wife over a little episode in a Bohemian restaurant, and as he is naturally unable to do so he calls in a chum to help him. The whole is one long scream. The result as might be expected—the lady is gloriously triumphant. The old Fourteenth staged the turn well. The audience was delighted. I think the finish might be improved. I believe this will be done.

The Four Lagards. Billed as the world's greatest acrobats. European team of high excellence that most distinctly "got over the lights."

R. N. Luizzi and Trixie Shannon. Neapolitan harpist and the Dublin girl. This turn appealed to me. It was so perfectly and genuinly simple and yet good. The lady was quietly dressed and rendered several old songs sympathetically. The harpist gave us some old airs on the harp and the violin. Altogether satisfactory.

Hughes and Cole. Master and man who dished up some stories of Ancient Rome in a way that made everybody laugh.

The Bohemian Quintette. Three men and two ladies, whose performance was novel to say the least of it. A curtain call.

The Legerts. Equilibristic sensations that won applause.

William Hackett and Company presents the one act playlet entitled "The Two Doctors." Dr. Arthur W. Gilmore, the groom, William Hackett; Dr. Arthur C. Gilmore, the cousin, John Beck; Dorothy Gilmore, the bride, Josie St. Claire; Kitty, the maid, Alva Sheridan. Scene—Private dining room. Time—9 a. m. A regular comedy of errors that set the theater into a gale of laughter. Two doctors so much alike in every way that they could not be distinguished one from the other—one on his honeymoon—and a highly excitable young bride afford all the materials for a glorious mix-up, and a howling farce. Kitty, you're a peach."

As we came out of the theater the other afternoon we had to wriggle through a three-deep crowd that tailed off to Seventh avenue, all waiting to get in; read the above and see the reason why.

Jim Driscoll "got over" with Remick's sweet "Vale of Dreams." He sang it as it ought to be sung, as the audience showed. The illustrated slides by DeWitt Wheeler are singularly beautiful. They show imagination and true artistic feeling. They are meritorious and noteworthy in every way. Such a combination as Jim, this song, and those slides are just IT.

KIETH & PROCTOR'S UNION SQUARE THEATER.

Well, Brother Buck, let's shake hands while I salaam and congratulate you on your houses of late. The other morning at 10:30 there was not a seat vacant in the orchestra that I could see. That's going some.. May your shade never grow less, and good luck be with all the "boys" on the floor, not forgetting Schreiber in his cozy corner.

The lectures with slides are scarcely up to the lecturer's best. Switzerland is a splendid subject but—see that somebody arranges the slides in proper order. I think it is very hard upon any speaker when people sit in the front of the house and deliberately rattle and read newspapers during the lecture; this is ill breeding and volgarity of the crassest type. The lecturer and soloist have my sincerest sympathy, at such times and I can assure them the audience, as a whole, appreciate their work.

Walter and Violet. Funny and pleasing.

Aeroplane Girl. This was a distinct hit.

Wilson and Franklin. "Took a Chance" vigorous sketch which "got over" a mixture of fun, bewilderment and pathos. The leading man certainly knows how to use the language of the prize ring. The beginning is all rough and tumble, the end touches the hearts of the audience. This turn shows considerable improvement since I last saw it.

Victor. Ventriloquist. This was a most interesting performance. The ventriloquism was well done and in many ways novel. The telephone stunt created considerable amusement. Victor got both laughs and claps and he deserved them. The dummy was cleverly managed.

Juggling Barretts. Comedy. Nothing very striking until the hats were introduced. Then some clever work was done which the audience fully appreciated.

The Undertow. I was glad to see my old friend once more and to find that it is so popular. It is a real downright story of intense human interest. The scene laid on the East Side of New York deals with a story that requires delicate handling. The company are fully competent to do this and are rapidly improving. The cast is a first-class one, it is—Blanche Miller, a Tenderloin favorite; Grace St. Clair; Mamie Donovan, a reformed outcast, Margaret Nelson; Jim Donovan, an ex-convict, Jerome Edwards; Roundsman Flynn, a New York policeman, Frank Hanna, and a lively little East Side kid "Ginger." This little drama is far ahead of many more pretentious productions. I note many changes distinctly for the better which shows that the company are heart and soul in their work. There is humor and pathos and not a single dull moment from the rise to the fall of the curtain. The audience laughed, applauded and gave the curtain call.

The Undertow is the sort of thing that audiences like, it has a message, but no sermonizing cant.

THE UNIQUE

Good music—very good—a varied selection of pictures and a comprehensive vaudeville draw the crowds—not a doubt of it. One point has often struck me and that is the overwhelming preponderance of men at the afternoon performances. I have never been disappointed in a pleasing hour at this house, no matter at what time I dropped in. I feel I ought to say that much is due to the ushers in charge of the floor whose unfailing courtesy and kindness I consider it a duty to call attention to. We, the public, are a pretty tough proposition—at times. Circumstances prevent a fuller notice of the bill this week; but, Brother Weil, next week will make up for this week's shortcomings.

Edmonds and LaVelle. Comedy, singing, talking and dancing that pleased.

Rose Washburn. Singing comedienne who gave a bright turn—as usual.

Elmer and DeWitt. A comedy sketch that took. The audiences expressed their opinion as to this freely and frankly.

Reno and Smith. Novelty acrobats. Novelty all right.

Chas. Reilly and Day. Comedians.

KEENEY'S THEATRE.

A good, strong bill is given this week at Keeney's Third Avenue, and acts of unusual merit are being presented to appreciative audiences. Manager Edw. J. McMahon is to be complimented in securing talent of such drawing powers. As headliners the 10 Crazy School Kids and the Terry Twins brought down the house. Other attractions are The Two Musical Wilds, the Bug House Man, Higgins & West, all star acts. We also must compliment Electrician Hayes for producing a clear and flickerless projection of the pictures.

UNION SQUARE THEATER

The whole bill at the Union Square Theater has been strong, at least that's what the audiences felt and said, and they are the best all round critics. The pictures and the vaudeville in my opinion is just what a neighbor said: "A rattling good show, better far than some we pay more for." Congratulations, Brother Buck. Keep it up.

MANHATTAN OPERA HOUSE

Valeska Suratt in "Bouffes Varieties" is the headliner and a winner. Then there are Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, Oscar Loraine, the Avon Company Four, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Murphy, Kessler & Lee and Captain Nat Ressler, all attractions. No wonder the beautiful house is crowded.

FIFTH AVENUE

Max Rogers and William Kolb, in the delicatessen store, is a long-drawn scream. The whole program is attractive as the audiences show. Will H. Fox as a pianologue artist is, 'way up in the front rank.

SONGS

THEODORE MORSE MUSIC CO.,

1367 Broadway, N. Y.

If This Rose Told You All It Knows. Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse. The words here are very good, as is also the rhythm. Moreover, they mean something which is told and expanded in a pleasing way. The music is very pretty and well adapted to the words. The whole a noteworthy production.

What Is a Night Without Dreams? Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse. The poetry is poetry and not mere rhyme. The music fits the words.

If Your Heart Knew a Heart Like Mine. Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse. At the outset I like the accompaniment. Some of the barmonies are striking. The refrain is a dainty, catchy piece of work. The similes used in the lyrie are very much to the point.

Letty Jane. Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse. The whole thing goes with a swing in which the words and music combine. 'Tis simple in every way but well deserves to live.

Good Fellowship Begins at Home. Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse. There's a mighty lot of good, sound common horse sense wrapped up in the words. They don't run as smoothly as some of the writer's rhymes, but they are all right in the moral they point and the tale they adorn artistically. The music is better than the words, but I don't wish to criticise as it is only too delightful to get hold of songs of this sort amidst the unending flood of rubbish, and worse, that swirls and seethes around us.

I Just Can't Keep Away from You. Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse. A flirt duet. This composition is just exactly what it calls itself. It runs along smoothly, tells its tale decently and can be commended.

Phoebe Jane. Richard Henry Buck and Theodore Morse. The words are realistic; they are fragrant with the open. A simple little ditty not without an undercurrent of humor. Can be sung anywhere with pleasure to the hearers.

I heartily commend the above as good, clean, melodious work.

SONG SLIDES

LEVI CO. RELEASES

You Needn't Go to College, If You've Been to College Inn. Words by Edgar Selden, music by Herbert Ingraham, writer of the big song hit, "All that I Ask Is Love." The versatile Mr. Selden, in this song, tells about a real Rah Rah College and the number is a decided success. The slides were made from Mr. Selden's own senorial and contains some very original ideas. The photography and coloring are excellent, making the best set ever turned out by the Levi Co.

That's Everlovin' Love. Words and music by Elizabeth Brice and Chas. King. Published by Shapiro. This is a real description of love with a fine melody and the song is going to be an immense success. The slides contain a dozen novelties well executed, making the set first-class in every particular.

Excelsior Slide Co., of 138 East 14th street, announce the following releases: "Springtime Brings Roses and You," "Back to the Land of Spaghetti."

SALES COMPANY PROGRAMME FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING JAN. 16, 1911.

Melody (Imp)	Jan. 16
His First Patient—Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship (Imp)	Jan. 19
The Folks Back Home (Yankee)	Jan. 16
The Return to the Fold (Yankee)	Jan. 20
Jealousy of Sosthenes Ramulot—My Wife's Hat (Eclair)	Jan. 16
Texas Ted's Defense (Bison)	Jan. 17
The Redskin's Secret (Bison)	Jan. 20
Bertie's Brain Storm (Thanhouser)	Jan. 17
Old Curiosity Shop (Thanhouser)	Jan. 20
Montana Love Story—A Lover's Trial (Powers)	Jan. 17
A Noble Heart (Powers)	Jan. 21
The Will of a Western Maid (Champion)	Jan. 18
A City Wolf (Atlas)	Jan. 18
The Blue Domino-Disguise—Tailor's Queer Advertisement (Ambrosio)	Jan. 18
Their New Minister (Nestor)	Jan. 18
A Country Girl (Reliance)	Jan. 18
The Vows (Reliance)	Jan. 21
A Sad Fascination (Itala)	Jan. 19
A New Kind of Arm Chair—Visit of a Friend (Itala)	Jan. 21
Battered Bridegroom—A Dental Disaster (American)	Jan. 16
The Bonanza King (American)	Jan. 19
A Reporter's Romance (Solax)	Jan. 20
A Dreadful Dilemma—His Faithful Furniture (Lux)	Jan. 22
The Trunk Mystery (Gt. Northern)	Jan. 21

ADVICE TO OPERATORS

Oracle Department

By WM. E. SMITH, E. E.

PRACTICAL ARTICLES FOR ALL

This department has been started with the idea to encourage the operators to obtain the best results with their Projecting Machines Queries and questions pertaining to the Moving Picture arts addressed to the Editor of this department will be published in this department. Only answers to inquiries of general interest will be published here for the benefit of all readers. On account of the large amount of inquiries received it may not be possible to print all the answers in any one issue, as each has to take its turn. Correspondents should bear this in mind when writing. If a quick reply is wanted by mail, a charge of 15 cents is made for each question. Special information requiring a large amount of calculation and labor cannot be furnished without remuneration. The ORACLE has no fixed rate for such work, but will inform the correspondent promptly as to the charges involved. When writing only one side of question sheet must be used; diagrams and drawings must invariably be on a separate sheet. Name and address must always be given in all letters. No attention paid to letters not observing above rules.

"NEW YORK CITY OPERATORS TAKE NOTICE"

You will find published in this department the Law, Rules and Regulations of the Department of Water, Gas and Electricity of the City of New York, which is at the present moment of vital interest to the operators in this vicinity.

LAW

The People of the State of New York, Represented in Senate and Assembly, do Enact as Follows:

Section 1. The Greater New York Charter, as re-enacted by chapter four hundred and sixty-six of the laws of nineteen hundred and one, is hereby amended by adding, after section five hundred and twenty-nine, a new section, to be section five hundred and twenty-nine-a thereof, to read as follows:

No Person to Operate Moving Picture Apparatus and Its Connection Without a License.

Sec. 529-a. It shall not be lawful for any person or persons to operate any moving picture apparatus and its connections in the city of New York unless such person or persons so operating such apparatus is duly licensed as hereinafter provided. Any person desiring to act as such operator shall make application for a license to so act to the Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity of the City of New York who shall furnish to each applicant blank forms of application which the applicant shall fill out.

The Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity shall make rules and regulations governing the examination of applicants and the issuance of licenses and certificates.

The applicant shall be given a practical examination under the direction of the Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity and if found competent as to his ability to operate moving picture apparatus and its connections shall receive within six days after such examination a license as herein provided. Such license may be revoked or suspended at any time by the Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity. Every license shall continue in force for one year from the date of issue unless sooner revoked or suspended. Every license, unless revoked or suspended, as herein provided, may at the end of one year from the date of issue thereof be renewed by the Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity in his discretion upon application and with or without further examination as said Commissioner may direct. Every application for renewal of license must be made within thirty days previous to the expiration of such license. With every license granted there shall be issued to every person obtaining such license a certificate, made by the Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity or such other officer as such Commissioner may designate, certifying that the person named therein is duly authorized to operate moving picture apparatus and its connections. Such certificate shall be displayed in a conspicuous place in the room where the person to whom it is issued operates moving picture apparatus and its connections. No person shall be eligible to procure a license unless he shall be a citizen of the United States and of full age. Any person offending against the provisions of this section, as well as any person who employs or permits a person not licensed as herein provided to operate moving picture apparatus and its connections, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding the sum of one hundred dollars or imprisonment for a period exceeding three months, or both, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect immediately. Chap. 654—L. 1910. June. 25.

Nickelodia News in Brief

Shannon, Ill.—Clyde Getteny is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Mr. R. H. Woodley is making arrangements to erect a new vaudeville and moving picture theater at 533 S. Main street.

Los Angeles, Cal.—F. R. Greenleaf is preparing plans for the erection of new moving picture theater at the corner of Maneta avenue and Thirty-sixth street for J. W. Comfort.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Wm. Steele & Sons Co. have secured a permit for the remodeling of the building at 333 Market street into a moving picture theater for Albonia Whartenby.

Quebec, Can.—The Irish Theater, known as "The Tara Hall," owned by the Nickel Theater Company, was completely destroyed by fire.

Hamilton, Ont., Can.—James Wilmott has secured a permit for the establishment of a new moving picture theater at the corner of Barton and Emerald streets.

Lansing, Mich.—S. I. Butterfield, of Battle Creek, has purchased the Bijou Theater here from D. J. Robson and taken possession.

Portage, Wis.—Messrs. Judson and Avers have commenced the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Dayton, Ohio.—E. W. Hanly is having plans drawn for the erection of a new moving picture theater to be located at the corner of Fifth and Ludlow streets.

San Diego, Cal.—Joseph Schwartz has opened the Dreamland Theater at the corner of Fifth street and A.

Columbus, Ohio.—E. O. Jones has been awarded the contract for the erection of a new theater in West Broad street for Dr. W. E. Edminston.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Robert Seibert has purchased the Cazenovia Moving Picture Theater at 2110 Seneca street from J. M. Blendinger.

Coming, Wed. Jan. 25

AN ATLAS MASTERFILM

IRISH HEARTS

SUPERB PHOTO-TALE OF OLD ERIN

ORDER YOURS EARLY

ATLAS FILM CO.

10 East 15th Street

New York

ACTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTION AND SALES COMPANY

WE ARE ALMOST READY!

—Rex

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

INDEPENDENT FILMS

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

	Feet
Nov. 23—Gounod's "Ave Maria"	788
Nov. 23—The Story of a Pair of Boots	207
Nov. 30—The Judas Money, or, An Episode of the War in Vendee	965
Dec. 7—The Tell Tale Portrait	602
Dec. 7—Tweedle Dum Learns a Tragical Part	374
Dec. 14—Dido Forsaken by Aenea	1027
Dec. 21—Little Peter's Christmas Dinner
Dec. 28—Drama of the Engine Driver and Grandfather's Pipe
Jan. 4—The Wall Partition	500
Jan. 4—Trials of Tweedledum as a Policeman	500

AMERICAN.

Dec. 22—Her Husband's Deception (Com.)
Dec. 22—A Troublesome Parcel Com.)
Dec. 26—Girlies (Com.)
Dec. 29—The Squaw and the Man (Dr.)
Jan. 2—Mrs. Gay Life's Visitors (Com.)
Jan. 5—The Tenderfoot's Round-up (Com.)
Jan. 9—An Arizona Romance	990
Jan. 12—Lucy's Lover	560
Jan. 12—The Borrowed Flat	420
Jan. 16—The Battered Bridegrooms	525
Jan. 16—A Dental Disaster	450
Jan. 19—The Bonanza King	990
Jan. 11—How Tweedledum Pays His Bills	500
Jan. 11—Clouds and Ice-Fields	500

ATLAS FILM CO.

Nov. 2—That Dog Gone Dog (Com.)
Nov. 2—That Doggone Dog (Com.)
Nov. 9—The King of Beggars (Dr.)
Nov. 16—The Hand of Providence (Dr.)
Nov. 23—Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters (Dr.)
Nov. 30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.)
Dec. 7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.)
Dec. 14—Brothers (Dec.)
Dec. 21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.)
Dec. 28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)
Jan. 4—A Straw Ride (Dr.)
Jan. 11—A Letter to the Stork (Dr.)
Jan. 18—A City Wolf (Dr.)

CAPITOL FILM CO.

Sept. 10—The Messenger Boy's Sweetheart.
Sept. 17—Round Trip $5.98
Sept. 24—Bill Mason's Ride	700
Oct. 8—All's Fair in Love and War
Oct. 15—A Shot in the Night
Oct. 22—The Locket (Dr.)

CHAMPION.

Nov. 9—The Ranchman and the Miser (Dr.)	950
Nov. 16—The Way of the West (Dr.)	950
Nov. 23—Let Us Give Thanks (Dr.)	950
Nov. 30—The Indian Land Grab (Dr.)	950
Dec. 7—Hearts of the West (Dr.)	950
Dec. 14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.)	950
Dec. 21—His Mother (Dr.)	950
Dec. 28—The Golden Gates (Dr.)	950
Jan. 4—Days of the Early West (Dr.)	950
Jan. 11—Bill's Widow (Dr.)	950
Jan. 18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.)
Jan. 18—Why He Went West (Dr.)	950

CINES.
Eclair.

Oct. 21—The Last of the Savelli Dr.)	800
Oct. 28—Tontolini in Love (Com.)	480
Oct. 28—The Pretty Dairy Maid (Dr.)	480
Nov. 4—A Wooden Sword (Dr.)	800

COLUMBIA

Oct. 29—In the Web (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.)
Nov. 19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 26—Stage Coach Tom (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 3—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.)
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.)
Jan. 7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.)

ECLAIR.

Nov. 28—The Wreck (Dr.)	565
Nov. 28—A Di cult Capture (Com.)	380
Dec. 5—The Price of a Sacrifice (Dr.)	833
Dec. 5—The Laundry Girl's Good-Night (C.)	82
Dec. 12—The Bowling Craze (Com.)	445
Dec. 12—Our Dear Uncle From America (Com.)	470
Dec. 19—The Child of Two Mothers (Dr.)	545
Dec. 19—The Museum of Sovereigns (Dr.)	400
Dec. 26—The Lock-Keeper (Dr.)	537
Dec. 26—The Fear of Fire (Com.)	390
Jan. 2—The Great Medal Competition (Com.)	485
Jan. 2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.)	480
Jan. 9—Mother's Portrait (Dr.)	930
Jan. 16—The Jealousy of Sosthenes Ramulot (Com.)	478
Jan. 16—My Wife's Hat (Com.)	482

GREAT NORTHERN.

	Feet
Nov. 26—Kean, or the Prince and the Actor.
Nov. 21—Their Day of Thanks (Dr.)
Nov. 24—The Country Boarder (Com.)
Nov. 28—The Revolving Door
Dec. 1—A Child's Judgment (Dr.)
Dec. 3—The Birthday Present (Dr.)
Dec. 3—The Ohami Troupe of Acrobats (Sc.)
Dec. 10—The Poacher (Dr.)
Dec. 17—A Christmas Letter (Dr.)
Dec. 17—Dickey's Courtship (Com.)
Dec. 24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.)
Dec. 31—The Scarecrow (Dr.)
Dec. 31—Bear Hunting (Sc.)
Jan. 7—The Red Light (Dr.)
Jan. 14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.)

IMP.
Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Nov. 7—Keeping His Word (Dr.)	990
Nov. 10—The Model's Redemption (Dr.)	995
Nov. 14—The Double (Dr.)	995
Nov. 17—Fortune's Wheel (Dr.)	990
Dec. 5—Aspirations of Gerald and Percy (Dr.)	995
Dec. 8—Twixt Loyalty and Love (Dr.)	990
Dec. 12—Faithful Max (Dr.)	500
Dec. 12—A Clever Rusc	500
Dec. 15—The Poor Student (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 19—The Crippled Teddy Bear
Dec. 22—Little Nell's Tobacco (Dr.)
Dec. 26—The Unexpected Honeymoon (Dr.)	995
Dec. 29—Unreasonable Jealousy (Dr.)	990
Jan. 2—The Wise Druggist (Dr.)	995
Jan. 5—Reunited (Dr.)	995
Jan. 9—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.)	998
Jan. 12—The Empty Shell (Dr.)	995
Jan. 16—Melody	995
Jan. 19—His First Patient (Dr.)	500
Jan. 19—The Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship (Dr.)	500

ITALA.

Nov. 24—Sacrificed	875
Nov. 26—A Chosen Marksman approx.	500
Nov. 26—A Windy Day approx.	500
Dec. 3—The Big Drum	598
Dec. 3—The Dog Sweeper	360
Dec. 1—A Painful Debt	1,000
Dec. 8—The Soldier of the Cross	890
Dec. 10—Foolshead Knows How to Take His Precautions	588
Dec. 10—The Good Samaritan	408
Dec. 15—The False Accusation	774
Dec. 17—The Mother's Shadow	456
Dec. 17—Thieves as Quick-Change Artists	594
Dec. 22—Who Was the Culprit? (Com.)
Dec. 24—Greediness Spoiled Foolshead's Christmas (Com.)
Dec. 29—The Rustic
Dec. 31—Norwegian Water Falls	500
Dec. 31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day	500
Jan. 5—Antonio Toscarino	900
Jan. 7—Foolshead as Inspector of Hygiene	900
Jan. 12—Joanna of Braganza	900
Jan. 14—The Recall	900

LUX.
By Prieur.

Nov. 18—Bill as a Lover (Com.)	462
Nov. 18—Blopps in Search of the Black Hand (Com.)	468
Nov. 25—In Friendship's Name (Dr.)	901
Dec. 2—Bill as an Operator (Com.)	485
Dec. 2—Necessity Is the Mother of Invention (Dr.)	449
Dec. 9—What It Will Be (Com.)	491
Dec. 9—And She Came Back (Com.)	452
Dec. 16—How He Won Her (Com.)	344
Dec. 16—Her Favorite Tune (Dr.)	550
Dec. 23—Bill Plays Bowls (Com.)	423
Dec. 23—Rosalie's Dowry (Com.)	492
Dec. 30—Aunt Julia's Portrait (Com.)	547
Dec. 30—Tim Writes a Poem (Com.)	375
Jan. 6—How They Tricked Father (Com.)	498
Jan. 6—The Rival Engine Drivers (Dr.)	367
Jan. 13—Bill as a Jockey (Com.)	465
Jan. 13—That Is My Name (Com.)	438

NESTOR FILM CO.

Sept. 28—Where the Sun Sets	976
Oct. 5—The Golden Hoard	930
Oct. 12—Silver Plume Mine	970
Oct. 19—The Boys of Topsy-Turvy	960
Oct. 26—Rev. John Wright of Missouri	970
Nov. 2—The Girl from the West (Dr.)
Nov. 9—The Woodsman (Dr.)	960
Nov. 16—The Ranchman's Bride (Dr.)
Nov. 23—A Deal in Indians	1000
Nov. 30—Valley Folks
Dec. 7—The Conquering Hero
Dec. 14—The Pilgrim (Dr.)
Dec. 21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.)
Dec. 28—Elda of the Mountains (Dr.)
Jan. 1—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.)
Jan. 11—Sleepy Hollow (Dr.)	950
Jan. 18—Their New Minister (Dr.)
Jan. 25—The Man in 23

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
("Bison")

	Feet
Nov. 22—True Western Honor	957
Nov. 25—A Cheyenne's Love for a Sioux. ap.	975
Nov. 29—The Ranchman's Personal	972
Dec. 2—A Child of the Wild	991
Dec. 6—A Sioux's Reward	875
Dec. 9—A Brave Western Girl approx.	975
Nov. 25—A Cheyenne's Love for a Sioux	980
Dec. 9—A Brave Western Girl	965
Dec. 13—An Indian's Test	950
Dec. 16—A Girl of the Plains approx.	975
Dec. 20—The Cattle Baron's Daughter
Dec. 23—The Pale Faced Princess
Dec. 27—An Indian's Elopement
Dec. 30—Taming Terror
Jan. 3—In the Heart of the Sierras	900
Jan. 6—A Savage Girl's Devotion	900
Jan. 10—An Indian Trapper's Prize	900
Jan. 13—The Creek Claim	900

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Dec. 6—The Medicine Man (Com.)
Dec. 6—The Rehearsal (Dr.)
Dec. 10—The Ride to Death (Dr.)
Dec. 13—A Plucky Western Kid (Dr.)
Dec. 13—The Tramp Bicyclist (Com.)
Dec. 17—His Gypsy Sweetheart (Dr.)
Dec. 20—Jack Logan's Dog (Com.)
Dec. 20—The Bachelor's Finish (Com.)
Dec. 24—A Father's Love (Dr.)
Dec. 27—The Station Agent's Daughter (Dr.)
Dec. 27—Freddie's Courtship (Com.)
Dec. 31—A Daughter of Virginia (Dr.)
Jan. 3—The Pinkerton Man (Dr.)
Jan. 3—Beaux Not Wanted (Com.)
Jan. 7—A Woman Without a Heart (Dr.)
Jan. 17—A Montana Love Story (Com.)
Jan. 17—Lovers' Trials (Com.)
Jan. 21—A Noble Heart (Dr.)

RELIANCE

Dec. 3—When Woman Wills approx	975
Dec. 3—When Woman Wills	975
Dec. 10—The Dispensation approx.	975
Dec. 3—When Woman Wills	990
Dec. 10—The Dispensation	975
Dec. 17—The Thin Dark Line approx.	975
Dec. 24—The Refuge
Jan. 7—As the Master Orders	900
Jan. 11—The Hour of Fate	900

SOLAX COMPANY

Dec. 16—Two Suits
Dec. 23—The Pawnshop (Dr.)
Dec. 30—Mrs. Richard Dare (Com.)
Jan. 6—The Nightcap (Com.)
Jan. 6—Salmon Fishing in Canada (Sc.)
Jan. 13—The Girl and the Burglar (Dr.)
Jan. 20—A Reporter's Romance (Dr.)
Jan. 27—His Best Friend (Dr.)

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Nov. 11—The American and the Queen (D.)	1000
Nov. 15—Paul and Virginia (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 18—The City of Her Dreams (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 22—A Thanksgiving Surprise (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 25—The Wild Flower and the Rose (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 29—Value Beyond Price (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 2—John Halifax, Gentleman (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 6—Rip Van Winkle (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 9—The Girls He Left Behind Him
Dec. 9—The Iron-Clad Lover
Dec. 13—Love and Law (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 16—The Millionaire Milkman (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 20—Looking Forward (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 23—The Childhood of Jack Harkaway (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 27—The Vicar of Wakefield (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 30—Hypnotized (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 3—The Pasha's Daughter
Jan. 6—Baseball and Bloomers
Jan. 10—Everybody Saves Father (Com.)
Jan. 10—The Only Girl in Camp (Com.)
Jan. 13—The Vote that Counts (Dr.)	1000

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Oct. 31—Italian Sherlock Holmes (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 7—Spirit of the West (Dr.)
Nov. 14—The Case of the Missing Heir (D.)	1000
Nov. 21—Lone Wolf's Trust (Dr.)
Nov. 28—The Heart of an Actress (Dr.)
Dec. 2—Queen of the Nihilists (Dr.)
Dec. 5—In the Czar's Name (Dr.)
Dec. 9—Western Justice (Dr.)
Dec. 12—A Fight for Millions (Dr.)
Dec. 16—The Old Miner's Doll (Dr.)
Dec. 19—A Ward of Uncle Sam (Dr.)
Dec. 23—The Terror of the Plains (Com.)
Dec. 26—The Insane Heiress (Dr.)
Dec. 30—The Missing Bridegroom (Dr.)
Jan. 6—The Royal Wishbone (Dr.)
Jan. 2—Mrs. Danver's Divorce
Jan. 9—An Erring Son's Awakening (Dr.)
Jan. 16—The Folks Back Home (Dr.)
Jan. 20—Returned to the Fold (Dr.)

TRUST FILMS

BIOGRAPH.

		Feet
Nov.	24—His New Lid (Com.)	563
Nov.	24—Not So Bad as It Seemed (Com.)	432
Nov.	28—A Plain Song	997
Dec.	1—Effecting a Cure	997
Dec.	5—A Child's Strategem	998
Dec.	8—Turning the Tables	416
Dec.	8—Happy Jack, a Hero	576
Dec.	12—The Golden Supper (Dr.)	998
Dec.	15—His Sister-in-Law Dr.)	998
Dec.	19—The Lesson	994
Dec.	22—The White Roses	588
Dec.	22—The Recreation of an Heiress	410
Dec.	26—Winning Back His Love (Dr.)	994
Dec.	29—His Wife's Sweethearts (Com.)	682
Dec.	29—After the Ball (Com.)	311
Jan.	2—The Two Paths	992
Jan.	5—When a Man Loves	998
Jan.	9—The Italian Barber (Com.)	993
Jan.	12—The Midnight Marauder (Dr.)	392
Jan.	12—Help Wanted (Com.)	605

EDISON.

Dec.	2—The Cowpuncher's Glove	1000
Dec.	6—The Winning of Miss Langdon	995
Dec.	7—The Life of a Salmon	440
Dec.	7—Amateur Night	550
Dec.	9—The Captain's Bride	1000
Dec.	13—An Old Silver Mine in Peru (Ind.)	250
Dec.	13—A Mountain Maid (Dr.)	750
Dec.	14—Pigs is Pigs (Com.)	1000
Dec.	16—The Red Cross Seal (Dr.)
Dec.	20—The Police of New York City	995
Dec.	21—The Joke They Played on Bumptious	990
Dec.	23—A Christmas Carol	1000
Dec.	27—Eldora, the Fruit Girl (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	28—A Family of Vegetarians (Com.)	990
Dec.	30—The Romance of Hefty Burke (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	3—In the Days of Chivalry	1000
Jan.	4—Sleep, Gentle Sleep	990
Jan.	6—The Fire Department of New York City	400
Jan.	6—A Western Night	600
Jan.	10—The Test of Friendship (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	11—The Home of the Seal (Educational)	300
Jan.	11—The Gardener's Ladder (Com.)	700
Jan.	13—The Link that Held (Dr.)	960

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Nov.	8—Hank and Lank "Life Savers" (Com.)	560
Nov.	12—The Marked Trail (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	15—Love at First Sight (Com.)	978
Nov.	19—The Little Prospector (Dr.)	960
Nov.	22—That Popular Tune
Nov.	22—Hank and Lank
Nov.	26—A Western Woman's Way	1000
Nov.	29—The Tie That Binds	953
Dec.	3—"Circle C" Ranch Wedding
Dec.	6—Love's Awakening	1000
Dec.	10—A Cowboy's Vindication	950
Dec.	13—A Tangled Masquerade (Com.)	1000
Dec.	17—The Tenderfoot Messenger (Dr.)	997
Dec.	20—Hank and Lank	265
Dec.	20—The Greater Call	730
Dec.	21—The Bad Man's Christmas Gift	975
Dec.	27—Girls Will Be Boys (Com.)	1000
Dec.	31—A Gambler of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	3—The Redeemed Criminal	1000
Jan.	7—The Count and the Cowboys	1000
Jan.	10—The Sophmore's Romance (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	14—The Girl of the West (Dr.)	1000

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Oct.	29—The Life of Moliere (Dr.)	965
Nov.	1—Both Were Stung (Com.)	698
Nov.	1—Picturesque Majorca (Scenic)	269
Nov.	5—The Fishing Smack (Dr.)	961
Nov.	8—Pharoah; or, Israel in Egypt (Dr.)	1050
Nov.	12—Faithful Unto Death (Dr.)	693
Nov.	12—A Trip to the Blue Grotto, Capri, Italy (Scenic)	309
Nov.	15—Both Were Stung (Com.)	696
Nov.	15—Picturesque Majorca (Scenic)	276
Nov.	19—Lisbon, Before and During the Revolution (Scenic)	727
Nov.	19—Spanish Loyalty	280
Nov.	22—Cast Into the Flames (Dr.)	381
Nov.	22—A Woman's Wit (Com.)	595
Nov.	26—Samson's Betrayal	519
Nov.	26—Calino Travels as a Prince	489
Nov.	29—The Flat Next Door	722
Nov.	29—Tarascon on the Rhone	243
Dec.	3—Lured by a Phantom	712
Dec.	3—Nancy's Wedding Trip	273
Dec.	6—A Man of Honor	334
Dec.	6—Professor's Hat	171
Dec.	10—The Revolt	942
Dec.	13—The Phantom Rider	279
Dec.	13—Closed Gate	676
Dec.	17—Herod and the New Born King (Biblical)	965
Dec.	20—The Cinderella Girl (Dr.)	769
Dec.	20—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical)	220
Dec.	24—The Old Home (Dr.)	732
Dec.	24—Cain and Abel Biblical)	279
Dec.	27—The Adventuress (Dr.)	995
Dec.	31—The Doctor's Secretary (Dr.)	981
Jan.	3—The Artist's Pay Day	969
Jan.	7—The Woman Wins	945
Jan.	10—A Child's Plea (Dr.)	758
Jan.	10—The Hills of Corsica (Travelogue)	243
Jan.	14—A Simple Rustic Tale (Dr.)	958

KALEM CO.

		Feet
Nov.	25—The Roses of the Virgin (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	30—The Touch of a Child's Hand	870
Nov.	30—Up the Thames to Westminster	125
Dec.	2—Elder Alden's Indian Ward	945
Dec.	7—Rachel	1000
Dec.	9—The Rescue of Molly Finney	1007
Dec.	14—Seth's Temptation (Dr.)	955
Dec.	16—Her Indian Mother (Dr.)	995
Dec.	21—The Little Spreewald Maiden	985
Dec.	23—When Lovers Part	963
Dec.	28—The Girl Spy Before Vicksburg (War Dr.)	935
Dec.	30—The Stranger (Dr.)	1005
Jan.	4—The Bolted Door	975
Jan.	6—The Runaway Engine	955
Jan.	11—For Love of an Enemy (Dr.)	995
Jan.	13—The Heart of an Indian Mother (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN.

Nov.	10—The Mystery of the Torn Note (D.)	550
Nov.	10—The Gambler's Charm (Dr.)	450
Nov.	14—The Street Preacher (Dr.)	990
Nov.	17—Right in Front of Father (Com.)	990
Nov.	21—Caught by the Camera (Dr.)
Nov.	24—Romance of the Lazy K Ranch (D.)
Nov.	28—Shadows and Sunshine (Dr.)
Dec.	1—Spoony Sam (Com.)
Dec.	12—An Exile's Love (Dr.)	990
Dec.	15—The Musical Ranch (Dr.)
Dec.	19—The Dead Leter (Dr.)
Dec.	22—An American Count (Dr.)
Dec.	26—Making a Man of Him (Dr.)	990
Dec.	29—Blue Horse Mine (Dr.)	990
Jan.	2—Art and the Legacy	950
Jan.	5—His Last Parade	390
Jan.	5—A Mix in Masks	600
Jan.	5—The Crimson Scars	980
Jan.	5—Fire! Fire! Fire!	980
Jan.	9—Tag Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.)	935
Jan.	12—The Widow's Choice (Com.)	950

G. MELIES.

Nov.	3—Generous Customers (Com.)
Nov.	10—A Mountain Wife (Dr.)	986
Nov.	17—His Sergeant's Stripes (Dr.)	950
Nov.	24—The Cowboy's and the Bachelor Girl (Dr.)
Dec.	1—Pals (Dr.)
Dec.	8—What Great Bear Learned
Dec.	15—Old Norris' Gal
Dec.	22—A Western Welcome	980
Dec.	29—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.)	980
Jan.	12—The Owner of the "L. L." Ranch (Dr.)	980

PATHE.

Dec.	9—Saved in the Nick of Time	800
Dec.	9—Soap in His Eyes	184
Dec.	10—Her First Husband's Return	990
Dec.	12—In Her Father's Absence (Com.)	544
Dec.	12—The Julians	387
Dec.	14—Hoboes' Xmas (Com.)	550
Dec.	14—Charlie and Kitty in Brussels (Sc.)	400
Dec.	16—Little Snowdrop	1000
Dec.	17—Saved by Divine Providence (Dr.)	985
Dec.	19—Get Rich Quick	735
Dec.	19—Hunting Sea Lions in Tasmania	266
Dec.	21—The Runaway Motor Car	555
Dec.	21—Max Goes Ski-ing	430
Dec.	23—The Lucky Charm (Colored Fairy Tale)	607
Dec.	23—Betty's Fireworks	394
Dec.	24—Sunshine in Poverty Row	1000
Dec.	26—The Atonement (Da.)	656
Dec.	26—The Bowling Fiend (Com.)	344
Dec.	28—Running Away From a Fortune (American Com.)	540
Dec.	28—The American Fleet in French Waters (Topical)	125
Dec.	28—In Full Cry (Scenic)	331
Dec.	30—Catalan, the Minstrel (Dr.)	768
Dec.	30—Carnival of Japanese Firemen in Tokio (Sc.)	230
Dec.	31—The Yaqui Girl (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	2—The Misplaced Petticoat	790
Jan.	2—Dutch Kids	497
Jan.	4—The Cowboy's Innocence	994
Jan.	6—An Intrigue	997
Jan.	7—Love Under Difficulties	781
Jan.	7—The Funeral of Count Tolstoi	220
Jan.	9—The Evils of Betting (Dr.)	676
Jan.	9—In the Land of Monkeys and Snakes	276
Jan.	11—The Twin Cinderellas	705
Jan.	11—Dusty Rhodes Takes a Flight (C.)	249
Jan.	13—Max Is Almost Married (Com.)	572
Jan.	13—So Near but Not Quite (Com.)	420
Jan.	14—The Battle at Redwood (Dr.)	1000

SELIG.

Nov.	21—No Place Like Home (Com.)
Nov.	21—The Dull Razor (Com.)
Nov.	24—The Merry Wives of Windsor (D.)	1000
Nov.	28—The Queen of Hearts	1000
Dec.	1—The Stepmother	1000
Dec.	5—The Widow of Mill Creek Flat	1000
Dec.	8—In the Wilderness	1000
Dec.	12—A Tale of the Sea	1000
Dec.	15—County Fair (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	19—John Dough and the Cherub (Mystical)	1000
Dec.	22—Overland to Fremont	1000
Dec.	26—The Rustlers (Dr.)	990
Dec.	29—Iustinian and Theodora (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	2—The Argonauts	1000

		Feet
Jan.	5—Ramona's Father	1000
Jan.	9—Shadows of the Past (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	12—The Rival Dramatist	1000

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

G. Kleine.

Oct.	5—The Dishonest Steward (Dr.)	699
Oct.	5—City of a Hundred Mosques, Broussa, Asia Minor (Scenic)	296
Oct.	12—Foiled by a Cigarette (Dr.)	991
Oct.	19—In the Shadow of the Night (Dr.)	502
Oct.	19—Tunny Fishing Off Palermo, Italy (Ind.)	500
Oct.	26—The Signet Ring (Dr.)	868
Oct.	26—In the Spreewald (Scenic)	132
Nov.	2—Tragical Concealment (Dr.)	640
Nov.	2—Crossing the Andes (Scenic)	350
Nov.	9—Secret of the Cellar (Dr.)	788
Nov.	9—A Trip Through Scotland (Scenic)	217
Nov.	16—The Rival Barons (Dr.)	860
Nov.	16—An Alpine Retreat (Scenic)	142
Nov.	23—Behind a Mask (Dr.)	516
Nov.	23—Nantes (Scenic)	450
Nov.	30—The Return at Midnight	634
Nov.	30—Kamble Through Ceylon	319
Dec.	7—Death of Admiral Coligny	992
Dec.	5—On the Mexican Border
Dec.	8—Reggie's Engagement
Dec.	14—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.)	749
Dec.	14—Scenes in British India (Sc.)	253
Dec.	21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.)	676
Dec.	21—A Chamois Hunt	332
Dec.	28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.)	650
Dec.	28—Coaching in Devonshire, England (Travelogue)	348
Jan.	4—A Lock of Hair	978
Jan.	11—Washed Ashore (Dr.)	670
Jan.	11—Woodcarving in Brienz	320

VITAGRAPH.

Nov.	5—On the Mountains of Kentucky (D.)	978
Nov.	8—A Tale of a Hat (Com.)	954
Nov.	11—The Nine of Diamonds (Dr.)	990
Nov.	12—Jean Goes Fishing (Dr.)	988
Nov.	15—Drumsticks (Dr.)	998
Nov.	18—A Modern Courtship (Com.)
Nov.	18—The Bum and the Bomb (Com.)
Nov.	19—Francesca Da Rimini (Dr.)
Nov.	22—Suspicion (Dr.)
Nov.	25—A Four-Footed Pest (Com.)
Nov.	25—The Statue Dog
Nov.	26—Love, Luck and Gasoline (Dr.)
Nov.	29—A Woman's Love (Dr.)
Dec.	2—Jack Fat and Jim Slim at Coney Island (Com.)	951
Dec.	3—The Poacher's Wife (Dr.)	1001
Dec.	6—A Tin-Type Romance (Com.)	996
Dec.	9—He Who Laughs Last (Com.)	927
Dec.	10—The Color Sergeant's Horse (Dr.)	978
Dec.	13—The Law and the Man (Dr.)	1010
Dec.	16—Playing at Divorce (Dr.)
Dec.	16—The International Motor Boat Race (Sc.)
Dec.	17—A Dixie Mother (Dr.)
Dec.	20—The Light in the Window	997
Dec.	23—Clancy	995
Dec.	24—Jean and the Waif	989
Dec.	27—In Neighboring Kingdoms (Dr.)	995
Dec.	30—Crazy Apples (Com.)	988
Dec.	31—Where the Wind Blows (Dr.)	987
Jan.	3—All Is Fair In Love and War	973
Jan.	6—The Misses Finch and Nephew Billy	979
Jan.	7—The Old Water Jar	984
Jan.	10—Doctor Cupid (Com.)	987
Jan.	13—Water Lilies (Dr.)	991
Jan.	14—Coward or Hero (Dr.)	975

INDEPENDENT FILMS

The following films were released week of January 9th by the Empire Film Co., 150 East 14th Street, New York:

Jan.	9—Their First Misunderstanding (Imp)	995
Jan.	9—An Erring Son's Awakening (Yan)	1000
Jan.	9—A Mother's Portrait (Eclair)	930
Jan.	9—An Arizona Romance (American)	1000
Jan.	10—An Indian Trapper's Prize (Bison)	1000
Jan.	10—The District Attorney (Powers)	521
Jan.	10—A Tip to Husbands (Powers)	442
Jan.	10—Everybody Saves Father (Than)	426
Jan.	10—Only Girl in Camp (Thanhouser)	571
Jan.	11—Tweedledum Pays His Bills (Amb)	461
Jan.	11—Clouds and Ice Fields (Ambrosio)	475
Jan.	11—Sleepy Hollow (Nestor)	1000
Jan.	11—Bill's Widow (Champion)	1000
Jan.	11—A Letter to the Stork (Atlas)	950
Jan.	11—Hour of Fate (Reliance)	956
Jan.	12—Johanna of Briganza (Itala)	975
Jan.	12—The Empty Shell (Imp)	1000
Jan.	12—The Borrowed Flat (American)	500
Jan.	12—Lucy's Lover (American)	500
Jan.	13—The Girl and the Burglar (Solax)	1000
Jan.	13—The Vote that Counted (Than)	1000
Jan.	13—Beyond Pardon (Yankee)	1000
Jan.	13—Bill as a Jockey (Lux)	500
Jan.	13—That's My Name (Lux)	500
Jan.	13—The Creek Claim (Bison)	990
Jan.	14—On Kentucky Soil (Reliance)	1000
Jan.	14—The Homeless Boy (Gt. Northern)	1000
Jan.	14—The Recall (Itala)	970
Jan.	14—Monte Cristo (Powers)	1000

ALL LICENSED EXHIBITORS

who are thinking of taking steps to prove to their own satisfaction that Independent films are the best money-bringers in the business, are herewith asked to send for my Loose-Leaf Supplementary list of films. Judging from the record number of Power, Edison and Motiograph machines I have sold during the past two weeks to licensed exhibitors, the tidal wave toward Independence is greater than it has been in the past year. Slip me a line and let's get busy building up that business of yours!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

HEADQUARTERS:
196-198 Lake Street, CHICAGO
MINNEAPOLIS OMAHA

"The biggest and best film renter in the world"

PATENTS

"BE INDEPENDENT."

Moving Picture Devices a Specialty.

Charles Lowell Howard

PATENT ATTORNEY

706-707-708 M'Gill Bldg., WASHINGTON D. C.

Announcement, Advertising, Travelogue, Recitation

and slides for every purpose made to order

GEO. J. GOLDTHORPE & CO.
244 West 14th Street New York

HARBACH'S BARGAINS

Powers Cameragraph No. 5 for $115, Edison Kinetoscope $45, Edison Model B new $175, Optigraph No. 4 $45, $215 Motiograph new $165, Motion Picture Machine $35. Many other Machines, etc., at Reduced Prices.
Pathe's Passion Play, fine, set Low.
Get Sup. 33 of Many Bargains in Machines, Accessories, etc.
Motion Picture Machines Wanted.
HARBACH & CO.,
809 Filbert Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Advertisers want results. When writing to them it is our due that you mention The Moving Picture News.

HALLBERG

THE "ECONOMIZER MAN"

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. N 1

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars. ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS, 908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., Chicago.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

REPAIRED

by skilled mechanics at short notice and reasonable prices. Work guaranteed.

Supplies of All Kinds.

CHAS. E. DRESSLER,
388 2nd Ave., City, near 23rd St.
Take elevator.

STOCKTAKING SALE

New Songs and New Slides.
$3.00 per set, music 10c. per copy extra, as long as they last.

Baby Mine.
Stella Dear.
Suppose We Do.
Rosy Cheeks.
Will You Love Me When the Honeymoon Is Over.
Dear Old Tennesee.
May Donahue.
When the Old Oaken Bucket Was New.
Smiling Eyes.
Jessamine.
As the Train Rolled Away.
Valley Flower.
Bye-bye Sweetheart.
Can't You See the Rainbow in the Sky.
I Wonder if You Love Me.

LEVI COMPANY, Inc.

24 Union Square :: :: New York, N. Y.

COMING MON., JAN. 23
THE CONVICT'S LAST CHANCE
A YANKEE WONDERFILM
FRIDAY, JAN. 27
THE BIGGEST FEATURE OF THE YEAR
A SON OF OLD GLORY
MASSIVE EGYPTIAN, SPECTACULAR DRAMA
POSTERS, BULLETINS OUT NOW—WRITE

YANKEE FILMS

344 East 32nd Street, New York

DO NOT FAIL TO RENEW YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TO THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS. YOU SHOULD NOT MISS A COPY.

TWO PIN

machines changed to one pin. Improved easy running, long wearing Cams, Stars, etc., etc.

E. W. LAVEZZI,
3042 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.

CATALOGUES FOR MOVING PICTURE MANUFACTURERS

Unique Printers - Charles Francis Press

30 West 13th Street. Printers of the M. P. News

IMP NEWS

Here's the final scene in the splendid Imp release of Monday, January 23rd, entitled

"The Dream." It tells the story of a young husband who grows weary of his sweet little wife until he has a dream which brings him to his senses. The dream is mighty well conceived and excellently well executed. Imps are getting better and better every week. You ought to have every blessed Imp that is released. The only way to get them is to keep everlastingly at your exchange till you win out! Don't be satisfied with asking your exchange once or twice. Do it every week, the same as we keep ding-donging away at you!

And here's one of the several thrilling scenes in our Imp release of Thursday, January 26th, entitled "Phone 1707 Chester." The wife unexpectedly walks into a banquet room just when her husband is drinking a toast out of a woman's slipper. This is followed by a novel situation in a Turkish bath establishment. The whole film tells a great story, points a good moral, and has a happy ending. Begin to demand it to-day. And keep it up!

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

"The Vote That Counted," 1911's Best Reel, Out Friday the 13th?

2-4-U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!

The Thanhouser 2-a-Week

RELEASE OF TUESDAY, JAN. 24th

A Study in Pathos

When Love Was Blind

is one of those reels that makes our advertising department gasp in despair, for fear that it can't be adequately described. On the screen, at the first-print inspection, appears a wondrous, thrilling story—so true-to-life, so realistic—that it leaves even the jaded film-workers speechless. And the ad man must go below and write WHY it dazed and dazzled that first-print audience! Very often he can. But at other times, he can't. This is one of those times! So he'd like you TO SEE THE PICTURE for the reason he's unable to give. No. 179. Code Word, WHEN.

Scene from "WHEN LOVE WAS BLIND"

Scene from "PROMPT PAYMENT"

RELEASE OF FRIDAY, JAN. 27

A Celebrated "Thanhouser 2-In-1"

Prompt Payment

will bring prompt laughs from your patrons—the best kind of payment you can get. For when patrons laugh they feel kindly toward you and your house and it's even likely they'll tell their friends about the funny film they saw there. ENCOURAGE YOUR AUDIENCE TO SMILE. And do it with "Prompt Payment." It cinches your success.

AND ON THE SAME REEL:

Stealing a Ride

is a pretty little story of a pair of lost children, a sort of "Babes-In-the-Woods" modernized. The youngsters who go astray are two as lovable children as ever appeared in the pictures, and your women patrons' hearts will go right out to 'em. No. 180. Code Word, Payride.

The Thanhouser News the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to PUBLISHER, THANHOUSER NEWS, NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches in depth, with glass and easel (6 feet high) GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY-DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN.

For system's sake address PHOTOFRAME DEPT.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

2-4-U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!

GETTING "Old Curiosity Shop" Dickens' Gem, Out Friday the 20th?

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 3

January 21
1911

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

SCENE FROM
"THE COMMAND FROM GALILEE"
RELIANCE RELEASE, FEBRUARY 4th

GREAT NORTHERN

The Trunk Mystery Detective

"THE TRUNK MYSTERY"

Release for Saturday, January 21

A more thrilling, sensational and intensely interesting detective feature film has never been released. The kind of film that brings capacity houses. You're a loser if you don't get this big-hit headliner.

Release for Saturday, January 28

MR. MUGGINS HAS HIS SEWING DONE

A smashing hit comedy—bound to get many laughs.

and

TRIUMPH OF INTELLIGENCE

A hilarious trick comedy of how brain conquers muscle.

By all means get this reel of genuine fun.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

GREAT NORTHERN FILMS CO. COPENHAGEN

GREAT NORTHERN FILMS CO. COPENHAGEN

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY.

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES COMPANY

RELIANCE PICTORIAL PLAYS

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

ACTED BY AN ALL-STAR STOCK COMPANY

"THE LAST LAUGH"

Released Saturday, January 28

The caprice of time which changes the currents of life and transports the characters from luxurious surroundings to the ice-bound fields of Alaska.

"A BRASS BUTTON"

Released Wednesday, February 1

A clever detective and a dishonest servant, with strong evidence pointing to her master as the culprit. Well worked out.

"The Command From Galilee"

RELEASED SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 4

The Most Magnificent Film Ever Produced!

SPECTACULAR FIRE SCENES! 100 PEOPLE IN THE CAST!

TWO REELS PER WEEK—WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY

Place your order with your Exchange

CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES, 1 Union Square, New York City

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

American Releases

Release Monday, January 23rd.

"When a Man's Single"

A comedy of a man who did not like married life—at the start. The finish is a scream.
Length approx. 980 feet

Release Thursday, January 26th.

"Bertie's Bandit"

A Western Comedy. Made in Arizona. An American screech.
Length approx. 985 feet

Release Monday, January 30th.

"The Genius"

A Comedy Drama. Replete with dramatic situations tempered with a few laughs. A good reel.
Length approx. 965 feet

Release Thursday, February 2nd.

"The Mission in the Desert"

A Western Feature Drama. A sensation. A reel you will repeat and repeat. Made in Arizona.
Length approx. 985 feet

ALL Independent Exchanges Buy American Film.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY

BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK = CHICAGO, ILL.

Our films sold exclusively through the M. P. Distributing and Sales Co.

AT LAST

A mechanically Perfect Machine for the projection of STEADY FLICKERLESS MOTION PICTURES.

THE PAINTED ON THE WALL SORT only to be had with

THE MOTIOGRAPH

A MARVEL OF SIMPLICITY combining Beauty of DESIGN and ACCESSIBILITY of every Gear and Screw. Gears all enclosed.

THIS IS THE MACHINE—THE MOTIOGRAPH

THAT STANDS COMPARISON, point for point, with every standard machine on the market under the most expert investigation—AND IS ALWAYS THE VICTOR.

The 1911 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH soon ready. Send for catalog and name of nearest dealer.

Manufactured and Jobbed by

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO.

564 West Randolph St. Chicago, Ill.

J. H. Hallberg, Agt. 36 E. 23rd Street, New York City

Edw. H. Kemp, 833 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

J. F. Brockliss, Agt. London, Paris and Berlin.

BISON FILMS

FIVE REELS A WEEK

TUESDAY---BISON. WEDNESDAY---AMBROSIO. THURSDAY---ITALA. FRIDAY---BISON. SATURDAY---ITALA

"THE RED MAN'S WRATH"

Released Tuesday, January 24

To avenge his squaw the Indian pursues the fleeing desperado with savage determination. Wounded, he falls off his horse, but takes up the chase. His efforts are rewarded and the two are locked in mortal combat in which the Indian is victor.

ITALA RELEASES
"THE REVENGING PICTURE"
Thursday, January 26
"MY SON IS GUILTY"
Saturday, January 28

2 WESTERN REELS

"TRIALS OF BUD BROWN"

Released Friday, January 27

The college youth's ability to take care of himself wins the friendship of the cowboys, with the exception of the camp bully, whom Bud soundly thrashes, and who later nearly ends the existence of the young man.

AMBROSIO RELEASE
Wednesday, January 25
"A WIFE'S CALVARY"
"TWEEDLEDUM WITHIN A CASK"
Two Subjects on One Reel

Sold Exclusively Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO., 1 Union Square, New York City

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone: 3790 Oxford

CONSPIRACY

IS THE KEYNOTE OF TRUST EXISTENCE.
SLANDER AND ABUSE THROUGH UNDER-STRAPPERS, STOCK IN TRADE.
TREACHERY IS REWARDED WHILE HONESTY OF PURPOSE IS CONDEMNED.
THE UNLAWFUL COMBINATIONS WILL COME INTO THEIR OWN IF YOU WILL

BE INDEPENDENT

TRY THE

SWAAB FILM SERVICE COMPANY
338 Spruce Street Philadelphia, Pa.

STOCKTAKING SALE

New Songs and New Slides.
$3.00 per set, music 10c. per copy extra, as long as they last.

Baby Mine.
Stella Dear.
Suppose We Do.
Rosy Cheeks.
Will You Love Me When the Honeymoon Is Over.
Dear Old Tennesee.
May Donahue.
When the Old Oaken Bucket Was New.
Smiling Eyes.
Jessamine.
As the Train Rolled Away.
Valley Flower.
Bye-bye Sweetheart.
Can't You See the Rainbow in the Sky.
I Wonder if You Love Me.

LEVI COMPANY, Inc.
24 Union Square :: :: New York, N. Y.

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

European Agents: INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., Breams Building, Chancery Lane, London, E. C.

Chicago Representative: J. J. Sullivan. 866 Graceland Ave. 'Phone Graceland 5053

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV January 21, 1911 Number 3

Notes of the Week

OUR FRONT COVER ILLUSTRATION.

"The Command from Galilee" Is a Wonderful Subject.

On Saturday, February 4, a Reliance subject entitled "The Command from Galilee" will be released, the grandeur of which is sensationally startling, embracing wonderful photographic effects, a unique plot and marvelous staging.

It deals with the French revolution and the uprising of the peasants against the tyranny and oppression of the nobles. Marie Gautier, poverty-stricken, is ministering to her mother, dying from hunger and privation, and is about to give her a cup of hot broth when the Duke of Lorraine, accompanied by his wife, enters the hut, taking refuge from the cold, while his broken carriage is being repaired. Against the entreaties of Marie, the cup of broth is taken from her hand by the Duke, and disposed of with great relish by the chilled Duchess, both of whom are unmoved by the pitiful sight of the sick woman.

A postillion announces that the carriage is ready, and with mock courtesy the regal pair depart, leaving Marie in anguish, without a sou and with no means of making more broth. Her mother dies, and Marie is filled with a burning hatred at the act which deprived her beloved parent from receiving the last earthly attempt to alleviate her suffering.

The People Revolt.

The mutterings of discontentment among the peasants have been disdainfully ignored by their titled masters, until finally a leader springs forth, and the revolution is on. With increasing numbers the mob attacks the mansions and palaces. Iron gates snap like glass before the mighty battering rams. Heavy doors are converted to matchwood. The torch is brought into play, and the frenzied mob leaves a trail of conflagration and destruction in its wake. The terrified nobles, fleeing for their lives, are cut down and their costly garments torn from their backs. Some are thrown into a large cistern.

The Duke of Lorraine is in his palace when his quaking servant rushes to him with the awful news! The mob is attacking the doors! He calls for his sword, and as the blade is placed in his hand, he meets the attacking horde armed with clubs, pitchforks, scythes, and other homely weapons.

A Desperate Battle.

The battle is terrific and thrilling. The mob finally breaks and runs before the fury of his onslaught. The respite is but a moment, but sufficient for him to grasp the Duchess by the hand and escape. When the mob returns, with added confidence in increased numbers, their quarry has disappeared. Angered to a high pitch by being baffled, the servants are attacked, sensational chases taking place from room to room. The beautiful draperies, curtains and appointments are set on fire, and soon the place is a mass of flames, with the peasants dancing and shrieking in the lurid glare, presenting a weird and awful picture as they pass on to the next house.

Through the cellar, into the open, flies the Duke and his wife. Skulking and dodging, he makes his way to Marie's hut. Her husband has joined the mob and she is alone. Begging for shelter and protection, with eyes starting from their sockets with fright, the Duchess presents a far different appearance then when last visiting Marie's humble home.

Marie Plans Vengeance.

A cry of exultation escape Marie as she recognizes them. At last her vengeance would be satisfied! Passionately she reminds them of the wanton act of cruelty they perpetrated, and gloatingly she tells them that she will turn them over to the mob which will tear them to pieces! In despair, with the last hope gone, the Duchess drops to her knees in prayer, taking from her bodice a small crucifix and gazing at it.

The crucifix! To Marie's simple, religious mind it carries a wave of reverence and awe. To her the royalty has seemed a class of human demons. Now she sees this woman whom she hates worshipping the same God—a sister of the same religion!

"The Command from Galilee."

Standing out clear in her mind is the command from Galilee—to love her enemies and return good for evil. She must save this woman. Quickly she raises the hopes of the pair, and secretes them in an alcove. The act is none too soon, for thundering at the door are the relentless pursuers. Marie deliberately lies! She has not seen the fugitives! The mob passes out.

The Duke and Duchess, disguised in peasant clothes, are guided by Marie's husband to safety, which is reached after many difficulties and dangers. Before leaving Marie, the Duke tears the jeweled rings from his fingers and presents them to her, but she declines them. The Duchess proffers her crucifix, and this Marie accepts.

A Wonderful Film.

"The Command from Galilee" will, no doubt, prove one of the greatest attractions ever seen in a moving picture theater. It is simply overwhelming in the grandeur of its staging and effects. Scene after scene is shown, either of which would individually be considered a grand climax to a spectacular film. Photographically the film is perfect.

M. P. P. CO. MEETS DEFEAT.

On January 9th his Honor, Judge E. Henry Lacombe, in the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, heard affidavits and argument on a motion to reopen the matter of preliminary injunction in the cases against the Yankee Film Co. and against William Steiner, Herbert L. Miles, Joseph Miles, Charles V. Henkel, and the Atlas Film Co. Complainant's affidavit on the original motion for injunction has charged infringement by the use of the Wagner "Battleship" camera and a Brederson camera, but the defendants, although believing that the cameras were non-infringing cameras, had not been able to persuade either camera man to disclose the interior construction of his camera to them or to the Court, and the Court in its opinion filed on January 3rd had commented on the non-production of the cameras, and had granted the injunction apparently in the belief that the two cameras were Gaumont or "beater" type cameras. On the motion to reopen, heard on January 9th, the defendants were able to show, and did show, the Wagner "Battleship" camera to the Court and described in affidavits so much of it as was necessary, the camera having been shown for the first time to the affiants on January 7th and 8th. Strenuous argument too was made against the power of the Court to impound films or pictures even when made on infringing cameras, and the further point was made that infringement by the Brederson camera had not been proved and that the defendant's Gaumont cameras had never been used by them, and that the injunction against renting or selling the films should not extend to the carrying out of existing contracts even where the films had been made on infringing cameras.

On January 10th the Court decided all of the above contentions in favor of the defendants, but entered an order for injunction, apparently based solely on the possession of Gaumont cameras by the defendants. The order as asked for by the complainant and the order as actually entered by the Court are both given below. The order as entered by the Court expressly excepts the Wagner "Battleship" camera from the injunction and all pictures and films made on that camera. It makes no mention of the Brederson camera. It dose not impound any pictures or films, even those made on infringing cameras, and it does not enjoin the renting or selling or otherwise disposing of any pictures or films, positive or negative, in fulfillment of contracts specifically made for sale or renting prior to the date of the order, even where such films had been made by the use of any infringing camera.

Defendants gave notice of intention to appeal even from the narrow and restricted order of injunction entered by the Court.

The affidavits filed by the defendants showed that the Yankee and Atlas films are all now made by the use of the Wagner "Battleship" camera, and have been for several months, and the action of the Court expressly sanctions that business as entirely free and clear of all infringement of the Edison reissue patent 12037. This is the first direct holding of the Court that any commercially used camera does not infringe, since the holding to that effect as to the original Biograph camera in the suit against the American Mutoscope and the Biograph Co.

In the case against the Champion Film Co. the complainant asked for the same order that it asked for in the case against the Yankee Film Co., and the counsel defending that company under the circumstances of the case refused either to consent to or to oppose the entry of the order, but reserved the right to move to resettle it if at any time it should become worth while. This the Court permitted by adding to the order at the end the words "Without prejudice to a motion to resettle."

The orders asked for and the orders granted were published in last issue.

POWERS CAMERAGRAPH.

Mr. Nicholas Power, Mrs. Power and Miss Power, we understand, will leave for their winter vacation on January 21st, visiting Panama, New Barbados, San Lucie, Martinique, St. Thomas, Havana, and the Bermudas. They expect to be absent three months. Our readers will no doubt be favored with news of his itinerary from time to time. We wish them a pleasant time and renewed health and vigor.

POSSIBILITIES IN CINEMATOGRAPHY.

Special Points for Orthochromatizing.

There are many ways of preparing color screen plates such as mechanical printing, or a combination of mechanical methods and dyeing. I am only going to mention here the dyeing, where we only use the dye on an ordinary photographic plate or film to obtain our three color filters. After a lot of experimenting we found the simplest way was to fix the plate or film in clean hyposulphite of soda, wash in running water until all trace of the soda was gone, then place in the dye bath until the required density was obtained. If you have had experience or noticed trade filters that are sold, you can tell the density very quickly, if not you want to have a colored chart and look through the filter once more and again at a chart (red, green, blue) during the time it's dyeing, and if the red filter shows the blue black, what we say cuts off the blue, or to be more scientific, absorbs the blue when finished, you take the red filter out of the dyeing bath, slightly wash and put it in a place free from dust to dry, then it is ready for use. You do exactly the same with the blue filter, and while you are preparing the blue filter look, through it at the color chart and see that it cuts off the red, that is to say, to the average eye the red will look black; then slightly wash and dry in a place free from dust. Do exactly the same with the green filter; you want to see that it is the same density as the red and blue filters when you look through it at the chart, and you will notice the chart will have a green tint all over the colors. Should you have any of the filters too dense, you can easily put them under running water and trim them down just the same. If they are not dense enough, put them in the dye again. Of course only by experience one can tell the best color and density of filters, for the orthochromatic sensitized film they are using. There are so many color sensitizers, such as pinacyanol, pinaverdol, pinchrone homocol, decyanin erythrosine, and a host of others, all having certain good qualities, but as we mentioned in our former papers, orthochrome T formula, which is one of the most reliable, and some very accurate photography has been produced with this sensitizer. We will keep to this one at present, especially for obtaining moving pictures in their natural colors, for in this color sensitizer you have the best given color sensitiveness throughout the entire spectrum and not like many color sensitizers which give only a special sensitiveness to a limited region of the spectrum. The spectrum composition of colors is given as follows: reds often reflect light from the red end of the spectrum, but scarlet aniline dyes reflect also a little violet or ultra-violet; orange colors heflect all the reds and yellows of the spectrum and some green. Brown is simply dark orange plus black, yellows reflect red, yellow and green. Most yellow colors are as complex as this, there are some pure dull yellows, such as mixtures of dyes, such as scarlet and naphthol green. Deep yellows do not contain all the green, and lemon yellows contains little blue. Green may correspond to the whole or part of the green of the spectrum. Blue-green reflects a little blue-yellow; green, the yellow and perhaps a little red and pale green, a larger part of the spectrum including red and some blue. Blue is often very complex, usually it reflects all the violet and blue with proportions of red and violet. It is of vital importance this application of selective filtration of light for photographing moving objects in natural colors also of the othochromation of the negative sensitive film. Good filters can be made as follows:

Red.

Fuchsine.....1 grain
Boiling water.....1000 cc

Green.

A { Strong solution acid green / Strong solution Tartrazine } equal parts
5 grams of A
Cold water.....1000 cc

Blue.

Methylene Blue.....1 gram
Cold water.....1000 cc

MOVING PICTURES AND THE EAST SIDE CHILDREN.

By M. I. MacDonald.

Roars of applause, from a hundred diminutive throats and hands, greeted the second section of the moving picture which was being thrown upon the canvas.

The room was filled with children of from three years of age to fifteen, and the picture which elicited such vociferous applause was one of the blood and thunder sort, highly exciting, and of no moral benefit to the onlooker.

To children of educated parents, children whose lives had been filled with refining influences, and before whom moral ideals had been set, the picture might have proved a good object lesson; but to those little ones living on the East Side of our great city, where, 'tis true, there are many of the refined poor living also, the scene of contemplated murder, the throwing of dice to decide who was to be the first to point the deadly weapon at the life of the other, the atmosphere of the saloon where the sickening scene was being enacted, it was but fuel to feed the flame which smoldered in the little breasts, from ancestry tainted with just such shooting, stabbing ribaldry as was depicted upon the canvas.

It was into a little five-cent picture house I had sauntered, which drew my thoughts thitherward. Interested to know what was being meted out to the juvenile population in the way of moving picture entertainment, of a Saturday afternoon, over on the East Side. On Saturday afternoon when the children are not in school, they naturally look about for some entertainment: the cheapest is preferred, therefore into these five-cent picture houses flock children of all nationalities. English speaking or otherwise, it is immaterial, for they come to look at pictures, and what does a child-mind delight in more than in pictures. Any thing that is a picture, and especially a motion picture will hold the attention of a child; then why not make a special effort to have the Saturday pictures wholesome and good.

The picture following the one which I mentioned, and which I waited to see in order to make comparison as to choice of appreciation, was taken from Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream." This picture, though far superior from an artistic and moral standpoint to the other, to use a slang expression, "fell flat." The eager tension which marked the attitudes of the children during the passing of the preceding picture, had now given way either to listless indifference or fretful shifting about in their seats. There was a distinct hungering for something akin to the last scene pervading the darkness of the little theater.

Even supposing there had been an appreciation of the second picture shown, I cannot say that there was anything of particular value to the childish mind in it any more than in an ordinary fairy tale, and, besides, why force tragedy upon the minds of children? The tragic side of life opens up for most of these children soon enough, with the vividness of reality, without filling their little minds with such unwholesomeness veiled in romance.

Another house which I visited in the same vicinity, but whose prices were higher, was dealing out to the public some real wholesome fun: comedy of a most amusing and wholesome nature was being enacted upon the canvas. To be sure there was nothing of an educational nature, but at intervals we can afford to relax from the more dignified attitude of life to bathe our tired brains in good hearty laughter. It is good for the children to laugh too, and there was some children in this house also, though the poorer classes, whose welfare in amusement should be most carefully guarded for the good of future generations, are bound to flock to the cheaper houses on account of the limited amount allowed them for amusement.

Why not keep Saturday in the five-cent houses for the children? Why not see to it that nothing but tthe most wholesome kind of picures be shown on that day of all days in the week when the children run loose, looking for something to amuse them. It seem to me such an easy thing to put on the program for that day pictures altogether of a wholesome nature, and pictures which the children would like. Vary them by all means, as was remarked to me, "We can't have Sunday school pictures all the time." No, but we can, without having "Sunday school pictures," have pictures which have some moral recommendation and which at least do not tend to arouse the baser passions in the child.

For the adults we have not quite as much concern, but even some of them are nothing more than children, with minds absorbent but undiscriminating. The tendency in all theaters is to appeal to the popular taste—the business is more remunerative in this way. But why not convert the popular taste instead of perverting it? When will the public entertainers in the way of theatrical managers cease to be beasts of prey?

The Mortimer Film Cleaner, invented by Frederick E. Mortimer, of Portland, Me., whose advertisement appears in this issue, has received some very flattering testimonials from managers and operators throughout the country, and we would advise all who are interested to send for their booklet.

NEW THEATER FOR SAVANNAH, GA.

During the recent visit to this city, Mr. F. T. Montgomery and his partner, Mr. M. C. Eberstein, were very busy buying entire new equipment for a modern photoplay theater nearing completion in Savannah, Ga. No expense is being spared to make this an up-to-date house in every particular. Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports that along with other goods, he is furnishing 404 high class opera chairs from his Indiana factory for this theater.

WATCHING THE PICTURES.

By H. Jeanval.

	Linear Feet.
July	282,750
Aug.	287,958
Sept.	291,948
Oct.	309,527

Film statistics are difficult to get along certain lines, the industry being as yet in its infancy. For example, although a great deal of film is being exported from this country, no reliable figures are obtainable, the government figures being for "photographic goods" as a whole. Yet these figures tell the tell, which I am trying from all sorts of places to unravel. Let anyone read the following and see if Film is not written between the lines. Exports, "Photographic Goods," read thus:

For the ten months ending Oct., 1910.....	$4,803,751
" " " " " " 1909.....	3,453,971
" " " " " " 1908.....	1,083,613

In other words, the photographic exports in one year, 1908-1909, increased nearly 350%, whilst from 1908 to 1910 the increase was well nigh 500%. Verbum Sap.

The little table at the head shows the linear feet of moving picture films remaining in warehouse for the months indicated in 1910. Any manufacturer who will kindly assist me with such data as may help in disentangling piles of foreign statistics, will deeply oblige. Moreover he will help in a very important point, from his own viewpoint—the placing of America in her true place as a film producer. The place of the United States in this field is not to be neglected by foresighted men.

The synopsis of the Imp's pretty film, "The Empty Shell," speaks of "the mounted police." To all appearances the scene is laid in Province of Quebec, where there is no such thing. Whoever stimulates violin playing in a moving picture ought never to forget "to stop" the strings. A motionless left hand grabing the neck of the instrument is ridiculous—while supposed to be playing.

Itala, you must mend your ways—we admire and appreciate your work ,but the crowd wants to understand it. The finest work is no use if folk cannot follow the story. Your sub-titles are not lucid. In "Joanna of Braganza," what happened to the hero after he kissed his wife and child and went to the wars? was a subject that led to the wildest conclusions. You tell your screen story superbly, but you don't inform the audience as to what it is all about. I regret to see some carelessness too, "troop" is never spelled "troupe," nor "years" "jears." It is maddening to see such blots on works of art.

Suppose a man gets into the water and is saved and re-saved a few times—he wearing shoes—don't you think, Thanhouser, he'd leave some damp footprints when he landed?

Say, Solax, "which the (she) recognizes," is a rotten mistake in "The Girl and the Burglar." The letters are big enough. Besides with that style of sub-titles we are accustomed to look for strict accuracy.

I don't see why Powers need put on "Monte Cristo" "Approved by the National Board of Censorship," when they passed Pathe's "Battle at Redwood." Whoever passed that reel isn't much of a censor—without the word has evolved a new meaning.

I hope Pathe will understand the spirit in which I write, but truth is truth. Yo do not realize this is America. Your films lack the American spirt. and when you tackle Western, or situations like "A Cowboy's Innocence," this is evident all over. As I have said before, I say again: Your films look like translations. I am free to confess some of our people make "howling hashes" of some French subjects, but they are staged, etc., here. You are in the country. If I am not much mistaken one of your films in one part had a New York wagon, whilst further on the telegraph poles were such as I have seen in France. In other words, it was a cinematographic pot-pourri, or mayhap a better word is hodge-podge. Again I must vigorously protest against such things as occur in "The Battle at Redwood" where a man is tomahawked and scalped in plain view on the screen. The audience shuddered, and rightly. This is not the first torture you have put on the screen of late. The high standing of the old time Pathe and the fine scenic and educational films you have produced, makes an old admirer hate to see you producing such things. Where is that delicacy yet strength, that splendid innate power, combined with all that spells success of former days? Quien sabe?

An attempt is being made, it is said, to destroy or sell all the old patent models at Washington. Amongst these are many notable electric devices. Here is the cloven-foot of the enemy again. Once these things are got rid of. Oh! what a glorious chance for some wise man to claim first patents. I foresee "Wizards" by the score who will spring up and show how they invented everything that has a dollar in it. Smash the models and how the Trust will yelp in unholy chorus. Brother Friese-Greene keep your weather eye open.

Moving pictures have been accused of a good many things, but it remained for Missouri to discover a new and novel change. Missouri cannot get men for her farms at $30 a month. There is a man-famine in the land. Why? Men cannot resist the moving picture, they love to see the Imp dancing, Bison frisking, American's tales, Reliance's dramas; they will not away from Ambrosio, Itala and Cines in their beauty, nor Great Northern in its virility; nor Powers and his home scenes and Thanhouser's poems; nor the red-blooded yarns of Atlas and Yankee with Nestor's good ones; our friends are too much for them. No farm for them where there's no moving picture show. What has the Missouri farmers done, why they are buying phonographs! No more the lure of drama and comedy on the screen. The tired hired man will now be lulled by Norma, Faust, II Trovatore, La Vestale, and La Sonambula, or even Wagnerian flights as voiced by Melba, Schumann-Heinck, Bonci, Caruso, or Tetrazzini. Poor moving pictures and the city's wicked wiles! Now will you be good? Meanwhile we will watch the fray, this rumor tells of; watch this grim fight between "canned" music and life on the screen. Watch with bated breath, yet with a sort of smug satisfaction in feeling phonographs may serve for slumber songs, but moving pictures keep folk mighty wide-awade.

A Cine Tour Through Mexico

By J. A. B.

"Mexico? Oh, yes, I was all through that country way down by Arizona and El Paso, and went to the bull-fight at Juarez! Nix on that desert country for mine."

This is an average American's idea of the republic to the south, and tallies pretty closely with his smile of unbelief when you remind him that the geographica larea of Canada is greater than that of the United States. There is no place on earth where lack of knowledge of other lands is more deplorable than in the States, and it has remained for that most modern educating force—moving pictures—to teach the American that Mexico is something more than a side-track out of Texas.

Armed with a (non-infringing) camera into whose hidden mechano-mystery none might look save the faithful, we were carried into the southland over the line of the Mexican National Railroad, first into a desert that seemed endless and merciless. The first twelve hours we remained in glorious oblivion of all things without, though acutely conscious of a sandy thirst within, and had a kindly feeling toward the Pullman Company. The well-known courtesy of Mexican officials to camera men was ours in great measure. The observation platform was given us for our sole use (we are not fond of the old system of riding the cow-catcher). There was nothing to see, and we saw it, as far as Aguas Calientes. Here we got our first glimpse of real Mexican life, and with some hesitancy brought out the "view-box." From this to Mexico City the guide tells of many historic associations. We pointed the lens at the place of Maximilian's execution, but left the scene to be featured by a Selig or Pathe—we were not looking for "box-office attractions" or "Films d'Art."

Near Zacatecas it got noised abroad that the moving picture men were on the train, and the engine got so puffed up it blew off a cylinder head. The next 300 miles was made behind a freight engine driven by a red-headed Swede named Tim O'Gorman.

Street scenes in Mexico City were so fascinating the index finger on the camera fairly raced around the dial until 300 feet of peons and parks and Indians was reeled off and stowed away.

Everywhere we were struck with the privileges accorded a camera man. An instance of this occurred at Toluca, where we were taking the races during the earlier festivities of the Centennial. The governor of the state ordered his aides to keep back the throngs on each side of the straightaway track, as the great horse race of the day was about to take place.

We began to remove our carefully placed tripod and magazine case, when His Excellency approached us personally, and in perfect English said: "Gentlemen, you are under no orders whatever; the camera men have the right to stand where they please." A voice from one of our company: "I love my New York policemen, but O you Gubernador!"

Surprises were in store for us everywhere. At the Shrine of Hidalgo, some 3,000 feet above sea level, film weighs heavy, especially when you are a mile or two from the railroad. Here, the soldier priest started the battle for freedom, with the most unpromising bunch of humanity that ever carried a hod (we mean sword), and here the fathers of the city of Toluca annually repair to do homage to their first deliverer. The speeches were very grand; we are sure of it, because the gestures themselves were such as would turn a Pathe group of actors green with envy. Then, too, did we not hear, in our honor, repeated cheers as orator after orator would declaim: "Viva los Estados Unidos," "Viva Inglateria," "Viva los Cinematographicas." When, after we had filmed the exercises, we promised the Hidalgo society a positive copy secured in a brass tube, that they might exhibit to future generations of patriots their rejoicing knew no bounds, and, but for a very strong resolve to return as we came, the altitude and something just as good would have played sad havoc with our perpendicularity.

Returning to Mexico City and finding we should have to economize on film, another surprise awaited us. We bought Eastman perforated film, negative and positive, not ten days out of the factory, and no conditions imposed either; we had a choice of English and French stock also, and—tell it not in the camp of the great ones, we could buy a moving picture camera over the counter just the same as buying a kodak. Lenses, too, of every variety worth while were obtainable at half a dozen stores, and it was good to see the Trust materials selling as they ought to do, on merit, side by side with others equally deserving.

* * * * *

If you have never been to Switzerland or Italy, then you have no standard of comparison with the little Mexican lake of Patzcuaro. You may enthuse over the beauties of the Thousand Islands, Lake Champlain and the little-known resorts of the West, but, while these are all beautiful they are not in the same class as Lake Patzcuaro. A day's ride along the narrow-gauge road from Mexico City brought us to Morelia, a city of contentment. This is no place to talk of patios and yards and flowers, but the pictures we obtained show some of the most magnificent iron gateways opening into veritable fairy palaces whose grim exterior would presage but a prison.

The American lays out his garden and sets his house back of it. The Mexican builds a wall around the whole business, and then makes the inside a home of beauty. From Morelia the little railroad winds through a Mexican Engadine to the shore of Patzcuaro. An English lord was on the train with his valet. He had wired ahead, don't yer know, for a "private cahr"—and he got it, so did we, and everybody else; it was the only car on the train save the "hog pen" for the peons.

Our best pictures here were made from the roof of the "private car," using the brake wheel as a tripod, and a dandy one too. With the camera inverted we reeled off the mileage strips of film with lavish extravagance, for who cares for money? The manufacturers are making it all anyway.

From the lake to the town proper is three miles. It is a continual climb; we took the six-mule car without the borax, and made the panorama on the down trip. This is run by gravity, and the mules, if time presses, are loaded in a flat car behind the other passengers.

We found a good picture show here, using an Al Pathe projector, dissolving views, music that New York cannot approach, and the picture machine placed outside the building, a brick or two being removed to allow the light rays to pass through. This struck us as an ingenious way to prevent insurance rates soaring skyward. The shows throughout the republic are run in tandas, or members. You pay 35 cents (Mex.) or 17½ cents U. S. money, for the complete program, and 25 cents or so (Mex.)for one tanda—consisting of about two or three reels. There is hope for Mexico, for she has passed the Centennial of her Independence without having fallen to the use—or abuse—of that modern monstrosity—the illustrated song.

True, one hears some of the most delightful Spanish melodies in the picture shows, but who shall compare such trifles as "La Golandrina" or "La Paloma" with a masterpiece of American opera like "Meet Me, Sweet Maggie, by the Peanut Tree," or "You Make Me Tired, I Am Thine"?

In Mexico there is a very rich class, and a very poor one. The first you seek out, the latter seeks you. We filmed a "muchacho" (boy) in the act of supplication, and could we but add to the indescribable sorrow of his mien the dolorous whine of his "Centa-a-a-vos señor," it would make a beautiful requiem for Patco when Friese-Greene is through with him.

Mexican habits are contagious. All work is suspended between noon and 3 p. m. This is siesta. The only trouble with us was that after the siesta it was rather late to work, so we quit at noon, and spent the rest of the day fishing. The moneyed Mexican is not a cheap sport. He would make many a Pittsburg chorus-girl attaché look like thirty cents. A rich "haciendado" living near Lake Chapala bought an American motor boat. When it arrived on the flat car there was no derrick near at hand capable of lifting it.

The Mexicans in their wisdom shipped the loaded car back to Guadalajara—the division point—to show the officials just what size of a derrick to send out. When all had been accomplished, the American agent said to the haciendado, "Don't you see that such foolishness as sending a boat to be fitted to a derrick has cost you over nine hundred pesos, all unnecessary?"

The Mexican blew a cloud of smoke from his cigarro and with an air of superb indifference, replied, "Si, señor, it is so; but I have nine millions more in the bank."

Mexico is a land of churches. As your Mexican negative is slowly revolving on the brass drum of your developing machine, don't be alarmed at a few black daggers appearing as high lights in every picture; they will shape themselves into church spires and towers and crosses.

From a mound at Cholula we made a panoramic view covering probably 190 degrees. So far, we have Atoyac—A bridge with a village on it.

Just as it came into view someone cut into a pine-apple, and the "sound effect" and odor were too much for the camera man. When we had all tasted the fruit, we forgave him, and the Bridge of Atoyac remains unhonored and unstrung on the bioscope band.

Chicago Letter

Since the last issue we have added another film exchange to our already large list in Chicago, the new one is called "The Chautauqua Film Exchange" and is located on the 8th floor, 356 Dearborn Street, near Harrison, occupying several office rooms. Besides a large film department and exhibition room which is equipped with a latest model Motiograph machine and double dissolving stereoptican attachment. Miss Clarice Rogalla, formerly in charge of slide photographic and manufacturing department of The Laemmle Film Service, is office manager of the new concern and she informs us they are buying the product of The Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co. and have started out nicely with enough customers to keep busy with for the present. Their principal efforts will be for church and lyceum business and have booked considerable of this business to date, so this is really a new venture in the renting line, as all their films will have to be doubly censored to satisfy the demands of the trade they are catering to.

We were handed a card the other day advertising the H. Davis Flim Exchange, of Watertown, Wis., in which he gives prices, one of which struck me as funny. It ran—Chicago run service, 12 reels, $12.00 pe rweek. Oh, you Mr. Watertown, I admire your admission of the kind of service Independent renters use in Chicago, when some exhibitors pay as high as $85.00 and even $90.00 here for Independent service.

Ben Turpin, of the Imp. Stock Co., passed through here Saturday on his way to the New York headquarters of the "Imp" after an extended trip through the West, picking locations on which to take future Imp. pictures.

He is the same old Ben we knew doing his "Happy Hooligan" act in vaudeville and with the Essanay Co., where he earned his reputation as a moving picture comedian, and we hope to see him doing his "Impish pranks before the Im, camera before longp" as he can hand a blind man a laugh, and that's going some in a moving picture.

The Globe Film Service was threatened in the big fire at 11 E. Madison Street the other evening, but as far as we can learn no great damage was sustained.

The Pastime Theater and the Casino Theater, located in this block, were full of people but were emptied in a very orderly fashion, which is a credit to the attaches of both houses.

Milwaukee Avenue had two fires last week, one at Steingood's and the other at Laemmle's house. No damage outside of the film, which burned in both places. Oh, yes, Steingood's operator lost his overcoat.

Joseph Hopp, president of the Standard Film Exchange, left for an extended trip through Florida. Overwork and close application ending in a nervous breakdown caused Mr. Hopp to take the vacation, which he well deserves.

A. H. Saunders, our big chief, boss and editor, is spending the fore part of the week with us and he is about the busiest man that ever stepped off the 20th Century in our Windy City. I wore out a pair of shoes trying to catch him at home at the Grand Pacific, and expect to wear out another pair keeping pace with him about town. He can keep more engagements in one hour than any man I have ever met.

Saw Monte Cristo, by the Parders Co., and it is a very clever adaptation of this tale, far superior to the one turned out by the Selig people some time ago.

The Chicago Censorship Board rejected three pictures during the past week and prohibited their use inside the city limits. "The Girl and the Burglars," Solax release, Friday, January 13th, was one; "The Vote that Counted," Thanhouser release, Friday, January 13th, another, and "The Blue Domino Disguise," Ambrosia release, Wednesday, January 18th, the third. Note the date of release on the two former ones and then say "Friday the 13th" is a lucky day, well, I don't think.

I read some argument in this paper several issues back on an article entitled "The Bad Film" or "A Bad Film," which showed an attempt at hanging under the guise of comedy, which was passed by the New York Censorship Board. Well, evidently the encouragement given this company by passing it made them attempt another and one even bolder, as they produced anr released a film last week in which a mountaineer kills his wife by shooting her and disposes of her lover by throwing him over a cliff. He then hides in the fastness of the mountains and holds off a poose by shooting holes in their hats, and in the last scene wakes up to find it was all a "dream." Of course it was within the pale of the law, as it was a "dream," but nevertheless it was a bad film as the murders were shown on the screen dream or no dream. I am not a member of the "Pan Club" on pictures, "The Kind Word Society" or any of the other various terms used for those who are eternally taking a fall out of the film manufacturer, but this particular film deserves a good roast and as yet has been overlooked by all "The Picture Pounders."

The Reliance Co. have gotten out photos of five leading actors from their stock Co. for lobby display and I must say they are "right up to snuff." If the manufacturers knew what great lobby display these photos make they would all put them out, as the patrons look for these company's pictures on certain days each week.

"The Empty Three," by the Imp. Co. last week, was a great story and had some corking good characters, especially the man who was guilty of the shooting. His acting in the court room scene was excellent. Miss Rhea was very good, too, but tube skirts and puffs in her hair did not harmonize with the setting, which was laid in the Canadian wilds.

Oh you Patent Co., asleep on the job once more; I know of a theater in the vicinity of 58th Street and Calumet Avenue using Gen. Film Co.'s service and in connection with their trust program on January the 16th, were featuring "In the Grey of the Dawn," a Reliance release of recent date. Of course you know a good picture when you see one, Mr. Exhibitor, and evidently you would sooner use an old Reliance picture than some of the new trust ones.

One good thing, "The Grey of the Dawn" was in good company as the running mates were of Biograph reels.

Mr. McIntyre, of the Associated Picture Schools for Scenario Writers, is meeting great success and is welcomed by pupils as well as manufacturers who are seeking good scripts.

As I am closing my letter I am informed that President Swartout and Secretary Scarlet, of the Chautauqua Film Exchange, who I mentioned further up in this issue, are leaving for New York to-day to complete arrangements with the Sales Co. and will buy twelve reels weekly to start. Their opening announcement, appears on another page.

On Tuesday, January 17th, a scaffold fell four stories from the new Columbia Theater now being erected at Clark and Madison Streets, killing one man and seriously injuring twenty others.

I notice a great number of Chicago moving picture theaters are running a slide advocating the political fight now being waged to reduce the gas rate to 70 cents. Managers who are catering to the public at large should be very careful as whether the masses who attend your theater are not of one opinion politically and it tends to injure your business when you try to inject politics into it.

Again, perhaps a great number of managers are not aware of the fact that the mayorality candidate who is running on this gas platform has openly declared through the Hearst papers, who are backing his candidacy, that in the event of his election he will "curb the moving picture show evil" (as they put it) and exclude children under sixteen years of age, and you all know what that would mean, so why try to further a man's platform who will tie a millstone around your neck.

Read what "The Man in the Baths" has to say about "Blue Law Politicians" and what they have done to the picture shows of Hot Springs.

J. J. SULLIVAN.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., Jan 18.—Theatrical or moving picture companies on the road would do well if they give Benton, a little town thirty miles from here, the go-by, provided there is numbered on their roster any negro employees. You see, the African is not very popular in Benton, where, it is said, there is hung a sign, which reads:

"Nigger, don't let the sun set on you here."

They usually don't. Last Friday the Blue Ribbon minstrel company, a strictly colored organization, was booked in Benton. Neither Vogel, Fields nor Dockstader, or other real "Minstrel Kings" need worry so far as this attraction is concerned. Quite a number of Benton's citizens saw the show. White men and boys began "guying" the performers and, not content with this, when the show was over laid in wait for the men and women of the attraction.

One white man, as yet unknown, fired his revolver in the air, while others began stoning the performers. The colored people ran and the crowd followed. They were overtaken and one of the company, Earl Wilkes, of Peoria, Ill., was killed.

Sounds pretty rotten, doesn't it? This mob then stabbed and beat William Penny and his wife. The negroes had done nothing to cause the attack. They were on their way to their boarding houses. Wilkes, when overtaken, begged and pleaded with his captors to be permitted to go about his business and prayed those beating him to spare his life. The crowd, when the negroes started to run, commenced firing their revolvers in the air. In all over one hundred shots were fired. None of the negroes were hit. The attack has disgraced Benton and the state. Prosecuting Attorney Wood, of this city, has charge of the investigation, which will be a thorough one. It is said that when the coroner's inquest is through that some very well known men and boys of that place will find themselves in most unenviable light.

This is not the first time the negroes in Benton have had trouble. Let a strange negro go there and it is not an uncommon thing to have some native draw a "38," point it at the negroe's feet and make him dance and fly out of the town. So, Mr. Manager, if you have negro help with your show and Benton booked, take a good tip: get rid of the colored feature or cancel Benton.

The exterior of the Scenic has been re-painted in white and gold and presents a very pretty appearance. The management of this house took a step in the right direction this week when it announced that Saturday matinees in the future would be free for the children of the public schools, at which time they are going to make a special effort to get pictures of exceptional interest along educational and foreign lines. They believe that moving pictures is one of the most important educational factors of the day. They know that on the picture sheet are seen views of foreign countries which the geographies mention, while historical subjects are shown with great regularity. This is the first house in the city to endeavor to get in close contact with educational features for the benefit of the school children, and the Scenic deserves hearty commendation for having taken this matter up in the liberal way it has. In passing, it might be wel to mention that the pictures at the Scenic cannot be surpassed by any house in the city. Its machines are kept in first-class condition; the light is excellent; the picture steady as a rock and taken all in all, always worth looking at.

Christie Otto, a well-known moving picture operator of this city, who left a few weeks ago with David Osman, of Baltimore, to enter vaudeville, was obliged to cancel his engagement in St. Louis, owing to an attack of rheumatism. The team was known in vaudeville as Otto and Osman, "the black and brown of minstrelsy," and the act made good, too. Mr. Otto is a bright and intelligent young man of most pleasing appearance. He possesses talent above the average and, should he continue in the theatrical profession, is bound to win success.

There's a manager in Texas who is trying to capture Carl Hansen, the crack trap drummer of the Lyric, whose fame has extended to all parts of the United States. This gentleman has made Mr. Hansen an exceptionally good offer, which he is thinking seriously of accepting. I saw Pathe's hunting picture at this house during the week and in the scenes showing the hounds one could almost believe the pack was on the stage, so realistic were the effects worked by Mr. Hansen. He is "some drummer," believe me.

There were quite a number of good pictures came to this city during the week. We liked immensely Essanay's "Bad Man's Christmas Gift" and "A Gambler of the West," but the Eclipse reel, "A Mexican Romance," contained acting that was as rotten as the scenery, and effects were beautiful.

Edisen did very well with "The Romance of Hefty Burke," and very bad indeed was this same firm's "Eldora, the Fruit Girl." Poor "Robert," you have my sympathy. It wasn't so much your fault as it was the part you portrayed. Vitagraph sure "de-light-ed" the local "cops" when "Clancy" came to town. It was an excellent picture, and their "Crazy Apples" reel was all that its name implied. As a laugh getter, it was a hugh success.

After being dark the entire week, the Auditorium played a nice line of attractions the past few days. "Arizona"—rather old, I grant you, but still popular, was here for the "steenth" time and gave satisfaction, and "The Blue Mouse," headed by Grace Merritt, cause us to sit up and take notice. George Ade's "Just Out of College" also had a look in to good business and "The House of a Thousand Candles" illuminated the theatrical bookings at this house in a most satisfactory manner.

Will Lacey, comedy bicyclist, presented a very pleasing act at the Princess during the week, as did also the Davis Imperial Trio, musicians and fun makers; "Stung," a comedy sketch by Wanzer and Palmer, also went big, and Jack Marshall, mimic and comedian, received numerous recalls. The headline act of the week was John, Bertha Gleason and Fred Houlihan, in a potpourri of dance and music, and it deserved to be featured.

Considerable interest was caused when "Arizona" announced a Sunday show. It was billed heavily for matinee and night production. Now, if Sunday had fallen on April 1, this would have been a winner, but as it was there didn't seem to be a rush for seats. No, gentle reader, there was nothing doing this Sunday, nor will there be for some time to come, unless Judge Wood has a change of heart, which does not seem likely, or until the legislature can amend present laws, which seems improbable. I am informed, however, that the racing element will endeavor to shove through during the present session some very liberal and classy legislation, and if this passes, all will be well, for if there are two things that are almost a necessity here it is horse racing conducted under legal supervision to assure a square deal and commission government, the latter of which is coming forward by leaps and bounds. The season is now on in full blast and every train that comes into the resort is jammed with pilgrims.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

SEEN ON THE CURTAIN

By Walton

The Empty Shell—(Imp).—It is a fragrant with the breath of the forest. It is vibrant with the spirit of the woods; one hears the scrunch of the zero snow, and feels the keen bite of the frost-laden air. It is the open in the wood fastnesses, it is life amongst the habitants. As the film sped on I walked once more, in memory, with Jean Baptiste and Noel Toussaint away back in the wilds of Lac Tremblant. The staging suggests Canada and her winter glories in "Kebec"; suggests it with potency and vividness. I was glad to notice closer attention to details, such as the wind effects in the hut. One who has faced it could have said something about below zero snow when doors open. The story is wild but sustained. The empty shell is cleverly used. The judge's actions altogether too exaggerated. The acting of the conscience stricken murderer at the trial, when the innocent man is condemned, markedly noteworthy. The climax when Jean is saved, turns upon a tender incident well worked out. The close simple and effective.

Lucy's Lover—(American).—A satisfactory production on the whole. It kept the people interested.

The Borrowed Flat—(American).—A most amusing, Salamagundi; one sharp young man tries to "best" his chum and gets "badly left." All is due to the mystic April 1. Lots of laughs from the crowd.

Joanna of Briganza—(Itala).—A splendid reel, full of life and interest. The staging, the details, the acting, the photography, all of the best. There is no "skimping," the crowds are crowds, the troops are not a handful, but convey realistically the idea of masses in motion. The story is one full of dramatic possibilities, which are skilfully used. The last scene where parted man and wife face eah other, with a son, well-nigh a paricide, and his fiancee who has "lost father and country" thrills with passion. The cloistered place for a tortured soul, is a sweet picture.

An Indian Trapper's Prize—(Bison).—An Indian finds a sweet maiden in his traps. A prize that he determines to hold—she nothing loath—and through all manner of troubles and trials does hold. A vigorous, living presentiment of the Red Man and his ways. The scenery is well chosen; it fits in.

Everybody Saves Father—(Thanhouser).—An amusing sequence of mishaps in which father figures. He's the father of a pretty girl, with a string of admirers who make no real headway. One genius topples father into the water and then proceeds "to save" him—the other geniuses in turn cause father to fall into the water again in order to be "re-saved." The last genius feels sure he has won. Meanwhile The man and the girl slip off and get married. When all meet, lo! explosion and explanation. A laughable, clean, live film.

The Only Girl in Camp—(Thanhouser).—A winter in a camp and only one girl. A trio of swindlers happen along and by means of a lecture get the whole man-crowd into one room, only to be held-up and robbed. The girl scents mischief and putting her father's bear traps outside the lecture room, collars the gang and their booty. All sorts of thrills and excitement—but good, honest, sane ones.

The District Attorney—(Powers).—If you wish to see the suitor with a yellow streak eliminated and the girl get the right man, here's the film. Besides there's a "black hander,' an infernal machine, a dynamite explosion and a sturdy old District Attorney that lives to bless his daughter and send Mr. Mafia to jail. You won't go to sleep while this is running.

A Tip to Husbands—(Powers).—A piece of good-natured nonsensicality that is full of laughs. It is not often that young lady gets "left," but she does this time. She ought not to, that's where the fun comes in. The husbands laughed, as to the "better halves" in the theater they looked grim. Mayhap Powers, pictured life a little too realistically. A real funny story, well produced.

The Creek Claim—(Bison).—A real live story of a gambler and his wife, that jumped the claim of a prospector; moreover shot him. The gambler's wife rides off to register, so does the prospector's wife—in a wagon. Then comes some Bison riding and driving and some scenery worth seeing. The wagon breaks down and the two young women, who do not know each other—ride off on one horse. The right woman registers, then the fur and feathers fly. At last the "boys" collar the gambler and the "winged" prospector wins out. The story goes with a rush, no synopsis wanted. A first-class red-blooded yarn such as live folk applaud to the echo.

The Vote that Counted—(Thanhouser).—A well-conceived and produced story of the political underworld of legislative thugs and scoundrels. The reel had a warm reception; it was released at the psychological moment for us. A boss cannot buy a Senator, he employs a thug to "fix" him. The train scene and the chloroforming is all to the good. The distaught mother is told and the employment of the clever girl detective follows. The scenes on the hand-car amidst the snows are novel; the arrest of the thug well done. The arrival of the Senator in time to defeat the gambler's bill and the arrest of the political blackguard warmed the audience up. The film is a mighty good presentation of what, alas! we know too well. We don't get the climax, that's the trouble!

The Girl and the Burglar——(Solax).—The whole staging and so forth is well done—I expect this. The story is a good one, and the arrangements are good, too, so also most of the mechanical end. The destruction of memory by a blow is deftly used in the plot. The story moves along smoothly, hangs together well and altogether the reel is an interesting one. It is out of the dull, monotonous rut and deserves well.

Monte Cristo—(Powers).—A satisfactory production giving the salient points of the well-known romance carried out on the Powers' line. The dramatic points, throbbing with intense passion, are well handled and the emphases necessary to the understanding of the tale creditably portrayed. Of course, backgrounds for Monte Cristo are a very difficult nut to crack. Lovers of the great novelist will find this reel one worthy of attention. There is a marked improvement in this firm's output.

On Kentucky Soil—(Reliance).—A story laid in the borderland in Civil War times. The very first picture plunges into the thick of the soul agony where father and son go on opposite sides. The staging and work of the actors, especially of the father in the last scene, noteworthy. The agony of the Union father when he discovers that he is protecting a Union soldier who has slain his son—a Confederate—is a fine piece of work. The funeral pyre is dramatic, but what about the man in the box? A little more of the joyousness of life would be well in this firm's releases. All life is not "gray," there are glints of sunlight.

The Recall—(Itala).—A piece of humbuggery turning upon a man who tells his wife he is going to serve his thirty days in the army—and then does far from it. His wife goes to look for him in the barracks, where there is much of the amorous side of things, as Italy does it. There are laughable situations, but the whole story on this side the Atlantic, lax as we are, leaves a nasty taste in the mouth.

Skiing on the Italian Alps—(Itala).—Beautiful scenery and very fine photography. The Norwegian films are better, as is natural, for the home of the ski is Finland, Sweden and Norway.

A Simple Rustic Tale—(Gaumont).—This title covers the whole thing. There are fine selections of French pastoral scenes; real old folks and a pretty girl who affords the love motif. There are discords, a clever mother and the end where peace reigns. All conceived and carried out with Gaumont's dainty beauty that is withal strong and vivid.

When a Man Loves—(Biograph).—There's a father with a pretty daughter, who is in love with a village lad. An old friend of the father turns up with "money to burn." The father foresees a possible very desirable son-in-law. The young folks plan an elopement. Alas! that night the father locks his daughter up and puts his friend in her room. When the midnight swain arrives, this arrangement causes all sorts of fun. The father's friend—who really has a very tender spot for the girl—swallows his disappointment and helps the young folks. A right merry story, very acceptably presented.

The Gardener's Ladder—(Edison).—An old gentleman who acts like an escaped lunatic, causes considerable fun by thinking his daughter has eloped when he finds a gardener's ladder near his window. As usual woman triumphs whilst the audiences laugh.

The Sophomore's Romance—(Essanay).—A rattling, good, clean, humorous yarn with laughs in it.

The Hills of Corsica—(Gaumont).—A fine example of a run on the railroad that meanders through the hills and skirts the Mediterranean.

A Child's Plea—(Gaumont).—A Yule-tide tale full of the spirit of the season. "A little child shall lead them," vivified with a beauty that speaks for itself.

A Cowboy's Innocence—(Pathe).—The Mexican rascal manages to make the cowboy appear a cheat. A little Indian girl knows the truth and follows the outcast to tell him. By her he sends a mesage to his sweetheart only to be seized by the Mexican. There are all sorts of excitements and fights, but the end is all right. The ranch sports are good. One lady suggested that prince of such matters—the Bison.

The Bolted Door—(Kalem).—A heart story. A young girl rather than wait for her lover, marries an elderly suitor, who is rich. Afterwards she meets her old-time sweetheart, when he is prosperous and the guardian of a motherless niece. The old love flames up. She rushes to the child when sick. The mother heart throbbing. On the precipice edge the man does not only—as the synopsis says—bolt his heart, but he turns her out of the room and bolts the door. Kalem does not exploit problems, but upholds the clean, the honorable, the true—at all costs.

Wood Carving at Brienz, Switzerland—(Eclipse).—Interesting inasmuch as it shows in detail a little known art. The cutting of the eagle and the final result, very good.

Washed Ashore—(Eclipse).—The subject is simple, but the handling brings out and touches upon the depths of life. Two simple fishers find a treasure, avarice develops in one upon the division of the spoil; he sleeps and a dream reveals what might be. In the end the two men hand all to the Harbor-Master. There's more in this short reel than appears at first. It deals with the higher morality and ought to be appreciated. I wish to commend highly this thoughtful production.

Fire! Fire!—(Melies).—A very amusing tale of how suffragettes demanded recognition and being given charge of the fire department, what happened when set to work.

Crimson Scars—(Melies).—How a little girl with a heartless mother, wins the attention of a "star" and then when the theater burns she saves the "star" but bears scars. In after life, when success comes, the "crimson scars" are laurels of honor. A very prettily worked out story that certainly will appeal to the heart, everywhere.

The Home of the Seal, Peru—(Edison).—The sea scenery is superb. The workmanship excellent.

A Western Night—(Edison).—Thank you, Edison, for that production. It's crammed with teaching, and is worth ten thousand of the so-called sermons. The heart of gold under the rugged and uncouth outer man is brought out splendidly. Brought out with no sanctimonious cant, but with the saving grace of humor. The dainty Eastern girl, horror stricken in the rude Western bedroom at the noises made by a rough Westerner in the next room, is cleverly shown.

His grotesque attempts at being quiet when told a lady is near, are honestly funny. I regret to say he drinks whiskey. Then comes the climax: At some extra noise the girl jumps up and looks through the keyhole; lo! the ruffian on his knees. In a moment her fears are gone. The theater was laughing till the keyhole scene, then the silence of hearts touched. Edison, I would that film were shown wherever there is a screen. It is one of the finest pieces of pathos, humor and basic teaching I have seen. No Sunday-school or church is there that would not be the better for seeing this terse, manly and godly film.

Shadows of the Past—(Selig).—Love misplaced, a life broken, and then a meeting after many years under peculiar circumstances. The story is like a stormy sky shot—not with light—but lightning. It is thoroughly human, but mostly on the tragedy end. Lessons there are a-plenty and well handled.

Land of Monkeys and Snakes—(Pathe).—A fine, colored and realistic film dealing with the tropic Isles of Sunda.

Evils of Betting—(Pathe).—The acting good and the background also, because they are the real thing. The downfall of the better all well and good, but the stealing business and how found out ends a little "up in the air."

In the Days of Chivalry—(Edison).—After seeing this film I read the synopsis and learned this "will undoubtedly be considered the art film of the month." I don't agree with this one scrap. The story is founded upon one well known to the folk-lore student—let that pass. The heroine was all right, but please remember to put people into armor, etc.,—never matter of what century—does not consequently imbue the wearer with the "spirit of the age." Next, cells, throne-rooms, portcullis, flanking towers and moats cannot be painted—not in a work of art. Moreover, a captive in a tower, flanking the portcullis is doubtful—very. The pirate attack is theatrical; the architecture of Carthage dubious. It is an old story, fairly well told by moderns, but as a work of art—that's different. There are firms whose films are a delight in this sort of thing. I would advise Edison to do—as we all have had to do—for years with the real thing before moving picture were heard of—go and sit at the feet of Gamaliel.

All Is Fair in Love and War—(Vitagraph).—A delightful piece of real humor where two Vitagraph kids do their parts mischievously well. It's out of the rut and sure to be hailed with lots of laughs.

An Arizona Romance—American).—The ostrich farm was a great hit apart from all else. The story is vigorously presented. The actors act so well that an audience grips their individual traits easily. Love triumphs and the girl with the black and white stockings by her antics with the solemn-faced, dignified dude gets the laughs. As I watched this reel, an old scene jumped up from the by-gone. Many years ago I was with a well-known musician in one of the old world's great cathedrals. It was the end of the service; the great organ and the choir together were rendering the "Seven-fold Amen"; piano, pianissimo, till at last it was simply breathed over our heads. "Do you know," said my friend, when silence fell, "what strikes me about the softness of that music is, you feel it has latent power enough to burst forth in such strength as to split the very cathedral walls!" My friends, I felt to-day you have a magnificent power somewhere, but as yet it's latent; yes, latent.

Mother's Portrait—(Eclair).—This film was enjoyed by the audience. The story, while not new, is deftly handled and sustains its interest. It is thoroughly French in every way and so I need say nothing as to acting. There is pathos and a very capable little house-daughter. A dog, too, plays his part well. In the end all is peace. Anything about mother always strikes home.

Their First Misunderstanding—(Imp).—I went on purpose to see this film and afterwards hugged myself that I did. There wasn't a seat empty that I could see in the Fourteenth Street Theater, so one got a fair idea of what the crowd thought. The reel was a solid, undoubtful success. Welcome, "Miss Mary," you surely are a "darlint" and got a welcome that you deserved. Didn't that audience laugh! The staging, acting, photography, everything was all right. The humor of the bell ringing arrangement and the furious dash of the jealous husband to see who had arrived filled the theater with laughter. The discomfiture of the poet is great. Miss Pickford was a real woman and carried the great audience along with her. The last scene where she snuggles up against her husband's coat and the final make-up suited us all.

I wish to congratulate Imp on a production that is worthy of its standing. The story has all the elements that spell success, and the New York crowd I feel sure, but expressed an opinion that will be echoed and re-echoed wherever this delightful film is shown.

Dante on the Curtain

The Milano Film Company undertook a task of no ordinary magnitude when Dante was chosen as the subject for a film. It appears to have been a great success from the way the work has been lauded by these competent to judge the matter, not only from a cinematographic standpoint, but as students of Dante able to criticize from the all-important standpoint of interpretation. As an educational endeavor, especially when praised by the National Dante Society and many other institutes of art and literature, the film is a notable addition to high-class cinematography.

The production is the result of some two years of hard and conscientious labor under the direction of such experts as Francis Bertolini, of Dante fame, and Chevalier Joseph de Liguori, assisted by numerous other experts, not forgetting that Padua supplied the man who overlooke dthe art end.

Another point of great interest is that a well-known composer has written special music to accompany the pictures.

We congratulate our Milano confrere, and sincerely trust that the labor and anxiety entailed by this production may meet with that hearty reception which the immortal Dante ever meets the world of thinking men and women.

So far as the business end is concerned it is enough to say that things are in the hands of Gustavo Lombardo, Naples, for we all know that means promptness, honor and courtesy.

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES CO. "EMPLOYEES' BALL"

We beg to call attention of all moving picture men in New York and vicinity to this ball.

On February 3, 1911, at Alhambra Hall, 126th Street and 7th Avenue, New York City.

The employees at 111 East 14th Street are exerting every effort toward the consummation of an event that will be remembered as a great social event of the moving picture industry. Manufacturers, exchange men and exhibitors are lending their support to make it a success. The affair is under the direction of the following well-known gentlemen: C. P. Fearing, president, one of the Sales Company office force; John Ward, vice-president, shipping clerk; Joe Miles, treasurer, cashier of the Sales Company, and Herbert Taylor, assistant shipping clerk, and Charlie Abraham, salesman for Empire Film Exchange, general managers and originators of the ball. The officers anticipate an attendance of from 600 to 700 people, and the affair is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $500. Every Independent manufacturer is to take a box in the balcony, which will be decorated with his individual banner, suspended therefrom. Particular interest will attach to the presence of all of the members of the moving picture stock companies. A feature that will appeal will be the singing of the latest song hits by singers especially selected by several of the leading song publishers.

Stauch's Orchestra of fifteen pieces, from Coney Island, under the direction of Al. Furguson, will render an attractive musical program. Intermittent dances will be held up to 11:00 p. m., after which there will be given a program of 24 dances, one for each manufacturer, with appropriate airs for each.

The personnel of the reception committee is as follows: G. C. Ryan, J. Hoffmire, F. E. Gribbon, E. S. Sutherland, T. Lewis, A. White, E. G. Brown, M. and J. Pivar, and R. E. Burns.

MOTION PICTURES MADE IN CHICAGO

Within a decade there has grown up in Chicago an industry which, small in its inception, now reaches out to all parts of North and South America, and which gives promise of as rapid development in the future as it has known in the past. This industry is the manufacture of moving pictures.

Chicago is the only city west of the Alleghanies, with the exception of one plant at Los Angeles, where the motion picture is manufactured. In Chicago are located some of the principal manufacturers, while the smaller ones in the city, who are not a part of the so-called moving picture trust, are as numerous as mushrooms.

Although there are more manufacturers of moving pictures in New York, Chicago is the headquarters for the industry in the United States. This is due largely to its central location, which gives it an advantage in the distribution of the films.

Two large factories, employing about 200 men each, including the camera men and artists, are constantly operating in Chicago, turning out an average of ten films weekly, which is one-fifth of those manufactured in the world.

These films and pictures are obtained at a great expenditure of money, the estimate being that $10,000 is required to produce the ten films manufactured in Chicago. The cost of the individual pictures, however, varies greatly with the details required in their production.

Many Scenes Made at Home

Palaces are built in Chicago, mazes of mystic delight, the replicas of those old homes in which resided the feudal lord and baron. Running waterways such as are seen in Venice in their settings of Latin romance, are flowing gently through the yards of the moving picture factories, and swift-moving gondolas, with their gondoliers in fantastic costume, are paddling in and out among the devious channels. Business streets are there, and the characters who represent many of the slap-bang comedy scenes, which appear on the canvas of the 5-cent theater, haunt the doorways and chase in hordes after some poor unfortunate whose mishaps afford the amusement of the moving picture audience.

But when it is necessary to go away for the scenes desired the expense is a matter of no consideration. Moving picture manufacturers in Chicago have parties at present in South America, in Florida, and in numerous other parts of the Northern and Southern hemisphere. If it is desired to obtain a scene among Seminole Indians the moving picture man with his camera goes to their reservation in Florida. If it is the Creek Indian that is wanted, he goes to Oklahoma, and he likewise goes West for a scene among the Apaches. Modern dramas are presented, great historical scenes depicted, and the moving picture man is everywhere to take scenes which will be interesting or of educational or historical value.

Chicago Spends $12,000 a Day

Chicago people are themselves strong supporters of the moving picture shows. There are 650 moving picture theaters in Chicago and fifty vaudeville houses which exhibit them in their performances. An estimate of the daily attendance at the moving picture shows is difficult to obtain, but 159,000 is considered a minimum. As some of the theaters charge only 5 cents' admission, while others charge 10 and some 15 cents, an average admission price of 8 cents is considered fair. At this rate Chicago spends $12,000 daily on this form of entertainment.

From the foregoing figures, which are only estimates and considered to be far from the maximum figures of what is done in Chicago alone, it is easy to see that the manufacture of moving pictures is a profitable business. It had its beginning in France in 1893. Three years later a concern in New York began the manufacture of pictures and 1897 saw the inception of the industry in Chicago.

The beginning was crude. Only the simplest kind of pictures were attempted, and those at as little cost as possible. It was felt to be much of a venture, and the manufacturers were indisposed to risk any more capital than was necessary in the scheme. The first pictures were exhibited in vaudeville houses at the end of the performances.

Industry Grows Rapidly

But ten years brought a remarkable change. Early in the beginning of the new century interest began to be aroused in the moving pictures. They began to be used for educational purposes and people found them an inexpensive form of entertainment. Moving picture shows sprang up, and in 1905 and 1906 they spread over the country like wildfire.

A new impetus was added to the manufacture, and American manufacturers who had never attempted anything on an elaborate scale now began to enter into competition with the manufacturers abroad. Previous to this date the finer pictures exhibited came from France; now began the manufacture of the higher grade of picture in America.

People began to tire of the slap-bang kind of picture and to demand something better and more suited to an educated and refined taste. But to furnish the pictures demanded meant the employment of ingenuity and brains. Consequently the manufacturers turned to well-known writers to furnish them the material they needed.

Ten prominent writers are now in the employ of Chicago manufacturers. Their work requires a skill which, it is asserted, is superior to that employed in the writing of stories, because they have to depend to such a large extent on the details of movement and expression in their scenes rather than on conversational methods. When a historical scene is to be depicted they study the literature of the day and then depict accurately scenes that will give as nearly a faithful representation as possible.

Directors Are Able Men

Hand in hand with the writers come the directors of the pictures, who are of the highest artistic ability. These men have been the producers of drama, musical comedies and other productions which require a special talent. They take the work of the authors and practically dramatize it. Some of the actors in the scenes which are daily thrown on the canvas are put through many rehearsals before a satisfactory effect is produced.

The camera men also must be adepts in their special line. They must have a perfect understanding of atmospheric conditions and must know exactly the intensity of the light in which they are operating. For this purpose they are supplied with light meters, which measure the light exactly as an electric meter measures the electric current or the gas meter measures the gas.

In the beginning, a little more than ten years ago, there were not 100 theaters in the United States exhibiting moving pictures. Today there are more than 12,000 theaters exclusively for moving pictures. Chicago manufacturers predict that another ten years will see this number grow to 25,000.

Sees Great Future for Films

"The moving picture has come to stay," said one of them. "Why shouldn't it? Can you beat it for educational and historical value. Think what it will mean to have exhibited in schools pictures of great historical events, for the school children to see the great actors on the stage of life exactly as they moved and lived."

Schools throughout the country are using the moving picture more and more in education. Many schools, some of them in country districts, have weekly exhibitions of films of educational value, and the colleges are using them regularly.—Chicago Tribune.

NEW YORK WORLD SAYS:—

More than two hundred thousand people in New York see moving picture shows every day. The placing of these shows of the masses of the people on a higher educational and moral plane has been followed by an increasing patronage.

This is the way we like the big dailes to speak.

RAILROAD INNOVATIONS

Our Pittsburg correspondent sends us the following information, which will interest the whole industry:—Commuters who use the big Union Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad in this city will no longer be bored while waiting for trains. The announcement was made that moving picture shows will hereafter be presented to them in the station. The innovation met with instant favor from railroad officials when it was broached a few weeks ago, and negotiations are now being conducted with moving picture interests. The apparatus is expected to be installed in two weeks. The films will be changed daily, but the railroad officials propose to act as censors and to eliminate all objectionable pictures.

"There will be no pictures of train robberies," said Albert Swinehart, who is in charge of the Pennsylvania Railroad detectives, "nor of train wrecks. It would leave a bad impression on the minds of the travelers."

The innovation will despense with the raucous-voiced train callers, for five minutes before trains leave announcements will be thrown on the canvas on which the pictures will be shown.

The New York World commenting on the innovation remarks:—Such interesting and instructive shows must be a great success in Pittsburg. Then, it is fair to presume, the paternal Pennsylvania will give them in its station here. It is a vast place, that station, but it needs no prophet to foresee that it is not half big enough to hold the audiences that will gather to the free picture shows. Each audience will never change; New York families will bring along lunch-baskets, buy railroad tickets to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street or Long Island City or Hoboken, throng the station and revel all day in perfectly good and moral films—and new films daily.

The announcement will flash on the canvas:

"Next train for Sunnyside-by-the-Sea, Celestial Abodes, People's Paradise and all other towns on the North Shore of Long Island will leave in five minutes."

And all the commuters who should hurry home to dinner will smile at each other and say:

"We will wait for the next train."

The last way train out will be the only one filled. Of course other railroads will enter into competition with the Pennsylvania. The New York Central may invite commuters to a free horse show; the Central of New Jersey will give a continuous minstrel show, perhaps, and the fascinating Miss Phoebe Snow will skirt-dance—

Day and night
With all her might
For the Road of Anthracite.

MOVING PICTURE DIAGNOSIS

The new "heart station," or laboratory for the study of heart disease at Johns Hopkins University Hospital, has been enlarged by the installation of a wonderful apparatus known as the electro-cardigraph. This instrument, which recently has been perfected by a Dr. W. Einthoven of Leyden, Holland, is designed for the purpose of investigating the heart action of patients without removing them from their beds.

It is known that each beat of the heart gives rise to a series of weak electric currents, ranging in intensity from one ten-thousandth to three-thousandths of a volt. These currents are too feeble for the ordinary galvanometer to record.

The instruments devised by Dr. Einthoven consist of a delicate filament of quartz or platinum about one 12-1000th of an inch in diameter, suspended in the magnetic field of a large and powerful electro-magnet. This filament is so fine that the slightest current from the patient's heart causes it to sway to and fro. A powerful arc light which is placed behind it causes its shadow to be thrown through a powerful magnifying glass upon the moving film of a camera which records each movement. Then by comparing the film with one of normal heart movement the exact trouble of a patient's heart can be accurately diagnosed.

"The heart station" is under the charge of Drs. Lewellys F. Barker, Arthur H. Hirshfelder and George S. Bond. These physicians predict that with the new apparatus many forms of obscure heart trouble will be successfully diagnosed. The distance of the patient from the station is a matter of little importance, 100 yards or a mile makes no difference. It would almost be possible for a doctor to sit in the station and feel the pulse of every person in Baltimore, provided the conditions were fulfilled.

So says Boston Herald.

DALY THINKS HE HAS IT

R. W. Daly, a one time power in the moving picture world out Chicago way, is now interested in what is said to be the best moving picture machine outfit that motion photography has ever known. Daly is one of the pioneers in that line, and no matter what inventions may appear, he always has something which "goes it one better." It appears now, judging from Dick's conversation, "they must all step forward and see the boss."—N. Y. Review.

MOVING PICTURES IN MEDICINE

The Hospital, London, Nov. 19, 1910, has the following account of a demonstration made in St. Thomas' Hospital in London. Great possibilities for demonstrating pathological and psysiological problems are opened by the report.

"The first series of films were concerned with the behavior of trypanosomes [certain disease organisms]. The enormous magnification did not entail any sacrifice in clearness; and it is no exaggeration to say that the films were watched with a remarkable intensity even by those to whom the movements of the organisms were already familiar. The contrast in the activities of the trypanosomes in a normal and in an immune serum was exceedingly well brought out. The trypanosomes were seen in the one case to pass close to the leucocyte with impunity, while in the other case, no sooner had a trypanosome approached within the sphere of influence of the white cell than it was irresistibly drawn nearer until contact took place. The subsequent struggling and lashing of cilia, so distinctly shown, could easily be followed until all motion ceased. Films showing clearly the details and movements of spirochætes formed an ample justification of the ultra-microscope. This method of dark-background illumination of fresh specimens has made possible the reproduction of these wonderful studies of those hitherto so elusive organisms. Among other very successful films shown were those of agglutination reactions; of hæmolysis, in which the at first boldly outlined red blood-corpuscles disappeared completely from view with startling suddenness; of the circulation of the blood in capillaries; and the slow but sure engulfing motion of amœboid corpuscles. Some more 'popular' films were afterward shown, depicting laboratory scenes, such as the inoculation of a mouse with the trypanosome of sleeping-sickness, and the somewhat humorous pictures of the life of a laboratory ape. The projection of many of these films before lay audiences is probably an event shortly to be expected; indeed, we believe already some seven years ago certain films of the circulation of the blood and the typhoid bacillus were shown at the Alhambra. The education of the public mind in this way should do much to destroy the effect of the fabulous tales of vivisection horrows and to make 'understandeed of the people' the realities and the enormous value of laboratory work."

BOUGHT PICTURE SHOW, NOT MINES

Mrs. Carrie S. Bean, who gave R. Lee Van Wormer $6,000 in March, 1910, for the purchase of Califorina mining land, and who afterward gave him $30,000 more for the development of the same before going West herself to investigate the holdings, won a victory in the Supreme Court, the records show, when it was decided that a defense Van Wormer has made against a suit she instituted was not acceptable.

Mrs. Bean's trip to Marysville, Cal., where the property was located, showed her that her agent had invested much of her money in a moving picture show instead of machinery for the mine.

Van Wormer in his own defense lodged a counter-claim calling for $50,000 damage to reputation and for $500,000 for loss because Mrs. Bean did not let him alone in Califorina. Justice Platzek failed to agree with him and said there were no merits in the counter-claim. Judgment for $7,022 was entered.

CORRESPONDENCE

Wanted—An Educational Film Exchange

January 14, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture News.

Dear Mr. Saunders:

It is no use kicking about the "cowboy and Indian" pictures shown in our theaters: as long as the public shows its appreciation at the box office manufacturers will continue to make them. It is interesting to note, too, that even in classic London, where all that sort of thing, don't you know, is not good taste, the Western drama films (more film than drama) draw the crowds.

The public does not attend a nickelodeon for education, unless that education be very well disguised.

But that the moving picture will enter upon the educational field not as an adjunct to, but as a part of, the training of the people from kindergarten to university, is a self-evident truth.

The U. S. spends more money than any other country on the education of her people, and, even though some of this money finds its way into channels for which it was not intended, the school education is about as good as any in the world.

In England, moving pictures have been in use in many of the common schools for years, and there is at least one picture exchange that never rents a film to a theater, depending solely on schools, universities, clinics, and other institutions.

The difficulty in the way of adopting moving pictures in schools here is twofold: first, the heavy cost of the machine and its installation, together with the exceptional precautions that must be taken to satisfy the fire laws; next, the impossibility of securing a regular service of educational films.

The first of these drawbacks can readily be overcome by getting the sanction of the school trustees to run a series of entertainments or lectures, the proceeds of which shall pay for the installation. There are other means also, but the one suggested will probably appeal to schools in thinly populated districts.

The matter of a regular supply of films is the deadlock. There is possibly only one way out of it, and that is the establishment of a separate educational exchange. If some wide-awake exchange man who has not sold his birthright to any trust, and who has all those dollars he has made stowed away in the bank, will quietly buy up a copy or two of every educational film he can get, he will soon have a good outlet for them. And the advantage is all on his side. His films will last for years, for they will not be run ten hours a day and raced through the machine as they are in New York; there will not be any difference in value between "first-run" stuff and films that should be retired, for an educational film has always its value.

Now, this letter is not mere twaddle; it is no after-dinner speech, but a plain business suggestion from a school principal who would like to hear from schools willing to join in an educational propaganda; from manufacturers who have educational negatives stowed away in their vaults; and from exchanges who are wise enough to look at the business of to-morrow as well as to-day.

Such correspondence will be welcome.

LINDSAY BANCROFT, care of M. P. News, N. Y.

Jan. 11, 1911.

Mr. A. H. Saunders,
Editor Moving Picture News—

Dear Friend:

Am in doubt as to how I should write a letter to express the pleasure I felt on reading the News of January 7, 1911, but I will try to make plain what I want to say: "The Oracle Column" is something we have wanted for a long time, and to know that we (Union Operators) are to get what we want in a paper that has stood up for the rights of the "Man in the Box" so strong, in the past, that I, for one, cannot tell you how grateful I am, and I am sure that the Union Operators, throughout Canada and the United States, will be glad to get the information in the News, because it is the only paper in the moving picture business that carries the UNION LABEL that I have seen, and I have read a few. Now, Mr. Saunders, this column could not start at a better time, as the operators have begun to see what I told them (two years ago) was true, that the "moving picture howl" was nothing but a lot of knockers, and any information worth while given by them was not due to any study they ever made, but came from some operator who had made a careful study of it. I believe they roasted a letter of mine that appeared in the News, because there was too much slang in it. I think they have fallen into the rut themselves, as I have heard a number of people talk about it. "Revenge is sweet." To see the boys dropping off buying the "Howl" is the best revenge I have ever had, which only goes to prove the old saying, "It's a long lane, etc." Thanking you in advance for your most welcome New Year's gift—"The Column"—with best wishes for the Moving Picture News and its Editor; also hoping the News will double its circulation at the very least in another year is the hearty wish of the Man in the Box.

JAMES GIRVAN,
233 W. 36th St., or Academy of Music, Jersey City, N. J.

Jan. 11, 1911.

Mr. Wm. E. Smith, E. E.,

Dear Sir:

It is with the greatest pleasure I take up my pen to answer the last question in your article in the Moving Picture News of January 7. Yes, speaking for myself, I do want that page. It is something of interest to all operators. "The Oracle Column" cannot start any too soon for me. I have talked to a number of operators, who have subscribed for the News from the start, and they all seemed pleased to know that we were to have a column purely for operators. With best wishes for the success of the column and its Editor and the Editor of the News, I remain, yours truly,

JAMES GIRVAN,
233 W. 36th St., City, or Academy of Music, Jersey City, N. J.

F. R. P. S., ETC.

W. H. J. writes:—Will you kindly inform me through the columns of the News what the mystical—if such a term can be applied to them—letters F.R.P.S. means, and how can I secure them?

I am also interested to learn your views concerning the educational quality—if any—of such films illustrating circus tricks like the "101 Ranch" and "Two Bills."

Answer.—There is no mysticism whatever in the letters F.R.P.S. They represent Fellow Royal Photographic Society, and are given to all amateur photographers who have made special studies of photography. A few professionals who have advanced are also honored with the appellation. Every applicant for fellowship must be a member of the society. The fees are $2.50 for members, or they may be affiliated through some local society. Fellows pay $10.00 per year. Application to the Secretary, Great Russell street, London, W. C., England, will bring you all particulars.

The other query we have answered privately, as we have also done with letters from other educators. It is not a proper query for us to answer, although we have our own opinions, and have expressed them forcibly in our private capacity. If our readers consider them of sufficient importance for them to express their views as to the educational quality or otherwise, our columns will be open to them. We suggest the following questions:

1. Are such films of any interest from an educational standpoint?

2. Can they be advocated for use in the large educational centers to instruct the pupils?

3. Is there any reason why such subjects (other than a showman's view) should be immortalized?

In answering these queries the writer's names and addresses must be plainly written. Not necessarily for publication, but for bonafides. We reserve to ourselves the right to publish the answers or otherwise.

A Strong Amalgamation of Interests

Active preparations are being made for the incorporation of the National Theatrical Corporation of America and Associated Theatrical Enterprises, which when completely organized will manage and operate not less than sixteen separate and individual business concerns. Articles of incorporation will be filed at an early date and will provide for a capitalization of $50,000, independent of the capital stock of the subsidiary companies, each of which is to be incorporated for $10,000.

These sixteen enterprises are the Rialto Booking Exchange, National Theatrical Clearing House, Inter State Press and Publicity Bureau, Metropolitan Carnival Concern, Universal Theatrical Supply Company, Royal Scienic Studios, Neutral Vaudeville Producing Association, Henderson's Theatrical Department Store, National Lyceum Bureau, International Program Advertising Company, Langlois Costume and Decorating Company, Theatrical Correspondence School of America, Amalgamated Film Exchange, United Theatre Company and the Lyric Music Publishing Company.

The officers of the parent company are Charles E. Henderson, president; Leslie C. Langlois, secretary, and Sam W. Seelig, treasurer.

Eastern and Middle West capital is back of the project.

At present the concern is occupying temporary executive offices at 120-122 East Randolph street, Chicago, Ill., but, after the merger of the associated enterprises is effected on February 1st, a move will be made to more spacious quarters.

It is the intention and purpose of the management to operate on an extensive scale and, with that plan in view, branch offices are to be established in all the large cities of the United States and Canada, with headquarters in Chicago.

NICKELODIA NEWS IN BRIEF

Stockton, Cal.—W. J. Carey and R. Musselman have opened a new moving picture theater here. It is known as the Bell.

Bevier, Mo.—Ed. Watson and Roy Brammer have opened a new moving picture theater here.

Heavener, Okla.—W. S. Hoag, of Fort Smith, and associates have commenced the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Monroe City, Mo.—R. A. Kirby, of this city, has decided to open a new moving picture theater in Hannibal.

Centerville, Iowa.—O. E. Dickeson has purchased the Star theater here from G. E. Morrow.

Lead, S. Dak.—C. S. Protero and Frank Rainey have sold their interest in the Iris Theater here to O. F. Trisler.

Fort Scott, Kas.—Sheriff P. C. Hesser has purchased the Vaudette Moving Picture Theater here, and will soon take possession.

Montgomery, Ind.—Walker & Bingham have opened a new moving picture theater here.

Auburn, Neb.—S. W. Eustis and W. L. Bousfield have purchased the Ideal Theater here from Workman & Bennett.

Walter, Okla.—L. G. Dean's moving picture theater here was destroyed by fire.

Youngstown, O.—Paul Fitch and Walter Hanitch have sold the Bijou Theatorium to Robbins Bros.

Texarkana, Tex.—W. C. Hardin is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Mr. Walter Seeley is making arrangements to open a new moving picture show here.

Minot, N. Dak.—R. H. Emerson is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Eureka Valley Improvement Association is making arrangements to open the new Castro Theater here.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Atlas Amusement Company has opened a new theater at Third and Lind avenue.

Delphos, Ohio.—H. H. Lampe is making arrangements to open a new moving picture show on Main street.

Hartford, Mich.—Will Lay has purchased the Gem electric theater, in the Conklin building, from Hotchkiss & Brown.

Waterloo, Ia.—F. L. Koppelberger has purchased the Crystal moving picture theater here and taken possession.

Oskaloosa, Ia.—Harry Bowen has opened a new moving picture theater here. It is known as the Orient.

Camden, N. J.—The Camden Amusement Company is planning the erection of a new vaudeville and moving picture theater at 209 Broadway.

ADVICE TO OPERATORS

Oracle Department

By WM. E. SMITH, E. E.

PRACTICAL ARTICLES FOR ALL

This department has been started with the idea to encourage the operators to obtain the best results with their Projecting Machines Queries and questions pertaining to the Moving Picture arts addressed to the Editor of this department will be published in this department. Only answers to inquiries of general interest will be published here for the benefit of all readers. On account of the large amount of inquiries received it may not be possible to print all the answers in any one issue, as each has to take its turn. Correspondents should bear this in mind when writing. If a quick reply is wanted by mail, a charge of 15 cents is made for each question. Special information requiring a large amount of calculation and labor cannot be furnished without remuneration. The ORACLE has no fixed rate for such work, but will inform the correspondent promptly as to the charges involved. When writing only one side of question sheet must be used; diagrams and drawings must invariably be on a separate sheet. Name and address must always be given in all letters. No attention paid to letters not observing above rules.

NEW YORK CITY OPERATORS TAKE NOTICE

Rules and Regulations

1. An applicant for a moving picture operator's license must fill out, under oath, a blank form of application, which may be obtained at the registry office of the Bureau, Room 1717, Park Row Building, Manhattan. It is no longer required that the applicant shall appear in person to register.

2. As soon as practicable after the filing of an application the applicant will receive a written summons to appear for examination.

Examination will in all cases be conducted in the presence of at least two examiners, who will endeavor through observation as well as questioning to ascertain the candidate's competency, by testing his practical knowledge of the following subjects:

(a) The handling of the head, lamp, appliances and wiring.

(b) Wire sizes and insulations, and the various house wiring systems.

(c) Testing for voltage and for electrical defects in lamp and wiring.

(d) The use of the various safety appliances, mechanical and electrical.

(e) General precautions to be observed in operating moving picture apparatus and its connections.

Examinations will be held each Monday beginning at 10 A.M., at Room 2333, Park Row Building. Extra days will be designated for the holding of examinations, if found necessary.

No candidate who fails to pass an examination will be re-examined within three months of the date of his last unsuccessful examination.

3. A certificate, which shall serve also as an identification card, will be issued as promptly as practicable to each person who shall have passed the prescribed examination.

4. The Commissioner reserves the right to revoke or suspend a license or any of the following causes:

Failing to display operators' certificate where moving picture apparatus is being operated.

Making of false statements in the application for license.

Smoking, or permitting smoking in the booth at any time.

Permitting any fire or open light in booth while audience is in the building.

Allowing door of booth to remain open while operating.

Permitting an unlicensed person other than the manager or an authorized city official to be or remain in the booth while audience is in the building.

Having more than three films per machine in booth at one time.

Having any film exposed in booth at any time, other than the one film in process of transfer to or from machine or from upper to lower magazine.

Allowing films to be rewound in booth while machine is being operated.

Over-fusing, or making improper electrical connections.

Lending a certificate to any other person to enable the latter to operate.

Failing to test apparatus and connections prior to each performance.

Operating a defective machine.

Operating a machine of a type not approved by the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity.

Maintaining a dirty booth.

Latching door on inside, removing handle from outside of door or otherwise delaying access of authorized person.

Operating or assisting in the operation of any picture machine apparatus employing a lamp served by oxy-hydrogen or acetylene gas.

Failing to report promptly to the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity the occurrence of any film fire, and the apparent cause thereof.

5. A copy of the above rules and regulations shall be displayed in a conspicuous place in the room where the picture machine is being operated.

NATIONAL BOARD OF FIRE UNDERWRITERS' RULES

I would advise all operators and managers of moving picture theaters to read over carefully the following rules of the National Board of Fire Underwriters. They were compiled with a large amount of labor, and will not be published in the department again. (Wm. E. Smith, E.E.)

Extracts from Fire Underwriters' Rules

General Rules

14. Wires.

a. Must not be of smaller size than No. 14 B. & S. gauge, except as allowed for fixture work and pendant cord.

b. Tie wires must have an insulation equal to that of the conductors they confine. For wire smaller than No. 8 B. & S. gauge split knobs or cleats shall be used except at dead ends, and tie wires and knobs will not be approved.

Screws must be used for fastening all cleats and knobs which are arranged to grip the wire.

c. Must be so spliced or joined as to be both mechanically and electrically secure without solder. The joints must then be soldered unless made with some form of approved splicing device, and covered with an insulation equal to that on the conductors.

Stranded wires (except in flexible cords) must be soldered before being fastened under clamps or binding screws and whether stranded or solid, when they have a conductivity greater than that of No. 8 B. & S. gauge they must be soldered into lugs for all terminal connections, except where an approved solderless terminal connector is used.

d. Must be separated from contact with walls, floors, timbers or partitions through which they may pass by non-combustible, non-absorptive, insulating tubes, such as glass or porcelain, except at outlets where approved flexible tubing is required.

Bushings must be long enough to bush the entire length of the hole in one continuous piece, or else the hole must first be bushed by a continuous waterproof tube. This tube may be a conductor, such as iron pipe, but in that case an insulating bushing must be pushed into each end of it, extending far enough to keep the wire absolutely out of contact with the pipe.

e. Must be kept free from contact with gas, water or other metallic piping, or any other conductors or conducting material which they may cross, by some continuous and firmly fixed non-conductor, creating a permanent separation. Deviations from this rule may sometimes be allowed by special permission.

Where tubes are used they must be securely fastened at the ends to prevent them from moving along the wire.

f. Must be so placed in wet places that an air space will be left between conductors and pipes in crossing, and the former must be run in such a way that they cannot come in contact with the pipe accidentally. Wires should be run over, rather than under, pipes upon which moisture is likely to gather or which, by leaking, might cause trouble on a circuit.

g. The installation of electrical conductors in wooden molding, or on insulators, in elevator shafts, will not be approved, but conductors may be installed in such shafts if encased in approved metal conduits.

16. Table of Carrying Capacity of Wires.

a. The following table, showing the allowable carrying capacity of copper wires and cables of 98 per cent conductivity, according to the standard adopted by the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, must be followed in placing interior conductors.

For insulated aluminum wire the safe carrying capacity is 84 per cent of that given in the following tables for copper wire with the same kind of insulation.

Table of Carrying Capacity of Wires—Continued.

B. &S. G.	Table A. Rubber Insulation. Amperes.	Table B. Other Insulations. Amperes.	Circular Mils
18	3	5	1,624
16	6	8	2,583
14	12	16	4,107
12	17	23	6,530
10	24	32	10,380
8	33	46	16,510
6	46	65	26,250
5	54	77	33,100
4	65	92	41,740
3	76	110	52,630
2	90	131	66,370
1	107	156	83,690
0	127	185	105,500
00	150	220	133,100
000	177	262	167,800
0000	210	312	211,600
Circular Mills.
200,000	200	300
300,000	270	400
400,000	330	500
500,000	390	590
600,000	450	680
700,000	500	760
800,000	550	840
900,000	600	920
1,000,000	650	1,000
1,100,000	690	1,080
1,200,000	730	1,150
1,300,000	770	1,220
1,400,000	810	1,290
1,500,000	850	1,360
1,600,000	890	1,430
1,700,000	930	1,490
1,800,000	970	1,550
1,900,000	1,010	1,610
2,000,000	1,050	1,670

The lower limit is specified for rubber-covered wires to prevent gradual deterioration of the high insulations by the heat of the wires, but not from fear of igniting the insulation. The question of drop is not taken into consideration in the above tables.

The carrying capacity of Nos. 16 and 18, B. & S. gage wire is given, but no smaller than No. 14 is to be used, except as allowed under rules for fixture wiring.

17. Switches, Cut-outs, Circuit-Breakers, Etc.

a. On constant potential circuits, all service switches and all switches controlling circuits supplying current to motors or heating devices, and all fuses, unless otherwise provided (for exceptions as to switches see Nos. 8 c, 23a and 34A—c; for exceptions as to cut-outs see No. 21 a and b) must be so arranged that the fuses will protect and the opening of the switch will disconnect all of the wires; that is, in the two-wire system the two wires, and the three-wire system the three wires, must be protected by the fuses and disconnected by the operation of the switch.

When installed without other automatic overload protective devices automatic overload circuit breakers must have the poles and trip coils so arranged as to afford complete protection against overloads and short circuits, and if also used in place of the switch must be so arranged that no one pole can be opened manually without disconnecting all the wires.

b. Must not be placed in the immediate vicinity of easily ignitible stuff or where exposed to inflammable gases or dust or to flyings of combustible material.

c. Must, when exposed to dampness, either be enclosed in a moisture-proof box or mounted on porcelain knobs. The cover of the box must be so made that no moisture which may collect on the top or sides of the box can enter it.

d. Time switches, sign flashers and similar appliances must be of approved design and enclosed in an approved cabinet.

30. Economy Coils.

a. Economy and compensator coils for arc lamps must be mounted on non-combustible, non-absorptive, insulating supports, such as glass or porcelain, allowing an air space of at least one inch between frame and support, and must in general be treated as sources of heat.

30 A. Transformers.

Oil transformers:

a. Must not be placed inside of any building except central stations and sub-stations, unless by special permission of the inspection department having jurisdiction.

Air cooled transformers:—

The following sections do not apply to apparatus or fittings, the operation of which depends either wholly or in part upon special transformers embodied in the devices, but all such apparatus or fittings must be submitted for special examination and approval before being used.

b. Must not be placed inside of any building excepting central stations and sub-stations, if the highest voltage of either primary or secondary exceeds 550 volts.

c. Must be so mounted that the case shall be at a distance of at least one foot from combustible material or separated therefrom by non-combustible, non-absorptive, insulating material, such as slate, marble or soapstone. This will require the use of a slab or panel somewhat larger than the transformer.

21. Automatic Cut-outs (Fuses and Circuit Breakers). (See also No. 17.)

a. Must be placed on all service wires, either overhead or underground, in the nearest accessible place to the point where they enter the building and inside the walls, and arranged to cut off the entire current from the building.

Where the switch required by No. 22 a is inside the building, the cut-out required by this section must be placed so as to protect it.

For three-wire (not three-phase) systems the fuse in the neutral wire may be omitted, provided the neutral wire is of equal carrying capacity to the larger of the outside wires, and is grounded as provided for in No. 13A.

b. Must be placed at every point where a change is made in the size of the wire unless the cut-out in the larger wire will protect the smaller (see No. 16.)]

For three-wire (not three-phase) systems the fuse in the neutral wire except that called for under No. 21 d, may be omitted, provided the neutral wire is of equal carrying capacity to the larger of the outside wires, and is grounded as provided for in No. 13 A.

c. Must be in plain sight, or enclosed in an approved cabinet, and readily accessible. They must not be placed in the canopies or shells of fixtures.

Link fuses may be used only when mounted on approved slate or marble bases and must be enclosed in dust-tight, fireproofed cabinets, except on switchboards.

d. Must be so placed that no set of incandescent lamps requiring more than 660 watts, whether grouped on one fixture or on several fixtures or pendants, will be dependent upon one cut-out.

Special permission may be given in writing by the Inspection Department having jurisdiction, for departure from this rule, in the case of large chandeliers. (For exceptions, see rule on theater wiring and List of Fittings for rules for electric signs.) All branches or taps from any three-wire system which are directly connected to lamp sockets or other translating devices, must be run as two-wire circuits if the fuses are omitted in the neutral, or if the difference of potential between the two outside wires is over 250 volts, and both wires of such branch or tap circuits must be protected by proper fuses.

The fuses in the branch cut-outs must not have a rated capacity greater than 6 amperes on 110 volt systems, and 3 amperes on 220 volt systems.

e. The rated capacity of fuses must not exceed the allowable carrying capacity of the wire as given in No. 16. Circuit-breakers must not be set more than 30 per cent above allowable carrying capacity of the wire, unless a fusible cut-out is also installed on the circuit, in which event the circuit-breaker may be set as high as 100 per cent above such capacity.

In the arms of fixtures carrying a single socket a No. 18 B. & S. gage wire supplying only one socket will be considered as properly protected by a 6 ampere fuse.

Operator W. H. J .asks:—What are the principal causes of short circuiting?

Ans:—There are several reasons why a short circuit may occur. 1. The two wires of opposite polarity coming in contact will cause a short circuit. 2. In the Edison 3-wire system where the neutral is grounded, either one of the outside wires coming in contact with any grounded metallic conductor is generally grounded, will cause a short circuit and blow your main line uses.

Vaudeville Music

VARIETIES IN MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

BY FRA.

Illustrated Songs

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATRE

Any one who goes to this theatre is sure not only to see the latest moving picture but—and this is a most important point—they will be thrown upon the screen in first-class shape. People do not think enough about the operator; he can make or he can spoil the best film ever made. At this theater the operator is up in the gallery, hut he must not he forgotten. Tony Pierson is as good a fellow, and as good an operator as a man can find in a very long walk. Long life to you, Tony; long may you reign from your throne, to rule over us folk lower down in the world.

John Driscoll, the illustrated balladist, hit the popular fancy to the dot. The pianist has my sincere thanks for the way he accompanied the Imp's "Melody." It was heautiful.

The vaudeville included:

The Alvares Duo. A man and woman billed as a European novelty. The turn is neat, clean and clever. The balancing upon the trapeze reminded me of Japanese days. Their costumes are just the thing. Work of this sort, when it goes smoothly and shows careful rehearsing, is always popular. The duo merited the applause they got.

Gotham City Comedy Four. This quartet of comicalities marched in to the strains of Guonod's "Soldiers' Chorus," and set the folk laughing. Mr. Levinsky has a humor of his own; it took. The whole thing is a real hit.

Five Licorice Sticks. Five, and Nettie Glenn. The licorice sticks are a man and a woman and two hoys—colored. Their dancing stunts are funny, and I think I may say, on one or two points, unique. They are laugh getters, especially "Mammy," and her lingeric. Nettie flits in in varied garbs. More care must he taken over that last song, or it will be flat. The theater was filled with laughters and claps.

Frint George & Co. Comedy sketch, "A Midnight Mishap." The title's a bit of a misfit. The joke turns up a brokendown pair, a young man and his colored man. They go to a house, supposed to he haunted, in order to earn the reward offered by the lady of the house. There are ghostly happenings, and the terror of the colored man, who apes a brave soldier, makes the fun.

Burns and Pryor. A pair who did an Irish turn.

Howard's Performing Bears. Very good.

Linden & Dorman. Conversationalists who convulsed the house.

KEITH & PROCTOR'S UNION SQUARE THEATER

Some excellent epigrams on the screen call for attention. The lecture on Quebec, both as to slides and matter, is a marked improvement upon its immediate predecessor. The way in which Operator Bastedo handles the reels is a delight to all lovers of moving pictures. He is an old-timer of whom I shall speak more fully ere long. Crowded houses all day have been the ordinary state of affairs all the week.

On Wednesday morning there was a departure, the pianist sang the chorus of "Kiss Me, Honey," with success. The men in the audience followed to a man, and by their applause showed an encore was desired.

Jas. Grady and Company. A rural sketch. The audience liked this. The staging was good, and the whole thing was punctuated with laughs, and concluded with applause. There is an old curmudgeon of a man, who was satisfactorily personified, a bully of a nephew, who overdoes his villainy, and a pert little minx, who makes snappy and also acid remarks that tickle. There is a little plot that runs through. I wish the wicked points of the men were not quite so wicked. The girl finds out who she is, and lo! all is well.

Paul Azard and Company. Acrobats. There is a simplicity and directness about the work of the two men and the girl that are good. At the outset the performers are clothed in white togas of the classic cut. When these are shed, the classic air still prevails. Much of the work is clever; all is clean cut and capable. The spring-hoard vault fetched the house. A genuinely interesting turn that deserved the applause it got.

Ethel A. Clark. Singing and dancing. Three changes of costumes, all pretty. This young lady has a very pleasing voice, and deserved more applause than she got.

A Night on the Bowery. For the life of me I couldn't make out the reason of the name. The Salvation Boy sang "The Rosary" well, the "Bum's" monologue wasn't bad, while the mate of the "Katydid" got a laugh or two. But that Bowery stuck in my throat, the real one was too near.

La-La-Mi. An English lord, who, hy the way, had better take a dose of glycerine or dynamite, falls in love with an Indian girl, who has operatic possihilities; his sister very promptly squashes all matrimonial ideas. The Indian girl has a good voice, of considerable range, which won some applause. Her song appeal to the Wilderness, in Indian garb, when she determines to go to the pueblo and her people, was somewhat novel. The whole does not hang together properly; the sketch contains some good points, but ought to be recast.

Gretchen Hartman. Singing.

Bigney.

Fur Musical Mays.

Harvey and Harvey. Comedy.

THE THEATER UNIQUE

This go-ahead home of moving pictures and vaudeville goes on its way rejoicing. Large and appreciative audiences fill the theater daily. There have been some good runs of Independent pictures this week, that more than once got a good clap.

Here are some of the good things in vaudeville offered:

Frank and Shumann. A man and woman in character songs; the audience liked them.

Dunn Sisters. Singing and buck dancing who carried the role satisfactorily.

Ledman and Buckner. Colored comedians who got all kinds of laughs.

Reta Redmond. Singing; one of the features, and deservedly so.

Walter Wilkins. "Little Tich." Singing, dancing and juggling. A medley which the people thoroughly enjoyed.

MICHAEL COSTELLO

It is with deep regret I have to record the death of my good friend, Michael Costello, doorman of the Theater Unique since its opening. Always the same kindly, courteous son of Erin, he will he greatly missed and deeply regretted by the patrons of the house. He was one who had "seen better days," and showed it both in manners and speech The management and his fellow employees sub scribed for a beautiful pillow of nowers as a token of their respect. He was sixty-eight years of age, a widower, and only really sick for six days. His funeral took place on Monday, from his late residence, 20 East Eighty-eighth Street, the services being held in the Roman Catholic Church. A good, earnest, simple-minded hrother was Michael, one we could ill spare.—R. I. P.

THE DEWEY

This vigorous, bustling house keeps one on the jump to know what is happening there. A good selection of moving pictures, changed daily, and a vaudeville, changed very nearly as often, affords the patrons a good, up-to-date entertainment of a varied and comprehensive kind.

Here's a selection from the menu:

Ryan and Manning. Singing and dancing; good.

Nalon. Electrical Musical Act. Interesting and novel.

Woodall. Fifteen minutes of song and story that went.

Bernard and Curran. Singing, dancing and talking.

Riley and Fearrent. In a live and gingery sketch.

THE CITY THEATRE, FOURTEENTH STREET

Five Flying Hallys. 'Way up.

Clark and Verdi.

Walker and Ill. Pleasing comedy, "Just a Girl."

Nelson, Oswald and Berger.

The Van Cooks.

Parks and Mayfield. In their interesting playlet.

Besides which, reels of moving pictures.

MANHATTAN OPERA HOUSE

In addition to first-class moving pictures the bill included Sam Mann in his jolly sketch, "The New Leader," a satisfactory first appearance here. Irene Franklin, with some first-class new songs; McGinness Brothers, in the one-act, "Circumstantial Evidence," and the Ten Pianophiend Minstrels.

FIFTH AVENUE

Julius Stieger, in the "Fifth Commandment," and the rest of the "Split," "The Way to the Heart." Edwin Holt gave "A Mayor and the Manicure," and Max Gruber's "Equestrian."

BUCKNER VAUDEVILLE

Here is the exceedingly attractive program given at Miner's in the Bronx Theater. Seven feature and novelty acts as well as an excellent selection of moving pictures.

THE FULTON

Ed. Blondell, a Brooklyn favorite, and his company in a funny sketch, "The Lost Boy." The hill also includes the Altus Brothers, club swinging. Musical Loew, in a skillful musical turn; the Diamond Comedy Four, eccentric singers and dancers; Belle Meyers, a pleasing musical comedienne, and the Clark Brothers, songs and pianologue.

GREENPOINT

Nat. M. Wills, with all the fun he has gathered at the other side of the ocean, also Sidney James and company; pretty Mabel Russell, with Eddie Leonard, the black-faced singer; and Beatrice Ingram and company, in "The Duchess."

THE BIJOU CHANGES HANDS

Corse Payton has said a fond farewell to the Bijou. It has passed over to Marcus Loew, who installs moving pictures and vaudeville. Mr. Loew has leased the building until 1913. Payton has gone on the vaudeville stage, opening at the American Music Hall, where he made a hig hit in "Lend Me Five Shillings."

No Back Seat for "Vaudy"

I don't see why under the canopy anybody need to apologize for working. We've simply got to, and I guess the man or woman that must work to keep a home together and live an honest life has no need to be ashamed of any honorable labor. Nursing dogs in childless homes, buying yachts and diamonds on other folks' work, and living useless lives, made up of divorces, Delmonico's and the devil, is looked up to by some with awe. Why? Half the millionaires could be sent to Alaska and be less loss than one white singer or shirt-waist girl. I know we're supposed to be democratic—with a small "d"—but our press will give a front page scare head to a monkey dinner at Newport, and a scant few lines, if even that, to the death of a real man—who's only heen honest. That's nothing.

On the vaudeville stage for years I've been told by men, and especially women, why they were there. Jumping Jehosophat, it makes my blood boil. The vaudeville stage has no need to apologize, it's as good as any other. All the world does not want to go and look wise, when the music is over their heads and Signor Belfusco is tearing the air to tatters with arpeggios in Italian; every one does not wish to witness drama, or Mrs. Anderefsky discuss social problems. We want to be amused sometimes and besides to be honest we work for the fellows who have the boxes at the big houses, and so we cannot afford to go there. Vaudeville with its skilled acrobats, its trained singers and dancers, its clever humorists and its jolly, human short sketches fills the bill. The press howls for short stories. Vaudeville gives them, alive and hot, in the scores of clever, living eighteen-minute country and city sketches. Vaudeville has no need to apologize, it has its place—and a mighty strong one, don't you forget it!

Comrades, don't you apologize for being on the vaudeville stage, you don't have to. If a man or woman has to leave a different phase of life, and use some talent in "Vaudy" to get a living, is there any need to apologize? These days the vaudeville stage demands the best. Let anybody with a "swelled head" try a turn, we know where their first turn will be their last.

Boys and girls, working vaudeville is a darned sight better than heing a thieving hank somebody. We're not thieves, if we can't fill the bill, we're 'fi'red," but, thank the Fates, we're not "fired" into jail.

Of course, there are "bad eggs" among us, headliners, too; so there are in cathedrals. My point is, there's no need to apologize for honest work in "Vaudy."

You're not playing "Hamlet," nor singing "Il Trovatore," true, but a good many folks want to hear "Home, Sweet Home." There's a few folk that can only afford ten cents—they make the millions that pay for operas, and they want something.

Is it a 10 or 25-cent audience, that's nothing, the vaudeville folk do their best, and that best they have no need to he ashamed of. If in vaudeville, let's stand together, no apologizing.

"The guinea's hut the gowden stamp,
The Man's the man for a' that!"

LEVI LO. RELEASES

"First You Get the Money, Then You Get the Flat, Then It's Time Enough to Get the Girl." .. Bew,;f?N7 havuX-'CUt'r?omC sh rdlu cmfy Published by Shapiro, words by Al Bryan and music hy Fred Fisher. Another great novelty song hy the writers of "Any Little Girl That's a Nice Little Girl Is the Right Little Girl for Me." It is absolutely original and so are the slides. Every slide means a laugh, consequently every singer cleans up with it. Be sure and get it.

"Pity Is Kin to Love." Words and music by Seymour Brown and Nat Ayer, published by Shapiro. The title tells the story. One of those beautiful sentimental songs that reach the heart and we all love to hear. The Levi Co. has illustrated it in a hefitting manner, every picture full of meaning, and it will probably become a big favorite.

Manufacturers' Synopsis of Films

"MAID OR MAN"

"Imp" Release, Monday, January 30, 1911

Jimmie Keene is an ardent devotee of the manly art of self-defense, and never misses a boxing match when he can help it. Jimmie's father, however, being a deacon in the church, naturally frowns upon such affairs, regarding them as brutal and demoralizing.

Jimmie buys a ticket for an exhibition of this nature, but in rushing out of the house to attend it, he drops his ticket and leaves without it. The ticket is picked up by the maid, who hands it to Deacon Keene, who regards it with horror.

Jimmie returns in search of the lost pasteboard, and finds that his father has it. The deacon starts to reprove Jimmie, but the latter turns defeat into victory, by persuading his father to accompany him and judge with his own eyes whether or not boxing exhibitions are a pernicious form of amusement.

At the height of the "star bout," when every one is yelling at the top of his lungs—even including Deacon Keene, who is thoroughly enjoying himself—the place is raided by the police. Jimmie and his father make a tolerable "get-away" down a fire escape, but are closely pursued by a persistent officer, who would certainly have "landed" the deacon had not Jimmie displayed some of his science and "handed" him an uppercut which sent the policeman "to the mat," where he "took the count."

Father and son arrive at their own garden wall and are just clearing it when the officer overtakes them and, making a grab at Jimmie, tears off a piece of his coat. When the policeman tries to follow them, he is stopped by the large and healthy family watch dog, and remains to argue the matter with him.

When the fugitives arrive in the house, Elsie, Jimmie's sister, who is "wise" to the whole thing, assists Jimmie in disguising himself in the maid's clothes. The policeman, having pacified "Hector," enters, and demands the surrender of the individual who has resisted arrest by knocking him down. Deacon Keene, who is found busily reading a deeply religious book and nursing a black eye, is surprised at the intrusion, and denies knowledge of anything. The officer searches the house and finds the torn coat, which matches the piece of goods he still holds, and insists upon an explanation.

Then Jimmie appears as the maid, and by his coquettish arts wins the attention of the representative of the law to such an extent that he completely forgets his mission and being escorted to the kitchen, divides his time between drinking a bottle of beer and making love to the attractive domestic.

He finally leaves, escorted to the back gate by Jimmie. When Jimmie returns to the library, he falls into his father's arms, who embraces him warmly. Jimmie's mother then appears, and is horrified at seeing her staid old husband in such a familiar attitude with a strange maid-servant. But the deacon laughs and says, as his son removes his false hair and cap, "Why, it's only Jimmie, having a little fun."

"AN IMAGINARY ELOPEMENT"

"Imp" Release, Thursday, February 2d, 1911, No. 1

A happy young couple are Guy Judson and his wife, Dora, until she receives a letter from her parents, advising her that her father is going to call for her to take her on a little excursion. When her father arrives, she joyfully greets him, and quickly getting ready, goes away with him, but leaves behind her, in the spirit of fun, a little note for Guy. And therein begins the trouble. The note simply announces the fact that she has "gone away with a handsomer man."

Guy finds the note and immediately goes out of his head. He rushes to the nearest detective agency for assistance in recovering his spouse. Now, it happens that Abel Sharpe, an alleged detective, who has been refused employment by the manager of the agency, has sneaked into the office and made himself the possessor of a badge, and is seated in the manager's chair when Guy arrives. To him Guy pours out his woes, and is assured of his help at once. Taking from a box a lot of wigs, beards, etc., Abel accompanies Guy to his home and begins operations.

Going forth he constantly changes his disguises and drags into Guy's home every young woman he meets, only to be told that he has the wrong woman. He seizes one girl at the railroad station, about to get into a train, catches another one on the street, and finally arrests Guy's colored cook, as she leaves the front gate for an airing. Guy at last becomes so enraged that he kicks Abel about the room and leaves in disgust. Then, all of Abel's victims, accompanied by a policeman, arrive on the scene, and what is left of him is taken to a police station.

After all the excitement is over, Dora arrives with her father, and is kissing him farewell, when Guy enters, and is about to attack his papa-in-law, when he discovers in time who the "handsomer man" really is, and laughing heartily at his ludicrous mistake, he explains matters, and describes his horrible sensations of the afternoon.

"THE MIX-UP"

"Imp" Release, Thursday, February 2d, 1911, No. 2

Mrs. Harry Hawkins has the ill-fortune to drop her chain purse on the street and the still greater misfortune to have it picked up by Cyril Percy, who returns it to her in a most gushing manner. After she has thanked him and turned to walk away, he gazes at her receding form, enraptured by her appearance, and straightway follows her.

When she reaches her home, he again accosts her, but she escapes him by running into the house and slamming the door in his face. Cyril, however, belongs to the persistent and irrepressible order of mashers, and so, running around the house, and climbing up onto a snow bank, he peers into a window, and seeing her inside, telling her troubles to Molly, the maid, he raises the window, and entering the room, rushes to her side and declares his undying affection for her. She beats a hasty retreat, ordering Molly to show him the door. He is not at all discouraged by his reception, but handing Molly a liberal tip, begs her to secrete him somewhere until he has the opportunity of meeting his inamorata again. Molly puts him in a large closet, and then, looking out of the window, sees her sweetheart, Mike Dugan, a second-rate heavy-weight prize-fighter. She invites him in and explains the situation to him, and asks hiw to throw the unwelcome visitor out of the house. Before, however, she can tell him where Cyril is concealed she is called from the room.

Then Harry Hawkins, the husband, who has been away on a trip, arrives home, and as he answers to the description of Cyril, Mike "gets busy," and with a mighty lift, shoots Hawkins through the window onto the snow bank. Mrs. Hawkins and Molly then enter and Mike tells them that he has done what he was requested to do. Mrs. Hawkins is delighted, and thanking him heartily, she rewards him by giving him a bill of a large denomination. The three of them leave the room.

Poor Hawkins has, by this time, gathered himself together and returned to the house, where he meets Cyril, who has come from the closet. Cyril is busy explaining that he has called on business, when Mike re-enters the room, and while Cyril again returns to his closet, seizes Hawkins, and once more fires him from the window.

Hawkins is again entering the front door, when he meets the expressman with his trunk, and quickly unpacking it, he gets into it and orders the man to deliver him inside. His orders are obeyed, and he once more finds himself back in the room. As he starts to raise the lid, he hears some one coming, and lets it fall back into place. Mrs. Hawkins, Molly and Mike are entering the room just as the lid falls and, thinking the ubiquitous Cyril is concealed in the trunk, Mike picks it up and hurls it from the window, and Hawkins again lands on the snow bank. Then Mike recalls the expressman and orders him to take the trunk away.

Hawkins falls through the bottom of the trunk, and again braves the front door. No sooner does Mike see him than he seizes him, and is proceeding to shake the life out of him, when Mrs. Hawkins rushes to the rescue and explains matters.

Then Cyril, the unsuppressible, peers curiously and cautiously from his hiding place, and—— Well, he also goes flying through the window, propelled by the united efforts of Mike and Hawkins; and Peace, at last, spreads her wings over the home of the Hawkins.

ONLY IN THE WAY

Thanhouser Release, January 31st

When Mrs. Gage's little savings were swept away, and she found herself penniless, she naturally turned to her only son for support. Unfortunately for her, the son married, and his wife objected to the introduction of a mother-in-law into the household. At first her objections were overruled, but after the unwelcome guest had been domiciled with them for some time, she induced her husband to send his mother to a home for the aged.

But, in the meantime, the sweet-faced old woman had won a firm friend in the person of her little granddaughter, Marie, who found "Granny" to be just the friend she needed, and when the old lady was sent away, Marie refused to be comforted. "Granny's" only fault seemed to be that she was more or less helpless, and little Marie a cripple. If a good woman like "Granny" could be treated that way, the child argued, what could she expect?

And so the little one decided to run away; and what was more natural than that she should go to the other person who, like herself, was "only in the way"? So, after leaving a farewell note, she started.

Her childish note of farewell touched the hearts of her parents. Their selfishness was brought home to them, and when they found the two helpless ones, together and happy in each other's love, they did not have the heart or the desire to separate them. From that day on neither of them was "in the way," and, best of all, they were made to feel it.

ADRIFT

Thanhouser Release, February 3d

Jack Thorne, a young artist, finds his efforts unappreciated, and he and his wife and little daughter are on the verge of starvation. The final blow comes when his last painting, on which he had built much hope, was rejected by a rich man, whom an artist chum kindly brought to the impoverished studio.

Jack decides that he can struggle no longer. Unseen by his wife, he picks up his revolver, puts it in his pocket and goes out, intending to end everything. But his little daughter has watched him; she follows him and stays his hand. Her prayers and entreaties bring him to a realization of what his rash act would mean to the two helpless ones that would be left behind. Penitent and remorseful, he accompanies his child back to their poor home.

There he confesses to his wife that it was only the child's timely interference that saved him from ending it all. The mother drops on her knees beside her child, and clasping her in her arms, raises grateful eyes to Heaven in a prayer of thankfulness. Jack, looking up suddenly, sees the beautiful group of mother and child, with a light as if from Heaven upon them. Realizing that here is the inspiration and subject for which he has sought in vain, he calls for them not to move, and at once begins his great painting of them, which brings him fame and wealth.

But with wealth, the artist becomes dissatisfied with his wife, and infatuated with a beautiful society woman, whose portrait he is painting. The couple, happy in poverty, are now rapidly drifting on the shoals of matrimonial disaster, hut the child saves them. She is weeping one day when Miss Brent, the society woman, enters the room. Miss Brent, who has never seen the child hefore, asks the cause of her sorrow, and tries to comfort her. The child tells her, and Julia's heart is touched. Though she has contemptously ignored the wife, she feels that she cannot ruin the life of the helpless child, even to win the artist's love. On the spur of the moment, she writes a farewell note to Jack, gives it to the child, saying that it will cure all her sorrow. Then she goes out of their lives forever.

Jack realizes, when he sees that his child is the messenger, why Julia has broken with him. An outsider had made a sacrifice to save the future of little Marie, when he, her father, who had always loved her, had selfishly forgotten his duty. Remorsefully, he tears up the letter, and destroys the painting, not angrily, hut as a symbol that he has cast the original out of his life. Then he makes peace with his wife and daughter, who are joyfully ready to forgive, and tells them that their love will keep him in the right path for the rest of his life, and that the lesson he has been taught will never be forgotten.

HIS GREAT SACRIFICE

Atlas—Release February 1

A demonstration of modern surgery forms one of the strongest situations in this novel picture story. The story deals with a young girl who possessed a wonderful voice and rose to fame almost overnight. She was one of those who lost her head when success came and forgot her dearest friend, listening to flattery of an admiring throng.

But after the explosion in her dressing-room and the doctors had declared she was horribly disfigured for life, she found her admirers dropping off until she was left to suffer alone.

The loyal one, however, who had given her a musical education and watched her rise with pride and joy, was still the same true and devoted slave. Even when a great surgeon told him she could only he restored to her former beauty by skin grafting, he proved his great love hy offering himself to the operating knife.

The hig scene of the operation was replete with real surgical equipment, trained nurses and a well-known hospital surgeon. Details were handled accurately and true to life. There is an interesting conclusion to the story which you will also appreciate when you see the production.

THE COUNTING HOUSE MYSTERY

Yankee—Release February 3

Yes, the money disappeared while every man in the counting-room was present. Where that ten thousand dollars went was plainly a mystery for the police to fathom, and the only clue was a clerk who had heen slightly wild at times, therefore suspicion fell to his door, and the bungling law considered the case practically solved.

Nell Pierce did not accept the popular verdict, however, but unerringly hit upon a solution of the prohlem which proved her wonderful power of deduction.

To work out her astounding theory and prove its plausibility entailed great danger and effort on her part, hut she did not falter for an instant. She faced her duty as she saw it and struggled bravely on to victory. Dodging here and there, first as a blind war veteran, then as an Irish scruhwoman, then as a flirty stenographer, and even appearing on the scene in the difficult guise of an aged philosopher, Nell, the Yankee Girl Detective, finally brought her man to hay, and not only saved an innocent boy from prison but succeeded in unraveling one of the most baffling crimes of her career.

It is easily conceded hy those in authority that "The Counting House Mystery" is the greatest detective story yet conveyed to motion pictures. It comhines novelty in scenic and mechanical investure with sensational moments, while the large company represented have mastered their parts in a surprising manner.

MR. MUGGINS HAS HIS SEWING DONE

Gt. Northern—Release January 28

Muggins finds his wardrohe in a sad state of disrepair, and he proceeds to try and do a little mending himself. In sewing a patch to his trousers (after making white cotton hlack hy dipping it in an inkpot), he includes the carpet in the patch. As his progress does not seem satisfactory, he cogitates upon some better means of getting his sewing done. An idea strikes him, and he puts the following advertisement in a newspaper: "Wanted—A wife; must he ahle to do sewing, and give proof of her ahilities." There are a great many applicants for the position, furnishing numerous amusing complications that will not fail to produce just as many laughs.

THE TRIUMPH OF INTELLIGENCE

Mr. Smith has extraordinary strength, and shows it off to his weaker friend, who has rather a rough time. The friend exercises his ingenuity; brain conquers muscle, and Mr. Smith has to give in.

THE TAXICAB MYSTERY

Yankee—Release January 20

Usually a mystery story, either in book or film, is so easily solved hy the reader in the few chapters that interest dies hefore the end. Detective stories must contain strong dramatic climaxes and yet keep the reader puzzled all the time as to what will happen next. If the plot is thin and poorly disguised, the story hecomes a farce.

In "The Taxicab Mystery" we have written and produced one of the season's sensations, not only because it tells a tale of unusual interest, but at all times leaves the audience in suspense, waiting for the clever sleuth to solve the mystery.

He is aided hy a pretty stenographer who, in one scene, climbs to the transom and hreaks the glass with her slipper to allow the deadly fumes of gas to escape.

The chase through New York's busy streets is both novel and thrilling; in fact, every scene is a distinct departure from those usually seen in moving pictures. The part of Petrosio, Detective, is played by Mr. Krohner, who is familiar to our friends as "The Italian Sherlock Holmes." A strong cast supports Mr. Krohner, including Mayme Gardner, late star of "Death Valley," and other prominent players.

Especial attention is directed to the excellent camera manipulation by which most pleasing photographic results were accomplished.

NICKELODIA NEWS IN BRIEF

Darby, Pa.—Architect Charles E. Oelschalger, of Philadelphia, has completed the plans and specifications for the erection of a new theater for the Darby Amusement Co.

Findlay, Ohio.—Messrs. Ford & Chapman are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Ord, Neb.—Albert Lee has purchased the Ord moving picture theater and taken possession.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Architect void.

St. Louis, Mo.—O. T. Crawford is planning the erection of a new vaudeville and moving picture theater to be located on Fifteenth street.

Berkeley, Cal.—Phil H. Dahl has decided to open a new moving picture theater at 2107 Chattuck avenue.

Helena, Mont.—W. J. Hartwig is planning the erection of a new vaudeville and moving picture theater on Main street, near Grand.

Milwaukee, Wis.—J. Wasneiwski is planning the erection of a new theater on Third avenue.

Baltimore, Md.—Architect E. F. Beall has been commissioned to prepare plans for the construction of a handsome moving picture and vaudeville theater for the Royal Amusement Co., at 1942 Pratt street.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Ben Harris has completed arrangements for the erection of a new theater here.

OUT FEBRUARY 1st

A Big Surgical Sensation

"HIS GREAT SACRIFICE"

Powerful Story—Strong Cast—and a facsimile of a Skin Grafting Operation

ONE OF THE YEAR'S BIG FILMS

ATLAS FILM CO.

10 East 15th Street

New York

This week a trade journal enquired in its columns what meant. We answer, "so that the whole world may know,"

Rex

Rex

stands for

GOOD FILM

Watch for our announcement of release day in this paper next issue. Sales Co. going to sell them all.

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

INDEPENDENT FILMS

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

		Feet
Dec.	7—The Tell Tale Portrait	602
Dec.	7—Tweedle Dum Learns a Tragical Part	374
Dec.	14—Dido Forsaken by Aenea	1027
Dec.	21—Little Peter's Christmas Dinner
Dec.	28—Drama of the Engine Driver and Grandfather's Pipe
Jan.	4—The Wall Partition	500
Jan.	4—Trials of Tweedledum as a Policeman	500
Jan.	18—Blue Domino's Disguise and Tailor's Queer Ad
Jan.	25—A Wife Calvary and Tweedledum Cash

AMERICAN.

Dec.	26—Girlies (Com.)
Dec.	29—The Squaw and the Man (Dr.)
Jan.	2—Mrs. Gay Life's Visitors (Com.)
Jan.	5—The Tenderfoot's Round-up (Com.)
Jan.	9—An Arizona Romance	990
Jan.	12—Lucy's Lover	560
Jan.	12—The Borrowed Flat	420
Jan.	16—The Battered Bridegrooms	525
Jan.	16—A Dental Disaster	450
Jan.	19—The Bonanza King	990
Jan.	11—How Tweedledum Pays His Bills	500
Jan.	11—Clouds and Ice-Fields	500
Jan.	23—When a Man's Single	1000
Jan.	26—Bertie's Bandit	1000

ATLAS FILM CO.

Nov.	2—That Doggone Dog (Com.)
Nov.	9—The King of Beggars (Dr.)
Nov.	16—The Hand of Providence (Dr.)
Nov.	23—Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters (Dr.)
Nov.	30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.)
Dec.	7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.)
Dec.	14—Brothers (Dec.)
Dec.	21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.)
Dec.	28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)
Jan.	4—A Straw Ride (Dr.)
Jan.	11—A Letter to the Stork (Dr.)
Jan.	18—A City Wolf (Dr.)
Jan.	25—Irish Hearts

CAPITOL FILM CO.

Sept.	10—The Messenger Boy's Sweetheart.
Sept.	17—Round Trip $5.98
Sept.	24—Bill Mason's Ride	700
Oct.	8—All's Fair in Love and War
Oct.	15—A Shot in the Night
Oct.	22—The Locket (Dr.)

CHAMPION.

Nov.	9—The Ranchman and the Miser (Dr.)	950
Nov.	16—The Way of the West (Dr.)	950
Nov.	23—Let Us Give Thanks (Dr.)	950
Nov.	30—The Indian Land Grab (Dr.)	950
Dec.	7—Hearts of the West (Dr.)	950
Dec.	14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.)	950
Dec.	21—His Mother (Dr.)	950
Dec.	28—The Golden Gates (Dr.)	950
Jan.	4—Days of the Early West (Dr.)	950
Jan.	11—Bill's Widow (Dr.)	950
Jan.	18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.).
Jan.	18—Why He Went West (Dr.)	950

CINES.
Eclair.

Oct.	21—The Last of the Savelli Dr.)	800
Oct.	28—Tontolini in Love (Com.)	480
Oct.	28—The Pretty Dairy Maid (Dr.)	480
Nov.	4—A Wooden Sword (Dr.)	800

COLUMBIA

Oct.	29—In the Web (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.)
Nov.	19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	26—Stage Coach Tom (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	3—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.)
Dec.	31—Trapped (Dr.)
Jan.	7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.)

ECLAIR.

Nov.	28—The Wreck (Dr.)	565
Nov.	28—A Di cult Capture (Com.)	380
Dec.	5—The Price of a Sacrifice (Dr.)	833
Dec.	5—The Laundry Girl's Good-Night (C.).	82
Dec.	12—The Bowling Craze (Com.)	445
Dec.	12—Our Dear Uncle From America (Com.)	470
Dec.	19—The Child of Two Mothers (Dr.)	545
Dec.	19—The Museum of Sovereigns (Dr.)	400
Dec.	26—The Lock-Keeper (Dr.)	537
Dec.	26—The Fear of Fire (Com.)	390
Jan.	2—The Great Medal Competition (Com.)	485
Jan.	2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.)	480
Jan.	9—Mother's Portrait (Dr.)	930
Jan.	16—The Jealousy of Sosthenes Ramulot (Com.)	478
Jan.	16—My Wife's Hat (Com.)	482

GREAT NORTHERN.

		Feet
Nov.	28—The Revolving Door
Dec.	1—A Child's Judgment (Dr.)
Dec.	3—The Birthday Present (Dr.)
Dec.	3—The Ohami Troupe of Acrobats (Sc.)
Dec.	10—The Poacher (Dr.)
Dec.	17—A Christmas Letter (Dr.)
Dec.	17—Dickey's Courtship (Com.)
Dec.	24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.)
Dec.	31—The Scarecrow (Dr.)
Dec.	31—Bear Hunting (Sc.)
Jan.	7—The Red Light (Dr.)
Jan.	14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.)
Jan.	21—The Trunk Mystery
Jan.	28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done	506
Jan.	28—Triumph of Intelligence	391

IMP.
Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Nov.	7—Keeping His Word (Dr.)	990
Nov.	10—The Model's Redemption (Dr.)	995
Nov.	14—The Double (Dr.)	995
Nov.	17—Fortune's Wheel (Dr.)	990
Dec.	5—Aspirations of Gerald and Percy (Dr.)	995
Dec.	8—'Twixt Loyalty and Love (Dr.)	990
Dec.	12—Faithful Max (Dr.)	500
Dec.	12—A Clever Ruse	500
Dec.	15—The Poor Student (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	19—The Crippled Teddy Bear
Dec.	22—Little Nell's Tobacco (Dr.)
Dec.	26—The Unexpected Honeymoon (Dr.)	995
Dec.	29—Unreasonable Jealousy (Dr.)	990
Jan.	2—The Wise Druggist (Dr.)	995
Jan.	5—Reunited (Dr.)	995
Jan.	9—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.)	998
Jan.	12—The Empty Shell (Dr.)	995
Jan.	16—Melody	995
Jan.	19—His First Patient (Dr.)	500
Jan.	19—The Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship (Dr.)	500

ITALA.

Dec.	3—The Dog Sweeper	360
Dec.	1—A Painful Debt	1,000
Dec.	8—The Soldier of the Cross	890
Dec.	10—Foolshead Knows How to Take His Precautions	588
Dec.	10—The Good Samaritan	408
Dec.	15—The False Accusation	774
Dec.	17—The Mother's Shadow	456
Dec.	17—Thieves as Quick-Change Artists	594
Dec.	22—Who Was the Culprit? (Com.)
Dec.	24—Greediness Spoiled Foolshead's Christmas (Com.)
Dec.	29—The Rustic
Dec.	31—Norwegian Water Falls	500
Dec.	31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day	500
Jan.	5—Antonio Toscarino	900
Jan.	7—Foolshead as Inspector of Hygiene	900
Jan.	12—Joanna of Braganza	900
Jan.	14—The Recall	900
Jan.	19—A Sad Fascination
Jan.	21—Visit of a Friend
Jan.	26—The Revenging Picture
Jan.	28—My Son Is Guilty

LUX.
By Prieur.

Dec.	2—Bill as an Operator (Com.)	485
Dec.	2—Necessity Is the Mother of Invention (Dr.)	449
Dec.	9—What It Will Be (Com.)	491
Dec.	9—And She Came Back (Com.)	452
Dec.	16—How He Won Her (Com.)	344
Dec.	16—Her Favorite Tune (Dr.)	550
Dec.	23—Bill Plays Bowls (Com.)	423
Dec.	23—Rosalie's Dowry (Com.)	492
Dec.	30—Aunt Julia's Portrait (Com.)	547
Dec.	30—Tim Writes a Poem (Com.)	375
Jan.	6—How They Tricked Father (Com.)	498
Jan.	6—The Rival Engine Drivers (Dr.)	367
Jan.	13—Bill as a Jockey (Com.)	465
Jan.	13—That Is My Name (Com.)	438
Jan.	22—A Dilemna
Jan.	22—Faithful Furniture
Jan.	27—Willie Goes Cycling
Jan.	27—Infamous Son

NESTOR FILM CO.

Oct.	5—The Golden Hoard	930
Oct.	12—Silver Plume Mine	970
Oct.	19—The Boys of Topsy-Turvy	960
Oct.	26—Rev. John Wright of Missouri	970
Nov.	2—The Girl from the West (Dr.)
Nov.	9—The Woodsman (Dr.)	960
Nov.	16—The Ranchman's Bride (Dr.)
Nov.	23—A Deal in Indians	1000
Nov.	30—Valley Folks
Dec.	7—The Conquering Hero
Dec.	14—The Pilgrim (Dr.)
Dec.	21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.)
Dec.	28—Elda of the Mountains (Dr.)
Jan.	4—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.)
Jan.	11—Sleepy Hollow (Dr.)	950
Jan.	18—Their New Minister (Dr.)
Jan.	25—The Man in 23
Jan.	25—New Minister

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
("Bison")

		Feet
Dec.	6—A Sioux's Reward	875
Dec.	9—A Brave Western Girl	approx. 975
Nov.	25—A Cheyenne's Love for a Sioux	980
Dec.	9—A Brave Western Girl	965
Dec.	13—An Indian's Test	950
Dec.	16—A Girl of the Plains	approx. 975
Dec.	20—The Cattle Baron's Daughter
Dec.	23—The Pale Faced Princess
Dec.	27—An Indian's Elopement
Dec.	30—Taming Terror
Jan.	3—In the Heart of the Sierras	900
Jan.	6—A Savage Girl's Devotion	900
Jan.	10—An Indian Trapper's Prize	900
Jan.	13—The Creek Claim	900
Jan.	17—Texas Ted's Defense	900
Jan.	20—The Redskin's Secret	950
Jan.	24—Red Man's Wrath	900
Jan.	27—Trials of Bud Brown	900

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Dec.	10—The Ride to Death (Dr.)
Dec.	13—A Plucky Western Kid (Dr.)
Dec.	13—The Tramp Bicyclist (Com.)
Dec.	17—His Gypsy Sweetheart (Dr.)
Dec.	20—Jack Logan's Dog (Com.)
Dec.	20—The Bachelor's Finish (Com.)
Dec.	24—A Father's Love (Dr.)
Dec.	27—The Station Agent's Daughter (Dr.)
Dec.	27—Freddie's Courtship (Com.)
Dec.	31—A Daughter of Virginia (Dr.)
Jan.	3—The Pinkerton Man (Dr.)
Jan.	3—Beaux Not Wanted (Com.)
Jan.	7—A Woman Without a Heart (Dr.)
Jan.	17—A Montana Love Story (Com.)
Jan.	17—Lovers' Trials (Com.)
Jan.	21—A Noble Heart (Dr.)
Jan.	24—Wife's Love and Little Dorothy	980
Jan.	28—Masquerader	960

RELIANCE

Dec.	10—The Dispensation	975
Dec.	17—The Thin Dark Line	approx. 975
Dec.	24—The Refuge
Jan.	7—As the Master Orders	900
Jan.	11—The Hour of Fate	900
Jan.	18—A Country Girl	950
Jan.	21—The Vows	975
Jan.	25—For Remembrance	900
Jan.	28—The Last Laugh	975

SOLAX COMPANY

Dec.	16—Two Suits
Dec.	23—The Pawnshop (Dr.)
Dec.	30—Mrs. Richard Dare (Com.)
Jan.	6—The Nightcap (Com.)
Jan.	6—Salmon Fishing in Canada (Sc.)
Jan.	13—The Girl and the Burglar (Dr.)
Jan.	20—A Reporter's Romance (Dr.)
Jan.	27—His Best Friend (Dr.)

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Nov.	22—A Thanksgiving Surprise (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	25—The Wild Flower and the Rose (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	29—Value Beyond Price (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	2—John Halifax, Gentleman (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	6—Rip Van Winkle (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	9—The Girls He Left Behind Him
Dec.	9—The Iron-Clad Lover
Dec.	13—Love and Law (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	16—The Millionaire Milkman (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	20—Looking Forward (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	23—The Childhood of Jack Harkaway (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	27—The Vicar of Wakefield (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	30—Hypnotized (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	3—The Pasha's Daughter
Jan.	6—Basehall and Bloomers
Jan.	10—Everybody Saves Father (Com.)
Jan.	10—The Only Girl in Camp (Com.)
Jan.	13—The Vote that Counts (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	24—When Love Was Blind	900
Jan.	27—Prompt Payment
Jan.	27—Stealing a Ride	900

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Oct.	31—Italian Sherlock Holmes (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	7—Spirit of the West (Dr.)
Nov.	14—The Case of the Missing Heir (D.)	1000
Nov.	21—Lone Wolf's Trust (Dr.)
Nov.	28—The Heart of an Actress (Dr.)
Dec.	2—Queen of the Nihilists (Dr.)
Dec.	5—In the Czar's Name (Dr.)
Dec.	9—Western Justice (Dr.)
Dec.	12—A Fight for Millions (Dr.)
Dec.	16—The Old Miner's Doll (Dr.)
Dec.	19—A Ward of Uncle Sam (Dr.)
Dec.	23—The Terror of the Plains (Com.)
Dec.	26—The Insane Heiress (Dr.)
Dec.	30—The Missing Bridegroom (Dr.)
Jan.	6—The Royal Wishbone (Dr.)
Jan.	2—Mrs. Danver's Divorce
Jan.	9—An Erring Son's Awakening (Dr.)
Jan.	16—The Folks Back Home (Dr.)
Jan.	20—Returned to the Fold (Dr.)

IMPETUS

A snowball rolling down hill gathers momentum and weight.

The first big rock it strikes usually retards the former and greatly reduces the latter.

The Sales Company, rolling steadily up hill, has acquired an impetus and imparted to all branches of the industry, not dominated by the Trust, this same impetus to such an extent that no obstacle has been able to retard its progress.

There is that indescribable something which dominates every member and every factor of the Independent fraternity in the Moving Picture business which enables them to ride over what in other lines might seen insurmountable difficulties.

Our attention was called last week to the case of an exhibitor owning six houses, who desired to take Independent service in five of them. He was informed that if he did so, he would be unable ever after to secure "licensed" service. This is pure bluff and buncombe, and any exhibitor who has not enough of the "indescribable something" to tell these people to go to, deserves to be crushed and his business taken from him in the way that monopoly originally planned to do.

Buck up, tell these people where they get off, and you will soon have them eating out of your hand. They want that one house as badly as we want the five, and if they could not get the six they would take the one.

Select your service from the following program and save $104.00 in royalties next year. If you have experienced any difficulty in the past in securing a satisfactory independent service, write us and tell us about it. All correspondence is treated as strictly confidential.

OUR PROGRAM

MONDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Eclair—Eclair Film Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

TUESDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.

WEDNESDAY
Ambrosio—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Atlas—Atlas Film Co.
Champion—The Champion Film Co.
Nestor—David Horsley.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

THURSDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.

FRIDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Lux—R. Prieur
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.
Solax—Solax Company
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

SATURDAY
Capital—Capital Film Co.
Gt. Northern—Gt. Northern Film Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

List of BUYING EXCHANGES, Jan. 21st, 1911

All others offering these brands for rent can supply only dupes or worn-out subjects.

CANADA

Applegath, L. J., & Sons	145 Yonge St.	Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange	Calgary	Alberta
Gaumont Co.	154 St. Catherine St.	Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co.	Winnipeg	Man.

ALABAMA

Dixie Film Co.	503 Chamber of Com. Bldg.	Birm'ham

CALIFORNIA

California Film Exchange	1065 Mission St.	San Francisco
Miles Bros.	790 Turk St.	San Francisco
Western Film Co.	514 S. Los Angeles St.	Los Angeles

COLORADO

Co-operative Ind. Film Co.	Barclay Block	Denver
W. H. Swanson Film Exch.	301 Railroad Bldg.	Denver

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

B. & W. Film Exchange	426 Ninth St., N. W.	Washington
Paramount Film Exchange	428 9th St., N. W.	Washington

GEORGIA

Consolidated Film Exchange	Rhodes Bldg.	Atlanta, Ga.

ILLINOIS

Anti Trust Film Co.	79 So. Clark St.	Chicago
Globe Film Service	107 E. Madison St.	Chicago
H. & H. Film Service Co.	98 Jackson Blvd.	Chicago
Laemmle Film Service	196 Lake St.	Chicago
Standard Film Exchange	155 E. Washington St.	Chicago

INDIANA

Central Film Service Co.	119 N. Illinois St.	Indianapolis

KANSAS

Wichita Film & Supply Co.	122 N. Market St.	Wichita

LOUISIANA

Dixie Film Company	720 Maison Blanche Bldg.	New Orleans

MASSACHUSETTS

Boston Film Rental Co.	665 Washington St.	Boston
W. E. Green Film Exchange	228 Tremont St.	Boston

MARYLAND

B. & W. Film Exchange	412 East Baltimore St.	Baltimore
Consolidated Amusement Co.	28 W. Lexington St.	Baltimore

MINNESOTA

Laemmle Film Service	400 Sykes Block	Minneapolis

MICHIGAN

Michigan Film & Supply Co.	1106 Union Trust Bldg.	Detroit

MISSOURI

Bijou Film & Amusement Co.	1222 Grand Ave.	Kansas City
J. W. Morgan	1310 Walnut St.	Kansas City
Swanson-Crawford Film Co.	Century Bldg.	St. Louis

NEBRASKA

Laemmle Film Service	1517 Farnam St.	Omaha

NEW YORK STATE

Albany Film Exchange	418 Broadway	Albany
Victor Film Service	39 Church St.	Buffalo

NEW YORK CITY

Empire Film Exchange	150 East 14th St.	New York City
Great Eastern Film Exchange.	21 East 14th St.	New York City
Hudson Film Company	138 East 14th St.	New York City
Peerless Film Exchange	94 Fifth Avenue	New York City
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange	110 Fourth Ave.	New York City

OHIO

Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co.	309 Arcade Bldg.	Dayton
Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co.	315 West 4th St.	Cincinnati
Toledo Film Service	319 Superior St.	Toledo
Victor Film Service	Prospect & Huron Sts.	Cleveland

OREGON

Independent West. F. Ex.	Swetland Bldg.	Portland

OKLAHOMA

United Motion Picture Co.	112 Main St.	Oklahoma City

PENNSYLVANIA

Eagle Film Exchange	143 N. 9th St.	Philadelphia
Independent Film Exchange	415 Ferry St.	Pittsburg
Philadelphia Film & Pro. Co.	44 North 9th St.	Philadelphia
Philadelphia Film Exchange	934 Arch St.	Philadelphia
Pittsburg Photoplay Co.	332 Third Ave.	Pittsburg
Swaab Film Service Co.	338 Spruce St.	Philadelphia

TEXAS

Texas Film Exchange	311 Elm St.	Dallas

UTAH

Co-operative Ind. Film Co.	320 Atlas Block	Salt Lake City

WASHINGTON

Pacific Film Exchange	Globe Bldg.	Seattle

WISCONSIN

Western Film Exchange	307 Enterprise Bldg.	Milwaukee

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

111 East 14th Street NEW YORK CITY

TRUST FILMS

BIOGRAPH.

	Feet
Dec. 15—His Sister-in-Law Dr.)	998
Dec. 19—The Lesson	994
Dec. 22—The White Roses	588
Dec. 22—The Recreation of an Heiress	410
Dec. 26—Winning Back His Love (Dr.)	994
Dec. 29—His Wife's Sweethearts (Com.)	682
Dec. 29—After the Ball (Com.)	311
Jan. 2—The Two Paths	992
Jan. 5—When a Man Loves	998
Jan. 9—The Italian Barber (Com.)	993
Jan. 12—The Midnight Marauder (Dr.)	392
Jan. 12—Help Wanted (Com.)	605

EDISON.

Dec. 14—Pigs is Pigs (Com.)	1000
Dec. 16—The Red Cross Seal (Dr.)
Dec. 20—The Police of New York City	995
Dec. 21—The Joke They Played on Bumptious	990
Dec. 23—A Christmas Carol	1000
Dec. 27—Eldora, the Fruit Girl (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 28—A Family of Vegetarians (Com.)	990
Dec. 30—The Romance of Hefty Burke (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 3—In the Days of Chivalry	1000
Jan. 4—Sleep, Gentle Sleep	990
Jan. 6—The Fire Department of New York City	400
Jan. 6—A Western Night	600
Jan. 10—The Test of Friendship (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 11—The Home of the Seal (Educational)	300
Jan. 11—The Gardener's Ladder (Com.)	700
Jan. 13—The Link that Held (Dr.)	960

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Nov. 26—A Western Woman's Way	1000
Nov. 29—The Tie That Binds	953
Dec. 3—"Circle C" Ranch Wedding
Dec. 6—Love's Awakening	1000
Dec. 10—A Cowboy's Vindication	950
Dec. 13—A Tangled Masquerade (Com.)	1000
Dec. 17—The Tenderfoot Messenger (Dr.)	997
Dec. 20—Hank and Lank	265
Dec. 20—The Greater Call	730
Dec. 21—The Bad Man's Christmas Gift	975
Dec. 27—Girls Will Be Boys (Com.)	1000
Dec. 31—A Gambler of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 3—The Redeemed Criminal	1000
Jan. 7—The Count and the Cowboys	1000
Jan. 10—The Sophmore's Romance (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 14—The Girl of the West (Dr.)	1000

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Nov. 19—Lisbon, Before and During the Revolution (Scenic)	727
Nov. 19—Spanish Loyalty	280
Nov. 22—Cast Into the Flames (Dr.)	381
Nov. 22—A Woman's Wit (Com.)	595
Nov. 26—Samson's Betrayal	519
Nov. 26—Calino Travels as a Prince	489
Nov. 29—The Flat Next Door	722
Nov. 29—Tarascon on the Rhone	243
Dec. 3—Lured by a Phantom	712
Dec. 3—Nancy's Wedding Trip	273
Dec. 6—A Man of Honor	834
Dec. 6—Professor's Hat	171
Dec. 10—The Revolt	942
Dec. 13—The Phantom Rider	279
Dec. 13—Closed Gate	676
Dec. 17—Herod and the New Born King (Biblical)	965
Dec. 20—The Cinderella Girl (Dr.)	769
Dec. 20—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical)	220
Dec. 24—The Old Home (Dr.)	732
Dec. 24—Cain and Abel Biblical)	279
Dec. 27—The Adventuress (Dr.)	995
Dec. 31—The Doctor's Secretary (Dr.)	981
Jan. 3—The Artist's Pay Day	969
Jan. 7—The Woman Wins	945
Jan. 10—A Child's Plea (Dr.)	758
Jan. 10—The Hills of Corsica (Travelogue)	243
Jan. 14—A Simple Rustic Tale (Dr.)	958

KALEM CO.

Dec. 9—The Rescue of Molly Finney	1007
Dec. 14—Seth's Temptation (Dr.)	955
Dec. 16—Her Indian Mother (Dr.)	995
Dec. 21—The Little Spreewald Maiden	985
Dec. 23—When Lovers Part	963
Dec. 28—The Girl Spy Before Vicksburg (War Dr.)	935
Dec. 30—The Stranger (Dr.)	1005
Jan. 4—The Bolted Door	975
Jan. 6—The Runaway Engine	955
Jan. 11—For Love of an Enemy (Dr.)	995
Jan. 13—The Heart of an Indian Mother (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN.

Dec. 1—Spoony Sam (Com.)
Dec. 12—An Exile's Love (Dr.)	990
Dec. 15—The Musical Ranch (Dr.)
Dec. 19—The Dead Leter (Dr.)
Dec. 22—An American Count (Dr.)
Dec. 26—Making a Man of Him (Dr.)	990
Dec. 29—Blue Horse Mine (Dr.)	990
Jan. 2—Art and the Legacy	950
Jan. 5—His Last Parade	390
Jan. 5—A Mix in Masks	600
Jan. 5—The Crimson Scars	980
Jan. 5—Fire! Fire! Fire!	980
Jan. 9—Tag Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.)	935
Jan. 12—The Widow's Choice (Com.)	950

G. MELIES.

	Feet
Nov. 3—Generous Customers (Com.)
Nov. 10—A Mountain Wife (Dr.)	986
Nov. 17—His Sergeant's Stripes (Dr.)	950
Nov. 24—The Cowboy's and the Bachelor Girl (Dr.)
Dec. 1—Pals (Dr.)
Dec. 8—What Great Bear Learned
Dec. 15—Old Norris' Gal
Dec. 22—A Western Welcome	980
Dec. 29—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.)	980
Jan. 12—The Owner of the "L. L." Ranch (Dr.)	980

PATHE.

Tale)	607
Dec. 23—Betty's Fireworks	394
Dec. 24—Sunshine in Poverty Row	1000
Dec. 26—The Atonement (Da.)	656
Dec. 26—The Bowling Fiend (Com.)	344
Dec. 28—Running Away From a Fortune (American Com.)	540
Dec. 28—The American Fleet in French Waters (Topical)	125
Dec. 28—In Full Cry (Scenic)	331
Dec. 30—Catalan, the Minstrel (Dr.)	768
Dec. 30—Carnival of Japanese Firemen in Tokio (Sc.)	230
Dec. 31—The Yaqui Girl (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 2—The Misplaced Petticoat	790
Jan. 2—Dutch Kids	497
Jan. 4—The Cowboy's Innocence	994
Jan. 6—An Intrigue	997
Jan. 7—Love Under Difficulties	781
Jan. 7—The Funeral of Count Tolstoi	220
Jan. 9—The Evils of Betting (Dr.)	676
Jan. 9—In the Land of Monkeys and Snakes	276
Jan. 11—The Twin Cinderellas	705
Jan. 11—Dusty Rhodes Takes a Flight (C.)	249
Jan. 13—Max Is Almost Married (Com.)	572
Jan. 13—So Near but Not Quite (Com.)	420
Jan. 14—The Battle at Redwood (Dr.)	1000

SELIG.

Dec. 5—The Widow of Mill Creek Flat	1000
Dec. 8—In the Wilderness	1000
Dec. 12—A Tale of the Sea	1000
Dec. 15—County Fair (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 19—John Dough and the Cherub (Mystical)	1000
Dec. 22—Overland to Fremont	1000
Dec. 26—The Rustlers (Dr.)	990
Dec. 29—Justinian and Theodora (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 2—The Argonauts	1000
Jan. 5—Ramona's Father	1000
Jan. 9—Shadows of the Past (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 12—The Rival Dramatist	1000

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

G. Kleine.

Oct. 5—The Dishonest Steward (Dr.)	699
Oct. 5—City of a Hundred Mosques, Broussa, Asia Minor (Scenic)	296
Oct. 12—Foiled by a Cigarette (Dr.)	991
Oct. 19—In the Shadow of the Night (Dr.)	502
Oct. 19—Tunny Fishing Off Palermo, Italy (Ind.)	500
Oct. 26—The Signet Ring (Dr.)	868
Oct. 26—In the Spreewald (Scenic)	132
Nov. 2—Tragical Concealment (Dr.)	640
Nov. 2—Crossing the Andes (Scenic)	350
Nov. 9—Secret of the Cellar (Dr.)	788
Nov. 9—A Trip Through Scotland (Scenic)	217
Nov. 16—The Rival Barons (Dr.)	860
Nov. 16—An Alpine Retreat (Scenic)	142
Nov. 23—Behind a Mask (Dr.)	516
Nov. 23—Nantes (Scenic)	450
Nov. 30—The Return at Midnight	634
Nov. 30—Kamble Through Ceylon	319
Dec. 7—Death of Admiral Coligny	992
Dec. 5—On the Mexican Border
Dec. 8—Reggie's Engagement
Dec. 14—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.)	749
Dec. 14—Scenes in British India (Sc.)	253
Dec. 21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.)	676
Dec. 21—A Chamois Hunt	332
Dec. 28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.)	650
Dec. 28—Coaching in Devonshire, England (Travelogue)	348
Jan. 4—A Lock of Hair	978
Jan. 11—Washed Ashore (Dr.)	670
Jan. 11—Woodcarving in Brienz	320

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 11—The Nine of Diamonds (Dr.)	990
Nov. 12—Jean Goes Fishing (Dr.)	988
Nov. 15—Drumsticks (Dr.)	998
Nov. 18—A Modern Courtship (Com.)
Nov. 18—The Bum and the Bomb (Com.)
Nov. 19—Francesca Da Rimini (Dr.)
Nov. 22—Suspicion (Dr.)
Nov. 25—A Four-Footed Pest (Com.)
Nov. 25—The Statue Dog
Nov. 26—Love, Luck and Gasoline (Dr.)
Nov. 29—A Woman's Love (Dr.)
Dec. 2—Jack Fat and Jim Slim at Coney Island (Com.)	951
Dec. 3—The Poacher's Wife (Dr.)	1001
Dec. 6—A Tin-Type Romance (Com.)	996
Dec. 9—He Who Laughs Last (Com.)	927
Dec. 10—The Color Sergeant's Horse (Dr.)	978
Dec. 13—The Law and the Man (Dr.)	1010
Dec. 16—Playing at Divorce (Dr.)
Dec. 16—The International Motor Boat Race (Sc.)
Dec. 17—A Dixie Mother (Dr.)
Dec. 20—The Light in the Window	997
Dec. 23—Clancy	995
Dec. 24—Jean and the Waif	989
Dec. 27—In Neighboring Kingdoms (Dr.)	995
Dec. 30—Crazy Apples (Com.)	988
Dec. 31—Where the Wind Blows (Dr.)	987
Jan. 3—All Is Fair In Love and War	973
Jan. 6—The Misses Finch and Nephew Billy	979
Jan. 7—The Old Water Jar	984
Jan. 10—Doctor Cupid (Com.)	987
Jan. 13—Water Lilies (Dr.)	991
Jan. 14—Coward or Hero (Dr.)	975

INDEPENDENT FILMS

The following films have been released week of Jan. 18th by the Empire Film Co., 150 East 14th Street, New York:

Jan. 16—Melody (Imp)	997
Jan. 16—Folks Back Home (Yankee)	995
Jan. 16—Battered Bridegroom (Amer)	426
Jan. 16—A Dental Disaster (Amer)	575
Jan. 16—Jealousy of Ramulot (Eclair)	483
Jan. 16—My Wife's Hat (Eclair)	486
Jan. 17—Texas Ted's Defense (Bison)	865
Jan. 17—Montana Love Story (Powers)	503
Jan. 17—Lover's Trials (Powers)	465
Jan. 17—Bertie's Brainstorms (Than)	975
Jan. 18—Blue Domino Disguise (Ambrosio)	545
Jan. 18—Tailor's Queer Advertisement (Amb.)	435
Jan. 18—A City Wolf (Atlas)	1000
Jan. 18—Will of a Western Maid (Champ)	960
Jan. 18—Their New Minister (Nestor)	1000
Jan. 18—A Country Girl (Reliance)	937
Jan. 19—The Bonanza King (American)	995
Jan. 19—A Sad Fascination (Itala)	810
Jan. 19—Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship (Imp)	500
Jan. 19—His First Patient (Imp)	500
Jan. 20—A Reporter's Romance (Solax)	1000
Jan. 20—Red Skin's Portrait (Bison)	1000
Jan. 20—Old Curiosity Shop (Than)	1000
Jan. 20—Returned to the Fold Yankee)	1000
Jan. 20—A Dreadful Dilemna (Lux)	500
Jan. 20—His Faithful Furniture (Lux)	500
Jan. 21—The Trunk Mystery (Gt. Nor)	1000
Jan. 21—A Noble Heart (Powers)	1000
Jan. 21—The Vows (Reliance)	1000
Jan. 21—New Kind of Armchair (Itala)	600
Jan. 21—Visit of a Friend (Itala)	400

SALES COMPANY PROGRAMME FOR THE WEEKS BEGINNING JAN. 16 AND 23, 1911.

Melody (Imp)	Jan. 16
His First Patient—Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship (Imp)	Jan. 19
The Dream (Imp)	Jan. 23
Phone 1707 Chester (Imp)	Jan. 26
The Folks Back Home (Yankee)	Jan. 16
The Return to the Fold (Yankee)	Jan. 20
Convict's Last Chance (Yankee) 990 ft.	Jan. 23
Son of Old Glory (Yankee)	Jan. 27
Jealousy of Sosthenes Ramulot—My Wife's Hat (Eclair)	Jan. 16
Painless Extraction—Kiel the Fly (Eclair) 950 ft.	Jan. 23
Texas Ted's Defense (Bison)	Jan. 17
The Redskin's Secret (Bison)	Jan. 20
Red Man's Wrath (Bison)	Jan. 24
Trials Bud Brown (Bison)	Jan. 27
Bertie's Brain Storm (Than)	Jan. 17
Old Curiosity Shop (Than)	Jan. 20
When Love Was Blind (Than) 900 ft.	Jan. 24
Prompt Payment—Sealing a Ride (Than)	Jan. 27
Montana Love Story (Powers)	Jan. 17
A Lover's Trial—Little Dorothy (Powers) 980 ft.	Jan. 24
The Masquerader (Powers)	Jan. 28
A Noble Heart (Powers)	Jan. 21
The Will of a Western Maid (Champion)	Jan. 18
Why He Went West (Champion)	Jan. 25
A City Wolf (Atlas)	Jan. 18
Irish Hearts (Atlas)	Jan. 25
The Blue Domino Disguise (Ambrosio)	Jan. 18
Tailor's Queer Advertisement (Ambrosio)	Jan. 18
A Wife Calvary—Tweedle Dum Within a Cash (Ambrosio)	Jan. 25
Their New Minister (Nestor)	Jan. 18
The Man in 23 (Nestor) 980 ft.	Jan. 25
A Country Girl (Reliance)	Jan. 18
The Vows (Reliance)	Jan. 21
For Remembrance (Reliance)	Jan. 25
The Last Laugh (Reliance)	Jan. 28
A Sad Fascination (Itala)	Jan. 19
A New Kind of Arm Chair—The Revenging Picture (Itala)	Jan. 26
My Son is Guilty (Itala)	Jan. 28
Visit of a Friend (Ita'a)	Jan. 21
Battered Bridegroom—A Dental Disaster (American)	Jan. 16
The Bonanza King (American)	Jan. 19
When a Man's Single (American) 1000 ft.	Jan. 23
Bertie's Bandit (American) 1000 ft.	Jan. 26
A Reporter's Romance (Solax)	Jan. 20
His Best Friend (Solax)	Jan. 27
A Dreadful Dilemna—His Faithful Furniture (Lux)	Jan. 22
Little Willie Goes Cycling—An Infamous Son (Lux)	Jan. 27
The Trunk Mystery (Gt. Northern)	Jan. 21
Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done (Gt. Northern) 506 ft.	Jan. 28
Triumph of Intelligence (Gt. Nor) 391 ft.

FILMS FOR RENT

FIRST CLASS SERVICE

Write Us for Terms

T. A. MACK EXCHANGE

70 Dearborn Street
Chicago, Ill.

AMERICAN STANDARD DOUBLE DISSOLVING MOVING PICTURE MACHINE. ALL COMPLETE, $200.00

A POWERS No. 5, SLIGHTLY USED,

$100.00

MANHATTAN SLIDE CO.
124 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

ATTENTION!

We beg to announce the opening of our new film exchange. Ready for business FEBRUARY 6th, 1911. Best independent service available. Up-to-date releases — No junk — Reasonable prices. Call and see us with reference to your service.

THE CHAUTAUQUA FILM EXCHANGE
356 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO

TWO PIN

machines changed to one pin. Improved easy running, long wearing Cams, Stars, etc., etc.

E. W. LAVEZZI,
3042 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.

DO NOT FAIL TO RENEW YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TO THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS. YOU SHOULD NOT MISS A COPY.

Moving Picture Machine

A well built projecting machine having all patents granted. Passed all Underwriters' requirements. Sell for $100.00 each. Inventor needs money to exploit. Good chance for investment. Stand investigation. Apply

"MACHINE"
Moving Picture News.

CATALOGUES FOR MOVING PICTURE MANUFACTURERS

Unique Printers - Charles Francis Press

30 West 13th Street. Printers of the M. P. News

SPECIAL DETECTIVE WEEK
Monday, January 30th
"THE TAXICAB MYSTERY"
with the Italian Sherlock Holmes

Coming Friday, February 3
"THE COUNTING HOUSE MYSTERY"
with Nell Pierce, Detective
Bulletins—Posters—Free

YANKEE FILM COMPANY
344 East 32nd Street, New York, N. Y.

PATENTS

"BE INDEPENDENT."

Moving Picture Devices a Specialty.

Charles Lowell Howard

PATENT ATTORNEY

706-707-708 M'Gill Bldg., WASHINGTON, D. C.

Announcement, Advertising, Travelogue, Recitation
and slides for every purpose made to order
GEO. J. GOLDTHORPE & CO.
244 West 14th Street New York

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars. ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS, 908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., Chicago.

Advertisers want results. When writing to them it is our due that you mention The Moving Picture News.

HARBACH'S BARGAINS
Powers Cameragraph No. 5 for $115, Edison Kinetoscope $45, Edison Model B new $175, Optigraph No. 4 $45, $215 Motiograph new $165, Motion Picture Machine $35. Many other Machines, etc., at Reduced Prices.
Pathe's Passion Play, fine, set Low.
Get Sup. 33 of Many Bargains in Machines, Accessories, etc.
Motion Picture Machines Wanted.
HARBACH & CO.,
809 Filbert Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Everybody works but father under Gen. Flimco's foxy plan. It's a soft snap to "buy" up film exchanges with promises and then "fine" the poor suckers until the office is paid for in fines. How in blazes some of you exhibitors can be satisfied to deal with the foxy Flimco, I can't understand. But you're waking up—many of you. And as fast as you come out of your nap, you'll hook up with me and get a film service that will tickle you to pieces. My customers are making more money than you are making. Let that roll around in your think tank a few days and then write to me.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

HEADQUARTERS : 196-198 Lake Street, CHICAGO

MINNEAPOLIS OMAHA

"The biggest and best film renter in the world"

Here is what you have all been looking for.

THE MORTIMER FILM CLEANER

justly called the wonder of the Moving Picture World.

No Inconvenience to the operator, he does the work while rewinding the film; endorsed by the leading exchanges. Send for our BOOKLET giving full description of the little cleaner. Price, $10.00.

Home office,
Fidelity Bldg., Portland, Maine.
SUITE 703-4
Factory, Freeport, Maine.

GET IN LINE WITH THE LIVE ONES.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

REPAIRED

by skilled mechanics at short notice and reasonable prices. Work guaranteed.

Supplies of All Kinds.

CHAS. E. DRESSLER,
388 2nd Ave., City, near 23rd St.
Take elevator.

HALLBERG

THE "ECONOMIZER MAN"

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. N 1

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.

By virtue of its superior qualities POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH NO. 6

The Perfect Motion Picture Machine is in demand all over the world. Its price puts it within reach of all. Why buy any other? Read what our Australian agents, The Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Co., Ltd., say:

The Nicholas Power Co., 115-117 Nassau Street, New York, U. S. A.

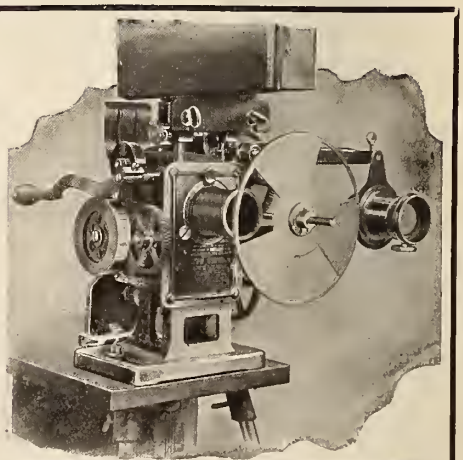
Gentlemen:—Your letter of Nov. 4th received together with the advertisement enclosed, and I certainly must congratulate you upon the way you advertise your machines. You can rest assured we will do the same thing with your Agency and I am sure you will find our firm a live wire. In addition to the fifty (50) machines Mr. Morgan ordered when he was in New York, I wish you would please send us at once the following order: 48 Powers mechanisms to be shipped as follows: 24 Powers mechanisms to be shipped to our Sydney office, address as above; 12 Powers mechanisms to be shipped to our Melbourne (Vic.) office, Suttons Building; 12 Powers mechanisms to be shipped to our Brisbane (Qns.) office, Courier Buildings. It will save us a great deal of freight to have these orders go direct to the different branches. We are now building a new theatre in Melbourne which will cost us for the ground and building $160,000. We intend to make a special feature of the operating room and will spend at least $1,000 in the operating room alone. We intend to install two Powers Cameragraphs and will make a big feature of them. I must certainly say that our pictures have improved wonderfully since we have started using your machines. We have several advertising features which we will introduce there and the Powers Cameragraphs will come in for their share. It is our intention to make this one of the finest moving picture shows in the world. Hoping that you will give our orders your personal attention, and trusting that we may always be able to do a big business with your firm, we remain, Yours truly,

THE GREATER J. D. WILLIAMS AMUSEMENT CO., LTD.

Dated: Sydney, Aus., Dec. 19th, 1910. (Signed) J. D. Williams, Managing Director.

Write today for catalogue D describing it.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115 Nassau St., New York



For thirteen years the leading manufacturers of moving picture machines.

Ask Ask Ask Ask Ask Ask Ask Ask Ask

FOR

THE THANHOUSER TWO-A-WEEK

RELEASE OF TUESDAY, JANUARY 31

Only In the Way

WITH "THE THANHOUSER KID" AT HER BEST!

If this is only in YOUR way you'll have an enthusiastic "house" upon that occasion, and maybe a crowded one. And if it isn't in your way, make it COME your way, because a good thing is always worth fighting for. But, two-to-one, it's likely that you won't HAVE to kick much for this reel, for it's one of the best cards in your exchange man's pack, and he's only wise to spring it on you. At that, you might invite him to spring it at his very earliest opportunity. You need this bunch of heart-interest in your programme and you need it QUICK.

No. 181. Code Word, Way.

RELEASE OF FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 3

ADRIFT

A PICTURE WITH A LESSON!

is a useful film with a big, simple moral that would do much to reconcile the Church to the Motion Picture—if the former knew that this sort of film was so much in evidence. Therefore, in billing and announcing this reel, make appeal to the church folk in your district and see if it doesn't go to change the Picture-views of even the "most conservative." For the American church-goer is always open to conviction, and will concede the motion picture an influence for morality and honest living just as soon AS HE KNOWS THAT IT IS.

No. 182. Code Word, Adrift.

The Thanhouser News the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to PUBLISHER, THANHOUSER NEWS, NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches in depth, with glass and easel (6 feet high) GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY-DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN.

For system's sake address PHOTOFRAME DEPT.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

IMPS IN CUBA!

Both "Imp" stock companies are now in Cuba producing films that will once more clinch the fact that the Imp is the most energetic and enterprising film-maker in the business. Watch for the Cuban Imps, the Florida Imps, the Mexican Imps. Meanwhile get after these next Imp releases—every week!

By the time you reach this scene in "Maid or Man" the Imp release of Monday, Jan. 30th, you will have laughed till your sides ache. It is a farce comedy of the best type with a series of dead funny situations, each following swiftly on the heels of the other, and winding up with a happy finish. Please make it a point to tell your exchange you want "Maid or Man." It is another of the "Little Mary" series, and you must not miss a single blessed one of these! Get busy!

You have been begging us to produce some high class slap-stick comedy on split reels. Very well! We give you a corking good dose of it in "The Mix-Up," released Thursday, Feb. 2nd, and "An Imaginary Elopement" on the same reel. The picture shown herewith is a climax in one of the funniest chains of silly horse-play you ever saw, and we'll guarantee it will bring down your house with roars of delight. We're giving you what you demand. Now see that you GET IT FROM YOUR EXCHANGE!

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 4

January 28
1911

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

SCENE FROM
"THE PITTSBURG MILLIONAIRE"
AMERICAN RELEASE, FEBRUARY 6th

GREAT NORTHERN

Release for Saturday, January 28th

MR. MUGGINS HAS HIS SEWING DONE

A smashing hit comedy—bound to get many laughs

and

TRIUMPH OF INTELLIGENCE

A hilarious trick comedy of how brain conquers muscle

By all means get this reel of genuine fun

Release for Saturday, February 4th

THE CRIMINAL CHIEF'S CAPTURE

A meritorious detective story with many exciting and exceedingly thrilling situations. A story full to the brim of real action. Book this feature now.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY.

BISON FILMS

FIVE REELS A WEEK

TUESDAY---BISON. WEDNESDAY---AMBROSIO. THURSDAY---ITALA. FRIDAY---BISON. SATURDAY---ITALA

"A TOUGH TENDERFOOT"

(Released Tuesday, January 31)

Jack is hazed by the cowboys, tossed in a blanket and thrown into the river, but he turns the tables on them in a hilariously funny scene.

ITALA RELEASES

"COACHMAN OF THE VILLAGE"

Thursday, February 2

"THE FEAST OF FOOLSHEAD"

Saturday, February 4

2 WESTERN REELS

"A SQUAW'S BRAVERY"

(Released Friday, February 3)

Roaring Bill tries to force the Indian maid to marry him, but she outwits him, and in a quarrel with his companions, Bill accidentally lights a barrel of powder, ending the career of the conspirators.

AMBROSIO RELEASE

Wednesday, February 1

"THE RETURN FROM SEASIDE BATHING"

"TWEEDLEDUM TRIES WINTER SPORTS"

Two Subjects on One Reel

Sold Exclusively Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO., 1 Union Square, New York City

AN ABSOLUTELY NON-INFRINGING

CAMERA

PATENT 560,800

Ask Your Lawyer

and then come and get your camera.

Not only are you safe from molestation when you use this camera, but the camera itself is a fine piece of workmanship. The case is of mahogany; the mechanism of steel and brass, the latter blackened with nitrate of silver; has folding main crank, and trick picture crank; film register; six extra film boxes; solid leather carrying case; extra solid tripod with panorama head, etc., etc.

C. FRANCIS JENKINS

WASHINGTON, D. C.

THURSDAY was named after

Thor, the God of Thunderbolts

We have therefore selected Thursday as very, VERY APPROPRIATE for our release day. On that day (the day of thunderbolts) Thursday, Feb. 16th, we will hurl our first, with the proper spirit.

A HEROINE OF '76.

In these stirring days when principles were exchanged with shots, they were all

EXCHANGE MEN
EXCHANGE MEN ENLIST!

Rex Motion Picture Company

573-9 Eleventh Avenue, New York City

We will force the Sales Company to increase its shipping force.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone: 3790 Oxford

CONSPIRACY

IS THE KEYNOTE OF TRUST EXISTENCE.
SLANDER AND ABUSE THROUGH UNDER-STRAPPERS, STOCK IN TRADE.
TREACHERY IS REWARDED WHILE HONESTY OF PURPOSE IS CONDEMNED.
THE UNLAWFUL COMBINATIONS WILL COME INTO THEIR OWN IF YOU WILL

BE INDEPENDENT

TRY THE

SWAAB FILM SERVICE COMPANY
338 Spruce Street Philadelphia, Pa.

Special Offer on

SONG SLIDES

New Songs and New Slides.
Write for the list.

LEVI COMPANY, Inc.
24 Union Square :: :: New York, N. Y.
"See the Difference."

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

European Agents: INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., Breams Building, Chancery Lane, London, E. C.

Chicago Representative: J. J. Sullivan, 866 Graceland Ave. 'Phone Graceland 5053

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV January 28, 1911 Number 4

Notes of the Week

FRONT COVER ILLUSTRATION

On our front cover illustration this week we present to our readers a picture taken from a release of the American Film Company, which will be issued on February 6th. It is called "The Pittsburg Millionaire," and on the usual synopsis page will be found a full description of this film, which we can heartily recommend to the attention of our readers.

INFORMATION WANTED

Will Mr. Gibbs, known to his fellow workers as "Pop Gibbs," kindly communicate with the Editor of the News? Something of value may accrue to him. Several enquiries await him.

W. H. HARBECK

Lost, Stolen, or Strayed

Has any one any knowledge of where our good friend W. H. Harbech has landed? We received a letter from Seattle, 'way back in December, saying he was on his way to New York City. Men and 'phone calls have been the rule in the M. P. News office for the past three weeks. Willie, Willie, where art thou? Letters get no reply. Wires are as bad. And if you only knew the anxiety concerning your welfare, you would answer, and hasten your visit. Any reader knowing his whereabouts kindly advise.

A FLAG OF TRUCE

We wonder, and we have wondered, in our heart, many times, whether the readers of the Moving Picture News care for all the petty squabbles that go on in motion picturedom. It will be noticed for some time past we have eliminated from our columns any personal matters, and have tried to keep ourselves strictly to giving news of interest to the trade, and during the last five weeks, more especially have we been interested in educational films, and trying to interest manufacturers to take up this branch more largely, owing to the fact that the public are desiring such films and that educational centers are demanding them. In our opinion the main cause of the non-success of this educational campaign is the fact of litigation; hence, we desire to carry a flag of truce into the enemy's camp—if there is an enemy. We believe that every manufacturer in the industry is desirous of making the best film and putting on the market only that which will be of benefit to his pocketbook and also to the interests of the exhibitors and their patrons, the public. Is it not time now to call a halt and hold out the flag of truce to the belligerents on both sides and ask a question? The question is this, when Edison and Biograph won their cases together, they made up a compromise, and then joined together under an agreement. Why not now with others? Litigation has gone on for some considerable time and the trade and all those connected with it have become so harassed, and yet in spite of this the Independents have won a considerable victory. Why not get together and draw a line of demarcation and go in for the best interests and the best men only to remain in the industry, and let there be unity and progress?

Letters have flooded this office asking us to advocate a third party, a party of split. This we strongly object to do, and next week we will state our reason why. We will give a specimen letter as a basis why there should be unity on both sides.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS.

Apropos of this subject we may say that educators from many centers have been writing in, asking our opinion and advice as to where they can obtain films to educate their classes and the public generally. We have carried on a campaign for the past five or six weeks with a view to feeling the pulse of the trade, and we have on our staff and are in correspondence with men who stand at the head of the various colleges and universities, who are willing and anxious to aid us with articles to advance this cause. Our columns are open for an expression of opinion, and we think the time is ripe for an advanced movement. By educational films we do not particularly mean travel and such like subjects that have been placed out lately by the Urban-Eclipse, but of a nature that brings science from its high pedestal right into the ranks of the layman.

We are in communication with several gentlemen who can place their services at the disposal of manufacturers who are alive to this subject and the question arises "What is an educational film?" We think this question will be answered voluminously in an article from a correspondent next week. But in the meantime we take pleasure in bringing the following letter before our readers:

Rajahmundry, 28-December, 1910.

To the Editor of Moving Picture News:

Dear Sirs:—The epics of Ramayana and Mahabharata are believed to contain the stories of great men and Gods of ancient times; and all classes of people, of all parts of India, take great interest in the stories which they love, with a religious zeal, to read and hear, to enact on the stage and crowd to witness the same. The Indian stage represents mostly stories from these books, and managers and players obtain vast profits by affording occasions of amusement and instruction to the people by way of their performances. It is, therefore, my opinion that cinematographic representation of these stories is sure to fetch large profits throughout the length and breadth of this country.

For this purpose I have provided myself with pictures of the scenes that occur in these stories and the characters that appear in them, and I can explain to you how particular characters should act and speak under particular situations of the plot. But, you will have to adjust the movement and the action. If you can do this, and also the phonographic arrangement, if possible, for the adjustment of the speech and the moving of the lips; I can explain in plain Hindi prose the whole story, its situations and actions. This Hindi is a language that is known throughout India. If you make the arrangements and start on a tour in this country, I will see that you get the patronage of all classes of Indian people—from the commons to the wealthiest princes of the land.

If you think it cannot be done with the aid of pictures only, and you deem it necessary to take photos of characters, actually acting in your presence there, I can go over to you with the necessary dresses and other accoutrements and do the needful to put the scene in actual motion before you.

I shall be much obliged, if you let me know your opinion on these matters. As for our terms, if you think it necessary I should go there, you will have to pay my vogage and back and my expenses in that country, and you shall start on the tour for exhibitions in India, I will accompany you and introduce you to the gentlemen, Rajahs, Maharajahs, and Independent Princes of this country. You shall bear the charges of the tour and give me one-third share of the net profits. Kindly consider these terms and make your proposals, if any.

I remain, dear sirs,

Yours faithfully,

———— ————.

We would be glad for any manufacturers to communicate with our correspondent through the News, and we will immediately put them in touch with him. His letter opens out a vast field of unknown and unforeseen possibilities. India, whose vast field of unexplored religions and mysticism should be of great value not only to the people of India of which our correspondent speaks, but also of very great interest to the Eastern researches on such subjects. We would gladly welcome films as described, and hope that some enterprising manufacturer will be keen enough to avail himself of the opportunity now offered.

THE SWAAB FILM SERVICE, PHILADEPHIA.

It appears from all accounts that the M. P .P. Co. are still on the warpath trying to crush out honest men who will not accede to their unjust demands by giving up to them their hard earned money. It appears from information to hand that on January 24th Mr. Church, of the Patents Company, accompanied by several of the Patents Company's detectives and three sheriff officers, paid the Swaab Film Service a visit and demanded their reels under replevin writs, and for a time it looked as though they were going to have all their own way, having brought one of the largst wagons they could find in Philadelphia and the largest crowd that ever gathered outside a film exchange. Laughing heartily the demand was made for all the films, goods, chattels, and then they began to gather up all that they desired. The attorney of the Swaab Film Service immediately got to work, and by order of the Court a policeman was sent to turn out these emissaries of the M. P. P. Co. and they were compelled to leave the films after ejection by the police officer until a hearing could be obtained on Monday, January 30th.

The M. P. P. Co. were so sure of their point that it took them over two hours with men and wagon waiting to take the film with them, and we can imagine their chagrin when they had to leave without the material they came for. We have no sympathy with such tactics, which we believe are a travesty of good common sense business methods, and we believe we are right in saying that all good thinking people who have honest integrity and clean businesslike methods at heart, are with us in extending sympathy to Mr. Lewis M. Swaab, and wishing him every success in his fight.

TRUST VS. INDEPENDENTS.

Francis Jenkins.

The various decisions granting temporary injunctions on motion picture cameras whenever they employ perforated film intermittently moved, seem unaccountable to one well acquainted with the prior art. But, of course, the decisions are made on the evidence before the Court, and so become law until reversed. The only thing left to do is to temporarily accept the situation as graciously as may be, and adjust oneself to the conditions.

But before pointing out the easiest course, let us lay a foundation for it by a review of the prior art, if only briefly. Perforated motion picture film is shown in French patent No. 194,482, 1888; perforated picture film intermittently moved is shown in British patent 16,785, 1888; another British patent of 1888, No. 423, describes a single lens camera using perforated film, intermittently moved. And there is also an even earlier French patent to Duheron (1865) which shows moving picture perforated band, with sprockets to feed it. In view of all these, as well as the great number of other related patents and publications shown in the list in the News of December 17, 1910, it seems unaccountable that a decision of the character above referred to could be rendered; but as I just stated, the Court is supposed to give a decision on the showing made, and it is incumbent on the defence to make a proper showing, which in my opinion has never yet been done.

Let's look first at the situation with regard to the Edison patent on an intermittent mechanism. Mr. Dickson, as is well known, was in charge of the Edison motion picture experiments. Dickson was and is an expert photographer. He designed and had Edison's workmen build two machines, one an intermittent and the other a constantly running mechanism. Now Edison, Dickson, and the workmen, all testified that the intermittent machine was built in the fall of 1889, and that this was the only intermittent mechanism they EVER built. They tried it out a few times and then, because it would not work satisfactorily, abandoned it for the constantly running mechanism, that is, a mechanism in which the film was fed without intermittent movement, and this intermittent mechanism (they called it a "stop-motion") was never after used by anyone. Nor was any other intermittent mechanism ever again built or used until Mr. Armat showed Edison such a device in March, 1896, seven years later. The orginal "stop-motion" device was abandoned in 1889, and has remained abandoned to this day. It did not and never could produce the kind of pictures claimed in Edison patent Re-issue 12,038.

To an expert photographer the testimony of Dickson, Edison, and the workmen (testimony given in various suits for infringement of a patent on this abandoned device) also conclusively proves this.

Let us see what was happening elsewhere in the photographic world at this time, 1889 to 1896. The Eastman Kodak Co. was building and selling kodaks, and film for use therein. The shutters on these kodaks were marked to work as rapidly as one one-hundredth of a second. And it was not common for amateur photographers to make exposures at a speed as high as this, though, of course, more often at a less speed of shutter. But at whatever rate of exposure, the manipulation of the camera was as follows: The film was exposed by snapping the shutter, rolled up to a fresh, unexposed place; exposed again and rolled again; and so on until the film was used up. Intermittent movement of the film, it will be observed, and with successful results, else the Eastman Kodak Co. would have been short lived. Now please remember that this mechanism differs from the moving picture camera of the past and present only in that the mechanisms for opening and closing the lens, and for rewinding the film between exposures, are, in the moving picture camera, both attached to a single crank, whereas, in the kodak these two functions are independent of each other, mechanically, that is, the shutter is snapped by pressing a trip, and then the film is rewound with a separate key arrangement. The exposure in both the motion picture camera and in the kodak are often exactly the same. Don't let it be forgotten that the Kodak amateur was getting results on intermittently moved film, for this is really the kernel of the whole matter, while Dickson (Edison) was not getting results. Why? Dickson was an expert photographer and was using the same film, why shouldn't HE get results? Let's analyze the situation a little further and possibly a reason will appear.

Eastman Kodak Co. supplied not only the amateur's film, but the film Dickson was using, so the fault wasn't in the film. (For that matter, from the Eastman Kodak Co. the writer obtained film for his own experimentation, begun in 1890, except for what film was obtained of the late John Carbut, of Philadelphia). Now the letters put in evidence in some of the suits show that both Eastman and Blair were repeatedly urged to supply a more sensitive film, Dickson saying that they "could not get results at the high rate of speed they employed." This "high rate of speed" is variously stated to be thirty to forty pictures per second. (Which is necessary, I admit, in constantly running film, as in the Edison kinetoscope or peep-hole machine, though sixteen pictures per second was found ample before Edison came in, and has since been found ample, and remains the standard rate to-day in mechanisms in which the film is fed intermittently). Also, both the Edison patent and his witnesses say that the period of exposure was about nine-tenths of this time. That is, the exposure would be about one-thirty-second to one-forty-fifth of a second; more than twice as long an exposure as many kodak amateurs found sufficient. And they, Edison, et al., couldn't get results, although the amateur was using the same film and getting fine pictures. Why? The sole and only reason was that Edison and Dickson were NOT using an intermittent mechanism at all; they were using a constantly running film in a continuously running mechanism, and all the exposure they could give without blurring was not more than 1/200 part of a second, or possibly, not over 1/300, admittedly not long enough to get a fully-timed picture using this film. It is clear then why they were so insistent about getting a more sensitive film; and the wonder ceases that Dickson, to get any results at all, was obliged to employ an absolutely dead black background, in front of which the subjects were required to act while dressed in the whitest of white costumes, as the Edison witnesses also testify. Photography on a constantly moving sensitive band required all these aids, and even then they didn't get sufficiently sensitive film to overcome the handicap, or to put out commercial machines until five years later, 1894, although amateurs were getting satisfactory results right along all this time. The "why" is now clear, isn't it? The amateur was using intermittently moved film, while Dickson was using constantly running film, other statements to the contrary notwithstanding. The "stop-motion" or intermittent mechanism had been abandoned, and has remained so from that day to this. And no intermittent mechanism was ever again used or built until seven years after the first one was abandoned, and then it was a copy of a mechanism built by the writer and shown to Edison by Mr. Armat in March, 1896, and immediately copied and put out as the "Edison Vitascope," the first exhibition of which was made at Koster & Bial's Theater in New York (see daily papers of that date).

Patent No. 560,800.

Now, fully-timed pictures CAN be made on constantly moving film, if one goes about it right. Thus, suppose a number of lenses are mounted on a rotating disc in a light-tight box with the axis of the lenses parallel with the axis of rotation of the disc. Now, if the disc is so rotated that the lenses travel across an opening in the front of the camera, an image will fall on the film (if the latter is properly located). And if the film moves in the same direction and at the same speed as the lens, a decreet, sharply-defined photographic image will result. The usual construction is reversed, that is all; instead of a stationary negative surface, a stationary lens, and a shutter moving across the lens, we have a stationary shutter with a lens moving across it, and moving in synchronism with a constantly moving film. Such an apparatus is shown in United States Patent 560,800, a camera which has been in laboratory use for some seventeen years, but which has not heretofore been placed on the market because it could not compete in price, the plurality of high grade lenses making the camera cost more than the intermittent film camera having a single high grade lens of same quality. In the present situation, however, the initial cost of the camera is not so important as the fact that this camera does not infringe any existing moving picture camera patent.

However, it is very interesting to find out just why Edison, after having abandoned the intermittent moving film for seven years, should suddenly change from the constantly moving film mechanism, known as the Edison kinetoscope, the peep-hole machine, to an intermittent machine, the original of which was shown him in 1896. It is a story which throws a rather lurid light on the situation, and I will tell you about it next week.

TALKING PICTURES

Who first used singing and talking pictures has been a question often asked by many interested in the industry. We, many times, have tried to get authentic data on this subject, and it was only the other day when there walked into our office Mr. Will C. Jones, who, with three comrades, is taking a vaudeville tour through the States, and who explained to us one or two matters. Did we know who was the first to use this device? Mr. Jones proved quite interesting, and told us a little about himself and his experiences, among which he said that he used the Phono-bio-tablo in 1900, and the way he used it was to procure an Edison bell record, using it on a Graphophone Grand. Mr. Jones has had some experience with the Columbia Phonograph Company, when their works were in Orange, and he thought he could put this experience to the cinematograph and so procured both singing and talking pictures to finish up his own act, and on the old Shakespeare Theatre in London, using the roof for staging, singing and acting they produced the phonographic records at the same time the picture was taken. He obtained a special electrician, who rigged up a synchronizing apparatus, which he claims synchronizes to the one-thousandth part of a second. He did this in conjunction with Walter Gibbons, who is well known to the profession in England, and in three days he had everything complete, and early in 1900 he accepted an engagement from Moss & Stoll to appear at the Hippodrome, Leicester Square, London, and under their auspices, touring for two years, made quite a hit throughout the country. They also featured Vesta Tilley in her singing act, and then, as the American Comedy Boys, they finished up their act with the singing and talking pictures.

While engaged on the Stoll tour, touring throughout the southern and western parts of England, especially taking in the Welsh towns and cities, and when appearing in Newport, Cardiff and Swansea, the Welsh people were incredulous as to the phonograph being able to produce the singing. The audience distinctly stated that the American Comedy Boys merely went behind the curtain and produced the sounds, and not the phonograph; they evidently were from Missouri, and wanted to be shown. They were shown, and still they were incredulous, and it became one of the wonders of their act, and gained them better advertising than any head-line bill did or could do.

Messrs. Jones and Lang have just closed with the Empire Theatre, London, and arrived here from England, after two years' absence, with new material, in which they are joined by Messrs. Kane and Boynton, making a very fine quartette. We may say that Mr. Kane was staging and playing a principal part in the Squaw Man, thus having considerable experience. Mr. Boynton is well known in concert, as a high-class tenor. Mr. Lang is one of the originators of their entertainment called The Comedy Quartette.

Mr. Jones has some very interesting reminiscences, and we have asked him to put them in the form of an interview to present to our readers. This he has consented to do, and we hope to begin a series of the experiences of a vaudeville man with the singing and talking pictures.

A SUNDAY EVENING ENTERTAINMENT

By Margaret I. MacDonald

To be always in an attitude of censure is not good. To be always on the qui vive for faulty conduct is unjust. To look for something good, even where little is to be found is the noblest attitude of life; to do good is nobler still.

On Sunday night, as a matter of diversion, I wandered into one of the moving picture houses nearby my home on the West Side of the city—a five-cent picture house. Order was promptly looked after by the manager; ladies were asked to remove their hats, and everything was conducted in ship-shape style. The entertainment was managed in the nicest and most respectable way, in spite of the fact that the little chap of but four years, sitting in front of me, insisted in parading his new rubber boots on the back of the chair in front of him.

There may be room for complaint in the churches that the moving picture houses draw from the church audiences of a Sunday evening, or that they do not incline toward the common good.

Nevertheless, the picture house opens a welcome door to the poor, which, I am sorry to say, all of the churches do not. The poor are not always welcome among the well-dressed audiences which frequent the city churches.

The pictures which were shown in this little picture house were not of a harmful character. There was no taint of immorality there, although there was provided little food for thought, or particular incentive for good.

The pictures were educational in one sense only, they were chosen from scenes from different periods of history, and different portions of the globe. How many of the audience understood the pathetic story of Elaine, from the "Knights of King Arthur," I am not prepared to say. The scene was of necessity artistic and beautiful, and one with an imaginative mind and an insight into the story, with the wonderful polish and coloring given it by Tennyson, could readily picture the rich trappings of the horses, the glow of the burnished helmets, and the flashing of the spears; and later on, the flower-strewn bier, with its burden of death—the beautiful, heartbroken Elaine, who died for the love of Lancelot.

This was a beautifully realistic picture, and a pleasure to those who beheld it—a beautiful illustration of the polished and imaginative work of Tennyson, who has painted, in beautiful and delicate shades, so many scenes of the early periods of history.

Again a scene from the days of the early Western settlers was shown, heartrending in the extreme, but nevertheless bearing with it realistic information of the scenes handed down in history, which our fathers knew so well.

The detective scene, which was of course interesting to most of the audience, was of no special value in the way of information.

Still arises the question in my mind, "when will the picture man look to the needs of the poorer public?" When will he have the courage to turn his picture house into a school of educational recreation? Answer: When he himself is morally and mentally equal to answering the question.

WHAT IS AN EDUCATIONAL FILM?

One side of the moving picturre movement, referred to incidentally in the Moving Picture News, appears to have been either overlooked or neglected. In the so-called educational side is a phase before which all others pale. The presentation of scientific subjects, especially those dealing not only with technical points, but rather those touching the common life, e.g., the White Plague, is undoubtedly of immense importance; the picturing of the ways and habits of birds, beasts and fishes worth yards of text books, while as a teacher of geography the film is peerless. On this last point we need only refer to the views of the Forbidden City, or the film dealing with Lhasa, with priests—please note it—priests—struggling to be "took," where ten years ago to show your nose would have spelt "death."

Remembering these things, and many more, there is another phase far above all.

We must digress to get at our point; to our personal knowledge, in spite of all the cheap talk and "orations," and multitudinous verbosities of "fillers" in the daily press, there has been, and is, a movement, silent, but potent, that means the splitting of nations, and the return to the dead centuries of mediaevalism. This movement is entirely linguistic; for example, in the Netherlands there is a fight to restore the old Flemish, Charleroi can tell this story; in Norway there is a newspaper—the 12th of May—whose sole object is to restore an ancient form of speech; we have sat in boats in Finland and listened to the most heated discussions as to whether Swedish shall be allowed in the land, while Finnish—that mellifluous tongue of terror—is the original speech of the country. This when the Duma was fighting for liberty!

One other example; go and stand in Buda-Pesth and read a government notice; read it, yes, if a half dozen tongues are familiar to you, not otherwise. Though in Hungary's capital, Magyar, won't carry you through; any traveler's note book will give pages of notes, bearing on the attempt to resurrect dead tongues, or to give hypodermic injections to dying ones. We appreciate the philological and sentimental reasons behind these movements, but with twentieth century practical ideals before us they are detestable; they make for nations within nations, for hyphenated nationalities. They are like the "wild cat" currents in electricity, that corrode bridge cables intended to join men, instead of carrying power to unify.

Everybody knows what a rival is. Are we to go back to the original of the word and deem every fellow that happens to live on the other side of the river a mortal enemy, whose home is to be ravaged, family dishonored, and whose own head ought to be smashed so soon as opportunity offers?

Our Ideal is Brotherhood, the Brotherhood of Man, without reference to creed, race or language or anything else save the Fatherhood of God. War, to those who know it, is brutal butchery; we have sermons about it, yet millions go to prepare for it, while millions starve. True, a few millions wrung from the toilers are paraded as given to theoretical panaceas, fantastic cure-alls. But there is a power that has a phase before which all pale.

We have in our midst a preacher before which all the most eloquent divines are nothing; that even the press—with how many circulation?—is a baby. What is it? It's moving pictures. Yes, moving pictures, even if in a five-cent show. They break down "the middle wall of partition" between races. They speak in a universal language. A film is made in Denmark and cheered in New York; made in Italy, applauded in New Zealand; made in France, appreciated in the Argentine; made in England, accepted in Germany; made in Germany and seen in England; made in the United States and known from Montreal to Nagasaki.

On the film men and women speak in the silent language of humanity. On the screen there's a man, or a woman, suffering or rejoicing, and when it comes on the curtain Bombay understands it as well as Melbourne.

In spite of all the petty fights and divisions inside nations, on the screen, there's only one race, man. Only one language, the cry of humanity, the world over.

People talk of educational films; there are not any that are not. No one has any right to limit that word, the life, the struggle, even the humor of races, each and all are educational. They reveal man to man, they speak the same heart tongue, they teach one man to know the other fellow. The term educational has no business to be limited to a certain class of pictures. In many theatres people avoid the so-called educational; they do so by a misunderstanding. We hold that anything that expands the viewpoint, broadens the opinions, or breaks down man-made barriers between race and race is educational. Education is begun in school or university, it is carried on among men, in the world of life; it's there it attains its standing. So, we hold there is no teacher, no preacher so potent as moving pictures in that most important of all struggles, the battle for the true and real dominion of Brotherhood—the Brotherhood of Man.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH MOVING PICTURES? THEY'RE ALL RIGHT, BUT——

By a Brooklyn Widow

I understand Brooklyn mothers are asked to write a little about moving pictures, and I am one of them. Being a poor widow and no scholar, I may not express myself in a way to please the more highly educated. Well, well, I notice that writers, as a rule, have a little to say about themselves, and so I must tell you that I have three young children, all attending public school, and when my old man passed into the unknown, about twelve months ago, he said to me, "Sallie, go with the bairns and let them enjoy the pictures and help on in this way their education." So, thus it is the old cracked cup still stands on the shelf in which we all put our spare pennies, and then on a Saturday night they are counted out and off we go. In Brooklyn there are some very fine shows, and many of the halls are large, warm, and comfortable, and it would surprise you, Mr. Editor, to see the finely dressed crowds that gather there, and, then, the pictures are so good that you seem taken out of yourself and can almost think you are galloping across the prairies, or that you are one of the crowd? stood laughing at the antics of Mr. Foolshead. But sometimes I have come away with a feeling of disappointment, especially after such a picture as "Truth Beyond Justice," the kids pulling my arm, and "Mother, what does it mean?" is so hard to answer, and I ask myself does the moving picture maker know how difficult it is to explain to little children about the murder that is being committed behind the shaking curtain. Oh! writer of "Truth Beyond Justice," if you are a father, and take your own children there to see it, tell me when the bairns pull your sleeve and say "What is it," how can you satisfy their innocent minds? Certainly not by the truth. I know no reason why my little Johnnie may not some day be a power in this great America, and so I do not want his innocent, childish mind filled with unclean and murderous pictures. I think the great owners of the manufacturing end should be very careful whom they allow to choose the pictures. The time has passed when "anything is good enough for the poor," and upon the scene-makers devolves a great responsibility as children are so easily impressed and wrapped in the inmost recesses of their little brains. The effect of what they see remains there, and will often permeate their whole future lives. I don't know anything about the manufacture of pictures, but it seems to me three or four educated gentlemen or ladies should see to the spelling and the subject before they are allowed to come before the most critical audience in the world—young children; always remembering that by the good and the bad we are judged. Inasmuch as ye have published both before these, my little ones, ye have done it unto me.

(Next article by A Brooklyn Old Maid.)

ILLUSTRATED SONG SLIDES

By a Brooklyn Mother

Lots of folks don't like them. I do, but it depends upon the song. Music has great charms, and accompanied by some beautiful slides, has still greater charms, and furthermore helped on by a voice of sympathetic sweetness has the greatest charm of all. I was at a moving picture show a little time ago where "Back to the Old Home" was sung by a young girl, and I wish you had heard the chorus taken up by the children's voices in the audience. One little fellow in a clear, ringing treble was so above the rest that the song had to be repeated. The time has gone when such songs as "Bugs On You," and many others of a similar class, satisfy the higher tone which now rules the moving picture goers. Since the noticeable cleanliness which the manufacturers of films, on the demand of their patrons are, I am sure, doing their best to give us, it is quite time, for the songs, illustrated or otherwise, to take a mighty step in the right direction, and to have none sung but what are elevating or really amusing. If the song writers of the present day want any inspiration I would refer them to forty years ago, when "The Rose of Allan Dale," "She Wore a Wreath of Roses," "Meet Me By Moonlight, Alone," "In Shadowland," "The Arab's Farewell to His Favorite Steed," and many others of that tone, much of the rubbish of the present day would take a back seat, and audiences inclined to be critical would go home with their hearts filled with real music.

WATCHING THE PICTURES

By H. Jeanval

It is not properly realized by audiences what it costs to get some films. It is time some recognition was made of the unnamed who are the foundation of the whole thing. Mad racing down hillsides on horseback, paddling through rapids, swimming in treacherous waters, and a hundred other things are all fraught with danger to the actors and actresses, who often take their lives in their hands to make a reel for our amusement. For the nonce I wish to call attention to some one else who appears to be completely overlooked—the camera man. He deserves, if any one does, our heartiest recognition. Take such a film as Pathe's "Sea Birds," that evidently meant hanging over cliffs—with a heavy machine—dangling at the end of a rope over a boiling sea; traveling to far-off and inhospitable places, getting soaked in mud and rain, and having the patience of Job waiting for the right moment to get some rare—most likely timid and wary bird. These men risk health and even life in order that we may have a film that is but too often noticed by our critics with a few lines as "educational." Educational they truly are, in more senses than one, for they show the bravery, determination and loyalty to a firm's commands that such productions as the one named reveals from start to finish. It would gladden my heart, and I thoroughly believe would be acceptable to audiences, if some means could be devised to make these things known; it would deepen the interest in the reel and enhance its value.

Authors' names appear, well and good; the actors and actresses are recognized sometimes, excellent; but the cost of the film, not in money, but in labor and self-sacrifice, is totally neglected, and I want the camera man acknowledged as he deserves.

Won't some of the actors, actresses, or camera men send me some of their stories? I know they have many a live, strong story tucked away in their memories which, like all brave folks, they think nothing of. I will gladly cut down my stuff to give room to such snappy, and soul-stirring copy as such stories are bound to be. Come along, comrades, and let your light shine; don't hide it under a bushel.

Reliance, what is a "magnificent woman"? See "A Country Girl," sub-title.

Ambrosio looks well in its new "dress" for titles and sub-titles. It might now turn to its translating department; in the "Blue Domino," what is "repulsed disguise"? In the "Tailor's Queer Ad.," the English translation of the placard on the dummy is not exact.

In the Urban's "By the King's Order," we read "his behavio." What language is that?

Biograph, how about that eight-day clock that sticks at 11:45, through two scenes?

It's funny how many newspapers have allowed such a blunder as this to pass:—Gardner's Ladder, instead of Gardener's Ladder (Edison). What, ho, proof-room!

What's the matter with Pathe? Qualms of conscience! "The Marked Dollar" appears with the awe-inspiring notice that it has "passed the Censors." I didn't notice the glorious news upon "The Tables Are Turned!"

In the above film although, "made in America," the little girl writes on French note paper!

What's this? Gaumont asleep! In "The Kleptomaniac" one ring is stolen, yet both in the sub-title and the letter the film records "rings." The old story, even Homer nods once in a while.

The plague of the flowery, dis-cursive, and nebulous synopsis is bad enough—especially when some do not agree with the film, clear evidence that the writer had either not seen the reel, or else was guilty of gross carelessness. Now there's a new carbuncle, the ad writer who in flamboyant adjectives tells us what we are to see. A notebook contains quite a few funny examples showing that the writer was not familiar even with the facts of the film. I humbly commend to such a morsel of the terse, homely philosophy of Dinkelspiel: "Der noisy man alvays attractions a lot of attention until we get used to his voice."

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., Jan. 25.—This world-famous resort is entering upon the first stage of its annual season, and there is some crowd here now. All the hotels are filling up rapidly and the show business, naturally, has taken on a corresponding increase. There is only one thing that prevents the picture managers from wearing a smile most golden and that is the fact that they are not permitted to open on Sunday.

There it goes again—that Sunday closing question; but if ever there was a legitimate business that is getting a raw case of discrimination it is the moving picture houses in this city. In spite of the seeming activity of Prosecuting Attorney Wood, gambling has been going on with more or less openness. The Texas club was raided again twice this week, but the "tip" was given beforehand and when the officers arrived all they discovered was a lot of broken paraphernalia. Not twenty minutes after they had withdrawn the club, it is said, resumed business.

The Sunday observance law in this man's town is one huge joke. Why, the place is overrun with palmists, fortune-tellers and clairvoyants, and they are all open on Sunday. The poolrooms are doing a nice Sabbath business, thank you. Of course, the blinds are closely drawn, but any one can play who cares to. Ice-cream parlors, cigar stores and bakeries have a good Sunday patronage, but the picture houses are closed. I hear that a certain club house in the city had quite a run for its money this week; that it was catching the suckers right and left, until some real wise boys blew in and proceeded to show those manipulating the various games what the art of gambling actually consisted of, and when they had finished the club shut down, for the bank had been cleaned good and proper. It's not often that such a state of affairs happens, and when it does it deserves public comment, which it is getting.

The hotel lobbies resemble the meeting hall of so many conventions these Sunday nights. The people have no place to go, and a great many of them take their walk during the day. There is a great kick from the visitors because there is no amusement to give them. The Iron Mountain, Rock Island roads, together with the Business Men's League, is endeavoring to raise $35,000 to advertise Hot Springs, and they are not meeting with any too great success, for the reason that this spasmodic wave of virtue, which is being turned into burlesque, has soured the men who are asked to contribute. Harry Hale, manager of the Lyric Theater, told me that, by being compelled to close Sunday, it was costing him close on to $5,000 a year. There's going to be something doing in this line in the near future, and when it comes off it will make interesting reading, not alone in trade papers but the big dailies as well. Watch and wait for the big show.

If the picture houses dare not open there is one place that the public flocks to and that is the open-air meeting of the Salvation Army. And let me remark right here that we have some "willing workers" in this line of soul savers. The past Sunday, however, something happened that only goes to show that accidents and the unexpected occur in the best of regulated families. There is a cripple here who peddles trinkets while seated in a little wagon hauled by a pompous goat. This man, when Thanhouser's "Robinson Crusoe" was being run, was requested to don the garments of the celebrated wanderer, but declined being part of any advertising scheme. He drew up on the edge of the crowd listening to the Salvation Army services last Sunday night. Now his goat is a very gentlemanly animal, and doesn't "butt in" on other people's affairs. A cab driver in the city owns a pugnacious bulldog, which was also numbered "among those present." It appears that the goat called the bulldog a "roustabout" and the dog did an aeroplane act and when he came down to earth was seen to have caught the goat by the nose. At this particular moment the Army, to the tune of "Casy Jones," was getting the following off its system:

"'Come, all ye sinners, and gather round;
Salvation sure has come to town.
No time to hesitate, you've got to choose Religion now and cut out the booze."

The meeting was rudely interrupted by the dog and goat specialty. The latter let out a yell that sounded like the wail of a lost soul and the dog held on with all the persistency that characterizes Carl Laemmle's attacks on old "General Flimco." The crowd scattered, Salvation lads and lassies beat it to the tall and uncut—all save one—brave Brother Thompson—he who wallops the bass drum, which, by the way, had been placed in the center of the circle made by the Army, and on which was the evening contribution. The goat and dog, however, paid no attention and they crashed into the bass drum with sufficient force to send the pennies, nickels and dimes to the four winds of the earth. Did Brother Thompson run? Far be it from such. His cause was a righteous one. He straddled the bulldog, and, in the language of the colored minister who thrashed an habitual "black backslider," he "jes' naturally knocked de hell right out ob him." After which the dog went yelping down the street, the drum was placed again in position, amid the applause of the spectators, and the pennies, nickels and dimes recovered, while still others were thrown on the drum by appreciative onlookers who enjoyed the novelty.

Messrs. Hood and Henderson, accompanied by three reels of "The Night Riders in Kentucky and Tennessee," together with billing like a circus, opened a two days' engagement at the Lyceum this week to good business. I understand that these pictures were taken by a licensed camera, but whether they have the sanction of the Patent company, deponent sayeth not. The Lyceum is a trust house and has been ever since it opened.

The business at the beautiful new Princess continues to be the "S. R. O." kind, and this week's bill was of more than usual interest. Walter Law and company were the headliners, presenting a very clever dramatic playlet, "At the Threshold." Mr. Law was well remembered as leading man in "Pretty Peggy" and "The Sign of the Cross." Both he and his company were heartily received and their offering proved a treat. Martin and Polk, eccentric knockabout comedians, scored heavily, as did also Rivers and Rochester, the Australian comedy singing duo. T. Nelson Downs, the "king of koin" (and this is no reflection of one Mr. Rockefeller), mystified the audience. He is a wonder, as is also the oil magnate. Miss Bussee and her trained terriers proved of special delight to the ladies and children, and Saturday there will be a reception on the stage of the Princess, at which time Miss Bussee will invite the audience up for a close inspection of her pets.

"The Virginian," Owen Wister's romance of Wyoming life, was interpreted by an excellent company at the Auditorium Monday night, but the social and dramatic event of the week at this house will take place Friday evening, at which time Madame Nazimova, supported by the Nazimova Theater Company, will present "Little Eyoly," one of Ibsen's plays. We are not very strong for Ibsen in these parts, but they'll all say its great, for to refuse, you know, would place us among the "lowbrows."

If you contemplate coming to this city and desire to see at any time a show that is always good, don't overlook the Lyric; and come early, too; otherwise you'll not get in, for Mr. Hale is packing them to the doors, matinee and night. The stellar attraction this week is Charles F. Haynes, psychologist, and this gentleman put over the real thing. He had us all guessing, driving around the city blindfolded and finding various articles that had been hidden far up in the Ozart Mountains. In fact, Prosecuting Attorney Wood let pass a good thing in this gentleman, for he might have been used to find a few violators of the Sunday closing law, including the gamblers. "Consistency, thou art a virtue." Pat and Mary Touhey were also on the Lyric's bill, and the sons of Erin pulled hard for this act all week. They gave us the real thing in old-time Irish melody and were forced to respond to repeated recalls.

Before I close this communication I want to thank the Kalem company for giving the moving picture industry their masterful reel, "The Wanderer." It was a pleasure to watch this, for it represented and told most vividly a story of life that is too often crowded out of notice in the world's busy busness. Keep it up, Kalem. You made a ten strike in that reel, and if there are any managers dealing in Patent company pictures who have failed to get this reel, well, it's their loss, for it was one of the cleanest, most human-interest pictures I have seen in months. And, Kalem, your "Runaway Engine" was also quite a thriller. Its realism made one forget minor defects.

The best thing in the comedy line proved to be Vitagraph's "The Misses Finch and Nephew Billy." There were times that I have "spanked" this kid in criticism and would have liked to have done so literally, but, "Billy," I forgive the past. You are some brat; there's no denying that, but you gave us the biggest, most hearty laugh of the week, and the ladies at the Scenic, notwithstanding your deviltry, would have taken you in their arms and hugged you.

We also had "His Sister-in-Law." Biograph, was it necessary to feature the birth so vividly? If this keeps up we expect wet-nurses to be an important factor in motion photography. "The Italian Barber," also a Biograph, was most interesting because it contained "Little Mary.' I guess Carl didn't get some "scoop" when he secured this talented little lady. Can a duck swim?

"The Count and the Cowboys" was also enjoyed. Much obliged for this one, Essanay. Your little comedian looks much better in his Western regalia than he did in the false alarm of "Hank and Lank," alias "Mutt and Jeff."

"The Vote that Counts" and "The Vicar of Wakefield," two Thanhouser productions, together with "Melody' and "Their First Misunderstanding," were among the best Independent reels of the week.

And, referring once more to things theatrical, announcement is made that the Grand Opera House will open the week of February 6 with the W. H. Lewis big stock compay, an organization of thirty persons, including a band and orchestra of eighteen, presenting a high-class repertoire of New York royal successes, together with six vaudeville features and two thousand feet of moving pictures. This, it is said, is one of the biggest attractions on the road, and as the season will be on in full swing when the company opens, they should "clean up" in great shape. Manager W. H. Lewis is in the city making arrangements for the opening.

I noticed that a committee of Y. M. C. A. workers, in "selecting twenty-five of the most beautiful words in the English language" (oh, piffle!), overlooked that gem of beauty and euphony—"photoplay. Ye gods of rhetoric and shades of Webster, how could they be so careless!

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

A CINE TOUR THROUGH MEXICO

II. In the Heart of the Tropics

By J. A. B.

In Mexico City one must forget the strenuous life, for the very good reason that it stands some 7,500 feet above sea level. Elevators are rare, and climbing stairways is too heroic an exercise to be freely indulged in. The first time we noticed this was when we had to rush back to our room on the third floor for a forgotten film magazine.

The air is so clear and the floor of the valley so level that when one looks at the mountains surrounding this beautiful plain, one forgets that Mexico City is in the Land of the Sky. And no matter which way you would leave the city for the country beyond the plain, you must climb still higher over the mountain ridge.

Possibly our most interesting side trip was south as far as the Guatemalan border. The precautions we took on this trip were many, and if we were to repeat the journey we would omit none of them.

First, all our raw film was carefully dried and repacked in tin cases specially made for us, each with a little compartment for holding calcium chloride, and the whole tin being hermetically sealed. Even then, some of the film showed traces of dampness at the edges. There is a better method, we know, but we did the best that circumstances would allow.

Leaving Mexico by the Mexican Railway, we soon climbed the ridge to the south of the valley, and turned the camera loose on some of the finest cloud and panorama effects we had ever seen, with "Old Popo" and Ixtacchuatl, sister volcanoes now out of a job, in the background. The descent to Cordoba was very picturesque; in fact, it was a perfect dream, for the Pullman was very comfortable, and the time was night.

Cordoba, where we left the Mexican and took the Isthmus Railway, has an ideal climate all the year round. We made a few feet of "local color" stuff, but as the action was conspicuously lacking, and we were not looking for churches and shrines and patios, we stayed only long enough to begin our real journey towards the equator.

The bananas fooled us at first. With so much green and red and brown in the landscape we made what we thought the necessary corrections in our exposures, yet could get but little depth in the resulting negatives. Not until we had three or four pasty-looking strips of over-exposed film did it occur to us to look at our actinometer. When we did, we found we were under-estimating the actinicity of tropical daylight, and afterwards experienced no trouble. Right here we would say that the camera man who despises the humble meter is welcome to his "rule of thumb"; for our part, the Watkins system is good enough, even if you have to study a little to grasp it.

Soon we were speeding through fields of pineapples and hectares of bananas, and by common consent the "shirt-sleeve dress" was adopted. The mountain streams we crossed were in flood, and when we had filmed several of the most beautiful waterfalls, our only regret was that we could not reproduce the colors of the foliage.

We had an Indian pineapple-seller pose for her picture at close range, her white teeth and flashing eyes being in keeping with the brilliant colors of her costume (what there was of it).

We had no trouble with our hand baggage, as the "muchachos" carried it for us at a ridiculously low charge, and were as careful with our instruments as though they were sacred things.

Our first jumping-off place was Motzorongo, a little town set in the midst of a valley so fertile that what you cannot grow there is not worth growing.

Motzorongo is the center of one of the great sugar-cane sections.

The Griffin brothers, two American boys who have made a big success in the sugar industry, entertained us royally, and though this was the quiet season for the sugar operations, they had their whole "gente" (help) turn out and give us a sample of the hustle and bustle of the cutting and grinding season, which we filmed successfully.

Tierra Blanca was reached at noon. You have seen Selig's Panama pictures: well, this place is just as uninteresting.

Just below Tierra Blanca we were shown our first native rubber tree. We merely glanced sideways, necks unbent, for the joker was abroad, and his lips were formed to say the word.

At El Hule, we took the gasoline launch up the Papaloapam river for about 80 kilometers, and here we began to see what real tropical verdure is like. O for the days when we can get color films! We made a few autochrome plates, but they are not the real colors as we saw them. Orchids of every hue clinging to every tree; parrots and cockatoos of brightest red and green loudly protesting against our intrusion into their domain; now and then an iguanabeing scared from a overhanging limb, and coming "plop" into the water within a few feet of us, his green skin shimmering in the tropic sun. A camera man need not die of ennui on a tropical river trip. Much could be written about the scenic grandeur of the little-known Mexican rivers, but the Moving Picture News is not a travel magazine. On our run down the Trinidad river—a two days' lazy floating in a 30-foot mahogany dugout, we had a splendid opportunity to get panoramic cineographs. The motion of the canoe was so steady it was possible to sight some prominent object over the bow, tell the Indians to keep the craft headed for it, and for over a minute that object would hang on to the cross-lines of the finder as if it were a painted image.

It was on the shore of the Trinidad where we first tried our gun, a brand-new Colt, that we had brought along just for the look of things. We had landed to stretch our legs a little, and though we saw no bandits, we noticed, hanging from the branch of a tree, a huge bees' nest some two feet in diameter. Our plan of attack was arranged rapidly. The camera was set up at 20 feet, and Watkins, our unconscious comedian, was to turn the crank whilst we, from a coign of vantage about 40 feet away, were to send a ball into the nest. By some strange mishap our first shot went straight to the mark. Then the fun began.

The camera man was grinding away merrily, watching the nest through the finder, when, not two seconds after the shot, a wild yell from Watkins brought from us the unsympathetic response "Stung." We all made a scramble for the canoe, leaving the camera in the hands of the Philiistines. Until that time we had never seen an Indian laugh, and, of course, the merriment of our canoe boys passed unfilmed.

Returning when things had quieted down, we expected to find that the bees had annexed the camera, but they, evidently recognizing the non-infringing character of the instrument, had left it in disTRUST.

At Achotal, on the Trinidad, we stayed overnight, and were introduced to something in the way of an hotel we had not encountered before. Four of us were given candles, then commanded to march up a rickety staircase to a kind of loft over a stable. The roof was of palm leaves, and the walls of bamboo stalks, placed close together and secured with grass ropes. The sleeping-room was one great chamber, and we were each given a bed with a mosquito net around it.

There were seven other folks in the same room, among them two other Americans and an Englishman, who kicked all the time.

Just to pass away the time during a two days' stay on a rubber plantation, we developed a few feet of film, and made a positive print thereof. No, we did not find any "static" flashes, for the very good reason that we had taken precaution against them. Space is too limited for us to describe the method, but it would be well if camera men who have had static troubles would try surrounding the camera mechanism with a shield of iron wire gauze.

At Santa Lucretia we took the Tehuantepec National road to Salina Cruz, passing through some of the most productive land in the world.

But the most attractive things in Tehuantepec are the native costumes, and the girls who wear them. Some have called these maidens "land sirens," but the name is not deserved. In the first place, we never heard them sing. But for graceful carriage and fine form, together with the most charming inflection of the poetic Spanish tongue, these maids of the isthmus are unrivalled.

All along this isthmus route we saw evidences of the work of the unscrupulous land shark of the United States. These were in the form of abandoned "finkas" (little plantations), expensive sugar plants overgrown with rampant tropical vegetation, modern farm machinery rusting and rotting in the swamp, and even cosy homes without a semblance of life. There is good land in Mexico, and good money to be made, but when a "small tropical farms" agent goes to a Dakota farmer in the depth of winter, and sells him a farm in the tropics without telling him of the conditions he will actually meet, it is little short of criminal. The story of these dishonest deals will shortly be told in the only convincing way, by moving pictures taken on the spot. Somebody will be sore, but the man who has an up-to-date, honest proposition in Mexican lands will welcome these pictures of things as they are.

PICTURE MACHINE BUSINESS BRISK

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports that business in moving picture machines, Economizers and opera chairs has picked up wonderfully in the past two weeks. The demand for Hallberg Economizers especially has been good. However, "There is a reason," as is proven by the following letter from C. F. Gillett, Connellsville, Pa.: "I have had my 'Economizer' working over a month now and am more than pleased with the results. Have taken another new theatre and will want another one at once. The day I received my first bill, which was $15, the Globe Theatre, a new corporation here, was so pleased with the reduction that they ordered one by express, and it was installed two days later. Another manager has also decided to get one."

SEEN ON THE CURTAIN

By Walton

Melody—(Imp).—The film is its name. With sympathetic music to ripple round the tender spots, the reel is one long delight. It is Lieder Ohne Worte. Life appassionata, treated with the hand of an artist, interpreted by tender comprehending men and women. The theme of the story, the music that must be listened to is well known in Germa lore; the Greeks sang of it and the most splendid parts of the glorious Finnish epic, "Kalevala," ring with it. The sweet, pure, human story of the film, treated in this way, lifts the whole into the uplands of the higher life. This production moved the people when released. It always will—it speaks in the language of humanity. Care ought to be taken to make the music equal to the reel.

Jealousy of Sosthenes Rumulot—(Eclair.)—Just as wild a muddle as anyone need wish. The last scene with the supposed murder of the lot is a tortured scream.

My Wife's Hat—(Eclair).—Conceive every possible difficulty a man could get into over his wife's hat and then some more, with a "chaser" thrown in, and there you are!

The Battered Bridegrooms—(American).—They certainly were battered. Jealousy leads to a most beautiful tangle, over which folks laugh themselves hoarse. Everything centers upon April 1.

A Dental Disaster—(American).—About as funny a string of catastrophes as a short reel can hold. It's all fun, misunderstandings, understandings and comic muddles. A yarn about false teeth that "would make a saint laugh."

So Near But Not Quite—(Pathe).—A thief with a cop at his heels, and "a chaser." The finale switches off from the usual. The thief gets a reward, as the synopsis says, from an "ever profuse police captain." Whatever that is!

Max Is Almost Married—(Pathe).—Welcome back, Max! Thrice welcome. We don't always agree, but as man to man—the cynic drops his mark—your name on a film and I prepare to enjoy myself. He nearly gets married, he would have done but for some dogs (aside, that saved him from going to the dogs). Lots of real laughs in this "split."

The Battle of Redwood—(Pathe).—A villainous agent sells the Indians' food. Indians starving set out on warpath and are smitten hip and thigh by the soldiers. Moral:—Ne sais pas.

The Widow's Choice—(Lubin).—Two young men—brothers—in love with a charming widow—she is charming in the film, really—are called away on business and leave her in charge of their widower father, who hates women. When they return she's their stepmother. The Union Square theater audience laughed themselves helpless over this funny reel.

The Count and the Cowboys—(Essanay).—Imagine a French dandy amongst the cowboys. The fun is fast and furious. The duel is a scream—a little spoilt in the making. The way he disappears is side-splitting. The funny man of this firm is a "gem." In this film he fully sustains his role. The reel is honest, clean fun all through.

The Link That Held—(Edison).—This firm seems to delight in a certain kind of story. If it had Mount Kirchinjungar as a background it would be the same sexual business. The heroine plays her part. Thank God, she repents. That's all.

Bertie's Brainstorm—(Thanhouser).—This beats the brainstorm in "Les Miserables." It is a Doré Nightmare.

Texas Ted's Defence—(Bison).—It is a perfect marvel how some of our Western friends will go out all-aflaring, breathing thunder and vengeance against a fellow and then, like a flash, they will shake hands and be ready to die for the fellow they wanted to perforate five minutes before. There's more than meets the eye in this. In this reel we have splendid riding, fine selections of scenery, vigorous acting and a psychological story. See it!

A Montana Love Story—(Powers).—A pretty vigorous yarn where a (the bill on the wall says Nebraska) woman restaurant keeper beats the boys to "a frazzle" through their stomachs. A laughable concoction.

Lovers' Trials—(Powers).—The Fourteenth Street Theater had a good laugh over this, for it's one long series of mix-ups, due to a series of impossible happenings. Go and see it and then wrap a cold-water bandage around your "dome."

The Twin Cinderellas—(Pathe).—Two ladies each lose a slipper, one an actress, and hers is full of jewels. Two policemen find them. Then comes the detective department, two furious women, ending up with everybody kissing everybody. The sly dig at "graft" in the last scene is cleverly done. How well carried out everything is in this reel was clearly shown at Keith & Proctor's Union Square Theater, where the audience loudly applauded the whole thing.

A Country Girl—(Reliance).—That there is acting of the highest order is undoubted; the staging also is good, but the theme of the story shows strain. The firm has evidently made up its mind to run a certain class of story and more than one scene suggests the same train of thought as the "Gray of Dawn." The city girl's actions are open to criticism—they're too near hysteria in spots.

The Will of a Western Girl—(Champion).—A villainous uncle tries to rob an orphan niece, but is thwarted by a will left by the girl's mother. The story is full of life and vigor. The Indian woman plays her part well, as also the niece. There is pathos and power in this well-conceived and executed reel.

The Blue Domino Disguise—(Ambrosio).—As usual, staging and acting are excellent. But the story has no place on the screen and ought never to be there. A disgraceful low-lived liason and an innocent girl murdered at a Bal Masque. Faugh! Ambrosio can find plenty of material in Italian literature, tales from the very vicinity of Turin, fit to utilize and reproduce, in the splendid way it can, that will honor the firm and delight the audience without going to the gutter for material. This film is irretrievably immoral and unmoral.

A Tailor's Queer Advertisement—(Ambrosio).—This is a bitter satire on the officials in a small place. A pair of legs is seen sticking out of water by a fisherman; he does nothing, but with immense fury summons aid, who in turn do nothing, but go for more help. Ot last there are men, women, gend'armes with drawn swords, a fire engine (!) and even the Mayor, all gazing. Their united courage drags the body out only to discover it's a tailor's advertisement. Satire and fun mixed. Looks as if somebody in Turin had been taking a course of Horace lately.

Uncle's Birthday Gift—(Edison).—Much ado about nothing.

By the King's Order—(Urban).—A story with lots of incident. The staging is striking and the acting of the leaders realistic. Through all runs a pretty love story. A fine example of French life of the period.

Help Wanted—(Biograph).—The sprawling, kicking make-believe suicide and indeed the whole thing, is not worthy of Biograph.

The Midnight Marauder—(Biograph)—An arrant coward, who is Bombastes Furioso, a fool burglar who knocks everything over—some tricks, and a lot of bosh. Amen. Biograph, did you really send this rot out, honest Injun?

A Girl of the West—(Essanay).—Very much on the line of former films, so far as theme is concerned. A young deputy sheriff has to serve a warrant upon his sweetheart's brother, then comes the struggle between love and duty. He manfully strives to do the right, but his sweetheart, in her brother's clothes, leads him on a fool's errand. The scenery is interesting and the actors do their best.

Mike the Miser—(Edison).—A tender, thoroughly human story well portrayed. A little messenger boy acts the miser and gets into all sorts of trouble with the other boys. Meanwhile he is trying to save up so that a little sister may have an operation performed. When this is known the lads "change front" and help right loyally. When the lad saves a child from death the calm indifference of the mother is a delicious thrust at the heartless society dame, who is "cursed" with a child. A film of merit which has my heartiest commendation in every way.

Marguerite's Birthday—(Pathe).—Artist goes to get a present for wife's birthday, burglar loots rich broker's floor beneath, leaves his goods in artist's flat; artist blames wife for wrongdoing with said broker; broker accuses artist of theft; whilst the row is going on burglar falls headlong out of a closet into the midst. Thin, very thin.

The Old Water Jug—(Vitagraph).—This is refreshing. It is a thoughtful film. Not only is the theme a fine piece of work, but it is an uplift. The theme is beautifully worked out, in a way that brands itself on the memory. An old Indian abhorred of his kind turns to his waterjug, whereon are the scenes of his youth, each cleverly shown in a vision. Conscience stricken at his cruelties, he fills the vacant place with the sign of the Great Spirit. Then in his dying moments those who fled from him gather round him and soothe him as he departs to the "Happy Hunting Grounds." A noble film in every sense.

Tag Day at Silver Gulch—(Lubin).—Very much on the lines of former reels. The story is all right; it is clean and that's something. The "fighting parson" plays his part. This actor always makes one wish he was a "real" parson. He's a very man, just the sort we need in the life ecclesiastical.

The Italian Barber—(Biograph.—A sort of pot-pourri with the "fin herbes" left out. Not a real biograph.

Buddy the Little Guardian—(Selig).—A sweet child acts as guardian to a drunken father. The little fellow gets work with the mother's (whom the drunkard has left) old sweetheart. The moment the father is alone he gets drunk and has a serious accident. In the meanwhile the little lad is run down by the everlasting automobile. In the hospital his nurse turns out to be his mother and his master turns up. In the next bed the father—unknown to all—expires.

Saved by Her Prayers—(Pathe).—The sea scenery is beautiful. A pretty French story of a girl praying during the storm for her lover at sea. It seems to me the girl was very young to be betrothed, and that the man who came out the boat was her father—on the film.

Dr. Cupid—(Vitagraph).—A cranky old father, who is beaten by his daughter in the love game. The lover, with the connivance of the physician, disguises himself as a doctor and cures the love-sick maiden. An old folk tale rechauffee. In this modern rehash there is a good deal of humor due to the cranky father's good acting.

Test of Friendship—(Edison).—A truly Edisonian yarn where machinery and building holds the centre of the stage. The villian stuns the good young man and slings him out, all unconscious, on a girder, twenty stories in the air. Real Bowery melodrama!

Dusty Rhodes Takes a Flight—(Pathe).—A trick photograph, with a bicycle sailing over a city that "all the King's horses and all the King's men" spite of muskets and cannon, cannot bring down. A small boy does with a popgun. A Pathe comedy!

The Master's Son—(Essanay).—One of those clean, delightful stories of the love of an old negro for the master's son. The devotion and self-sacrifice of the old man and the way he saves the boy and gives him a wife are such as appeal to men and women the world over. The sort of thing Essanay excels in.

The Water Contest—(Gaumont).—A fine example of how the old Quintain is now played in South France.

The Sealed Letter—(Gaumont).—The scenery here is most realistic and chosen by artists. The story is repulsive ;a fisher girl comes to bid her lover good-bye and does so with much tenderness. Before she leaves, between kisses, she gives him a letter, he is not to open till far out at sea. In his lonely little boat he does so and finds she has married an American millionaire and sailed for the land of the free. This is frankly brutal.

The Owner of the L. L. Ranch—(Melies).—The story of a young fellow buying back a ranch for his former mistress and marrying her is all right. The acting of the Baronet (dubbed count in the synopsis) is good, from his scornful treatment of the cowboys, to the calm way he dusts his coat after the rope is taken off his neck. Of course, this is modelled upon the French nobleman of pre-revolutionary days. But that deed and how it was signed, sealed and delivered is beyond my feeble comprehension. Is it a conundrum?

Sea Birds in Their Haunts—(Pathe).—An exceedingly beautiful film of high educational worth. It must have cost great labor, not to say risk, on the part of the photographer to get the negatives. No criticism would be just that did not recognize this to the full.

The Tables Are Turned—(Pathe).—Betty, again, but when the story unfolds, it's "no place for a minister's son."

NICKELODIA NEWS IN BRIEF

Keithsburg, Ill.—Geo. H. Frick has purchased the Gem moving picture theater here from D. B. McFarland and taken possession.

Princeton, Ill.—A. E. Long, of Galena, is planning to open a new moving picture theater here.

Corunna, Mich.—George Sampson has opened a new moving picture theater in the Millard building.

Sioux Falls, S. Dak.—John Bigger has purchased the Majestic theater here from Will H. Lyon.

Concordia, Kan.—Mr. Bert Auten has leased the Neitzel building, and will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Woonsocket, S. Dak.—G. W. Ryckman & Son have opened a new moving picture theater here.

Sheboygan, Mich.—Joe Amley, Ed Geyer and R. Lemieux have purchased the Vaudette moving picture theater here, and are now in possession.

Logansport, Ind.—Frank Schafer has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Gibsonburg, Ohio.—G. L. Donnels is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Brenham, Texas.—Mr. Henry Quenten has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Bryan, Texas.—Messrs. Fairman & Long, of Waco, are making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Herrington, Kan.—Dr. L. D. Blachly and Rose Denny are planning the erection of a new airdrome here.

Lima, Ohio.—H. B. Hoffman is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Watseka, Ill.—E. H. Morrell and son, Clarence, have bought the moving picture business from Will Class and are now the proprietors.

Dodgeville, Wis.—Joseph J. Schmitt, of Milwaukee, has purchased the Crystal theater here from D. M. Jones and taken possession.

New Albany, Ind.—Mr. Switow has opened a new moving picture theater on East Market street. It is known as the Victoria.

Brazil, Ind.—Hugh McGurty and Martin Murphy are making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Wabash, Minn.—W. R. Chamberlain is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Wenatchee, Wash.—W. T. Rarey has decided to open a new vaudeville and moving picture theater here.

Nashville, Tenn.—C. Bunch, colored, is planning to open a new moving picture theater here for colored people.

Sterling, Ill.—Del Robinson and M. Sehn, of Peoria, are considering the advisability of establishing a new theater here.

Hancock, Mich.—Thomas Coughlin is considering the erection of a new theater here.

Hot Springs, S. Dak.—M. Black is making arrangements for the erection of a new moving picture theater on River avenue.

Rhinelander, Wis.—Hanson & Taylor have disposed of their interests in the Opera House and Bijou theater to Mr. Kruckeberg.

Springfield, Ohio.—The Wonderland moving picture theater at 15 West Main street, owned by Patrick W. Kelly, was damaged by fire.

Wabash, Minn.—W. R. Chamberlain is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Sturgis, Mich.—C. J. Crosby is making arrangements to open a new vaudeville and moving picture theater here.

Manufacturers' Synopsis of Films

THE PITTSBURG MILLIONAIRE
American—Release February 6

Born and reared in an environment of curling smoke from lofty stacks, the huzz, noise and rattle of enormous rolls and other attendant surroundings of a great steel industry, Philip Nash, through circumstances rather than true worth, advanced rapidly from the position of a common laborer to that of general manager of one of the wealthiest and most important of our manufacturing interests.

Associated with Nash in his days of obscurity and comparative poverty was James Seaton, a man some years his senior.

Seaton was descended from a family who, for years, had been identified with many innovations and improvements in the mechanical department and discoveries in the chemical treatment of steel.

Seaton's wife died early in life, leaving to his care and counsel an only daughter, Mary.

Nash, a handsome, manly fellow, who was thrown much in her company, through his friendship for the father, was not slow to show a preference for the beautiful girl. She reciprocated his attentions and in due course, with the glad consent of her indulgent father, they were married.

In the early stages of their married life, contentment and happiness reigned supreme. Mary's entire time was devoted to her handsome husband. She mended his clothing, prepared his meals and watched over the household duties. In short, she made his life an ideal one, as far as his limited income permitted, but after a few years an unfortunate circumstance changed the condition of affairs and caused untold misery in the Nash home.

Mary's father, whose life had been devoted to chemical research for improved conditions in the nature of a formula for tempering steel, succeeded in making an invaluable discovery.

Being of a modest, retiring nature, he lacked the necessary tact to bring it to the notice of the company. He, therefore, made his son-in-law familiar with it and generously added that he would turn over to Nash the formula and allow him to assume all credit for its discovery if he, Nash, would bring it to the notice of the directors.

This, in due course, was successfully accomplished, for the company not only adopted the formula, but advanced Nash to an important official position with a handsome salary and voted him a block of stock in the corporation.

With changed conditions, Nash plunged into extravagances and dissipations, which ultimately led to his downfall.

He moved from his humble cottage into a pretentious apartment hotel, became a member of an exclusive club, was frequently seen in the gilded cafes, became the boon companion of the golden youth of the White Light district.

Mary, his wife, a patient, suffering creature, now left with only the companionship of her modest, retiring old father, who condoned the husband's neglect by saying it was his first glimpse of the underworld and that he would soon tire of it.

Such was not the case, however, for Nash's extravagances and dissipations became more and more pronounced, and in his wild pursuit of pleasure, he began to neglect his business duties as well as his wife.

About this time he was introduced to a singer of note, a young woman famous in the light opera world, whose charms and fascinations led to his complete undoing.

The glamor and attendant excitement of stage life proved too much for him. His home life became more and more irksome, until at last, completely under the spell of this stage siren, he became a slave to her every whim and desire. He deluged her with gifts of magnificent and costly jewels, a pretentious residence and an expensive automobile.

The sleuths of the press, ever on the alert for social scandal, began to print stories reflecting upon Nash's mode of life, which soon came to the notice of the company's officials.

He was called before the board and given a hearing.

Admitting the truthfulness of the many statements made and brazenly defying the directors, his resignation was peremptorily demanded. This he gave without a tremor, and openly avowed his intention of divorcing his wife and marrying the actress. He visited his wife and in a cold-blooded manner presented his case and the poor self-sacrificing creature consented to a separation.

He made provision for her and her father from the wreck of his possessions and went his way.

His unhappy wife divorced him.

He proposed marriage to the actress.

Only a few months' reflection sufficed to prove to him that he had made a grave error.

Despised and hated by his former friends, a creature of laughter and ridicule to his newly-made acquaintances, Phil Nash drifted about in the maelstrom of social flotsam and jetsam until, driven almost insane by censure and criticism, he ventured his last remaining securities and stocks in Wall Street and lost.

Stripped of fortune, bereft of friends, the actress learned of his brutal treatment of his wife and in disgust drove him from her presence. Alone, friendless, without funds to satisfy his newly-acquired desires, Nash decided upon a release from his miserable existence by suicide.

He returned to his wife's home one night, entered through a window and in a cold, deliberate manner was about to fire a shot into his dull, disordered brain when his hand was stayed by his loyal wife who, by chance, entered the room. He turned with a startled expression, dropped to his knees in an attitude of humble contrition.

He had learned his lesson.

KELLY
Atlas—Release February 8

Now, Kelly was a soldier boy in the army of Uncle Sam. He thought he'd like the life until they gave him a tub and washboard and made him official cleanser of the soiled linen. Then his feeling for Uncle Sam diminished and he silently stole away, only to be chased by bloodhounds and finally captured as he clung to the limb of a friendly tree.

If Widow Morgan had only left her money in the bank, the hungry tramp would have failed to find her hiding place and the theft would never be committed; but she didn't, and the tramp bought all the booze he could carry and went to sleep.

Kelly made another get-away and this time eluded his followers. Then he grew hungry and while in search of food, stumbled upon the sleeper-thief. Kelly was shrewd enough to know his uniform must be discarded. He changed clothing with the tramp and went away.

The sheriff had a good description of the thief, and his deputies owned good horses. They caught Kelly and found some of the Widow Morgan's money in his clothes. Kelly cried and confessed to being a deserter rather than go to jail as a common thief, so they rounded up the real culprit and Kelly returned to the fort in time to hear the sunset gun.

He likes to be a soldier now.

THE CRIMINAL CHIEF'S CAPTURE
Great Northern—Release February 4

Bob Walsh, a former criminal who has reformed and atoned for his misdeeds, receives a note from some of his former pals telling him that he must rejoin their gang or else stand the consequences, and is requested to send his answer to a certain place at once. Having made a successful new start in life, and being determined to continue, he consults a detective. The latter advises him to tear up some paper and send it in an envelope as an answer to the appointed spot in order that he may follow them up. The detective follows his client's messenger and afterwards trails the recipient of the envelope, noticing where he goes. The chief and his gang discover the trick which has been played on them, whereupon they go to their victim's house, gag him and take him away. The detective goes to the gang's haunt, and allows himself to be captured, and is put in a cell with his client. When one of the bandits brings them food, the prisoners bind his hands and take the key from him. The detective's little helper gets away with the client, but the detective himself is recaptured and placed in a room with a bomb operated by a clock. The boy helper climbs to the roof and goes down a chimney to his master's rescue. The detective's bonds are cut, and the bomb thrown out of the window just in time before the explosion. The detective has been able to secure proof that the leader of the gang is a noted character. He is wanted by the police, and in a final scene he is denounced and arrested.

THE MIRROR
Imp—Release February 9

Dorothy is beloved by Dick and Paul, who are both persistent in their attentions. Dorothy is apparently unable to decide between them and is quite perplexed. She has been impartial in her favors but the young men press her for an answer.

She is walking alone when she passes the residence of a fortune-teller and is possessed of a happy thought. She will consult the seeress as a way out of her dilemma. She goes in and crosses the palm of the delver into the past and future and is enlightened.

Dick sees her enter the house and, surmising her mission, gains admission to an adjoining room by bribing the woman in waiting. He hears the instructions of the fortune teller, who informs the girl that if she will rise at midnight, descend the stairs in her sleeping robe, walk a certain number of steps, turn the required number of times, and hold a candle to the mirror, she will see the face of the man she is destined to marry.

Dick is made acquainted with this by listening at the keyhole and is elated. At midnight he gains entrance to the home of Dorothy by adopting heroic measures, climbing the porch like an ordinary burglar. Paul discovers his actions and, under the impression that Dick is about to circumvent him in some way, summons a policeman and they enter the house.

In the meantime, Dick, clad in his stocking feet, has taken a position near the mirror to await the coming of Dorothy, who soon puts in an appearance. She follows the instructions of the seeress to the letter, with Dick, jubilant, imitating her movements. She gazes in the mirror, and the fortune teller builded better than she knew, for the face of Dick is photographed on the mirror. Dorothy turns and is too quick for Dick, and his little ruse is discovered. The humor of the situation dawns on the girl and, of course, Dick is forgiven for his deception, just as Paul and the policeman break into the scene. By bribing the officer Dick turns the attention of that worthy on Paul and the copper marches off with the lover who lost, and there is a pretty scene in which Dorothy and Dick are the principals, Dorothy pleased at her choice and Dick radiantly happy at the result of his little strategy.

"WHEN THE CAT'S AWAY"
"Imp" Release, February 9th

Mr. and Mrs. Parker leave their apartments to the care of their servants, Riley and his wife, while Mrs. Parker pays an extended visit to her mother, and Mr. Parker makes a business trip.

Riley assists at the going away, and the furniture is covered with care, he being admonished to take excellent care of the apartments, which he proceeds to do.

Riley finds the need of some ready money, and he resolves to turn a penny his way by letting the apartments in the absence of his master and mistress. He tacks up a neat sign and awaits developments.

Mr. and Mrs. Strong, strangers in the city, happen to pass, see the sign and make application to Riley for the use of the apartments. Riley is open to a deal, and he is paid a month's rent in advance. Mrs. Riley is overjoyed at the arrangement.

In the meantime, Mrs. Parker's stay is cut short by receiving a telegram from her husband, calling her home. Her arrival is most inopportune. Mr. Strong is seated in Parker's favorite chair and she is overjoyed to see her supposed husband. Approaching Mr. Strong, she places her hands over his eyes, and he, thinking it is Mrs. Strong, clasps her to his bosom. To make matters complicated Mr. Parker and Mrs. Strong happen in at this instant. The men glare at each other, and the women immediately engage in a hair-pulling match. Happily the situation is soon straightened out.

The Strongs explain their presence, but the Parkers soon convince them that they have a prior claim on the premises by reason of ownership. Riley is summoned, and finds himself in a predicament out of which he emerges somewhat downcast, for he is compelled to return to Strong his rent money, and is fired by Mr. Parker.

"AT THE DUKE'S COMMAND"
"Imp" Release, February 6th

The locale of this story is in England, during the sixteenth century, a period when a Duke was absolute dictator over the persons of his subjects.

The scene opens at the termination of a dance, where the Duke of Chatmoss is supported by his nephew and his daughter to the throne, the daughter occupying the place of honor by his side.

One of the court maids approaches and the Duke's nephew, Edward, falls in love with her instantly, and his love is reciprocated. The aged Duke notes the beautiful maiden, and is also smitten by her charms. In his infatuation he sends his hunchbacked serf to her apartment, commanding her immediate appearance before him. The cunning hunchback discovers that his master bas been forestalled by the nephew, who is the accepted lover of Irma, the maid. His master, the Duke, is apprised of this fact, and when the girl appears before the Duke, the old gallant immediately overwhelms her with his attentions, but she, in her righteous indignation, repulses him.

The Duke is wrathy, and in his rage vows to win the frightened girl. She runs immediately to Edward, and tells him of the occurrence. Edward is indignant, and strides into the presence of his uncle, the Duke, demanding an explanation. There is a war of words, the nephew and the Duke growing excited, the hunchback fearing harm to himself stands aside with a drawn sword. The Duke coolly tells Edward he must renounce all hope of winning the maid. Angered to desperation, Edward draws his sword to attack the Duke, but is prevented by the hunchback. The Duke summons the guard and commands them to disarm his nephew and take him to the dungeon and torture him. To add to the cruelty of his purpose, the Duke has Irma seized and taken to the cell where Edward is confined and there a mock trial is held and the nephew ordered to the torture chamber. During the time of the torture the hunchback is pacing quickly to and fro between the dungeon, reception room and the girl's chamber.

The Duke informs Irma that the price of the lover's life is herself. She refuses, and the trapdoor is opened, showing to the agonized girl her lover on the rack, being seared and tortured. She consents to sacrifice herself and the torture ceases. The Duke is satisfied at the result of his diabolical method of winning the girl.

The hunchback is commanded to bring the girl to the bed-chamber of the Duke. Irma, left alone, in a fit of desperation sears her face with a red hot poker, horribly disfiguring her beautiful face. She accompanies the hunchback into the presence of the amorous old Duke, wearing a veil. The Duke, lifting the veil, is horrified at the face of the woman who was once so beautiful. He renounces all pursuit of her and commands his nephew to appear in the audience chamber, where Irma is still veiled. The Duke announces to Edward that he must marry her, being possessed of the idea that the girl will be cast aside by Edward when he gazes on her once beautiful face. Edward is all too willing, and raising the veil is shocked at the result of her sacrifice, but draws her towards him in a fond embrace and leads her away, loving her in spite of her blemished face.

The story is a strong one, elaborately staged, and well interpreted.

THE WESTERNER AND THE GIRL
Thanhouser—Release Tuesday, February 7

Mrs. Montague is an American society woman who had a great regard for titles. So when an English Earl promised to pay a visit to her bungalow in the Western mountain region, she was delighted. In her mind's-eye she could see herself the mother-in-law of an Earl—for the Earl was poor and the Montagues were rich, while the woman's daughter was decidedly charming.

Probably there would have been another international marriage, had it not been for the girl in the case. She had an American sweetheart and frowned upon the foreign nobleman, much to her mother's sorrow. So Mrs. Montague, driven to desperation, finally evolved a plot which she believed would win the Earl the success he sought.

A Wild West show was giving performances near her summer home, and the Earl, advised by Mrs. Montague, sought out the proprietor and hired his band of performing Indians. They were to capture the Earl and the heiress. Then the Earl was to be allowed to escape and free the woman whose hand he sought.

But the young American suitor heard of the plot and decided to pay back the Earl in his own coin. The show also had cowboys, and Jack engaged them and the proprietor, Rattlesnake Bill, to capture the Indians after they had captured the Earl. The counterplot worked successfully, and so, instead of being regarded as a hero, the poor Earl acquired quite a different reputation. He was figuratively and literally a "belted Earl" before he finished, and Mrs. Montague found that the real hero was the man her daughter loved, and she was willing to have him marry her. Rattlesnake Bill, who courteously helped both sides, as he agreed, was well satisfied. In fact, the only unhappy person was the Earl.

THE NORWOOD NECKLACE
Thanhouser—Release February 10

The disappearance of the famous Norwood necklace gave Violet Gray, the girl detective, a chance to gain new laurels, and also to have a laugh at her superior officer.

The jewels disappeared in another city and the police obtained a clue to their whereahouts just too late to make an arrest. But they wired the authorities at Violet's city to detain and search a well-dressed woman who was a passenger on a certain train.

En route, however, the suspect received warning by telegraph, and when the woman is taken in charge there are no signs of the gems. Under the circumstances there is nothing for the captain to do except apologize profusely, which he does in good style, as the prisoner is well dressed and of refined appearance.

The only person who did not believe an error had been commited was Violet Gray. So certain was she that her suspicions would be confirmed that she made a bet with the captain on the subject. And she won.

Her first clue was a little girl. Her second, a doll. The final links were a hand and a head of hair!

Each one of these incidents was a trifle, but they united to form the chain that dragged a pretty woman to prison. The captain admitted he had been mistaken and paid over his wager. Violet was too diplomatic to tease him about it, hut she spent the money for a new ring so that her commander would be constantly reminded of his error of judgment, and yet unable to complain of being "nagged" about it.

A SON OF OLD GLORY.
Yankee Release—Jan. 27.

Margaret Luther Abercrombie, missionary to Egypt for the American Tract Society, is accompanied by her nephew, a handsome young man of twenty-five. Among her converts, Miss Abercrombie shows more than common liking for a young orphan girl, beautiful of face and figure, whose mercenary guardian is negotiating with a soulless Jewish slave-trader for the sale of the girl.

Clifton meets the girl when he calls to escort his aunt to their lodgings, and is struck with her wondrous beauty, made doubly so by her expression of fear for the future which seems so black. An old duenna, Leota's faithful friend and companion, has overheard the guardian and the slave-trader bargaining for the girl, and has warne dher to be on guard at all times. Leota, overcome with anxiety, determines, as a precaution, to dispatch a note to the American, giving him the name of the slave-trader, and asking him to search for her should she suddenly disappear. Ayhesa delivers the note, returning just in time to see Leota hurried away by the Jew and his men.

When Clifton is informed of the girl's plight he goes at once to the Jew's slave market, and there finds a sale in progress, Leota being among those soon to be placed on the auction block. Soon the auctioneer comes to "the fairest in all Egypt," and Clifton determines the best and easiest manner of saving Leota is to bid the highest and buy her himself. A wealthy Nabob in the crowd evinces great interest in the girl, and Clifton finds a worthy rival in the bidding.

But his American blood was up, and he forced the Nabob to retreat under fire of his reckless advances, and Leota was turned over to Clifton as his own property.

The Nabob decided to show the young Yankee upstart an Oriental trick he did not know. Quietly his plans were laid, and as quietly carried out. While out walking with Miss Abercrombie, in whose charge she was placed, Leota was suddenly seized by strong men and hurried away. The frantic missionary communicated with her nepbew and told him what had happened. Clifton felt he knew who was responsible for the girl's adbuction, and straightway went to the Nabob's palace and demanded her release. He was thrown into a dungeon for his pains, the Nabob personally escorting him there. Leota sinks to the floor, drawing the cross, given her by the missionary, from her bosom, and prays to the Christian God. An old retainer in the palace, noticing the cross, slips to her side and whispers that he, too, is secretly of the same faith, and that he will help her. Keys are stolen from the eunuch in charge of the dungeon and Clifton is released. While Miss Abercrombie spirits Leota away, the young American literally fights his way out of the palace, through the streets and down to the harbor, where the women have preceded him, and there he finally secures protection on hoard an American steamship bound for the United States.

Leota became a dutiful and lovable wife, and she loves her "Aunt Margie" next to her handsome husband, both of whom sacrificed ambition and their chosen calling that she might be saved from a life of misery and shame.

WAS SHE JUSTIFIED?
Yankee—Release February 10

A waif of the poorer class is secretly adopted by a well-to-do woman who longs for a baby. Her husband, a physician, returns from a sojourn abroad and is told the child is his own, which information he receives joyfully.

At the age of seventeen, the girl has grown to lovable girlhood and is much admirer by those whom she believes to be her rightful parents.

Her real father, a depraved and dissolute sot, suddenly appears in the doctor's absence and demands the return of his child. In an effort to rid herself of the wretch, Mrs. Van Sant offers him money, increasing the amounts again and again, but he is obstinate and clearly indicates he wants the girl to support him, if not with honest toil, then by her beauty and innocence, which he would market to the highest bidder.

The distracted woman, thinking only of saving Millicent from a fate worse than death, and fearing her husband might learn of the deception she has practiced so many years, mixes a drug with brandy and gives it to the brutal father, apparently consenting to his demands ,even to guiding him where the young girl is sleeping peacefully in her bedchamber, then advising him to return the following day.

On his way out the man reels and falls before reaching the door, and Mrs. Van Sant, fearful that her crime will be detected if he dies in the house, summons a physician friend of her husband's, and they succeed in reviving him just as Doctor Van Sant returns. The drug is recognized and the poor woman finally decides to confess everything and rely on her husband's good heart for forgiveness.

She is cast off, much to her surprise, instead of receiving a verdict of approbation. Finally, the distracted woman again visits her sleeping charge and, breathing an anguished farewell, silently glides away to the cabinet where the doctor keeps his most deadly drugs.

This film will awaken comment and create discussion. It will have its friends and assailants in every audience. It is bound to be talked about and that is worth while, if it serves no other purpose. The exhibitor will profit.

FOILING THE CAMORRA
Yankee—Release February 6

It remained for the fearless "Italian Sherlock Holmes" to run down the boldest and most merciless band of kidnappers ever recorded in the annals of the Black Hanad. Headed by a Sicilian Camorrist who had escaped from Italy and later became a small banker in New York, this gang of terrorists had been levying blackmail on the small Italian merchant who showed signs of prosperity until the police were thrown into confusion by the succession of bomb outrages and kidnapping which followed when a victim failed to respond.

Finally a young Italian police lieutenant, Victor Petrosio, begged for a chance to break up the gang. He was given the opportunity and the story of his wonderful experiences and the dangers he encountered we have told in pictures.

Not only do we show the "Italian Sherlock Holmes" fighting against terrible odds at the risk of his life, but the scenes incident to the rescue of the kidnapped children, the capture of the wily Black Hand leader, and the return of the children to their grief-stricken parents, but we illustrate that notable occasion when the brave Petrosio was honored for his daring by the entire Police Department in the presence of his brother officers and representatives of the press.

Just at this time a picture of this kind will be eagerly welcomed.

NICKELODIA NEWS IN BRIEF

Los Angeles, Cal.—B. H. Vanderburgh is taking bids for the erection of a new moving picture theater in Moneta avenue and Forty-seventh place.

Centralia, Wash.—Mr. J. D. Rice has decided to remodel his building here into a vaudeville and moving picture theater.

Canon City, Colo.—Robert W. Foss and L. G. Ludwig have purchased the moving picture theater here from Messrs. Hoyle & Schultz and taken possession.

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE INDEPENDENT MANUFACTURERS AND THE N. I. M. P. A.

Circulates over the Motion Picture World with a guaranteed larger circulation than any other trade paper.

Correspondents wanted in all large centers

Accepted Articles paid for monthly—(No waiting for cash.)

Contributed Articles and correspondence of general interest invited.

Advertisers may use a number, replies to which will be sent to them, unopened.

Agents and Solicitors wanted. Write for special commission terms.

Week of May 21st, 1910, News circulation reached 10,120 copies.

News Agents supplied through the American News Agency.

CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY

30 WEST THIRTEENTH STREET : : : : NEW YORK

ADVICE TO OPERATORS

Oracle Department

By WM. E. SMITH, E. E.

PRACTICAL ARTICLES FOR ALL

This department has been started with the idea to encourage the operators to obtain the best results with their Projecting Machines Queries and questions pertaining to the Moving Picture arts addressed to the Editor of this department will be published in this department. Only answers to inquiries of general interest will be published here for the benefit of all readers. On account of the large amount of inquiries received it may not be possible to print all the answers in any one issue, as each has to take its turn. Correspondents should bear this in mind when writing. If a quick reply is wanted by mail, a charge of 15 cents is made for each question. Special information requiring a large amount of calculation and labor cannot be furnished without remuneration. The ORACLE has no fixed rate for such work, but will inform the correspondent promptly as to the charges involved. When writing only one side of question sheet must be used; diagrams and drawings must invariably be on a separate sheet. Name and address must always be given in all letters. No attention paid to letters not observing above rules.

31 A. Theater Wiring.

(For rules governing Moving Picture Machine, see No. 65 A.)

All wiring, apparatus, etc., not specifically covered by special rules herein given must conform to the standard Rules and Requirements of the National Electrical Code, and the term "theater" shall mean a building or part of a building in which it is designed to make a presentation of dramatic, operatic or other performances or shows for the entertainment of spectators which is capable of seating at least four hundred persons, and which has a stage for such performances that can be used for scenery and other stage appliances.

a. Services.

1. Where source of supply is outside of building, there must be at least two separate and distinct services where practicable, fed from separate street mains, one service to be of sufficient capacity to supply current for the entire equipment of theater, while the other service must be at least of sufficient capacity to supply current for all emergency lights. By "emergency lights" are meant exit lights and all lights in lobbies, stairways, corridors and other portions of theater to which the public have access which are normally kept lighted during the performance.

2. Where source of supply is an isolated plant within same building, an auxiliary service of at least sufficient capacity to supply all emergency lights must be installed from some outside source, or a suitable storage battery within the premises may be considered the equivalent of such service.

This is a matter solely concerning the protection of the person and should therefore be left to the discretion of the assured, so far as the fire risk is concerned.

b. Stage.

1. All permanent construction on stage side of proscenium wall must be approved conduit or armored cable, with the exception of border and switchboard wiring.

2. Switchboards.—Must be made of non-combustible, non-absorptive material, and where accessible from stage level must be protected by an approved guard-rail to prevent accidental contact with live parts on the board.

3. Footlights:—

a. Must be wired in approved conduit or armored cable, each lamp receptable being enclosed within an approved outlet box, the whole to be enclosed in a steel trough, metal to be of a thickness not less than No. 20 gage, or each lamp receptacle may be mounted on or in an iron or steel box so constructed as to enclose all the wires and live parts of receptacles.

b. Must be so wired that no set of lamps requiring more than 1,320 watts will be dependent on one cut-out.

4. Borders:—

a. Must be constructed of steel of a thickness not less than No. 20 gage, treated to prevent oxidation, be suitably stayed and supported by a metal framework, and so designed that flanges of reflectors will protect lamps.

b. Must be so wired that no set of lamps requiring more than 1,320 watts will be dependent upon one cut-out.

c. Must be wired in approved conduit or armored cable, each lamp receptacle to be enclosed within an approved outlet box, the whole to be enclosed in a steel trough, or each lamp receptacle may be mounted on or in the cover of a steel box so constructed as to enclose all the wires and the live parts of receptacles, metal to be of a thickness not less than No. 20 gage.

d. Must be provided with suitable guards to prevent scenery or other combustible material coming in contact with lamps.

e. Cables must be made up of approved, stranded rubber-covered wires; conduit construction must be used from switchboard to point where cables must be flexible to permit of the raising and lowering of border, and flexible portion must be enclosed in an approved fireproof hose or braid and be suitably supported.

An approved junction box must be installed at the end of the conduit where the flexible cable leaves for the border.

f. For the wiring of the border proper, wire with approved slow burning insulation should be used.

g. Must be suspended with wire rope, same to be insulated from border by at least two approved strain insulators properly inserted.

5. Stage Pockets.—Must be of approved type controlled from switchboard, each receptacle to be of not less than fifty amperes rating, and each receptacle to be wired with a separate circuit to its full capacity.

6. PrPoscenium Side Lights.—Must be so installed that they cannot interfere with the operation of or come in contact with curtain.

7. Scene Docks.—Where lamps are installed in Scene Docks, they must be so located and installed that they will not be liable to mechanical injury.

8. Curtain Motors.—Must be of ironclad type and installed so as to comform to the requirements of the National Electrical Code.

9. Control for Stage Flues:—

a. In cases where dampers are released by an electric device, the electric circuit operating same must be normally closed.

b. Magnet operating damper must be wound to take full voltage of circuit by which it is supplied, using no resistance device, and must not heat more than normal for apparatus of similar construction. It must be located in loft above scenery, and be installed in a suitable iron box with a tight self-closing door.

c. Such dampers must be controlled by at least two standard single pole switches mounted within approved iron boxes provided with self-closing doors without lock or latch, and located, one at the Electrician's station, and others as designated by the Inspection Department having jurisdiction.

c. Dressing Rooms.

1. Must be wired in approved conduit or armored cable.

2. All pendent lights must be equipped with approved reinforced cord, armored cable or steel armored flexible cord.

3. All lamps must be provided with approved guards.

d. Portable Equipments.

1. Arc lamps used for stage effects must conform to the following requirements:—

a. Must be constructed entirely of metal except where the use of approved insulating material is necessary.

b. Must be substantially constructed, and so designed as to provide for proper ventilation, and to prevent sparks being emitted from lamps when same is in operation, and mica must be used for frame insulation.

c. Front opening must be provided with a self-closing hinged door frame in which wire gauze or glass must be inserted, excepting lens lamps, where the front may be stationary, and a solid door be provided on back or side.

d. Must be provided with a one-sixteenth-inch iron or steel guard having mesh not larger than one inch, and be substantially placed over top and upper half of sides and back of lamp frame; this guard to be substantially riveted to frame of lamp, and to be placed at a distance of at least two inches from the lamp frame.

e. Switch on standard must be so constructed that accidental contact with any live portion of same will be impossible.

f. All stranded connections in lamp and at switch and rheostat must be provided with approved lugs.

g. Rheostat, if mounted on standard, must be raised to a height of at least three inches above floor line, and in addition to being properly enclosed must be surrounded with a substantially attached metal guard having a mesh not larger than one square inch, which guard is to be kept at least one inch from outside frame of rheostat.

h. A competent operator must be in charge of each arc lamp, except that one operator may have charge of two lamps when they are not more than ten feet apart, and are so located that he can properly watch and care for both lamps.

2. Bunches:—

a. Must be substantially constructed of metal, and must not contain any exposed wiring.

b. The cable feeding same must be bushed in an approved manner where passing through the metal, and must be properly secured to prevent any mechanical strain from coming on the connection.

3. Strips:—

a. Must be constructed of steel of a thickness not less than No. 20 gage, treated to prevent oxidization, and suitably stayed and supported by metal framework.

b. Cable feeding must be bushed in an approved manner where passing through the metal, and must be properly secured to prevent any mechanical strain from coming on the connections.

4. Portable Plugging Boxes.—Must be constructed so that no current carrying part will be exposed, and each receptacle must be protected by approved fuses mounted on slate or marble bases and enclosed in a fire-proof cabinet equipped with self-closing doors. Each receptacle must be constructed to carry thirty amperes without undue heating, and the bus-bars must have a carrying capacity equivalent to the current required for the total number of receptacles, allowing thirty amperes to each receptacle, and approved lugs must be provided for the connection of the master cable.

5. Pin Plug Conductors:—

a. When of approved type may be used to connect approved portable lights and appliances.

b. Must be so installed that the "female" part of plug will be on the live end of cable, and must be so constructed that tension on the cable will not cause any serious mechanical strain on the connections.

6. Lights on Scenery.—Where brackets are used they must be wired entirely on the inside, fixture stem must come through to the back of the scenery and end of stem be properly bushed.

7. String or Festooned Lights.—Wiring for same should be approved cable, joints where taps are taken from same for lights to be properly made, soldered and taped, and where lamps are used in lanterns or similar devices lamps must be provided with approved guards. Where taps are taken from cable, they should be so staggered that joints of different polarity will not come immediately opposite each other and must be properly protected from strain.

8. Special Electrical Effects.—Where devices are used for producing special effects such as lightning, waterfalls, etc., the apparatus must be so constructed and located that flames, sparks, etc., resulting from the operation cannot come in contact with combustible material.

e. Auditorium.

1. All wiring must be installed in approved conduit or armored cable.

2. All fuses used in connection with lights illuminating all parts of the house used by the audience must be installed in fire-proof enclosures so constructed that there will be a space of at least six inches between the fuses and the sides and face of enclosure.

3. Exit lights must not have more than one set of fuses between same and service fuses.

4. Exit lights and all lights in halls, corridors or any other part of the building used by the audience, except the general auditorium, must be fed independently of the stage lighting, and must be controlled only from the lobby or other convenient place in front of the house.

5. Every portion of the theater devoted to the use or accommodation of the public, also all outlets leading to the streets and including all open courts, corridors, stairways, exits and emergency exit stairways, should be well and properly lighted during every performance, and the same should remain lighted until the entire audience has left the premises.

(See No. 17.)

22. Switches.

a. Must be placed on all service wires, either overhead or underground, in the nearest readily accessible place, to the point where the wires enter the building, and arranged to cut off the entire current.

Service cut-out and switch must be arranged to cut off current from all devices including meters.

b. Must always be placed in dry, accessible places, and be grouped as far as possible. (See No. 17 c.) Single-throw knife switches must be so placed that gravity will not tend to close them. Double-throw knife switches may be mounted so that the throw will be either vertical or horizontal as preferred.

When practicable switches must be so wired that blades will be "dead" when switch is open.

When switches are used in rooms where combustible flyings would be likely to accumulate around them, they must be enclosed in dust-tight cabinets.

Up to 250 volts and 30 amperes, approved indicating snap switches are suggested in preference to knife switches on lighting circuits.

c. Single pole switches must never be used as service switches nor placed in the neutral wire of a three-wire system, except in the two-wire branch or tap circuit supplying not more than 660 watts.

Three-ways switches are considered as single pole switches and must be wired so that only one pole of the circuit is carried to either switch.

d. Where flush switches or receptacles are used, whether with conduit systems or not, they must be enclosed in an approved box constructed of iron or steel, in addition to the porcelain enclosure of the switch or receptacle. No push buttons for bells, gas-lighting circuits, or the like shall be placed in the same wall plate with switches controlling electric light or power wiring.

e. Where possible, at all switch or fixture outlets, unless outlet boxes which will give proper support for fixtures are used, a 7-8 inch block must be fastened between studs or floor timbers flush with the back of lathing to hold tubing, and to support switches or fixtures. When this cannot be done, wooden base blocks, not less than 3-4 inch in thickness, securely screwed to lathing, must be provided for switches, and also for fixtures which are not attached to gas pipes or conduit.

f. Sub-bases of non-combustible, non-absorptive, insulating material, which wil separate the wires at least 1-2 inch from the surface wired over, must be installed under all snap switches used in exposed knob and cleat work. Sub-bases must also be used in moulding work, but they may be made of hardwood or they may be omitted if the switch is approved for mounting directly on the moulding.

65 A. Moving Picture Machines.

a. Arc lamp used as a part of moving picture machines must be constructed similar to arc lamps of theaters, and wiring of same must not be of less capacity than No. 6 B. & S. gage. (See No. 31Ad. [1]

b. Rheostats must conform to rheostat requirements for theater arcs. (See No. 31Ad. [1])

c. Top reel must be encased in a steel box with hole at the bottom only large enough for film to pass through, and cover so arranged that this hole can be instantly closed. No solder to be used in the construction of this box.

d. A steel box must be used, for receiving the film after being shown, with a hole in the top only large enough for the film to pass through freely, with a cover so arranged that this hole can be instantly closed. An opening may be placed at the side of the box to take the film out, with a door hung at the top, so arranged that it cannot be entirely opened, and provided with spring catch to lock it closed. No solder to be used in the construction of this box.

e. The handle or crank used in operating the machine must be secured to the spindle or shaft, so that there will be no liability of its coming off and allowing the film to stop in front of lamp.

f. A shutter must be placed in front of the condenser, arranged so as to be readily closed.

g. Extra films must be kept in metal box with tight fitting cover.

h. Machines must be operated by hand (motor driven will not be permitted).

i. Picture machine must be placed in an enclosure or house made of suitable fire-proof material, be thoroughly ventilated and large enough for operator to walk freely on either side of or back of machine. All openings into this booth must be arranged so as to be entirely closed by doors or shutters constructed of the same or equally good fire-resisting material as the booth itself. Doors or covers must be arranged so as to be held normally closed by spring hinges or equivalent devices.

Vaudeville Music

VARIETIES IN MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

BY FRA.

Illustrated Songs

FAMOUS PUBLISHERS OF POPULAR MUSIC

Twenty years as a successful publisher of popular music is the record of Mr. F. B. Haviland, of the F. B. Haviland Music Pub. Co., and their songs have been whistled, hummed, played and sung in every corner of the civilized realm. Mr. Haviland's first hit was "The Sidewalks of New York," and among these big hits might be mentioned "The Baggage Coach Ahead," "Banks of the Wabash," "Good Old Summer Time," "Bill Bailey," "Blue Bell," and the more recent ones, "Nightingale," "You'll Come Back," "Somebody Else," "That Fussy Rag," "Cupid's I. O. U.," "Motor King March," "You Taught Me How to Love you, Now Teach Me to Forget," which at the present time have every evidence of being huge successes.

F. B. HAVILAND

SONGS ON THE VAUDEVILLE STAGE

At the risk of repeating myself in some sort, I wish to give opinions formed in the larger theaters and also from visits to all kinds of houses in the Greater City and elsewhere. These opinions are not merely my own judgment, but shaped by talks with all sorts and conditions of men and women, who attend shows where vaudeville and songs are used in conjunction with the pictures.

One point I am convinced of, that while songs that are arrant nonsense, or those that are built upon dirty suggestions, may—and often do—make what are so-called "hits," such are, in the main, exploited by highly paid headliners, and we all know there's a certain class of the public that simply yell because some one else does, which some one else howls because it's a headliner that's singing, and who would sit as silent as a mummy if the singer were unknown to fame. I remember an office where there were many old maids of the primmest type who glared at a mere fellow employee who said "Confound it" when he stubbed his toe, yet when the boss came in and turned the air blue with strange blasphemies, purred and murmured as they smirked and bridled, "Oh! ain't he cute!"

But the current is against such songs, even when acted with the Moulin Rouge wriggles. The audience may perhaps yell when the gutter song is squawked, and yet before the evening is over burst into heart-applause at an old song or a straight, clean, melodious new one.

During the last few months I have carefully noted these things. There are certain music publishers whose work is absolutely reliable, it's as clean as a hound's tooth; others the moment they are mentioned, a man had better make for the door if his wife or children are with him. They are known as filth lovers and muckrakers.

Ever and anon some silly vaudeville performer will shoot in a vile song among decent ones. I have heard such after "The Rosary," but the claps are weak. The few that love tenderloin twaddle keep quiet, when the audience is mum.

I have talked with singers of wide experience and the majority confirm my opinion that the old song and the strong, honest, clean new ones are the winners in the long run. The senseless words tacked onto degraded music may—and do—last for a while, but they're as short lived as the noisome, disease-laden mosquito.

We have plenty of music publishers turning out splendid stuff and, from my talks, I assert there are plenty of theatergoers who wish to hear it—more, the number is not decreasing.

I hold no brief for long-faced, pessimistic Puritanic cant, but I do hold a brief for the policy of this paper, anything that's clean and decent, and nothing that's dirty, even if clad in diamonds and fine linen, and I'm glad, heartily glad, to find so many evidences of the growth of a like opinion in the great crowd of theatergoers.

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATER

USHERS

I think it is about high time to say something about some of our friends to whom we are indebted for more than we think—in every theater. The theater-going public have their chief attention fixed upon the stage; that's all right, but as an old and regular attendant, I find that the seat you sit in, and how you get there, has no little to do with what you think of the performance. This trip, I want to write of my old friend, the Fourteenth Street, and its ways. I wrote many long years ago that the character of the head of a house, an office, or a theater met you on the threshold; I am of the same opinion still. We all know Mr. Rosenquest's standing in theatrical circles; I cordially stand with the multitude in that, but I am going to pass my good friend, Captain Elwell, at the portals, and when I have got inside, to say, from close observation, Mr. Rosenquest in nothing shows his grasp of details better than in his choice of ushers. For months past I have longed to have the chance to "roast" the ushers—being a cynical, crushy critic of course needs must, that I "roast."

Now what is a poor critic to do when there's nothing to "roast?" I suppose he must just write—anyhow.

There is no more important part of a theater than its ushers. Yes, I mean it, they can make you so mad you want to assassinate somebody, or they can make you feel so good you begin to think you're of royal birth. We must never forget that if ever a man needed the patience of Job, the eloquence of Demosthenes, the diplomacy of Machiavelli and the general make-up of the angelic host, it's the man who has to deal with the seating of a "gentleman" who has bought a ten-cent ticket and cannot see why a seat has not been reserved for him. We, the public, are no joke when our heads "are swelled," and we are on our dignity.

Well, I wish to pay my tribute to the ushers of Fourteenth Street Theater, and to each, and all, to express my thanks; knowing that I am but voicing the opinions of the crowds who attend. Yes, I've stood in the line outside waiting—I didn't go in, but I talked to the folks and believe what I have written.

The young fellows who act as ushers here are good looking, well dressed, wear no uniforms, and are an educated, intelligent set; their courtesy is well known. I am credibly informed that amidst the fair patronesscs of the house their rating is in the A1 class. They are the class I wish there were more of. More, every man and woman who keeps the laws of the city and follows the rules of the house will find the ushers the essence of politeness, but a transgression brings swift action.

Mr. Rosenquest, thanks for thus reflecting yourself on the floor of your house. Boys on the floor, let me praise you for your loyalty to your head, and your uniform courtesy to the public—of which even a critic is one!

Ted and Corinne Breton. Patter and burlesque, at which there was a good deal of laughter.

George T. Davis. Songs and talking. He pours out a stream of jokes, old and new, which please. Moreover, he knows how to tell a story effectively, this is his strong point. There was pretty well continuous laughter and an encore.

Morrissey and Burton. Comedy and pianologue. Needs a complete overhauling.

Jennings, Jewell and Barlow. A comedy sketch, "The Dope, The Dutchman and The Girl." The Dope's pipe dream in song, "I don't care for Money" took, as he has a pleasing voice and a clear enunciation. The rest seemed thin.

May Morton & Co. Travesty war playlet, "The Regular." The life and soul of this is the lady officer, in her smart khaki; she looks well groomed. The drill with the comedy soldier brought laughs as well as his remarks. The mock bombardment with stuffed balls pleased the house. More can be made of this material. This is distinctly "the hit," and gets all sorts of applause and curtains.

Aldo and Hart. Sensational comedy bar experts, who, by their work, have succeeded in winning the audience.

Jim Driscoll's "We've Kept the Golden Rule" struck home. It's one of Remick's best of the class and DeWitt Wheeler's slides are exceptionally good. Jim did full justice to Snyder's tuneful "Dreams, Just Dreams," as the applause showed.

GREENPOINT

The headliner was William H. Thompson, presenting "For Love's Sweet Sake,' 'also Gordon and Marx, German comedians and L. L. Johnson, ventriloquist.

KEITH & PROCTOR'S UNION SQUARE THEATER

This theater is to be congratulated upon the way the musical end of things is managed—I am speaking of the mornings. A good, sympathetic pianist, one who is not merely a mechanician, but a musician, is a most valuable adjunct to moving pictures. It is a pleasure to me to hear testimony to the excellence of E. Benedict's work in every way. For example, while Biograph's fine film, "His Trust," was running the music was excellent. It accompanied the picture in all the varying scenes, from country life to battlefield, from joyous days to hours throbbing with pathos and suffering. Nor must the drummer be overlooked, for he is good.

In the chorus of Shapiro's beautiful song, "Don't Wake Up," the duet of the lady singer and the pianist was appreciated, as the encore showed. I heard more singing from the audience than I have heard for many months.

The slides illustrating the Rhine lecture are not worthy of the subject. Attention is again called to the sequence of the slides, when Schaufhausen or Drachenfels is spoken of the proper slide ought to be projected. In the Quebec lecture there was a mix-up about St. Ann de Beaupre. The Burne-Jones lecture, with slides showing his most famous pictures, is good, in every way.

Harvey and Harvey. A woman and a clown. Some singing and rough and tumble business.

Gretchen Hartman. This young lady has some effective costumes. She sang "Sweet Italian Waltz," and the "Schlitz" seemed to please. One of her songs I abominate in any shape, so do many others. For heaven's sake, why doesn't it "stop"? It's time such stuff did.

Bigney. Water stunts. The work done was done with that perfect ease and confidence which we all appreciate in any act. He ate a banana, drank milk and smoked under water. He also emptied a water bottle under water and lay at the bottom of the tank two minutes and thirty-five seconds. He deserved his applause. Audiences forget what it means to do this sort of thing four or five times a day.

Hermany's Animals. This turn is effectively staged. The lady performer, clad as a Dutch countryman, put her dogs and cats—not to mention a unique pig, whose original "music" was a feature—through numerous stunts. Roosters and ducks took part, adding to the fun.

Lottie Gardner. Singing. Four pretty costumes, that just fitted the young lady. She sang "Sleepy Head" effectively. She has a sweet voice, when she watches the pitch. Her vivacious rendering of "Cutey" brought laughter and applause.

John and Jessie Powers. Just as funny and entertaining as ever. He in his military outfit and natural size, she in her buxom comeliness and stunning costumes, are a right jolly pair. They got no end of applause, but declined encores.

Greenville, James & Co. "His Dream," a dramatic offering of exceptional merit; the strongest I have seen for a long time. In the first place, the stage setting bore evidence of great care and consideration. Everything harmonized. The sketch is a compound of "The Man of the Hour," "The Servant in the House," and "The Devil"; briefly, it is temptation as suffered by man to-day conquered by The Christ. The satanic suggestion was really well done, the mephistophelian make-up was mediaevalism plus the red rose. The "Man" carried his rôle satisfactorily, the two characters brought their lesson home. "The Servant" is a part of intense difficulty; it must be tender yet firm, gentle yet inflexible. The presentation of this character fraught with gracious love, clothed in majesty, is capable of becoming a mighty teaching force, right upon the stage. I thoroughly enjoyed the thoughtful rendering of the character, and desire to express appreciation of the actor's concept of The Master. The material throbs with latent power; it is capable of being made a sketch of tremendous influence. The whole thing is something new in such a place, and it was wonderful to see the deep attention it received. Glad was I, too, to note how the actors responded to the numerous curtain calls; they did not forget their rôles. More rehearsals, more study, more patient delving into the very roots of the ideas here presented, the eternal struggle between good and evil and the reality of it, and this company will win further laurels. The audience was delighted, the actors are to be congratulated. This is the "hit," in the best sense, of the offerings. A delightful, praiseworthy and virile production.

FIFTH AVENUE

The headline attraction is Valeska Suratt, assisted by Fletcher Norton in her bouffe varieties. Also Wright and Dietrich, Charley Olcott, Russell and Smith's minstrels, Maximo the wire performer, also the latest motion pictures.

THE UNIQUE

A good bill and a full house, and that's "going some."

Bertie Blossom. Singing comedienne.

Holland Operatic Duo. This pair give operatic selections and an American medley with applause.

Williams and Williams. Novelty ring. A flying trapeze and ring act that went well.

Sig. Guilmette. Wire. There is juggling and there is comedy and there is applause. The turn "gets over." I must not forget our friend Louis Stretc—so well known to everybody at this theater—he assists the Signor. So, altogether, the folks are pleased.

De Faye Sisters. Musical. This is the feature of the program. Mandolin and banjo playing that just suits the audiences, and gets "the big hand."

CONRAD C. KOSCHAT

Conrad C. Koschat is musical director at the Theater Unique on Fourteenth Street, and Keith & Proctor's Theater, Jersey City. He completed his studies and graduated in the Royal Conservatory of Music, Berlin. For over ten years he has been a highly successful musical director and pianist in leading vaudeville houses. He has been in charge at the Unique since 1909. He accompanies the pictures splendidly; the music ripples on in complete touch with the joy, sorrow or comedy thrown upon the screen. To see Conrad back in his place after his illness is a sincere pleasure to his many friends.

THE DEWEY

Say, Brother Carr, you know what suits your people. I've talked to a good many, and they think your way is just IT. My wail is, I cannot see half of your proceedings. Worse luck!

Marie Lawrence. Singing comedienne.

Carter and Vincent. Comedy sketch.

Bradley and Barnes. Singing and pianologue. Good.

Russell. The comedy magician. The sort that takes.

Empire State Four. Mirth and melody with featuring.

THE CITY, FOURTEENTH STREET

Jas. A. Kiernan. A comedy sketch, "The Royal Cook." Ripping, full of laughs; well acted.

The Musical Stoddards.

Farley and Prescott.

Stepping Trio. Well worth while seeing.

Anna Buckey's Dogs. "Good wine needs no bush." Good as ever.

MANHATTAN OPERA HOUSE

In addition to the moving pictures Kitty Gordon, the prima donna, introduced several new songs, gowned in great magnificence, also The Millership Sisters, the Camille Trio, and Hennessy & Son.

THE FULTON

Montgomery and Moore, who have just returned from Europe, besides their songs, dances, and sayings, offered some new English hits. May Hampton, one of Frohman's stars, appeared in a comedy sketch, "Just Peggy." The young folks had twenty good minutes of laughter, with "Lamb's Mannikins" beside which there was Tom Gillen, an old favorite at the house.

KEENEY'S THEATER

Things are going with a roar at this house this week, acts and pictures of unusual merit are presented in fine order, under the able management of Stage Manager Edward Berger. The vaudeville consists of the following acts: The Hennings, novelty entertainers, introducing the cleverest lady juggler in the world.

Lord and Mack, clever laugh makers.

The big musical comedy production, 10 Cantelleys, pretty girls and clever comedians.

Mark Wolley, Emperor of German comedy; the Cliff Bailey Trio, comedy acrobatic comiques, spills and thrills, hops and flops, jumps and bumps; and last, but not least, Electrician Hayes, with his fine projection of the pictures.

SONG SLIDES

SONGS RECEIVED

THEODORE MORSE MUSIC COMPANY

1367 Broadway, New York City

Good-Bye, Betty Brown. Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse. The song goes with a bang, and is a rattling good march. Both words and music A1.

Oh, You Rah! Rah! Rah! Boy. Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse. This ought to suit "The Rah! Rah! boys" to a T. The words swing along, and the music swings after them. Properly handled, it's a good song of its class.

When a College Boy Meets a College Girl. Jack Mahoney and Theodore Morse. Another campus song, with a good many accidentals to help out. There's not only fun, but philosophy, in this song.

You're Mine, All Mine. Richard Henry Buck and Theodore Morse. Neither the words nor music are very striking, perhaps the chorus is the better part. Billed as a flirting song.

J. H. AUFDERHEIDE, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

In Bamboo Land. Earle C. Jones and May Aufderheide. The music is decidedly of the original sort besides being very quaint. It is certainly a singable song. In the chorus the chords are of the sort that stick, strange to say, the words tell a story, which glides along rhythmically. The colored cover suggests the song in a pleasing way. Slides by Simpson.

My Girl of the Golden Days. Earle C. Jones and May Aufderheide. The very first chords make one inclined to play more and the rest is not a disappointment. The words are good in sentiment and suggestion, and completely fit in with the music; altogether the song to play and keep. The young lady on the cover is entirely in keeping with the song. Slides by Simpson.

My Sunday Girl. Earle C. Jones and N. S. Carter. The words are of the sort which people like and are altogether more vigorous than the music. The music does not appeal to me. The chorus is much more suggestive, and by its length will just suit many audiences. The dance is a jolly, rattling bit of breezy composition. The cover is taking, with a distinct sense of humor. Slides by Simpson.

In the Vicinity of My Affinity. Earle C. Jones and N. S. Carter. The words are a very definite expression of opinion, and also a bit of homely philosophy. The cover is striking, the drawing good. The music of the verse is nothing uncommon, but I would like to hear the chorus sung in a theater, as it is exactly of the sort that makes popular hits. It fits the words like a glove.

I have received catalogue No. 2 from this firm. It is one of the best things of this class that has come to my desk. The cover is really artistic. The idea of giving the first page of the music with the cover on the opposite page is excellent. The whole thing is got up in color, and is a fine specimen of the printer's craft. As a business getter it ought to be a winner.

VICTOR KREMER CO-OPERATIVE MUSIC HOUSE

67-73 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

When You're In Wrong with the Right Girl. Gus Kahn and Grace LeBoy. The music is pleasing, but it is very peculiar. The liberal use of accidentals is responsible for this. Sing it over and you'll do it again. The words are inclined to be epigrammatic, but the story they tell is all right.

Plain Little Country Girl. J. Brandon Walsh and Al. W. Brown. The motif of the beginning is odd, especially is this the case in the G sharp at the commencement of the line, "No city gal." Parts are catchy, not the ordinary stamp of song. The words are just what the title means all through. The suggestion about the fields of new mown has is a neat, descriptive picce of work.

LEVI CO. SLIDES

"Blarney Kate." Words by Harold Atteridge, music by Phil Schwartz, published by music house of Laemmle. A clever Irish song with a bewitching melody. Posed in Irish costume with beautiful scenery. A fine sets of slides.

"Under the Honeymoon in June Time." Words by Raymond A. Browne, music by William H. Penn, published by music house of Laemmle. Songs have been written about every conceivable kind of a moon, but here is a new one. An original set of lyrics set to a beautiful melody. Slides are exceptionally well done, good-looking models, fine photography and beautiful coloring.

JOS. W. STERN & CO.

102-104 W. 38th St., New York City

Follow the Car Tracks. Ballard Macdonald and Alfred Solman. The words run along smoothly and not without humor, but I don't care for the theme; the chorus ought to be singable. Illustrated slides go with this song.

INDEPENDENT FILMS

The following films have been released week of January 23d by the Empire Film Company, 150 East 14th St., New York:

Jan. 23—The Dream (Imp)..... 987
Jan. 23—When a Man's Single (American)..1000
Jan. 23—Convict's Last Chance (Yankee)... 990
Jan. 23—Painless Extraction (Eclair)..... 560
Jan. 23—Kill the Fly (Eclair)..... 428
Jan. 24—A Redman's Wrath (Bison)..... 955
Jan. 24—When Love Was Blind (Than)..... 960
Jan. 24—A Wife's Love (Powers)..... 524
Jan. 24—Little Dorothy (Powers)..... 441
Jan. 25—A Wife's Calvary (Ambrosio)..... 607
Jan. 25—Tweedledum Within a Cask (Amb). 337
Jan. 25—The Man in 23 (Nestor).....1000
Jan. 25—Why He Went West (Champion)...1000
Jan. 25—Irish Hearts (Atlas)..... 975
Jan. 25—For Remembrance (Reliance)..... 992
Jan. 26—Bertie's Bandit (American).....1000
Jan. 26—Phone 1707 Chester (Imp).....1000
Jan. 26—The Revenging Picture (Itala).....990
Jan. 27—His Best Friend (Solax).....1000
Jan. 27—Trials of Bud Brown (Bison).....995
Jan. 27—Prompt Payment (Thanhouser)..... 500
Jan. 27—Stealing a Ride (Thanhouser)..... 500
Jan. 27—A Son of Old Glory (Yankee).....1000
Jan. 27—Little Willie Goes Cycling (Lux).. 500
Jan. 27—An Infamous Son (Lux)..... 500
Jan. 28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done (Gt. Northern) 500
Jan. 28—Triumph of Intelligence (Gt. Nor.). 500
Jan. 28—My Son is Guilty (Itala).....1000
Jan. 28—The Masquerader (Powers).....1000
Jan. 28—Command from Galilee (Reliance)..1000

SALES COMPANY

Programme for the Week Beginning Jan. 30

Jan. 30—Maid or Man (Imp).....
Jan. 30—The Genius (American).....
Jan. 30—Taxicab Mystery (Yankee).....
Jan. 30—A Tough Tenderfoot (Bison).....
Jan. 30—The European Lunch (Eclair).....
Jan. 30—The Elusive Robber (Eclair).....
Jan. 31—Only in the Way (Thanhouser)....
Jan. 31—For My Pal (Powers).....
Feb. 1—A Brass Button (Reliance).....
Feb. 1—Return from Seaside Bathing (Amb.)
Feb. 1—Tweedledum Trics Winter Sports (Ambrosio) .....
Feb. 1—The Surgeon and the Girl (Atlas)..
Feb. 1—The Bridal Trail (Nestor).....
Feb. 1—Judged by Higher Power (Champ.).
Feb. 2—The Mix Up (Imp).....
Feb. 2—An Imaginary Elopement (Imp.)...
Feb. 2—The Mission in the Desert (Amer.).
Feb. 2—The Village Coachman (Itala).....
Feb. 3—Counting-House Mystery (Yankee).
Feb. 3—A Squaw's Bravery (Bison).....
Feb. 3—Adrift (Thanhouser) .....
Feb. 3—Back to the Old Homestead (Lux)..
Feb. 3—Ring of Love (Solax).....
Feb. 4—His First Case (Powers).....
Feb. 4—Command from Galilee (Reliance).
Feb. 4—The Feast of Foolshead (Itala)....
Feb. 4—The Criminal Chief Captured (Great Northern) .....

Are You Going? Sure!

THE MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES CO. EMPLOYEES'

BALL AND RECEPTION

TO BE GIVEN AT

ALHAMBRA HALL

126th St. and Seventh Ave.
NEW YORK CITY

Friday Evening, Feb. 3, '11

Tickets, per pair, $1.00

Everybody in the Moving Picture Business Will be Present

WANTED

Moving picture show in New York or Brooklyn from $1,000 to $1,500. Address Jeanval, care of M. P. N.

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

INDEPENDENT FILMS

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

		Feet
Dec.	14—Dido Forsaken by Aenea	1027
Dec.	21—Little Peter's Christmas Dinner
Dec.	28—Drama of the Engine Driver and Grandfather's Pipe
Jan.	4—The Wall Partition	500
Jan.	4—Trials of Tweedledum as a Policeman	500
Jan.	18—Blue Domino's Disguise and Tailor's Queer Ad
Jan.	25—A Wife Calvary and Tweedledum Cash
Feb.	1—Return from Seaside Bathing
Feb.	1—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports

AMERICAN.

Dec.	29—The Squaw and the Man (Dr.)
Jan.	2—Mrs. Gay Life's Visitors (Com.)
Jan.	5—The Tenderfoot's Round-up (Com.)
Jan.	9—An Arizona Romance	990
Jan.	12—Lucy's Lover	560
Jan.	12—The Borrowed Flat	420
Jan.	16—The Battered Bridegrooms	525
Jan.	16—A Dental Disaster	450
Jan.	19—The Bonanza King	990
Jan.	11—How Tweedledum Pays His Bills	500
Jan.	11—Clouds and Ice-Fields	500
Jan.	23—When a Man's Single	1000
Jan.	26—Bertie's Bandit	1000
Jan.	30—The Genius (Com.-Dr.)	965
Feb.	2—The Mission in the Desert (Dr.)	985

ATLAS FILM CO.

Nov.	9—The King of Beggars (Dr.)
Nov.	16—The Hand of Providence (Dr.)
Nov.	23—Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters (Dr.)
Nov.	30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.)
Dec.	7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.)
Dec.	14—Brothers (Dec.)
Dec.	21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.)
Dec.	28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)
Jan.	4—A Straw Ride (Dr.)
Jan.	11—A Letter to the Stork (Dr.)
Jan.	18—A City Wolf (Dr.)
Jan.	25—Irish Hearts
Feb.	1—The Surgeon and the Girl

CAPITOL FILM CO.

Sept.	10—The Messenger Boy's Sweetheart.
Sept.	17—Round Trip $5.98
Sept.	24—Bill Mason's Ride	700
Oct.	8—All's Fair in Love and War
Oct.	15—A Shot in the Night
Oct.	22—The Locket (Dr.)

CHAMPION.

Feb.	1—Judged by Higher Power
Feb.	8—At Double Trouble Ranch	950
Nov.	23—Let Us Give Thanks (Dr.)	950
Nov.	30—The Indian Land Grab (Dr.)	950
Dec.	7—Hearts of the West (Dr.)	950
Dec.	14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.)	950
Dec.	21—His Mother (Dr.)	950
Dec.	28—The Golden Gates (Dr.)	950
Jan.	4—Days of the Early West (Dr.)	950
Jan.	11—Bill's Widow (Dr.)	950
Jan.	18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.).
Jan.	18—Why He Went West (Dr.)	950

CINES.
Eclair.

Oct.	21—The Last of the Savelli Dr.)	800
Oct.	28—Tontolini in Love (Com.)	480
Oct.	28—The Pretty Dairy Maid (Dr.)	480
Nov.	4—A Wooden Sword (Dr.)	800

COLUMBIA

Oct.	29—In the Web (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.)
Nov.	19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	26—Stage Coach Tom (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	3—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.)
Dec.	31—Trapped (Dr.)
Jan.	7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.)

ECLAIR.

Dec.	5—The Price of a Sacrifice (Dr.)	833
Dec.	5—The Laundry Girl's Good-Night (C.).	82
Dec.	12—The Bowling Craze (Com.)	445
Dec.	12—Our Dear Uncle From America (Com.)	470
Dec.	19—The Child of Two Mothers (Dr.)	545
Dec.	19—The Museum of Sovereigns (Dr.)	400
Dec.	26—The Lock-Keeper (Dr.)	537
Dec.	26—The Fear of Fire (Com.)	390
Jan.	2—The Great Medal Competition (Com.)	485
Jan.	2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.)	480
Jan.	9—Mother's Portrait (Dr.)	930
Jan.	16—The Jealousy of Sosthenes Ramulot (Com.)	478
Jan.	16—My Wife's Hat (Com.)	482
Jan.	30—The European Lunch
Jan.	30—The Elusive Robber

GREAT NORTHERN.

		Feet
Feb.	4—The Criminal Chief Captured
Dec.	1—A Child's Judgment (Dr.)
Dec.	3—The Birthday Present (Dr.)
Dec.	3—The Ohami Troupe of Acrobats (Sc.)
Dec.	10—The Poacher (Dr.)
Dec.	17—A Christmas Letter (Dr.)
Dec.	17—Dickey's Courtship (Com.)
Dec.	24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.)
Dec.	31—The Scarecrow (Dr.)
Dec.	31—Bear Hunting (Sc.)
Jan.	7—The Red Light (Dr.)
Jan.	14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.)
Jan.	21—The Trunk Mystery
Jan.	28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done	506
Jan.	28—Triumph of Intelligence	391

IMP.
Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Nov.	17—Fortune's Wheel (Dr.)	990
Dec.	5—Aspirations of Gerald and Percy (Dr.)	995
Dec.	8—'Twixt Loyalty and Love (Dr.)	990
Dec.	12—Faithful Max (Dr.)	500
Dec.	12—A Clever Ruse	500
Dec.	15—The Poor Student (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	19—The Crippled Teddy Bear
Dec.	22—Little Nell's Tobacco (Dr.)
Dec.	26—The Unexpected Honeymoon (Dr.)	995
Dec.	29—Unreasonable Jealousy (Dr.)	990
Jan.	2—The Wise Druggist (Dr.)	995
Jan.	5—Reunited (Dr.)	995
Jan.	9—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.)	998
Jan.	12—The Empty Shell (Dr.)	995
Jan.	16—Melody	995
Jan.	19—His First Patient (Dr.)	500
Jan.	19—The Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship (Dr.)	500
Jan.	30—Maid or Man
Feb.	2—The Mix-up
Feb.	2—An Imaginary Elopement

ITALA.

Dec.	8—The Soldier of the Cross	890
Dec.	10—Foolshead Knows How to Take His Precautions	588
Dec.	10—The Good Samaritan	408
Dec.	15—The False Accusation	774
Dec.	17—The Mother's Shadow	456
Dec.	17—Thieves as Quick-Change Artists	594
Dec.	22—Who Was the Culprit? (Com.)
Dec.	24—Greediness Spoiled Foolshead's Christmas (Com.)
Dec.	29—The Rustic
Dec.	31—Norwegian Water Falls	500
Dec.	31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day	500
Jan.	5—Antonio Toscarino	900
Jan.	7—Foolshead as Inspector of Hygiene	900
Jan.	12—Joanna of Braganza	900
Jan.	14—The Recall	900
Jan.	19—A Sad Fascination
Jan.	21—Visit of a Friend
Jan.	26—The Revenging Picture
Jan.	28—My Son Is Guilty
Feb.	2—The Village Coachman
Feb.	4—The Feast of Foolshead

LUX.
By Prieur.

Dec.	2—Necessity Is the Mother of Invention (Dr.)	449
Dec.	9—What It Will Be (Com.)	491
Dec.	9—And She Came Back (Com.)	452
Dec.	16—How He Won Her (Com.)	344
Dec.	16—Her Favorite Tune (Dr.)	550
Dec.	23—Bill Plays Bowls (Com.)	423
Dec.	23—Rosalie's Dowry (Com.)	492
Dec.	30—Aunt Julia's Portrait (Com.)	547
Dec.	30—Tim Writes a Poem (Com.)	375
Jan.	6—How They Tricked Father (Com.)	498
Jan.	6—The Rival Engine Drivers (Dr.)	367
Jan.	13—Bill as a Jockey (Com.)	465
Jan.	13—That Is My Name (Com.)	438
Jan.	22—A Dilemna
Jan.	22—Faithful Furniture
Jan.	27—Willie Goes Cycling
Jan.	27—Infamous Son
Feb.	3—Back to the Old Homestead

NESTOR FILM CO.

Oct.	19—The Boys of Topsy-Turvy	960
Oct.	26—Rev. John Wright of Missouri	970
Nov.	2—The Girl from the West (Dr.)
Nov.	9—The Woodsman (Dr.)	960
Nov.	16—The Ranchman's Bride (Dr.)
Nov.	23—A Deal in Indians	1000
Nov.	30—Valley Folks
Dec.	7—The Conquering Hero
Dec.	14—The Pilgrim (Dr.)
Dec.	21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.)
Dec.	28—Elda of the Mountains (Dr.)
Jan.	4—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.)
Jan.	11—Sleepy Hollow (Dr.)	950
Jan.	18—Their New Minister (Dr.)
Jan.	25—The Man in 23
Jan.	25—New Minister
Feb.	1—The Bridal Trail
Feb.	8—The Transgressor

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
("Bison")

		Feet
Nov.	25—A Cheyenne's Love for a Sioux	980
Dec.	9—A Brave Western Girl	965
Dec.	13—An Indian's Test	950
Dec.	16—A Girl of the Plains	approx. 975
Dec.	20—The Cattle Baron's Daughter
Dec.	23—The Pale Faced Princess
Dec.	27—An Indian's Elopement
Dec.	30—Taming Terror
Jan.	3—In the Heart of the Sierras	900
Jan.	6—A Savage Girl's Devotion	900
Jan.	10—An Indian Trapper's Prize	900
Jan.	13—The Creek Claim	900
Jan.	17—Texas Ted's Defense	900
Jan.	20—The Redskin's Secret	950
Jan.	24—Red Man's Wrath	900
Jan.	27—Trials of Bud Brown	900
Jan.	30—A Tough Tenderfoot
Feb.	3—A Squaw's Bravery

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Dec.	13—The Tramp Bicyclist (Com.)
Dec.	17—His Gypsy Sweetheart (Dr.)
Dec.	20—Jack Logan's Dog (Com.)
Dec.	20—The Bachelor's Finish (Com.)
Dec.	24—A Father's Love (Dr.)
Dec.	27—The Station Agent's Daughter (Dr.)
Dec.	27—Freddie's Courtship (Com.)
Dec.	31—A Daughter of Virginia (Dr.)
Jan.	3—The Pinkerton Man (Dr.)
Jan.	3—Beaux Not Wanted (Com.)
Jan.	7—A Woman Without a Heart (Dr.)
Jan.	17—A Montana Love Story (Com.)
Jan.	17—Lovers' Trials (Com.)
Jan.	21—A Noble Heart (Dr.)
Jan.	24—Wife's Love and Little Dorothy	980
Jan.	28—Masquerader	960
Jan.	31—For My Pal
Feb.	4—His First Case

RELIANCE

Dec.	24—The Refuge
Jan.	7—As the Master Orders	900
Jan.	11—The Hour of Fate	900
Jan.	18—A Country Girl	950
Jan.	21—The Vows	975
Jan.	25—For Remembrance	900
Jan.	28—The Last Laugh	975
Feb.	1—A Brass Button
Feb.	4—The Command from Galilee

SOLAX COMPANY

Dec.	23—The Pawnshop (Dr.)
Dec.	30—Mrs. Richard Dare (Com.)
Jan.	6—The Nightcap (Com.)
Jan.	6—Salmon Fishing in Canada (Sc.)
Jan.	13—The Girl and the Burglar (Dr.)
Jan.	20—A Reporter's Romance (Dr.)
Jan.	27—His Best Friend (Dr.)
Feb.	3—Ring of Love

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Nov.	29—Value Beyond Price (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	2—John Halifax, Gentleman (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	6—Rip Van Winkle (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	9—The Girls He Left Behind Him
Dec.	9—The Iron-Clad Lover
Dec.	13—Love and Law (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	16—The Millionaire Milkman (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	20—Looking Forward (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	23—The Childhood of Jack Harkaway (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	27—The Vicar of Wakefield (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	30—Hypnotized (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	3—The Pasha's Daughter
Jan.	6—Baseball and Bloomers
Jan.	10—Everybody Saves Father (Com.)
Jan.	10—The Only Girl in Camp (Com.)
Jan.	13—The Vote that Counts (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	24—When Love Was Blind	900
Jan.	27—Prompt Payment
Jan.	27—Stealing a Ride	900
Jan.	31—Only in the Way
Feb.	3—Adrift

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Nov.	14—The Case of the Missing Heir (D.)	1000
Nov.	21—Lone Wolf's Trust (Dr.)
Nov.	28—The Heart of an Actress (Dr.)
Dec.	2—Queen of the Nihilists (Dr.)
Dec.	5—In the Czar's Name (Dr.)
Dec.	9—Western Justice (Dr.)
Dec.	12—A Fight for Millions (Dr.)
Dec.	16—The Old Miner's Doll (Dr.)
Dec.	19—A Ward of Uncle Sam (Dr.)
Dec.	23—The Terror of the Plains (Com.)
Dec.	26—The Insane Heiress (Dr.)
Dec.	30—The Missing Bridegroom (Dr.)
Jan.	6—The Royal Wishbone (Dr.)
Jan.	2—Mrs. Danver's Divorce
Jan.	9—An Erring Son's Awakening (Dr.)
Jan.	16—The Folks Back Home (Dr.)
Jan.	20—Returned to the Fold (Dr.)
Jan.	30—Taxicab Mystery
Feb.	3—Counting House Mystery

THE MOTIOGRAPH Motion Picture Machine is destined to become THE MACHINE OF THE FUTURE.

DEALERS—Seize this opportunity! Some choice territory open. Write us.

DO YOU KNOW our sales for 1910 were two and one-half times greater than in previous years?

THERE IS A REASON FOR this wonderful increase.

THIS GREAT INCREASE IN SALES OF THE MOTIOGRAPH is a result of our policy of giving value received, also it is due to our infinite capacity for taking pains, and our purpose to produce THE MACHINE OF THE FUTURE.

THE MOTIOGRAPH idea combines a thousand details that show some real thinking. The design is remarkable for its beauty and strength, simplicity of operation, accessibility of parts.

NOTHING LIKE IT HAS EVER BEEN OFFERED BEFORE.

The 1911 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH soon ready. Send for catalog and name of nearest dealer.

Manufactured and Jobbed by ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO. 564 West Randolph St. Chicago, Ill.

J. H. Hallberg, Agt. 36 E. 23rd Street, New York City

Edw. H. Kemp, 833 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

J. F. Brockliss, Agt. London, Paris and Berlin.

RELIANCE PICTORIAL PLAYS

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company.

ACTED BY AN ALL-STAR STOCK COMPANY

"The School-Ma'am's Courage"

Release Wednesday, February 8

How a frail school teacher conquered the bully. A mingling of pathos and humor, forming a delightful story.

"Three Men"

Release Saturday, February 11

The Mirror of Life, reflecting varied characters in their true light. A powerful subject.

Remember That The Most Magnificent Film Ever Produced

"The Command From Galilee"

IS RELEASED SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 4

TWO REELS PER WEEK—WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY

Place your order with your Exchange

CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES, 1 Union Square, New York City

THE OLD STORY—(about picture machines)—You have heard it a thousand times—Flickerless, bright, steady pictures, noiseless operation. Every maker of picture machines has told you his machine is the only one for these.

BUT YOU WANT MORE—
You want long service—
You want insurance against breakdowns—
You want freedom from repair bills—
You want satisfied operators—
You want a machine that never causes worry; that requires no attention but oiling and cleaning and does not demand a thought except when your show is on.

YOU CAN GET ALL THESE in one machine only—

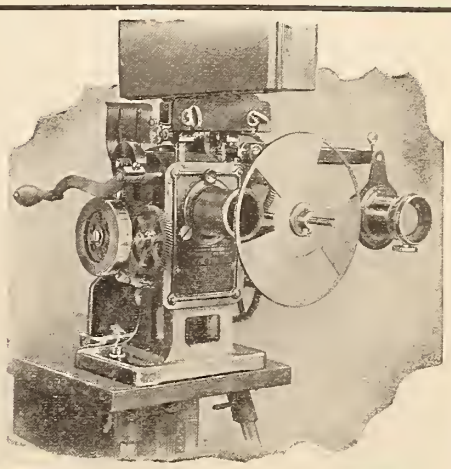
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH NO. 6

The Perfect Motion Picture Machine.

If you are going to buy a picture machine, don't fail to send for Catalog D.



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

For thirteen years the leading makers of moving picture machines.

TRUST FILMS

BIOGRAPH.

	Feet
Dec. 15—His Sister-in-Law Dr.)	998
Dec. 19—The Lesson	994
Dec. 22—The White Roses	588
Dec. 22—The Recreation of an Heiress	410
Dec. 26—Winning Back His Love (Dr.)	994
Dec. 29—His Wife's Sweethearts (Com.)	682
Dec. 29—After the Ball (Com.)	311
Jan. 2—The Two Paths	992
Jan. 5—When a Man Loves	998
Jan. 9—The Italian Barber (Com.)	993
Jan. 12—The Midnight Marauder (Dr.)	392
Jan. 12—Help Wanted (Com.)	605
Jan. 16—His Trust (Dr.)	996
Jan. 19—His Trust Fulfilled (Dr.)	999
Jan. 23—Fate's Turning (Dr.)	998
Jan. 26—The Poor Sick Men (Com.)	991

EDISON.

	Feet
Dec. 14—Pigs is Pigs (Com.)	1000
Dec. 16—The Red Cross Seal (Dr.)
Dec. 20—The Police of New York City	995
Dec. 21—The Joke They Played on Bumptious	990
Dec. 23—A Christmas Carol	1000
Dec. 27—Eldora, the Fruit Girl (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 28—A Family of Vegetarians (Com.)	990
Dec. 30—The Romance of Hefty Burke (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 3—In the Days of Chivalry	1000
Jan. 4—Sleep, Gentle Sleep	990
Jan. 6—The Fire Department of New York City	400
Jan. 6—A Western Night	600
Jan. 10—The Test of Friendship (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 11—The Home of the Seal (Educational)	300
Jan. 11—The Gardener's Ladder (Com.)	700
Jan. 13—The Link that Held (Dr.)	960
Jan. 17—With Interest to Date (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Jan. 18—Uncle's Birthday Gift (Com.)	995
Jan. 20—Mike the Miser (Dr.)	990
Jan. 24—An Eventful Evening (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 25—The Lover and the Count (Com.)	995
Jan. 27—The Black Bordered Letter (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 1—Bumptious as Romeo (Com.)	975
Feb. 3—Selling Old Master (Dr.)	990
Feb. 7—The Doctor (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 8—Two Valentines (Com.)	1000
Feb. 10—His First Commission (Dr.)	990
Feb. 14—The Rajah (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 15—The Ransom of Red Chief (Com.)	975
Feb. 24—The Price of Victory	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Nov. 26—A Western Woman's Way	1000
Nov. 29—The Tie That Binds	953
Dec. 3—"Circle C" Ranch Wedding
Dec. 6—Love's Awakening	1000
Dec. 10—A Cowboy's Vindication	950
Dec. 13—A Tangled Masquerade (Com.)	1000
Dec. 17—The Tenderfoot Messenger (Dr.)	997
Dec. 20—Hank and Lank	265
Dec. 20—The Greater Call	730
Dec. 21—The Bad Man's Christmas Gift	975
Dec. 27—Girls Will Be Boys (Com.)	1000
Dec. 31—A Gambler of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 3—The Redeemed Criminal	1000
Jan. 7—The Count and the Cowboys	1000
Jan. 10—The Sophmore's Romance (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 14—The Girl of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 17—His Master's Son (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 21—The Border Ranger (Dr.)	985
Jan. 24—A Sin Unpardonable (Dr.)	998
Jan. 28—The Two Reformations (Dr.)	996

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Nov. 19—Lisbon, Before and During the Revolution (Scenic)	727
Nov. 19—Spanish Loyalty	280
Nov. 22—Cast Into the Flames (Dr.)	381
Nov. 22—A Woman's Wit (Com.)	595
Nov. 26—Samson's Betrayal	519
Nov. 26—Calino Travels as a Prince	489
Nov. 29—The Flat Next Door	722
Nov. 29—Tarascon on the Rhone	243
Dec. 3—Lured by a Phantom	712
Dec. 3—Nancy's Wedding Trip	273
Dec. 6—A Man of Honor	834
Dec. 6—Professor's Hat	171
Dec. 10—The Revolt	942
Dec. 13—The Phantom Rider	279
Dec. 13—Closed Gate	676
Dec. 17—Herod and the New Born King (Biblical)	965
Dec. 20—The Cinderella Girl (Dr.)	769
Dec. 20—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical)	220
Dec. 24—The Old Home (Dr.)	732
Dec. 24—Cain and Abel Biblical)	279
Dec. 27—The Adventuress (Dr.)	995
Dec. 31—The Doctor's Secretary (Dr.)	981
Jan. 3—The Artist's Pay Day	969
Jan. 7—The Woman Wins	945
Jan. 10—A Child's Plea (Dr.)	758
Jan. 10—The Hills of Corsica (Travelogue)	243
Jan. 14—A Simple Rustic Tale (Dr.)	958
Jan. 17—The Sealed Letter (Dr.)	837
Jan. 17—A Water Contest (Educational)	168
Jan. 21—The Kleptomaniac's Repentance (Dr.)	965
Jan. 24—Twilight of a Soldier's Life (Dr.)	945
Jan. 28—The Baby Fortune Hunters (Dr.)	682
Jan. 28—Gorges of the Bourne, France (Travelogue)	293

KALEM CO.

	Feet
Dec. 9—The Rescue of Molly Finney	1007
Dec. 14—Seth's Temptation (Dr.)	955
Dec. 16—Her Indian Mother (Dr.)	995
Dec. 21—The Little Spreewald Maiden	985
Dec. 23—When Lovers Part	963
Dec. 28—The Girl Spy Before Vicksburg (War Dr.)	935
Dec. 30—The Stranger (Dr.)	1005
Jan. 4—The Bolted Door	975
Jan. 6—The Runaway Engine	955
Jan. 11—For Love of an Enemy (Dr.)	995
Jan. 13—The Heart of an Indian Mother (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 18—Her Chum's Brother (Com.-Dr.)	980
Jan. 20—Robbie and the Redskins (Dr.)	850
Jan. 20—Modern Light Battery in Action	95
Jan. 25—The Secret of the Still (Dr.)	950
Jan. 27—Puritans and Indians (Dr.)	970

LUBIN.

Dec. 1—Spoony Sam (Com.)
Dec. 12—An Exile's Love (Dr.)	990
Dec. 15—The Musical Ranch (Dr.)
Dec. 19—The Dead Leter (Dr.)
Dec. 22—An American Count (Dr.)
Dec. 26—Making a Man of Him (Dr.)	990
Dec. 29—Blue Horse Mine (Dr.)	990
Jan. 2—Art and the Legacy	950
Jan. 5—His Last Parade	390
Jan. 5—A Mix in Masks	600
Jan. 5—The Crimson Scars	980
Jan. 5—Fire! Fire! Fire!	980
Jan. 9—Tag Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.)	935
Jan. 12—The Widow's Choice (Com.)	950
Jan. 16—Will It Ever Come to This? (Com.)	715
Jan. 16—Easy Coin (Com.)	250
Jan. 19—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 23—Father Makes Himself Useful (Com.)	975
Jan. 26—Father Love (Dr.)	1000

G. MELIES.

Nov. 3—Generous Customers (Com.)
Nov. 10—A Mountain Wife (Dr.)	980
Nov. 17—His Sergeant's Stripes (Dr.)	950
Nov. 24—The Cowboy's and the Bachelor Girl (Dr.)
Dec. 1—Pals (Dr.)
Dec. 8—What Great Bear Learned
Dec. 15—Old Norris' Gal
Dec. 22—A Western Welcome	980
Dec. 29—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.)	980
Jan. 12—The Owner of the "L. L." Ranch (Dr.)	980
Jan. 19—Changing Cooks (Com.)	980
Jan. 26—How Mary Met the Cowpunchers (Western Dr.)	980

PATHE.

Tale)	607
Dec. 23—Betty's Fireworks	394
Dec. 24—Sunshine in Poverty Row	1000
Dec. 26—The Atonement (Da.)	656
Dec. 26—The Bowling Fiend (Com.)	344
Dec. 28—Running Away From a Fortune (American Com.)	540
Dec. 28—The American Fleet in French Waters (Topical)	125
Dec. 28—In Full Cry (Scenic)	331
Dec. 30—Catalan, the Minstrel (Dr.)	768
Dec. 30—Carnival of Japanese Firemen in Tokio (Sc.)	230
Dec. 31—The Yaqui Girl (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 2—The Misplaced Petticoat	790
Jan. 2—Dutch Kids	497
Jan. 4—The Cowboy's Innocence	994
Jan. 6—An Intrigue	997
Jan. 7—Love Under Difficulties	781
Jan. 7—The Funeral of Count Tolstoi	220
Jan. 9—The Evils of Betting (Dr.)	676
Jan. 9—In the Land of Monkeys and Snakes	276
Jan. 11—The Twin Cinderellas	705
Jan. 11—Dusty Rhodes Takes a Flight (C.)	249
Jan. 13—Max Is Almost Married (Com.)	572
Jan. 13—So Near but Not Quite (Com.)	420
Jan. 14—The Battle at Redwood (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 16—Marguerite's Birthday (Com.-Dr.)	659
Jan. 16—Saved by Her Prayers (Dr.)	331
Jan. 18—Trailed by an Indian (Dr.)	495
Jan. 18—Sea Birds and Their Haunts (Edu.)	462
Jan. 20—The Tables are Turned (Com.)	981
Jan. 21—The Marked Dollar (Dr.)	968
Jan. 23—How Max Went Around the World (Com.)	633
Jan. 23—Gasoline for a Tonic (Com.)	361
Jan. 25—Saved by Telegraphy (Dr.)	720
Jan. 25—Whiffels' New Sleeves (Com.)	282
Jan. 27—Il Trovatore (Dr.)	964
Jan. 28—Father Against His Will (Com.)	720
Jan. 28—Betty Rolls Along (Com.)	289

SELIG.

Dec. 5—The Widow of Mill Creek Flat	1000
Dec. 8—In the Wilderness	1000
Dec. 12—A Tale of the Sea	1000
Dec. 15—County Fair (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 19—John Dough and the Cherub (Mystical)	1000
Dec. 22—Overland to Fremont	1000
Dec. 26—The Rustlers (Dr.)	990
Dec. 29—Justinian and Theodora (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 2—The Argonauts	1000
Jan. 5—Ramona's Father	1000
Jan. 9—Shadows of the Past (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 12—The Rival Dramatist	1000
Jan. 16—Buddy, the Little Guardian (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 19—An Englishman's Honor (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 23—A Robust Patient (Com.)	1000
Jan. 26—The Spy (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 30—The Little Circus Rider

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

G. Kleine.

Oct. 5—The Dishonest Steward (Dr.)	699
Oct. 5—City of a Hundred Mosques, Broussa, Asia Minor (Scenic)	296
Oct. 12—Foiled by a Cigarette (Dr.)	991
Oct. 19—In the Shadow of the Night (Dr.)	502
Oct. 19—Tunny Fishing Off Palermo, Italy (Ind.)	500
Oct. 26—The Signet Ring (Dr.)	868
Oct. 26—In the Spreewald (Scenic)	132
Nov. 2—Tragical Concealment (Dr.)	640
Nov. 2—Crossing the Andes (Scenic)	350
Nov. 9—Secret of the Cellar (Dr.)	788
Nov. 9—A Trip Through Scotland (Scenic)	217
Nov. 16—The Rival Barons (Dr.)	860
Nov. 16—An Alpine Retreat (Scenic)	142
Nov. 23—Behind a Mask (Dr.)	516
Nov. 23—Nantes (Scenic)	450
Nov. 30—The Return at Midnight	634
Nov. 30—Ramble Through Ceylon	319
Dec. 7—Death of Admiral Coligny	992
Dec. 5—On the Mexican Border
Dec. 8—Reggie's Engagement
Dec. 14—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.)	749
Dec. 14—Scenes in British India (Sc.)	253
Dec. 21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.)	676
Dec. 21—A Chamois Hunt	332
Dec. 28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.)	650
Dec. 28—Coaching in Devonshire, England (Travelogue)	348
Jan. 4—A Lock of Hair	978
Jan. 11—Washed Ashore (Dr.)	670
Jan. 11—Woodcarving in Brienz	320
Jan. 18—By the King's Order (Dr.)	991
Jan. 25—The Sailor's Return (Dr.)	689
Jan. 25—Scenes in Jersey (Travelogue)	296

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 11—The Nine of Diamonds (Dr.)	990
Nov. 12—Jean Goes Fishing (Dr.)	988
Nov. 15—Drumsticks (Dr.)	998
Nov. 18—A Modern Courtship (Com.)
Nov. 18—The Bum and the Bomb (Com.)
Nov. 19—Francesca Da Rimini (Dr.)
Nov. 22—Suspicion (Dr.)
Nov. 25—A Four-Footed Pest (Com.)
Nov. 25—The Statue Dog
Nov. 26—Love, Luck and Gasoline (Dr.)
Nov. 29—A Woman's Love (Dr.)
Dec. 2—Jack Fat and Jim Slim at Coney Island (Com.)	951
Dec. 3—The Poacher's Wife (Dr.)	1001
Dec. 6—A Tin-Type Romance (Com.)	996
Dec. 9—He Who Laughs Last (Com.)	927
Dec. 10—The Color Sergeant's Horse (Dr.)	978
Dec. 13—The Law and the Man (Dr.)	1010
Dec. 16—Playing at Divorce (Dr.)
Dec. 16—The International Motor Boat Race (Sc.)
Dec. 17—A Dixie Mother (Dr.)
Dec. 20—The Light in the Window	997
Dec. 23—Clancy	995
Dec. 24—Jean and the Waif	989
Dec. 27—In Neighboring Kingdoms (Dr.)	995
Dec. 30—Crazy Apples (Com.)	988
Dec. 31—Where the Wind Blows (Dr.)	987
Jan. 3—All Is Fair In Love and War	973
Jan. 6—The Misses Finch and Nephew Billy	979
Jan. 7—The Old Water Jar	984
Jan. 10—Doctor Cupid (Com.)	987
Jan. 13—Water Lilies (Dr.)	991
Jan. 14—Coward or Hero (Dr.)	975
Jan. 17—Three Men and a Maid (Com.)	1000
Jan. 20—The Girl in the Film (Com.)	963
Jan. 21—Cast Up by the Deep (Dr.)	1001
Jan. 24—It Did Look Suspicious (Dr.)	617
Jan. 24—The Fireman's Parade (Edu.)	383
Jan. 27—Girl of the Mountains (Dr.)	999
Jan. 28—Davy Jones in the South Seas (Com.)	995

Are You a Subscriber to

The Moving Picture News

Going in that $50.00 Contest?

HALLBERG

THE "ECONOMIZER MAN"

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. N 1

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

REPAIRED

by skilled mechanics at short notice and reasonable prices. Work guaranteed.

Supplies of All Kinds.

CHAS. E. DRESSLER,
388 2nd Ave., City, near 23rd St.
Take elevator.

PATENTS

"BE INDEPENDENT."

Moving Picture Devices a Specialty.

Charles Lowell Howard

PATENT ATTORNEY

706-707-708 M'Gill Bldg., WASHINGTON, D. C.

DO NOT FAIL TO RENEW YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TO THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS. YOU SHOULD NOT MISS A COPY.

Moving Picture Machine

A well built projecting machine having all patents granted. Passed all Underwriters' requirements. Sell for $100.00 each. Inventor needs money to exploit. Good chance for investment. Stand investigation. Apply

"MACHINE"
Moving Picture News.

FOR SALE

18 Reels of Absolutely Good Films. All Good Subjects—

Comedy Drama Travel

Will sell for $100.00 on account of changing program. Apply MR. KING, c/o Acme Exchange, 133 Third Avenue, New York City.

Coming, Wednesday, Feb. 8th

An Irish Comedy

"KELLY, U.S.A."

The story of a Soldier's Life.

ATLAS FILM CO.
344 East 32nd Street
New York

Extreme Week—Monday, Feb. 6th

FOILING THE CAMORRA

An Italian Detective Film.

Friday, Jan. 10

WAS SHE JUSTIFIED

An Emotional Drama.

YANKEE FILM COMPANY
344 East 32nd Street, New York, N. Y.

ATTENTION!

We beg to announce the opening of our new film exchange. Ready for business FEBRUARY 6th, 1911. Best independent service available. Up-to-date releases — No junk — Reasonable prices. Call and see us with reference to your service.

THE CHAUTAUQUA FILM EXCHANGE
356 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO

AMERICAN STANDARD DOUBLE DISSOLVING MOVING PICTURE MACHINE. ALL COMPLETE, $200.00

A POWERS No. 5, SLIGHTLY USED,

$100.00

MANHATTAN SLIDE CO.
124 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Imp News

A distinct and radical departure from the beaten path will be found by moving picture exhibitors in the Imp release of Monday, Feb. 6th, entitled,

"AT THE DUKE'S COMMAND"

It is one of the most richly staged and elaborately costumed efforts in the history of moving pictures, and will make many new friends for your theatre. The story is laid in England in the sixteenth century. The plot is wonderfully strong with human interest, and the acting will arouse the most hardened onlooker. See that you get this and FEATURE IT BIG!

THEN A SPLIT REEL!

On Thursday, Feb. 9th, we release a split reel containing two dandy little playlets, "The Mirror" and "When the Cat's Away." Soon after these we will release some of the Imp pictures staged in Cuba, and we will simply compel you by their merit to write to us and congratulate us over and over again. If you care to get the benefit of all the coin we are spending to produce the best films in the world, see that you GET TWO IMPS EVERY WEEK!

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP AMERICA

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

Are you one of the easy marks who are pulling on the rope while Gen. Flimco sits on his sled and grins? Are you as easy as those exchanges that he "bought" and then fined whenever he could create an excuse? Aren't you getting sick of the game? Why don't you show your independence, give independent films a real try-out and find out for yourself how much bigger your receipts will be. Whenever you're ready for good stuff, come to the biggest and best film renter —the one who will give you a cracking good program every week of the year!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

HEADQUARTERS:
196-198 Lake Street, CHICAGO
MINNEAPOLIS OMAHA

"The biggest and best film renter in the world"

Announcement, Advertising, Travelogue, Recitation
and slides for every purpose made to order
GEO. J. GOLDTHORPE & CO.
244 West 14th Street New York

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We tecah you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars. ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS, 908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., Chicago.

Make Your Old Films Look Like the First Release By Using the MORTIMER FILM CLEANER
Send for Our BOOKLET.
FIDELITY BUILDING
Portland, Maine

ENTHUSIASM

A brainy man without enthusiasm is like a fine locomotive without steam, neither one gets anywhere. We have the brains, we have the films and we have the steam to make the Independents the dominant factor in the Moving Picture Industry. That we are succeeding is shown by the fact that we have half of the business of the country after an enthusiastic campaign covering the past eight months.

Subterfuge and trickery can never offset righteous enthusiasm and determination.

EXHIBITORS BEWARE—when one of the Trust's exchanges offers to extend you credit in consideration of your taking a higher-priced service than you can afford, or for any other consideration, that is the entering wedge of ousting you from your business. After you are hopelessly in debt to one of these man traps, they will close in on you and take from you a business that has cost you an expenditure of many times the amount of the credit allowed you and much of your valuable time and effort to build up.

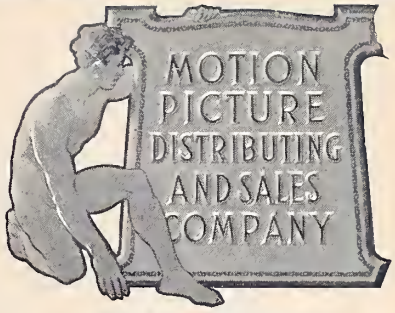
If any of you are thus involved at the present time communicate with us confidentially at once.

Select your service now from the accompanying

UNEXCELLED PROGRAM

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

111 East 14th Street, New York City



OUR PROGRAM

MONDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Eclair—Eclair Film Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

TUESDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.

WEDNESDAY
Ambrosio—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Atlas—Atlas Film Co.
Champion—The Champion Film Co.
Nestor—David Horsley.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

THURSDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Rex—Rex M. P. Mfg. Co.
1st release Feb. 16th.

FRIDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Lux—R. Prieur
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.
Solax—Solax Company
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

SATURDAY
Capital—Capital Film Co.
Gt. Northern—Gt. Northern Film Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

American Releases

Release Monday, January 30th.

"The Genius"

A Comedy Drama. Replete with dramatic situations tempered with a few laughs. A good reel. Length approx. 965 feet.

Release Thursday, February 2nd.

"The Mission in the Desert"

A Western Feature Drama. A sensation. A reel you will repeat and repeat. Made in Arizona. Length approx. 985 feet.

Release Monday, February 6th.

"A Pittsburg Millionaire"

A dramatic film intense in its appeal. An exceedingly interesting story. A decided feature. Length approx. 985 feet.

Release Thursday, February 9th.

"On the Installment Plan"
"Too Much Aunt"

Split reel comedy. Both hilariously funny. A laugh-making reel from the first foot to the last. Length respectively 560 feet and 430 feet.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY

BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK = CHICAGO, ILL.

ALL INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES BUY AMERICAN FILMS

Call Call Call Call Call Call Call Call Call

FOR

THE THANHOUSER TWO-A-WEEK

"2-4-U and Good Ones, Too"

RELEASE OF TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 7

How a "Belted Earl" Was "Belted!"

The Westerner and the Earl deals with that phase of the Foreign Nobleman question that is best known to America—the exchange of a title for Yankee dollars. A certain English Earl tried to exchange his for such of wealthy Mrs. Montague's shekels as came with the hand of her daughter. Mrs. Montague was willing. But her daughter wasn't. The scraggy looking specimen of nobility didn't appeal to her at all, at all; the healthy husky American type of man was more to her liking. But the nobleman schemes out a scheme to win her admiration, and, learning of it, a certain American-type-of-man schemes out a counter-scheme—and the picture brings pleasing order out of the chaos that follows.

No. 183. Code Word, Coduke.

RELEASE OF FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 10

Another Adventure of Violet Gray, Detective

The Norwood Necklace

and its mysterious disappearance gives Miss Gray fresh food for reflection and solution. Reflecting on the freeing from custody of a pretty female subject, Violet decides that the police error was made in the release—and NOT in the detention—of the subject; and the aftermath of her decision is formed in a solution of the whole necklace puzzle. The case of the Norwood Necklace easily shows bright Violet at her best, and you will admit that though her methods are odd, they certainly get the results.

No. 184. Code Word, Norwood.

The Thanhouser News the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to PUBLISHER, THANHOUSER NEWS, NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches in depth, with glass and easel (6 feet high) GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY-DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN.

For system's sake address PHOTOFRAME DEPT.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 6

February 11
1911

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

SCENE FROM
"FOR WASHINGTON"
THANHOUSER RELEASE, FEB. 21st

GREAT NORTHERN

FILMS THAT SATISFY

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 11TH

FOUND AGAIN

A well acted and appealing dramatic production—superb photography

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 18TH

THE LIFE OF A MUSCHIK

A film that, with the aid of an excellent plot, gives a very clear idea of the daily life of the oppressed Russian peasant

THE FALSE ALARM

A Rattling Good Comedy Film

All First-Class Independent Exchanges Handle Our Product

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quatily

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

RELIANCE PICTORIAL PLAYS

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

ACTED BY AN ALL-STAR STOCK COMPANY

"SOULS COURAGEOUS"

Released Saturday, February 18

The stripling and grandsire fight shoulder to shoulder for liberty and country. Aided only by her tiny sister, who loads the guns, a brave girl defends her home from the attacking British hordes. Realistic battle scenes.

"A PLAIN TALE"

Released Wednesday, February 22

Jealousy and suspicion cloud the domestic horizon, but the sky is soon cleared by love and truth. A simple story pleasingly interpreted.

TWO REELS PER WEEK—WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY

Place your order with your Exchange

CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES, 1 Union Square, New York City

ANDREW CARNEGIE GIVES $10,000,000 IN THE CAUSE OF UNIVERSAL PEACE

The Greatest Argument Against War is "THE OLD MAN AND JIM"

James Whitcomb Riley's Great War Poem, showing vividly the horrors of War. The Rattle and Din and Hellish Pandemonium of the Battlefield, where young and old Life-Blood is sacrificed to the Fiendish Doctrine of Mars, and the false machinations of Men.

This Film is a Historical and Educational Masterpiece, in which Humanity's Greatest Cause is espoused in a Combination of DRAMATIC and SCENIC effort, unparalleled.

OVER 140 MEN—HORSES—CANNONS—FIRE.

An accurate Historical Representation that includes impersonations of AMERICA'S GREATEST HEROES.

Released February 22nd—Washington's Birthday.

MR. EXCHANGE MAN:—It is to your advantage to order this film. It means reputation to you.
MR. EXHIBITOR:—This production will popularize your Theatre and make your Trust competitor look like Thirty Cents.

CHAMPION FILM CO., 12 East 15th Street NEW YORK

MARK M. DINTENFASS, Manager

YANKEE FILMS

MONDAY, FEB. 20

"A Life-Time Penance"

Heart throbs and thrills run rampant

FRIDAY, FEB. 24

"The Woman Who Dared"

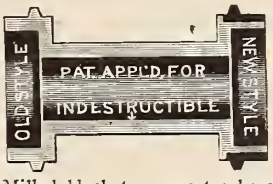
A new Nell Pierce sleuth film

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

344 East 32nd Street, New York, N. Y.

OPERATORS WANTED

To handle Lavezzi's improved repairs as a side-line.
Excellent chance to become a jobber.
Write today!



Refer to other Publications.

Star, cam, arbor and sprocket	$12.00
Intermittent sprocket	3.50
Feed sprockets	2.50
Above sprockets can be continually repaired for $1.00 and	1.50
Any make of sprockets repaired with steel teeth	2.25
Set of tempered punches for removing taper pins	.50
Milled block to support arbors to keep from springing out of true while pins are being drawn in or out	.50

Two Pin Machines changed to one pin. Improved easy running, long wearing Cams, Stars, etc., etc.

E. W. LAVEZZI 3042 N. Ashland Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

PROJECT PERFECT PICTURES

By using only "the perfect moving picture machine"—POWER—you can make a picture as steady as if

PAINTED ON THE SCREEN and the only kind of machine that does project pictures of perfect steadiness is

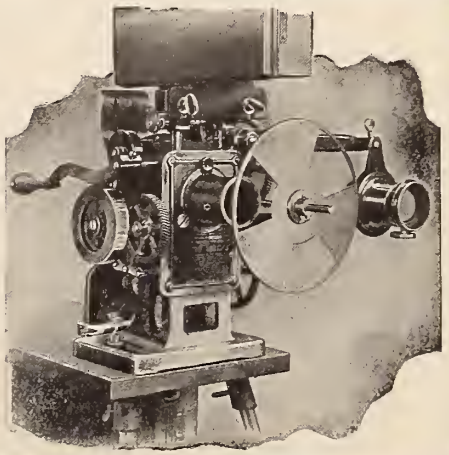
POWER'S NO. 6

That is one reason why its sales exceed those of any TWO other American picture machines and its popularity is steadily increasing.

If you want to know a score of other reasons why "Power's" machines lead the world, send now for catalog D.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115 Nassau St., New York

For thirteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines.



George Washington Saved

BY

"A Heroine of '76"

We tell all about it in a picture which you must see, released on THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 16TH.

If this courageous girl had not acted as she did, Washington could not have crossed the Delaware, probably Cornwallis would never have surrendered at Yorktown, and maybe there wouldn't be any United States at all—but the fact is, his life was saved so all this unpleasant contemplation is eliminated, and all these "ifs" of history can be better appreciated if you see "A HEROINE OF '76."

RELEASED THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 23RD.

"THE STORY OF A PRAYER RUG"

Another REX

BISON FILMS

FIVE REELS A WEEK

TUESDAY---BISON. WEDNESDAY---AMBROSIO. THURSDAY---ITALA. FRIDAY---BISON. SATURDAY---ITALA

"The Deputy's Honor"

Released Tuesday, February 14

Overwhelmed with shame at permitting his guilty brother to escape, the deputy sheriff ends his life. The penitent brother fulfills the dead man's trust by surrendering to the sheriff.

ITALA RELEASES

"THE FATAL CHARM"
Thursday, February 16

"WHO WILL EAT THE TURKEY"
Saturday, February 18

"The Warrior's Squaw"

Released Friday, February 17

A thrilling Indian story. Two battle scenes. The Sioux brave wins a bride from the camp of the hostile Pawnees, after stirring adventures.

AMBROSIO RELEASE

Wednesday, February 15

"THE DEMON"
A Poetical Dramatization

Sold Exclusively Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO., 1 Union Square, New York City

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

European Agents: INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., Breams Building, Chancery Lane, London, E. C.

Chicago Representative: J. J. Sullivan. 866 Graceland Ave. 'Phone Graceland 5053

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.

ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV February 11, 1911 Number 6

Notes of the Week

OUR FRONT COVER ILLUSTRATION.

The photo on our cover represents one of the most effective scenes in the Thanhouser Washington's birthday release, entitled "For Washington." We all know of Washington's remarkable feat in crossing the Delaware River at Trenton with half of his command, surprising the Hessians and making them his prisoners; but how advance word of helplessness of his army reached the great general has ever been a mystery. The bearer of the message was the very Patriot Maid here portrayed, who, with her American scout sweetheart severely wounded, cleverly disguises herself and takes her lover's message to Washington. Through her aid, the latter reaches the Hessian headquarters, is admitted by the wounded scout, and the enemy awake to find the American flag flying over them and the American army in full possession of their camp, the victors of one of the most bloodless yet decisive struggles of the Revolution.

VICTORY! VICTORY!! VICTORY!!!

Referring to our issue of Februry 4th, on page 13 we gave a full report of the proceedings in the Circuit Courts of the United States for the Southern District of New York, wherein the Patents Company have tried to enjoin the Independents from using the Gaumont Camera. It will be seen from the results of the Courts that the Gaumont Camera is not an infringing camera of the Edison Patents, so that the Independents who are now using the Gaumont camera are free from litigation. As we said then, it is a great indepcndent victory, eases the situation so that all may be free to continue their business as aforetime. We congratulate those members of the Sales Company who hazarded upon gaining such a good result as this end of the litigation shows.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

Exhibitors and Operators Take Note.

Assemblyman F. A. Higgins, Republican, New York City, has introduced a bill in the Legislature at Albany to amend the Greater New York charter in relation to licensing operators of moving picture apparatus and their connections, repealing that part of the present law, which says that "no person shall be eligible to procure a license unless he shall be a citizen of the United States and of full age." This bill omits from the present law the words, "a citizen of the United States."

It will be seen by the above, which has been referred to the Committee of Cities, that if this amendment passes, it will allow foreigners to obtain a license to run a moving picture show. Now is the time for operators to get busy and petition every Senator or Assemblyman at Albany to use their best interests in favor of the amendment becoming law. If, after this warning, the operators do not take action, not only individually but through the operators' union and the exchange men, they deserve that the law barring them, unless they are a citizen, remain on the statute book.

Another bill we want to call attention to is one introduced on February 7th by Assemblyman Spielberg, requiring the placing of automatic fire extinguishers in all theaters and public places—six on a floor—except at moving picture places, where there must be twelve on each floor used by the public.

This latter is a most important bill to every exhibitor, and one which they should take action concerning very quick, unless they want to pay away heavy sums in installing fire extinguishers. Not that we in any way oppose fire extinguishers in a theater. We have always advocated the placing of a sufficient quantity, and the house to be fully prepared in case of any fire; but that they should have their taxes doubled we cannot see the value of it. It would have been better for them to have employed competent operators, and the fire risk would have been reduced to a minimum instead of the maximum they are getting by using the product of the schools.

EXHIBITORS, BE FIRST IN THE FIELD.

Sooner or later—and most likely sooner—the schools are going to have moving pictures. Don't sit down and give seventeen reasons why they shouldn't, because the die is cast—and you know it.

Let that fact sink into your American blood, and then get busy and see how you can climb on the band wagon.

First of all, it will not be long before a regular set lecture will have to be on the curriculum of the schools using cinematographs telling just how a moving picture is made.

"Oh, everyone knows that!" you say. They don't, and with all the magazine elucidation of the subject there remains in the average mind a darkness of ignorance that must be removed. YOU know, of course, how the films are taken. Then why don't you take time to explain the essential details once in a while to your audiences? They're from Missouri, and they like it. If you are the happy possessor of a camera, get a few feet of film and show them. If you haven't a camera, use your own ingenuity and your machine head and magazines, and see what you can do.

I once made a hundred feet of local stuff over a Powers No. 5 head with a rude box arrangement to keep the film from the light between upper and lower magazines.

We printed the positive over the same old head, and the S. R. O. sign was in use by 6:30 that evening. The sight of the machine on its four shining sprawling legs, in the middle of the main street, was worth a half page ad in the local paper, not to mention the free write-ups we got. It was a good stunt because it worked. It would have been good if it had not worked. The difference being between a fact and a fake (both good ads at times).

The point of it all is, be an educator on your own account. Clear away the mystery that is supposed to exist in the operating room. Trot out your projection machine once in a while and set it upon the staff. Then explain it and demonstrate it. You are helping the educational cause and you are helping your own gate receipts.

Write to the makers of your projection machine and ask them to have some slides made for you showing detailed working, etc. Don't expect them to pay you for advertising, but give it to them: it costs you nothing and it's education of the right sort.

RESPONSIBILITY.

A decade has produced wonderful inventions; the world moves apace; the recent great developments do not begin to portend the accomplishments of the near future. The automobile, the wireless telegraph and telephone, and the respective methods of aerial navigation are as much in advance of us as the steam railway, the telegraph, telephone, steamboat and similar inventions were ahead of the forefathers.

And yet, wonderful as were and are these various discoveries; powerful as they may severally be as aids and servants of the commercial; useful as they may be to society, resultful as they may be as means for monetary investments, they are not to be compared with the motion picture in influence, direct and positive, upon the great body of our citizenship at large.

The well-to-do receive the impression of the action picture in the chairs of the high-priced theater; the laborer, with his wife and family, enjoys the same thing, staged somewhat differently, in the seats of what has become known as the moving picture theater. There is no avenue of escape, the motion picture, like the undertaker, sooner or later sees, in every human being, a victim; and with almost the certainty of death, it lays hold upon one and another until it has assimilated the whole. Its influence is universal.

Powerful impression upon the mind is made through the medium of the eye; sight is frequently an unconscious educator; the mind is much like the properly focused photographic plate, which, without any change, chemical or otherwise, apparent to the unaided optic, receives an impression capable of exact reproduction when placed in contact with the proper chemical solutions and subjected to the proper conditions. Experience is the solution and condition that develops the mind and brings into play the unconsciously absorbed information as well as the directly acquired knowledge gained from books, lectures and similar sources.

It may be an academic question which of the two has the ascendancy in power, the distinctly sought or the unconsciously absorbed knowledge. There are those who will believe that the acquirements of indirection and unconsciousness are probably the more weighty factors. Whether such be the fact or not, the mere raising of the question demonstrates clearly that both are of conspicuous force and must be competently guided to the end that the result upon the mentality of the subjects may be wholesome and beneficial.

Because of the extent to which the public is subject to the moving picture, for it moves vast audiences to cheers, to tears, to laughter, to anger, or any other emotional condition designed by the creator of the picture, a supervision must be exercised, the object of which shall be to entertain the public to its ultimate benefit and edification. It will not produce a sufficiently high standard to show pictures which just pass the scrutinizing censorship of the subsidized and not too moral guardians of the peace and morality of the community. A decided object of bettering the mental, moral and physical conditions and surroundings of the witnesses of the pictures; of giving them the laugh that will drive depression far away; of teaching them how to live better without increased expense; of giving them a comprehensive knowledge of the various parts of the country and the civilized world; of informing them how the government, in its various departments, is operated and controlled; these and many kindred topics or subjects must positively tend toward the mental and moral uplift of the people who witness these exhibitions.

Neither an unclean picture nor a salacious story can possibly have a wholesome result; the possession of the one and and the telling of the other should be made crimes of equal gravity in the purview of the law.

Judgment is coming, surely and steadily; the sturdy morality of the common people will soon make itself felt; the wealthy may be morally lax, but the poor pride themselves on their virtue. There is no more thoroughly virtuous set among our vast population than the family of the wage earner, and there never will be. So, Mr. Exhibitor, if you think in presenting pictures of degradation and nastiness to the audiences who pay the small admission fee, you are pleasing a community and satisfying a demand, you are mistaken. The wage earner, because of his moderate means, may be slow to action, but just as surely as he that sows to the wind reaps the whirlwind, just so sure are you of getting your just deserts.

Villainy never became popular in any very extensive locality; it has been tolerated and endured for a time where it could not be suppressed but eventually it has always been brought to a somewhat sudden and inglorious end. The greatest villain of them all is the exhibitor of the unwholesome, wickedly suggestive or salacious picture, and he is doubly so if the picture contain the thought of life as indicated by motion.

Every great opportunity brings with it greater responsibility. The professional exhibitor of motion pictures is in the business primarily for financial gain, but if in seeking profits he sacrifices upon the altar of his avarice the innocent and virtuous, the law will exercise its inexorable penalty and the mental misery of a misapplied activity will collect its toll on toward the end of a misspent life in a retribution and remorse so acute as to eat the vitals out of physical existence and make life itself a burden.

Make no mistake about it, the result is as capable of solution as is any mathematical problem. The News appeals to the maker and exhibitor of action pictures for the best in art, in morals and in education—the very best, nothing less will satisfy.

MR. VANDAL, ECLAIR COMPANY.

Mr. Marcel Vandal, the directeur generale of the Eclair Company of Paris, returned home last Thursday on the steamship "La Savoie." Mr. Vandal, during his sojourn in America, having purchased the ground where the Eclair American Film Factory, is to be built, and having also completed with the architects the plans for a most modern up-to-date and complete film factory, has returned to Paris in order to expedite the shipping from there of the printing machines, perforators, etc., etc. In the next few months the Eclair American factory will be in full operation turning out films.

During his stay in America, Mr. Vandal has made many friends and business acquaintances who will be most happy to have him back, and in the meantime they wish him "bon voyage."

REX COMPANY.

It was our privilege to see the film "Heroine of '76" upon the curtain the other day, and it did our heart good to watch the beautiful effects that opened before our eyes in almost every foot of the film. At the conclusion we turned to Mr. Engel and said "Good! Good!" This is the sort of film the Independents want and what we want to see. It is setting an example that we want others to follow, and it shows that our good friend, Ed. Porter, has not lost his cunning but is able to produce finer work than he ever did in the days of old. We feel sure that Rex under the leadership of Ed. Porter will go forward from success to success, and if he gives us such beautiful films as he has started out to produce, we feel sure that only prosperity stands before the company. It is a well known fact that Ed. Porter is one of the pioneers of the movement, and what there is that he does not know about the business we consider is a very small item. He is in the unique position of being the writer of ninety per cent of his scenarios, directs his own stage, designs his own scenery, and operates his own non-infringing camera. We understand that this first issue, "Heroine of '76," is but the beginning of still greater things for which the exchange men are eagerly looking forward, but as an earnest of what they think, we might point to the fact that there is not one exchange that has seen this film but has ordered it for his patrons.

THANHOUSER RELEASE.

Another Washington picture is issued from the studios of "Thanhouser Company" entitled "For Washington." This picture is completed and put out in the issue Thanhouser style. We have commented so much upon the Thanhouser productions in the past, and can only say that the standard set by them in the past is fully continued in the present picture.

CHAMPION RELEASE.

Still another Washington release is issued by the Champion Film Company under the title of "The Old Man and Jim," which is taken from James Whitcomb Riley's beautiful poem of the same title.

At Petersburg, Virginia, in '65 between Grant and Lee.—We understand from Mr. Dittinfast that the cost to produce this film is approximated at $2,100, and in some of the scenes as many as 100 men were engaged to give realization to the picture field. The cut at the head of this article is one illustration from many, and we feel sure that our readers will appreciate tthe efforts that have been put forth on our behalf by the Champion Film Company.

SOLAX MAKES ANOTHER RELEASE.

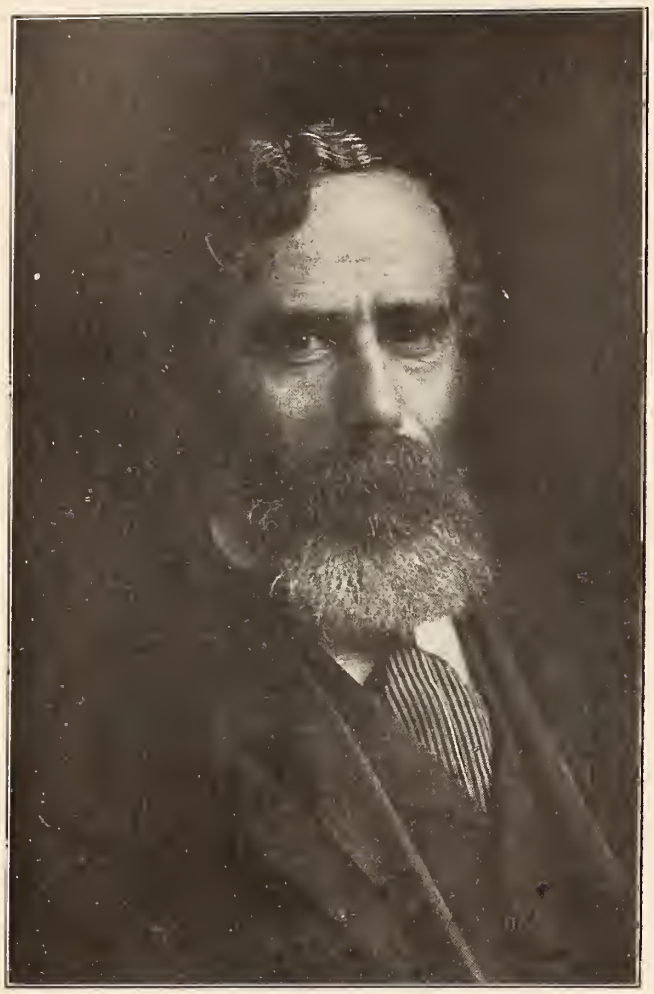
As we go to press we learn the Solax Company is to make two releases a week, beginning March 8th. For a company that has only been three months in existence, this speaks well for them coming as they did in an already crowded market and producing films of such excellent quality.

WHY NOT MOVING PICTURES IN CONNECTION WITH PUBLIC SCHOOL LECTURES?

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

What Froebel did for the children, not only of Germany but of the whole world, one hardworking citizen has done, not only for the city of New York, but for practically the whole United Kingdom, whether in the way of example or practice, for adults, the great mass of children, or children in their uneducated state.

Dr. Henry M. Leipziger, originator of the system of free lectures for the City of New York, has done a greater work than will be realized in this generation. Distance has not yet spread her enchanting veil over this great educator of modern times. The translucence which the future lends to departed genius has not yet lent its halo to one of the greatest of modern adult educators.



Henry M. Leipziger

These free public lectures which have been instituted by Dr. Leipziger are illustrated by means of lantern slides. The fire authorities in their anxiety for the city exchequer have barred one of the most simple and useful means of aid in illustration at these lectures—the moving picture.

It seems to me a great pity that where, comparatively speaking, so few accidents happen in connection with the showing of moving pictures, the lecturers should not be allowed to use them. Slides are very good, and carry out to a certain extent the illustrative idea, but were moving pictures allowed to be employed at these lectures, the attendance would not only be found to be much augmented, but the convictions of the lecturers would be much more forcibly impressed upon the audiences.

In the City of New York there are between one hundred and fifty and two hundred lecture centers, between six and seven hundred lecturers, on over a thousand different subjects. The average attendance at these lectures per year is somewhat over a million people. The audiences comprise all nationalities. Lectures are delivered in Italian, Yiddish, and German, as well as English. The following are some of the subjects upon which lectures are given: Literature, History, Sociology, Art, Music, Astronomy, Descriptive Geography, Travel, etc.

Cannot something be done to bring about the use of the motion picture in connection with these instructive lectures?

Among the names of the lecturers appear those of Hon. Francis P. Bent, Mr. Ezra T. Stanford, Miss Emma R. Steiner, Mr. Herbert L. Bridgman, J. Russel Smith, Ph.D.; Adolphus Knopf, Miss Kate Chittenden, and many others. These lecturers, in this advanced age, when the motion picture is depicting all kinds of scenes, useful and otherwise, in every nook and corner of the city, are being limited to the old fashioned lantern slide. Why? Is it the wish of the multitude that it should be so? No. The limitation is probably due to the opinion of a few of the city officials who, with unthinking energy, pursue the task not only of replenishing but preserving the funds of the exchequer.

'Tis true, the motion pictures could not always be supplied by the lecturers. It would necessarily be an additional expense to the city, but think of the increased and improved means of education for those million odd people—adults who are bringing into the world the future generation in whose hands really rests so much of the future of our country.

Why could not the educational committee of this advanced city—this great metropolis of the new world, set aside a certain fund for the provision of moving pictures to be used in connection with the free public lectures.

Dr. Leipziger has put forth a wonderful effort in the instituting of this system of public lectures. He is the flesh and blood foundation of this "University for the People." All the help possible should be given to him in his good work. The expense would be comparatively little, balanced up against the great amount of good which would unquestionably result from the innovation.

The zealous attention of Dr. Leipziger to things educational in New York, and the voluminous extent of the work which he has accomplished, commend him to all intelligent citizens as a subject of deep admiration, and an inspiration for the improvement of educational vehicles for the diffusion of knowledge to those of small opportunity—for of such consists the bulk of the audiences who attend the public school lectures, not only because they are free, but because there are pictures to be seen.

The nature of Dr. Leipziger's ideals are set forth in the following quotation from his report: "Much remains to be done. Every place where the people have instruction ought to be a beautiful, well-ventilated, spacious, nobly-decorated hall. The words of the lecturers must be true in every respect—in style, in accuracy and in spirit, and this lecture system should aid in making our city the true city of light, the abode of the best type of men and women in the world."

Let us hope that every aid be given him in his noble work, and that the great pleasure giving and educational influence of the motion picture, be coupled with the other knowledge diffusing influences used in the educating of the adult public.

WATCHING THE PICTURES.

H. Jeanval.

'Tis said fools rush in where angels fear to tread. Not having the remotest pretensions to angelhood, I suppose I am the other thing. Still I rush in upon delicate ground and, however true the fool end may be, am determined to say my say. To criticise ladies is not what man aspires to do; but month in and month out, and what is more, day by day, scenes have come on the screen that show a complete lack of true art. Of course, I hear, I only look for faults—that I emphatically deny. That is not criticism, 'tis graft hunting, or the self opinionatedness of swelled heads and sore heads. If, in a peaceful life I tell my children something that gray hairs and years spent in life's battles had taught me, is that not good? It is not acrid criticism, but what a very fallible man thinks a duty. Not to set the world straight—that we believed ourselves able to do when we left the 'Varsity, but now do not aspire to do—but as friendly advice. Always remembering I'd only be too thankful to get advice in return. None of us; no, none of us, know it all!

I venture to say that no capable actress would do on the stage what is done in the moving picture. Why is this? The greatest actress can only perform to the theater's capacity. Our actresses perform to the world.

If the stage demands exactitude, how much more that stage which is the world? My pocketbooks show many notes taken not only here but in other lands. I only take one or two.

Ladies, why is it, for instance, that you in roles as country girls and in homes of poverty will persist in wearing fashionable high priced shoes? Day by day one sees this. A blot upon clever acting and talented concepts of characters.

Again, why do backwoods girls and fisher girls and other girls where, by force of circumstances, such things cannot be, wear their hair in all sorts of fantastic shapes, such as only leisure, or money, can let a girl do?

This is not what we expect from the talent the moving picture companies possess. It would not be tolerated upon the "legit," why here?

Just one other kick—from a friend—in nine cases out of ten the presentation of poverty is ludicrous. Many a brilliant "star" on the stage can act this from personal experience, and is not ashamed to do it. If next to nobody, in our companies has known the stress of "looking for the next meal," I thank God for it, but don't present, from want of knowledge, fantastic stupidities. Any city in a day's wandering's can put this right. As a wanderer in slums of a good many cities, day and night, I know a few theatric daubs of soot on the face and some artificially torn rags do not fill the bill. Audiences know this and comment accordingly.

Sometimes, I suppose, scenario "editors" or stage directors are to blame. No actress is blamed for acting in an inane story, or trying "to make good" with a stupidly ignorant stage setting; but ladies, actresses of the high standing that now perform on the world's stage, the moving pictures, allow no director to compel you to wear coiffures in fishing boats or French shoes in backwoods settlements. You have the same power as on the stage. Use it and give us your talent to the full, unsmirched by foolish blunders, unworthy of any but a cheap, uncultured, slap-stick show.

Some of the critics have somewhat peculiar ideas. I am not dealing with what one may think in the abstract, but of positive facts. Here's an example, thus quoth a New York paper: "A happy ending follows." "Thus" showed the film, the man after all his trials meets his child and dies. This is not a "happy ending," in the usual parlance. Perhaps he had "Hiri kiri" in mind. But we are not Japanese. I have a grim glimmering that some criticisms are written, not after seeing the film, but after reading the synopsis. The writers are advertised as experts—maybe—one not an expert, would beg to submit that synopsis and films are not the same—always. No, sir, not by a long shot!

Oddities on the Screen.—In Thanhouser's "'Phone 1707 Chester," the office clock shows 7:48. Early bird's there! Fine hair the fisher girl has in "Cast up by the Sea," Vitagraph! Quite a coiffure!

ANOTHER INDEPENDENT VICTORY

The General Film Company, of Chicago, recently prosecuted the American Film Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, with a view to getting a temporary injunction restraining them from using their incorporated name.

In a hearing held February 6th before Judge Cooper, motion for a temporary injunction was quashed, and the Judge, as aforementioned, refused the complainant's request relative to the concern.

Chicago Letter

Politics seem to have taken a firm grip on the picture show men of this town. Never before was so much interest shown in a municipal election.

The fact that there is a Hearst candidate in the field has caused exhibitors to exert all energies to accomplish his defeat, owing to the antagonistic spirit the Hearst papers have shown towards the moving pictures in general, and the five-cent theater in particular.

A goodly number of exhibitors and operators recently formed a Moving Picture Men's Club in behalf of Andrew J. Graham, the Democratic candidate who is opposing Harrison, the Hearst man, and on last Friday a committee composed of ten managers and operators waited on Mr. Graham to assure him of their support and arrange for a mass meeting to be held at the Hotel La Salle next Friday afternoon.

The writer was present in the interest of the operators, and their grievances on the license question were presented to the candidate who has given his pledge to use all efforts in the event of his election towards a more equitable license fee and the adjustment of any existing irregularities.

The Sheridan theater on Irving Park Boulevard and Sheridan Road, which has been a complete failure during the past year as a vaudeville house, has found its proper sphere as a moving picture show and is packed every performance, charging ten cents for three reels of pictures and two illustrated songs.

The Garfield Theater, another large house on the West Side, is also a good example . Jones, Limick & Shaefer Company ran this house as a vaudeville theater for over a year but could not make it pay. It has been running as a picture house for the last month and has turned out to be a regular gold mine.

The Plaza Theater on North avenue, which had such a hard battle, is doing a good business at last. Vaudeville and Independent pictures.

It has been rumored that Sittner's North avenue theater at Sedwick and North avenue are to change their policy from vaudeville and put on first run Independent pictures. The house seats 11,000 people.

The Bijou Dream on State street and the Boston theater on Madison street, are drawing big crowds with Independent pictures. In spite of the fact that both houses are surrounded by theaters showing Trust pictures.

The American Film Manufacturing Company are releasing three very good reels during the coming week. On February 9th "On the Installment Plan" and "Too Much Aunt." Both of these subjects are side-splitting comedies. On February 13th, "A Quiet Evening at Home," another rip-roaring comedy, and on February 16th, a Western drama of exceptional merit entitled "In the Land of the Cactus." "The Pittsburg Millionaire," released February 6th, is a decided feature in a dramatic way and is bound to appeal to all.

I spoke last week of the new daylight moving pictures and since then have seen a practical demonstration, and it is all that it claims to be in the way of a moving picture marvel. Below is a clipping from the Scranton, Pa., Tribune-Republican, telling of the happy manner in which daylight pictures were received at Pole's Theater, and what an improvement they work in vaudeville houses.

Bright-Light Pictures Make a Hit at Poli's

A tremendous success was scored by the Bright-Light moving pictures, shown for the first time in Scranton, at the Poli Theater yesterday afternoon. With every light in the theater in use so that the smallest print on the program could be read, the famous method of R. H. Herbst, of Freeland, was given its first Scranton demonstration. In every particular the demonstration was a great success. The audience applauded at the finish of the picture story, proving its hearty appreciation of this new Poli feature.

The Lyric Theater on State street, in the Loop District, has started to run a real continuous moving picture show, keeping open all night, in fact. Jones, Linick & Schaefer Company, who control this house, have practically thrown the key away. An all-night theater running moving pictures—now what do you think of that?

The new Bowmanville Theater, 5137 Lincoln avenue, opened Saturday with first run Independent pictures and illustrated songs. The Bowmanville is owned and managed by Fred Verch and is thorough and complete in every respect.

The operating room is one of the best equipped in the city and Jack Rouse is the operator in charge of the new motiograph outfit. The little town of Oshkosh is raising quite an Independent rumpus of late, according to Julius Stern, who runs the Colonial Theater. A year ago Independent films were unknown in this town. When the Colonial opened with Independent service the other managers all laughed and said it would not last long, but to-day out of four picture houses three are using first run Independent pictures and General Flimco has not got a look in. I told you farther up in this letter about the Bijou Dream Theater on State street, next door to the Orpheum, and how the Independent pictures were making such a hit. Well, below is a copy of a letter from Sig. Faller, general manager of this house, which speaks for itself:

Bijou Dream Automatic Exposition Company

Chicago, Jan. 19, 1911.

Laemmle Film Service,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

You win. Frankly, I had no more idea you could make me like Independent films than the man in the moon. I know now it was because I had never seen the best Independent subjects.

I promised you I would write you a letter like this if you made good. And I repeat, you win. Your Independent films are simply coining money for me. Continue the kind of service you are giving me now and I will stick to you through thick and thin.

Congratulations to the whole Laemmle organization from,

Yours sincerely,
SIG. FALLER,
General Manager.

P.S. I have just seen the new stuff you sent over this morning and it is absolutely great! You win again!

The city health department has registered several kicks of late about poor ventilation in five-cent theaters, and since the West Disinfecting Company, through Lee Frankel, their Chicago representative, have offered a solution to the foul air problem which has been such a menace to the smaller houses.

Carl Laemmle, "The Biggest and Best," is still in town but expects to make a trip to Cuba in a few days to inspect the work of his Imp Company of actors now producing pictures there.

J. J. SULLIVAN.

NICKELODIA NEWS IN BRIEF

Albia, Iowa.—John L. Morgan, of Hiteman, and Thos. Morrish, of Beacon, have decided to start a new moving picture theater in Creston.

Wabash, Ind.—The Harter's Opera House here was destroyed by fire.

Goshen, Ind.—Hal Harrington has opened a new moving picture theater here. It is known as the "Gem."

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Ollie Dempsey's moving picture theater, at 536 West Fifth street, was destroyed by fire.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 7.—At present there is an average of over five hundred visitors a day coming to this city. Some "merry host," eh? This is the best indication that the season is on in full blast, and is also the very best reason for stating that the picture houses and larger theaters are packing them to the doors nightly. Yes, they are doing some great business these days; the old theatrical sign "S. R. O." is a daily and common occurrence.

I notice in various trade papers that many of the manufacturers are "breaking camp" and hiking for other scenes. Now, see here, Mr. Manufacturer, if you want good locality, why don't you come out to these "diggings"? We got the real thing out here. You don't know much about Arkansas, do you? Possibly that's because you have never taken the trouble to investigate its scenic beauty, but I'll say this: If you are looking for the real thing in Nature's theater, the old Ozark territory will hand it to you fresh from the griddle. And when I make this statement it is done so, not in the spirit of any advertising advantage the resort may derive from your visit, but because, in a strictly business sense, we have the goods.

Do you know that we have the finest scenery in the world right at our very doors? We have mountain scenery that can give the Rockies cards and spades and make those primeval hills look like veritable dumping grounds. We have a stretch of prairie land that your horses can gallop over to their heart's content, and we have everything else, in fact, that would tend to make the attempt to take realistic pictures a great success. It isn't necessary to hike to Cuba, as the energetic Imp has done; nor to Los Angeles, as Selig is wont to do. We won't "shoot you up" if you decide to abide with us, and I'll see to it personally that you have the greatest protection in the world.

Just send one of your scouts out in this territory and have him look the ground over, and if he can't find some excellent stage settings, all of which have been carved out by the omnipotent hand of Nature, the greatest builder in the world, then silent as the grave will be my voice on this issue in the future. If there are any among you who desire to while away a few quiet hours of the evening by "bucking the tiger"—whisper it soft and low—I'll see that you get a square deal and not steer you up against any crooked game. If you want to go to church on Sunday, I'll send you to edifices where you will hear the silver tongue orators expounding Scripture in a manner that will make you ponder on the evil of your ways—provided you need food for thought on those lines—and you can see by this that we play no favorites. We would like to number you "among those present," and will further guarantee such publicity as will warm the cockles of your heart. In fact, we stand ready to deliver the goods in any manner, shape and form. It's up to you, Mr. Manufacturer. Don't overlook a good bet.

Things were rather quiet the past week so far as anything startling pertaining to the trade was concerned. Of course, there were rumors galore that at last the managers of this city had united in a stone wall defence and would open their houses in spite of hell—but, bosh, there was nothing came of it. Sunday saw them closed tighter than wax. The poolrooms—sure, they were open. The proprietors were "pinched." Cost them ten bucks, which they paid with a smile that had the famous "Quaker Oats" grin looking like a thunder cloud. I wish they would give the picture people the same run for their money. But far be it from such. They are violators—a menace to the peace and good of the Sabbath. Nothing doing in their line. Some of these days there's going to be a storm break in these parts, and when it comes, glory be, but it will make interesting reading.

Paul Gilmore was here the past week in the "Bachelor." Now, there were some who didn't enthuse over Mr. Gilmore and his production, but Paul, I think, is a rattling good actor. I first met this talented and most pleasant star some few seasons ago in Atlantic City, at which time I was knocking out copy for Young's old ocean pier. Naturally, then, I have a warm spot in my heart for the gentleman. His play gave satisfaction generally, however, and as for his individual work, it was above "knocking."

There were two other old friends of mine here this week—the Martinez. They were on the bill at the Princess. Well do I recall the memorable season that Martinez and his accomplished wife were numbered on the roster of a big stock company with which I was associated. We hit the bumps in Indiana. It was during the season of the panic, when banks were featuring "scrip" and when real money was as scarce as splinters from Noah's ark. Ever hit the bumps in Indiana? Ever go up against an irate and suspicious Indiana landlord? My child, your education has been sadly neglected, and you have not won your bachelor degree in modern theatricals unless you have. Well, we had lots of script—enough to start a "Burning of Rome" conflagration, when, lo and behold, just at the psychological moment, when the trunks had been seized and we were ordered to "camp out," Martinez burst into the picture with a roll of actual coin of the realm big enough to choke a Harlem goat. Vanish the clouds instanter! He was some thoroughbred in those days. Ah, my child, those were happy days—happy days. Martinez's act this week was bigger and better than ever, and I don't say this because of that well-remembered financial stunt he pulled off in the state that George Ade has made famous and Fairbanks has further crowned by the cocktail incident.

The Great Zaemora Family, Mexican aerial artists, headlined the bill the Princess offered this week and deserved their position on the same. George Atkinson also handed out a fine line of comedy, and Herb and Hier were there forty ways with their comedy sketch. Isabel Howell was a most entertaining feature. I recalled having personally played this talented comedienne a few seasons ago in Columbus, O.

All of which reminds me I am in receipt of a letter from my old friend, Frank Duval, of whom there is no better operator in the Buckeye State. Frank and I used to draw money from the same bank when with the Princess Theater in Columbus. Sometimes the money wouldn't be there, and then we'd draw our breath until a deposit was made, but we were all paid in full, and sometimes the other "fullness" followed as a natural course of jollification—but never during business hours. I wouldn't permit that. Frank, however, is now with the Columbus Theater, where he has an excellent position, being chief operator. Frank also has a most talented little stepdaughter who is making a great hit on the road, and a wife who believes that God created but one man—her "hubby"—and then destroyed the die. Frank is working for the right people, let there be no mistake about that. His employers, the Thompson Brothers, are well-known and highly respected in Columbus, and they have one of the prettiest and coziest little houses I have ever been in. Frank writes that the stock company is jamming them in the theater, and the house certainly deserves all the patronage it gets. Frank, let's run "The Miller's Daughter."

If ever there was one thing that reminded one that the spirit of "Dixie Land" has not died out, it was the scene in the Scenic Theater when Biograph's reel, "His Trust," was shown. When that part of the picture showing the boys wearing the Gray and carrying the Bars and Stars of the Confederacy was run off, the theater resounded with good old Rebel yells. Any one who tells you that the South has "forgotten," even though half a century may have elapsed, put him down in the "loony" class, for there is just as much red hot Rebel blood manifested when occasion demands it as there was in the days of '61. I know, for I've seen it. And, by the way, Biograph, that was one of the finest war pictures we have had in many moons.

"Water Lilies," one of those inane and foolish productions that Vitagraph sometimes falls heir to, came to town, and the less said about this effort the better. The young lady should never have been allowed to run at large. Her place was in a padded cell.

Pathe's "Betty Rolls Along" came to town. She did, but the pity of it all is she is liable to roll back this way in something else. Now, "Betty," you've got a good start, so keep on rolling, girlie, for, believe me, you'll never be missed.

Kalem, we liked your story of the two college girls and the little intrigue whereby the brother became the overseer of the plantation owned by the father of the girl's chum. I can't recall the name of this picture, but it was a pretty story, well told, and I certainly am glad that you are coming rapidly forward as the best of the Trust manufacturers. There was a time in Columbus that I insisted for my lecture picture a Kalem for each Sunday, and I got it, too. Sunday, did I say. Yep, that is right; but that was in Columbus, O., not Hot Springs, Ark.

I started out this week with the best intentions in the world of reviewing Independent pictures. Now, at present there is only one house in this city that is running this product—the Orpheum—and the first picture that was flashed on the screen was the Imp, "Keeping His Word"—old as the hills and which that firm should call in; also the Thanhouser reel, "The American and the Queen," both of which have played return dates here. That was enough. I beat it and went to the Scenic. Until the management of the Orpheum gets gumption enough to install a better class of Independent material instead of the commercial junk now coming in there, I suppose we will have to content ourselves with "repeaters" and pictures that have served the cause well for many, many months.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

A CINE TOUR THROUGH MEXICO

3. Among the Aztec Ruins

Where now stands the city of Mexico, was once a lake, one of the five which were known to the ancients under various names. Here, centuries ago, beat the heart of the great Aztec Empire. The early history of the Vale of Anahuac, now the valley of Mexico, is shrouded in mystery. Probably the best known of the earlier peoples were the Toltecs, who advanced from the north some time about the sixth century.

In architecture of noble proportions, Hindustan and Egypt come the nearest to providing us with parallels of Toltec art. In fact, the word "Toltec" in Mexico has become synonymous of "architect."

These ancient people were well advanced in agriculture, were fine workers in metal, invented a system of time which was later adopted by the Aztecs, and were, indeed, the true founders of the civilization that was in a state of considerable advancement when the Spaniards conquered the country.

All this it is necessary to remember when one visits the long-forgotten temples and monuments of the Aztecs.

Our first visit to one of these ruins was made as a detour from El Parque, on the road to Cuernavaca. Our trip to the Cerro de Xochicalco was full of interest, though the journey was tedious and fatiguing. It is one thing to load your camera equipment into a touring car for a fifty-mile spin through New York State, but it is quite different to sit astride of a burro while he negotiates six leagues of what he believes to be a road, deep "barrancas" alternating with Indian villages perched on the solid rock. But an archaeologist would willingly endure ten times the hardships we met, to see just what we saw. In the midst of these mountain fastnesses is a small plain, from the level of which rises up a wedge of solid rock some 300 feet high. The summit seems unattainable, until we discover an iron ladder set into the rock by the government, who are sparing no expense to explore and preserve all these ancient temples. Arriving at the top, the panorama first takes our attention, and next the inevitable pyramid and temple. Who the builders of this temple were no one knows. The base of the temple is surrounded by a wide ditch very plainly marked. Five spiral terraces lead to the summit, and supporting these spirals are bastions at regular distances made of stone joined by cement. The top is a wide esplanade, on which are three truncated cones, in shape having probably been something between Egyptian pylons and Hindu tapering pillars.

These ruins are not Aztec; they are not Toltec. The figure of the lizard which characterizes so much of the Aztec sculpture is entirely wanting. The rock temple is very deeply carved with figures, although there has yet to be found any trace of the tools with which this carving was done. Blocks of porphyry seven feet long and three feet thick were brought from a distance, and hauled bodily up the sheer face of the cliff, set in place, and then carved.

Beneath this rock are wonderful caves. We had heard of them, and had brought along magnesium wire and flash powder enough to illumine the Styx. The Indians told strange tales of scorpions and serpents which, from indications of these playful creatures already observed, had a semblance of feasibility, and we really didn't want the old caves filmed any way.

The days of the traveling picture show in the United States are numbered. Almost every small town now has its nickelodeon, and even the western mining camps are no longer the "easy money" they used to be to any man with any kind of a picture machine and any kind of films.

There is good money to be picked up, however, by a traveling outfit through Mexico. But it should never be attempted by any one who does not know the country, and is unable to do some hard riding.

In one little town, with a population of usually around 1,800, there is an influx during Holy Week of some 120,000 pilgrims. This town is not even marked on the railroad maps, and it takes two days' ride on horseback to reach it; there is no wagon road. I venture to say that anyone with the grit to set up a stand during that week would come out with several thousand pesos. We ran across this place, the name of which you couldn't pronounce if I wrote it, on our way to the Aztec ruins at Mitla. These are said to be the finest relics of the Aztec occupation of the country, and certainly the great roofless temples and pillars, carved with wonderful designs, are of great interest to an archæologist.

There is nothing at Mitla, however, or within a hundred miles of it for the exhibitor, but between this and Oaxaca City there is good scenic work for the camera man.

Near Oaxaca we were fortunate in filming a little-known industry, the culture of cochineal insects. At some unknown date, the Zapotec Indians discovered that these little creatures at a certain time of the year contained a rich red color, and they used the dye thus obtained in coloring their sarapes or blankets. In these days aniline dyes have taken the place of the cochineal, but the industry is still carried on in some degree by the Indians. The cochineal harvest was under way when we visited the district. The insects stay on the leaf on which they are hatched, and gradually swell up in size until they are something like a small flea. They are then brushed off into an open-mouthed bag and placed in boiling water to kill them. Next is a natural sun-drying process, and then the making up into ounce packages. When dried, it takes about 70,000 insects to weigh a pound. We had no compensating lens or micro-attachment with us, so could not get much detail to show the actual shape of the insects, but the operations were interesting.

All considered, our trip to Mitla ruins was disappointing from a camera man's standpoint, and the road is one of the worst in Mexico.

Australian News

December 9, 1910.

Up to the time of writing seven picture shows have been doing excellent business in Newcastle, N. S. W.

Picture shows are running just as smoothly as ever in Tasmania; the craze for theater building has opened up in several parts of the country.

The English Amusement Co. have decided to start operations at Launceston at once, the cost being estimated at £15,000.

Vic's pictures, of Fremantle, have opened up in the open air Star Skating Rink, Perth, this summer; the chief attraction being the first of Mr. C. Spencer's bush-ranging series, "The Life of John Vane."

Every success is prophesied by the press, the show being under the supervision of the ever-ready Victor J. Newton, late treasurer of West's W. A.

West's, in the Queens Hall Perth, and at Kings Theater, Fremantle, were showing just recently "Uncle Tom's Cabin," Vitagraph portrayal of the famous story of the "Ante Bellum Days.' Crowded houses witnessed this wonderful production both on the gold fields and at the coast.

A broad smile covered the face of Mr. Albert Clark, manager for W. A., at the evening's entertainment, when orders were given for the "House Full" sign to be put up.

The Animated pictures of the Melbourne Cup are always looked forward to by the racing enthusiasts of Australia. The Gaumont Co., of London and Paris, who have established agencies throughout Australia, have produced a splendid picture of the great race. It was the only picture of the event shown in the principal halls of Sydney at the matinees on the following day of the race. Crowded houses at West's, Spencer's, National Amphitheater and Clem Mason's Queens Hall proclaim it as a "Headliner" in the motion picture art. Several other firms secured a splendid representation of the event.

Pathé Frères, Australia, announce that they have received a cable from Mr. Chas. Pathé saying that the firm have succeeded in producing a non-inflammable film, capable of sustaining the most severe tests. For years film manufacturers have been trying to find an absolutely safe non-inflammable film, but without success.

Pathé Frères state that in four weeks' time all subjects released by them will be printed on this non-inflammable film, and that from December 1st, at any place showing Pathé subjects, there will be absolute security to the public. It is the firm's intention to organize a public demonstration on the arrival of the new films.

The pictured production of the Johnson-Jeffries fight, which has been so eagerly looked forward to, has at last been shown in this part of the world under the McMahan management. The Opera House, Wellington, New Zealand, was the scene of the event on Wednesday evening (November 16th). Reports from Wellington state that hundreds were unable to obtain admission. The Wellington papers declare the pictures to be singularly clear and comprehensive.

The preliminary items and episodes are said to be of an interesting character, while the contest itself is described as being vividly depicted. Widespread interest has been excited throughout Maoriland.

The mystery is, says an Australian paper, how it comes that Maoriland is ahead of the Commonwealth in this particular acquisition.

R. J. PALMER.

SEEN ON THE CURTAIN

By Walton

The Redskin's Secret—(Bison).—Along the usual lines; an Indian's devotion to a white girl only to find all is vain. The story of long self-sacrifice and loyalty to the girl from childhood's days is well limned; the Indian scenes and the river scenery—Bisonesque. Whilst these stories, necessarily, have somewhat of a sameness, there is no doubt of their unbounded and continued popularity.

The Reporter's Romance—(Solax).—A girl reporter sets out to fill an assignment dealing with the underworld. Frankly — I speak with some slight experience of story-getting in odd and sometimes tight corners—she does not act as the capable women do who write for newspapers. Nobody but a "cub" would try to write notes amongst things, and I question the "cub's" doing so. The girl, under threats, tries to rob a house and she finds a husband. Very pretty, but, like most attempts at filming newspaper work, artificial, verging upon the ridiculous.

Coward or Hero—(Vitagraph).—The point brought out in this moving story is the latent strength that often lies hid behind an outward appearance of weakness. As one born in a region where coal mines dot the hills, I thought more of the film as a whole than to carp at details. It is a strong story that anyone who has been in the "seams" will appreciate. Mayhap the flooding scenes were too harrowing, but the teaching of the production holds eternally true, because it's the truth.

The Marked Dollar—(Pathe).—A completely unlikely yarn, altogether too jumpy. A little girl marks a dollar and put it in her father's pocketbook that he may buy a toy. He goes to town, sells his master's cattle for $30,000, sticks the whole thing loosely in a back pocket—which nobody but an idiot would do—and goes to have a drink; and, of course, the wallet is stolen, and, of course, he is arrested. As the robbers flee one of their hats flies; the accused's little girl picks it up, is given a dollar—her marked dollar; then she chases off to the thief's wife, who delivers to her the $30,000. Then all is lovely. Pathe calls that a story. Shades of Hugo and Dumas, how are the mighty fallen!

The Kleptomaniac's Repentance—(Gaumont).—The story is not worthy of Gaumont. A rich woman steals another lady's ring at a gathering. This the thief slips into the apron-pocket of a servant, who is at once denounced by everybody, even her husband—what the mischief a gardener, in that dress, is doing in a salon, deponent knoweth not—arrested and sent to prison. Upon her return there are many pretty scenes with her child—her husband is a pitiless brute. At last the thief, dying, confesses. That wronged wife flies to her husband's arms! Minerva to the rescue! The wife sustains her role as only an artiste can.

Easy Coin—(Lubin).—A modification of an old story. A lazy vagabond gets a good-natured crowd to clear away the snow by howling that he has lost a dollar. It makes a laughable series, especially when the crowd gets "wise."

Will It Ever Come to This?—(Lubin).—Picturing the time if man and woman change places and what would happen. The actors make the best of it and keep the folk in fits of laughter.

The Visit of a Friend—(Itala).—Trick photography plus rough-and-tumble.

A New Kind of an Armchair—(Itala).—A grim attempt to be funny and utterly unworthy of such a capable firm as Itala.

A Noble Heart—(Powers).—The fair leading lady filled her role well. The story is how a girl—who knows what unrequited love is—sends back a lover, who evidently could do much to heal her wounds, to a sorrowing sweetheart. I don't admire the gas asphyxiation business, nor understand young ladies entering a young man's bedroom.

Three Men and a Girl—(Vitagraph).—The theme of the story is a well-worn one, but the acting of the two old guardians and the bright humor of the young lady makes one overlook all that. The film is an interesting, clean, live one that is certain to win favor everywhere as it deserves.

Gasoline for a Tonic—(Pathe).—A pseudo-comedy with a "chaser."

How Max Went Round the World—(Pathe).—Max sets off as a "globe trotter," skips out of the train, so soon as his wife's back is turned, and has a night with the boys. He's carried home and dumped in his drawing-room and explains to his wife next morning how there has been a terrible wreck and so he has returned. In due course cables come to his wife, purporting to be from him, from far-distant lands. His wife has suspicions and the "fur and feathers fly." In the end she forgives. The acting and photography are excellent. The theater rang with laughter all through.

A Robust Patient—(Selig).—A sturdy fellow feels unwell, bids his wife a fond farewell and sets off for a sanitarium. By a sad mischance he gets into a private lunatic asylum, where he is dieted, trained and all the rest. His trials and tribulations keep everyone laughing.

Painless Extraction—(Eclair).—A thief secures some chloroform at the dentist's and puts everyone he meets to sleep with it, with ludicrous results.

Killing the Fly—(Eclair).—An irascible colonel, tormented by a fly, orders a soldier to kill it. He proceeds and before he has done he wrecks the house and creates a riot on the streets.

When a Man's Single—(American).—A young man gets up with a "grouch," insults his wife and she goes home. He tries to keep house with disastrous consequences. He then engages cooks with more lamentable results. His wife returns, made up as a colored woman. The result of their make-up kisses is laughable.

With Interest to Date—(Edison).—Machinery, of course, likewise good photography, also of course. Story: A fellow does a mean trick to another man, the meanest and most contemptible of all tricks—he steals his ideas. The wronged one offsets this by getting hold of a private code cable, seducing an employee of the first man into translating it and then makes a man represent somebody else, thus obtaining a contract. When lie meets lie then comes the tug of war. It's obvious to any right-minded person that the atmosphere of this reel is charged with morality of the highest. Eheu! mayhap, taking all into consideration, this is the psychological moment when such a film is very much apropos.

The Dream—(Imp).—A young fellow does not appreciate a charming wife and instead of coming home on the anniversary of their marriage, goes off with his typewriter and gets blind drunk. In this condition he returns to his house and behaves like a brute to his wife. He then falls asleep and in his dream sees her act as he has done. When he awakes the stress of the dream is still upon him and he cannot believe his own eyes when he sees the faithful wife. The dream has cured him. The idea is well carried out; there is no difficulty in anyone following the story. It is a strong film that will tell its clean, righteous message wherever shown.

The Old Curiosity Shop—(Thanhouser).—To a lover of Dickens a pure delight. The salient points of the story have been taken and thus the film moves along so as to afford an intelligent conception of the original. Needless to say, the immortal Little Nell is acted by the charming Thanhouser child, with a pure childishness that is altogether tenderly true. The by-play of this little one shows a grasp of the character simply marvelous. Of course, one misses the atmosphere when the scenes are in the open; the old hedge lined lane where Little Nell and her Grandfather wandered and the square, embattled, ivy-clad tower crowning God's acre where the Grandfather joined his guardian angel. The condensation has been thoughtfully done, by one who evidently knows the possibilities and limitations of the reel. A worthy production that must needs win its reward.

Red Man's Wrath—(Bison).—The fury and deadly earnestness of the red man, the undying, relentless hatred and determination to revenge, especially where the squaw is concerned, stands out in lurid light. The backgrounds are such as throw up the chase, on land and water, till the final death struggle. The last scene is in the peaceful woods, when wrath is quenched.

When Love Was Blind—(Thauhouser).—A reel telling an interesting and stirring tale, where love lights up the somber scenes. A blind girl is in her home, when it takes fire. Her helpless maid leaves her to yell for help. A young man rushes in and rescues the girl, getting bad facial disfigurements. The young folk marry, and she undergoes an operation by which she recovers her sight. Yearning to see her baby, she pulls off the bandages too soon and is blind forever. The situations are well handled; the acting of the principals shows a true grip of the characters. The work of this firm of late has been not only artistic but throbbing with that clean, human life which is winning high praise.

A Wife's Love—(Powers).—The old gentleman we all rejoice to see is on the screen, is not a bit suited for the impersonator of a crusty, ill-tempered old curmudgeon. The outcast daughter brings about a father's death, as it turned out, all unnecessarily. Pathetic—exceedingly.

Little Dorothy—(Powers).—A snappy piece of drollery, where our old friends move and live and have their being on the curtain. The mischievous child holds the center of the stage; she is delightful. Good honest fun.

Twilight of a Soldier's Life—(Gaumont).—A fine piece of lifelike work. An old soldier is taken from a Home by his son, to live with him. The children are delighted with Grandpa; the mother, however, ill-treats the old man. Her part is grossly overacted. In the end Madame repents. The change from a vixen to a loving woman is a fine piece of work.

The Sin Unpardonable—(Essanay).—A wild, fierce set of happenings in the Canadian woods. Forest scenes are usually fine; as to the actors there is no lack of vigor or grit; note well the wife. A lumberman has a friend that he brings to his home, where he grossly insults the wife. Then comes a grim fight in the forest; the husband thinks he has killed him, but he comes to the cot penitent. The synopsis says "With a broken and contrite heart the poor fellow sinks on his knees before Martha." Will some one please explain the title?

Her Chum's Brother—(Kalem).—A bright, interesting and capable production that it is a pleasure to watch. The story turns upon a young Cuban who falls in love with the photo of his sister's school chum. He gets a position as superintendent of the girl's father's orange grove, but their love is frowned upon by the father. The girl goes to visit her chum in Cuba, and then the brother returns and reveals himself. The orange groves and general staging are excellent, the acting just what it ought to be.

Trailed by an Indian—(Pathe).—Two discharged cowboys steal their master's child. The restoration is brought about by an Indian after a wild, adventurous and fierce chase. It takes Bison to adequately tackle such a subject, if there is to be the local color and entourage.

The Sailor's Return—(Urban).—A sailor sails for Newfoundland in order to pay the rent for his sweetheart's father. A fiendish landlord persecutes her, tells her the ship is lost and is just gloating over her misery when the sailor returns and smites him. The harbor scenes are beautiful in photography and selection; as are the cottage scenes. One thing astonishes me: how so small a boat crossed the Atlantic. These are not the days of Columbus, Hudson or Cabot. Moreover, in the letter it is a schooner that is wrecked, on the film it is a sloop that returns.

Scenes in Jersey—(Urban).—St. Heliers, Orgueil Castle and the lighthouse series are very good.

Changing the Cook—(Melies).—One of those rough-and-tumble ranch scenes full of the sort of fun there current. The boys give the various cooks the time of their lives. They finally succumb to a strong-minded female of uncertain age, with a very strenuous way of expressing her wishes.

The Lover and the Count—(Edison).—A downright funny concoction wherein "Bumptious" acts up to his fame. The lover (Bumptious) is favored by the father, but not by the mother, who desires a Count with the ominous name of "Penniless"—Sansfrancs. This lover disguises himself as a maid and, with a friend, manages to lock up father, mother and count, and to be married by the parson the Count brought to do the deed for him. The photography is excellent, as are the stage setting and the general acting. The reel is "linked sweetness, long-drawn out."

For Remembrance—(Reliance).—Once seen the acting of the old cavalier will never be forgotten. It is tenderly beautiful. The sweet girl in her trials and genuine girlishness won the hearts of the audience. (She has already made a very deep impression by her utter purity in all she touches.) The story of the man's self-sacrifice to help the girl, and his greater self-abnegation in giving her to her youthful lover, is skilfully worked out, even to the tender dramatic touch at the end. The boarding-house folk are the thing—to the life. More than one scene deserves to be limned by a capable artist—and kept.

A Wife's Calvary—(Ambrosio).—The wife and child of a brutal sot leave him and are taken care of by a kind-hearted banker. The sot leaves his job and, with some cronies, attempts to rob this very banker. He gets into the house through the room where his wife and child are sleeping. The banker hears the noise and, entering, shoots the reprobate.

Tweedledum Within a Cask—(Ambrosio).—This funny gentleman's exploits are in the winter. There is a series of realistic snow scenes, wherein winter sports play "first fiddle."

Two Notable Films

His Trust—(Biograph).—Amongst the many fine films that are now being produced to the honor of moving pictures this stands in the very front rank. To one who has "smelt powder," the majority of battle scenes are simply theatric. These are marvels of realism. It is altogether a superb war drama. It is more, it deals with the life that lies behind the battlefield—home, wife, child—told with a remarkable fidelity. A Confederate officer going to the war confides wife and child to a trusted negro servant. He dies for his Flag amidst the fury and blare of the fight. At home nothing remains but his sword. In the grim hatefulness of war the Union soldiers burn the widow's home, from which are rescued child and sword, by the loyal servant. When all is gone the mother and the child sleep in peace, with father's sword on the wall, whilst the trusty slave sleeps on the "cold ground" outside. The tale is shot through and through with sorrow and sacrifice. It is dealt with by a master hand. The stage setting reveals "Him who knows," the acting of all to be commended, but the widow and the slave are so true to life they live. To those who have known the stress and villainy of real war, it is real; to those whose good fortune has protected them, it is a revelation. The whole a splendid presentation, an honor to every soul concerned in its production.

His Trust Fulfilled—(Biograph).—This, the continuation of "His Trust," is a tale of nobility of character beyond criticism. The old negro stands by the dying mother, protects his master's orphan child, with his own savings. She goes to school and thinks 'tis her own money the lawyer uses. The bright schoolgirl and the ragged negro on the same picture is dramatic. Art on a high plane. The girl marries well and departs to a new life, wholly unconscious of the sacrifice of the old and faithful negro, staunch to "Marsa" and "Missie" of the long years before. The last picture was staged by a man with a grip on the story. The poor old white-haired man gazing in his loneliness at "Marsa's" sword, whilst the stately lawyer, for the first time, shakes hands with "the nigger." That is the kernel, the motive, the teaching of this splendid work. Here we have self-sacrifice, loyalty, abnegation, effacement, all presented in a poor old man. No more vivid presentment of life—life on "the higher table-lands"—was ever thrown on the screen, to teach the magnificence of man at his best, than this tenderly strong picturizing of the Brotherhood of Man, in all its "beauty of holiness."

Il Trovatore—(Pathe).—A magnificent production. There is no need to tell the wild tale which Verdi clothed in sweet music—the whole world knows it in detail. Count di Luna has two sons: one is stolen out of revenge by Azucena, the Gipsy, who rears him as a troubadour; hence the name Il Trovatore. Manrico wins the love of a beautiful lady, Leonora. The then Count di Luna wants her also, and provokes a duel with his unknown brother in which Manrico is treacherously stabbed. Leonora, believing him dead, prepares to enter a convent, but is seized by the Count and rescued by Manrico. The wedding is arranged in Leonora's castle. When going to the altar Manrico hears that his supposed mother is to be burnt by the Count. He rushes off to save her, is seizel by the Count's men and thrown into the same dungeon as Azucena. Leonora can only see her lover by promising to be the Count's bride. In the dungeon the lovers say farewell, she dying of poison she has taken. The Count enters and, seeing what has happened, orders Manrico's execution. Then Azucena tells him he has murdered his own brother, and the opera closes upon the Count's horror and wild remorse.

Such a story, fraught with passion, throbbing with the most intense emotions of the human heart, offers a splendid field for the highest talent in the dramatic world. The film is thronged with "stars" in the profession, garbed and robed with an exactitude that reveals a master-hand. The settings are no painted gimcracks, but real grim castle and fortalice, keeps hoary with age, whose every stone tells of just such scenes as athe re-enacted therein. The staging of the whole is an education in itself. Such scenes as "Leonora pleading for Manrico," "Manrico's rescue of Leonora," "The Wedding Party on the Castle Steps," and the final "Dungeon" scene, are glittering gems in the regal crown which this work is. Artistically and photographically it is a chef d'œuvre.

Nor is that all; a special arrangement of Verdi's opera goes with the film and thus the music-lover hears the well-known strains as the living scenes pass on. No one can doubt the success of this idea. The audience sat entranced as the sad wail of "Ah che la morte" floated through the theater, where everyone gazed spellbound at the passionate scene on the curtain.

In parts one shudders in horror, in places thrills with compassion, but ever in deep admiration of the superb production, rarely equalled, and I fain would say, never surpassed—worthy to go with the music of a genius.

A poem in beauty, an epic in tenseness and a victory for Moving Picturedom.

Mr. Mortimer, of the Mortimer Film Cleaner Co., has advised us that he is having a large number of requests for his booklet, which is advertised in our columns, and that the sales of his Cleaner are increasing daily.

GASTON MELIES IN SAN ANTONIO

You cross the primitive swinging bridge that spans the beautiful winding San Antonio River at the Hot Wells and you are strolling aimlessly along, deeply absorbed in contemplating the primeval loveliness which characterizes the scenery in that locality, when suddenly the still and balmy air is shattered by piercing, blood-curdling yells and is riddled by the discharge of many sixshooters, as a band of half-naked savages gallop past you, hotly pursued by demoniac cowboys, firing at the fugitives with deadly aim.

Not a little startled, you glance about, seeking a place of shelter to avoid being either shot or scalped in the fracas. Ah! Near at hand you espy a large two-story green structure and you make for it in haste. As you round the house at an accelerated pace, you are astounded to perceive a man choking a beautiful girl to death, snarling as he does so. "I have you at my mercy now!"

Every spark of your manhood aroused, you shout, "Stop" and rush forward to prevent the foul murder by knocking out the brains of the villain, when that individual, anticipating your intention, but never letting go his strangle-hold, orders in a matter-of-fact tone of voice: "Now don't butt in and spoil the act."

Drama Canning Factory

Dazed by this succinct remark, you stop to take stock of the situation. An upward glance discloses a large sign on the front of the building the words, Star Film Ranch." Then at once you realize that you are within the confines of the company that has been "canning drama" in the vicinity of San Antonio since November 1, 1910.

An ideal spot for the staging of such production. Rippling with joyous life is the beautiful, picturesque San Antonio River, giant trees fringing its border, garlanded and festooned with Spanish moss. Near at hand are the quaint old missions where tragedies and romances sufficient to afford inspiration to the most unimaginative of actors have been consummated. These are only a couple of the many scenic possibilities afforded in this vicinity.

Average Two Reels a Week

A year ago Gaston Melies, owner of the Star Film Company, brought his actors to San Antonio where many reels of film were taken for the amusement of the American public. Last November he returned with a company of ten actors besides his corps of assistants. Five real, regular Texas cowboys and a string of cow ponies were recruited here. Since that time on an average of two reels a week, each reel 1,000 feet in length, have been "canned" and send broadcast over the country.

Most of the pictures enacted by the Star Film Company deal with the many phases of Western life, a subject prolific with dramatic incidents and of a character demanded more and more by the American people. About ninety per cent of the Western pictures now being shown were produced by this company, many of them being enacted at the "Ranch."

The work of bringing a picture to the finished state in which it is seen and admired in multitudinous nickel theaters throughout the country is an elaborate process, requiring an abundance of time, money and patience on the part of the promoter, and actors with true dramatic instincts. Ideas are the first things required. These are received from all classes of people from dramatists down to the thoroughly illiterate. Those that can be used are accepted and paid for and the others sent back. These ideas are then sent to New York, where they are made into plays containing a caste and divided into scenes, much as the ordinary play, only the directions for acting are very replete. No lines for the actors are contained.

This scenario then comes back to the stage manager who revises it to suit local conditions, posts the caste on the call board, orders the painting of scenes required and is then ready to rehearse the picture. The actors are assembled, the scenario read and discussed and then rehearsal begins. Sometimes a scene can be rehearsed in two or three minutes, or it may take that many hours. When all is in readiness, the camera is set and the recording of the picture begins. If the scene is enacted in the studio the operator can keep grinding right along; if outside, the camera must be frequently moved to keep in range of the acting.

Upon completion of the picture, the negative is developed at the "Ranch" and one print is made. If this is satisfactory, the negative is sent to the factory in New York, where many positives are made. These are released in various cities all over the country on a given date and are eagerly inspected by thousands of people.

Gaston Melies is at the head of the Star Film Company and before coming to this country was known in France as the producer of the most wonderful trick pictures ever exhibited. He has been here about three years now and his productions have found marked favor with the American public.

William Paley, "the recording angel" of the outfit, is a veteran moving picture man. With his hand turning the crank he "cans" the scenes as they are reeled off. He was working with Edison when the latter invented the camera which has allowed many people to become familiar with theatrical scenes which would have otherwise been prohibited to them. He went through the Spanish war in the wake of the troops, was laid up in Cuba with the yellow fever, was on one of the ships at the battle of Santiago and is still in the game, enjoying it as much as ever.

In his capacity as stage manager of the company, the brunt of the actual production falls on the shoulders of William F. Maddock, a quiet, alert young man fit to bear the strain if ever man was. Trained for his position by seven years as an actor, four years as assistant to Edward E. Rose, the dramatist, he directs the acting with vim and vigor pleasant to behold. Utterly absorbed in his work, he forgets trivialities and in living through a scene is apt to be parted from portions of his wearing apparel, discovering himself at the end in a sad state of dishabille.

Actors Improvise Lines

No lines go with the play but to make the scenes more realistic, the actors often improvise them. A playwright could build a successful manuscript on the sentences that are uttered, for they come spontaneously to the lips of the actors and are just the right thing at just the right time.

However, at times the sayings are ludicrous. On one occasion a dramatic scene was being played in which a man, his daughter and her lover figured. One of the others of the caste was delegated to open a door of the room at a certain moment and summon the father outside, so as to allow the young couple to get in some strong acting. Complying with instructions he stuck his head into the room and stammered excitedly, "Say, Bill, come here. Big Ben has caught a pig!" This really was the truth but it came in so oddly that all three in the picture roared with laughter, thus spoiling the scene, for the camera was taking it all down.

So whole-heartedly do the actors enter into their parts that mishaps sometimes occur. A scene was being portrayed wherein one man hit another in the face. So realistically was this carried out that after a couple of rehearsals the latter's features began to swell alarmingly. Mr. Haddock, seeing that another blow would about finish the abused actor, advised that the former throw the contents of his glass of beer, instead of using his fists to such advantage. So next time he threw not only the contents but also the glass at the other's head, which resulted in that sore-tried gentleman demanding either an apology or a fight to the finish. The apology was, of course, forthcoming.

A Big, Happy Family

The studio is a busy place indeed. To one side the scene painter is busy and at the other carpenters are at work. When Mr. Haddock shouts "Three!" the actors get down to business. With heroism never excelled, tenderfoot slays the bold, bad man of chaps and sombrero and afterward borrows a cigarette from the late deceased while waiting for the next act. And what a great big, happy family the company is. They enter into play with as much zest as they put in their acting. Riding bucking broncos, roping each other when least expected, playing pranks on the girls, all are things that go to make up their round of amusement.

In speaking of the work, the company and other matters, Mr. Haddock said: "If any one imagines this is an easy occupation, they have only to try it, to be disillusioned. Patience is required in prodigious quantities and time must also be forgotten. Often we will labor a whole day on a scene before we get it just right. We are apt to traverse miles of the country in this vicinity before just the right setting is found. Mr. Melies is a stickler for perfection. He spares neither time nor expense in getting things as they should be.

"A picture which we contemplate producing in a couple of months is, 'The Siege of the Alamo.' Already the scenario is being prepared and has necessitated delving into the old archives to obtain the correct historical setting and the infinite number of details required to be known. Of course, it would be impossible to give the siege in its entirety, but the incidents of most historic interest will be faithfully portrayed. The Alamo as it now stands does not resemble its appearance at the time of the famous battle, so we are building an exact reproduction of the structure as it then looked. Several hundred men will be required to act for the picture.

"It may be that Mr. Melies will decide to make San Antonio his headquarters. In that case, the factory will be moved here from New York. It was his intention to spend six months in this vicinity when we came here in November, but he likes this section so well that he may locate permanently."

CORRESPONDENCE

Co-operation with the Schools

February 3, 1911.

Editor, Moving Picture News.

Dear Sir:—For obvious reasons, I do not wish my name nor that of my town published. Mine is the only theater run by a woman in this locality (which is not a thousand miles from Chicago). I want to tell you of an idea along educational lines that worked out well.

I had noticed that a great many of the youngsters used Brownie cameras, and being closely associated with one of our school teachers, I was often shown pretty little vistas of the country around here that the children had made. I thought out a plan for a photographic competition amongst the "kiddies," and it took just two mornings to complete the arrangements.

I formed an examining committee of the two school principals, the one Kodak dealer, both newspaper editors, the mayor of the city and the marshall.

The papers gave us double space at reduced rates, and we had a few thousand dodgers printed outlining the proposition, which was as follows: School children having cameras of any kind were to go out and make pictures of local points of interest. These the photo supply house developed free of charge, and the best twenty-five of them were made up into lantern slides.

On a previously announced evening, the adjudication took place at my picture theater. The committee were given reserved seats in the best part of the house, and the slides were, after a few words of explanation, thrown on the screen, numbered. The committee then announced the eight or nine best, commending, of course, the general quality of the work. These selected slides were then repeated, and from them the winners chosen.

The result as announced by the mayor, met with general approval, and the prizes, given willingly by local merchants, were awarded.

Only two days after the event we were requested to repeat the competition, making the conditions a little less general. The second efforts are now under way, and if the first one is any indication of the interest taken in the scheme, we shall have to order roll tickets more frequently.

I don't say this would work in every place. But it worked here, and I am only running my own show. I have derived many good things from the Moving Picture News, so if this is any use to anyone else, put it down to a desire to see the educational picture scheme go ahead.

M. A. T.,
Michigan.

MOVING PICTURE THEATERS AND THE EDUCATIONAL MOVEMENT

Editor, Moving Picture News.

Dear Sir:

I have read with much interest the notes in your own paper and the daily press relative to the adoption of moving pictures in schools, and would like to say something which may be of use to my fellow-exhibitors. Out here in the West, I suppose the picture show has got as solid a foothold as anywhere else, and possibly the business is on a rather steadier basis. At any rate, it is not difficult to estimate one's average receipts, for in a well-managed show they do not show much tendency to vary. I have heard a number of the exhibitors discussing the trend of educational pictures. A great number of them seem to consider the idea beneath their notice. Others display their ignorance by absolutely ridiculing the idea, and still others, who ought to know better because they are "somebodies" in the cities they live in, speak of what they will do to block the movement by getting their local councils to enact restrictive laws that will be hard to get around.

The wise exhibitor will see that moving pictures in the schools have GOT to come. The children of to-day are being educated to the enjoyment at least of picture shows, and these children are the sons and daughters of those who have the management of school committees in their hands.

The Saturday afternoon free show for the school children has been tried with good results. The youngsters are the best advertisers in the world, for if you show them a good time you don't have to worry about the "paid circulation" of that ad. But this idea of enlisting the children on your side is capable of still more expansion. Whenever a film comes to us from our exchange that has an educational trend, we get busy. First a short description is written, and a boy is sent across the street to the newspaper office. In ten minutes he returns with slugs cast on the linotype, and the synopsis is then run off on our automatic post-card press. Inside of an hour the principal of each of our five schools has these cards for the children's use, and when that picture is on the program our ushers' work is no sinecure. How do we get around the teachers that they wil do this? We don't "get around" them, but they are in the habit of "coming around" to ask us for synopses.

Once in a while we have sent an operator to the school with a machine and a few selected films and some slides, and as the service was entirely free, the school commissioners who are the watchdogs of the best interests of all concerned have generally found some excuse to be in attendance, ostensibly to guard the interests of the youngsters, but in reality to see the pictures. This gives us also some good newspaper advertising.

It is certain that within a short time we shall have motion pictures in our schools in this locality, and when we do the school committees will probably send around a delegation to get subscriptions. We are quite ready to make a substantial donation to such a cause, give it all the publicity we can on our screen, and send up an operator from time to time to show the teachers how to get ahead of the troubles with "those pesky carbons, that WILL NOT burn according to diagrams."

Occasionally, too, we ask one of the professors to come down and give us a brief travel talk, and we have yet to find where this did not prove a good drawing card.

The movement toward motion pictures in schools cannot grow any too rapidly for us. When it becomes an established fact, we shall beg, borrow or otherwise obtain a moving picture camera, and do a few local stunts to help us out. Nothing like "local color." I have given my copies of your paper to our High School principal; can you send me a few more?

G. R.,
Marysville, Cal.

IMP. STOCK COMPANY

Oftentimes letters have come into our office asking where it is possible to obtain representative pictures either in single or group pictures, of the actors and actresses utilized in the various stock companies of the film manufacturers. The above picture represents a group of the Imp actors who have become known far and wide for their beautiful rendering of the plays put out by the Imp Company. That our readers may know who they are, we are giving herewith their names:

First Row—George L. Tucker, David Miles, Mrs. Smith, W. R. Dailey, T. Gaudio. Second Row—W. E. Shea, Mrs. David Miles, F. MacDonald, H. S. Mack, Mrs. F. MacDonald, W. Harvey. Third Row—Thomas Ince, Owen Moore, Mary Pickford, King Baggot, Joseph Smiley, Isabel Rae, John Pickford, Lottie Smith.

Manufacturers' Synopsis of Films

FOR WASHINGTON!

Thanhouser Release, Tuesday, February 21

We all know of Washington's remarkable feat in crossing the Delaware River at Trenton with half of his command, surprising the Hessians, and making them his prisoners; but how advance word of helplessness of his enemy reached the great general has ever been a matter of much mystery.

The bearer of the message was the very Patriot Maid here portrayed, who, with her American scout sweetheart severely wounded, cleverly disguises herself, takes her lover's message to Washington, and leads her countrymen to the house where the Hessian officers, whom she had before this plied with drink, are lying in drunken sleep.

Through her aid, Washington reaches the Hessian headquarters, is admitted by the wounded scout, and the enemy awake to find the American flag flying over them, and the American army in full possession of their camp, the victors in one of the most bloodless yet decisive struggles of the Revolution.

The ingenuity of the Patriot Maid is perhaps best shown in her reception of the Hessian officers when they enter Trenton and select her home for their headquarters. Hating bitterly the very sight of a red coat, she nevertheless treats their attentions with diplomacy, showing merely reserve and not resentment.

By her conduct she completely disarms any suspicions the Hessians may have entertained as to her loyalty, and they willingly allow her to set before them the intoxicating cup—and even compliment her on the superior brew as they drain it. Certainly, if woman is senseless, there are exceptions to the rule, and the Patriot Maid is an admirable one.

A NEWSBOY HERO

Thanhouser Release, Friday, February 24

John Bailey is a struggling young workman, but he is fond of drink. His conduct is long a source of sorrow to his wife, but her prayers and entreaties are disregarded. Finally the climax comes when John returns home one evening and is so much under the influence of liquor that he strikes his wife. Believing that life is unbearable, the woman takes her child and goes out into the world, preferring even death to further mistreatment and humiliation.

The woman and helpless child, with no refuge in sight, wander around in the snow, and finally fall exhausted into the sleep that precedes death. Fortunately for them, Jim Sands, a crippled newsboy, sees their plight, goes to their assistance, and takes them into his poor little home. When they prepare to start out again, Jim offers to share his all with them, and they remain until the mother can obtain some other refuge.

John, in the meantime has hunted vainly for his wife and child, and a newspaper story of the death of a woman and child in the storm convinces him that May and Marie are the victims. Remorseful, he decides that he has no right to live, and plans to drown himself. He is saved from this crime by Jim, and a Salvation Army band, that is holding services nearby, offer to care for him. He realizes that the one thing to do to atone for his fault, is to live a manly, useful life rather than to seek suicide, the refuge of the weak.

Jim by accident learns of the relationship that exists between May and Jack, and brings them together. They are reunited and Jack promises to be in the future what he should have been in the past, a husband who puts home and family above everything else in the world.

"ARTFUL KATE"

"Imp" Release, February 23

"Artful Kate" is an American-Cuban romance which has to commend it the appearance of "Little Mary," and a Cuban setting. It is the second of the Cuban pictures, a delightful little comedy with a wealth of tropical adornment. "Little Mary" appears in the title rôle, and is certainly at her best in this particular style of comedy. The plot has appeal, in that it proves that an ardent lover may be won away from his sweetheart under certain conditions, and the atmosphere, the surroundings —and the girl—in the case prove too seductive for Lieutenant Hammond, who forgets the girl in the States to engage in a mild flirtation.

The story opens with a pretty love scene between the Lieutenant and his betrothed, Kate Stanley. Hammond is ordered to join his regiment in Cuba and Kate is heartbroken. He tells her they must part, and the girl decides to be brave. She exacts from him a promise that he will be true to her, and not indulge in any flirtations with the dark-eyed señoritas she has been told lure men from their vows of constancy in the land of flowers. Hammond is only too willing to swear eternal constancy. Kate places in his watch case a photograph of herself, kisses her manly soldier, and the leave-taking is very affectionate.

The scene reverts to Cuba, Lieutenant Hammond arrives, and is impressed with the country. Kate, having relatives in Havana, receives an invitation to pay them a visit and eagerly accepts, thinking she will meet her lover. She is apprised of his arrival at Havana, and, knowing the predelection of soldiers to flirt, resolves to investigate. Attired in mantilla and Spanish costume, she goes out on the street, and is immediately descried by her fickle lover who is looking for adventure. He does not recognize her, and, to her anger, he attempts a violent flirtation. She repulses him, but he is infatuated, and is not to be denied. Then she is obsessed by an idea to accede to his advances. Hammond seeks an introduction to the girl through her friends, and the enamored young man is persistent in his attentions. He labors under a handicap of not being able to converse in the Spanish language, but procures a language book, and is assisted by Kate, who is also ignorant of the language of the country. Kate, by arts best known to women, obtains possession of her portrait from his watch on the pretense of being jealous of the original, and Hammond is a willing victim to her wiles. There is a pretty love scene, with the American soldier pressing his suit with fervor, and Kate highly enjoying the situation.

The scene then reverts back to the States. Hammond has returned, a Spanish-American War hero, resplendent in his uniform—a hero universally admired. He loses no time in visiting Kate, who has preceded him home. He takes her in his arms. She questions him closely and playfully accuses him of flirting with the sirens of Cuba. He indignantly denies it, hurt and reproachful. Kate opens his watch and finds her picture gone, and inquires the reason. He is nonplussed, but, like a gentleman, he proceeds to lie artistically. He tells her of a fierce fight in which, although outnumbered, he won by wielding his sword, but the portrait was lost from his watch. Kate playfully bids him close his eyes and she will spring a surprise. He does so, and she retires to reappear in Spanish costume, doing the dance that charmed him. She accuses him of his perfidy, and Hammond can only stare. He realizes she has been tricked, and that the girl has proof of the most positive sort. Of course, Kate is a woman, and the result is inevitable. When her lover takes his dismissal literally and leaves, she affrightedly starts to recall him, and right there is where the soldier turns the tables by unexpectedly returning at the opportune time to read her thoughts. She, of course, forgives him, and, he, being a man of impulses, takes her in his arms, thankful that women are prone to change their minds very suddenly in affairs of the heart.

"PICTURELAND"

"Imp" Release, February 20

Pictureland is the initial attempt of the "Imp" Company in Cuba, and if the film is any criterion by which to judge, the future releases will be eagerly sought. The picture is vested with all the wealth of tropical scenery, the settings being admirably well selected, and the whole combining to make a story strong in plot and scenic effects. Pictureland is unique in its way, and really two stories are photographed. The arrival of the "Imp" Company in Cuba, prepared to pose for films and the reception of the company are the introductory pictures.

The actors arrive in a motor car, and are welcomed to the hotel by the boniface and his assistants. The Americans admire the surroundings, and are agreeably surprised at what they see, and the cordial welcome extended to them. All the well-known "Imp" stars appear in traveling costume, which is their first formal introduction in proper personæ, an innovation which will be welcomed by their many admirers.

In the next scene they sally forth to engage in the work of producing a picture. The producer heads the force with the camera men in evidence, a jolly party of folks who depict "Imp" pictures in pantomime.

Then comes the story, a beautiful Cuban romance. Pablo, of humble origin, loves Rosita, a beautiful maiden, and is apparently prospering in his love affair, when a stranger appears on the scene, Wallace Crawford, an American tourist, who evidently finds time hanging heavily on his hands. Crawford rides up to the home of Rosita and asks for a drink. He is quick to note the lovely face and graceful curves of the Cuban girl, and resolves to meet her again. He rides away and Rosita, forgetting Pablo, looks with altogether too much concern after the visitor. Pablo calls with his guitar and, as was his wont, played to the girl, who, seated beside him, allowed her thoughts to wander from the scene and dwell on the tourist. Lulled to sleep by the soft tones of the instrument Rosita dreams, and her dream is depicted on the screen.

In her dream she meets Crawford, who is an adept in the art of charming unsophisticated women. He attempts to caress her, but is repulsed. Knowing the longing of women for finery, he produces rare jewels and adorns the girl with a rich necklace, which she admires. She is won, and is in his arms. The pair move away, Crawford leading his horse. They are detected in their clandestine love-making by Pablo, who summons her parents. Rosita, in her innocence thinks Crawford means honorably by her, and she directs his steps to the church and asks the priest to unite them in marriage. Crawford had not reckoned on this phase of his—to him—harmless love affair, and he declines. He is attacked by Pablo, and only the intervention of the Holy Father saves the life of the faithless American. During the struggle Rosita awakens to find it all a dream. She is contrite, and the drama closes with the venerable Father uniting Rosita and Pablo in marriage.

The actors are then seen returning to the hostelry, where they reappear clad in their street habiliments, only to leave in a motorcar; their work of producing the picture being finished. The film closes with a rare tropical scene peculiar to Cuba.

THE OLD MAN AND JIM

Champion Release, February 22, 1911

The "old man" never had much to say excepting to Jim, and Jim was the wildest boy he had. The old man knew and so did everybody in the town, including the lady's own husband, that Jim loved his neighbor's wife. But Jim didn't care, and the old man was so completely wrapped up in him that he closed his eyes to the wildness of the lad. Nine sons, and Jim was the wildest of them all. Then came news of the war that was soon to break forth between North and South.

And the inevitable happened. The lady's husband saw Jim attempt to kiss his wife, and she permitted him to try. A row that resulted in a disgraceful fight was precipitated, and while the husband lay stunned and bleeding upon the floor, the news was thrown like a bomb upon the excited crowd in the room. "The war has broken out."

The war, that terrible, but necessary slaughter of brave men, was begun, and Jim was the first to go. Some wagging tongues suggested that he had to go to escape the result of his terrible deed.

However, "Cap." Bigler soon wrote back that Jim was the bravest man in the whole regiment, white or black. That his fighting is as good as his farming was bad, and he'd carried the old flag through the bloodiest fight that ever was.

The old man worded a letter to Jim and Jim read it to the boys. It said, "Good-bye, Jim, take care o' yourself." Then came the battle of Petersburg, General Grant commanding. The boys in grey lay behind their entrenchment and literally mowed down the lads in blue. Then the spark leapt into Jim's soul. For he dashed with his men right up to the enemy's cannon, took them, pointed them the other way, and socked it home to the boys in grey, as they hurried for timber, on, and on, Jim, a lieutenant, with one arm gone.

No battle in those terrible times was fiercer. None had deadlier results. Upon a heap of piled up corpses, grey and blue, brothers, dead, as once in life, wounded unto death, with the dear beloved flag held tightly in his hand, lay our hero, Jim.

While his life-blood ebbed away, then appeared to him a vision of the first great father of liberty—George Washington, and by his side stood the father of emancipation, Abraham Lincoln, for whom Jim lay there dying, and between those two great fighters for freedom stands Liberty herself—resplendant in her robes of freedom. Blessing the stricken boy, the vision fades, and Jim with an effort rises to his feet, climbs to the top of the dead and, waving the beloved flag he calls to them to awaken and come on to battle. Furiously waving the tattered flag, he falls back into the arms of General Grant, and some of his aides. Think of a private like Jim, who has climbed up to the shoulder straps. Think of him with the war all through and a glorious old red, white and blue, covering him.

BEGINNING WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8th

2 - Solax - EVERY WEEK - 2

WE WILL RELEASE

WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY

SOLAX FILMS have been on the market THREE MONTHS and have become so popular we cannot longer withhold our second release.

MEANTIME
FRIDAY, FEB. 17th—Corinne in Dollyland (Comedy)
FRIDAY, FEB. 24th—Love's Test (Drama)
FRIDAY, MCH. 3rd—A Costly Pledge (Comedy)

Solax Company 147 Fourth Ave., New York

The "old man" standing over him. Everybody turning away with tears. And as the hand of the dying boy clings to his father's the old man's voice rings in his ears, "Well, good-bye, Jim, and take care o' yourself."

THE LIFE OF A MUSCHIK

Great Northern Release, January 28th

A film that, with the aid of an excellent plot, gives a very clear idea of the daily life of the oppressed Russian peasant. A typical example is seen, with his wife and child, partaking of his frugal morning meal. In the corner is a little shrine, and before going out to the labors of the day the devout workman crosses himself before the emblem of his religion. At mid-day, the wife gets ready some food, and takes it to her husband in the fields. On her way back she is waylaid by an official. Her husband hears her cries, and runs to the spot, knocking down the cowardly fellow. The official, enraged at being thwarted, has the husband arrested and horse-whipped. Some time afterward, near the same spot, the official is thrown from his horse and severely injured. The peasant's child comes to his assistance, and calls her father, who, however, is more disposed to take vengeance on his enemy than to help him. The child's entreaties prevail, and the official is carefully tended at the peasant's house. The kindness shown to him brings about repentance, and he appoints the peasant to a position as bailiff.

THE FALSE ALARM

This is a rattling good comic, in which a man passes through all sorts of adventures in order to dodge his mother-in-law, who comes to pay him a visit.

"A HEROINE OF '76"

Rex Release, February 16th

General Washington, riding toward headquarters, is overtaken by a severe snowstorm, and forced to seek shelter at a wayside tavern. Shortly before his arrival a party of British soldiers had visited the tavern and posted a placard offering a bountiful reward for the capture of Washington, dead or alive.

Upon his entrance, he is recognized by the description, and a plot is arranged to assassinate him. It falls to the lot of the tavern keeper to do the deed. His daughter, a staunch and loyal patriot, overhears their conversation, and determines to save Washington's life. Through a ruse, she causes him to change his room, and herself takes possession of the one he vacated, and after a silent prayer, she retires.

At midnight, the plotters urge the tavern keeper to begin the murderous assault, and, climbing the stairs, he enters the room occupied by his daughter, and, after a moment that is like an eternity, he leaves the room, trembling, penitent, afraid to think, fearful of memories. He sits brooding by the fireplace all night. Remorse—remorse—it tugs at his heart strings. It points an accusing finger at him. He suffers on until weary and exhausted, he falls asleep. At daybreak, Washington descends the stairs and arouses the sleeper, who imagines Washington a spirit. The most terrible punishment of murder is the memory of it. Washington departs, and the tavern keeper begins to believe the happenings of the night were but a weird dream, but a glance at the knife upon the floor, covered with blood, convinces him of the realism of the events—convinces him, and arouses within him a feeling of horror. At this moment, his daughter, clinging to the banisters, staggers down the stairs, totters, and falls, dying, in her father's arms. A glance at her breast discloses a red stain, and he realizes he has unwittingly killed his own child.

This little heroine sacrificed her life at the shrine of liberty, and as such her memory is hallowed.

A LIFE-TIME PENANCE

Yankee Film Co. Release, February 20th

Tales are numerous of the miscarriage of justice. Many crimes have gone unpunished, and not a few men have been sorely punished for criminal deeds never committed.

But the man who goes through life with a conscience shattered by the knowledge of wrong inflicted on another usually comes to grief, sooner or later. So it is no wonder that one of the principals in this all-absorbing film-narrative of ours, a wealthy broker who accidentally killed one of his employees and told the world it was a case of suicide, was seized with frightful horror when confronted by a likeness of the dead man's face, many years after.

Still, if the son was not likened unto his father, and had not applied for a position to the very man for whom his parent worked, eighteen years previous, the old broker would have no doubt carried his ever-haunting secret to his grave; but fate conspired to bring about proper restitution to the sorrowing family, and a combination of circumstances served to add unusual interest to the unfolding of the plot.

WOMAN WHO DARED

Yankee Film Co. Release, February 24th

Nell Pierce, favorite film detective of the motion picture kingdom, tackled the most difficult case in her notable career. That she succeeded in running to earth the perpetrator of the day's biggest criminal sensation seemed nothing short of marvelous, but Nell is something of a marvel in herself, and rarely suffers defeat.

Perhaps the story does not unfold as most plots do; but the mystery is not explained until the very last, which keeps one "keyed up" with excitement in interest.

A series of remarkable changes of disguise characterizes Miss Pierce's work in this film as above the average character impersonations. In short, "The Woman Who Dared" is an unusual production.

CORINNE IN DOLLYLAND

Solax Release of February 17th

Little Corinne, sitting quietly by her grandmother's side, suddenly decides that she would like to go to the moving picture theater. After a good deal of coaxing the grandmother gives her the wherewithal with which to gratify her desire. She takes the money and sets gaily off for the theater.

Upon her arrival at the theater the gateman, seeing such a little tot, unaccompanied, refuses to let her enter the place. Little Corinne pleads with the gateman, but he proves to be adamant, and we next see her with drooping head and tear-stained face, wending her way slowly homeward—intense dejection being evidenced in her every movement.

On her way home she comes upon a little newsboy crying bitterly. Upon her asking him the cause of his tears, he tells her that a crowd of street urchins have stolen his papers and money. Unselfish little creature, although herself being unable to attend the show, generously gives the little boy her bright, new coin, and directs him to the theater, thereby hoping to help him forget his unhappy plight.

Corinne then continues on her way, and upon her arrival home tells her grandmother of all that has happened. Grandmother sympathizes with little Corinne, and to pacify the little girl, she gets out a large box of wooden toys for Corinne to play with. Thoroughly happy, little Corinne amuses herself for a long time, but finally we see her little head drooping, lower and lower, until she is lost in the land of dreams.

What she dreamed: Little Dolly is kidnapped by the villain. She falls into the hands of the circus manager, and from her babyhood up she is trained to be an expert bare-back rider.

Ten years after, passing through a small village in a parade, she is recognized and restored to the loving arms of her parents, and all is happiness.

NICKELODIA NEWS IN BRIEF

Macon, Ga.—J. B. Melton is considering the advisability of establishing a new moving picture theater here.

Litchfield, Minn.—The American Amusement Company has decided to establish a new moving picture theater here.

Jefferson, Iowa.—A. A. Head has sold the Busy Hour moving picture theater here to Jay Wiggins.

Monmouth, Ill.—H. B. Webster has decided to establish a new moving picture show here.

Portland, Ore.—Mrs. Amy Dobson has secured a permit for the erection of a two-story moving picture theater on Union avenue.

ADVICE TO OPERATORS

Oracle Department

By WM. E. SMITH, E. E.

PRACTICAL ARTICLES FOR ALL

This department has been started with the idea to encourage the operators to obtain the best results with their Projecting Machines Queries and questions pertaining to the Moving Picture arts addressed to the Editor of this department will be published in this department. Only answers to inquiries of general interest will be published here for the benefit of all readers. On account of the large amount of inquiries received it may not be possible to print all the answers in any one issue, as each has to take its turn. Correspondents should bear this in mind when writing. If a quick reply is wanted by mail, a charge of 15 cents is made for each question. Special information requiring a large amount of calculation and labor cannot be furnished without remuneration. The ORACLE has no fixed rate for such work, but will inform the correspondent promptly as to the charges involved. When writing only one side of question sheet must be used; diagrams and drawings must invariably be on a separate sheet. Name and address must always be given in all letters. No attention paid to letters not observing above rules.

"THE OPERATOR"

This week I am going to have a heart-to-heart talk with the prime mover of the performance—the operator. As there are operators and near-operators, I wish to be understood as speaking of the operator as a class, that there are many operators to which it would be unfair to apply my remarks. Some good operators, if placed under conditions different from those where they are now giving entire satisfaction, would be quite at sea, for the time being, because their general knowledge of the different types of projecting machines is imperfect.

Conservatism, and an objection to learn, I have found to be prevalent among a number of operators. Why? Just because he has been running one type of machine for years, and thinks that is the only machine on the market.

But the operator, especially the "old and experienced" operator—should bring himself to realize that the mere running of the show can be done by any one after two or three lessons of an hour each, in threading up and handling the arc lamp, and framing the picture.

First-class operating is not to be obtained in this manner, however. Experience is necessary, and if the operator desires to keep up to date, he must always be learning, because this is the age of progress, and new principles are always arriving, which are altering the present methods to a considerable extent. When all is smooth, any one can turn the handle and with a little instruction thread up, and manage the light. But wait until the film breaks, or jumps off the sprocket, or the take-up does not work, or a screw gets loose in some part of the machine, or if something goes wrong on the electrical end during the show; then the man with the knowledge and experience comes out in his true colors, and is easily worth his money. Please note that I said "knowledge and experience," for, without both no operator is in the front rank. It is sometimes necessary to keep the show going at all costs; how many operators could do so? This is where the man who, to his experience, adds his knowledge of all the general principles governing his work, will, probably, never get into trouble at all; or, should such an occasion arise, will keep the show "going" with less loss of time than will the operator who has taken a correspondence school course in crank turning.

In using the word "operator," I do not mean the man-of-all-work, who cleans up the place in the morning or puts up the posters, or does odd jobs until he must hurry into the coop to give a show; but the man whose occupation is operating and who devotes himself to it. Now we will see where there is room for improvement in the operator. First—he must have the knack of doing the right thing when an emergency arises. He must be a man of decision, and be able to think quick. Second—he must know the main principles of his projecting machine: optical, electrical and mechanical laws pertaining to it. Third—he must know something about the manufacture of the machine he uses, and be able to handle and use tools to some extent. Fourth—he must be a conscientious worker, and have a determination to keep everything in first-class order.

In the first qualification many operators fail, although practice and experience help to improve him, a nervous or excitable nature militates much against success. So we may say that a good operator is born, not made.

The second qualification requires him to be mechanically or scientifically inclined. He should have spent some time in a machine or electrical shop, or dealt with optical and electrical matters. He should also follow up his knowledge by taking an interest in all new electrical devices, lenses, projectors, etc., etc.

The third qualification is natural to some men, and quite impossible to teach to others, the man who does not take an interest in tools and their uses will generally make but a second-rate operator.

The fourth qualification is just the character any one must have in order to succeed in any line.

Taking into consideration the amount of practical knowledge an operator must have in order to be proficient, he should be well paid, paid as a first-class mechanic. It is a calling which requires knowledge in several branches of science. He must have a working knowledge of electricity and optics, and also be somewhat of a mechanic to be able to keep his machine in A-1 condition.

I had a case brought to my attention the other day where an operator proved he was onto his job. During the show the star wheel broke, due to a flaw in it, and not having an extra one, what did he do—tell the manager to close up? Not so you could notice it. He got out his blow torch, solder and paste, and brazed that star wheel together, and his show (inside of a half hour) was going on as though nothing had happened to it.

Transformer Troubles.—S. J. G., Dundee, Mich., writes: Am using a Fort Wayne 133-cycle compensare. The local lighting company are installing a 60-cycle generator; can I use my 133-cycle compensare on 60-cycle current?

Ans.—No., you cannot use your 133-cycle compensare on a 60-cycle current, but you can use a 60-cycle compensare on a 133-cycle current, for the following reasons:

Generally speaking, the lower the frequency the larger must the compensare be in order to deliver a given output without overheating. A compensare designed for a given output and frequency can, therefore, be operated on a higher frequency at the same output with somewhat reduced heating; but if used on a lower frequency, it will run somewhat hotter and the efficiency will be slightly lower. Modern compensaress, however, usually have a sufficient capacity to run at full output on half frequency without injury.

Sol Kutner, New York, writes in to ask me to decide a bet.

A claims that you must have 220 volts to hook up an arc lamp.

B says you only need 110 volts, as the lamp only takes 45 volts, the rest is consumed in the rheostat.

Answer: You are right, B. An arc lamp only requires 45 volts at the arc, any voltage in excess of that must be consumed in a rheostat. For instance, you are running on 110 volts; the arc requires 45 volts; you must insert a rheostat which will give you a drop in voltage at 65 volts.

If you run off 220 volts you will have to use a rheostat which will give you a voltage drop of 175 volts.

I would not care to be near the arc lamp that A would connect 220 volts to, because he is going to have some fireworks when he does.

Movement of Moving Picture Machines Indeed

As a sample of the business he is doing in all makes of moving picture machines, J. H. Hallberg, the "Economizer Man," reports among his sales for the past week the following: Keith's Theater, Boston, one Motiograph; Y. M. C. A., Nyack, N. Y., one Motiograph; A. Seamon, Bridgeport, Conn., one Motiograph; W. Edward Lamb, Taunton, Mass., one No. 6 Powers; A. E. Wells, Cortland, N. Y., one No. 5 Powers; C. T. Telford, Delhi, N. Y., L Model B Edison.

Motiograph Motion Picture Machines in Demand

Mr J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports a number of recent sales of the No. 1A Motiograph, and as an evidence of the entire satisfaction they are giving submits a copy of the following letter:

J. H. Hallberg, Redding, Cal., Jan. 19, 1911.

Dear Sir: I received the Motiograph some time ago and am now putting on a beautiful picture with same and would have no other. I am running about 100 day stuff with hardly a jump with the worst of it.

Yours sincerely, J. N. HIGHT, Manager,
Majestic Theater.

Vaudeville Music

VARIETIES IN MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

BY FRA.

Illustrated Songs

FAMOUS PUBLISHERS OF POPULAR MUSIC

It would not need a caption under the photo of Maurice Shapiro to distinguish the features of one who has gained a world-wide popularity in the music publishing business. All lovers of good popular music are familiar with his publications, many of which have reached an enormous sale, and to have the Shapiro house take up the popularizing of any song means much to the composer.

Maurice Shapiro

We happened in for an interview recently and found their offices about as busy as any along this famous music district. The following songs recently published are "going some," and attaining popularity: "Don't Wake Me Up, I Am Dreaming," "That's Going Some For You," "All That I Ask of You Is Love," "Pollywogg Wiggle," and "You Needn't Go to College If You've Been to College Inn."

WARNING TO VAUDEVILLE FOLK—BEWARE OF RUSSIA

A most important notice has been sent out by our Consul in St. Petersburg, and he but voices the general opinion held by the other Consuls. The Consul is very clear and emphatic in what he says "that no contract for St. Petersburg shall be accepted unless the money is paid in advance." I know St. Petersburg and sundry other Russian cities and from some little knowledge there, I beg my vaudeville friends to heed this warning. There are honest managers (a few) and there are not (lots). As to redress, listen to this: "to enforce a contract . . . is apt to require a great deal of time and expense . . ." consequently you are in danger "of losing not only the contract, but sometimes what has been earned and (you) may even be thrown into jail, or conducted to the frontier." Once you get into a dispute the scoundrels can easily beat you. A row goes to the courts and then delay, delay, delay. The rascals know our folk cannot afford this, and even if they could, there's a thousand ways to rob still.

Remember, jail in Russia is a section of the infernal regions on earth, and that the frontier there is a grim reality very different from "counting the ties" here. Fra is an old-time wanderer who has been in some tight corners in foreign lands, and so it is battle-scarred experience that implores vaudeville comrades to heed the kindly and thoughtful warning of Mr. Conner.

The Player gives the full text, if you haven't seen it, hasten to read it, and do not let any one, or anything, persuade you to neglect the Consul's warning. He is one of ourselves, and by his knowledge of both lands is able to speak with authority.

THE THEATER AND EDUCATION

In another column of this paper, in last week's issue, the reform of the "reformers" was urged, as the first step. That the stage is a factor in education is so patent, no argument is needed, it is also beyond dispute that it is a favorite object of attack—full oft by those least fitted to judge. When Sir Henry Irving, and he certainly did know whereof he spake, lectured in Edinburgh, he said: "Depend upon it, the theater as a whole, is never below the average moral sense of the time." This puts the matter squarely on the theatergoers' shoulders; managers, as a matter of pure business have to fill the demands of their patrons. Reform the patrons, educate their tastes and the whole character of the theatrical presentation will naturally follow.

With such opinions the Drama League of America has been founded. Every one is concerned in the general uplift of life. Though the work is surrounded with great difficulties yet as proposed, once the influence of the women of the country is set to work, through clubs and the like, and the encouragement of good plays and abhorrence of evil is practically shown, it is possible good may come. I have a profound belief in the power of the mothers, wives, and daughters, and think the reform of the theater attendants is what is primarily needed. Their education, broad and sane; for maybe the theater is ahead of the age.

NOTES AND NOTIONS

An Albany newspaper rises to remark that Lew Fields finds Albany the best place to try out his plays. Albany? Think of it. The "yellow" dog is the only variety known heretofore.

An interesting experiment began this week at the Bijou Theater, Perth Amboy. Moving pictures, illustrated songs and a stock play with a company of nine. Wonder how this will go!

Still moving pictures and vaudeville march on. Now the Globe Amusement Company is arranging to have a string of theaters in the classic Massachusetts and surrounding states where pictures and "vaudy" reign.

Ontario is talking censorship of pictures. Any one who knows the provinces will realize that in certain corners "blue" is the prevailing color, whilst just over the border in P. Q. things are very different, save in Montreal, where in a patch north of St. Antoine and covering Sherbrooke that deems it "fashionable' 'to ignore the crowded "Royal" on Craig; that is the folk who wish to eliminate pictures and vaudeville and preserve "Sappho." Some years ago I was on the frontier between two countries in Europe. I stood in a severe, solemn, "unco' guid" room, where the tables and chairs looked prim and righteous. My baggage passed, through a door I went, and lo! pictures, rugs, wickedly untidy chairs. Between the two an open arch, behind the bar. I went up for "une biere" and through the arch popped a sad-faced gentleman with sundry glasses not quite emptied of "bier." He put all the dregs in a glass, put "a top" on it to make it look fresh. I didn't drink it. I simply thought, and I'm thinking still.

VAUDEVILLE

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATER

Carl Cook. Black-face comedian. Besides patter and jokes, he gave impersonations of Bert Williams, with his odd Florida dialect, and Earnest Hogan with the odder Kentucky. A well-dressed man, who knew his work and did it; got an encore, and deserved it.

The Ten Cantelleys. Miniature musical comedy. All young folks, in singing and dancing. The seven young girls had three changes, Highland kilts, old gold and lavender and olive brown velvet. Two young men and girl, eccentric dancing. Clean, crisp and chic. Curtain.

Reilly and Wilson. Man and woman. Patter and jokes. One of the sort where the woman is the butt. Applauded.

Cahill Gillon Company. Comedy sketch, "The Broiler." Full stage. Two gay young men. One is entrusted with rooms of an absent father; also a girl ward. The fun centers upon the ward, turning up in his rooms suddenly, from a convent. She takes the "Guardian" for the father, he thinks she's a "Broiler." To straighten things out the guardian tries to explain Mrs. Grundy, and at last to get a minister to marry them out of hand, which he does en dishabille. The "Guardian" filled the bill, and the girl was a charming ingenue. From A to Z the house was in roars of laughter.

Rodgers, Hopper & Co. In a one-act dramatic playlet, "The Escape." Cast: John Carleton, the District Attorney, Mr. Francis Rodgers; Charles Handford, alias Jim Gregg, an escaped convict, Mr. John Hopper; Mrs. John Carleton, wife of the Attorney, Miss Beatrice Graham.

Les Monforts. Sensational and Comedy Triple Bar Artists.

Jack Driscoll. Illustrated balladist.

Three reels of first-run Independent moving pictures. At three o'clock, in the blinding snow storm, on Monday, there were only ten box seats vacant in the whole house; nothing more need be said about how the audiences like the performances.

KEITH AND PROCTOR'S UNION SQUARE THEATER

The Two Mandys. A man and a woman in a heavy weight turn. The pair are neatly garbed in black, and do all their work well. Not a hitch, not a flaw. The fake boxing match got the laughs.

Goforth and Doyle. A woman in white silk, who sings in a strenuous voice. The man, black, is to take care of her mad sister, whom she impersonates. The crazy woman gives strange orders and raises faint laughter.

Rose de Fay. Singing. This lady has a fine, clear, cultured, soprano voice. Her selections were well chosen, and well rendered. The best thing on the bill, and deserved the applause given.

Ed. N. Hoyt and Company. Mephistopheles, Faust, Martha and Gretchen in a sublimated sketch, I presume from Faust. Lights and no lights, long declamations, and wondrous antics by Martha (her locomotion reminded me of a frog). The other two characters call for no remarks. The whole thing is "raw."

Songs and music go well. Lectures; I enjoy going over the old grounds, but I hate mixed slides. This is a constant wail; the lecturer speaks clearly and carefully what he has to say, but his work is marred by jumbled up slides.

UNIQUE THEATER, FOURTEENTH STREET

Louis Stretz is one of the old and best-known employees of this theater. He takes care of the stage, besides other matters. His sea experience, gained on sailing ships and steamers, stands him in good place. For the handling of people tactfully is his strong point, and globe-wide experience is invaluable here. Every one knows him for what he is, a capable, courteous, good fellow.

Martini and Fabrini. A satisfactory German singing and dancing act.

Musical Camerons. A man and woman; all right.

The Allens. A man and a woman in a laughable comedy sketch.

Laurie Ordway. The Suffragette. The feature of the bill. Three changes, English riding habit, as a suffragette, and in character for song, "I Want to Act." This actress, one of the successes in London, was a screaming success here. Roars of laughter and applause.

THE DEWEY

Halsten and Hood. Singing and dancing. Allen. Singing and talking. The Mitchell Music Song Company. Satisfactory. Paul Hollis and Company. A sketch that took.

THE CITY THEATER

Four Laggards. Good. Healy and Adams. Lewis and West. Holmes and Long. Viola Duval. Satisfactory. Franklin, Ardell and Company. Seemed to take.

Lucille Mulhall. Horsewoman; A-1.

HAMMERSTEIN'S

Well to the fore is Andrew Mack, the Irish singer and comedian, and the Ten Pianophiends. The bill included Frank Mayne and Company, Rita Gould, Haines and Vidocq, and the Barry Sisters.

MANHATTAN OPERA HOUSE

Maude Raymond, the attraction, also Charles Grapewin and Anna Chance; Marshall P. Wilder, the Four Floods and Maclyn Arbuckle and Company, in "The Welcher."

THE BRONX

Of course Valeska Suratt and her fifteen carried everything before them; then Odiva, of water fame; Schichtl's Manikins; Anna Chandler; the Primrose Four; Patsy Doyle and Simon Gardner and Company. A bill that draws the crowds.

FIFTH AVENUE

Christy Matthewson, "Chief" Meyers and May Tully in "Curves." A baseball skit gets the "big hand." Then there's Edward Abeles & Co. in "He Tried to Be Nice" (and succeeded), the Columbia Comedy Four, Seldonie Statue Beauties, the three Shelvey Boys, and others. The offerings are excellent.

BROOKLYN

FULTON

The box office shows the result of vaudeville and so the management is using every endeavor to keep the bill in the A-1 rank. Ross & Fenton, comedians, and great Brooklyn favorites, are the headliners with a new sketch, "Just Like a Woman;" Albini, illusionist; Sophia Tucker, the coon shouter, well known here; Eddie Foley and his singing; Walter C. Percival & Co. in the farce-comedy "King for a Day;" Baxter & Laconda, ecc entricdancers; Kaiser's Terriers, and others. Pretty sound proof there's something doing.

THE GRAND

That the monster vaudeville bill is a success in Brooklyn was seen by the jammed houses all last week. Amongst the rest were the old favorites: Genaro & Bailey; Consul No. 2, the Man Monkey; James Kiernan & Co. in the sketch "The Royal Cook;" Belle Wheeler, the Hamptons; Shaw & Lyttle and Gannon & Hughes. A good and varied bill.

GREENPOINT

Here, as ever, there's a rattling good bill, as a few selections will show. The main attraction, Gertrude Hoffman, in her new revue, forty strong and running fifty minutes; a troupe of Cingalese must not be forgotten; Mr. & Mrs. Erwin Connelly, new to the East, but famous West, in "Sweethearts," a miniature act by the well-known Sir W. S. Gilbert, of "Pinafore" renown. "It Happened on Monday," by the funny Barry & Wolford, and Wormwood's Animals. A bill pretty hard to beat.

The employees of this theatre will hold their annual ball on April 19th.

Sometimes it seems as if nothing could arouse an audience from that wet blankety feeling that effectually squelches all enthusiasm. As the show, or the day, goes on, generally things improve and the performers get a fair "show." Not always, however. Last week this fit lasted for days and was not confined to one theater. In some places "canning" was in full blast, and so far as I am concerned, I prayerfully trust some of the turns have not only been canned but hermetically sealed. The "canning" did not go far enough. Singers! Quarter tones flat in fortissimo passages! Senseless, pointless patter, flagrant ignorance of the elements of vaudeville requirements. These things are not due to weather or weariness, but to an incursion of conceited incompetents that wouldn't go in a rathskeller. Who turns these things loose upon innocent, unoffending, amusement-seeking audiences?

Rumor says the standee question is to be compromised. Most civic cruxes, in our city, can be settled "in the usual way," but that's where the managers are standing "pat."

It seems girls under 21 cannot work after 10 p. m. except in household drudgery; in such dilettante occupation they can work—for nothing—all night. I thought girls were of age when 18. What does that imply and how about it?

The "claque" bunco game is becoming too evident in vaudeville houses. Things look as if we were to be insulted by MM. les Claquers à la Paris, which heaven forbid!

Stories on the street, some extra lurid and sensational, announce a tremendous internal row in a well-known theatrical combination.

All sorts of affirmations, denials, and the usual battledore and shuttlecock on Park Row about the New Theater. Why not ask Blanche Bates? She'd soon straighten this matter out. The whole trouble is due to recognizing art as art, even when not "my" art! Voila tout!

OUT OF TOWN

Keith's, in Boston, besides the pictures, had a bill that went. Hart's Dancers, good; Billie Burke's Wild West, a hold-over; Pianophiend Minstrels, all right; Woods & Woods, Trio, on the wire and the funny folks; "Chief" Meyers and May Tully.

Keith's, in Philadelphia, had a few things to awaken the sleepers, ending up with Merril & Co., whose bicycle turn was hailed with roars of laughter. The Three Vagrants, novelty musical turn; Valerie Bergere & Co.; the comedy "Billie First Love," and, of course, the pictures.

At the Palace, in the same city, pictures and a good bill in which these figured: Housely & Nicholas, in their musical turn, which was a hit; the Leggerts, hand balancing and ring, good; Perry & Elliott, singing and talking, ot over; and the feature, Power's elephant, "Rosie," a clean success.

At the Colonial, Rochester, N. Y., pictures and a satisfactory bill which included Wolfheim's Statues, a go; Six Gypsy Wanderers, A-1; Frank Routledge & Co. got the claps, and Amy Francis, who made good.

I hear Pantage's in Seattle, Wash., is presenting a ripping bill and good pictures.

The Yonge Street Theater, in Toronto, Canada, an old camping ground, with pictures and vaudeville, is getting the crowds, all right.

SONGS

In view of what I have said in these columns about songs, I cannot but feel glad to know that amongst the changes in moving picture houses there is a notable one: Mrs. Mina V. Hammer, in the Isis Theater, at Minneapolis, calls it "an attraction" to sing classical selections. More—they go. Classical will horrify some; not classical, but clean, is what I plead for. In one sense they are the same; the best can never be dirty; filth in the gutter, purity on the hilltop. The point is, Minneapolis welcomes as an "attraction" clean songs.

Still another sure sign of this tendency: Victor Hollander, the man who wrote "The Cherries in My Neighbor's Garden," of which 'tis said over a million copies were sold; he who composed "Skawkelied" (who doesn't know the "Swing Song"?), is to write exclusively for Jos. W. Stern & Co. Pure music is on the ascendant. This firm is following out its unchanging policy, and I hope ere long to see songs on my desk of the class and brilliancy expected from the composer of the Big Revue now on the "hit" at the Metropol Theater, Berlin.

Victor Kremer has got back from that little trip. I hope he made good out of that variegated catalogue he sent me not so long ago; rumor says he did—I don't douht it.

Al. Plantadosi's new character song, "You're Going to Wish You Had Me Back," will be introduced by Edwards, Van & Tierney.

One of the sweetest songs issued of late, and one that has my complete commendation, is "Will the Roses Bloom in Heaven," published by Chas. H. Harris, New York. I heard it at the Hippodrome, 1740 Fulton St., Brooklyn, where it was sympathetically rendered by Carl Stumpf.

HARRY VON TILZER MUSIC PUB. CO.,
125 W. 43d St., New York City

I'm An Honorary Member of the Patsy Club. Andrew B. Sterling and Harry Von Tilzer. There is nothing very striking about the verse music, the chorus being altogether better. There is a suggestion of a very well-known dance toward the end. The words slide along and are a Jeremiad of marital woes.

It's Got To Be Some One I Love. Wm. Dillon and Alfred J. Doyle. The music has a quaintness of its own, and probably in some quarters will be popular. The words are doubtful, and entirely dependent upon who sings it, and how it is sung.

All Aboard for Blanket Bay. Andrew B. Sterling and Harry Von Tilzer. This is altogether excellent. The music is catchy, and as it ought to be of the lullaby class. The words are good and rhythmical, and thoroughly apropos.

When Mariola Does the Cubanola. Will Dillon and Harry Von Tilzer. No comment is necessary, and I don't ever wish to hear it. So far as the music is concerned, it is worthy of a better companion.

J. H. AUFDERHEIDE
Lemcke Building, Indianapolis, Ind.

I'll Pledge My Heart to You. May Aufderheide. A tuneful composition of merit, and in thorough keeping with the words. The lyric reveals the woman, and is good. I don't quite like that abbreviation of bungalow. The fair lady on the cover appears to be meditating upon the song.

A Totally Different Rag. Earle C. Jones and May Aufderheide. The music is most emphatically the name of the song. As to the lyric, I am hopelessly at sea. "Feet" and metre are beyond my ken. The cover is a dainty piece of work but is it in keeping.

INSTRUMENTAL

J. H. AUFDERHEIDE
Lemcke Building, Indianapolis, Ind.

Vanity. Rag Two-Step. Paul Pratt. Good. Just the sort the dainty lady on the back would enjoy.

Dusty Rag. May Aufderheide. A right jolly piece of composition, very much in keeping with the emphatic gentleman who decorates the back. People who hear this will not wish to sit on their chairs.

The Richmond Rag. May Aufderheide. Some things are said to be an acquired taste, many of them very good when you get accustomed to them. That's the way I feel about this composition. A good, plain, sensible cover.

Colonial Glide. Paul Pratt. Nothing very striking. In parts the composer seems as though he had been thinking of a well-known opera; the accentuation being changed. The cover is in keeping with the composition.

Walhalla. Paul Pratt. It's not the sort of music that I have been accustomed to associate with Walhalla, but it is not without merit. It's a "craze" all right. The cover is artistic, and I suppose suggests the Twentieth Century Walhalla.

I should deem myself remiss if I were not to call attention to the beautiful "dress" and general high-class tone of all the productions that I have seen published by this firm.

LEVI CO. SONG SLIDE RELEASES

"After that I Want a Little More." Words by Al Bryan, music by Ford Fisher, published by Shapiro. A clever little novelty song with a pretty melody already being used with tremendous success by several headliners. The slides are well done, the models exceptionally goodlooking and the scenery beautiful.

"If Life's Best Gift Were Mine to Choose, My Choice Would Still Be You." Words and music by Robert E. Roden, published by Shapiro. A beautiful high-class ballad that will probably become the biggest seller of the year. The song is well illustrated and the set is one of the best ever made by the Levi Co.

In writing to Advertisers please mention

THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS

THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR

Sanitary, Space-saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving. To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.

Write Today for Circular W.

HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

"REX" LITHOGRAPH POSTER

The above is a reproduction of the handsome lithograph which the Rex Motion Picture Manufacturing Company intend giving with their future releases. A copyright has been applied for on this idea, and it is a step toward advancement that will show greatly in favor of this new concern, who evidently are starting off in the right path.

INDEPENDENT FILMS

The following films have been released week of February 6th, by the Empire Film Exchange, 150 East Fourteenth Street, New York.

		Feet
Feb.	6—At the Duke's Command (Imp.)	997
Feb.	6—Foiling the Camorra (Yankee)	950
Feb.	6—A Pittsburg Millionaire (Amer.)	1000
Feb.	6—Doctor Against His Will (Eclair)	984
Feb.	7—Half Breed's Plan (Bison)	985
Feb.	7—A Trip Through Africa (Powers)	484
Feb.	7—Ferdie's New Shoes (Powers)	516
Feb.	7—The Westerner and the Earl (Than.)	980
Feb.	8—Savoy Cavalry (Ambrosio)	500
Feb.	8—Tweedledum as a Detective (Amb.)	500
Feb.	8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Atlas)	950
Feb.	8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Champ.)	985
Feb.	8—The Transgressor (Nestor)	990
Feb.	8—School Marm's Courage (Reliance)	978
Feb.	9—Too Much Aunt (American)	500
Feb.	9—On the Installment Plan (Amer.)	500
Feb.	9—The Mirror (Imp.)	500
Feb.	9—When the Cat's Away (Imp.)	500
Feb.	9—John Milton (Itala)	1000
Feb.	10—The Salted Mine (Bison)	1000
Feb.	10—The Orphan's Friend (Lux)	500
Feb.	10—That Horse Did Run (Lux)	500
Feb.	10—Put Out (Solax)	1000
Feb.	10—The Norwood Necklace (Than.)	1000
Feb.	10—Was She Justified (Yankee)	995
Feb.	11—Found Again (Gt. Nor.)	990
Feb.	11—Foolshead at the Cinematograph (Itala)	950
Feb.	11—A Trip Through Mexico (Powers)	990
Feb.	11—The Avenger (Reliance)	1000

SALES COMPANY

The following films have been released week of February 13th, by Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

		Feet
Feb.	13—Darkest Hour (Imp)
Feb.	16—The Convert (Imp)
Feb.	13—A Quiet Evening at Home (Amer.)	982
Feb.	13—In the Land of Cactus (Amer.)	995
Feb.	13—Condemned to Death (Yankee)
Feb.	17—Her Birthday Surprise (Yankee)
Feb.	14—A Deputy's Honor (Bison)
Feb.	17—A Warrior's Squaw (Bison)
Feb.	14—For Her Sake (Than.)
Feb.	17—Checkmated (Than.)
Feb.	14—An Unforeseen Complication (Powers)
Feb.	15—Three Men (Reliance)
Feb.	18—Souls Courageous (Reliance)
Feb.	16—Fatal Charm (Itala)
Feb.	18—Who Will Eat the Turkey (Itala)
Feb.	13—Mr. Faddleaway Is On Strike (Eclair)
Feb.	13—The Elixir of Bravery (Eclair)
Feb.	15—The Demon (Ambrosio)
Feb.	15—Coals of Fire (Atlas)
Feb.	15—The Light Beyond (Nestor)
Feb.	15—Her Three Proposals (Champion)
Feb.	17—Broncho Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Lux)
Feb.	17—Matilda Lovestruck (Lux)
Feb.	17—Corinne in Dollyland (Solax)
Feb.	18—False Alarm (Gt. Nor.)
Feb.	18—Muschik (Gt. Nor.)

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

	Feet
Dec. 21—Little Peter's Christmas Dinner....
Dec. 28—Drama of the Engine Driver and Grandfather's Pipe
Jan. 4—The Wall Partition.....	500
Jan. 4—Trials of Tweedledum as a Policeman	500
Jan. 18—Blue Domino's Disguise and Tailor's Queer Ad
Jan. 25—A Wife Calvary and Tweedledum Cash
Feb. 1—Return from Seaside Bathing.....
Feb. 1—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports...
Feb. 8—Tweedledum as a Detective.....

AMERICAN.

Jan. 12—The Borrowed Flat.....	420
Jan. 16—The Battered Bridegrooms.....	525
Jan. 16—A Dental Disaster.....	450
Jan. 19—The Bonanza King.....	990
Jan. 11—How Tweedledum Pays His Bills...	500
Jan. 11—Clouds and Ice-Fields.....	500
Jan. 23—When a Man's Single.....1000
Jan. 26—Bertie's Bandit 1000
Jan. 30—The Genius (Com.-Dr.).....	965
Feb. 2—The Mission in the Desert (Dr.)...	985
Feb. 6—A Pittsburg Millionaire (Dr.)....	985
Feb. 9—On the Installment Plan (Com.)...	560
Feb. 9—Too Much Aunt (Com.).....	430
Feb. 13—Quiet Evening at Home (Com.)...	985
Feb. 16—In the Land of Cactus (Dr.).....980

ATLAS FILM CO.

Nov. 30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.).....
Dec. 14—Brothers (Dec.)
Dec. 21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.).....
Dec. 28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)....
Jan. 4—A Straw Ride (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—A Letter to the Stork (Dr.).....
Jan. 18—A City Wolf (Dr.).....
Jan. 25—Irish Hearts
Feb. 1—The Surgeon and the Girl.....
Feb. 1—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.).....
Feb. 15—Coals of Fire.....

CAPITOL FILM CO.

Sept. 10—The Messenger Boy's Sweetheart.
Sept. 17—Round Trip $5.98.....
Sept. 24—Bill Mason's Ride.....	700
Oct. 8—All's Fair in Love and War.....
Oct. 15—A Shot in the Night.....
Oct. 22—The Locket (Dr.).....

CHAMPION.

Dec. 7—Hearts of the West (Dr.).....	950
Dec. 14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.)	950
Dec. 21—His Mother (Dr.).....	950
Dec. 28—The Golden Gates (Dr.).....	950
Jan. 4—Days of the Early West (Dr.).....	950
Jan. 11—Bill's Widow (Dr.).....	950
Jan. 18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.).
Jan. 18—Why He Went West (Dr.).....	950
Feb. 1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.)....
Feb. 8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.)...	950
Feb. 15—Her Three Proposals (Com.).....	950
Feb. 22—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.).....	950

CINES.
Eclair.

Oct. 21—The Last of the Savelli Dr.).....	800
Oct. 28—Tontolini in Love (Com.).....	480
Oct. 28—The Pretty Dairy Maid (Dr.).....	480
Nov. 4—A Wooden Sword (Dr.).....	800

COLUMBIA

Oct. 29—In the Web (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.)....
Nov. 19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 26—Stage Coach Tom (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 3—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.).....
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.).....
Jan. 7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.).....

ECLAIR

Dec. 26—The Lock-Keeper (Dr.).....	537
Dec. 26—The Fear of Fire (Com.).....	390
Jan. 2—The Great Medal Competition (Com.)	485
Jan. 2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.)..	480
Jan. 9—Mother's Portrait (Dr.).....	930
Jan. 16—The Jealousy of Sosthenes Ramulot (Com.)	478
Jan. 16—My Wife's Hat (Com.).....	482
Jan. 30—The European Lunch.....
Jan. 30—The Elusive Robber.....
Feb. 6—Doctor Against His Will (Dr.).....	984
Feb. 13—Mr. Faddleaway is on Strike (Com.).	522
Feb. 13—The Elixir of Bravery.....	424
Feb. 20—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.).....	683
Feb. 20—Hospital for Small Animals (Spec.).	286
Feb. 27—Punch	595
Feb. 27—Beware of the Bomb (Com.).....	370
Mar. 6—King Phillip the Fair and the Templars	975

GREAT NORTHERN.

	Feet
Dec. 3—The Ohami Troupe of Acrobats (Sc.)
Dec. 10—The Poacher (Dr.)
Dec. 17—A Christmas Letter (Dr.).....
Dec. 17—Dickey's Courtship (Com.).....
Dec. 24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.).....
Dec. 31—The Scarecrow (Dr.).....
Dec. 31—Bear Hunting (Sc.).....
Jan. 7—The Red Light (Dr.).....
Jan. 14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.).....
Jan. 21—The Trunk Mystery.....
Jan. 28—Triumph of Intelligence.....	391
Jan. 28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done (Com.)
Feb. 4—The Criminal Chief's Capture.....
Feb. 11—Found Again (Dr.).....

IMP.
Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Dec. 12—A Clever Ruse.....	500
Dec. 15—The Poor Student (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 19—The Crippled Teddy Bear.....
Dec. 22—Little Nell's Tobacco (Dr.).....
Dec. 26—The Unexpected Honeymoon (Dr.).	995
Dec. 29—Unreasonable Jealousy (Dr.).....	990
Jan. 2—The Wise Druggist (Dr.).....	995
Jan. 5—Reunited (Dr.).....	995
Jan. 9—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.)	998
Jan. 12—The Empty Shell (Dr.).....	995
Jan. 16—Melody	995
Jan. 19—His First Patient (Dr.).....	500
Jan. 19—The Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship (Dr.)	500
Jan. 30—Maid or Man.....
Feb. 2—The Mix-up
Feb. 2—An Imaginary Elopement.....
Feb. 6—At the Duke's Command (Dr.)....1000
Feb. 9—The Mirror (Com.).....	500
Feb. 9—When the Cat's Away (Com.)....	500
Feb. 13—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 16—The Convert (Dr.).....1000

ITALA

Dec. 8—The Soldier of the Cross.....	890
Dec. 10—Foolshead Knows How to Take His Precautions	588
Dec. 10—The Good Samaritan	408
Dec. 15—The False Accusation.....	774
Dec. 17—The Mother's Shadow.....	456
Dec. 17—Thieves as Quick-Change Artists.....594
Dec. 22—Who Was the Culprit? (Com.)....
Dec. 24—Greediness Spoiled Foolshead's Christmas (Com.)
Dec. 29—The Rustic
Dec. 31—Norwegian Water Falls.....	500
Dec. 31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day..	500
Jan. 5—Antonio Toscarino	900
Jan. 7—Foolshead as Inspector of Hygiene..	900
Jan. 12—Joanna of Braganza.....	900
Jan. 14—The Recall	900
Jan. 19—A Sad Fascination.....
Jan. 21—Visit of a Friend.....
Jan. 26—The Revenging Picture.....
Jan. 28—My Son Is Guilty.....
Feb. 2—The Village Coachman.....
Feb. 4—The Feast of Foolshead.....

LUX.
By Prieur.

Dec. 16—How He Won Her (Com.).....	344
Dec. 16—Her Favorite Tune (Dr.).....	550
Dec. 23—Bill Plays Bowls (Com.).....	423
Dec. 23—Rosalie's Dowry (Com.).....	492
Dec. 30—Aunt Julia's Portrait (Com.).....	547
Dec. 30—Tim Writes a Poem (Com.).....	375
Jan. 6—How They Tricked Father (Com.)..	498
Jan. 6—The Rival Engine Drivers (Dr.)...	367
Jan. 13—Bill as a Jockey (Com.).....	465
Jan. 13—That Is My Name (Com.).....	438
Jan. 22—A Dilemna.....
Jan. 22—Faithful Furniture
Jan. 27—Willie Goes Cycling.....
Jan. 27—Infamous Son
Feb. 3—Back to the Old Homestead.....
Feb. 10—The Orphan's Friend (Dr.).....	711
Feb. 10—That Horse Did Run (Com.).....	272
Feb. 17—Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Dr.)	639
Feb. 17—Matilda Lovestruck (Com.).....	321

NESTOR FILM CO.

Nov. 2—The Girl from the West (Dr.)....
Nov. 9—The Woodsman (Dr.).....	960
Nov. 16—The Ranchman's Bride (Dr.).....
Nov. 23—A Deal in Indians.....1000
Nov. 30—Valley Folks
Dec. 7—The Conquering Hero.....
Dec. 14—The Pilgrim (Dr.).....
Dec. 21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.).....
Dec. 28—Elda of the Mountains (Dr.).....
Jan. 4—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—Sleepy Hollow (Dr.).....	950
Jan. 18—Their New Minister (Dr.).....
Jan. 25—The Man in 23.....
Jan. 25—New Minister
Feb. 1—The Bridal Trail.....
Feb. 8—The Transgressor
Feb. 15—The Light Beyond.....
Feb. 22—His Father's House (Dr.).....

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
("Bison")

	Feet
Dec. 23—The Pale Faced Princess.....
Dec. 27—An Indian's Elopement.....
Dec. 30—Taming Terror
Jan. 3—In the Heart of the Sierras.....	900
Jan. 6—A Savage Girl's Devotion.....	900
Jan. 10—An Indian Trapper's Prize.....	900
Jan. 13—The Creek Claim.....	900
Jan. 17—Texas Ted's Defense.....	900
Jan. 20—The Redskin's Secret.....	950
Jan. 24—Red Man's Wrath.....	900
Jan. 27—Trials of Bud Brown.....	900
Jan. 30—A Tough Tenderfoot.....
Feb. 3—A Squaw's Bravery.....
Feb. 7—The Half Breed's Plan.....
Feb. 9—John Milton (Dr.).....
Feb. 10—The Salted Mine (Dr.).....

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Dec. 31—A Daugbter of Virginia (Dr.).....
Jan. 3—The Pinkerton Man (Dr.).....
Jan. 3—Beaux Not Wanted (Com.).....
Jan. 7—A Woman Without a Heart (Dr.)...
Jan. 17—A Montana Love Story (Com.).....
Jan. 17—Lovers' Trials (Com.).....
Jan. 21—A Noble Heart (Dr.).....
Jan. 24—Wife's Love and Little Dorothy.. .	980
Jan. 28—Masquerader	960
Jan. 31—For My Pal.....
Feb. 4—His First Case.....
Feb. 4—The Cattle King of Arizona (Dr.)..
Feb. 7—Freddie's New Shoes (Com.).....
Feb. 11—A Trip Through Mexico (Sc.).....
Feb. 14—An Unforseen Complication (Com.).
Feb. 18—Under Southern Skies (Dr.).....

RELIANCE

Jan. 18—A Country Girl.....	950
Jan. 21—The Vows	975
Jan. 25—For Remembrance	900
Jan. 28—The Last Laugh.....	975
Feb. 1—A Brass Button.....
Feb. 4—The Command from Galilee.....
Feb. 8—The School Ma'am's Courage (C.-D.)
Feb. 11—The Little Avenger.....
Feb. 15—Three Men (Dr.).....

REVIER

Jan. 4—For Better Or Worse (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—The Goosecreek Claim (Dr.).....
Jan. 18—For the Child's Sake (Dr.).....	500
Jan. 18—You Try It (Com.).....	500

REX

Feb. 16—A Heroine of '76 (Dr.).....	910

SOLAX COMPANY

Jan. 6—The Nightcap (Com.).....
Jan. 6—Salmon Fishing in Canada (Sc.)...
Jan. 13—The Girl and the Burglar (Dr.)....
Jan. 20—A Reporter's Romance (Dr.).....
Jan. 27—His Best Friend (Dr.).....
Feb. 3—Ring of Love.....
Feb. 10—Mixed Pets (Com.).....
Feb. 17—Corinne in Dollyland (Com.).....

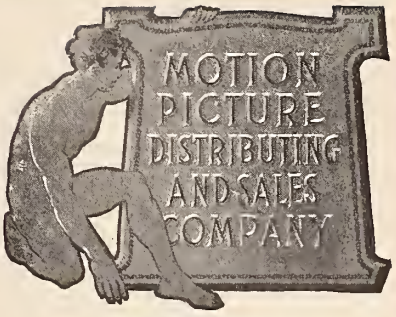
THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Dec. 23—The Childhood of Jack Harkaway (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 27—The Vicar of Wakefield (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 30—Hypnotized (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 3—The Pasha's Daughter.....
Jan. 6—Baseball and Bloomers.....
Jan. 10—Everybody Saves Father (Com.)....
Jan. 10—The Only Girl in Camp (Com.).....
Jan. 13—The Vote that Counts (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 24—When Love Was Blind.....	900
Jan. 27—Prompt Payment
Jan. 27—Stealing a Ride.....	900
Jan. 31—Only in the Way.....
Feb. 3—Adrift
Feb. 7—Westerner and the Earl.....
Feb. 10—The Norwood Necklace.....
Feb. 14—For Her Sake (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Checkmate (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—The Patriot Maid of '76 (Dr.).....

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Dec. 12—A Fight for Millions (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—The Old Miner's Doll (Dr.).....
Dec. 19—A Ward of Uncle Sam (Dr.).....
Dec. 23—The Terror of the Plains (Com.)..
Dec. 26—The Insane Heiress (Dr.).....
Dec. 30—The Missing Bridegroom (Dr.).....
Jan. 6—The Royal Wishbone (Dr.).....
Jan. 2—Mrs. Danver's Divorce.....
Jan. 9—An Erring Son's Awakening (Dr.).
Jan. 16—The Folks Back Home (Dr.).....
Jan. 20—Returned to the Fold (Dr.).....
Jan. 30—Taxicab Mystery
Feb. 3—Counting House Mystery.....
Feb. 6—Foiling the Camorra (Dr.).....
Feb. 10—Was She Justified (Dr.).....
Feb. 13—Condemned to Death (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.).....

Tenacity



Josh Billings Once Said:

"Konsider the postage stamp. Its usefulness konsists in its ability to stick to one thing till it gets there."

Now, a stamp does not stick out of principle—it has none. But YOU have, and you must stick to what's going to butter your bread.

WE'RE TENACIOUS, we're battling for you, and TENACITY on your part means joint prosperity.

Today the exhibitor has the most logical reason in the world for sticking to our PROGRAM.

PROGRAM

MONDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Eclair—Eclair Film Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

TUESDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.

WEDNESDAY
Ambrosio—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Atlas—Atlas Film Co.
Champion—The Champion Film Co.
Nestor—David Horsley.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

THURSDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Rex—Rex M. P. Mfg. Co.
1st release Feb. 16th.

FRIDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Lux—R. Prieur
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.
Solax—Solax Company
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

SATURDAY
Capital—Capital Film Co.
Gt. Northern—Gt. Northern Film Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

List of BUYING EXCHANGES, Feb. 11th, 1911

All others offering these brands for rent can supply only dupes or worn-out subjects.

CANADA

Applegath, L. J., & Sons	145 Yonge St.	Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange	Calgary	Alberta
Gaumont Co.	154 St. Catherine St.	Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co.	Winnipeg	Man.

ALABAMA

Dixie Film Co.	503 Chamber of Com. Bldg.	Birm'ham

CALIFORNIA

California Film Exchange	1065 Mission St.	San Francisco
Miles Bros.	790 Turk St.	San Francisco
Western Film Co.	514 S. Los Angeles St.	Los Angeles

COLORADO

Co-operative Ind. Film Co.	Barclay Block	Denver
W. H. Swanson Film Exch.	301 Railroad Bldg.	Denver

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

B. & W. Film Exchange	22 La Droit Bldg.	Washington
Paramount Film Exchange	428 9th St, N. W.	Washington

GEORGIA

Consolidated Film Exchange	Rhodes Bldg.	Atlanta, Ga.

ILLINOIS

Anti Trust Film Co.	79 So. Clark St.	Chicago
Globe Film Service	107 E. Madison St.	Chicago
H. & H. Film Service Co.	98 Jackson Blvd.	Chicago
Laemmle Film Service	196 Lake St.	Chicago
Standard Film Exchange	155 E. Washington St.	Chicago

INDIANA

Central Film Service Co.	119 N. Illinois St.	Indianapolis

KANSAS

Wichita Film & Supply Co.	122 N. Market St.	Wichita

LOUISIANA

Dixie Film Company	720 Maison Blanche Bldg.	New Orleans

MASSACHUSETTS

Boston Film Rental Co.	665 Washington St.	Boston
W. E. Green Film Exchange	228 Tremont St.	Boston

MARYLAND

B. & W. Film Exchange	412 East Baltimore St.	Baltimore
Consolidated Amusement Co.	28 W. Lexington St.	Baltimore

MINNESOTA

Laemmle Film Service	400 Sykes Block	Minneapolis

MICHIGAN

Michigan Film & Supply Co.	1106 Union Trust Bldg.	Detroit

MISSOURI

Bijou Film & Amusement Co.	1222 Grand Ave.	Kansas City
J. W. Morgan	1310 Walnut St.	Kansas City
Swanson-Crawford Film Co.	Century Bldg.	St. Louis

NEBRASKA

Laemmle Film Service	1517 Farnam St.	Omaha

NEW YORK STATE

Albany Film Exchange	418 Broadway	Albany
Victor Film Service	39 Church St.	Buffalo

NEW YORK CITY

Empire Film Exchange	150 East 14th St.	New York City
Great Eastern Film Exchange	21 East 14th St.	New York City
Hudson Film Company	138 East 14th St.	New York City
Peerless Film Exchange	94 Fifth Avenue	New York City
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange	110 Fourth Ave.	New York City

OHIO

Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co.	309 Arcade Bldg.	Dayton
Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co.	315 West 4th St.	Cincinnati
Toledo Film Service	319 Superior St.	Toledo
Victor Film Service	Prospect & Huron Sts.	Cleveland

OREGON

Independent West. F. Ex.	Swetland Bldg.	Portland

OKLAHOMA

United Motion Picture Co.	112 Main St.	Oklahoma City

PENNSYLVANIA

Eagle Film Exchange	143 N. 8th St.	Philadelphia
Independent Film Exchange	415 Ferry St.	Pittsburg
Philadelphia Projection Co.	44 North 9th St.	Philadelphia
Philadelphia Film Exchange	934 Arch St.	Philadelphia
Pittsburg Photoplay Co.	412 Ferry St.	Pittsburg
Swaab Film Service Co.	338 Spruce St.	Philadelphia

TEXAS

Texas Film Exchange	311 Elm St.	Dallas

UTAH

Co-operative Ind. Film Co.	320 Atlas Block	Salt Lake City

WASHINGTON

Pacific Film Exchange	Globe Bldg.	Seattle

WISCONSIN

Western Film Exchange	307 Enterprise Bldg.	Milwaukee

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

111 East 14th Street NEW YORK CITY

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH.

	Feet
Dec. 22—The White Roses	588
Dec. 22—The Recreation of an Heiress	410
Dec. 26—Winning Back His Love (Dr.)	994
Dec. 29—His Wife's Sweethearts (Com.)	682
Dec. 29—After the Ball (Com.)	311
Jan. 2—The Two Paths	992
Jan. 5—When a Man Loves	998
Jan. 9—The Italian Barber (Com.)	993
Jan. 12—The Midnight Marauder (Dr.)	392
Jan. 12—Help Wanted (Com.)	605
Jan. 16—His Trust (Dr.)	996
Jan. 19—His Trust Fulfilled (Dr.)	999
Jan. 23—Fate's Turning (Dr.)	998
Jan. 26—The Poor Sick Men (Com.)	991
Jan. 30—A Wreath of Orange Blossoms (Dr.)	993
Feb. 2—Three Sisters (Dr.)	997
Feb. 6—Heart Beats of Long Ago (Dr.)	997
Feb. 9—Priscilla's Engagement Kiss (Com.)	997

EDISON

Dec. 23—A Christmas Carol	1000
Dec. 27—Eldora, the Fruit Girl (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 28—A Family of Vegetarians (Com.)	990
Dec. 30—The Romance of Hefty Burke (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 3—In the Days of Chivalry	1000
Jan. 4—Sleep, Gentle Sleep	990
Jan. 6—The Fire Department of New York City	400
Jan. 6—A Western Night	600
Jan. 10—The Test of Friendship (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 11—The Home of the Seal (Educational)	300
Jan. 11—The Gardener's Ladder (Com.)	700
Jan. 13—The Link that Held (Dr.)	960
Jan. 17—With Interest to Date (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Jan. 18—Uncle's Birthday Gift (Com.)	995
Jan. 20—Mike the Miser (Dr.)	990
Jan. 24—An Eventful Evening (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 25—The Lover and the Count (Com.)	995
Jan. 27—The Black Bordered Letter (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 1—Bumptious as Romeo (Com.)	975
Feb. 3—Selling Old Master (Dr.)	990
Feb. 7—The Doctor (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 8—Two Valentines (Com.)	1000
Feb. 10—His First Commission (Dr.)	990
Feb. 14—The Rajah (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 15—The Ransom of Red Chief (Com.)	975
Feb. 24—The Price of Victory	1000
Feb. 17—A Stage Romance	1000
Feb. 21—The Rival Sculptors	990
Feb. 22—Mr. Bumptious, Detective	990
Feb. 28—The Iron Master	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Dec. 10—A Cowboy's Vindication	950
Dec. 13—A Tangled Masquerade (Com.)	1000
Dec. 17—The Tenderfoot Messenger (Dr.)	997
Dec. 20—Hank and Lank	265
Dec. 20—The Greater Call	730
Dec. 21—The Bad Man's Christmas Gift	975
Dec. 27—Girls Will Be Boys (Com.)	1000
Dec. 31—A Gambler of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 3—The Redeemed Criminal	1000
Jan. 7—The Count and the Cowboys	1000
Jan. 10—The Sophmore's Romance (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 14—The Girl of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 17—His Master's Son (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 21—The Border Ranger (Dr.)	985
Jan. 24—A Sin Unpardonable (Dr.)	998
Jan. 28—The Two Reformations (Dr.)	996
Jan. 31—The Jilted Joker (Com.)	640
Jan. 31—Hank and Lank (Com.)	366
Feb. 4—Carmenita, the Faithful (Dr.)	995
Feb. 7—A Woman's Voice (Com.)	566
Feb. 7—Ten Words for Twenty-five Cents (Com.)	425
Feb. 11—The Bad Man's Downfall (Dr.)	1000

GAUMONT
G. Kleine

Dec. 13—The Phantom Rider	279
Dec. 13—Closed Gate	676
Dec. 17—Herod and the New Born King (Biblical)	965
Dec. 20—The Cinderella Girl (Dr.)	769
Dec. 20—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical)	220
Dec. 24—The Old Home (Dr.)	732
Dec. 24—Cain and Abel Biblical)	279
Dec. 27—The Adventuress (Dr.)	995
Dec. 31—The Doctor's Secretary (Dr.)	981
Jan. 3—The Artist's Pay Day	969
Jan. 7—The Woman Wins	945
Jan. 10—A Child's Plea (Dr.)	758
Jan. 10—The Hills of Corsica (Travelogue)	243
Jan. 14—A Simple Rustic Tale (Dr.)	958
Jan. 17—The Sealed Letter (Dr.)	837
Jan. 17—A Water Contest (Educational)	168
Jan. 21—The Kleptomaniac's Repentance (Dr.)	965
Jan. 24—Twilight of a Soldier's Life (Dr.)	945
Jan. 28—The Baby Fortune Hunters (Dr.)	682
Jan. 28—Gorges of the Bourne, France (Travelogue)	293
Jan. 31—At Eventide (Scenic)	173
Jan. 31—The Last Curtain	823
Feb. 4—Jiggers Looks for a Job	537
Feb. 4—Krimmel Waterfalls (Scenic)	435
Feb. 7—Jiggers' Moving Day (Com.)	395
Feb. 11—Napoleon in 1814 (Dr.)	797
Feb. 11—Autumn Leaves (Edu.)	185
Feb. 7—The Strongest Tie	605
Feb. 14—The Reformation of the Suffragettes	665
Feb. 14—Land Marks of Avignon, France	338
Feb. 18—Saul and David	128
Feb. 18—At the End of the Road	838
Feb. 21—The Plot That Failed	815
Feb. 21—Pictures in Chemistry	175

KALEM CO.

Dec. 16—Her Indian Mother (Dr.)	995
Dec. 21—The Little Spreewald Maiden	985
Dec. 23—When Lovers Part	963
Dec. 28—The Girl Spy Before Vicksburg (War Dr.)	935
Dec. 30—The Stranger (Dr.)	1005
Jan. 4—The Bolted Door	975
Jan. 6—The Runaway Engine	955
Jan. 11—For Love of an Enemy (Dr.)	995
Jan. 13—The Heart of an Indian Mother (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 18—Her Chum's Brother (Com.-Dr.)	980
Jan. 20—Robbie and the Redskins (Dr.)	850
Jan. 20—Modern Light Battery in Action	95
Jan. 25—The Secret of the Still (Dr.)	950
Jan. 27—Puritans and Indians (Dr.)	970
Feb. 1—The Sheriff's Sister (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 3—The Trail of the Pomas Charm (Dr.)	1005
Feb. 8—Little Sister (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Feb. 10—The Broken Trail (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN.

Dec. 15—The Musical Ranch (Dr.)
Dec. 19—The Dead Leter (Dr.)
Dec. 22—An American Count (Dr.)
Dec. 26—Making a Man of Him (Dr.)	990
Dec. 29—Blue Horse Mine (Dr.)	990
Jan. 2—Art and the Legacy	950
Jan. 5—His Last Parade	390
Jan. 5—A Mix in Masks	600
Jan. 5—The Crimson Scars	980
Jan. 5—Fire! Fire! Fire!	980
Jan. 9—Tag Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.)	935
Jan. 12—The Widow's Choice (Com.)	950
Jan. 16—Will It Ever Come to This? (Com.)	715
Jan. 16—Easy Coin (Com.)	250
Jan. 19—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 23—Father Makes Himself Useful (Com.)	975
Jan. 26—Father Love (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 30—His Bogus Uncle (Com.)	1000
Feb. 2—Age vs. Youth (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 6—A Double Elopement (Com.)	990
Feb. 9—The Petticoat Sheriff (Com.)	1000

G. MELIES.

Nov. 17—His Sergeant's Stripes (Dr.)	950
Nov. 24—The Cowboy's and the Bachelor Girl (Dr.)
Dec. 1—Pals (Dr.)
Dec. 8—What Great Bear Learned
Dec. 15—Old Norris' Gal
Dec. 22—A Western Welcome	980
Dec. 29—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.)	980
Jan. 12—The Owner of the "L. L." Ranch (Dr.)	980
Jan. 19—Changing Cooks (Com.)	980
Jan. 26—How Mary Met the Cowpunchers (Western Dr.)	980
Feb. 2—Only a Sister (Dr.)	980
Feb. 9—Tony, the Greaser (Dr.)	980
Feb. 16—Billy and His Pal (Dr.)

PATHE.

Dec. 28—The American Fleet in French Waters (Topical)	125
Dec. 28—In Full Cry (Scenic)	331
Dec. 30—Catalan, the Minstrel (Dr.)	768
Dec. 30—Carnival of Japanese Firemen in Tokio (Sc.)	230
Dec. 31—The Yaqui Girl (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 2—The Misplaced Petticoat	790
Jan. 2—Dutch Kids	497
Jan. 4—The Cowboy's Innocence	994
Jan. 6—An Intrigue	997
Jan. 7—Love Under Difficulties	781
Jan. 7—The Funeral of Count Tolstoi	220
Jan. 9—The Evils of Betting (Dr.)	676
Jan. 9—In the Land of Monkeys and Snakes	276
Jan. 11—The Twin Cinderellas	705
Jan. 11—Dusty Rhodes Takes a Flight (C.)	249
Jan. 13—Max Is Almost Married (Com.)	572
Jan. 13—So Near but Not Quite (Com.)	420
Jan. 14—The Battle at Redwood (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 16—Marguerite's Birthday (Com.-Dr.)	659
Jan. 16—Saved by Her Prayers (Dr.)	331
Jan. 18—Trailed by an Indian (Dr.)	495
Jan. 18—Sea Birds and Their Haunts (Edu.)	462
Jan. 20—The Tables are Turned (Com.)	981
Jan. 21—The Marked Dollar (Dr.)	968
Jan. 23—How Max Went Around the World (Com.)	633
Jan. 23—Gasoline for a Tonic (Com.)	361
Jan. 25—Saved by Telegraphy (Dr.)	720
Jan. 25—Whiffels' New Sleeves (Com.)	282
Jan. 27—Il Trovatore (Dr.)	964
Jan. 28—Father Against His Will (Com.)	720
Jan. 28—Betty Rolls Along (Com.)	289
Jan. 30—The Escape from the Tuileries (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 1—Hearts, Hunger, Happiness (C.-D.)	722
Feb. 1—Practical Brook Trout Breeding (Edu.)	279
Feb. 3—The Slave's Revolt (Dr.)	722
Feb. 3—Rice Industry in Japan (Edu.)	256
Feb. 4—A Cowboy's Devotedness (Dr.)	922
Feb. 6—Max Has the Boxing Fever (Com.)	561
Feb. 6—An Imitator of Blondin (Com.)	400
Feb. 8—Legally Dead (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 10—The Missing Bride (Dr.)	800
Feb. 10—Review of Chilian Troops (Edu.)	180
Feb. 11—Silver Leaf's Heart (Dr.)	1000

SELIG

Dec. 15—County Fair (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 19—John Dough and the Cheruh (Mystical)	1000
Dec. 22—Overland to Fremont	1000
Dec. 26—The Rustlers (Dr.)	990
Dec. 29—Justinian and Theodora (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 2—The Argonauts	1000
Jan. 5—Ramona's Father	1000
Jan. 9—Shadows of the Past (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 12—The Rival Dramatist	1000
Jan. 16—Buddy, the Little Guardian (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 19—An Englishman's Honor (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 23—A Robust Patient (Com.)	1000
Jan. 26—The Spy (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 30—The Little Circus Rider
Feb. 2—The Curse of the Red Man
Feb. 6—Too Much Mother-in-Law
Feb. 9—Thelma
Feb. 12—The Survival of the Fittest
Feb. 16—The Buccaneers
Feb. 20—The Padre
Feb. 27—The Eye of Conscience

URBAN-ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

Oct. 26—The Signet Ring (Dr.)	868
Oct. 26—In the Spreewald (Scenic)	132
Nov. 2—Tragical Concealment (Dr.)	640
Nov. 2—Crossing the Andes (Scenic)	350
Nov. 9—Secret of the Cellar (Dr.)	788
Nov. 9—A Trip Through Scotland (Scenic)	217
Nov. 16—The Rival Barons (Dr.)	860
Nov. 16—An Alpine Retreat (Scenic)	142
Nov. 23—Behind a Mask (Dr.)	516
Nov. 23—Nantes (Scenic)	450
Nov. 30—The Return at Midnight	634
Nov. 30—Ramble Through Ceylon	319
Dec. 7—Death of Admiral Coligny	992
Dec. 5—On the Mexican Border
Dec. 8—Reggie's Engagement
Dec. 14—The Little Matcheller's Christmas (Dr.)	749
Dec. 14—Scenes in British India (Sc.)	253
Dec. 21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.)	676
Dec. 21—A Chamois Hunt	332
Dec. 28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.)	650
Dec. 28—Coaching in Devonshire, England (Travelogue)	348
Jan. 4—A Lock of Hair	978
Jan. 11—Washed Ashore (Dr.)	670
Jan. 11—Woodcarving in Brienz	320
Jan. 18—By the King's Order (Dr.)	991
Jan. 25—The Sailor's Return (Dr.)	689
Jan. 25—Scenes in Jersey (Travelogue)	296
Feb. 1—Disinherited	990
Feb. 8—On the Border of the Forest (Dr.)	895
Feb. 8—Canadian Iron Center, Port Arthur (Educational)	110
Feb. 15—Catherine Howard	1005
Feb. 22—The Golden Sickle	882
Feb. 22—Felling a Smoke-stack	113

VITAGRAPH

Nov. 18—The Bum and the Bomh (Com.)
Nov. 19—Francesca Da Rimini (Dr.)
Nov. 22—Suspicion (Dr.)
Nov. 25—A Four-Footed Pest (Com.)
Nov. 25—The Statue Dog
Nov. 26—Love, Luck and Gasoline (Dr.)
Nov. 29—A Woman's Love (Dr.)
Dec. 2—Jack Fat and Jim Slim at Coney Island (Com.)	951
Dec. 3—The Poacher's Wife (Dr.)	1001
Dec. 6—A Tin-Type Romance (Com.)	996
Dec. 9—He Who Laughs Last (Com.)	927
Dec. 10—The Color Sergeant's Horse (Dr.)	978
Dec. 13—The Law and the Man (Dr.)	1010
Dec. 16—Playing at Divorce (Dr.)
Dec. 16—The International Motor Boat Race (Sc.)
Dec. 17—A Dixie Mother (Dr.)
Dec. 20—The Light in the Window	997
Dec. 23—Clancy	995
Dec. 24—Jean and the Waif	989
Dec. 27—In Neighboring Kingdoms (Dr.)	995
Dec. 30—Crazy Apples (Com.)	988
Dec. 31—Where the Wind Blows (Dr.)	987
Jan. 3—All Is Fair In Love and War	973
Jan. 6—The Misses Finch and Nephew Billy	979
Jan. 7—The Old Water Jar	984
Jan. 10—Doctor Cupid (Com.)	987
Jan. 13—Water Lilies (Dr.)	991
Jan. 14—Coward or Hero (Dr.)	975
Jan. 17—Three Men and a Maid (Com.)	1000
Jan. 20—The Girl in the Film (Com.)	963
Jan. 21—Cast Up by the Deep (Dr.)	1001
Jan. 24—It Did Look Suspicious (Dr.)	617
Jan. 24—The Fireman's Parade (Edu.)	383
Jan. 27—Girl of the Mountains (Dr.)	999
Jan. 28—Davy Jones in the South Seas (Com.)	995
Feb. 4—A Queen for a Day	1000
Feb. 7—The Deluge	978
Jan. 31—Jean Rescues	976
Feb. 3—Society and the Man	981
Feb. 10—The League of Mercy (Dr.)	991
Feb. 11—At the White Man's Door (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 14—Consuming Love	975
Feb. 17—When the Light Waned	994

THE MOTIOGRAPH

YOU WHO PAY WANT TO KNOW THE TRUTH

INVESTIGATE THE MOTIOGRAPH and you will find THE TRUTH salient and alive—in every feature

SIMPLE—ARTISTIC—RIGID—DURABLE

THE MOTIOGRAPH is a distinctive triumph in mechanical skill and workmanship, and in designing this superb projection machine the makers have kept well in advance of the times, more than anticipating the requirements of the Photoplay house.

THE MOTIOGRAPH CANNOT BE APPROACHED BY ANY OTHER MACHINE

1911 Model soon ready. Send for name of nearest dealer.

MANUFACTURED AND JOBBED BY

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. COMPANY, 564 West Randolph St., CHICAGO

AGENTS IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

REPAIRED

by skilled mechanics at short notice and reasonable prices. Work guaranteed.

Supplies of All Kinds.

CHAS. E. DRESSLER,
388 2nd Ave., City, near 23rd St.
Take elevator.

PATENTS

"BE INDEPENDENT."

Moving Picture Devices a Specialty.

Charles Lowell Howard

PATENT ATTORNEY

706-707-708 M'Gill Bldg., WASHINGTON, D. C.

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We tecah you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars. ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS, 908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., Chicago.

Only Eight Weeks on the market and it covers twenty-seven states.
California came in last week.

THE MORTIMER FILM CLEANER

now reaches from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Send for the booklet.

Fidelity Bldg., Portland, Maine

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone: 3790 Oxford

AMERICAN STANDARD DOUBLE DISSOLVING MOVING PICTURE MACHINE. ALL COMPLETE, $200.00

A POWERS No. 5, SLIGHTLY USED,

$100.00

MANHATTAN SLIDE CO.

124 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

THE KINEMATOGRAPH

The original and leading journal of the Moving Picture Business. Has a larger circulation and is recognised by the whole trade as THE ORGAN OF THE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS.

2 dols. 68 per year mailed free. Specimen free.

HERON & CO., Tottenham Street, LONDON, W., ENGLAND.

Cinematograph Pub. Co., 30 W. 13th St., New York, are Authorized Agents for Subscriptions and Advertisements in America

IMP ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY

The first Two "IMP" releases filmed in Cuba, are certainly excellent moving picture productions. An innovation that will be welcomed by Independent exhibitors everywhere—and there are more to follow.

If you are not showing two "IMPS" a week you are knocking your own game. Demand two a week from your exchange—and see that you get them.

"PICTURELAND" The First "IMP" CUBAN RELEASE

"PICTURELAND" is the title of the initial Cuban release, February 20th. If the excellency of this picture is any criterion by which to judge, the expense of sending two producing companies to a clime where exterior scenes can be filmed in the dead of winter has been justified. "PICTURELAND" is a beautiful and elaborate production, with a pretty love story told in an intensely dramatic manner, interpreted by the stars of the "IMP" Stock Company. The settings are gorgeous, and the picture has for a plot a romance of love. Be sure you get this first Cuban release.

FILMED AMID TROPICAL SETTINGS

"ARTFUL KATE," the release of February 23rd, in which "Little Mary" appears, is a romantic little comedy of a Cuban-American love affair, in which a handsome soldier and his fiancee figure as the principals. It is a rich production, set in a background of tropical scenery, bewildering in its loveliness, the locale being tastefully selected in which to portray the action. "Little Mary" appears at her best as a Spanish beauty, handsomely gowned in habiliments of that country. It is refined comedy—such as has made the "IMP" Company famous. "ARTFUL KATE" is a film you can feature and make good.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America

CARL LAEMMLE, Pres.

102 WEST 101st STREET
NEW YORK

All "IMP" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

"Want to congratulate you on the excellent service you have been giving me—it has certainly been fine. The Independent films are getting better all the time. We played to-night to 1,450 people in two performances—that's going some." That's what A. F. Heineman, Memorial Opera House, Valparaiso, Ind., writes. And that's what they all say! Machines are selling rapidly. Did you get a copy of my latest Supplement List? You had better write for one. Tell me how many reels of film you are using every week, how often you change, and the amount of films you are putting on to each and every change, then let me submit to you a proposition whereby we can get together, and pretty soon you'll be a well-satisfied customer of

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

HEADQUARTERS:
196-198 Lake Street, CHICAGO
MINNEAPOLIS OMAHA

"The biggest and best film renter in the world"

Mr. Operator!

You Want To Make Some Extra Money

So Do I.

Write Me For Particulars at Once.
Give me your exact voltage, cycles, make of machine, length of throw, size of picture and make of carbons. If you have a current saver, state make—I will do the rest.

ADDRESS DEPARTMENT N.

J. H. HALLBERG
36 East 23d St., New York City

Announcement, Advertising, Travelogue, Recitation
and slides for every purpose made to order
GEO. J. GOLDTHORPE & CO.
244 West 14th Street New York

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

American Releases

TWO RELEASES EACH WEEK

MONDAY AND THURSDAY

Release Monday, February 13th.

"A Quiet Evening At Home"

A full reel comedy of exceptional merit. Not a dull foot in the reel. Very funny. Length approximately 985 feet.

Release Thursday, February 16th.

"In the Land of Cactus"

A Western Drama. Realistic and abounding in thrilling situations. Length approximately 980 feet.

Release Monday, February 20th.

"The College Spendthrift"

A dramatic exposition of youthful folly and its inevitable harvest of regret. A film your audience will like. Length approximately 990 feet.

Release Thursday, February 23rd.

"Strategy"

A film that tells a tragic story leading to a thrilling climax and ending in a situation that is truly laughable and funny. Length approximately 980 feet.

ALL Independent Exchanges buy American Films.

AMERICAN FILM MFG. COMPANY

BANK FLOOR = ASHLAND BLOCK

CHICAGO, ILL.

"FOR WASHINGTON!" IS READY FOR YOU

THE THANHOUSER TWO-A-WEEK

"2-4-U and Good Ones, Too!"

RELEASED TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 21
THE GEORGE WASHINGTON SPECIAL

"FOR WASHINGTON!"

ONE OF THE BEST "THANHOUSER PATRIOTICS"

We all know of Washington's remarkable feat in crossing the Delaware River at Trenton with half of his command, surprising the Hessians and making them his prisoners; but how advance word of helplessness of his enemy reached the great general has ever been a mystery. The bearer of the message was the very patriotic maid here portrayed, who, with her American scout sweetheart severely wounded, cleverly disguises herself and takes her lover's message to Washington. Through her aid, the latter reaches the Hessian headquarters, is admitted by the wounded scout, and the enemy awake to find the American flag flying over them and the American army in full possession of their camp, the victors in one of the most bloodless yet decisive struggles of the Revolution. No. 187. Code word, Patriot.

RELEASED FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 24
"AND A CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM"

A NEWSBOY HERO

was one of those remarkable youngsters that poverty could not down nor misery sour. For deep in his heart of hearts was a spring of goodness, of strength, and even of charity, that betokened brighter days and an honorable position in the important life that was to come. Small wonder, therefore, that at the first test of his manhood, he acquitted himself with rare distinction. He merely acted according to his lights—and they were strong with the flame of righteousness. He had been weighed and not found wanting, as may have been expected. The weighing is what the reel takes up. No. 188. Code word, Hero.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 7

February 18
1911

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

SCENE FROM
"LOVE'S TEST"
"SOLAX" RELEASE, FEBRUARY 24th

GREAT NORTHERN

SUPREME IN ITS FIELD

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 18TH

THE LIFE OF A MUSCHIK

This film, with the aid of an excellent plot, gives a very clear conception of the daily life of the oppressed Russian peasant.

THE FALSE ALARM

A rattling good comedy film.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 25TH

HIS GREAT DUTY

(Enacted by Actors of the Royal Theater of Copenhagen.)

A magnificent feature production. Gorgeous scenes. Exquisite tinting and toning. Photography clear as crystal.

Order this film from your exchange now. Don't let the other fellow get ahead of you.

All First-Class Independent Exchanges Handle Our Product

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

BISON FILMS

FIVE REELS A WEEK

TUESDAY---BISON. WEDNESDAY---AMBROSIO. THURSDAY---ITALA. FRIDAY---BISON. SATURDAY---ITALA

"The Way of the Red Man"

Released Tuesday, February 21

A story of romance and war among the Indians. A discarded suitor seeks revenge and brings trouble and sorrow to the girl's tribe, but is punished in the end.

ITALA RELEASES

"LITTLE SOULS"
Thursday, February 23

"FOOLSHEAD'S PRESENT"
"THE HAVANA CIGAR"
Saturday, February 25

"The Fate of Jo Dorr"

Released Friday, February 24

Escaping from the pursuing sheriff, Jo is caught in a fatal trap set by his father to catch a marauder. Wonderful riding. Thrilling scenes.

AMBROSIO RELEASE

"THE REDEEMING ANGEL"
"TWEEDLEDOM IS SHY"

Wednesday, February 22

Sold Exclusively Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO., 1 Union Square, New York City

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone: 3790 Oxford

CHAMP SUCCESS

"The Old Man and Jim"

Released Wednesday, February 22nd Author, James Whitcomb Riley
The Talk of the Continent

"Stick Around," exhibitor, and keep your fingers itchy for this reel of March 1st.

"A Western Girl's Choice"

Until her choice is determined will keep you spell-bound, but until your choice is determined will the good work remain undone.

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY
Mark M. Dintenfass, Gen'l Mgr.
12 East 15th Street, New York City

Camera Man

with full experience of the general work required in studio and the Cinematographic Art, in and out doors. Can take full charge. Apply Camera, "Moving Picture News."

MACHINES REPAIRED
So They Last

Operators Wanted to handle improved repairs side line

E. W. LAYEZZI
3042 N. Ashland Avenue -:- CHICAGO

ADVERTISERS GET RESULTS

FROM THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS The Only Educational Paper in the Industry

THE MOTIOGRAPH

Start on a Sound Basis

Get a machine that can DO the work—and do it now—and to-morrow—and for a good long time to come.

Let the idea about the original machine go.

BE MODERN—UP-TO-DATE—GET MACHINE WISE by installing the modern machine—THE MOTIOGRAPH.

This is a day of progress—Time keeps on coming and going—and old-fashioned machines must be replaced with THE MOTIOGRAPH—THE MOST DURABLE—SIMPLE—ACCESSIBLE Motion Picture Machine on the market—and THE MACHINE THAT PROJECTS THE BEST PICTURE.

MANUFACTURED AND JOBBED BY
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. COMPANY, 564 West Randolph St., CHICAGO
AGENTS IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES

WE TOLD YOU SO!
WE KNEW IT!

REX HAS MADE GOOD!

Yes, it has made BETTER—better film than anyone (except ourselves) had expected. The jury of exchangemen have brought in a verdict that Rex should be on every exhibitor's program.

YOUR EXCHANGE HAS ORDERED REX!
U-NEED-A-REX!
WE TELL YOU SO!

"THE STORY OF A PRAYER RUG"

Released, Thursday, February 23rd, is another Rex!
DO YOUR DUTY!

Rex Motion Picture Mfg. Co.

573-9 Eleventh Avenue
NEW YORK CITY

SALES COMPANY BUSY SHIPPING 'EM.

RELIANCE PICTORIAL PLAYS

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

ACTED BY AN ALL-STAR STOCK COMPANY

"EVER THE ACCUSER"

Released Saturday, February 25

Remorse and fear conjure up accusing visions of the dead man, until the weakened mind breaks, ending in confession and disaster.

"THE TRUMP CARD"

Released Wednesday, March 1

A brave woman secures the winning hand in a battle of wits, and causes retribution for the downfall and death of her brother.

TWO REELS PER WEEK—WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY

Place your order with your Exchange

CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES, 1 Union Square, New York City

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

European Agents: INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., Breams Building, Chancery Lane, London, E. C.

Chicago Representative: J. J. Sullivan. 866 Graceland Ave. 'Phone Graceland 5053

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV February 18, 1911 Number 7

Notes of the Week

OUR FRONT COVER ILLUSTRATION.

The cut in the center this week illustrates a scene from the "Solax" release of February 24th, entitled "Love's Test," a full synopsis of which appears in the usual column of the manufacturers' data.

The cut following is another illustration from the same subject:

THE INDEPENDENT SITUATION

We have been taken to task very severely for publishing in our issue of February 4th the full statement and text of the suits before the Circuit Court in New York, wherein we claimed a "Great Independent Victory," gained on February 1st. We have been told that we have published untruthful, misleading and malicious statements, it was remarked that we had committed a great travesty of good taste, had abused the privileges of our editorial position, and that generally speaking, we had made a hash of the whole business. A statement was made that we might hear more about it in contempt proceedings. We asked him, why so highly indignant at the Moving Picture News for giving publicity to what we believed of very vast importance to the trade not only in America but the world over? We would like to point out the fact that the eyes of the trade in every civilized country are looking to America to learn the results of litigation by the Patents Company against the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company's Associates. We want to go on record as saying that the party aggrieved did not have the courage of his convictions nor did he have the honesty of putting those opinions in letter form, protesting against the article published. We told him we would give him all the publicity that he desired and would publish his name in full and our remarks thereto, but up to the present time of writing we have heard nothing concerning the matter. We want to put ourselves right with our readers and re-assert that the proceedings in the court of February 1st were of the utmost importance to the industry, and the News was the only paper that published this report, notwithstanding the fact that every paper received a copy of the proceedings as did we ourselves. We took the matter up with a prominent member of the Sales Company, who furnished us with the data, and he said that he had taken the matter up personally with his private counsel and this counsel had declared there was nothing in the report as published, except what was of the utmost importance, and should be distributed broadcast, so that the public at large might have the facts at first hand; that there was nothing in the report that any one could object to, or call in question as to its truthfulness. We are content and fully satisfied with that ruling.

We may say in addition to the above that we have no intention of disseminating misinformation, nor have we any desire to create unrest among exhibitors. There is nothing baseless about the facts that we published but that they may cause unrest among the exhibitors is possibly correct. We take it for granted the exhibitors are now beginning to see that they are paying $104 a year for absolutely no protection whatever, they are paying $104 a year for the privilege of using their own machines, and running any old "cold copies" that the exchange chooses to give them, if they murmur, or state that they have used this copy some months ago, they are told they can take that or nothing, they are perfectly helpless, and the General Film Company or whatever alias it chooses to go under.

has them in its power. When exhibitors are threatened like this we do not think they should be blamed for feeling dissatisfied at trying to gain and keep what is justly their due. We can say one thing—and we would like to say it very forcibly—that is: If every exhibitor who reads this copy of the Moving Picture News would immediately—unless he is fully satisfied that the goods supplied to him are all he needs, and that he is content to pay the price therefor—inform his exchange that he is not going to pay any more license fees but that he is going to choose whatever he wishes for his own exhibition, that he is going to use both the Patents Company and the Sales Company's goods—then the $104 would soon crumble away and he would quickly get in the position where he ought to be, viz., that of dictator and not the dictated to.

Another point that comes up occasionally—we met it ourselves last week—it is also generally put to us in a sneering manner. You are supporting the so-called Independents, are you not? Why this should be the case we do not know, but we would like to point out to our readers that there are two parties in the field, that there always will be two parties, one is composed of the licensees of the Motion Picture Patents Company, the other is the associates of the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company, and why "gentlemen" do not give these sections their proper name is, as we have said before, more than we can understand. The Motion Picture Patents Company endeavors, through one adjudicated patent which they have acquired, and several unadjudicated patents which, in our opinion, will be thrown out as soon as they ever come before the courts in the proper manner and are properly defended, are seeking by hook and by crook to intimidate an old enthraldom, the exhibitor. The Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company is endeavoring to defend itself from what it considers malicious litigation, and is being upheld by practically two-thirds of the exchanges in the country, also they cater to about half the exhibitors, and we hope "right will win over might," so that in defining the position of these companies, whether we call it the "Trust" or "Independent," it should be defined as such, and not by the unasked sneer or innuendo attached thereto. It is either one or the other, that is, it is either Trust or Independent, and not "so-called" Trust or "so-called" Independent.

Another special point, we know (of our own personal knowledge), that there are non-infringing cameras upon the market. Our advertisement columns of the past two weeks give evidence of one, another which we know concerning, has been submitted to the highest patent attorneys available, has been declared to be absolutely a non-infringing camera, and one that could be used by any one without fear of litigation. There is still another of which we have been shown the working drawings; it is perfect in its arrangement, both in theory and in practice, because it is constructed on so simple a basis that no one can go wrong who uses it, nor will it get out of order with fair treatment. Other non-infringing cameras are on the market, but we have no special good word to say for them; they are not practical, they might do at a pinch; so that when carping critics and prejudiced persons come to our office with statements, which we are trying to contravert, we want to say, "We are from Missouri and must be shown that we are wrong," backed up by good, solid reasons and evidence before we write anything different to what we have done. While on this question of the policy of the News the attorney for the Patents Company, we understand, made some very disparaging remarks, partly to the effect that it was the paid organ of the Sales Company, and as such voiced its sentiments. We beg to differ from the Learned Counsel, and state most emphatically that it is not the organ of the Sales Company nor of any other company. We simply voice our own opinion without fear or favor. By this we mean, our opinion has always been voiced in the interest of Independents and of straightforward dealing. We have befriended the exhibitor whom we consider the mainstay of the whole industry; we have befriended the operator on whom depends the success or failure of an exhibition; we have championed the cause of the exchange men. And who among the number, whether Patents Company or Sales Company associates, can accuse us that we have not told them the truth, and that we have voiced our sentiment irrespective of whether it brought us dollars or doughnuts, and for this independence we have very often the latter instead of the former?

We have never sat on both sides of the fence, nor have we been lax in standing up for independence in the true sense of the word. It has been thrown at us that we are only carrying Independent advertisements. That is so. The question has been asked us, "Why do we not carry the Patents Company's ads?" The Moving Picture News is open to carry the advertisements of every manufacturer in the industry, in whatever sphere of supply or demand he may be, irrespective of what side of the fence he may be on. While we have canvassed, and canvassed largely and sold space only, perhaps we might say, to the independent section, yet our columns are not closed to the Patents Company's advertisements. The only difference is—the one we go after—the other must come to us. That is all there is to say to it. All we ask is a fair field and no favor. We stand up for those interests we have at heart, and what is more, we know we shall win in the end, or we would not take the stand we do.

INANE CRITICISM

Taking up the copy of the Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly for February 2d we note some of the "Latest News from America," which is written by an irresponsible person who is not in touch with the business, and we want to rub some of his remarks into the minds of our readers, and to show them the opinion that this critic holds concerning them and their productions. Take the following three paragraphs as an example:

"I take note of your editorial admonition as to the improvement in the quality of the English film, and I am glad to note your criticisms on the films made this side. It is the case, of course, that the American goes for sensationalism. So does the American public. On the other hand, there is always a large public content to look at the finer parts of a production and to allow the sensational aspect to go by."

"I think I am entitled to take a little credit for the improvement in the English film. For nearly two years I have discussed the subject in your columns and elsewhere. A year or so ago I was unpopular both in this country and abroad for speaking the truth. But truth is bound to prevail. The truth was that the English film was below the American product, and now bids fair to equal, if not to surpass it. After all is said and done, the American picture is a very hermaphroditic product indeed. It is mostly made by British brains. For example, the presiding spirits of the Vitagraph Company are English to the backbone, Smith, Blackton, and Rock having been born in England."

This chap must have brainstormitis to write such tommybosh.

"The much admired Biograph picture is the result of British brains, Mr. Griffith, their well-known producer, who is responsible for these pictures, being an Englishman. And not to labor the point too much, there is hardly a film plant in this country which does not rely more or less upon British help."

Another special thing we note is the remarks concerning our friend Friese-Greene and for a non-infringing camera, we would reply to this invective that we already know of several non-infringing cameras so that the writer need not worry himself at all on this point, full publicity will be given in the News in a week or two.

"I expect Mr. Friese-Greene will return to your side shortly, although he is inclined either to remain here or to come back. He is desirous of putting his color process on the market."

"The field is open for the inventor in respect of a new camera which does not infringe any existing principle. It is a very thorny problem. Still, if such a camera were put on the market, it would be an unquestioned success. I commend the idea to A. S. Newman.

"I have been traveling about the country recently, and have observed that the picture is enormously popular with provincial audiences. They treat it very seriously. In large cities it is pretty well a filler in the way of entertainment. In country towns, however, it is taken more seriously, and unquestionably fills a void which the cheap melodrama left.

"Risking your editorial frown, I must give you the item of news that at the moment of writing the Trust section of the business bids fair to assume control of it. Litigation has gone badly against the Independents."

The last paragraph "tickles us to death" (if we may use a slang expression), litigation goes badly against the Independents; well, it is to laugh, and laugh heartily, but why the Independent manufacturers allow a prejudiced alien to rap them on the knuckles like he is doing, is more than we can imagine. The writer evidently must have seen double or read the litigation wrong, like he did in another celebrated patent case relating to a trade-mark which is well in the memory of our readers, both on this and the other side of the Atlantic. It certainly is a very bad lapsus-linguae.

Another point this learned gentleman makes mention of is as follows, regarding the question of color cinematography:

"There is the question of color, which has been a subject of interest to me for many years. I have gone over the ground several times, pointing out that practically no novelty attaches to the color processes at present before the world. 'Regni' confirms me in this. He analyzes the Friese-Greene, the Lee-Turner, and other processes, and arrives at the same conclusion as I do, namely, that there is nothing in them that is novel, and also little that is practical.

"No color process can claim to have really solved the problem, because none of them, so far as I can discover, is based upon a close study of first principles. We must, before finality is reached in this matter, pay closer attention to the work of the early experimenters, such as Henry Collen, James Clark, Maxwell, Captain Abney, and others who have interested themselves in the theoretical side of color."

We cannot understand why he writes in the manner he does, and further than that, why he does not bring out his great master patent of color photography which the world is very anxious to see. We looked for great things, we sought a mountain, and, behold, we found —a mole hill!

THE WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR

If ever there was a tough old rugged road, filled with pitfalls, punctured with the thrills of chilling alarm, interspersed with the cold, creeping feeling of the culprit about to be unmasked, productive of cold sweats, clammy extremities and interior tremors, it is the road frequented by the transgressor.

The hideousness of impending disclosure to one posing before the public in the mask of honor, virtue and integrity cannot be adequately depicted with pen or brush. The awful uncertainty, not so much about the form and manner as about the time of the event forecasted and sure, burns down deep into the vitals and the mentality of its victim, as he awaits the public denunciation which ultimately sets him forth as a living lie before the very friends and neighbors whose esteem through many years of ceaseless toil he has endeavored to earn and in the hour of exposure prizes in a priceless value. The efforts of toil swept into the great beyond; the prized friendships swept away; the impending success as it approaches its zenith backsliding into the pit of failure much after the manner of the avalanche descending the steep incline of a mountain side; and in the end all is gone. All may and frequently includes life, liberty and prosperity. Many such examples are in our county, state and federal prisons—one is enough, not mentioning names. the indication is sufficient in the words the Ice King.

There are other transgressors of lesser moment who sometimes are so very fortunate as to attain a competency, secure a limited degree of local respect and escape the public headquarters maintained solely for undesirable personages possessed of inclinations bending toward the positively criminal. These approach so closely the border line between the statutorily criminal and the morally upright as ever to live in the great expansive land of uncertainty not with regard so much to personal liberty as to standing in society. Ostracism is seldom enforced by that money sodden group of persons denominated "Society," because if the truth were known so very many are tarred with the same stick and plumed in the same feathers.

We are not mentioning any names nor handing out any specific instances, but there have been occasions in the history of the United States of America, short as it is, where alleged inventors of great repute have endeavored to take unto themselves the original work of the real discoverers of new and useful mechanical contrivances, wherewith to deceive the gullible public into according glory, laud and honor unto the impostor and the investing public into parting with golden streams of the circulating medium in exchange only for a worthless paper bearing the Patent Office seal.

And during the same period there have been instances of the detection and exposure of the attempted fraud, much to the chagrin, vexation and mortification of the villainous impostor whose sole penalty all too frequently is loss of caste softened by large pecuniary gains but a freedom from any interference with physical liberty.

The way of the transgressor is not confined by any means to that particular class of alleged inventors who are little other than impostors. It is found also in the journalistic field and elsewhere. Our labors, however, have been so closely confined to journalism and particularly to that special branch thereof which is devoted wholly and entirely to the animated picture business that we are quite fully concerned that only the highest and best customs and ethics shall prevail in the profession.

It is a difficult matter to fill a paper with original composition, and quite another to edit a paper exclusively with a paste pot and a pair of shears. The first effort requires mentality of a high degree of perception, perspicacity and refinement; the second could well be done by any boy who has attained the standard of education prescribed for several grades below graduation in the ordinary grammar school. Such an imposition is far from editing a publication, it amounts simply to an ignorant semi-supervision of space filling and nothing else. We may and probably do at times make mistakes, because any two minds weighing and passing judgment upon the same statements are not unlikely to arrive finally and honestly at opposite conclusions. But the paste pot and the shears are forbidden utensils in our editorial department. We do not claim infallibility, but our readers are given the square deal in original research and writing, excepting in the very few instances where some item of information is openly acknowledged to be taken from some accredited and reputable magazine. And when such an exceptional paragraph is used the originator is given proper credit.

There are journals claiming respectability which fail to observe such reasonable standards; whose aim is to claim everything, abandoning professional ethics and all phases of honor and integrity in the vain hope that by claiming much, stealing more and pilfering indiscriminately, they will in the end gain the limelight of public favor. For a time such methods seem to succeed, but only for a time; when rising to a final goal they are signals of failure, the sign-posts of disappointment meeting an untimely end at the crossroads of virtue and dishonor.

Merit alone is real success; it may be frustrated momentarily, but in the end it rises over all obstacles into the pure and upper atmosphere where it is recognized for just what it is, gaining the praises of men and the financial compensation earned and deserved. And all the foregoing is equally as true of inventors as it is of journalists, and vice versa.

THE KINDERGARTEN AND CINEMATOGRAPHY.

"Kindergarten" in this country has come to mean little besides a school for the tiny tots who are just setting their baby feet on the lowest step of the ladder of learning. But in the broader sense, all life is really, or ought to be, a kindergarten, for humanity is composed of children and the world a garden.

To some extent every exhibitor can be of use in the kindergarten of learning, and without much effort on his part either.

The moving picture operator of the future will be a man of resourcefulness, ready at all times to make new uses of old ideas, and new ideas too. If he does this rightly, he is helping on the educational movement and advertising his show at the same time.

Take an example: In the lower grades of school work clay modeling takes some part. Now and again exhibitions of the children's work are held at the schools. If you want a bit of cheap and good boosting, Mr. Exhibitor, get up to one of these work displays, make half a dozen kodak pictures of the show and give the children a free admission Saturday afternoons.

Don't stop at that. Get out your kodak prints for the poster easels of your front, and make lantern slides of them also, with, where possible, the names of the youngsters shown.

"But," you say, "I haven't a kodak." Then you have no right to be in the business. Go right away and buy one, any price, from the $2.00 Brownie up, and if you are a novice, don't overlook the No. 2 Bull's Eye. It will be the best advertising money you ever spent.

"Then," you say again, "I don't know how to make a lantern slide."

You don't have to, but it's a shameful admission, especially if you get the Moving Picture News regularly. If you haven't time, get your local photo supply house to do the work for you. The point is, if you make use of your opportunities, you will create a desire for these little educational localisms, and it doesn't take many dimes to pay for a dozen slides.

There are scores of other things the little hands are doing in the schools whilst you are hanging around the box office in the morning, wasting your time in talking to deadheads who value your time as they do their own as a negative quantity.

Get in the kindergarten of this picture work yourself, and KEEP IN IT. It pays.

You cannot value these local and topical slides too highly. If you'll put a litttle brain work on them, you will make more out of them than out of advertising slides.

And you'll very soon be surprised to find how your own mind will evolve new uses for the old idea. That is the indisputable proof that pictures are educative in that they "lead out" of a hardened old picture theater man a desire for more knowledge of everything.

And don't forget that IT PAYS.

ACCENTUATE THE USEFULNESS OF MOVING PICTURES BY COMBINING NOBLER EMOTIONS IN FILMS.

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

Love, race prejudice, and finance—three important factors in the world's upheavals, were the subjects which attracted my attention this week in one of the West Side moving picture houses.

I was delighted to find the class of pictures presented in this particular theater of very good quality, in a moral sense.

Race prejudice has played, and does play, a conspicious part in the unhappiness and dissatisfaction of the human race. The black man, the red man, the yellow man, etc., versus the big "I am," the white man.

Why we should have been scattered over the face of this diminutive planet, such a variegated, particolored throng we do not know. Why the Infinite should have chosen so many different colors and shades wherein to manifest Himself is a subject too great and ponderous for us to attempt to answer. The fact remains, we are all of one mind on one particular question, in connection with each individual race and color: The red man thinks all men should have been red, the black man is of the opinion that through some unfortunate condition of nature the color was bleached out of we poor "white trash," and the white man, inflated with the result of his superior opportunities, and those of his ancestors, would wipe from the face of the earth everything which has not pink and white tinted skin like himself.

The flowers group together and there is no question of color. The lower animals, speckled, spotted, black, white, and so forth, have no particular objections to one another on the color question. Nevertheless, here is another side of the question; though they do group together in harmony of color, no one color conflicting with the other, for nature has so tuned her sound and color scheme that there is no discordant note or shade, still, that higher unit of creation, man, is given that sense of discrimination which enables him to separate and classify into the different species the members of the animal and vegetable kingdom, above which he soars by way of reason, cultivating them in their different spheres, surrounding them with fitting environment, striving to accentuate desirable characteristics, and eliminate undesirable ones. In other words, man has taken the position of Burbanker for the whole of creation—except probably himself.

I have centralized the question of race prejudice as being a very important one. Love is too large and complicated a question to discuss in limited space—the hub around which the whole universe revolves is too diverse in its attitudes, conditions, and intentions to allow of thorough analysis in this article. Finance, the commonly known "root of all evil," and interesting to us creatures of original sin (?), is too well known as the bread and butter foundation to need commendation as a matter of interest.

To give the people pictures which touch the emotions in such a way as to induce deep thought based on a moral basis is good. To become detached from the emotions of this life is impossible, as long as we remain in the material state. If we are to present scenes depicting the different phases of the life giving emotion, they must be carefully selected and presented in conjunction with other noble emotions, and blended in such a manner as to support and uplift the central and most powerful emotion. Human nature as we know it to-day, is full of inflated desires. The strongest drawing card in the theater to-day is the semi-vulgar, encased in beauty. Men frequent the theaters where the most subtlely alluring love scenes are being enacted—where the most indecent spectacles can be seen. The desire for such things on the part of the masses, and the feverish eagerness on the part of the managers to satisfy that desire, are growing to such an alarming extent that the morality of the American public is in serious danger, and degeneracy is already stamping itself upon too large a majority of our population.

The film with which I was most deeply impressed was one combining many things: the uselessness of bitter prejudice—race prejudice in the case of an Indian in this instance—the fulfilling of a righteous promise and the power of a deep, true love. This picture was presented in such a way as to set in strong bas-relief the noble qualities against the ignoble. The picture told a silent story, and left the mind in a thoughtful mood without stirring up the baser passions, or the bitter racial feud which slumbers in the hearts of so many Americans.

WATCHING THE PICTURES.

H. Jeanval.

I have a very unpleasant duty to perform, and yet it touches upon so important and vital a question that it must be done. No one is a more ardent admirer of the exquisite photography, careful staging and superb acting of Itala productions than I am, but John Milton is beyond endurance. Why put "Yohn Milton" on the film? A hideous blunder in a name the world knows. If necessary why not put plain Italian Giovanni if John is unknown? We know how to spell Dante, Tasso, Petrarch, Fra Angelica, and even Spontini ,and we expect Itala to know John Milton. One of the other blunders such as "Stuards"—as if we spelled Medici, Medite—"Milton gets blind," and so on, I am sorry to say many times, I'll say nothing beyond expressing regret. Then when Charles II. is greeted by enthusiastic crowds—this scene is full of activity and realism—the background is an Italian city! More, whilst the costumes of the Cavaliers are, in the main, passable, those of the Roundheads are fantastic apings. Itala knows full well there are libraries in Turin that contain abundant material to put this right. But my main complaint is a much more serious one. One of the chief arguments for the existence of moving pictures is that they are educational, that they present the truth. There is no more serious charge against anyone than that he falsifies history. Novelists may, and do, invent an entourage for a character, but even they may not take a great, world-fame character and spin a web of untruthfulness round him, or her This Itala has done, the "last of the Elizabethans" is portrayed without the slightest regard to truth.

He never had such a wife as the talented actress creates; he had two daughters, not one; the King never helped him to escape from the Cavaliers; he was not stricken with blindness in the dramatic way shown in the film; no King helped him in the days when he sold the immortal "Paradise Lost" for £5.

To take the glorious Dante and thus treat him were literary sacrilege, so it is with Milton.

That Itala, with the galaxy of talent it possesses. whose work is a delight to us on the screen in far distant lands, should permit such a parody of John Milton, is a source of wonderment and profound regret to many a warm friend.

No matter how artistically produced or how well acted—vice is vice. No amount of fine dresses or stage graces will render a house of evil fame fit to put on a screen. When this is coupled with drunkenness, it is vile, sordid, putrid. Drunkenness in decollete gowns or swallow-tailed coats, when the drink is in champagne glasses, is as bestial as in an East Side dive where rags and filth swig adulterated "red eye." To see a woman in evening dress staggering on the curtain ought not to be thrust before decent families. We don't want the Tenderloin on the screen, and what's more, we won't have it. We may be a lax lot, but we have sufficient manhood to protest against this filth dancing on the curtain before mothers and children. It's time amore potent means were taken to protect the moving picture from being degraded from its high place.

There are films sent out, fortunately most of them are now on the "Junk" shelf, that are a disgrace to common decency; they are rotten, immoral, corrupt spawn of the infernal regions. Immorality and drunkenness are worse, if such can be, in the gawds and tatter of wealth than they are in rags.

They are more dangerous, the young think that's the style and to go and do likewise is to be "fashionable"—a word dripping in blood and garbed in woe; the crape of ruined lives.

It is pitiable to see such fine work as that of the Urban Eclipse should permit disgraceful mistakes on their films; in "The Border of the Forest" we read "retiremont" to a monastery! In the Port Arthur film this blazes out, "Ort Arthur." This is simply disgusting. In "A Pittsburg Millionaire" (America) this solecism occurs, "it's immediate purchase."

In Melies "Only a Sister" one point strikes me, if the boy had a banking account then the five hundred dollar check, whatever his standing, was simply overdrawing. He must have had one or his sister could not have paid the $500 in a rush. What's the point of the story?

In Pathe's "An Imitator of Blondin" a man hears of a prize to be given in Montreal for a feat performed on Niagara Falls. Please get out your geographies!

In Pathe's "Heart, Hunger and Happiness," how about the men's and women's dresses at the party? A little incongruous. No sout pas?

CHARLES O. BAUMANN—"MAN OF THE HOUR."

An enigmatical proposition for strangers; a cool, calculating, hard-headed business man; a loyal friend and a foe worthy of any steel—such a man is Charles

O. Baumann, who by his shrewdness and indomitable energy has won the acknowledged leadership of the Independent moving picture forces of America.

The biography of most prominent men in the industry is rather stereotyped, reciting that "he was an early pioneer," etc., etc. Such is not the case with Mr. Baumann, for he has only been identified with motography a few years, entering this branch of amusement at a time when the Independent outlook was gloomy indeed, and it was mostly through his efforts that the dark clouds were rolled back, permitting the sun of success to cast its brilliant rays upon the Independent camp.

That he was recognized as a dangerous factor by the enemies of Independence was amply demonstrated when they trained their heaviest batteries upon him and his interests, but he held the fort under conditions that would have caused a less stout heart to quail. He not only found it possible to overcome all opposition, but assisted his fellow manufacturers, financially and otherwise.

Less than two years ago the New York Motion Picture Co. released its first reel. To-day there are two reels per week issued, and the number of prints sold is enormous. In addition to this, Mr. Baumann is the guiding spirit of the Carlton Motion Picture Laboratories, producing Reliance films, the popularity of which is the talk of the country.

The New York Motion Picture Co. is also sole agent in the United States for the famous Ambrosio and Itala films, and altogether Mr. Baumann and his associates control seven reels per week.

Mr. Baumann was mainly responsible for the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co., providing a community of interests which has placed the Independent cause upon a solid foundation. A singular fact is the origin of this combination. Mr. Baumann was sitting at his desk in deep thought, and was twirling a silver dollar. The inscription, "E pluribus unum" caught his eye, and like a flash the inspiration came. "United we stand" was the key of the Sales Co., and is its motto.

Mr. Baumann's various official connections bear heavily upon his time. One of his characteristics in taking care of people who call upon him—of whom there are many—is to listen carefully to the proposition advanced. By that time his mind is fully made up, and "yes" or "no" is final.

SCENE FROM "HIS GREAT DUTY"

GREAT NORTHERN RELEASE

His Great Duty

A special film of great beauty is to be released by this company on Saturday, February 25th. The above cut represents one scene taken from the story; in our opinion the whole production, acted by the actors of the Royal Theater, at Copenhagen, is a magnificent production. The photography is beautiful, and the effects are such we think every patron of cinematography ought to see. We have almost used up our vocabulary of words in praising the Great Northern productions, but in stereoscopic effects in the interiors this film is unique, the story is finely told and the results all that is to be desired. We commend it to our readers.

A TRIBUTE TO THE NEWS.

February 8, 1911.

Friend Saunders:—Have been busy lately literally night and day, and only had a chance this morning (in the cars) to go over the current number of "The Moving Picture News." Really you are turning out a trade paper worth while, and any one of several articles I have read would justify any issue. I do hope you will be supported as you ought to be by subscribers, advertisers and contributors. You are furnishing pure gold to the cause of right and justice, and in due time that will also include Law of necessity. More power to your pen and more pennies to your purse! Ever sincerely,

JAMES D. LAW.

CHICAGO LETTER

Since the last writing the greatest matter of importance which has been brought to light is the shameful manner in which the picture exhibitors are being treated on Milwaukee avenue and the raw tools that are being employed to fight competition. Now, I myself am a great believer in a man going his competitor one better at all times, but also believe in doing it in a fair way and not injuring the exhibiting business by setting a precedent.

The general seat of disturbance seems to be that A. M. Gollas, who runs the Royal Theater, on Milwaukee avenue, has been flopping about once a week from the General Film Co. to the Independents, and vice versa, until his patrons are not sure of what kind of pictures can be seen at his theater. To satisfy every one, he conceived the brilliant idea of running six reels, three reels of Trust pictures and three reels of Independent film.

Steingard, who runs the Peerless and uses Trust pictures, and Gollas arranged a sub-renting system and by hiring a boy to carry the reels, as fast as they are run in one place, to the other, they are each running six reels of pictures to a show and outdoing their competitors who are unable to put on such a large show.

Up to the present writing both the Trust and Independent exchanges renting these men have closed their eyes to this violation of agreement on the sub-renting.

Hyman Bros., owners of the Janet Theater, the home of the Independent picture on North avenue, are negotiating with Zippwald & Co., theatrical contractors, with a view of enlarging their house. By putting in a balcony and other alterations they can secure between three and four hundred more seats, which means a great deal on North avenue, which is the biggest picture show center in Chicago.

The Plaza Theater was the first Chicago house to boost the Daylight Pictures. They opened the show with Independent pictures on the Herbst machine during the past week. Managers from different parts of the city and out of town were invited to the demonstration.

The Chautauqua Film Exchange, 356 Dearborn street, opened for business Feb. 6th, buying through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

The Chicago Moving Picture Machine Operators are gaining a national reputation on account of their progressive spirit. Local 145, I. A. T. S. E., which was organized a little over three years ago, now numbers over 500 men, and are recognized by all to be, as a mass, the best electricians and operators throughout the country. Local No. 2, the I. A. T. S. E. stage hands' local in Chicago, began to realize that the junior local, 145, was fast passing them in workmanship, intelligence and numbers, and fearing they would be obliterated called upon the International body to place a check on the "aggressive upstarts," as they put it.

Local 145 did not see why their honest progress should be checked off and went quietly about building an impregnable defense. They took out corporation papers of organization under the Illinois statutes and at the proper moment withdrew from the International body.

They have nailed their colors to the mast, claiming they are out to control everything electrical in the theatrical field, switchboards, spot and effect lamps, picture machines, etc. They are prepared to accept any locals of operatiors throughout the country, and are putting organizers on the road to gain control of picture locals now under control of the International body. Several prominent picture locals in the West and Middle West are signifying their intention of joining forces with Local 145, as they, too, are being oppressed and held in submission.

The leader in this "Declaration of Independence" movement by Local 145 is W. F. Menzel, who was formerly connected with the National Proj. & Prod. Co., and other memorable projects in the moving picture industry.

P. C. Moore, a former president of Local 145, I. A. T. S. E., is another man prominent in the good work for the operators.

There were a great number of feature reels turned out by the Independent manufacturers of late. "The Westerner" and "The Earl," by the Thanhouser Co.; "Her Darkest Hour," Imp; "The Half-Breed's Plan," a Bison; "The Schoolman's Courage," a Reliance, and the Ambrosio reel, "Savoy Cavalry," and "Tweedledum" as a detective, were among the best for the week. Am glad to see so many manufacturers turning out war stories for Washington's Birthday.

J. J. SULLIVAN.

OUR WESTERN CORRESPONDENT

Hot Springs, Ark., February 15.—Just when it looked as if we were going to have a nice, dignified, quiet and most gentlemanly primary campaign for the mayoralty nomination, with all the big gambling houses running without brass bands and notification to the wide, wide world, to say nothing of a gradual prying off of the "lid" that was clamped on the resort by the Prosecuting Attorney's office, Mayor Martin Jodd, who is a candidate for a third term nomination, threw a political bomb into the camp of his opponents and instructed Chief of Police W. W. Willey to immediately suppress all forms of gambling in Hot Springs. "Ain't it awful, Mabel?"

We have had some very interesting events transpire since the man on the "case" worked on my last effusion. The Mayor decided that his old Chief of Police was not as active in the suppression of gambling as His Honor would have him be, and the city's chief executive intimated that there would be a change in the police department; that he had so informed W. Frank Moore, who was then chief of police, and that if he would not pack up and leave without being asked, he, the Mayor, would prefer charges against him of incompetence and non-attention to duty.

Well, the most irate citizen in this beau-ti-ful "valley of vapors" was Chief Moore, and he came back with a rejoinder that if he had ever received orders to stop gambling that he would have made the places look like a desert without the welcome oasis. The next day the Chief resigned. W. W. Willey was appointed.

Then the other candidates in the field got busy, and they have had the merriest time harpooning the portly form of Mayor Jodd with their political shafts of pointed interrogations. For instance, they want to know why it is that Mayor Jodd, who has been in office now nearly four years, has had such a sudden and violent change of heart regarding gambling. John A. Riggs, manager of the Lopez Medicine Co., the only candidate running on a strictly anti-gambling platform, calls attention to the fact that this was the first time Mayor Jodd ever took such drastic steps and leaves the public to judge the motive implied. W. W. Walters, one of the resort's most shrewd business men, who has also been Mayor, declined to dignify the circus play by public comment, saying he would "take care of Mr. Jodd at his political meetings, but Attorney James L. Graham, who is also a candidate for Attorney-General of Arkansas, declared that the Mayor's action showed a state of mind bordering on collapse; that he cannot get away from the record he has made and that nothing he can now do will save his sinking craft. Then along comes C. C. Lemly, former candidate for Mayor and Sheriff, who asserts that he is in favor of licensing the gambling houses and doing away with the "hole-in-the-wall" joints the city has to bear with under present conditions; that if we are to have gambling here, let the city get some revenue from the houses and place the gambler in a position where he can be watched. It was not so long ago that Hot Springs realized $1,600 a month from the gambling houses when they were under police regulation. But the edict has gone forth and gambling is supposed to be as dead as Judas.

Didst notice I said "supposed to be"? Well, here is where the supposition comes in. Chief of Police Willey, who was appointed to succeed W. Frank Moore, is a witness in one of the many murder trials from this city. The defendant asked and received a change of venue, and the case is on this week in the Circuit Court at Malvern. Chief Willey is over there, so the gamblers, appreciating the first law of physics, "that no two things can occupy the same place at the same time," have opened on the quiet and violated instruction received from him. But wait until "Big Bill" gets back. Ye gods and little fishes, if he doesn't get busy and inaugurate a general smashing of gambling paraphernalia then I miss my guess, for, as they say in these parts, "He's bad medicine when he's started." He will do his duty regardless of personal views on the subject, believe me, and the "Knights of the Green Cloth" are going to be a wiser lot of men if they try to buck this boy.

I have detailed the foregoing not because it has any bearing on motion photography (although I would liked to have taken a moving picture of the political situation here the past week), but because, by the gradual resumption of gambling and other forms of pleasure that it was to be used as a silent argument to permit the picture houses to also get busy Sunday.

For some weeks the rumor has been current here that the moving picture and vaudeville interests would "get together and stick" and, opening their houses on Sunday, stand for arrests and, if necessary, have the case carried to the Supreme Court. So, with this end in view, representatives of the Scenic, Lyric, Lyceum, Orpheum, Princess and Majestic were on hand. Also "numbered among those present" were Attorneys Boiuc and Sawyer, the latter also being the legal adviser of the Arkansas Amusement Association, which controls the Orpheum and Lyceum.

The question of opening on Sunday was discussed in all its many complicated phases, and the attorneys requested, if the managers were going into this matter at all, that each house subscribe $200, making a total purse of $1,000, one-half of which was to go for attorney fees, the other half to be used to carry the case to the Supreme Court, if this be found necessary. The Orpheum and Lyceum represented one interest.

The Scenic was the first to "kick over the traces" and declined to come across with the two hundred simoleons, for the reason, they stated, that they were not sure they would get $200 worth run for their money. This threw the entire meeting "in the air," so to speak, and it was said that the Lyric, after the meeting had adjourned, also expressed objection to the $200 contribution. The matter is now just where it was weeks ago. No one seems to be willing to take the initiative and "buck" the prosecuting attorney, and it is very doubtful if this resort, for some Sundays to come, will witness any entertainment in the motion picture line on that day.

Well, it was just as I stated in my letter last week, the bill calling for a new judicial district of Garland and Montgomery counties was presented in the General Assembly by Representative Whittington, of this city. This is the measure that has for its object the shelving of Judge Wood, prosecuting attorney.

This resort the past week has witnessed an invasion of ball players of both National and American leagues, who, taking advantage of the weather, which has been like summer in its warmth, have come here for preliminary workouts prior to the regular spring training season. Many of the diamond stars are members of teams who will train in other places than Hot Springs, but there are such a number of prominent ball players who are here ahead of their clubs that the others came as much for the companionship of their acquaintances as they did for the benefits they will derive from the baths and practice they have been getting.

If present condition can be taken as a criterion, it looks as if old Jiggs Donohue, the former first sacker of the White Sox, will give his younger competitors a good run for that position this year. Jiggs was promised by Comiskey some time ago that if he could get in position and deliver the goods that the place was his. He has been making Hot Springs his home, having opened up a billiard and pool emporium, as well as aiding bowling alley facilities, opposite the fashionable Arlington Hotel, but the past two weeks has seen him at Majestic Park getting into condition. Jiggs is also interested in the movement that is being made to organize an Arkansas league, and he stated that he would be as well satisfied with a club in this State, where he would not be so far away from his business as would be the case if he were back in fast company.

There seems to be some doubt as to just where the St. Louis Browns will train when they arrive this summer. Report had it that they would use one of the new diamonds now being built at Whittington Park. This field, when completed, will be one of the most ideal ball grounds in the South, being four hundred feet square, with grandstand and all training appointments. It seems, though, that when the Boston Americans gave up their lease at Majestic Park and decided to take the long "hike" to California, that the Browns assumed their lease and gave J. H. Jones, who controls Majestic Park, to understand that they would use the grounds formerly assigned to the classy aggregation from the Hub. Furthermore, it is known that Garry Herrman, of the Cincinnati Reds, has already arranged a series of games between his team and the St. Louis Browns, and this being the case it is not likely that they will be found training in extreme sections of the city. The Browns are expected the early part of next month, about the same time the Reds will arrive.

The Brooklyn National League is also coming here for a longer stay than characterized their visit last year, and the Pirates of Pittsburg, with the veteran, Fred Clark, at their head, will arrive the latter part of next month, arrangements having already been made with the Eastman Hotel to that effect. The Eastman is the biggest and most expensive hostelry in the city, but Clark believes that nothing is too good for ball players, especially the members of his team.

A big delegation of Washington players arrived this evening, including Tom Hughes, "Germany" Schaffer, McBride, Walter Johnson, Conroy, Doc Reisling and Gessler. Jimmie Burk, manager and third baseman of the Indianapolis team of the American Association, is here for preliminary work, together with Grover Land, who has been delegated to do the majority of the receiving for the Cleveland Naps. Art Fromme, on whom Clark Griffith, of the Cincinnatis, depends for a great deal of the box work, arrived this week and has been chumming with George McQuillan, who came to the Reds in the historic trade with Philadelphia, which some months ago set the baseball world agog.

These ball players, by the way, are rapidly rounding into condition, and if they are not in perfect form when his "umps" calls "Play Ba-al!" at the beginning of the season it won't be their fault. They are taking the best of care of themselves. The greatest and most violent form of dissipation they are indulging in is an evening's visit to the moving picture shows and vaudeville theater. They love their pictures, but after the "good-night" slide is flashed on the curtain they hike for their hotels and the hay.

The Lyceum this week is running the famous Independent pictures of the Cheyenne, Wyo., roundup of celebrated cowboys, at which Colonel Roosevelt managed to get in front of the camera. In fact, Teddy is billed as heavily as any of the cowpunchers, and business is good.

After waiting many, many weeks, the Princess has at last succeeded in arranging a split week and is now giving two complete shows. One show, I understand, is booked by Sullivan and Considine, and the other comes from the Majestic circuit.

The Lyric this week packed them to the doors, the great attraction being Astro Conlin, who manages to get in the limelight at most unexpected times. Astro is the lad who predicted the return of Belle Elmore, wife of Dr. Crippen, who figured recently in a "necktie party" in foggy old London town. Of course, Mrs. Crippen failed to materialize, but there were local papers which "fell" for this yarn and Astro is getting a munificent salary. He is a very pleasant and brilliant young man, and he gives the kind of a show that keeps every one guessing.

And, speaking of guessing, I'm going to take a guess myself, to the effect that I guess this will be about all for this week. Good-night. Good guess!

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

FILM CRITICISM

As one who watches the films, day by day, and reports impressions thereon in the columns of this newspaper, I feel it is time to make a few remarks from a personal standpoint. I know full well in certain circles it is an article of faith, that the best preparation for criticism is to be profoundly ignorant of the subject matter and then use lots of adjectives, the whole to be adequately seasoned with malice and personal spite. This set can be ignored as outside the ken of any decently honest man. I am not dealing with scenario writing, where we are told all manner of experience, and even success, in books or dramas, are less than nothing worth.

The people who see the films, may not know anything of photographing, or operating, or manufacturing, of course, the majority do not, but to say that people who have studied art, read a good deal and lived the common life with their eyes and ears open, do not know a good picture, or a clean one, is simply the egotistic nonsense of a braggart. This ridiculous despotism that some are trying to set up, must, and will, share the just fate of all usurping czars.

We must not say what we think of a play because we are not Maeterlinck, D'Annunzio, and David Belasco rolled together with Sarah Bernhardt's genius as a seasoning. We may not say we like a musical composition unless we are Chopin, Schubert, Rossini and Bach in one entity with Paderewski, Joachim and Patti thrown in. In other words, we are forever to hold our peace. Because a man cannot manufacture films, construct cameras, understand perforations and write scenarios, he is to pay his money at the theater, take his seat, and meekly murmur "magnificent," "spectacular," "grandiose," "prodigious," "miraculous," as twaddle, villainy, vice and rot dances before his bewildered eyes, with the smallpox of "expert" performations dancing hither and thither! How charming! The film is to be a Czar and I tremble, as I recall scenes 'twixt Petersburg and the Urals, where the strings of "criminals" because they were not Tolstoi, wearily trudged on to the mines because they dared to express an honest opinion. Miserable wretches, who, not being noblemen or officials, honestly said, and wrote of life as presented on the screen out there.

En passant, who had a ghost of a claim to be film experts not so many years ago!

Many manufacturers—I shudder and remember Tobolsk and Omsk at this point—are either sublimely ignorant of who goes to moving picture theaters or else take up old Vanderbilt's opinion of the public and do not care one continental what the common, vulgar, unwashed think. Here's where their majestics make a bad mistake, and one that is going to hit them in their only tender sport, their bank account. I claim from a life, nowadays, spent in watching pictures and in talking to a few who go to the theaters that some film makers do not realize—why I know not—that the moving picture is no longer a mere toy for common folk, but an educator, as well as an amuser, to people as well educated as the manufacturer—in some cases if the film is the umpire—a long sight ahead of them. To go back a sentence, even if only shown to the "common people," the man who makes his "pile" out of them and their nickels, is a low-down scoundrel if he panders to vice.

The cry of some manufacturers is, as they squirm like a beetle with a pin stuck through their anatomies, it's only the "picture pounder" who sees these things. Whoever says this is an ignoramus, so far as the audiences of moving pictures are concerned.

I'll show this by giving a few examples of what high-school children and just ordinary common folk have said to me in shows, high and low: On one subject I cannot give examples, because they would fill pages and that is the gross ignorance displayed in the spelling and grammatical construction of heads and sub-heads in films. "Gee whiz, look at her shoes"—high heels in the backwoods. "Oh"—electric lamp on a prairie. "What d'ye think of that?"—rats in an Indian girl's hair. "Say, how's that strike you?"—canoes left afloat that suddenly appear all snug. "What about that?"—telegrapher from Central Broadway office, when the General Manager didn't know the Morse code; "Jumping———," as a Park Row man saw a newspaper film; "Belay, there, Bill"—a sailor struck helpless at a sea scene and "Pardon Me" as an ecclesiastic in full collar array rushed past me in a New York theater when a Biblical story, staged by an "expert," appeared. Manufacturers, say the films are not meant for critics. The sternest critics are not the "occasional scribblers" like myself utterly neglible; they are the people. They are no fools, and when the Stars and Stripes are shown in war time they know what's what. More than one paragraph of criticism under my name, has meant seeing a film two or three times in different theaters and sundry talks with the folk in the audience; sometimes this has meant revised opinion.

In short, manufacturers, in many cases, do not, or will not, recognize an undeniable fact that the audiences before whom their films are shown are rational beings with sufficient education to be disgusted with grammatical and historical blunders. I may not appeal upon literary or ethical grounds—such things would be swept aside—I can, not appeal, but demand, that ignorant nonsense be eliminated as if not, exchanges will not use such films, because exhibitors won't have them, for the simple reason their audiences won't "stand for" them.

There is not one manufacturer that can beat public opinion. No, not one. Advertising in press and poster deludes "suckers," but they get "wise." It does not matter what the maker yells in his house organ to delude the exhibitor, it's what the people think that counts. More than one firm of makers in America knows this, and more than one big theater is to-day turning down films because the people, the people, mark ye, wont have them. Manufacturers' blunders and incapacity might pass in what they dub a "low class " house, but not where the uplift of moving pictures has now carried them. The demand for accuracy does not come from the magnificently paid critic, but from the great American public here and the intelligent folk elsewhere, who simply say to the manufacturer as in other lines of business, you produce what we require or we get our goods at another shop.

Remember, Mr. Producer, there are big open markets in other lands where Mr. A. is no more than Z, so that what the critic says is not mere negligible nonsense, but the red light that spells danger on a very important line of rails—the one that ends in the nest where is the goose that lays the golden eggs.

ADOPT MOTIOGRAPH FOR EDUCATION

The popularity of the Motion Picture in educational work has again been attested through the adoption by the Board of Education of the city of Chicago of a Motion Picture Equipment to be used in the nine school centers under the direction of Professor Voorhies. The first entertainment of this nature which the School Board will offer to the children and parents will be given this week in the Fallon School, at Wallace and Forty-second streets.

The Board of Education looked into the matter of selecting an outfit with the utmost care, having appointed a special committee under the direction of Mr. J. D. Shoop, superintendent of schools, and they finally adopted the MOTIOGRAPH Motion Picture Machine as being the best adapted to their work and the machine on which the committee decided unanimously.

If interested in buying machines, supplies, etc., the name of Harbach & Co., 899 Filbert street, Philadelphia, should not be overlooked. Good bargains are offered.

MISS PAULINE BARRY

A dainty young lady of petite figure, who looks well in her pretty costumes. She puts over an altogether pleasing single act. It is not so much the way her numbers are placed as her sweet and cultured voice which wins for her the loud applause she gets and deserves. Miss Barry has a future before her and without doubt will be able to "make good" on the big time. May she have the success she merits!

Opera Chairs and Arc Lamps for the South

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports among his recent equipments of motion picture theaters the sale of flaming arc lamps to H. J. Paradis for his theater at Winston, N. C., and opera chairs for Paradis & Shanks, Caswell Theater, Kinston, N. C. The high-class quality of Mr. Hallberg's line has gained for him the perfect confidence of his customers; they rely on him for all their requirements.

The Hardisty Manufacturing Co., of Canal Dover, Ohio, who are making theater chairs, report their sales increasing daily. Any of our readers who are interested should send for their circular W as advertised.

MR. ELLIS COHEN IN NEW ROLE

Ellis Cohen has been made the agent for the famous Cellit non-inflammable film; also edinol-hydro, the best developer for moving picture films, both products of the Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co. His office is now located at 117 Hudson street, New York.

Mr. Cohen was formerly manager of the moving picture department of the Morning Telegraph.

Bradford, Ill.—Frank Warren has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Independence, Kan.—Messrs. Day, Compton and Glen Snyder have sold the Joy Moving Picture Theater to R. R. Painter of Oklahoma.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Mr. B. F. Miller has plans underway for the erection of a new moving picture theater at the corner of Third and and Fitzwater streets.

SEEN ON THE CURTAIN

By Walton

The Spy—(Selig).—This is a fine specimen of a well-told tale worth the telling. It deals with a Confederate spy who, though wounded, is saved by a boy of the South. The scenes in the negro hut and his home are not only fine specimens of photography but are realistic, and show the care that has been given to detail. They are fine examples of the life of the period and vivid glimpses of the South of the war time. The negro women lighten things up by their antics. The last scene of duty successfully done, through toil and suffering, rounds out a notable reel.

Father Love—(Lubin).—This is a sombre production. A rich girl marries her violin teacher and is forbidden her father's house. She sickens and dies; her husband has a paralytic stroke; in his misery he leaves his baby on the grandfather's doorstep. Long years after father and child meet in a music store. Through the girl her father and grandfather are reconciled. Her father at once dies. The agony is too strenuous.

Robbie and the Redskins—(Kalem).—A mischievous boy holds the center of the stage. He teases everybody; the father and mother go to help with a neighbor's sick cow; they go at a speed that would indicate a terrific catastrophe. While gone the Redskins raid their hut; they are the most extraordinary Indians I ever saw. While they pile in and are eating, the girl, who is behind the door, slips out and gives the alarm. The boy is hidden in an eight-day clock. The Indians stream off into the pantry and the boy locks them in. How on earth that pantry door withstood the onslaught of a party of Indians with muskets I know not, but it did—till the rescuers came. The two squadrons met and the Indians fled. The boy in the clock case is the hero. In my limited wanderings amongst Redskins I never met any of this brand—or heard of them.

Modern Light Battery in Action—(Kalem).—A filler.

Bertie's Bandit—(American).—The hero is a "sissy" boy, addicted to botany. He goes west with his sweetheart and her mother to pick up manliness. He certainly is a wonder, for his first escapade is to tackle a notorious bandit and knock him silly with his fists. He didn't know it was the bandit. There's a terrific row amidst some fine rock scenery, and just as the bandit is about to get the best of things the young lady appears with a pistol. The bandit is "potted" and when the posse in pursuit arrives he is duly taken care of. Bertie gets the $5,000 reward. His sweetheart is convinced that after all he is a man, and that bandit is the most disgusted bandit that ever graced a screen. The reel is full of action, the scenes are fine, and the story is unique.

The Revenging Picture—(Itala).—Bad translation—ought to be avenging. The scenes are laid in the troublous days of the French Revolution. A Marquis hides a friend in a secret room that has a spring in the floor opening upon a well. Whilst in hiding "the aristocrat" paints his Marquis friend on the wall. A lying steward betrays his master and his friend, and gets the palace—the outside is not a palace on the film—as a reward. Long after the steward in a drunken fit hurls a bottle at the wall, which reveals the secret room. He sees the picture of his master and stepping back to gloat, touches the floor spring and is shot down to a horrible death. The costuming and the interiors are meritorious.

Only in the Way—(Thanhouser).—This theme is getting threadbare; a foreign film is almost identical. The son's wife acts brutally to her husband's mother; things are set right by a child. Compare Gaumont's "Twilight of a Soldier's Life," etc. The acting of a child is charming, and of the old lady a womanly concept—even to details. The wife's grabbing the old lady's bag, umbrella, etc., was, as one said who sat next to me "a bit too rushed."

For His Pal—(Powers).—A pal's loyalty is the theme; mighty few pals would measure up to this standard. One of them is blinded in a mine and when the other one tries to get him married to his sweetheart the blind one nearly throttles him, in a ghastly screen picture. It's not the actor nor actresses who are in fault. Who in thunder passed that scenario or faked the scenery?

A Tough Tenderfoot—(Bison).—All that need be said is that a "tenderfoot" is douched, ducked, and a few other things and gets even. He dopes some whisky and gives the boys a drink. The scene on the rail convulsed the house. The last fellow fell slowly.

Saved by Telegraph—(Pathe).—I have not the slightest intention to deal with the "plot." I simply wish to ask a few questions. Films have passed the babyhood stage—now they are not fairy tales, they are real life. As a matter of education, the film is meant to be presented before all sorts and conditions of folk. I, in the most friendly spirit, ask these questions: Did whoever wrote this scenario ever really know a telegraph office? Go to lower Broadway and ask, five minutes' walk will cover the information bureaus. A general manager's daughter interrupts a man at the key. (Holy Moses!) She comes down for lessons at that key (Jehoshaphat!) Pass the getting loeked in the safe (ask Biograph about that) but please explain to a poor, blundering, yet withal somewhat practical critic how these two people existed so long in that safe. A telegraph operator in that swell evening get up. (Say, boys at the key—I very nearly wrote floors and addresses), why, what are you giving us? And then inside the safe the general manager, the "G. M." can't telegraph, and the little girl, a "ham," has got to do it! Isn't there anybody writing scenario or arranging stage settings who can and will stop this rubbish?

Wiffle's New Sleeve—(Pathe).—The safe appears again with sundry presumedly funny happenings!

The Secret of the Still—(Kalem).—The scenery of this film is an education. The moss gathering, turpentine getting and the still end are most interesting. This is of the best. The story does not call for special mention, except that I have long wished to know how it is that young ladies who live in the backwoods wear such fashionable, high-heeled shoes! The setting is A-1, better without the tortured yarn.

The Jilted Joker—(Essanay).—A series of far-fetched jilted mix-ups that may, or may not—it depends on the weather and the liver—be deemed a joke.

Hank and Lank Make a Mash—(Essanay).—The outset is foolish, no girl would go with that object; the end funny when Hank gets mixed up with the masquerader. With such a company as this firm has can't it do better than copy—feebly copy—what is on the breakfast table every morning?

The Last Curtain—(Gaumont).—If ever there were an educational film this is one. A great actor bids good-bye to Paris with flowers and éclat. Afterward, those who bowed and scraped, now see nothing to get, and so, in a store, etc., ignore him. In his country life, his heart is ever in Paris. A strolling company comes to the town; he is interested. An accident happens and these poor, obscure players apply to the Master. Though ill, he plays in "Ernani," and is accorded a splendid triumph. The work was too much for him, and the last picture shows the weeping, country troupe in his death-chamber, with their tribute of love. Was ever a nobler lesson put on the screen than this? The greatest triumph of a great man was to help the obscure and poor, in the hour of their necessity; yea, more, he gave his life for them.

At Eventide—(Gaumont).—Scenes of peaceful beauty on the lake when the sun was low. Magnificent mountains, quiet homes resting at their feet, while on the rippling waters boats speed home to rest. An entrancing commentary on the old words, "At eventide it was light."

The Girl In the Film—(Vitagraph).—A young fellow goes out with a camera and gets all manner of love scenes, but he falls asleep and two young ladies passing, in fun, take a snapshot in which one appears. When developed the lady appears; this is a mystery, but the young fellow falls in love with the photo and eventually finds "her." The fun is their swift love-making and long leave-taking. At seven they bow, at four a.m. they've kissed, etc., and he's still saying good-night—outside. It's all a live joke. See the sleepy heads next morning, though!

The Brass Button—(Reliance).—A lady at a social gathering, shows her fine necklace to the hostess and her husband. Shortly afterward a maid finds it on the floor and determines to keep it. She hides it at the bottom of a stick of shaving soap on a bedroom dressing-table. When the loss is discovered there is a terrific fuss, but no trace is found. Before the loss the husband has received a letter from a bank threatening to close down upon him, without he at once makes good. This letter—strange to say—he carelessly left upon the table. Next day when the husband is at the office the wife finds the letter and forthwith suspects her husband, so that when he returns with the glad news that a change in the market has saved him, he faces a tempest. On top of this the other woman and her husband burst in like a cyclone, with two detectives. Thus the unhappy broker is in a cul de sac. (A change in the market is easily proved, but not in the story.) The guilty maid appears and one of the detectives who has found a piece of soap with the impress of a button upon it shows it is that of the maid's cuff button. She is arrested and the necklace restored. I am glad to notice an improvement in the manufacturer's end, so that one can see and enjoy the acting of those concerned.

The Return from Seaside Bathing—(Ambrosio).—A gentleman while in the sea is seized with such a terrific toothache he rushes off in his bathing suit, and a medley of clothing to the dentist's, where the united efforts of many fail to pull the molar. He then dashes off to the train, where a woman asks him to hold her child. The train leaves, taking him, his toothache and the baby. (Why a man, such as he was, ever traveled in that class on an Italian railroad is a poser). When he arrives at home and faces his wife, the child raises ructions. Fortunately, its mother arrives and gives him such a slap the tooth comes out! Parts are amusing and parts are photographically worthy of the firm.

Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports—(Ambrosio).—Of course this funny fellow makes every one laugh. His antics, skating, tobogganing and skiing are comic. What he contrives to do is simply marvelous. The snow scenery amid the mountains is exquisite, so realistic one expects to hear the swish, whizz, crunch of the snow and ice. The split would be a beauty with no story.

How Mary Met the Punchers—(Melies).—Mary came from Boston. Don't forget that—and so with the high superciliousness of that academic city treated the punchers with lofty scorn. When a gentleman with a title from the next ranch arrives, she's all smiles. The two go riding and are chased by a gang of drunken Indians. They hide behind the ruins of a shack. Sir Granville fixes up a dummy on a horse, but has to borrow Mary's skirt. (Business.) The Indians chase the dummy, Sir Granville goes for help. He never appears again. Cowboys come to Mary's rescue, bringing her skirt. (More business.) Mary then shakes hands—with the left hand—with her rescuers. I know not whether it is my cerebellum or cerebrum that's out of order, but my brain cannot grip these things. Mary comes from Boston. Boston! At once she's in a divided skirt, can ride splendidly and, moreover, use her pistol as to the manner born. The air out there must be wondrous potent. The punchers' lasso work is interjected.

The Poor Sick Men—(Biograph).—Bravo, Biograph! You certainly got out of the rut this time, and made everybody laugh and laugh, and then laugh some more. I'm very much afraid some of us, running in double harness, knew something of the situation from personal experience. Two men, father and son-in-law, make out they're sick, and so cannot go to the theater with their wives. So soon as the ladies go, each, without the other's knowledge, sneaks off to play cards. They meet, more fun. The club's raided, they slip up the fire escape, and one gets a kid's clothes, the other a policeman's. Their escapades on the way home are unique. Their changing clothes and fixing the sore foot and aching head to meet their wives is side-splitting. The innocent wives condole—here wink the other eye! Every theater where this is shown will feel like shouting "Encore!"

The Disinherited Son—(Eclipse).—The stage settings are of a high order. They are real, not faked, tawdry, make-believes. The story is innately French and pivots upon French customs. A young man loves a girl who works in his father's factory, and will not marry the girl chosen by his parents. He is disinherited. He seems to have done well. He's about to leave the country, but wishes to see his mother (man-like) and to bring his wife and boy. They all meet in the home garden. The boy strays, meets his grandfather—who does not know him—and makes him assist in the manufacture of mud pies. Of course, the child brings about reconciliation. That the acting is of the highest goes without saying. Parisian "stars" filled the roles. The mother's part calls for the highest in dramatic art—she fills it.

Bumptious as Romeo—(Edison).—I imagine it would have been a pleasure to all concerned to hear the Union Square Theater audience laugh, as this reel was shown. Real whole-souled laughter. Bumptious sees Romeo and Juliet played and determines to show how it ought to be done. His endeavors to be Romeo, his extensive and clinging love making and his final catastrophe in upsetting the scenery, broad farce. As he sneaked out of the "star's" dressing-room and then in his rooms destroyed all evidence of a dead ambition—even smashing the immortal Will—he told and told well, the old story of thorough and complete disillusionment.

Maid or Man—(Imp).—A young fellow gets a gray head to go to a prize fight. Gray head's actions there cause disturbance. The fight is raided, and the two after a strenuous flight get home, dishevelled, tattered and battle scarred. The woman comes to the rescue and the youngster dresses in his sister's robes, playing the maid to an incoming policeman. He plays his part in his flirtation with the "cop" to the dot. The old man in his joy at the "cop's" departure falls upon his son's neck—that is the pseudo-maid's. Just then in comes the mother—hysteria and so forth, till explained. The Fourteenth Street Theater was filled with merriment over this well conceived and worked out reel. Good for you, little sister, and also ditto for you, brother; I didn't know you could so adequately fill that class of work.

The Escape from the Tuileries—(Pathe).—A stirring, vigorous, well-told story from the Reign of Terror in France. The tale does not bear condensation. Educational films are much spoken of; here is one. What men and women did and suffered for conscience sake. The stage settings are just what is required. The outpourings of the red caps, mixed with the forerunners of the petroleuse, are vivid, and acted as only Parisians can. The scene where the lady in her bed treats with the bloodthirsty mob—whilst the count is under the mattress—reveals that unbreakable spirit so often to be seen in those days. The other side of the picture some folks forget—mayhap don't understand. Historically, photographically and theatrically of that excellence I like to see Pathe produce.

CORRESPONDENCE

A SCHOOL BOY'S OPINION OF M. P. SHOWS

New York, Feb. 8, 1911.

Dear Sir:—

I was talking to a friend about moving pictures and vaudeville and he said: "Moving pictures and vaudeville have sprung up over night, and will not last long." I asked him why he thought so, and he replied: "Because the public will not stand to be made a laughing stock of all the time and no good can come from them." Well, it looks to me as if the public were enjoying being made a laughing stock of. I will admit that they have done harm, but they also have done good.

There are any number of houses in the city that give a good clean show and treat their patrons with respect, and charge a small admission fee. But there are others that ought to have their doors nailed closed.

But there are good and bad sides to all things in business and pleasure, and it is so with moving pictures. Moving pictures are not a thing of the past; in fact, they have come to stay.

It is one of the many products of American genius by which thousands of people are amused every day, but they have also brought about abuses which have grown to serious proportions. Many people wonder if there is a way to stop these low houses. Yes, as the old saying is, Where there's a will, there's a way. If the people would stop patronizing these houses they would be forced to put on a cleaner show or go out of business entirely.

Faithfully yours,
WALDO GORDON VIELE.

MOVING PICTURES, LIKE BUNYAN'S "PILGRIM'S PROGRESS," REVEALED IN A DREAM

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 11, 1911.

Friend Saunders:—

The highly interesting communication of Mr. C. Francis Jenkins in "The Moving Picture News" of February 4th regarding Edison's connection with the "invention" of the "Vitascope" reminded me of a tale I was told some six years ago in Washington, D. C. I then made the acquaintance of an interesting Scotch woman holding a Government position at the capital and commanding the respect of all her associates and acquaintances. Among other topics we discussed moving pictures and to my astonishment she said: "Perhaps you would not credit it, but I am the real originator of moving pictures as we now understand them." She then went on to tell me that one night many years ago she had a dream, and in her dream she saw the figures from a painting in her room step out of their frames and seat themselves at a table just like human beings, and after transacting their business they retired to their frames again and became still pictures once more! This dream she had more than once and it set her thinking; not the first time, by the way, when great works and deeds have been originated and suggested by the subconscious mind in sleep. She further told me she had a very clever friend in Washington at the time (which was the early nineties) and she went over this dream with him in detail, and so impressed him by it that he did not rest until he solved the secret and invented the moving picture, for which (as she said then) others, including Edison, had been given undue credit. Either Mr. Armat or Mr. Jenkins can no doubt verify this story. The lady is now living in Scotland and is an occasional correspondent of mine so is available should any controversy arise. It is at least an "incident" that I think should be recorded in your authoritative paper, along with all the other news relating to the origin of motography.

Respectfully yours, JAMES D. LAW.

Manufacturers' Synopsis of Films

A WESTERN GIRL'S CHOICE
Champion Release, Wednesday, March 1

Dora Maxwell resides with her parents on their extensive ranch in the West, and her sweetheart is Milton Logan, the ranch foreman. Returning from a brisk canter, Dora is confronted with a great surprise in the presence from the East of her uncle and a strange young man.

Receiving a letter from her Aunt, through its presentation by her Uncle, Dora discovers that the young stranger is intended to be her future husband, and her Aunt also invites her to come East with the two men, when they return. She is urged to renounce the uncultured (?) West and adopt the refining environments of the cultured (?) East. In accordance with the wishes of her deceased mother, Dora's Aunt is desirous of inviting the girl to visit New York.

The attractiveness of the young Eastern millionaire is evident, and Dora, for the nonce, forgets poor Milton and spends her time in the company of Richard Moore. She soon meets with an opportunity to compare the worth of the two men, and that of the Westerner is so undoubtedly superior to the other she dares no longer hesitate in her choice.

In aid of her decision to refuse her Aunt's kind invitation is a dream she has of supposed Eastern civilization. The humiliation suffered through the cowardice of Moore, compared with the bravery of Logan, ends the false infatuation she experienced, and throws her, repentant and subdued, into the arms of her Western sweetheart. Moreover, her undesirable suitor returns, chagrined and discomfited, without having remained at the ranch over a day.

Writing a courteous letter of retusal to her Aunt, Dora places it in the hands of her astonished Uncle, and leaving them, she hurries to her room, gets into her riding habit, and meeting Milton at the front door, they both canter off with laughter and love in the winter's air.

"A MANLY MAN"
Imp Release, Feb. 27th

Norman Duncan, a civil engineer in the employ of the United States Government, loves Elinor Williams, and they are happy in their plighted troth. Duncan is ordered to the Philippines, to take charge of some important work, and takes an affectionate leave of his sweetheart, to whom he promises to be faithful.

We see him arrive at his destination, and take in the tropical surroundings. The young engineer is red-blooded, and human. He finds time hanging heavily on his hands, and seeks diversion. He finds it in Lola, a beautiful Filipino girl, with Juno-like form and handsome face. She gives him a passing glance, and Duncan is interested. He seeks the girl, and she is not averse to the attentions of the handsome young man from the States.

Petro, her lover, takes in the situation, which bodes no good for the interloper. Lola and Duncan meet, and the love affair is progressing beyond his fondest expectations.

Returning from his foray into the swamps one day Duncan is stricken with the deadly fever. He is overcome and his companions desert him, fearing the contagion. Lola finds him and, braving the ravages of the disease, assists him away. This episode is witnessed by the jealous native lover, who curses them, hoping his fickle sweetheart and her lover will both succumb to the dread fever.

We see Lola nursing Duncan back to life and health, faithful in her duties as a nurse, and glorious in her satisfaction of saving the life of the man whom she loves with all the passion of the Latin women. Slowly Duncan regains his strength, and we see him emerge from the hut supported by the faithful Lola. He is seated out of doors, when Petro appears, and is surprised to see him alive. Stung to desperation in his jealousy, Petro steals up, and is about to plunge a knife into Duncan's back, when the girl throws herself upon him, wrests the knife from his grasp, and sends it spinning into the foliage. Petro and Duncan grapple, when a priest providentially makes his appearance, and Petro desists with an abject apology. In a few words, the situation is explained to the man of God, who, with a keen discernment of right, inquires of the young engineer as to his intentions toward the native girl. He sternly insists that honorable union can be the only result of their relations. Duncan ponders, and then his better nature asserts itself, and he assents to a marriage. The ceremony is performed.

Later, Duncan, in the garb of a Filipino, is seated in his yard. His boy, the result of the marriage, comes to him. An American appears and questions Petro, who is standing near. The stranger inquires for Duncan, and Petro, alert, his jealousy having not abated by the marriage of Duncan and Lola, points to Duncan. There is a recognition. Duncan is pleased to welcome his friend. He is informed that Elinor, the sweetheart whom he left in the States, is outside the gate. Duncan is overjoyed. Elinor runs to him, and there is a happy reunion. He is holding her in his arms when Lola approaches, terrified at the sight. She understands, and humbly makes her way to Duncan's side. He sees her, and is racked with conflicting emotions. His wife and sweetheart—which? Sorrowfully, he breaks the intelligence to Elinor, who stands aghast. She understands. The woman he has sworn to love and cherish holds out her arms to him. The girl, to whom he plighted his troth, assumes the same attitude, less demonstrative. Elinor sorrowfully walks away, and Duncan seats himself in anguish, and then—takes Lola in his arms, and she is supremely happy, and Duncan is content—a manly man.

"ARMY MANOEUVERS IN CUBA"
Imp Release, March 2d

The "Imp" release of March 2d is one of the most elaborate educational pictures ever attempted, portraying the principal feature of the recent fête day in Cuba.

The occasion is the recent celebration of the independence of Cuba, the soldiery appearing in army manœuvers, a glittering, bewildering spectacle. The soldiers were photographed on the drill ground, at Camp Columbia, a beautiful stretch of sward, with tropical settings, the barracks plainly visible in the distance.

For military precision the pageant is a beautiful spectacle, regiment after regiment, cavalry and artillery, passing in review before the superior officers. The troops are splendidly uniformed, and the manœuvers demonstrate that the citizen soldiery of Cuba is a magnificent body of men, capable of coping with a like number on the field of battle, should the occasion require.

After the military demonstration the luncheon scene is pictured, showing many of the prominent citizens of Havana and officers of the Cuban army passing before the camera, the scenes closing with the chief executive of the Island in the opening remarks of his address, congratulating his bearers on the prosperity of the country under the system of independence that has obtained since they were freed from Spanish oppression by the intervention of the United States.

The picture is an interesting one from an educational as well as a scenic standpoint.

THE DYNAMITERS
Imp Release, March 2d

Jenkins, a club man, has a humorous experience that should be a very strong temperance lecture in pantomime. He is returning from a night of it with convivial companions, when he meets a party discussing the woes of the down-trodden laboring classes.

Jenkins has taken on a talking jag, and he waxes eloquent, descanting on the subject. He has an anarchist for an auditor, and as the crowd disperses the agitator takes the tipsy orator in tow and guides him to the rendezvous of his co-conspirators. They descend a flight of stairs with Jenkins blindfolded. The members of the gang appear masked, and Jenkins is persuaded to take an oath which binds him to the task of righting wrongs. Lots are drawn and Jenkins takes out the fatal black cube, and is given a bomb with clock-work attachment with the injunction to demolish a manufacturing plant.

We see Jenkins tipsily wending his way homeward, lugging the infernal machine. He throws himself on his bed and awakens, thoroughly sobered, with the destroyer on his hands. He hears the ticking of the machinery and knows the hour of the explosion is fast approaching. He dashes out and endeavors to lose the machine, dodging into stores and shops. The infernal machine is invariably returned to the luckless agitator and in desperation, he drops it in a park where it is restored to him by an intelligent dog. Happy thought—he will employ the sagacity of the canine to extricate himself from the dilemma. He passes the stairway leading to the habitation of the anarchists and instructs the dog to deposit the bomb below. The dog does so and rejoins Jenkins, and they make a run for it.

The dynamite explodes, wrecking the surrounding territory, and Jenkins escapes with his clothing rent, but otherwise intact.

It is a ludicrously funny comedy with plenty of action, the canine contributing materially to its success.

A CHILD'S PRAYER
"Lux" Release, February 24th

This is a very well acted short drama, relating the story of a child's prayer, and how it was answered. A struggling composer, whose talent is as yet unrecognized, receives a notice from his landlord, to the effect that unless he can pay his rent he will have to go. With a sigh, the composer takes up his latest score, and, bidding farewell to his wife and child, goes out, hoping that at last Fortune will smile upon him. He attempts to interview a well-known director of music, but without success, and at length returns home. Hopelessly he tosses his score on the table, and, resting his head on his arm, falls asleep. His little girl enters, carrying her doll, and, falling on her knees, prays for help. Then, catching up the score, she hastens out. Entering the director's office, she is at first refused admittance, but the great man himself enters and listens to her story. So touched is he by her appeals that he instructs his secretary to give the little girl a check, and escort her home. This is done, and the child's prayer turns sorrow into gladness.

THE STORY OF A PRAYER RUG
Rex Release, February 23

In Turkey, the land of mystery and mysterious romance, there are many strange customs wonderfully weird in the eyes of Occidentals. Amongst them is the "prayer rug" upon which the household kneels when conducting its prayers.

Old Hamid has just finished weaving a "prayer rug" and Elmas, his daughter, tells her sweetheart of the event, for an event it is. In the shade of a grove, with the warm sun and blossoms of the sunny land all about them, they plight their troth, these children of the Orient, for the heart is the same the world over, and love is the law of the world.

Accidentally, one day while getting water at the well, Elmas is discovered by the Pasha, who desires to make her queen of his harem. He follows her home and offers to buy her from her father, but the offer is refused.

Several days later Elmas disappears. Suspicious, the father apprises Elmas' sweetheart of the Pasha's offer. The lover determines to find and rescue Elmas and, disguised as a rug peddler, carrying a fair assortment of rugs on his back, he gains entrance to the harem. Amongst the assortment he has taken with him is the "prayer rug," which he knew Elmas would recognize at sight, and she does. Think not that the Turk lacks ingenuity, for he is slick and skillful. So when Elmas' sweetheart departed from the harem with his rugs on his back he had, concealed in the packet, little Elmas.

He carries her a distance before releasing her, and after clasping her in his arms, he points to the sun, the Oriental symbol of happiness, the omen of love.

LOVE'S TEST
Solax Release, Feb. 24th

Margaret Golden, a winsome and wealthy maid, is sought by many suitors, but has given her heart and the promise of her hand to Harold. Edith, who is herself in love with Harold, and consequently jealous of the existing friendliness between he and Margaret, contrives to raise a doubt in Margaret's mind as to the disinterestedness of Harold's love for her, and she decides to put him to the test. She writes a letter to Harold, telling him she has something important to tell him.

The letter is seen by her Aunt, with whom Margaret makes her home. The Aunt tries to dissuade her from what she regards as a very foolish move—for Margaret has told her that she intends to tell Harold that she has lost her fortune. Failing to change Margaret's mind, the Aunt waylays Harold and tells him of Margaret's plan. Harold is at first indignant, but finally regards the matter as a good joke, and determines to pay Margaret back in her own coin.

He listens to her sad tale, and then proceeds to tell her that he, too, has lost his fortune. As they are now both poor he can see no reason why they should not marry at once, and as Margaret is hardly in a position to refuse him, she accepts, and they marry and start for their new home in Poverty Row.

The scenes which follow show the new couple amid novel and strange surroundings. Poor Margaret, entirely unfamiliar with housework, tries hard, but her efforts are pronounced failures. Harold butts in, and his efforts to instruct Margaret in the gentle art of housekeeping give rise to a lot of very funny situations.

Finally both of them reach a point where forbearance has ceased to be a virtue, and they each decide to confess to the other. This they do, and happy in the knowledge of each other's love as proven by "Love's Test," they depart from their humble home, bidding a hearty adieu to "Old Ironsides," and we next find them at Martin's, where, seated at a table groaning with good things, they are busily engaged in making up for lost time—the past forgetting and by the past forgot.

THE LITTLE MOTHER
Thanhouser Release, February 28

A poor widow who supports her two children, one a baby and the other a girl of six, by scrubbing, weakens under hard work and finally dies. Marie, the "little mother," anxious that her home may not be broken up, calls on one of her mother's employers and requests that she be given a chance to take the dead woman's place. The artist, a wealthy, good-hearted young man, pleased with the child's pluck, laughingly employs her, and makes her believe that she is really doing all the "chores."

The artist's kindness, much to his surprise, brings him recompense one thousand fold. One of his models plots to fleece him. She calls at his studio, faints in his arms and when her confederate rushes in with a policeman, she makes charges that lead to the arrest of the innocent artist.

Just as the policeman is leading her benefactor away, the little scrubwoman sees what is happening. She follows the party to the police station, but is afraid to enter. When the "complainant" and her husband come out, the child is impressed with the fact that they seem to be on the best of terms. Her suspicions are aroused, and she "shadows" them like a regular detective.

What crook would ever imagine that a little girl, wheeling a baby carriage, was a "sleuth"? This pair certainly did not, for when they met a friend in the park, they stopped to tell him how they had successfully arranged to "trim" a rich artist, never doubting that he would pay liberally to have the case dropped.

The little girl, from her place in hiding, heard the story; so did the baby; but if the baby was put upon the stand it could only say "Goo," and that would hardly be accepted as evidence.

So the girl found a policeman and told him about it. And the policeman went with her to her hiding place and heard enough to warrant him in making what he afterwards described as "a two-handed collar."

What happened was that the adventuress and her confederate were haled to the police station and locked up, while the artist was set free in a hurry. The police impressed upon him that he owed his liberty to the bright work of an intelligent little girl, and he has never forgotten it.

The result is that there is now a "scrubwoman" whose duties are a sinecure, although the wages are high, and the future of the "little mother" and her baby are assured.

STAGE STRUCK
Thanhouser Release, March 3

A country girl who has always been interested in the drama becomes hopelessly stage struck when a company of barnstorming actors, presenting Shakespearian plays, appears in her home town. She applies for an engagement to the star of the organization and is finally offered a small part. Forbidden by her father to follow the career of her choice, she runs away and joins the company.

Disallusionment soon follows. The star is dissatisfied with her attempts at acting, and the hard work and bad hotels soon tax her strength. While playing a one-night stand in a little town the company is treated to a square meal by a prosperous young drummer, who is greatly attracted by the country girl's youth and beauty.

The company get into financial straits, are unable to pay their hotel bills, and have their baggage seized. Entirely without funds they start to walk to the next town. "Walking the ties" is a new form of exercise for our heroine, and half way on the journey she begs the company to go on without her, as she is too weary and sick to continue. Sitting alone and weeping bitterly on the steps of a forlorn little railway station, the girl is surprised to see, getting off a train, her new acquaintance, the drummer. He insists upon buying her a ticket for home and starting her off at once. The girl is welcomed back home by her father, and when a few weeks later she receives, together, an offer of a New York engagement, and an offer of marriage from the young drummer—she decides to accept the latter, and to appear in the future as—just wife.

THE ABDUCTION OF PARSON JONES
Yankee Release, March 3

Who kidnapped the Parson? The town was thrown into confusion by the sudden disappearance of Reverend Jones, and rumors multiplied until one was at a loss to believe whether or not he eloped with the pretty girl whose photo was found on the floor of his study with an endearing message inscribed on the back.

And if you were to glance through the list of those booked for passage on the S. S. Oceania, bound for the West Indies, you would not find the name of Parson Jones, even though something warned you he was on board.

It would be a shame to expose the plot before you see the film. Besides, this is the first of the Yankee World-Tour series and is a decided novelty.

ALL FOR GOLD
Yankee Release, February 27

The rush for gold was on and many there were who flocked to Nome in search of the precious metal, among them Tom Stuart, who left a wife and young daughter behind, back East.

The girl fell in love with the son of a rich broker and when he informed his father that he intended to wed the girl a storm of protest followed, and the boy was warned never to see the girl. However, love knows no obstacles and the happy twain were wed. They departed for the West shortly after, the girl writing her father in advance of their coming.

Meanwhile there was trouble in the gold mining camp and Tom Stuart was daily missing small portions of his hoardings of dust. Where it went he could not guess, but suspicion pointed strongly to Jose, a Mexican roustabout. Tom's partner was unmindful of the loss and led a carefree happy life.

When the newly married couple from the East reached the Nome region they were tired and worn out. They sought shelter in the very cave where Tom Stuart's gold was concealed and accidentally discovered the treasure. Of course they filled their pockets and journeyed on to the camp. Tom Stuart discovered his loss the next day and aroused the camp to action. Jose, the suspect, was dragged to the nearest tree and was about to lose his life, for he confessed to small thefts, when the broker's son learned of the commotion and appeared on the scene in time to explain away the guilt of Jose.

Father and daughter met for the first time in three long years and Tom accepted his new son-in-law in good faith in spite of his innocent escapade which almost caused a tragedy.

Some time later the happy and prosperous couple returned to the East, just in time to save a ruined broker from suicide. A father's forgiveness followed, of course.

BEGINNING WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8th

2-Solax-EVERY WEEK-2

WE WILL RELEASE

WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY

COMING RELEASES
FRIDAY, FEB. 24th—Love's Test (Drama)
FRIDAY, MCH. 3rd—A Costly Pledge (Comedy)
WEDNESDAY, MCH. 8th—Out of the Arctic (Drama)

Solax Company

147 FOURTH AVENUE, NEW YORK

ADVICE TO OPERATORS

Oracle Department

By WM. E. SMITH, E. E.

PRACTICAL ARTICLES FOR ALL

This department has been started with the idea to encourage the operators to obtain the best results with their Projecting Machines Queries and questions pertaining to the Moving Picture arts addressed to the Editor of this department will be published in this department. Only answers to inquiries of general interest will be published here for the benefit of all readers. On account of the large amount of inquiries received it may not be possible to print all the answers in any one issue, as each has to take its turn. Correspondents should bear this in mind when writing. If a quick reply is wanted by mail, a charge of 15 cents is made for each question. Special information requiring a large amount of calculation and labor cannot be furnished without remuneration. The ORACLE has no fixed rate for such work, but will inform the correspondent promptly as to the charges involved. When writing only one side of question sheet must be used; diagrams and drawings must invariably be on a separate sheet. Name and address must always be given in all letters. No attention paid to letters not observing above rules.

HOW TO OPERATE AN ELECTRIC PROJECTING MACHINE

An outfit for an electric projecting machine consists of the following apparatus: One arc lamp, hand feed; one rheostat either adjustable or fixed; one lamp house; one double pole single throw fusable switch; one coil of flexible asbestos covered wire, and two carbons.

This apparatus should be connected up with the rheostat in series with the arc lamp. When selecting a proper service upon which to operate an electric projecting machine, care should be taken to see that the service wires are of sufficient size to carry the arc lamp current without overheating, and thereby eliminating the danger from fire. An operator should never try to obtain current from a pendant or drop light, lamp receptacle, a cluster, or a circuit of which the wires are smaller than a No. 6 Brown and Sharp Gage; the electrical connections must be made at a regular outlet or junction box directly connected to the mains. (See Underwriters' rules published in Moving Picture News, January 21st and January 28th.)

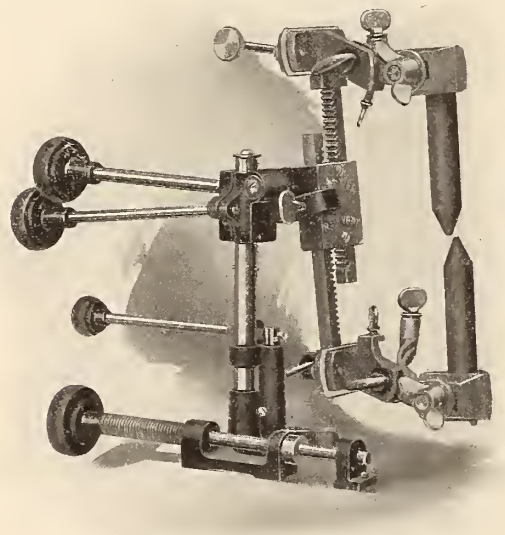

Fig. 1

When the set up is being made for direct current, care should be taken to see that the positive lead is connected to the upper carbon. Whether the connections are right or not can readily be determined by allowing the lamp to burn for a short while, then opening the circuit and observing which carbon stays red the longest, for the positive will stay red the longest. If the positive should happen to be the lower one, the connecting may be easily reversed at the lamp terminals. Another method is by the use of polarity paper, which is made as follows:

Dip blotting paper in a solution of potassium iodide to be had from any druggist. Take the paper, which must be in a moist condition, place the two electric wires on the paper near together. The positive terminal will turn the paper a deep violet. This paper may be used any number of times by moistening it with water before using it.

To operate the lamp ordinarily, see that there is current at the switch. If it be a low voltage circuit of 120 volts, this may be done by connecting an incandescent lamp across the mains or by placing the thumb and forefinger of one hand across the terminals of the switch. A tingling sensation will be felt in the fingers, which will indicate the presence of current at the switch. This method of testing for current is not advisable unless the pressure in volts is known, as serious results may occur to the operator if he were to try this on a 500-volt circuit; it would probably burn his fingers severely.

If there is current at the switch, close same, and the carbons then be brought into contact by turning the handle of the lamp mechanism. When the carbons are in contact they should be slowly drawn part, by turning the handle in the opposite direction. As the carbons burn away they should be fed together gradually; the distance between the upper and lower carbons should be about 3/8 inch. If the carbons should be brought closer together than 3/8 inch, a long tip will form in the crater of the positive carbon and thereby give a bad light.

An arc lamp is a mechanism consisting of two movable arms which are insulated from each other. These two arms have jaws at their extremities for holding the carbons. These carbons are so supported by the arms of the mechanism as to move in a vertical positive. Fig. 1 shows the type of lamp used by the N. Powers Co. The entire lamp is raised and lowered by means of a threaded device which keeps the angle of the arc parallel with the face of the condensing lenses. Backward and forward adjustment is effected by a feed screw terminating in a large milled handle. All adjusting rods pass through back of the lamp house and terminate in fiber handles, which being a non-conductor of heat are easily handled at all times.

When burning upon direct current the positive carbon which is the upper one burns away twice as fast as the negative carbon. When used on alternating current, however, both carbons burn away at the same rate.

THE FUSE FOOL

There is a most varied assortment of fools on this planet, as any half observant person can easily discover in the course of an ordinary day's experience, but of all fools that infest the world, that particular fool who substitutes a nail or a hairpin or some such device in place of a blown fuse is the kind that neither God nor man has any use for. He is a malicious fool, and he has the cunning of the coyote besides. For some other varieties of the genus fool, one's disapproval is sometimes tempered by sympathy for their foolishness. The "unloaded" gun pointer, the boat rocker, the banana-skin thrower are more stupid than malignant, and stupidity is not always incurable. But the fuse "fixer" has not even the poor excuse of stupidity. He generally knows, or he should know, the probable consequences of his act, yet he cunningly sneaks in a device which is almost certain sooner or later to cause destruction of property, and possibly human life as well.

MORE MISINFORMATION GIVEN BY TROUBLE MAKER

While glancing over a very recent issue of the M. P. World, I noted the following in which our contemporary says: The voltage has nothing to do with the size of wires, except where a transformer is being used. Neither does it make any difference whether alternating or direct current is used, unless it be that a transformer is used.

(From the M. P. World.)

Two More Drawings.—Mr. C. W. Bennett, Crystal Falls, Mich., contributes two more excellent sketches showing wiring diagrams. Drawing No. 1 shows one proper way in which to connect a moving picture lamp or another arc lamp in series with resistance. Notice the pilot lamps. You will see that should any fuses blow it would put out one lamp, or both, and if both lamps should go out at the same time, then you would know your main fuse has blown, or else that the power has been shut off for some cause. Sketch No. 2 shows another proper way to connect up a moving picture lamp or ordinary arc lamp. This sketch is designed to show you how you can have two sets of fuses to protect your lamp, so that when one fuse blows you cut in on another set by simply throwing the double pole switch over, without waiting to install another fuse. Mr. Bennett advises a 75-ampere switch for all operating room circuits, and the advice is good. He also advises that no wire smaller than a No. 6 be used, while heavier wire is still better. Wire your booth, he says, with the proper size wire in the start, and then you won't have to be changing from time to time. "I am aware," says Mr. Bennett, "that you may not need heavy wire, but never get the idea that you can have your wires too big, because in this you are mistaken." All of which the editor of this department will cheerfully endorse. Mr. Bennett further says: "Remember at all times that the size of wire required is dependent on the following, viz.: The distance your booth is from the point where the service wires enter the building. The number of machines to be installed in the booth, whether you are to use alternating or direct current and what voltage you are going to use. If you use the so-called current savers or choke coils, then your rules change a little."

I do not quite follow Neighbor Bennett in all of this. The voltage has nothing to do with the size of wires, except where a transformer is being used. Neither does it make any difference whether alternating or direct current is used, unless it be that a transformer is used, or, at least, I know of no material difference. The necessary size of wire will be governed by the number of amperes the lamps in the booth will consume and, as Neighbor Bennett says, the distance of the booth from the supply wires, or main switch board. We are indebted to Neighbor Bennett for the excellent sketches, another one of which will appear in the near future. What I mean by a transformer influencing sizes is that larger wires are necessary on the secondary than on the primary, due to drop in voltage and increased amperage.

I cannot help but to rise to a point of order, when I see such a statement given by a man who has herctofore claimed to be a well-versed expert on both electrical and mechanical problems relating to the projecting machine.

I would advise him to get a book, or take a course in some correspondence school that teaches elementary electricity. I shall endeavor to enlighten him on the following, that the voltage plays an important part in the size of wire used.

It is well known that in overcoming resistance electrical energy is wasted, and, as it costs money to develop or buy electrical energy, it is evident that such waste must be kept down to a minimum. This may be done by decreasing the resistance of the conductors, or what amounts to the same thing, or increasing the size of the conductors. The effect of resistance is to cause a drop in the voltage in the supply circuit, and the energy lost in overcoming this resistance appears in the form of heat. A few illustrations may suffice to show what an important bearing this question has in the size of wiring.

A two-wire circuit supplies a current of 50 amperes to an arc lamp at a distance of 200 feet from the meter. The drop allowed is five per cent and the voltage of the circuit is 110 volts. What size wire should be used?

Substituting the value given above, in formula, the size of the wire is found to be

$$A=\frac{2200 \times 50 \times 200}{110 \times 5}=40{,}000 \text{ cir. mils., or a No. 4 wire.}$$

If this energy were used for ten hours a day for 300 days and the cost of the energy was eight cents per kw. hour, the total yearly cost would be

$$\frac{50 \times 110 \times 10 \times 300 \times 0.08}{1000}=$1320.00.$$

Of this five per cent, or $66.00, would be lost yearly due to the drop. The cost of 400 feet No. 4 double braided, rubber covered wire would be about $21.00, so that the loss would be over three times the cost of the wire, and without any calculations it is easily seen that the system of wiring is not economical. We should use a large wire, thereby decreasing the voltage drop (about a No. 2 B. & S.). From the above it will be seen that although our wire, a No. 4, is of sufficient size to carry 50 amperes at 110 volts, we are having a drop in voltage of five per cent, or 22 volts, therefore, it will be seen that voltage is an important factor in regard to the size of wire.

Our esteemed contemporary also says: What I mean by a transformer influencing the sizes is that larger wires are necessary on the secondary than on the primary, due to the decrease in voltage and increase in amperage. (If that was all the designers and builders of transformers had to contend with, it would be a cinch.) It is like taking candy from a kid, showing him how little he knows about electricity. It is a shame to do it. Well here goes his second piece of candy: The very important effects of electromagnetic inertia on the flow of alternating currents makes them appear to be more complex than direct currents. The point is so important that it must be given very careful attention. When a direct current is passed through an incandescent lamp, the amount of power expended by the passage of the electric current through the lamp filament, which is converted into heat and light, is equal to current X volts. In the same way, when alternating current is passed through an incandescent lamp, the amount of power which is expended in the lamp filament, and converted into heat and light is also equal to current X volts. We, therefore, see that an incandescent lamp which is intended to give 16 candle power at a pressure of say 110 volts will be equally efficient when it is connected to a constant pressure circuit which furnishes it continuous current at an uniform pressure of 110 volts, or when it is connected to a circuit which furnishes alternating current at an effective pressure of 110 volts.

Now suppose we take 200 feet of No. 7 B. & S. gauge insulated copper wire. Its resistance is almost exactly one-tenth of an ohm at ordinary temperatures, and it, therefore, requires only one-tenth of a volt to send one ampere of direct current through it. This is true whether the wire is stretched out straight, wound in a simple coil, or wound around an iron core, since the resistance of the wire at a given temperature depends only upon its length, cross section and material, and none of these are altered by coiling or winding up the wire.

To send one ampere of alternating current of, say a frequency of 125 periods per second (15,000 alternations per minute), through this wire when stretched out straight requires a tenth of a volt effective pressure, or the same as in the caseof a direct current. Now, if this wire is coiled up (as a transformer winding) a greater pressure than one-tenth of a volt will be required to send one ampere through the wire, while if it is wound on a big laminated iron core there may be as much as 100 volts of even more required to send one ampere through the wire.

We know that the resistance of the wire is not changed by coiling it up or by winding it on an iron core, so that the actual resistance is one-tenth of an ohm all the time. This is proved by the fact that coiling the wire and winding it around an iron core does not change the amount of pressure required to send one ampere of direct current through it. This is where such things as current lag and impedence have to be dealt with.

An alternating current changes all the time, so that it never has a steady value, and the effect of self-induction is, therefore, felt by it at all times. While the current is rising, self-induction tends to hold it back or keep it from rising, and when the current is falling self-induction still tends to keep it from changing. The result is that in a circuit having self-induction an alternating current is always retarded a certain amount behind the alternating pressure which sets it up. The current is said to have a lag. This same retardation causes the maximum value of the current to be smaller than it would be were there no self-induction effects. The effective current in an alternating circuit is equal to the effective electrical pressure applied to the circuit divided by the impedence of the circuit. The impedence is a combination of the true resistance of a wire composing the circuit with the effect due to self-induction.

The true resistance of the wire depends only upon its length, cross section and material, while the effect of self-induction depends upon the magnetic effect of the different parts of the circuit, and upon the frequency of the current.

When a direct current flows through a circuit, the true resistance of the circuit only need be taken, but when an alternating current flows through the same circuit the impedence comes into account.

From this it will be seen that our esteemed contemporary is up a tall tree with his electrical knowledge, when he says the size of wire used or a transformer depends only on the decrease in voltage and increase in amperage of the secondary. We sincerely hope he won't have a mental short circuit, or blow many fuses after reading this (because we are after him for fusing up too heavy on his feeders of electrical knowledge). It is a wonder his consumers (the operators) haven't got wise to the unreliable quality of juice (information) he has been sending out to them. His mental generator seems to be of poor electrical design going like the mischief but not developing any current. My boy, you had better rewind your generator or you will have an awful burn out one of these days.

Vaudeville
Music

VARIETIES IN MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

BY FRA.

Illustrated
Songs

FAMOUS PUBLISHERS OF POPULAR MUSIC

The representative of the Moving Picture News who recently had the pleasure of an interview with Mr. Julius P. Witmark, expresses himself as delighted with that gentleman's inexhaustible energy and well balanced optimism. Discussing the business situation Mr. Witmark remarked "that never in the history of this house have we put forth in one season so many enormous sellers, and I am confident that 1911 will be one of the biggest years we have ever known. For instance," continued Mr. Witmark with a genial smile, "here is a condensed list of this season's big hits resulting in a tremendous volume of sales: 'My Heart Has Learned to Love You, Now Do Not Say Good-Bye,' 'For Killarney and You,' 'Slip On Your Glad Rags and Come With Me,' 'On San Francisco Bay,' 'We'll All Go Home When There's No Place Else to Go,' 'They've Won Every Nation's Battles But Their Own,' 'In the Garden of My Heart,' 'I'd Like to Be Loved by a Boy (Girl) Like You,' 'Good-Bye, My Love, Good-Bye,' 'Neptune,' 'The Volcano,' 'Teach Me to Pray,' and 'Red Pepper Rag,' vocal and instrumental. Then again our musical comedy successes are makink a tremendous showing, 'Naughty Marietta,' 'When Sweet Sixteen,' 'Madame Sherry,' 'Katie Did, 'Bright Eyes,' 'Three Twins,' 'The Fascinating Widow,' 'A Trip to Japan' (the Hippodrome show), 'The Girl of My Dreams,' 'The Girl in the Train,' 'The Paradise of Mahomet', 'Barry of Ballymore,' and a half-dozen others of the season's vintage, with the new Herbert opera for Fritzi Scheff in preparation, 'The Rose Shop.'"

JULIUS P. WITMARK

THE STAGE AHEAD OF THE AUDIENCE

Unthinking speakers and writers denounce the stage and all its works. The stage is evil and that's all there is to it—the attitude of the bigot who cannot see beyond his own nose. Nothing is entirely bad, that figment of a man-manufactured theology—such as fried witches in Massachusetts and set the fires of the Inquisition ablaze—still rankles and festers in so-called minds that cannot think—but practically it is dead.

My business is with the picture houses where there is vaudeville, and as I wander from theater to theater daily, I claim, without egotism, to know as much about our stage as those who never cross a theater's dorr when anyone is looking—and get their ideas from a lop-sided and dying sectarian press.

The theater is what the people make it, and the people are what their teachers make them. We have institutions in galore for the uplift of the race; millions of dollars are given to make the race better, the aforesaid dollars having, in the first place, been made by the people to be uplifted. The "uplifted" people—out of school—will be amused; God made them that way. That's good theology. It's the business of the theater to supply the demand. That's business. Business as lived by the men who give millions. There's not a business man, be he church warden, deacon or elder, that does not strive to fill a demand. The cleanness or uncleanness of the stage is due to the demand of the people; their demand is what they are; when they are not obliged to be something else.

I once met a church dignitary in New York who was enjoying some "turns" because he was in a city where nobody knew him! Also in places strange in Paris, a preacher studying sociology! The reasons for coming to see us are not so strange. A man's a man in spite of a "dog collar." During the last week I sat in one of our best "pop" houses and saw a clean, clever act. I know it did not "fill the bill;" later on in the day I was in another popular house. There was nothing wrong, but once or twice the actor was coarsely vulgar; immense applause, in which the women took an emphatic part. In the first case the theater was ahead of the audience, in the next it was alongside of it. Many acts are condemned and are failures, not because they are too bad, hut because they are too good! What the people demand, they will get—as a pure matter of dollars and cents. What they demand is what they are; what they are is "up to" the moral teachers in our midst. The theater does not make the people who throng its seats; they come as they have been made by somebody else, not to ask but to demand what their teaching, before they came to the theatre, made them.

We might then say to the stage critics, we do as you do in your business: we supply a demand. We, for dollars and cents, give the people what you have taught them to need and thus, rightly, too, put the onus where it belongs. But we do no such thing; we have our graduates on the vaudeville stage, men and women in the honor class, just as clean, as clever and as potential as any university. Their teaching, too, has an influence far beyond any classroom. We have no claim to super-righteousness, but we do claim that we are not a class to be looked down upon by anybody, and that the vaudeville stage is an important factor in the education of the people—more, that far from being behind, the stage is full oft ahead of the audiences as made and moulded by those who criticize and denounce us.

THE PICTURE AND THE PLAYER

I have no intention of entering into the pros and cons of whether it is good to have vaudeville in the moving picture theaters or not; the final word upon that subject is for wiser heads—and even in conclave they, so far, have not settled the point. Like Mahomet's coffin, 'tis still 'twixt heaven and hades. Still, as a result of visits to all sorts of theaters and talks with various folks of sundry nationalities, I wish to give the majority opinion. In the neighborhood theaters pictures alone go; still there is an inkling of the subthought: they like songs. Illustrated songs entirely depend upon the quality of the slides, and certainly some do look like a "yellow" advertiser on a rampage. I find the general majority prefer some vaudeville, but—and this little, yet all important word—it depends upon the vaudeville. There are scores of houses, some bearing big names, where the vaudeville is so absolutely rotten that it is beyond endurance.

Good vaudeville and good pictures make up a show that cannot he beaten. When you get "junk" pictures and "punk" vaudeville there is no salvation. There are managers who have both good pictures and good vaudeville and yet do not make a success, for the lack of a little common sense. For instance, comedy followed by a lugubrious reel or a drama followed by a screaming farce on the curtain. People don't want to weep all the time—the tears run dry, or to laugh all the time—the risible power fails; they need a judicious mixture without violent jumps and gymnastics. Good reels and good vaudeville with the musical end looked after is a winner always. If the pianist is bad, or the singer is vile, the last impression lasts and result of good work is destroyed.

Picture and player, not destroyed by villainous music, will pay. Underpaid music, ancient pictures and cheap vaudeville spell ruin. Ruin in the till, that's one thing; ruin in the standing of the house, and that's worse, because it reflects upon the combination power for good.

VAUDEVILLE

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATER

Les Montforts. Comedy acrobats who delighted the house. Their bar-work was excellent, whilst that upon the trapeze was a brilliant example of clever performing. The plaudits were long and hearty.

Ford and Blair. Two men with change, patter and dancing. Laughter and applause.

Rodgers. Hopper & Co. in a one-act dramatic playlet. "The Escape," one of the best sketches seen in many a long day. The story is one throbbing with human passion, revenge, triumph, pathos. The scene opens in the District Attorney's office, which is exceedingly well staged, where he is working late. An escaped convict enters and holds the lawyer up at pistol point. It appears the attorney was his prosecutor. Gregg declares Carleton shall die on the stroke of twelve, and then goes on to recite his wrongs about his wife, and how his daughter believes him dead. By a clever ruse Carleton gets possession of the pistol and goes to 'phone for the police. Carleton asks Gregg who took charge of his daughter, and to his horror learns that the convict's daughter is his own wife. Just then the wife comes in—the convict hiding—and tells her husband his life is in danger on account of Gregg's escape. Then Mrs. Carleton explains how she remembers her father and how he died. The convict thus learns the truth, the wife retires. Then Carleton provides Gregg with money and clothes and so he escapes. The parts are acted with vigor and a true feeling for the role, each of the tensely dramatic situations being skillfully handled. The convict is specially good, but all deserve praise. During the performance the audience was still with that stillness that denotes deep and heartfelt interest. There were two curtains whilst the audience thundered their applause.

The Yashimate Japanese. A clever, clean act, of the typical Japanese sort. Man and woman in costume. Applause.

The Firenzi Trio. Character and operatic vocalists who sang in Italian. The folks clapped and the "ciribiribee" evidently carried the house.

Halstead and Wheeler. Comedy musical act. Two men who played the cornet, trombone and freak instruments. The black face and his antics were hailed with roars of laughter.

William Ellis. Monologist. Got good-humored laughter and applause.

Cora Mickle Hoffer & Co. Supported by Frank Minor and Wilma Frances Vincent, in "The Way of the Transgressor," written by Cora Mickle Hoffer. Cast: Albert Crane, Frank M. Minor; Marion Crane, his wife, Wilma Francis Vincent; Melvin Crane, their baby, Melvin St. John; Jacques, their waiter, Enrico Ventura; Widow Trevalyn, Cora Mickle Hoffer. Time: present. Place: Delmonico's, Frisco.

The hit of a strong holiday bill. The audience laughed and applauded, then did it all over. The staging of the cafe was excellent. Albert Crane, a crank on liquor and purity of speech, is dining with his wife. Enter a rich widow with whom he at once sets up a vigorous flirtation and arranges a meeting half an hour later. His young wife was not quite so blind as he fondly hoped, and when she goes out with her lord and master she manages to escape and informs the widow that she is the wife, not "friend," of Albert. The widow is persuaded to teach the old masher what's what. When he returns with his finicky primness she proceeds to give him "his." She uses all the slang she can think of—her supply is prodigious—and pretends ways of the "fast set." Albert is fully satisfied and turns to his gentle wife, the widow producing his wife and child. The widow carries the role of a cultured woman who, for the sake of another woman, degrades herself, well. She evidently presents what she meant when she wrote the sketch. Albert fills the bill whilst Jacques, as a foreign waiter "wise" to "situations," deserves praise. Three curtains. A well conceived and well acted piece of comedy with an underlying seriousness that is very much to the point these days.

Jim Driscoll, balladist, knows just what to sing and, what is more, he knows how to sing it.

On Monday the crowds waiting were four to six deep from Sixth Avenue to the Armory early in the day.

KEITH & PROCTOR'S

Beginning with Monday the house runs moving pictures as usual at 9 a. m., but puts on the vaudeville at 11 a. m. The opening bill was bright and commendable. Four reels and four turns, about two and a half hours of good, clean stuff. I know full well how Brother Buck watches things from his quiet little corner, and in any change he has my heartiest good wishes for that success which this popular house so eminently deserves.

R. H. Mohr. Artist, ventriloquist. One of the best turns of the kind I have seen for a long time. Mr. Mohr is an expert with the crayon and not only draws well but talks well. His remarks are not only humorous but shrewd, and certainly "got over." His "illusion of the voice" was excellent. He got laughs, applause and a how and deserved them all.

Wells & Norton. The pair act as a maid and a hell boy in a hotel. After the patter was over the lady threw off her maid's costume and in all the glory of spangles performed her whirly-whirl dance. The youngsters had better look to their laurels. Old friends one is glad to see again.

The Great Sterk. Work on the slack wire. The young fellow had that capable and confident way that takes. Everything done was accurate, quickly performed and flawless. Applause came.

Valentine's Dogs. The doggies did their work and, as usual, it was recognized. Most of us love dogs.

Jones, Williams & Co. A vastly buxom lady is very much married to a man who is not a giant. She has suspicions about huhby; he stays out nights. Last night he got tangled up with an actress, a "crushed strawberry" one. She comes to get a locket she lost. Wife is lured away. The young lady comes, only to be rushed into a china closet as wife returns. At last the inevitable meeting, and I'll be hanged if I ever saw a more realistic hair pulling. Roars of laughter and the "big hand."

Caroline Schroeder. Singing. A well-dressed lady with changes. She has a sweet voice, well controlled; a charming personality, and a good selection of songs. The turn is refined and altogether worthy of praise. The sort of act we want more of; the audience showed that as before.

Ruby Caldwell. A young lady whose toe dancing is good, but whose singing, until tuned up, will not do.

Constance Windom & Co. A sketch in an Adirondack sanitarium where the staging of the theater is the best part. There are the makings of a sketch and the seeds of possible fun, but the whole is too prolix, too drawn out. It lacks ginger, snap and virility. The Dude's the best.

The lectures on Greek Sculpture are well illustrated and the slides follow the subject, as they ought to do.

Mrs. Tucker, an old friend, has been filling the usual singer's place. Her voice is sweet, true to pitch and sympathetic. Her singing has given great pleasure to the musical lovers and won the well-deserved applause she got.

On Monday one had to struggle to get near the door, to say nothing of getting inside.

THE UNIQUE

Holiday brought an all-feature bill and crowded houses.

The Gallaties. A man and a woman who sang selections in Italian. The ciribiribee as an encore got "the hands." This pair must attend more to pitch, especially in the high notes.

Ripon. The Scotch ventriloquist. The feature of this "split," and a good one.

The Homans. A man and a woman in a comedy playlet, "The Romance of the Rose." This is good, and goes.

The Hennings. Man and woman in novelty juggling, which went well.

Reynolds and Hart. Comedy, singing and talking.

Eddie Dyer. Singing, talking and dancing.

Nellie Moran. Billed as the Irish Queen. This was the feature act, and her impersonations completely won the audience. The hit of the bill.

'Tis good to see old friends. Amhrosio's "Ave Maria" turned up. The beauty of the settings and the sweetness of the story are never old. More, as the film sped on. Gustaf Koschat at the piano rippled on with Gounod's arrangement of the Baeh theme. Why do I speak of this? Because, near me, I heard auditors describing the scenes and they knew Gounod's air. Some folks think vaudeville audiences appreciate nothing outside of ragtime. Such folks have never roamed around amongst theaters and listened to, or talked to, the rank and file of the "wage earners." I may say that I found out that those who enjoyed Gounod were "out of works" who'd just dropped in to rest.

THE DEWEY

On Monday this house was packed, and then a waiting list. Amongst the providings which went well were: The Spauno; De Grant and McClellan, big; Kelly and McShane; the Miller Sisters; Hilda Renard and Leila Golde.

THE CITY THEATER

This theater continues to attract large audiences and, to all appearances, should be a money maker. The Hawlet Trio, clay modeling, good; Lucille Mendhall & Co., new acts; Lawrence & Co.

Mann & Co. This is a rural sketch in which Mr. Mann, as a farmer, fills his role well. The woman as a waif adequately filled her part. This was the hit of the bill, and won deserved applause.

FIFTH AVENUE

Andrew Mack, with his singing and his anecdotes was easily the feature. Eddie Leonard and Mable Russell, negro ditties, that went; Gerald Griffin, in the comedy, "Other People's Money," made a hig hit; "The Models of the Jardin De Paris," by Carl Henry & Co., was a big laughing hit; Verona Verdi and her brother, a bright pair of Italians, played on the violin and cello, very well; Frank Milton and the De-Long Sisters, in a Western sketch, did well; Gald Smith and Happe Hebrew Comedy, with freak musical instruments; Cedara, in a wonderful stunt on a motorcycle, excellent.

MANHATTAN OPERA HOUSE

Dr. Cook has bobbed up amongst the moving pictures, and is to discourse about "The Truth About the Pole." On the bill are McIntyre and Heath, Grace Gardner & Co., the Eight English Madcaps, Bissett & Scott, and others.

HAMMERSTEIN'S

Maude Raymonds heads the bill. Other features a re Charley Grapewin & Co. in "The Awakening of Mr. Pipp;" Howard & North; Williams & Schwartz in a strong dramatic sketch, "The Devil, the Servant and Man;" McConnell and Simpson and the Worthleys, singers and dancers.

BRONX

The well-known Gertrude Hoffman is the headliner in her Revue; Hal Davis and Inez MacCauley in a sketch, "One Xmas Eve;" Tom Nawn & Co. in "When Pat Was King;" Kline Bros.; Ashley & Lee and Dorothy Granville.

LINCOLN SQUARE

The Curtis Sisters, comedy; Dorothy DeSchelle & Co. did some excellent work in a little sketch that contains possibilities; Monarch Comedy Four made the house laugh; the Flying Russells. Some care ought to be taken in the choice of the pictures, otherwise the effect is bordering on the ludicrous and has a tendency to spoil the temper of the audience.

KEENEY'S THEATER

This house is certainly "going some." All around the neighborhood the offerings have been subject to enthusiastic comment. This is not to be wondered at, for in addition to the Keeneyscope the following acts of merit were presented: Juggling Wilson, comedy jugglers; Pinard and Manning, very clever comedians; Davis and Gallaghan, in a comedy skit, "A Business Proposal," one continuous roar of laughter from start to finish; the Bruces, buck and wing dancers on roller skates, very good; Heyn Brothers, novelty acrobats; Burns & Wilson Co., in a laughing sketch, "The Hotel Silvery Moon;" Irene La Tour & Co., acrobatic comedians; Williams and Sterling, comedians; Seymour and Harris, singers and dancers; The Great Leon, magician, very clever and startling.

We have to congratulate Manager Edw. J. McMahon for securing a bill of such drawing quality.

BROOKLYN
FULTON

A strong bill is offered for the holiday week at this popular theater. Adele Ritchie heads the bill again, as she had to cancel last week's engagement through illness. Amongst the specialties are Mr. & Mrs. Arthur Forhes, in the comedy "A Wild Rose;" Fred M. Tallman, a billiard player, in an exhihition of fancy shots; the Bardley Trio in a minstrel act; the Four Minstrel Girls; Collins & Curtis, Hebrew comedians; Frey & Fields in "The Horse Doctor," and Al Libcy, comedy cyclist.

GRAND

This house continues to get the crowds, and they appreciate the long bill. Manager Springer, amongst other things, announces the following: McWater & Tyson, from the "Follies of 1910;" Hopper & Co. in "The District Attorney;" Oliver & Ryan; Eddie Austin; the Parter Trio; Bruce Hayward, and the Hawaiian Four.

GREENPOINT

Eva Fay, with all her extraordinary mysteries in mind readings and cabinets, is the headliner. Amongst other features are Glasan, singing comedian; the Primrose Four, a well-known quartette; Claude & Fanny Usher in the sketch, "Fagan's Decision;" Muller & Carelli, comedy acrobats; the Dolce Sisters, singers; Berzoe's performing animals and getter, and Rogers Comedy Skaters.

On Friday evening, February 10th, Baltic Lodge 284 held a reception at the Masonic Temple, Lafayette and Clermont Avenues, Brooklyn. The hall was crowded to the limit and the vaudeville was provided by the members of the lodge. Amongst other numbers were songs by Harry Humphries, "Heigh-ho," good; Bill Carson, "Kiss Me." We could have listened to this again. Jim Davidson, "I'll Lend Me Wife." This was greeted with great laughter. Frank Schiller, "Winter," very good; but the hit of the evening was Geo. Winter's rendering of "Barber Shop Chord," which brought down the house. After the entertainment dancing was in order, the favorite music being hits of the following houses: Harris, "Buy a Little Love;" Remick, "Winter," "Cotton Babes" and Silver Bell;" Witmark, "When You Won the Only Girl" and 'Good Night, Dear;" Shapiro, "All that I Ask Is Love" and "Listen to the Jungle Band." Miss Wells sang twice and was heartily applauded.

OUT OF TOWN
BOSTON

Keith's. Beatrice Ingram & Co. were good, and so were Whitter and Hill; Charles & Fanny Van & Co. got the laughs. Master Gabree & Co., also Rice, Sully & Scott were good.

Orpheum. Geo. Femming & Co., good; the Prattics; Prof. Dodd and Dog, good; Ziska & Saunders; Granier & LuFosse.

PHILADELPHIA

Keith's. Adeline Genee as usual crowded the house, and was the hit of the bill. The Exposition Four is a musical act that "got over." Conlin, Steele & Carr, comedy, excellent; Ward & Cullen, singing and talking, good; Herzog's Houses and Niblo's Talking Birds did well; the Lanetow-Lucier Co. made a hit in their comedy, "Heyes of Hierity."

Liberty. Dora Martine, on the trapeze, good; the Washer Bros., two dwarfs, got the laugh; the Stewart Sisters, dancing, a strong bill.

Palace. The Musical Kleises, good; the Kinzarad Bros., acrobats, good; the Lussier Sisters, all right; Aldert & Evans, black face act; Allie Johnson, colored man, slack wire; Freeman & Fiske.

ATLANTIC CITY

Savoy. Geo. Primrose, good; Foy Bond, very good; Claude & Marion Cleveland did well, and also Joe La Fleur; Heely & Adams, and Jeannette Jerndine, good.

SONGS

CHARLES K. HARRIS MUSIC PUB. CO., N. Y.

I Never Knew Till Now. Chas. K. Harris. Very tuneful with many quaintly pretty chords and resolution. A song to be commended for home use. The words are good, clean and appealing.

Don't You Mind It, Honey. Caro Roma. The music moves along in sympathy with the words; the chorus is catchy. The words are not only just the sort we like but have the cheerful ring that counts for so much in songs.

Star of My Dreams, Shine on. Arthur J. Lamb & John T. Hall. One of the most beautiful, tuneful and taking songs that I have come across for a long time. The chorus is quite as pretty as the rest. As to the lyric, it is as good as the music, and that is high praise.

Will the Roses Bloom in Heaven? Chas. K. Harris. The lyric is of a high order and is a great relief from the senseless stuff so current in so many theaters. It is not only rhyme, but it means something. The music once heard will be remembered. It is a song which is becoming more and more popular in the theaters and places where such songs are featured.

The above-mentioned songs have my heartfelt commendation. I have listened to them amidst a crowd; my own children have played them in the home, and in each case the verdict was the same. Pure, beautiful music to hear with delight in a theater and with complete confidence in the home.

MAURICE SHAPIRO
Broadway and 39th St., N. Y. City

Don't Wake Me Up, I Am Dreaming. Beth Slater Whitson and Herbert Ingraham. A song which is bound to be popular in spite of the key it is written in and the many accidentals. Properly sung the air and the words are such that audiences will want to hear again.

Dixie Rose. Dave Reed. Right good words wedded to good music. The sentiment of the composition with its subtle touches of humor just such as appeal.

You Needn't Go to College If You've Been to College Inn. Edgar Selden and Herbert Ingraham. A jolly, snappy, swinging campus song. The words and the music are entirely of the kind that "Rah" boys delight in.

Pollywog Wiggle. Selden, Fisher & Bryar. The combined efforts of the trio whose name adorn this composition do not appeal to me. The music has its good points and possibly to "Wiggle" lovers the lyric will be deemed of the ultra humorous class.

A Certain Party Rag. Edgar Selden and Tom Kelley. One of these eternal rags which, when sung by a singer, has points that appeal; but when rendered, as alas too often is the case, by incompetents then it has all the elements of excruciating torture.

MUSICAL NOTES

The Shapiro Musical Publishing Co., have engaged Ray LaPearl to sing the hits during the coming season.

J. Fred Helf Co.'s latest songs are being featured all around us. "Gee, But It's Great to Meet a Friend from Your Home Town," "That Barber Shop Chord," "My Love Is Greater Than the World" and "I'm on the Right Side of the Right Girl" are stunning successes.

Amongst the Haviland songs that I have heard of late and which are favorites I may mention: "Tipperary Whirl," "I've Got Your Number," "Somebody Else" and "Nightingale."

Victor Kramer Co. has made successes of such songs as the following, if I may judge from the way they are received in the theaters: "Why Don't the Band Play Dixie," "Little Puff of Smoke," "Mother," "In the Garden of Love," "Any Old Way You Cook Chicken."

Owing to the scarcity of good bass songs M. Witmark & Sons have recently issued two magnificent numbers, entitled "Neptune" ("Lord of the Sea Am I") and "The Volcano," by the distinguished English writers of standard songs, Clifton Bingham and Stanley Gordon. It is seldom songs of this class attract immediate attention in the trade and among professional singers, but notwithstanding the short period these numbers have been on the market they are being praised on all sides.

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

		Feet
Dec.	28—Drama of the Engine Driver and Grandfather's Pipe
Jan.	4—The Wall Partition	500
Jan.	4—Trials of Tweedledum as a Policeman	500
Jan.	18—Blue Domino's Disguise and Tailor's Queer Ad
Jan.	25—A Wife Calvary and Tweedledum Cash
Feb.	1—Return from Seaside Bathing
Feb.	1—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports
Feb.	8—Tweedledum as a Detective
Feb.	15—The Demon	900

AMERICAN.

Jan.	30—The Genius (Com.-Dr.)	965
Feb.	2—The Mission in the Desert (Dr.)	985
Feb.	6—A Pittsburg Millionaire (Dr.)	985
Feb.	9—On the Installment Plan (Com.)	560
Feb.	9—Too Much Aunt (Com.)	430
Feh.	13—Quiet Evening at Home (Com.)	985
Feb.	16—In the Land of Cactus (Dr.)	980
Feb.	20—The College Spendthrift (Dr.)	990
Feb.	23—Strategy (Com.-Dr.)	980
Feb.	27—The Sheriff's Sweetheart (Dr.)	800
Feb.	27—The Silence System (Com.)	200
Mar.	2—College Chums	975
Mar.	6—Hypnotizing a Hypnotist (Com.)	615
Mar.	6—Memories (Dr.)	375
Mar.	9—The Rich and the Poor (Dr.)	1000

ATLAS FILM CO.

Nov.	30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.)
Dec.	7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.)
Dec.	14—Brothers (Dec.)
Dec.	21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.)
Dec.	28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)
Jan.	4—A Straw Ride (Dr.)
Jan.	11—A Letter to the Stork (Dr.)
Jan.	18—A City Wolf (Dr.)
Jan.	25—Irish Hearts
Feb.	1—The Surgeon and the Girl
Feh.	1—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.)
Feb.	8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.)
Feb.	15—Coals of Fire

CAPITOL FILM CO.

Sept.	10—The Messenger Boy's Sweetheart.
Sept.	17—Round Trip $5.98
Sept.	24—Bill Mason's Ride	700
Oct.	8—All's Fair in Love and War
Oct.	15—A Shot in the Night
Oct.	22—The Locket (Dr.)

CHAMPION.

Dec.	7—Hearts of the West (Dr.)	950
Dec.	14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.)	950
Dec.	21—His Mother (Dr.)	950
Dec.	28—The Golden Gates (Dr.)	950
Jan.	4—Days of the Early West (Dr.)	950
Jan.	11—Bill's Widow (Dr.)	950
Jan.	18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.).
Jan.	18—Why He Went West (Dr.)	950
Feb.	1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.)
Feb.	8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.)	950
Feb.	15—Her Three Proposals (Com.)	950
Feb.	22—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.)	950

CINES.
Eclair.

Oct.	21—The Last of the Savelli Dr.)	800
Oct.	28—Tontolini in Love (Com.)	480
Oct.	28—The Pretty Dairy Maid (Dr.)	480
Nov.	4—A Wooden Sword (Dr.)	800

COLUMBIA

Oct.	29—In the Web (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.)
Nov.	19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	26—Stage Coach Tom (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	3—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.)
Dec.	31—Trapped (Dr.)
Jan.	7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.)

ECLAIR

Dec.	26—The Lock-Keeper (Dr.)	537
Dec.	26—The Fear of Fire (Com.)	390
Jan.	2—The Great Medal Competition (Com.)	485
Jan.	2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.)	480
Jan.	9—Mother's Portrait (Dr.)	930
Jan.	16—The Jealousy of Sosthenes Ramulot (Com.)	478
Jan.	16—My Wife's Hat (Com.)	482
Jan.	30—The European Lunch
Jan.	30—The Elusive Robber
Feh.	6—Doctor Against His Will (Dr.)	984
Feh.	13—Mr. Faddleaway is on Strike (Com.)	522
Feh.	13—The Elixir of Bravery	424
Feb.	20—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.)	683
Feh.	20—Hospital for Small Animals (Spec.)	286
Feh.	27—Punch	595
Feb.	27—Beware of the Bomb (Com.)	370
Mar.	6—King Phillip the Fair and the Templars	975

GREAT NORTHERN.

		Feet
Dec.	17—A Christmas Letter (Dr.)
Dec.	17—Dickey's Courtship (Com.)
Dec.	24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.)
Dec.	31—The Scarecrow (Dr.)
Dec.	31—Bear Hunting (Sc.)
Jan.	7—The Red Light (Dr.)
Jan.	14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.)
Jan.	21—The Trunk Mystery
Jan.	28—Triumph of Intelligence	391
Jan.	28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done (Com.)
Feb.	4—The Criminal Chief's Capture
Feb.	11—Found Again (Dr.)
Feb.	18—The Life of a Muschik
Feb.	18—The False Alarm

IMP.
Independent Moving Picture Co, of America.

Dec.	19—The Crippled Teddy Bear
Dec.	22—Little Nell's Tobacco (Dr.)
Dec.	26—The Unexpected Honeymoon (Dr.)	995
Dec.	29—Unreasonable Jealousy (Dr.)	990
Jan.	2—The Wise Druggist (Dr.)	995
Jan.	5—Reunited (Dr.)	995
Jan.	9—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.)	998
Jan.	12—The Empty Shell (Dr.)	995
Jan.	16—Melody	995
Jan.	19—His First Patient (Dr.)	500
Jan.	19—The Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship (Dr.)	500
Jan.	30—Maid or Man
Feb.	2—The Mix-up
Feb.	2—An Imaginary Elopement
Feb.	6—At the Duke's Command (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	9—The Mirror (Com.)	500
Feb.	9—When the Cat's Away (Com.)	500
Feb.	13—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	16—The Convert (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	20—Pictureland	1000
Feb.	23—Artful Kate (Dr.)	1000

ITALA

Dec.	15—The False Accusation	774
Dec.	17—The Mother's Shadow	456
Dec.	17—Thieves as Quick-Change Artists	594
Dec.	22—Who Was the Culprit? (Com.)
Dec.	24—Greediness Spoiled Foolshead's Christmas (Com.)
Dec.	29—The Rustic
Dec.	31—Norwegian Water Falls	500
Dec.	31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day	500
Jan.	5—Antonio Toscarino	900
Jan.	7—Foolshead as Inspector of Hygiene	900
Jan.	12—Joanna of Braganza	900
Jan.	14—The Recall	900
Jan.	19—A Sad Fascination
Jan.	21—Visit of a Friend
Jan.	26—The Revenging Picture
Jan.	28—My Son Is Guilty
Feb.	2—The Village Coachman
Feb.	4—The Feast of Foolshead
Feb.	9—John Milton	900
Feh.	11—Foolshead at the Kinematograph	900
Feb.	16—The Fatal Charm	900
Feb.	18—Who Will Eat the Turkey	900

LUX.
By Prieur.

Dec.	23—Bill Plays Bowls (Com.)	423
Dec.	23—Rosalie's Dowry (Com.)	492
Dec.	30—Aunt Julia's Portrait (Com.)	547
Dec.	30—Tim Writes a Poem (Com.)	375
Jan.	6—How They Tricked Father (Com.)	498
Jan.	6—The Rival Engine Drivers (Dr.)	367
Jan.	13—Bill as a Jockey (Com.)	465
Jan.	13—That Is My Name (Com.)	438
Jan.	22—A Dilemna
Jan.	22—Faithful Furniture
Jan.	27—Willie Goes Cycling
Jan.	27—Infamous Son
Feb.	3—Back to the Old Homestead
Feb.	10—The Orphan's Friend (Dr.)	711
Feb.	10—That Horse Did Run (Com.)	272
Feb.	17—Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Dr.)	639
Feb.	17—Matilda Lovestruck (Com.)	321
Feb.	24—A Child's Prayer (Dr.)	534
Feb.	24—Matilda Chased (Com.)	354

NESTOR FILM CO.

Nov.	2—The Girl from the West (Dr.)
Nov.	9—The Woodsman (Dr.)	960
Nov.	16—The Ranchman's Bride (Dr.)
Nov.	23—A Deal in Indians	1000
Nov.	30—Valley Folks
Dec.	7—The Conquering Hero
Dec.	14—The Pilgrim (Dr.)
Dec.	21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.)
Dec.	28—Elda of the Mountains (Dr.)
Jan.	4—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.)
Jan.	11—Sleepy Hollow (Dr.)	950
Jan.	18—Their New Minister (Dr.)
Jan.	25—The Man in 23
Jan.	25—New Minister
Feb.	1—The Bridal Trail
Feb.	8—The Transgressor
Feh.	15—The Light Beyond
Feb.	22—His Father's House (Dr.)

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
("Bison")

		Feet
Dec.	30—Taming Terror
Jan.	3—In the Heart of the Sierras	900
Jan.	6—A Savage Girl's Devotion	900
Jan.	10—An Indian Trapper's Prize	900
Jan.	13—The Creek Claim	900
Jan.	17—Texas Ted's Defense	900
Jan.	20—The Redskin's Secret	950
Jan.	24—Red Man's Wrath	900
Jan.	27—Trials of Bud Brown	900
Jan.	30—A Tough Tenderfoot
Feb.	3—A Squaw's Bravery
Feb.	7—The Half Breed's Plan
Feb.	9—John Milton (Dr.)
Feb.	10—The Salted Mine (Dr.)
Feb.	14—The Deputy's Honor	900
Feb.	17—The Warrior's Squaw	900

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Dec.	31—A Daughter of Virginia (Dr.)
Jan.	3—The Pinkerton Man (Dr.)
Jan.	3—Beaux Not Wanted (Com.)
Jan.	7—A Woman Without a Heart (Dr.)
Jan.	17—A Montana Love Story (Com.)
Jan.	17—Lovers' Trials (Com.)
Jan.	21—A Noble Heart (Dr.)
Jan.	24—Wife's Love and Little Dorothy	980
Jan.	28—Masquerader	960
Jan.	31—For My Pal
Feb.	4—His First Case
Feb.	4—The Cattle King of Arizona (Dr.)
Feb.	7—Freddie's New Shoes (Com.)
Feb.	11—A Trip Through Mexico (Sc.)
Feb.	14—An Unforseen Complication (Com.)
Feb.	18—Under Southern Skies (Dr.)

RELIANCE

Jan.	25—For Remembrance	900
Jan.	28—The Last Laugh	975
Feb.	1—A Brass Button
Feb.	4—The Command from Galilee
Feb.	8—The School Ma'am's Courage (C.-D.)
Feb.	11—The Little Avenger
Feb.	15—Three Men (Dr.)
Feb.	18—Souls Courageous	900
Feb.	22—A Plain Tale	900

REVIER

Jan.	4—For Better Or Worse (Dr.)
Jan.	11—The Goosecreek Claim (Dr.)
Jan.	18—For the Child's Sake (Dr.)	500
Jan.	18—You Try It (Com.)	500

REX

Feb.	16—A Heroine of '76 (Dr.)	910

SOLAX COMPANY

Jan.	6—The Nightcap (Com.)
Jan.	6—Salmon Fishing in Canada (Sc.)
Jan.	13—The Girl and the Burglar (Dr.)
Jan.	20—A Reporter's Romance (Dr.)
Jan.	27—His Best Friend (Dr.)
Feb.	3—Ring of Love
Feb.	10—Mixed Pets (Com.)
Feb.	17—Corinne in Dollyland (Com.)

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Dec.	27—The Vicar of Wakefield (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	30—Hypnotized (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	3—The Pasha's Daughter
Jan.	6—Baseball and Bloomers
Jan.	10—Everybody Saves Father (Com.)
Jan.	10—The Only Girl in Camp (Com.)
Jan.	13—The Vote that Counts (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	24—When Love Was Blind	900
Jan.	27—Prompt Payment
Jan.	27—Stealing a Ride	900
Jan.	31—Only in the Way
Feb.	3—Adrift
Feh.	7—Westerner and the Earl
Feh.	10—The Norwood Necklace
Feb.	14—For Her Sake (Dr.)
Feh.	17—Checkmate (Dr.)
Feb.	21—The Patriot Maid of '76 (Dr.)
Feh.	21—For Washington
Feh.	24—A Newsboy Hero

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Dec.	19—A Ward of Uncle Sam (Dr.)
Dec.	23—The Terror of the Plains (Com.)
Dec.	26—The Insane Heiress (Dr.)
Dec.	30—The Missing Bridegroom (Dr.)
Jan.	6—The Royal Wishbone (Dr.)
Jan.	2—Mrs. Danver's Divorce
Jan.	9—An Erring Son's Awakening (Dr.)
Jan.	16—The Folks Back Home (Dr.)
Jan.	20—Returned to the Fold (Dr.)
Jan.	30—Taxicab Mystery
Feb.	3—Counting House Mystery
Feb.	6—Foiling the Camorra (Dr.)
Feb.	10—Was She Justified (Dr.)
Feb.	13—Condemned to Death (Dr.)
Feh.	17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.)
Feb.	20—A Life-Time Penance (Dr.)
Feb.	24—The Woman Who Dared (Dr.)

"THE DIE IS CAST!"

Mr. Exhibitor, did you ever hear of a scaramouch?

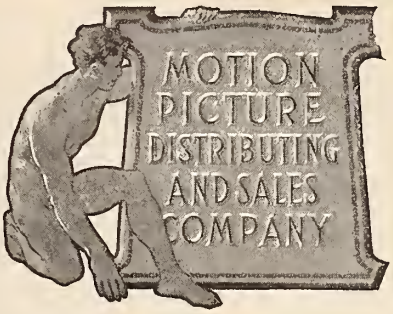
You certainly have met him.

In business he is known as a "four-flusher." The trouble with his kind is that you RESPECT him until you finally see his bluff called, then you realize how foolish you were to pay him homage.

The gigantic bluff of some people who tried to tell you that they are the only ones entitled to make Moving Pictures has been called. See Moving Picture World, Feb. 18th, page 356, showing withdrawal of Injunction against Gaumont Type of Camera, and Moving Picture News, Feb. 4th, page 13, under heading "Great Independent Victory."

By sticking together the Independents have met, beaten and exposed their bluff.

Now, do they still command your respect as they did before you knew that they didn't have a leg to stand on? There is only one answer you can give, and that is, to call at once for this UNEXCELLED PROGRAM:



OUR PROGRAM

MONDAY
- American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
- Eclair—Eclair Film Co.
- Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
- Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

TUESDAY
- Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
- Powers—The Powers Co.
- Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.

WEDNESDAY
- Ambrosio—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
- Atlas—Atlas Film Co.
- Champion—The Champion Film Co.
- Nestor—David Horsley.
- Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

THURSDAY
- American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
- Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
- Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
- Rex—Rex M. P. Mfg. Co.

FRIDAY
- Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
- Lux—R. Prieur
- Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.
- Solax—Solax Company
- Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

SATURDAY
- Capital—Capital Film Co.
- Gt. Northern—Gt. Northern Film Co.
- Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
- Powers—The Powers Co.
- Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

111 East 14th Street, New York City

INDEPENDENT FILMS

The following films have been released week of February 13th by the Empire Film Co., 150 East 14th Street, New York:

	Feet
Feb. 13—Her Darkest Hour (Imp)	998
Feb. 13—Quiet Evening at Home (American)	982
Feb. 13—Condemned to Death (Yankee)	950
Feb. 13—Mr. Faddleaway Is On Strike (Ecl.)	536
Feb. 13—The Elixir of Bravery (Eclair)	421
Feb. 14—A Deputy's Honor (Bison)	975
Feb. 14—An unforeseen Complication (Pow.)	930
Feb. 14—For Her Sake (Thanhouser)	965
Feb. 15—The Demon (Ambrosio)	975
Feb. 15—Her Three Proposals (Champion)	1000
Feb. 15—The Light Beyond (Nestor)	1000
Feb. 15—Three Men (Reliance)	980
Feb. 16—In the Land of Cactus (American)	1000
Feb. 16—Fatal Charm (Itala)	950
Feb. 16—The Convert (Imp)	990
Feb. 16—Heroine of '76 (Rex)	995
Feb. 17—A Warrior's Squaw (Bison)	1000
Feb. 17—Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Lux)	500
Feb. 17—Matilda is Lovestruck (Lux)	500
Feb. 17—Corrine in Dollyland (Solax)	975
Feb. 17—Checkmate (Thanhouser)	1000
Feb. 17—Her Birthday Surprise (Yankee)	990
Feb. 18—Life of a Mischik (Gt. Northern)	500
Feb. 18—False Alarm (Gt. Northern)	500
Feb. 18—Who Will Eat the Turkey (Itala)	990
Feb. 18—Beneath Southern Skies (Powers)	1000

SALES COMPANY

The following films have been released week of February 20th by Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.:

	Feet
Feb. 20—Pictureland (Imp)
Feb. 20—College Spendthrift (American)
Feb. 20—A Lifetime Penance (Yankee)
Feb. 20—Heart of a Warrior (Eclair)
Feb. 20—Hospital for Small Animals (Eclair)
Feb. 21—The Way of a Redman (Bison)
Feb. 21—For Washington (Thanhouser)
Feb. 21—What Would You Do? (Powers)
Feb. 21—Mexican Centennial (Powers)
Feb. 22—A Plain Tale (?) (Reliance)
Feb. 22—Redeeming Angel (Ambrosio)
Feb. 22—His Father's House (Nestor)
Feb. 22—The Old Man and Jim (Champion)
Feb. 23—Artful Kate (Imp)
Feb. 23—Strategy (American)
Feb. 23—Little Souls (Itala)	770
Feb. 23—Story of a Prayer Rug (Rex)
Feb. 24—The Woman Who Dared (Yankee)
Feb. 24—Fate of Joe Dorr (Bison)
Feb. 24—A Newsboy Hero (Thanhouser)
Feb. 24—Love's Test (Solax)
Feb. 24—A Child's Prayer (Lux)	534
Feb. 25—Across the Mexican Border (Powers)
Feb. 25—Even the Accuser (Reliance)
Feb. 25—Foolshead Present (Itala)
Feb. 25—Havana Cigar (Itala)
Feb. 25—His Great Duty (Gt. Northern)

Announcement, Advertising, Travelogue, Recitation
and slides for every purpose made to order
GEO. J. GOLDTHORPE & CO.
244 West 14th Street New York

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We tecah you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars. ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS, 908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., Chicago.

We want all old friends as well as new cnes to remember we want your $2.00 per year, cr $1.00 for six months subscription.

If you are not satisfied with the results in next three mcnths your money returned.

In writing to Advertisers please mention

THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH.

	Feet
Dec. 29—His Wife's Sweethearts (Com.)	682
Dec. 29—After the Ball (Com.)	311
Jan. 2—The Two Paths	992
Jan. 5—When a Man Loves	998
Jan. 9—The Italian Barber (Com.)	993
Jan. 12—The Midnight Marauder (Dr.)	392
Jan. 12—Help Wanted (Com.)	605
Jan. 16—His Trust (Dr.)	996
Jan. 19—His Trust Fulfilled (Dr.)	999
Jan. 23—Fate's Turning (Dr.)	998
Jan. 26—The Poor Sick Men (Com.)	991
Jan. 30—A Wreath of Orange Blossoms (Dr.)	993
Feb. 2—Three Sisters (Dr.)	997
Feb. 6—Heart Beats of Long Ago (Dr.)	997
Feb. 9—Priscilla's Engagement Kiss (Com.)	997
Feb. 13—What Shall We Do With Our Old (Dr.)	994
Feb. 16—Fisher Folks (Dr.)	998

EDISON

Dec. 23—A Christmas Carol	1000
Dec. 27—Eldora, the Fruit Girl (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 28—A Family of Vegetarians (Com.)	990
Dec. 30—The Romance of Hefty Burke (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 3—In the Days of Chivalry	1000
Jan. 4—Sleep, Gentle Sleep	990
Jan. 6—The Fire Department of New York City	400
Jan. 6—A Western Night	600
Jan. 10—The Test of Friendship (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 11—The Home of the Seal (Educational)	300
Jan. 11—The Gardener's Ladder (Com.)	700
Jan. 13—The Link that Held (Dr.)	960
Jan. 17—With Interest to Date (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Jan. 18—Uncle's Birthday Gift (Com.)	995
Jan. 20—Mike the Miser (Dr.)	990
Jan. 24—An Eventful Evening (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 25—The Lover and the Count (Com.)	995
Jan. 27—The Black Bordered Letter (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 1—Bumptious as Romeo (Com.)	975
Feb. 3—Selling Old Master (Dr.)	990
Feb. 7—The Doctor (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 8—Two Valentines (Com.)	1000
Feb. 10—His First Commission (Dr.)	990
Feb. 14—The Rajah (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 15—The Ransom of Red Chief (Com.)	975
Feb. 24—The Price of Victory	1000
Feb. 17—A Stage Romance	1000
Feb. 21—The Rival Sculptors	990
Feb. 22—Mr. Bumptious, Detective	990
Feb. 28—The Iron Master	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Dec. 17—The Tenderfoot Messenger (Dr.)	997
Dec. 20—Hank and Lank	265
Dec. 20—The Greater Call	730
Dec. 21—The Bad Man's Christmas Gift	975
Dec. 27—Girls Will Be Boys (Com.)	1000
Dec. 31—A Gambler of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 3—The Redeemed Criminal	1000
Jan. 7—The Count and the Cowboys	1000
Jan. 10—The Sophmore's Romance (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 14—The Girl of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 17—His Master's Son (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 21—The Border Ranger (Dr.)	985
Jan. 24—A Sin Unpardonable (Dr.)	998
Jan. 28—The Two Reformations (Dr.)	996
Jan. 31—The Jilted Joker (Com.)	640
Jan. 31—Hank and Lank (Com.)	366
Feb. 4—Carmenita, the Faithful (Dr.)	995
Feb. 7—A Woman's Voice (Com.)	566
Feb. 7—Ten Words for Twenty-five Cents (Com.)	425
Feb. 11—The Bad Man's Downfall (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 14—Getting Sister Married (Com.)	1000
Feb. 18—The Cattleman's Daughter (Dr.)	1000

GAUMONT
G. Kleine

Dec. 20—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical)	220
Dec. 24—The Old Home (Dr.)	732
Dec. 24—Cain and Abel Biblical)	279
Dec. 27—The Adventuress (Dr.)	995
Dec. 31—The Doctor's Secretary (Dr.)	981
Jan. 3—The Artist's Pay Day	969
Jan. 7—The Woman Wins	945
Jan. 10—A Child's Plea (Dr.)	758
Jan. 10—The Hills of Corsica (Travelogue)	243
Jan. 14—A Simple Rustic Tale (Dr.)	958
Jan. 17—The Sealed Letter (Dr.)	837
Jan. 17—A Water Contest (Educational)	168
Jan. 21—The Kleptomaniac's Repentance (Dr.)	965
Jan. 24—Twilight of a Soldier's Life (Dr.)	945
Jan. 28—The Baby Fortune Hunters (Dr.)	682
Jan. 28—Gorges of the Bourne, France (Travelogue)	293
Jan. 31—At Eventide (Scenic)	173
Jan. 31—The Last Curtain	823
Feb. 4—Jiggers Looks for a Job	537
Feb. 4—Krimmel Waterfalls (Scenic)	435
Feb. 7—Jiggers' Moving Day (Com.)	395
Feb. 11—Napoleon in 1814 (Dr.)	797
Feb. 11—Autumn Leaves (Edu.)	185
Feb. 7—The Strongest Tie	605
Feb. 14—The Reformation of the Suffragettes	665
Feb. 14—Land Marks of Avignon, France	338
Feb. 18—Saul and David	128
Feb. 18—At the End of the Road	838
Feb. 21—The Plot That Failed	815
Feb. 21—Pictures in Chemistry	175
Feb. 25—Paganini and the Countess Beatrice	998
Feb. 28—Matrimonial Epidemic (Com.)	813
Feb. 28—Lafont and Pola's Last Flight	185
Mar. 4—The Tramp's Find	680
Mar. 4—Forbidden Cigarettes	335

KALEM CO.

Dec. 23—When Lovers Part	963
Dec. 28—The Girl Spy Before Vicksburg (War Dr.)	935
Dec. 30—The Stranger (Dr.)	1005
Jan. 4—The Bolted Door	975
Jan. 6—The Runaway Engine	955
Jan. 11—For Love of an Enemy (Dr.)	995
Jan. 13—The Heart of an Indian Mother (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 18—Her Chum's Brother (Com.-Dr.)	980
Jan. 20—Robbie and the Redskins (Dr.)	850
Jan. 20—Modern Light Battery in Action	95
Jan. 25—The Secret of the Still (Dr.)	950
Jan. 27—Puritans and Indians (Dr.)	970
Feb. 1—The Sheriff's Sister (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 3—The Trail of the Pomas Charm (Dr.)	1005
Feb. 8—Little Sister (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Feb. 10—The Broken Trail (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 15—Grandmother's War Story (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 17—The Lost Ribbon (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN.

Dec. 26—Making a Man of Him (Dr.)	990
Dec. 29—Blue Horse Mine (Dr.)	990
Jan. 2—Art and the Legacy	950
Jan. 5—His Last Parade	390
Jan. 5—A Mix in Masks	600
Jan. 5—The Crimson Scars	980
Jan. 5—Fire! Fire! Fire!	980
Jan. 9—Tag Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.)	935
Jan. 12—The Widow's Choice (Com.)	990
Jan. 16—Will It Ever Come to This? (Com.)	715
Jan. 16—Easy Coin (Com.)	250
Jan. 19—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 23—Father Makes Himself Useful (Com.)	975
Jan. 26—Father Love (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 30—His Bogus Uncle (Com.)	1000
Feb. 2—Age vs. Youth (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 6—A Double Elopement (Com.)	990
Feb. 9—The Petticoat Sheriff (Com.)	1000
Feb. 13—The Show Girl's Strategem (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 16—Getting Even (Com.)	600
Feb. 16—Schultz Has the Smallpox (Com.)	400

G. MELIES.

Nov. 17—His Sergeant's Stripes (Dr.)	950
Nov. 24—The Cowboy's and the Bachelor Girl (Dr.)
Dec. 1—Pals (Dr.)
Dec. 8—What Great Bear Learned
Dec. 15—Old Norris' Gal
Dec. 22—A Western Welcome	980
Dec. 29—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.)	980
Jan. 12—The Owner of the "L. L." Ranch (Dr.)	980
Jan. 19—Changing Cooks (Com.)	980
Jan. 26—How Mary Met the Cowpunchers (Western Dr.)	980
Feb. 2—Only a Sister (Dr.)	980
Feb. 9—Tony, the Greaser (Dr.)	980
Feb. 16—Billy and His Pal (Dr.)

PATHE.

Jan. 2—The Misplaced Petticoat	790
Jan. 2—Dutch Kids	497
Jan. 4—The Cowboy's Innocence	994
Jan. 6—An Intrigue	997
Jan. 7—Love Under Difficulties	781
Jan. 7—The Funeral of Count Tolstoi	220
Jan. 9—The Evils of Betting (Dr.)	676
Jan. 9—In the Land of Monkeys and Snakes	276
Jan. 11—The Twin Cinderellas	705
Jan. 11—Dusty Rhodes Takes a Flight (C.)	249
Jan. 13—Max Is Almost Married (Com.)	572
Jan. 13—So Near but Not Quite (Com.)	420
Jan. 14—The Battle at Redwood (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 16—Marguerite's Birthday (Com.-Dr.)	659
Jan. 16—Saved by Her Prayers (Dr.)	331
Jan. 18—Trailed by an Indian (Dr.)	495
Jan. 18—Sea Birds and Their Haunts (Edu.)	462
Jan. 20—The Tables are Turned (Com.)	981
Jan. 21—The Marked Dollar (Dr.)	968
Jan. 23—How Max Went Around the World (Com.)	633
Jan. 23—Gasoline for a Tonic (Com.)	361
Jan. 25—Saved by Telegraphy (Dr.)	720
Jan. 25—Whiffels' New Sleeves (Com.)	282
Jan. 27—Il Trovatore (Dr.)	964
Jan. 28—Father Against His Will (Com.)	720
Jan. 28—Betty Rolls Along (Com.)	289
Jan. 30—The Escape from the Tuileries (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 1—Hearts, Hunger, Happiness (C.-D.)	722
Feb. 1—Practical Brook Trout Breeding (Edu.)	279
Feb. 3—The Slave's Revolt (Dr.)	722
Feb. 3—Rice Industry in Japan (Edu.)	256
Feb. 4—A Cowboy's Devotedness (Dr.)	922
Feb. 6—Max Has the Boxing Fever (Com.)	561
Feb. 6—An Imitator of Blondin (Com.)	400
Feb. 8—Legally Dead (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 10—The Missing Bride (Dr.)	800
Feb. 10—Review of Chilian Troops (Edu.)	180
Feb. 11—Silver Leaf's Heart (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 13—Betty's Apprenticeship (Com.)	689
Feb. 13—Pineapple Cannery in China (Ind.)	315
Feb. 15—A Western Courtship (Dr.)	715
Feb. 15—The Axoloti (Edu.)	266
Feb. 17—Whiffle's Double (Com.)	499
Feb. 17—A Boy's Wit (Dr.)	462
Feb. 18—Licut. Scott's Narrow Escape (Dr.)	984

SELIG

Dec. 15—County Fair (Dr.)	1000
Dec. 19—John Dough and the Cherub (Mystical)	1000
Dec. 22—Overland to Fremont	1000
Dec. 26—The Rustlers (Dr.)	990
Dec. 29—Justinian and Theodora (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 2—The Argonauts	1000
Jan. 5—Ramona's Father	1000
Jan. 9—Shadows of the Past (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 12—The Rival Dramatist	1000
Jan. 16—Buddy, the Little Guardian (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 19—An Englishman's Honor (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 23—A Robust Patient (Com.)	1000
Jan. 26—The Spy (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 30—The Little Circus Rider
Feb. 2—The Curse of the Red Man
Feb. 6—Too Much Mother-in-Law
Feb. 9—Thelma
Feb. 12—The Survival of the Fittest
Feb. 16—The Buccaneers
Feb. 20—The Padre
Feb. 27—The Eye of Conscience

URBAN-ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

Nov. 9—Secret of the Cellar (Dr.)	788
Nov. 9—A Trip Through Scotland (Scenic)	217
Nov. 16—The Rival Barons (Dr.)	860
Nov. 16—An Alpine Retreat (Scenic)	142
Nov. 23—Behind a Mask (Dr.)	516
Nov. 23—Nantes (Scenic)	450
Nov. 30—The Return at Midnight	634
Nov. 30—Ramble Through Ceylon	819
Dec. 7—Death of Admiral Coligny	992
Dec. 5—On the Mexican Border
Dec. 8—Reggie's Engagement
Dec. 14—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.)	749
Dec. 14—Scenes in British India (Sc.)	253
Dec. 21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.)	676
Dec. 21—A Chamois Hunt	332
Dec. 28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.)	650
Dec. 28—Coaching in Devonshire, England (Travelogue)	348
Jan. 4—A Lock of Hair	978
Jan. 11—Washed Ashore (Dr.)	670
Jan. 11—Woodcarving in Brienz	320
Jan. 18—By the King's Order (Dr.)	991
Jan. 25—The Sailor's Return (Dr.)	689
Jan. 25—Scenes in Jersey (Travelogue)	296
Feb. 1—Disinherited	990
Feb. 8—On the Border of the Forest (Dr.)	895
Feb. 8—Canadian Iron Center, Port Arthur (Educational)	110
Feb. 15—Catherine Howard	1005
Feb. 22—The Golden Sickle	882
Feb. 22—Felling a Smoke-stack	113
Feb. 22—The Golden Sickle	882
Feb. 22—Felling a Smoke-Stack	113
Mar. 1—Comrades	638
Mar. 1—Beauties of Sans Souci	362

VITAGRAPH

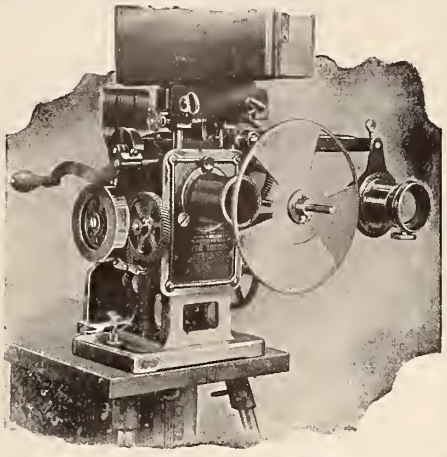
Nov. 25—The Statue Dog
Nov. 26—Love, Luck and Gasoline (Dr.)
Nov. 29—A Woman's Love (Dr.)
Dec. 2—Jack Fat and Jim Slim at Coney Island (Com.)	951
Dec. 3—The Poacher's Wife (Dr.)	1001
Dec. 6—A Tin-Type Romance (Com.)	996
Dec. 9—He Who Laughs Last (Com.)	927
Dec. 10—The Color Sergeant's Horse (Dr.)	978
Dec. 13—The Law and the Man (Dr.)	1010
Dec. 16—Playing at Divorce (Dr.)
Dec. 16—The International Motor Boat Race (Sc.)
Dec. 17—A Dixie Mother (Dr.)
Dec. 20—The Light in the Window	997
Dec. 23—Clancy	995
Dec. 24—Jean and the Waif	989
Dec. 27—In Neighboring Kingdoms (Dr.)	995
Dec. 30—Crazy Apples (Com.)	988
Dec. 31—Where the Wind Blows (Dr.)	987
Jan. 3—All Is Fair In Love and War	973
Jan. 6—The Misses Finch and Nephew Billy	979
Jan. 7—The Old Water Jar	984
Jan. 10—Doctor Cupid (Com.)	987
Jan. 13—Water Lilies (Dr.)	991
Jan. 14—Coward or Hero (Dr.)	975
Jan. 17—Three Men and a Maid (Com.)	1000
Jan. 20—The Girl in the Film (Com.)	963
Jan. 21—Cast Up by the Deep (Dr.)	1001
Jan. 24—It Did Look Suspicious (Dr.)	617
Jan. 24—The Fireman's Parade (Edu.)	333
Jan. 27—Girl of the Mountains (Dr.)	999
Jan. 28—Davy Jones in the South Seas (Com.)	995
Feb. 4—A Queen for a Day	1000
Feb. 7—The Deluge	978
Jan. 31—Jean Rescues	976
Feb. 3—Society and the Man	981
Feb. 10—The League of Mercy (Dr.)	991
Feb. 11—At the White Man's Door (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 14—Consuming Love	975
Feb. 17—When the Light Waned	994
Feb. 18JThe New Stenographer (Com.)	994
Feb. 21—A Tale of Two Cities, Part I	1014
Feb. 24—A Tale of Two Cities, Part II	1013
Feb. 25—A Tale of Two Cities, Part III	994

SATISFACTION

That is what the purchaser of a moving picture machine has a right to expect and what he ought to demand. To give SATISFACTION a moving picture machine MUST

Project steady, bright and flickerless pictures;
Run easily and quietly, and
Stand the grind of long service without breakdowns.

There is ONE—and ONLY one—machine that is guaranteed to give this sort of satisfaction—



POWER'S NO. 6

"The Perfect Motion Picture Machine."

Any dealer can supply you with one—if he wants to. If he recommends another machine write to us.

Catalog D tells all about our goods.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

For thirteen years the leading makers of moving picture machines.

It has won the race

THE MORTIMER FILM CLEANER

Endorsed by the largest exchanges. Send for the booklet.

FIDELITY BLDG., PORTLAND, MAINE

GREAT REDUCTIONS

Motion Picture Machines $35 Up.
Accessories, Supplies, etc.
Pathe's Passion Play (as new). Low price.
Send for Supplement 33 containing many Bargains.

HARBACH & CO.,
809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

REPAIRED

by skilled mechanics at short notice and reasonable prices. Work guaranteed.

Supplies of All Kinds.

CHAS. E. DRESSLER,
388 2nd Ave., City, near 23rd St.
Take elevator.

PATENTS

"BE INDEPENDENT."

Moving Picture Devices a Specialty.

Charles Lowell Howard

PATENT ATTORNEY

706-707-708 M'Gill Bldg., WASHINGTON, D. C.

YANKEE FILMS

MONDAY, FEB. 27th
"All For Gold" A Western Drama

FRIDAY, MARCH 3d
The First of the World-Tour Series
"THE ABDUCTION OF PARSON JONES"
A Comedy on Land and Sea

YANKEE FILM COMPANY
344 East 32d St., New York, N. Y.

AMERICAN STANDARD DOUBLE DISSOLVING MOVING PICTURE MACHINE. ALL COMPLETE, $200.00

A POWERS No. 5, SLIGHTLY USED,

$100.00

MANHATTAN SLIDE CO.

124 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

THE KINEMATOGRAPH

The original and leading journal of the Moving Picture Business. Has a larger circulation and is recognised by the whole trade as THE ORGAN OF THE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS.

2 dols. 68 per year mailed free. Specimen free.

HERON & CO., Tottenham Street, LONDON, W., ENGLAND.

Cinematograph Pub. Co., 30 W. 13th St., New York, are Authorized Agents for Subscriptions and Advertisements in America

---

The Bioscope

The Leading Journal of the Moving Picture Business in Europe. Has the largest circulation and is the best Advertising Medium, bar none.

SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 A YEAR. SAMPLE COPY MAILED FREE.

85, Shaftesbury Ave., London, W., England

CATALOGUES FOR MOVING PICTURE MANUFACTURERS

Unique Printers - Charles Francis Press

30 West 13th Street. Printers of the M. P. News

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

American Releases

TWO RELEASES EACH WEEK

MONDAY AND THURSDAY

Release Monday, February 20th.

"The College Spendthrift"

A dramatic exposition of youthful folly and its inevitable harvest of regret. A film your audience will like. Length approx. 990 feet.

Release Thursday, February 23rd.

"Strategy"

A film that tells a tragic story leading to a thrilling climax and ending in a situation that is truly laughable and funny. Length approx. 980 feet.

Release Monday, February 27th.

"The Sheriff's Sweetheart"

"The Silence System"

"The Sheriff's Sweetheart" is real Western, dramatic and intensely interesting. The Arizona backgrounds are beautiful. "The Silence System," a short comedy replete with funny situations. Length respectively 800 feet and 200 feet.

Release Thursday, March 2nd.

"College Chums"

A dramatic story of a college love affair and its sequel. A clean original, well-acted picture. Length approx. 975 feet.

ALL Independent Exchanges buy American Films.

AMERICAN FILM MFG. COMPANY

BANK FLOOR = ASHLAND BLOCK

CHICAGO, ILL.

S. P. Mace, Gem Theater, Park Rapids, Minn., writes:

"I was up against it all the time, but since I started with you my business has almost doubled and have a good hope to be a winner this time."

These are the kind of letters I am getting day after day—week after week—month after month—for nearly five years. Here's the reason. No other concern in the film renting business delivers films in as GOOD and CLEAN a condition as I do. None live up to promises as I do. None are as painstaking. None as prompt. None as ready to right a wrong. In addition to all this I am the largest buyer of films. Is it any wonder then that I am

THE BIGGEST AND BEST FILM RENTER IN THE WORLD?

Slip me a letter.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

HEADQUARTERS:
196-198 Lake Street, CHICAGO

MINNEAPOLIS OMAHA

Mr. Operator!

You Want To Make Some Extra Money

So Do I.

Write Me For Particulars at Once.
Give me your exact voltage, cycles, make of machine, length of throw, size of picture and make of carbons. If you have a current saver, state make—I will do the rest.

ADDRESS DEPARTMENT N.

J. H. HALLBERG
36 East 23d St., New York City

THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR

Sanitary, Space-saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W.

HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

A GOOD THING, LIKE A GOOD STORY, IS WORTH REPEATING

"A MANLY MAN"

RELEASED MONDAY, FEBRUARY 27

"All the world loves a lover," and a manly man appeals to all that is good in the most of us. A young civil engineer leaves his sweetheart in the States, and goes to the Philippines on duty. He is loved by a Filipino maiden, who nurses him back to life and health when he is stricken with a fever and is deserted by his American comrades. Out of gratitude he marries the native girl, and when his sweetheart arrives from America he chooses between love and duty, and is loyal to the faithful woman who has borne him a child—a manly man of the right sort. The tropical settings are beautiful. A strong drama with heart appeal, in which "Little Mary" appears at her best in the role of the Filipino girl. By all means get this one.

"THE DYNAMITERS"

RELEASED THURSDAY, MARCH 2

A talking jag involves Jenkins, a club man, in all sorts of difficulties. He becomes a labor agitator and is initiated into the secrets of a society of avengers. By lot he is chosen as the instrument to right their wrongs by the bomb route. He staggers home with the infernal machine and, sleeping off the debauch, finds himself with a dangerous mission to perform. He tries to lose the annihilator, but is unsuccessful, until an intelligent dog comes to his aid and solves the difficulty in an unique manner. Here is a comedy your patrons will surely enjoy.

"ARMY MANEUVERS IN CUBA"

RELEASED THURSDAY, MARCH 2

This is an elaborate picture, photographing the Cuban army in holiday array, in celebrating a fete-day anniversary. The native soldiery passes in review before the superior officers and heads of the administration, regiment after regiment, cavalry and artillery wheeling into line, an imposing pageant, taken at Camp Columbia. The picture is an intensely interesting one from a scenic as well as an educational standpoint. Secure the "Army Maneuvers" by applying to your exchange early. It is a picture you can feature.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America

CARL LAEMMLE, Pres.

102 WEST 101st STREET

NEW YORK

All "IMP" films sold through the Sales Company

STILL Demanding STILL Demanding STILL Demanding

THE THANHOUSER TWO-A-WEEK?

RELEASED TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 28th

Hail "The Thanhouser Kid," Detective!

THE LITTLE MOTHER

is the very latest "Thanhouser Kid" feature and all the picture-going kids in town will implore their parents to take 'em to your show if you show your "Thanhouser Kid To-day" sign the day you show this reel. The boys and girls of today are the men and women of tomorrow. With the youth of today favorably disposed toward the moving picture, look to a long life for the business. Get the kids impressed RIGHT by giving them PICTURES THAT ARE RIGHT. Especially strive to convince them that justice wins out in the end, and that knavery doesn't go for much these days, as this reel well brings out.

No. 189. Code Word, Lither.

RELEASED FRIDAY, MARCH 3rd

A Heart-to-Heart Reel-Talk

STAGE STRUCK

STAGE STRUCK

is another Thanhouser moral-pointer—you see we constantly BACK UP our belief that the motion picture can send forth a reforming message as effectively as the pulpit. Here you have a frail tenderly-reared little girl who attempts the stage by a devious route—the runaway route. Understand that she is upright in thought and conduct, that she is not a "little wild"—merely a little ambitious. But she was not intended for the hardships that were sure to be hers, and are sure to be the others' who may follow in her footsteps, and it is there that you have your moral at its best. The reel may save some heart aches. Be sure to show it.

No. 190. Code Word, Stage.

The Thanhouser News the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to PUBLISHER, THANHOUSER NEWS, NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches in depth, with glass and easel (6 feet high) GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY-DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN.

For system's sake address PHOTOFRAME DEPT.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 8

February 25
1911

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
SEP
8
1911
PERIODICAL

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

SCENE FROM
"THE MESSAGE IN THE BOTTLE"
"IMP" RELEASE MARCH 9th

GREAT NORTHERN

SUPREME IN ITS FIELD

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 25TH

HIS GREAT DUTY

(Enacted by Actors of the Royal Theater of Copenhagen)

A magnificent feature production. Gorgeous scenes—Exquisite tinting and toning—Photography clear as crystal. Order this film from your exchange NOW.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, MARCH 4TH

THE RIVAL SERVANTS

A strong plot, good acting and photography are characteristics of this subject.

EXHIBITORS: By using Great Northern productions, you are sure to please your patrons.

ALL FIRST CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT.

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

BISON FILMS

FIVE REELS A WEEK

TUESDAY---BISON. WEDNESDAY---AMBROSIO. THURSDAY---ITALA. FRIDAY---BISON. SATURDAY---ITALA

"A Warrior's Faith"

Released Tuesday, February 28

Showing the dangers of early missionaries among the savages. A captive priest converts an Indian maid, and through her intervention the lives of the white prisoners are saved. Many thrilling incidents and stirring battles.

ITALA RELEASES

"NINA'S DOLL"
Thursday, March 2

"COTO AND THE FLAG"
Saturday, March 4

"Owanee's Great Love"

Released Friday, March 3

An Indian romance between a Sioux warrior and a Blackfoot maid. The Sioux is killed in battle and the girl, mourning over his body, is taunted by a rejected suitor. In frantic rage she attacks her tormentor, kills him, and then destroys herself.

AMBROSIO RELEASE

"TWEEDLEDUM—AVIATOR"
"ESCORT OF THE VICEROY OF CAUCASUS"
Two subjects on one reel
Wednesday, March 1

Sold Exclusively Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO., 1 Union Square, New York City

Champion Evidence that favor is being awarded CHAMPS. A notable film for all.

"The Vindication of John"

Released March 8, 1911

The flight of John to escape sentence through circumstantial evidence and his subsequent vindication are worked out grandly.

Watch Our Coming Booklet for the mass of favorable expressions for CHAMPS.

THE CHAMPION FILM CO.
Mark M. Dintenfass, Gen'l Mgr.
12 East 15th Street, N. Y. C.

THURSDAY
MARCH 2d
Rex
"By the Light of the Moon"
Is a picture which fully justifies our using the heaviest type this publication has with the strongest language that the most complete dictionary can furnish. But we realize that the picture itself is its greatest advertisement. So we are not going to say a great deal, but you will miss a good deal—of genuine pleasure and money by failing to get this EXTRA——EXTRA
EXTRAORDINARY PRODUCTION!
A DISTINCT NOVELTY
A film with a story NOT told in the ordinary way by the ordinary means, but one conveyed in silhouette form
"By the Light of the Moon"
Still another Rex
Rex MOTION PICTURE MFG. CO.
573-9 11th Ave., N. Y.
Sales Co. Smiling With Us!

"ROBERT EMMET" IS COMING!

STILL Asking STILL Asking STILL Asking

THE THANHOUSER TWO-A-WEEK FOR ?

RELEASED TUESDAY, MARCH 7 An Oddity That IS!

THE MUMMY

will afford you about fifteen minutes of as brisk entertainment as anyone could wish for. It's something new in the line of trick film—it's a novelty in the ways OF NOVELTIES. From the time the mummy pops out, alive, from her coffin, to her appearance at the altar as the "Egyptologist's" blushing bride you are given a series of funny surprises that will leave you in laughing bewilderment. But laugh your loudest! Don't you know one of the first missions of the motion picture is to GET YOU TO LAUGH? Then help the picture's mission!

No. 191 Code Word, Mum.

RELEASED FRIDAY, MARCH 10. The Best "Bunco Story" in a Long While!

THE SPIRIT HAND

had a grasp that was guaranteed to get the money for the sharpers behind it. Certainly it was the shrewdest get-rich-quick device that bunco steerers ever employed and you'll think it a pity that said steerers didn't put their brains to better use. The evolver of such a scheme as theirs, working on lawful and legitimate lines, would be a Morgan or a Rockefeller in the natural order of things. But we are not advertising the get-rich-quick business. If the sharpers hadn't met Nemesis in the form of a mere pretty girl we shouldn't have made this mighty entertaining story public.

No. 192. Code Word. Spand.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

"ROBERT EMMET" IS COMING!

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone: 3790 Oxford

YANKEE FILMS

MONDAY, MARCH 6th
"Angel of the Bowery"
A Salvation Army Drama

FRIDAY, MARCH 10th
"The Senorita's Sacrifice"
Spanish World-Tour Film

YANKEE FILM COMPANY
344 East 32d St., New York, N. Y.

EVERY EXHIBITOR reads the Moving Picture News.
ADVERTISEMENTS BRING RESULTS

WANTED—A REAL MOVING PICTURE MAN

I want a man who is pre-eminently fitted to supervise a line of picture shows now running in a large city outside of New York City. Must be a man who recognizes the value of the pictures above everything else. Must understand vaudeville without regard to what the booking agent wants to hand him, and must work with the ultimate object in view of dispensing with this feature.

We will provide an unlimited supply of educational, industrial and scenic films to draw from and will procure anything he needs in this line.

Must have the ability to catalogue same for church, Chautauqua and school exhibitions. The catalogue of the largest travelogue and lecture slide firm in the world is his to draw from as auxiliary to the films. Will have full control over every manager and other help in connection with seven shows now running and he must necessarily be a practical man in this line.

Show me you can handle this proposition and I won't dicker on your financial recompense. Address "Confidential," The Moving Picture News.

RELIANCE PICTORIAL PLAYS

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

ACTED BY AN ALL-STAR STOCK COMPANY

"From the Valley of Shadows"

Released Saturday, March 4

The Grim Reaper takes the idolized child of the cafe owner, and his wounded heart is touched by the pitiful plight of the drunkard's wife and her babes. The appeal to the man's better nature, in the presence of death, is highly dramatic, and works his reformation.

"A Trick of Fortune"

Released Wednesday, March 8

A comedy drama. In quest of a quiet spot to end his mortal cares, a despondent youth is mistaken for a capitalist looked for by the villagers. The ensuing incidents are extremely ludicrous.

"EVER THE ACCUSER," ADVERTISED FOR FEB. 25 RELEASE, WAS HELD BACK, AND "TANGLED LINES" RELEASED IN PLACE OF IT

TWO REELS PER WEEK—WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY

Place your order with your Exchange

CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES, 1 Union Square, New York City

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

European Agents: INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., Breams Building, Chancery Lane, London, E. C.

Chicago Representative: J. J. Sullivan, 866 Graceland Ave. 'Phone Graceland 5053

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV February 25, 1911 Number 8

Notes of the Week

OUR FRONT COVER ILLUSTRATION.

We are pleased to call our readers' attention to the new Imp release, "The Message in the Battle," illustrated on the front cover of this issue.*

It is not necessary to present in this column the synopsis of this excellent production, as it will be found in the regular department, but we cannot let this opportunity pass without giving a few words of commendation for the superb manner in which the production is presented.

The regular Imp Company is re-inforced by some native talent which for the first time have appeared before a moving picture machine and have thrown their whole heart and soul in the acting.

The scenery of Cuba and the natural effects, both on land and water, makes this production a realistic one, and the impressions after seeing it on the screen are lasting.

*The illustration was enlarged from a section of the film.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS.

Our correspondence on this subject has been so vast that we have not had time, with our other multitudinous duties, to wade through and digest the whole, but we are getting towards a point where we can safely say that the educational propaganda will be one of the advance movements in motion picturedom. Letters from Clergymen, Educationalists and Professors, of almost every grade of Science, are interested in this subject, and to quote letters from the "Rev. W. H .J.," "F. R. P. S.," "The Rev. J. C. H.," "The Rev. J. O," "Right Rev Dr. G.," all tend to give us encouragement in the work that we have undertaken. Many of the science teachers ask for lists of films, and we desire that all our readers shall help us to formulate a list of educational and religious films of a standard classification. What we desire is something of the nature of "the best hundred books," but instead of books putting films in their place, this should easily be arranged and we want our readers to send us the titles of what they consider the best one hundred educational films, also their suggestions and ideas for improvements, and what they would wish in the shape of films that will elevate their patrons. For this purpose we have organized an Exhibitors' page, and we want the exhibitors to use this page for their own benefit. It is our intention also to formulate in addition to the Oracle page, "an Operators' Union page," wherein the operators may also be able to express their own individual opinions for the advancement of their Unions. Will our readers help?

TO OUR READERS.

Mutual Interests.

We desire to keep in close touch with our readers and want them all to feel that our interests are mutual. We are, in consequence of our most extensive acquaintance with the trade and practical knowledge of the requirements of motion picture exhibition and managers, in a position to give advice as to the best way to get results in the management of these enterprises, the purchasing of accessories, as well as the selection of films and the service to be derived that will best suit their requirements. To committees, secretaries, and others of schools, educational institutions and associations, we will willingly co-operate and our columns, offices, or personal services are at their command. We will see that catalogs and descriptive matter of any articles pertaining to the trade are sent, and advise as to the best and most economical course to pursue in the selection.

We are not interested in any concern manufacturing or handling those products; and this service is rendered in a spirit of co-operation and we want our readers to feel at liberty to take advantage of the offer without feeling the least obligation on their part. Use our office; write us as often as you like—we will then know each other better.

WHO WANTS THIS THIS POSITION?

In our advertising columns of this issue, an advertisement will be found headed—"WANTED, A REAL MOVING PICTURE MAN." The man who sent in this advertisement is a firm believer in the moving picture above everything else in connection with his theaters, having demonstrated that it is possible to get satisfactory financial results by catering to the lovers of good moving pictures without any outside attractions other than good music and singing to accompany the same. The advertisement offers an opportunity to some brainy man with the necessary executive ability to supervise the managers of a line of shows now in operation, and he must be sufficiently talented in this respect to outline the policy of each show to produce results. Having to do this, he will be given full authority as supervisor over each establishment. To a man who is ambitious to show what he knows about the value of the moving picture—supplemented by stereo slides—as an educator, this advertisement offers a fine opportunity. Ordinary moving picture and travelogue "lecturers" in the hands of such a man can be "coached" and developed to a degree where they will be able to provide a very satisfactory "twenty-minute travel talk" which will immensely please the patrons of the picture theater.

The man filling this position will be in direct touch with school and church officials and also educational bodies and Chautauqua circles who generally furnish their own lectures but need just such a man with the material at hand from which to choose suitable subjects. It is gratifying to know that some one is preparing to meet a condition that already exists in a great many sections of the United States.

Wanted, a man! Are you that man? If so, now is your opportunity.

MORE TROUBLE FOR THE "TROUBLE MAN."

Though "Greater Than Edison," He Refuses to Believe the Truth—A Challenge Offered by the Film Index That May Bring Him Down Out of the Tree.

A few weeks ago, in order to observe some of the manifestations of electric energy as expressed in the arc lamp of a motion picture machine, the editor of The Film Index directed and closely observed some experiments with an M. P. lamp. What happened was stated in these columns in the issue of Feb. 11. The article in question was intended as an answer to some rather puerile statements in the Motion Picture World questioning the correctness of an assertion by Mr. J. H. Hallberg, a contributing editor of The Film Index, that the best light could be obtained from A. C. if the carbons were set straight up and down.

The facts demonstrated confirmed Mr. Hallberg's statements beyond question. We enumerated them so that the "Man Who Is Greater Than Edison" might make a few experiments of his own to refute our statements, if possible, by something more tangible than "hot air." But this is how he comes back:

> Two weeks ago, when Mr. J. H. Hallberg issued a statement that heat currents through the condenser attracted the arc, or, as he put it, "pushed the arc out in front toward the condenser," I simply laughed, the matter being too utterly absurd for serious consideration. When, a week later, he made the further statement that the current, entering the lamphouse, passing through the carbons and out again formed a magnet which also, in conjunction with the "heat current" influenced the arc, the matter was not even replied to, it was so silly (that's the only word that fits). But now comes the Index, in an editorial, setting forth the fact that there is an unexplained, unknown force which seems to attract the arc toward the condenser, citing the alleged fact that when the arc is struck with carbons straight up and down and central with each other, the flame shoots upward and forward only. I am willing to seriously consider a proposition of this kind, no matter by whom made, since it makes no absurd, hysterical claims, but merely sets forth a proposition entirely susceptible of proof one way or the other, and free from attempts to advertise some special appliance by making claims for it that are absurd and which insult intelligence.
>
> As to the flame shooting forward, I am neither in position to affirm or deny this, as I have not noted it in experiments of the past. Possibly it does. I have not A. C. available just now to try it out. If it is the fact, I would attribute it to a slight possible static charge in the condenser. I don't really know that a lens would retain such a charge, but I do know that heat and friction would produce it. Whether or not heat alone would do it I cannot say, not being an "electrical expert," but this I do know, that even allowing such a force to be present, it is not sufficient to materially influence the position of the crater. This I can say positively, based upon experience.
>
> Several letters have been received from readers of the department saying that their experience is that good light is impossible with carbons set straight up and down and central with each other. Some of these will appear next week. That has been the experience of the editor also. Had the hot-air expert confined his remarks to common sense, refrained from attempting to advertise his transformer by making ridiculous claims for it, and evinced the slightest knowledge of the action of light, heat and air currents in lamphouses, I would not have poked fun at him. Mr. Halberg may be a competent electrician, or he may not be; I don't know. I presume, however, that he is. Be that as it may, one of the department correspondents pertinently inquires, in a letter just received: "What does Mr. Halberg know about projection? When and where did he ever run a projection machine? Let him set forth his experience in actual projection practice and we will then listen to him with more respect when it comes to projection matters or matters dealing with practical projection."
>
> And now, will some of our readers who are using A. C. and who are able to set the lamp perpendicular, kindly (with carbons set exactly central with each other) experiment and report what they find?

Same old dodge, "let George do it."

Does anyone remember when the editor of the "troubled department" ever tried out a problem submitted to him? The foregoing extract from his department published in the M. P. World of Feb. 18, is just about as intelligent as anything he has ever printed. In substance it is an admission that he doesn't know what he is talking about.

It is fortunate that he has no A. C. at hand or he might have got himself in bad. Please note how absurd he appears: In one sentence he says, "I am willing to seriously consider a proposition of this kind," but does he so consider it? Not for an instant; this is what he replies in almost the next breath: "As to the flame shooting forward, I am neither in position to affirm or deny this, as I have not noted it in the past."

That statement would throw some doubt upon the claims of the "Man Who Is Greater" to have operated a M. P. machine, for the fact that new carbons invariably burn with a noticeable flame is a fact that every M. P. operator knows and looks out for lest the flame should break his condenser lens.

Then he says: "If it is a fact, I would attribute it to a possible static charge in the condenser," although he admits that he doesn't really know.

Of course he doesn't know or he would not even suggest it. If he knew, he would know that an object charged with static electricity would repel rather than attract; also, that glass being about the greatest nonconductor there is, would not receive or retain static. On that point he will have to guess again.

The question now is: How are we to get this "Man Who Is Greater" to learn the truth, and tell it?

It is evident that he is not amenable to reason; that he cannot appreciate an intelligent statement of facts, and that he is hopelessly ignorant of the principles of either electricity or projection of light.

There is but one argument that we know of that will stop his nonsense or convince the people who seem to believe in him, that he is wrong. Here is our proposition:

The Film Index will make all arrangements for a public demonstration of the various devices employed in projecting pictures, including the several makes of machines and current controlling devices, with both direct and alternating current and standard makes of carbons, so that all conditions may be obtained. This apparatus will be connected by a competent electrician, or we will permit Mr. Richardson to connect it himself, and then we will ask him to demonstrate the correctness of his claim as against Mr. Hallberg's. Of course, Mr. Hallberg will have an equal chance to prove his assertions. This meeting will be open to all operators and managers of picture theaters.

To make this proposition attractive to Mr. Richardson The Film Index will post $50.00 in cash to be paid to him in the event that he satisfies a majority of those present that he is right and that Mr. Hallberg is wrong. The only stipulation we make is that the result shall be printed in full in the "Trouble Department" of the Motion Picture World and The Film Index.

Now, let's see if the "Man Who Is Greater Than Edison" has any sporting blood.

The above is taken bodily (by permission) from Film Index, and except that we might be pulled for "butting in" we would offer another $50.00 to the challenge. We hope the meeting will be open to every newspaper man in the industry, and that they may be allowed to take notes and publish the full experiments and results in their various periodicals. They will, no doubt, make very interesting reading. When Messrs. Hallberg and Hoff are sending out invitations, we would like six for the staff of The News, who are keenly interested in this subject. We also hope the "school" children will not be left out, this will be an opportunity for them to learn something.—(Ed., M. P. N.)

One of the editors begs the question as follows:

Why have controversies on technical questions? As a matter of common sense what does the "arc" amount in the eyes of the exhibitor, or an audience? All the patrons of a picture house want is a good reproduction of a picture. The successful manager has that point of view, to gain it he employs an operator. If he engages anything else he loses money. The man who employs an operator who first starts to run a machine and then corresponds with the trade journals for points as to how to run the machine is a fool. May I add that the operator is a knave?

Why all this discussion about the "arc?" The brains of the men engaged in it are needed in other quarters. Every hour of their time is in demand. Why should they be required to delve into authorities, rack their experience, and put pages upon pages through the press for the enlightenment of some people who know nothing about the business, will not spend money, but hope to qualify themselves by a subscription of a dollar or two a year?

I have read and studied the discussion, and I feel that already the combatant theorists have given gratis what it has cost each of them much time and money to learn. I will not attempt to intimate which of the theorists is correct, because neither have been to see me and I believe a decision would be worth something.

And at this point I recall the "arc" discussion. The audience knows and cares nothing about the arc. It wants its money's worth. The care of the manager is his audience. The "arc" is all right. What is wanted is a proper man to handle it, and if the right money is paid the handling will be looked after. The trouble is that too many men think they are smart. They engage a good operator and then have one of their smart sons watch him. In the course of three or four weeks the young hopeful goes to his sire and says "Fadder, it's easy." The father enthusiastically asks "Can you do it, Issy?" Of course, you know the answer, and the good man loses his pob. Issy starts in and somehow he fails to produce the goods his predecessor handed out. He tells his father-manager the trouble and, as a result, a letter is written to the two dollar per annum benefactor. Then Hallberg and Richardson grind out what they would not give privately for $50.00, get on bad terms with each other, and create havoc generally.

Is not this an easy way to let an ignorant writer down easy We commend the question to the Chicago Union for special perusal.

A SURPRISE PARTY.

We had a surprise party one day last week when we visited the Rex plant. We were astonished—pleasantly astonished—and marvelled long at the sight we saw. In fact, we saw several things, the composite whole of which constitute nothing less than a marvel.

We went to see a king and were given a royal reception. We went to see a king film—and we saw one.

Also a prince as well—Edwin S. Porter. We saw him, talked with him, and listened to him. Mostly we listened, for the tale which he told was one of truthful interest and interesting truth. He told us of his plans, and we listened in the nearest kind of a trance that we ever came to.

We heard a story worth hearing and repeating—a tale of man's achievements and the joyous ecstasy of creation; of the marvel of one man's mentality, and the wonderful make-up of one Edwin S. Porter.

We do not take it upon ourselves to detect genius when we see it, but if Mr. Porter is not an out and out thoroughbred genius, he is a human dynamo, a phenomenon. The things he said and the things that we know he did, stamp him as the most crafty of his craft, the most skillful of his ilk.

"Rex" has already released pictures that have been talked about, commented upon, discussed, and approved. Mr. Porter has produced the pictures. That's the whole story, there is the entire answer. For, in conservative, deliberate language, Ed. Porter is a wonder.

He has aimed to put a novelty into every picture he releases, to make it of the highest quality possible—that is, possible for Mr. Porter, and let it be known that the highest quality possible to Mr. Porter is far above the highest quality of just ordinary producers. He produces all his pictures on his own non-infringing camera, and the results are a beautiful, steady picture, with perfect photography.

Porter, more than any other man in the trade, can be termed a pioneer of the business; one of that hardy stock of which all pioneers are made, who blazed the trail and hewed the path to the pinnacle of success which motion picturedom maintains to-day. More than any other man his name is quoted in the trade—it is a by-word and a pass-word, a synonym of initiative and success. "The Great Train Robbery," "Paul Revere," "The Blue and the Gray," "Army for Two,"

"The Teddy Bears," "The Dream of the Rarebit Fiend," these are only a few of his notable productions. The pictures he has thus far produced for Rex are of a calibre to be heralded as a forerunner of greater things to come. The studio, the plant, the equipment, all have been designed with an aim to facility and the saving of precious moments, when their saving is most necessary. They have been designed, moreover, to suit Mr. Porter, and when anything suits him, and in his estimation fills the bill, it is good and commendable.

Mr. Porter was delighted to see us. We were pleased to see and speak to him. He gave us a hint of future surprises, and judging from the success already achieved, the prospects for future greatness are most sanguine.

All in all, independent film makers are to be congratulated upon Rex being in their ranks, for the benefits that will accrue to the independent faction through the advent of Rex into the manufacturers' realm, increases our expectation of ultimate independent victory. With such leaders in the fore, failure is impossible, success assured.

We congratulate Rex, Mr. Porter, and ourselves for having seen both.

WHAT WE SEE IN THE VICINITY OF BROADWAY.

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

Broadway, teeming with a transient population, sightseers and shoppers, snatching an hour between times for a little diversion, offers to the public a variety of moving pictures in a variety of moving picture theaters.

One afternoon not long ago, for the sake of information, I visited a couple of these theaters, and was disappointed to find nothing interesting to tell my readers of in the way of educational subjects. What was freshest in my mind as I rode home on the elevated train was the imaginative clash of spears, the trickle of blood, the whirr of bullets, the thud of a human body falling over a cliff, and many other such things which jarred sadly on my tired nerves. Between pictures came the screaming vaudevillian with the usual display of lightly clad female limbs, a song or two of an inferior type, and a few suggestive jokes.

Next to me on both occasions sat men from whom emanated a strong odor of liquor. Why were they there? "Thereby hangs a tale" which I shall not attempt to relate.

In the pictures presented there was nothing which appealed to me save the setting of the scenes, which were given sometimes by nature, and sometimes by the hand of art.

One of these pictures was a pirate scene in which several people were stabbed to death, and one woman rescued from dishonor, death, etc., after going through all kinds of exciting experiences, holding a man off at a pistol's point, until her lover came, and so forth. Another was the story of a blind woman whose beautiful, sagacious dog led her about to make the few shillings she could, but which her drunken son appropriated for his own selfish purposes, gambling, etc. This picture, on second thought, might prove a lesson to many in the audience. If so, then it has its use.

Thousands of people throng these Broadway theaters every day, looking for entertainment, or the whiling away of an hour or so. They are getting, in these theaters, the kind of things, I am sorry to say, that they like; but what the people like is not necessarily wholesome, or what is in any way beneficial to them. However, the members of the human family are creatures of inclination, and man is still more an animal than a creature of intellect, therefore he goes whither his inclination leads him. The managers know this—they know of that toward which his tastes incline, and so proceed to the gratification of the popular taste without an intelligent thought as to the effect of their offering of entertainment upon the hordes of living souls who daily drop their coins into the theater managers' pockets.

The love of sensationalism is strengthening among Americans. The magazines, the newspapers, the press in general feed this desire. The events accentuated in the headlines are the bank robberies, murders, stories of kidnappers—anything to feed the desire of sensationalism—it makes the paper sell. The redemption or the demoralization of the human race has long since ceased to be anything more than a mere matter of dollars and cents, as far as the press or the theater manager is concerned. It is the selling value of the article that counts, and that is denoted by the approval or disapproval of the public taste.

However, little can be done to right matters, or dispel the various evils resulting from the thoughtlessness and indifference of those empowered with the vehicles of education, to use for good or for evil, as suits their thought and purpose, without unity of effort in the direction of good. Without unity of purpose nothing can be done. If the moving picture theater managers, not only on the "great white way," but through the entirety of this great city, should stand together and say, "We will educate this great mass of humanity. We will see to it that they get in our theaters only what is wholesome and good, and what is of value from both a moral and mental standpoint." This would be a Trust worth while—unique and progressive and one which would go down in history as one of the most aggressive powers ever directed against the demoralization and degeneracy of the human race, one of the most substantial means of education in the annals of the nation, and one of the most creditable reform movements ever instituted.

WATCHING THE PICTURES.

H. Jeanval.

Some years ago struggling with hieroglyphics, I sat in front of a sarcophagus crammed with exquisite emblems clear cut, as though of yestereve, and tried to read the story of the Egypt of four thousand years ago. All went well till I came across the key of the sentence about a gentleman trying to knock out his brains with a hammer. That I could not translate. In those days my only knowledge was such as a 'varsity honor course and a few P, Q, S's and X, Y, Z's of learned societies gave, and so in my youthful egoism I was selfishly disgusted. As I brooded, Dr. Birch, known wherever Egyptology is taught, touched me on the shoulder and said: "After all these years, under the loom of my books, the old scene crops up as I sit alone near the midnight bell. Conscience that makes cowards of us all, quoth one. Conscience that makes beggars and niddlings through stress and duress, the moulders and makers of world-history thunder the text books of humanity.

"My Puritan conscience worries me," said one of this city's millionaires as we wandered along a country road, he discussing a winter dawdle on the Mediterranean that winter, and I insisting upon how his tenants in an East Side block—who gave him the money to dawdle—were going to exist.

Conscience troubled the gentleman who died thousands of years ago; conscience worries a man whose name, once in a while, flames in the national press. They both felt the same dig in the mental ribs. In each case the question was: How to do wrong, with a simper and a halo. In other words, how to be a devil and make folks think you are an angel. The office of the honest man is when he sees on the screen the enigmatic man with a hammer is to say what it is, even if it wears fine dresses, and to say in the twentieth century after Christ what was said the twentieth century before. Right is right; and wrong is wrong; and the critic of The Moving Picture News to-day must, as his brother did 4000 years ago, speak out or be a coward.

We often see bad spelling upon the screen that is in keeping with the story and is all right; but one point is overlooked, ignorant folk write ignorantly. To give a piece of badly spelled stuff written in an educated hand is ridiculous.

I had the misfortune to see Vitagraph's "League of Mercy" at the Union Square Theater where the accompanying music was simply agony. When the picture representing a meeting of ladies for charitable purposes was projected a musical genius played "Stop! Stop! Stop" which was resolved into "Any little girl." Rather than such atrocious rot, lock the piano up.

Amongst the many things I am thankful for is that I am not an "expert" in anything. It must be an awful nuisance to sit on a chair that's only got three legs and is liable to reduce one at any moment from pompous royalty to undignified disgrace. So, not being an "expert," I want to know the state of mind that comes from some education and a little common sense. I have dwelt some moons with Indians, full bloods, from the Rockies up to Arctic House, and I want to know in what tribe one can see upturned eyes, cuddles and cooings, same as whites do when Cupid twangs the bow? Of course no "expert" will condescend to notice me for has he not put in on the screen and shall not that suffice? Mayhap some expert, a real one will enlighten my darkness.

Thanhouser, in "Checkmates," I would like to know how a Baron could do what no ordinary commoner would be such a boor as to do, shake hands with a lady in her home with a glove on; further, how could a man servant be permitted to remain in a room and so become cognizant of la vie in time. As to how the cell scenes were managed, I know not!

My soul is disturbed within me as to that telescope in Selig's "Buccaneers." For Manufacturers: Britannic is the correct spelling—seen on the screen. Of all the theatric insults ever obtruded on an intelligent audience the amateur-made paper wings of "The Spirit of Evil" in Gaumont's "Saul and David," is far and away the most stupid. In Pathe's a narrow escape of Lieut. Scott. How is it, first a girl goes with a pitcher to the water and returned, and yet never filled it; second, how can a crowd of Indians avenge the death of a tribesman who was a woman? Submitted with profound consideration.

I venture to inquire from "experts" why on films the moment a white man hears of an Indian he begins to pack up and "skidoo," whilst the pianist plays tum-dum in a minor key? Please help common folk by putting on the film the date. Who says it is so to-day—lies. In Edison's "The Rajah" a letter is written from Bengal. Where's that city. New York State would be a somewhat indefinite address! Selig, in "The Padre," says a child is found by "its dead mother," and also someone is "lost on the desert." The education of somebody is evidently weak and wobbly. In Pathe's "A Soldier" a doctor feels a patient's pulse with his gloves on!

Carol Schroder, "that dainty miss" in songs is as good in her turn as she looks—that's going some. Very much "some," for did not mine old friend win the beauty prize in the "Royal Chef" at the Iroquois Theater in Chicago. Just look at the cut; how's that, boys? She's now doing a "single' 'over Keith & Proctor time and U. B. O. She's been on the stage since she set out with Mabelle Gilman Opera Company in "The Mocking Bird" when her years were fourteen; then she was with Shuberts, and with LaSalle Theater Stock (musical) in Chicago for a pair of seasons.

Her first appearance in vaudeville was early in 1910, and since then she has "made good." Carol, an old admirer of your talents, one who does not know you, save in the musical sense, wishes to acknowledge your ability and to venture to "cross the lights" and say who books you, books not only a singer, a mighty good one, but a very worthy comrade doing big work not only on but off the stage.

Boston, Mass.—The Springfield Theater Company is contemplating the erection of a new theater at the corner of East Court and Dwight street.

Dayton, O.—Harry A. Limbert is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater at the corner of Richard and McClure streets.

I regret to hear that the Biograph people are having all sorts of trouble out in Los Angeles. Death and sickness overshadow all. We all sympathize with those in sorrow and sincerely hope the sick ones may soon be back with us hale and well.

CHICAGO LETTER

The latest move made by the Trust is easily explained in a letter sent out by the General Film Co. to all their customers. The text of the letter is that all exhibitors must pay their bills on Tuesday of each week no matter when they fall due, and any exhibitor who fails to comply with this order by Tuesday will have his show sent out C. O. D. the next day. Looks as though the Trust needs the money, or, perhaps, they are just tightening up another hole in the collar they are placing around the exhibitors' necks. At any rate, managers who are in the habit of paying their bills promptly are very indignant, and claim the branch managers should have used a little discretion and notified only the delinquent customers. But I suppose the poor branch managers are as helpless as the exhibitors.

The Republic Theater, a large vaudeville house on Lincoln avenue, near Irving Park Boulevard, has been leased by Mr. Swartz, who successfully operates two other theaters on N. Clark street. Five acts of vaudeville and Independent moving pictures will constitute the program. Mr. Swartz will manage the house himself. Ira Jackson will be the operator in charge of the power outfit. The opening under the new management takes place February 26th.

Carl Laemmle believes wherever the General Film Co. has an exchange there is room for a good, up-to-date Independent exchange also, and he is backing up his judgment by sending Julius Singer, his right hand man, out to open up branches. The first of these new exchanges opens next week in Des Moines, Ia. Mr. Singer has just returned from Des Moines, where he made arrangements for the opening of their office in the Iowa Trust Building on Fifth street, an ideal location in the heart of the business section.

Mr. Burch succeeds Singer as general correspondent and advertising man in Laemmle's Chicago exchange. Singer's next trip will be east for more exchange locations, and Laemmle expects to have six new branches open by Oct. 1st.

The American Film Service, we are given to understand, have been unsuccessful in their attempt to stop the American Film Mfg. Co. from using the word "American" in connection with their company name. The American Film Service claims to have the word copyrighted in connection with the word film.

Miss Madeline Sullivan, who gained so much notoriety by running away from home to marry Plenty Hawks, the Indian, is now showing at the local theater and drawing exceptionally large crowds. Some enterprising film manufacturer should grab her at once as her story and romance would make a great Indian picture and I believe be as big a drawing card as the Count De Beaufort story turned out by the Imp Co. some time ago.

The various Independent film exchanges around town all report a steadily increasing business, especially among out of town customers, as the small town exhibitors are getting such poor service from the General Film Co., they are glad to turn Independent in order to get a good show. Around the General Film Co.'s branches exhibitors have to take whatever show is handed out to them regardless of the fact that it may not be suitable to their audience or location. There are to be several big Independent surprises sprung within the next few days.

Now that the injunction is off on the Gaumont camera and non-inflammable film caused one of the largest theater fires known in some time, at Cedar Rapids, Ia., we wonder what the next move of "The Mostly Punctured Patents Co." will be.

Miss Clarice Rogalla, superintendent of the Chautauqua film exchange, reports they are getting along nicely, and expect to be in a position to handle all new customers in a few days.

W. F. Menzel has issued a call for all operators in Chicago to attend the next meeting of Local 145, I. A. T. S. E., on March 6th at the Union Hall, 164 Randolph street, room 7. Meeting commences 10 a. m. Important jurisdictional discussion.

Local No. 2, I. A. T. S. E., are endeavoring to wrest control of the operators from Local 145, and are sending out circular letters offering operators a membership in their local.

The Boston Theater, Madison street, is packed every day from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m. Some argument for the Independent pictures being shown in this house.

Saw a Vitagraph picture "When The Light Waned," in which the girl receives a letter before her blind lover has mailed it. Due to rapid P. O. delivery no doubt.

J. J. SULLIVAN.

WESTERN CORRESPONDENCE

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 21.—We have been so busy in these parts trying to decide who we wish to nominate on the Democratic ticket for mayor of this budding municipality that things theatrical and in the moving picture line have been relegated to the rear for the time being. The best I can say for the theaters is that they are doing a great business and that all of them appear to be recuperating from the loss sustained during the summer when the heat was terrific and the competition worse.

The split week that the Princess is now enjoying enables that house to present two different bills on the week, and to say that this state of affairs is highly appreciated would be putting it mildly. Harry Hale, at the Lyric, "cleaned up" this week, his great attraction being Astro Conlin—better known as "Conlin the Seer." He presented a great act, and as he is well known in the city, having been incarcerated in both city and county jails for alleged offenses, and having shown the officers what a cinch it is to get away when one is a real "seer," he just drew them to the Lyric in droves. They fought to get in there this week. Conlin, let me state, is a mighty fine chap to know. Highly educated, with humor well developed and knowledge on many subjects, always ready for a good laugh and up to all kind of tricks to amuse his friends, he is delightful company.

The Lyceum has decided to change its pictures every day. Heretofore this house changed on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The Orpheum continues its daily change, but the material that is coming in there is Independent material of the poorest kind. The Princess has also gone Independent, but the pictures are old. So far as good Independent product goes, we haven't a chance to see any here, for the only two houses that use the Sales' company output run commercial material, and when it gets here it's fierce and you have to get identification papers and a baptismal certificate to understand what it is.

The big W. H. Lewis stock company at the Grand is demonstrating what a real attraction can do in a house that has received a black eye from the public. This company, practically a stranger to local patrons of theaters, is now on its third week, and the old "S. R. O." sign is up every night. The plays they put on would not take a blue ribbon for class but they are getting the coin, and, as Manager Lewis picturesquely puts it, "'Nuff said." This company changes its bill three times a week. Between acts its vaudeville performers do their respective turns, amounting to six specialties in all, and, to make matters more interesting, they give two thousand feet of motion pictures. Now, isn't that "some" show? Believe me, it is, and the public think so, for they are packing the theater.

Want to hear a little gambling news? All right, here goes. The chief of police says he has stopped gambling. The public thinks so, too, and the proprietors of the palatial palaces of chance have a very decided idea along the same lines, for the reason that they are not permitted to enter their former places of business. Plain clothes men are stationed at the doors of the different gambling houses and no one is allowed to enter. The lights are out and it begins to look as if the "lid," so far as gambling is concerned, has been put on this place and that it's going to stick, too. Whether the new administration will be liberal or otherwise remains to be seen, and the city is now passing through the hottest political campaign that it has ever experienced. Judge Wood has publicly called one of the candidates an "anarchist" and he has retorted with the statement that the Judge has ruined the city. The present mayor has been "cussed" up hill and down dale and accused of holding back the policemen's pay while he gives it to the city and accepts his full salary. Incriminations and re-incriminations have characterized this fight so that the voter is between "the devil and the deep blue sea," but with it all the waters still remain hot and five hundred visitors a day are coming into the city. This is a great town when you get acclimated and know the "ropes."

The one profession that is very much in the limelight of publicity at present is baseball. And no wonder, with over thirty prominent ball tossers, members of both National and American Leagues, here. Last week I sent the Moving Picture News quite a bit of baseball "dope." I don't know whether Mr. Saunders cared to use it or not, for the reason that copies of the paper have not as yet reached me. I sent it because I never knew any one connected with picture houses but what was an ardent "fan," be he proprietor, man-

(Continued on page 12)

What Our Patrons Want

Exhibitors' Page

Suggestions for Improvements

At the request of many of our readers among the exhibitors throughout the country, who have sent us, time after time, complaints concerning the bad service they are getting from film exchanges and also the result of the films exhibited in their houses, we have decided to open this page that they may make their wants known concerning what the public likes or dislikes, and the result in their houses of any film exhibited. Some of the exhibitors have sent us very good suggestions for the improvement of films as seen from an exhibitor's standpoint. These suggestions are exceedingly good from both an exhibitor's and a manufacturer's standpoint, inasmuch as it puts the manufacturer in direct touch with the exhibitor who uses his product. Some of the letters sent in to us have been so antagonistic to some makes of films that, for our own sake, let alone that of our advertisers, we have felt constrained to keep them out of print, with the result that the writers of the letters have written again and again, blaming us considerably for not giving due prominence to their just complaints. No one can speak with greater propriety concerning the wants of the exhibitor than can the exhibitors themselves, and while we open this page we do not want unnecessary complaints or personal attacks, but real, good suggestions that are of value to the profession at large. Taking into consideration the fact that many complaints come to us which have no foundation, we purpose submitting a copy of every letter sent, to the manufacturer of the film, for his reply or criticism before we publish it, and we hold the right to reject or accept at our discretion any letter sent in, and none will be published without it has the bona fide signature of the writer, and this must in every case be published with the letter. We take this step for the protection of our readers, and also of any person to whom the letter may be addressed or whose products are written about.

We want this page to be open, so that every exhibitor may feel that it is his page, in which he can express his opinions and ideas and that it may be a forum of general information. To take a letter we received recently referring to curtains of the reflecting type, several remarks therein indicate that the writer purchased a screen and that it is going black or oxidizing, and he is very sore as the result of his experiment. We advise this person to write the maker direct, and ask for the return of his money for submitting such a bad screen to him. While on the subject of screens, we herewith republish an article we wrote in the summer of 1907 and published in our issue of May 2, 1908. We may say that there is no patent on the article or the method of producing, and if our readers cannot get a local man to do the job for them, and will write us, we will answer them in these columns, telling the correct method of applying the substance.

The Screen

Germany, we note, is now making experiments for the screen; we will watch them with interest.

We frequently get letters asking us the question, What do you think makes the best curtain, and how would you prepare it? This is a question that has proved a bugbear to the trade at large for a number of years, and has never been fully answered to the satisfaction of the exhibitor. One method we tried was to make a large frame, as for an artist's canvas, on which we stretched twill sheeting. This answered for a time, but gradually got darker, and lost some of the light. We then sized it and gave it a coat of calsomine. In a little while this yellowed and needed another coat of calsomine. We have tried pure white plastered walls, which answered till yellowed, then we whitened it. This, like the sheet, needed doing over after a time. We must confess that at the best they are troublesome jobs, but nothing looks so bad as a dirty screen or wall. Then, again, we have tried white lining paper in place of the calsomine, and that has answered fairly well.

In our experiments and business experience we made the acquaintance of Mr. John Anderton, of Birmingham, who was experimenting in conjunction with Mr. Lewis Wright, with a silver-faced screen, and we watched its development with interest. We have tried to find out if any of Anderton's Silver Screens were on the American market, but so far have failed to locate an importer. In the course of the experiments, which were made with a view to increase the light obtainable for microscopic projection, the arc lamp was the highest light obtainable, and this failed to bring out the full power of the objects when the light gave out and would not project further. The next problem was the screen, and experiments were made with silver paper, which was pasted on linen, and after numerous failures through sidereal and lateral reflections owing to the various striations of the silver paper, a method was discovered which Mr. Anderton patented. This screen gave some 50 per cent. more illumination than an ordinary piece of white paper, which placed on the silver screen, showed a dark patch. During the experiments silver powder was used, but this was not prepared so carefully and commercially then, as is now the case; and we now offer our readers a simple suggestion for the screen question. We procured a small tin of aluminum paint and coated a small square of cardboard with the same, then held this in the light from the machine, and saw at once an increase in the illumination. We believe that if a wall or stationary screen was coated with this paint (which is so largely used for radiators), first across the surface from left to right, without streaks, and then from top to bottom in a second coat, and after fully drying treat the screen with a coat of water varnish to prevent oxidation, a good illumination of picture would result. Will our readers try on a small scale and give us the results of their experiments?

Norfolk, Va.—Mr. Boone, of Alabama, is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Adrian, Mich.—H. D. Frost is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Bowling Green, Ky.—The Columbia Theater Company is planning to establish a new moving picture theater in the Rabold Building.

Fulton, Ill.—S. P. Begtol, of Sterling, is planning to open a new moving picture theater here.

St. Louis, Mo.—Frank Talbot has decided to erect a new moving picture theater at 17 South Sixth street.

(Continued from page 10)

ager, operator, usher or janitor. And I realized the vast circulation that this publication has, so I took it for granted that the papers would reach those towns where several of the players now here and of whom mention was made were well known. The readers, no doubt, would like to know what their favorites were doing in "the valley of vapors;" how they were getting in condition and the very latest news concerning them.

As correspondent for several out-of-town dailies, as well as looking after the city interests for one of the local papers, I am brought in contact with the players, and they certainly are a gentlemanly lot of athletes. A finer, better developed and more genial "bunch" it has never been my pleasure to meet, so I am going to hand out a little more "dope" for the moving picture baseball "fans," and if my chief, Mr. Saunders, does not care to run it he won't offend me in the least. So here goes:

The thirty or more players, members of National and American League teams, who for the past two weeks have been busily engaged in preliminary training in this city, are rapidly getting into good condition. In fact, some of them look ready to start the season now; all of them say they are anxious for the 1911 race to begin.

It is not the result of the games that have been played the past week between two teams picked from among the stars of the big leagues that counted, so much as it is the opportunity of getting a line on the condition of the men. A majority of them, those who took the best of care of themselves during the winter, found it rather easy to get back in the game, and among this number may be mentioned Tom Hughes, the twirler of the Washington Senators, who has been a positive revelation to other players and fans who watched him work out this week at Majestic park. Hughes has more "smoke" on the ball at the present time than most pitchers possess in the heart of the season. His speed is terrific, and Captain McBride says that he is well pleased with the showing he made. Almost the same thing may be said of McQuillan, the Cincinnati pitcher. Grover Land, who will do the bulk of receiving for the Cleveland "Naps," has handled the "shoots" of Hughes and McQuillan the past two weeks, and it is predicted that Grover is going to surprise the American League, if present condition counts for anything. His throwing the past week was of the lightning order. His aim was accurate and he, too, appears to be ready for the bell. George Mullin, of the Detroit staff, and Walter Johnson, the star boxman of the American League, are rapidly rounding to, both taking it easy during these preliminary stages, while Art Fromme of the "Reds" has cut loose considerably and looks as if he has recovered his old-time form. "Germany" Schafer expects to land a place on the Washington team, while Wid Conroy, also of the Senators, looks as good as ever he did. Jimmie Burk, manager of the Indianapolis team of the American Association, has got down to earnest work and predicts a great season for himself, and "Dixie" Walker is sure to be there with a fine assortment of "foolers" when called on by McAleer. His game here this week demonstrated that he is in great shape when he held the opposing team down to one measly single in four innings.

The baseball colony next week will be augmented by the arrival of twenty of the New York Highlanders and a big delegation of Tigers, headed by Hughie Jennings, and it won't be long, either, before the entire Brooklyn, Pittsburg, Cincinnati and St. Louis Browns are here for their spring training.

The Business Men's League struck a popular chord at their meeting this week when it was proposed to banquet the visiting teams. This affair, which, it is said, is the first of its kind to be given by a municipality where the big league teams train, will take place when the various clubs are here for their spring work, probably some time in the early part of next month. At the next meeting of the Business Men's League a committee will be appointed to arrange all details of this affair, and the banquet promises to be a great feature.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

"KINEMACOLOR" TO THE SCALA

We are officially informed that, after a lengthy and an exhaustive survey of the many sites and premises available for his purpose, Mr. Charles Urban, F.Z.S., joint inventor of kinematography in the actual tints of nature, has finally leased from Dr. E. Distin Maddick that beautiful theater, The Scala, in Charlotte Street, W., and will there produce "Kinemacolor" in all its miscellaneous varieties, approximately about the first week in April. "Kinemacolor," it will be remembered, was for nearly two years one of the principal attractions at the Palace Theater (as "Urbanora" had been for eight years previously at the Alhambra); but its rapid growth and development demanded a programme to itself, a stage of its own whereon to unfold the wealth of its gleanings in the widely-diversified fields of history, travel, zoology, botany, pageantry, sport, science and the drama, and the Scala, the handsomest theater in the world, is structurally the very house for the purpose. Built mainly of white marble and cut stone, and possessing numerous exits on all sides, the Scala is the first theater in history to receive the London County Council's permit to erect an elaborate operating enclosure, with an electrical installation capable of coping with every kind of optical novelty, in the auditorium itself— a most important consideration to the artistic reproduction of life-motion pictures, though one too frequently ignored by theatrical managers all over the country. This enclosure alone will displace in the best part of the theater some fifty of the luxurious, red-morocco armchairs for which the Scala has been noted, but it is felt the sacrifice is not too great in view of the results to be secured. Again, the "rake," or slope, on the various floors of the Scala is so well adjusted as to secure an uninterrupted view of the stage from any part of the house.

Special features will be made of a full orchestra under the direction of a prominent leader, which will accompany the pictures and also play selections; and the fortunate possession of the Lord Chamberlain's license will be taken advantage of, not only to produce from time to time the best dramatic work in short plays of the foremost British authors, but to introduce translations (not adaptations) of the most interesting foreign plays and any remarkable novelties from abroad which may seem attractive to the London public. Nor will the fact that "Kinemacolor"—lending every semblance of life in the veritable tones of nature—multiplies infinitely the value of kinematography as a force in education be lost sight of. At every demonstration will be given a brief but highly instructive urban science lecturette, illustrated either by "Kinemacolor" or monotone pictures, and chosen with a view to entertain as well as instruct.

There will be two performances daily, in the afternoon and evening, respectively, and it is believed that many ladies and children will be attracted to these matinees. The personal supervision of the program by Mr. Charles Urban will ensure its being kept at the highest standard of excellence, rigorously exclusive of any feature which could offend the most fastidious taste, and unquestionably unique in the world of true entertainment.

The Vitagraph Dinner.

Two hundred and fifteen employees of the Vitagraph Company of America, from the office boy and watchman to the general manager, were entertained by President W. T. Rock at Raub's restaurant, in Brooklyn. Following the dinner, which is an unusual affair, there was an entertainment in which the actors of the Vitagraph Stock Company took part, and after that there was dancing for several hours. The employees were allowed to invite guests for the entertainment and ball. The first course of the banquet was served at 6:30 o'clock, and after that had been served the hall was darkened and the latest film made by the Vitagraph Company, entitled "The New Stenographer," was run off. The second picture showed how and where the Vitagraph pictures are made. The employees in all of the departments saw themselves at work.

The program was made up of numbers filled by employees.

Among those present were William T. Rock, president of the company; J. Stuart Blackton, vice-president; A. E. Smith, secretary and treasurer; Charles Kent, Van Dyke Brooks, Frederic Thompson, E. R. Phillips and Lawrence Trimble, directors; J. B. French, general superintendent; A. V. Smith, cashier; John Rock, general manager of the Chicago office; and Mrs. A. R. Reader, wife of the manager of the Chicago office. There were also about thirty invited guests.

"IMP'S" BALL A BIG SUCCESS

The ball given by the employees of the Independent Moving Picture Company of America, at the Leslie rooms Saturday night, February 11th, was one of those pleasurable affairs that go to engender a better feeling among co-workers. Edward Roskam, Jack Cohn, Doretta McDonald and Daisy Pollack had charge of the arrangements, ably assisted by others. The music was by MacArthur's orchestra, from the music house of Laemmle and during the intermissions the latest song hits were sung by Edward Doer and William Arthur, including the $2,000 prize song, "I'll Change the Thorns to Roses." Jack Cohn was floor manager, and there wasn't a dull moment. The grand march was led by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Laemmle, and the rays of spot lights heightened the effect. The ball was largely attended, quite a number being present from the Thanhouser Company. A great many moving picture celebrities mingled with the crowd and this second effort of the "Imps" was a pronounced success and a great advance on the one a year ago.

Our representative noted among the "Imp" employees present: Edward Roskam, Doretta McDonald, Harry Zellar, Jack Cohn, Rene Bardet, Eugene Gaudio, I. Solzer, Bert Siebel, Henry Klotz, Harvey Willstumpf, Ed Williams, Daisy Pollack, Irene Brogan, Myra Callahan, Julius Bernheim, Harold Wilkins, Robert De Vide. Our representative says: Count me an "Imp" from now on.

LOBBY DISPLAY

The advantages accruing to the exhibitor who is original and enterprising in connection with the decorations and advertising contained in his lobby are many and well known A large percentage of the attendance in a goodly number of moving picture theaters can consistently be termed transient, in other words, are individuals who drop into the theater when they have a few moments to spare to while away these few moments in contemplation of the moving pictures exhibited therein.

The appearance of the lobby to this transient trade signifies the worth of the exhibition for which they will pay their money. The important worth, therefore, of arranging proper and attractive lobby displays cannot be over-estimated.

From reports that we have received from Chicago, it appears that the American Film Manufacturing Company of that city, manufacturers of the "American films," have gone their competitors one better in point of advertising for the benefit of the exhibitor.

They have completed four distinct sets and styles of lobby display, depicting the leading players in the American films. The first and least expensive of these, but by no means of the smallest moment, is a highly colored poster containing five colors, something unusual in moving picture posters, of an exceedingly artistic design, and on extra heavy calendered paper. These posters wil be furnished exhibitors principally through the exchange, although these posters can be obtained by application direct to the American Company in Chicago.

They likewise have a set of five original photographs, unmounted, each photograph containing a characteristic pose of one of their leading players. This set they will supply the exhibitor direct, or through the exchange, at a price of 50c. per set, or 10c. for each photograph. The photographs can be obtained neatly mounted at a price of 60c.

The original idea, and one that will undoubtedly appeal to a goodly number of exhibitors, is a neatly framed series of photographs of the leading actors in this company to be hung in the lobbies of the various theaters featuring American films, which they tender exhibitors, at a price of $1.50, f.o.b. Chicago, and their final offer, and in the writer's opinion undoubtedly the best at the price is a photo frame that would do justice to the finest legitimate theater in the land. This photo frame is a staunch oaken easel made of real oak, not imitation, together with a large frame containing the photographs of every leading player, arranged in an exceedingly tasteful manner.

LIFE OF MOSES

A Cleveland Correspondent Writes:—

On Monday evening, February 13th, the Lake Shore Film Co., in co-operation with the Local Anti-Tuberculosis League, under whose auspices the exhibition was given, exhibited the five reels of the "Life of Moses," a Vitagraph issue, at the Euclid Avenue Christian Church, this city. The projection was accompanied by a well-prepared biblical lecture, delivered by the Reverend Dr. H. M. Cook.

The performance was well attended, there being approximately four hundred and fifty persons present, a goodly number of whom were clergymen and ministers of this city. All told two hundred and seventy ministers were invited. To say that the entire audience was enthusiastic does by no means express their appreciation in the superlative degree. A prominent layman after witnessing the exhibition made the remark that in his estimation this subject, shown to both children and adults, would do more in a spiritual way than a whole year of sermons.

Although no one derived any special benefit, either monetary or otherwise from this exhibition, it nevertheless had its object, and the results will ultimately be that the men of the cloth are going to take a different stand toward motion pictures at least in this city. It will remove, to a great degree, the narrow-minded, parched and prejudiced opinion held by a good many clergymen toward motion pictures and moving picture theaters.

SEEN ON THE CURTAIN

By Walton

"Rockville Center next stop," cried out the conductor on the Long Island east-bound express. I jumped up at his call, and it struck me suddenly that my good friend Chas. Donlon resided in this lively little town. Mayhap, thought I, I might find him at his stately residence. With quaking feet and beating heart I started to rout out his august majesty. To the man who opened the door, your humble servant handed his card. I felt somewhat easier when I was invited inside. It was a trembling hand I stretched out to be enclosed in the warm grasp of Mr. Donlon. He requested that I be seated; this I did, taking extra care I found the chair nearest the door.

"Mr. Donlon," quoth I, "would you spare a few moments of your time in giving me a little information?" He assured me he would. Before starting my attack I edged near the door and then fired my first shot. "What is your opinion of moving pictures, Mr. Donlon?" said I. "Moving pictures," he said, "are a missing element this world has long been waiting for. They represent education and virtue. They are here to do good," he said. "This town," he said, "has a population of four thousand, and every year shows a big increase. We have a moving picture theater here and every mortal in the place crowds around its door afternoons and evenings, almost resorting to riotous proceedings to gain admittance.

"Yes, sir," he went on, "it's truly wonderful the marked progress moving pictures have made on Long Island. Every town I have visited has a moving picture theater, and every blessed one of them is always crowded. Our theater here bears the name of Magnet and has a seating capacity of four hundred. This is filled four and five times a day. Our show consists of five reels, principally the Imp and Thanhouser, and we have two illustrated songs. The whole show is very good and well worth the price of admittance which is ten cents. The young man who sings has a very good voice and wins the plaudits at every attendance. Our young lady who plays the piano certainly knows her business, and every one leaves our theater well satisfied."

"Yes, sir," he went on, "Long Island feels the benefit of moving pictures; they have worked wonders, yes wonderful wonders. I am a strong supporter of the Moving Picture News, and I owe my success in the moving picture world to its splendid editorials. I believe in the Independent films, and am a hater of the Trust. 'Down with the trash' is the slogan of the people of Long Island."

Mr. Donlon Is Well Known in the Moving Picture Circle in Long Island.

"We want no Trust and we do not intend to have a Trust film in our town. Moving pictures enable us to get glimpses of parts of the world unknown to us. Another story which tells out the victory of moving pictures happened some few nights ago. I was talking to a friend of mine about Paris where I spent some months. He gave me such a vivid description of the Grand Opera House and many other buildings there that I was amazed. 'When did you go to Paris?' I asked him. 'Never,' was his astounding answer. 'Then how do you know so much about it?' I gasped. 'My friend,' he whispered, 'have you ever heard of moving pictures?' I admitted I had. 'It is there I go to get my knowledge,' he said. 'It is there I go to get my education. Moving pictures,' he declared, 'contain knowledge, wisdom and truth. What you don't know, spend ten cents to see a show and get what you don't know.'

"As to the truth of his story, I advise those who don't know what's what to go visit a moving picture and find out.

"My friend," went on Mr. Donlon, "tell mothers, fathers and children to visit moving pictures, tell them all to come to this great silent advisor."

"Lynbrook next stop," proclaimed the conductor of the train I was on. His announcement brought me back from dreamland in a hurry. I was on my way to interview one of the fair sex. With seven kinds of cold chills playing tag up and down my spine and a weak heart, I wondered if she was a suffragette. Lord deliver me, I silently pleaded, if such she be. I had a vision of some strapping big woman with a rolling pin in her hand waiting to test its worth on my think dome. I trembled as I arose from my seat and cast a hasty glance out the window. Seeing no wild beasts or anything that looked like a suffragette roaming around, I plucked up courage and ventured to look around this busy little town.

A large brick building stared me in the face, and, upon observing it more closely, I discovered it to be a moving picture theater. "A fine big building," says I.

I now started post haste to interview the noble lady whose name, by the way, is Miss Howe. I reached her door safely and again that feeling of fear overcame me. I rang the bell, determined to do or die for the sake of the Moving Picture News. A neat little maid opened the door and I felt better; she looked harmless enough. She took my card with a bright little smile and invited me inside. I chose a chair which I thought would hold me up, in event of my receiving any violent shock, and awaited her coming.

I heard a footstep at the door, looked appealingly towards the window and almost jumped out as she entered the door. My fears were soon proven groundless, as she stretched her dainty little hand. "Miss Howe," I ventured, after our greeting was complete, "what is your opinion of moving pictures?" After a moment's meditation she said: "Moving pictures are the something the public have long been looking for and just found. It is most astounding," she went on, "the wonderful progress they have made. They have leaped out of the unknown darkness and shed their light throughout this island.

"Here in Lynbrook we have three big moving picture theaters, each one of them is crowded to its fullest capacity at every performance. The shows are fine as well as educational, and we all feel the full import of their worth. Our largest theater is the Lyceum, holding approximately five hundred people; next comes the 'Bates Opera House,' which has a seating capacity of three hundred, and then the Plaza, which seats two hundred people."

"Can you," I asked, "give me a comparison of some play and the moving pictures?" "I can," she flashed back quickly.

"A play is unfinished; it lacks nature's make-up. There is something missing. It does not touch the public's inner thought and feeling, it merely amuses them. A play is classed as a toy. It is really nothing, while the moving picture carries the public with it. As picture after picture is flashed upon the screen, it shows us life's true stories. It makes our feelings go in harmony with the picture. We go home," she added, "with a vivid mental picture of what we have seen. With the lesson the silent picture has taught us. We feel better, yes, wonderfully better. Moving pictures teach us so many things. They show the wrong and right path of life. They teach us religion, they teach us truth and they teach us honesty. A young girl," she added, "has gone out into the busy world prepared to fight against wrong and all that means. Where did she get knowledge, her experience?" she asked. "She got it from the moving picture theater. She saw pictures of life's snares and traps; she studied, she memorized them. She took them as her slogan and helpmate. She stood by the silent story the picture told. She rose up in the business world. She became one of New York's leading business women. And how and why? Because she would rather go and see an educational picture than a silly and foolish play. "Ten cents," she exclaimed, "gives you the key to knowledge, and anywhere from two to five dollars gives you the key to absolute ignorance. Tell the public, tell the public," she said excitedly, "their eyes are closed. Tell them through the Moving Picture News to fall in line with their fellow mortals and march forward, yes, forward to the golden mountains of moving picturedom."

'Phone 1707 Chester—(Thanhouser).—A man is crazy over horse racing. He gets a tip and as he has no money tries an office friend and gets nothing; then borrows a hundred from the delicatessen man. He plays 50 to 1 shot and wins. (Don't forget that 50 to 1.) He sends back the money to the store, which gives a clue to his deserted wife who—with her child—the delicatessen man cares for. He goes off and is seen in a drunken revel. As he's about to drink wine out of a woman's slipper—just like a certain Russian of high degree—his wife appears and disappears. He's dragged out—having spent all his money; $100 at 50 to 1. That's going some. He next appears with a wonderful crowd in a Turkish bath. His locker is discovered and the number of the store telephone and the fellows communicate with the wife; take up a subscription for the baby and bundle him off. There's a yarn to make your hair curl!

Fate's Turning—(Biograph).—A young man bids his fiancee good-bye and goes to the seaside. He's fashionable; has an attack of "nerves." At the hotel he experiences the get-well-quick; there's a pretty waitress; they are betrothed! His father dies and on account of new dignities he tells the waitress "All's off." She goes to his home and is received with that sweetness characteristic of the vulgar rich. The utter brutality of the man is revealed by after events. Grand finale: He's about to be married to a "fitting mate" and the stage is set. In rushes the ruined girl with her baby in her arms; the bride elect is enough of a woman to depart. Then the fashionable preacher marries the man and the girl and she promptly dies. Like the thief out West that "caves in" before a revolver, so does this magnificent speciman of a man. We've read enough of this sort of late; there's no need to put them on the screen. Aim of this production unknown.

The Emperor's Luneh—(Eelair).—A sort of Barmecide collation. Emperor invites soldier to lunch, the poor fellow gets nothing, as no sooner is a dish placed before him than Napoleon jumps up to attend to this, that or the other; then the table is removed and the old soldier is glad to avail himself of the substantial, if homely, fare sold by the Parisian sidewalks cook. Put not your trust in princes!

The Baby Fortune Hunters—(Gaumont).—A quaint child story of two little ones who went in search of "the pot of gold." This boy and girl elude father and mother and apply for work to a farmer who is tickled to death at the idea. The field scenes of oxen ploughing, sowing and winnowing with the flail are exquisite photographs of French country life. The law steps in and the little ones are marched off home, not, however, without their wages, which are proudly turned over to their parents. It is not a story, has no pretence so to be; it is a beautiful portrayal of a delicate child fantasy in which the French excel.

Betty Rolls Along—(Gaumont).—This young lady manages to leave destruction and fury in her tracks as she performs sundry and manifold antics on a pair of roller skates. Her finish is in the deep waters, surrounded by her foes.

The Blaek Bordered Letter—(Edison).—A detective story dealing with the sudden disappearance of an heiress. Through a letter the detective traces the girl to a private asylum. Here she has been placed by a sanctimonious guardian who has robbed the estate. In the end he has to face his guilt. The story is complex and at times the stage is overcrowded.

Cast Up by the Sea—(Vitagraph).—A man of wealth goes to the shore and falls in love with a fisher girl. His mother will have none of it—he looks old enough to have mind of his own. The girl goes back to her old life—for his good. She marries a drunkard, and general beast. Then comes lugubrious scenes, with the interjection of another man, who protects her. Next she is widowed. The rich man on his yacht is dreaming of her, and, writing a love message, puts it in a bottle which he throws into the sea. The widow and the new man are mooning by the waters. The bottle is seen and broken. How under the canopy the message was not found, an ordinary man knoweth not. The new man cuts his finger on the bottle, the widow tends his wounds and then the couple walk off in love's embrace. Meanwhile the rich man rapturously cuddles a fair dame. Why this title? Apparently the sea cast up nothing! Why not, Sinfonia mysteriosa, with Chopin's funeral march to interpret.

Prompt Payment—(Thanhouser).—Broad farce. A penniless business man is besieged by creditors, who sit down to play poker in the outer office till "he returns." Meanwhile he is in his private office; with the help of his typewriter he escapes by the window. Then he goes to a costumer and is fitted up with a disguise; he returns to his office as another creditor; joins them at the game and skins the quartet to the last cent. Then he returns his costume and goes back himself to the office, where he pays the creditors with their own money. A rollicking film full of laughs.

Stealing a Ride—(Thanhouser).—A couple of youngsters hitch their sleds to their parents' sleigh, determined to have a ride even if father and mother said "nay." The ride brings in some very pretty snow scenery. They tumble off and cannot catch the sleigh, so they get lost in the wintry woods. Their parents see the empty sleds, tumble to the situation and set off to find the children. They're found, taken home and suitably punished and kissed. A split reel of the sort young folks—as well as old—will enjoy.

Trials of Bud Brown—(Bison).—Bud arrives from the East and falls in love with the rancher's daughter. A beetle-browed foreman tries to stop this, but Bud can use his fists and does so. When the girl and Bud are out riding Mr. Foreman, and others of a like ilk, kidnap Bud, make a Mazeppa of him and then proceed to hang him. The girl gets help and just in the nick of time they arrive and save Bud. Then the ground is decorated with departed ruffians—exterminated ragamuffins. The riding, shooting and general kick-up of these films are just the sort that people like. They brighten the program, whatever else is running.

His Best Friend—(Solax).—The film gave pleasure upon its release as the doggie is such a dandy. The photography is of the excellent class and the stage settings show care. I wish the crook was not so super-crooky and doggie's performances not so much so. The story tells of an English lord who perforce sets out to see a cousin in New York whom he does not know. On the liner he meets a crook, who uses the wireless and prevents my Lord doing so. In New York the nobleman is drugged and the crook tries to impersonate him. The doggie brings the girl and the crook gets "his." A critic is always a cynical, crabbed entity, but this I can say and say conscientiously: This film will win the applause of audiences. It is full of action, keeps folks wondering what's going to happen, has good live backgrounds, is clean as the sea breezes, has an A1 doggie, shows the defeat of the villain and the triumph of Cupid.

It Did Look Suspicious—(Vitagraph).—It certainly did and Vitagraph made a mighty good film story of it. Briefly it is this: A business man takes his wife's ring for repairs, he drops it on the sidewalk. A milkman picks it up; he's in love with a maid in aforesaid business man's employ and to her he gives it. When master discovers loss, Hail Columbia! The girl has it on her finger, then arrest and court. The pompous, inhuman brutality of some of the minions of the law—fellows we pay for—not a bit overdrawn. The girl's innocence is proved and the milkman gives a much better ring—a plain band of gold. Underneath the story, which is well staged and acted, runs a better and a stronger tale; how easy it is for the innocent to suffer and how they are treated in spite of our wild cries about "Liberty and Equality."

Convention of Firemen—(Vitagraph).—By my side sat a Long Islander as this reel was shown. Silence till the end when he burst out with "Hully Gee, that's Freeport and the boys all right!" No need for any addition.

An Eventful Evening—(Edison).—It was all that. Father, railroad president, goes to a meeting and leaves his daughter and sick wife—it seems alone—in a country house. Burglars appear, girl 'phones for special engine, entertains burglar till "special" arrives. Aforesaid burglars are "canned" and mother sleeps through it all. Some of the photography is beyond praise; the engine scenes, as a railroad man said to me, "the real thing." But, the story, Edison, the story! Do for pity's sake give us scenario equal to your other work.

The Little Circus Rider—(Selig).—The circus procession and the tent scenes are the real thing. The story, too, points a moral and a practical one. The sub-tropical scenery good. A girl is misled by a city scoundrel (scoundrels always come from cities) but is saved by a "cop." She joins a circus where the folks are wondrous kind. Her father's friend and her "devoted" finds her and gets a job under the canvas. The circus goes to her home town; here she has an accident and is nursed at home. In the end she gets father back and her old lover as a husband. Would that all rascals were thus foiled and that peace was the end. It isn't so always. The glamour and glitter of a specious cadet-rogue ends not always thus.

A Father Against His Will—(Pathe).—This American production of the firm is a glorious mix-up, full of laughs. A young fellow goes to meet his betrothed. On his way he sees two delightful babies sitting on a park seat—the mothers just slipped away to buy a balloon, and help a wounded kid,—he plays with the little ones which an officious "cop" compels him to carry along. With a child in each arm he meets sundry friends and lastly his betrothed. His character is irretrievably ruined. In the police station mothers arrive and maul him, whilst his betrothed sits by in fury. All, at last, is explained and his betrothed forgives him—like the law, for what he never did. The scenery is good, and the mix-up will always make folks laugh. It's a long time since I have seen a Pathe have so cordial a reception.

Gorges of the Bourne, France—(Gaumont).—The presentation of the beauties of this river, excellent. The viewpoints are well chosen. The clinging houses, in all their quaintness, close by the brawling waters and the bridge spanning the stream are some of the salient points which make live again memories of old time wanderings near the chasms of this picturesque river.

Judged by a Higher Power—(Champion).—It has been my agony to endure films produced, but this is the limit. Of the story and its morals, let others judge. I'm dealing with plain facts, a "thunderbolt"—ye Olympian gods of two thousand years ago to the rescue—strikes a 'phone; result, blindness, of sinful user of said 'phone. This is represented by a tremendous cloud of smoke at the other side of the room. Did the, whoever it is, ever see "lightning's" effect upon wires? Better toddle off, little boy, to a signal box or a 'phone exchange and amend thy ways and be sensible.

Two Reformations—(Essanay).—The power of a pure woman to straighten things out, no one doubts. Because this is the theme of this film and because the actors are capable I "hold my horses" as to detail and story theme.

Selling Old Master—(Edison).—The Southern scenes are beautiful, tender and true; the stage settings admirable. The old couple's loyalty a worthy theme, but somebody spoilt everything. An old negro, in poverty, with a gold ring on his finger! Won't somebody treat us as half-intelligent beings? Cynical critic! all right, but when I was looking at this peculiarity a stranger in the theater next to me burst out: "Oh!—a starving nigger with a ring!" I'm not a great man who goes to private exhibitions. My sights are seen amongst the common herd who pay to see, and this I can say, it will not do to follow the course, apparently set by some, to think that a firm's name is so famous that anything will do. Even the aegis of Edison's name will not suffice to go on treating the public as a lot of illiterate idiots. We occasionally have glints of common sense.

The Rice Industry In Japan—(Pathe).—One of those beautiful and realistic productions for which Pathe is famed. No one can see this film without feeling Japan is in the theater as it runs.

The Slave's Revolt—(Pathe).—In common with films of this sort, backgrounds are altogether wrong. Ancient Egypt is a difficult problem to handle, but I thought this firm capable of doing more exact work. Itala handled a similar theme infinitely better. In Paris, where the pupils of Renan still are, Egyptology ought not to be dead. Doubtless all the movement and vigor displayed are good, but a slave crawling up near the throne and so on will not go under Rameses. The javelin scene is of Sanscrit origin; another part comes from the papyrus, but as a whole this is not a realistic Rameses tale, in spite of costumes.

Adrift—(Thanhouser).—The child plays an important part. These films are too full of mental gymnastics. A poor artist is so charged with love for wife and child that their pose enables him to paint a picture which spells fame. A society belle meets him and then Arabian Nights' infatuation. In his wealth he acts like a brute. Then heigh, presto, change! The child in a moment brings the belle to her senses and also her father. A child's influence, I gladly admit, but the other business is psychology beyond anybody but the press agent for a theatrical second rate. This film is not theatrical, nor second rate; in moral it is good, but the firm ought to avoid the cheap theatrics of some competitors.

The Squaw's Bravery—(Bison).—An Indian squaw, whose acting is splendid, carries all before her. The scene where she held the candle, got by a clever ruse, over the powder and so saved her lover, gripped the audience. Wherever the squaw appears there one may rest assured will be work that will well repay the watching. So it is here.

Ring of Love—(Solax).—An old professor finds amongst his Egyptian treasures a ring. This ring has extraordinary power, everyone falls in love with the wearer. The results in modern life, where it is ever changing hands, keep the theater in roars of laughter. Photography good; plot out of the common; result, a film all enjoyed to the full.

A Pittsburg Millionaire—(American).—A young worker, happily married, advances by leaps and bounds to a high position in a steel corporation through formulæ given to him by his father-in-law. Wealth turns his head, he neglects his wife and showers favors upon an actress. He goes so far as to demand "his freedom" from his wife; then he makes suitable provision for her. The press gets on his track, and publishes the news that "he seeks" a divorce. When the actress reads this, his hypocrisy enrages her; she returns his jewels and orders him out of her house. Despairing, he goes home, draws a pistol and is saved by his wife. Thus says the film; the synopsis, a prodigious production does not say so; far from it. The theme of the story is very much on the lines of a real happening, only the film climax is free from the gross ingratitude that marked the "swelled head's" career in real life, disgraced by the action of a so-called "minister of the Gospel." The story is too complex and not always clear. It's a great relief to see work of this standing after "The Genius" that had no genius in it. The photography, staging and acting are all very good. The rôles of the wife and her father stand out, as does that of the actress, especially in her last appearance.

Doctor Against His Will—(Eclair).—One of those delightful French representations of a French comedy. The stage settings, exteriors and interiors, are beautiful. The rôles are presented by actors and actresses filled with the spirit of the situation, instinct with those quaint nuances and understandings that show talent of a high order. Sganarell is fun personified, his wife, a vigorous yet loving dame, so truly Gallic! The young lady patient just the actress for the part. A Moliere representation that must be given the highest praise. The audience caught the fun and not only laughed but applauded heartily. The applause belongs to Eclair.

Too Much Mother-In-Law—(Selig).—Mother-in-law in a new phase; kind of overdrawn. The scenery in parts most beautiful. Young fellow gets out, because he likes to kiss his wife. Whilst in a turpentine camp, he receives a telegram. The fun of the film is that it demands his immediate

(Continued on page 23)

Manufacturers' Synopsis of Films

THE VINDICATION OF JOHN

Champion Release, March 8

Pressing creditors and large losses at the gaming table are greatly depressing to Harold Brown, the bank clerk, but none pay any attention to his troubled mien.

The great new bank vault had been newly installed and its combination was known only to John, who copies it in ink, blots it, and gives it to the treasurer. Harold notes the blotting of the written combination. At the opporune moment he secretes it, and, arriving at his room, easily reads it by holding it before the mirror.

That night the safe is opened and a large sum is extracted. The combination, presumably known to none but the treasurer and John, the poor boy is suspected, apprehended and confined in jail to await trial. His mother, believing in John's innocence, accomplishes his escape in a novel manner, and he is soon on his way westward to await proof of his honesty.

With the flight of time he becomes a valuable ranch hand and the favorite of all, including Helen, the daughter of Rancher Case. He is about to tell the willing and eager girl of his love, when he suddenly realizes his position as a fugitive from justice. He dare not ask this girl to share his name.

Harold Brown, the actual looter of the bank's cash, pays his debts, and resigning his position, boards a train for the West to spend the surplus in having a good time. He rapidly sinks to the lowest strata of existence in the barrooms, and from one of which he is bodily ejected. Staggering along, sick and drunken, he is overcome and is discovered by a returning body of cowpunchers of Case, lying in the road. Some gallop off for a doctor while others carry him to a deserted shack.

John arrives from the ranch with the doctor and is surprised to find his old desk mate in such wretched shape. Bending over the form, he is thrilled with happiness at the stricken man's confession. Then comes the removal of stigma to his name with the necessary explanations to all interested and to that little girl, who, smiling through her tears, looks up into the face of her vindicated lover, John.

THE RIVAL SERVANTS

Great Northern, Release March 4

A young girl leaves home to take a situation in a big city as domestic servant. She receives advances from the son of the family, who turns out to be an invetcrate gambler. In a gambling club which he frequents he, one night, loses all he has. Reaching home in the small hours of the morning, he sees on the sideboard a valuable piece of jewelry, which his mother has left there. The temptation to steal it besets him and he succumbs. The new domestic performs the usual household duties in the room next morning, and when the family arrives and the jewelry is missed, she is naturally accused of the theft. The son, though present, allows her to be arrested for the crime of which she is innocent. About this time the gambling den is raided. Here there was a maid who has pawned the jewel on behalf of the young man; the police have, naturally, been in communication with the pawnbroker and have her description. He is summoned and recognizes her as the girl who pawned the jewel, and she, to save herself, denounces the real criminal, upon whom judgment is speedy. A most interesting dramatic story.

TRACKED

Imp Release, March 6

A forged note, a trusting wife betrayed by a villain, an indignant husband with a keen sense of justice, and a forger brought to book, form the nucleus of a highly interesting drama with the scenes laid in Cuba. "Tracked" affords an opportunity for the stars of the "Imp" Company to appear at their very best.

Dan Barret, a forger, is sought by Balfour, a detective. Barret, finding the States a rather dangerous abiding place, goes to Cuba to avoid the officers. He is riding seeking seclusion when he comes to the tobacco plantation of Roger Densmore, an American, who has embarked in tobacco culture.

On his arrival Barret is taken ill and is cared for by Densmore and his wife. On becoming convalescent he admires the wife of his benefactor and is seized with a devilish idea to possess her. He invites her to accompany him on a horseback ride. She assents, and he then forges a letter to her husband saying the wife no longer loves him and has gone with another man. The wife, unsuspecting, is lured to an isolated portion of the country and Barret appears in his true colors, seizes her, and throwing her across his horse gallops away.

The mother of Mrs. Densmore finds the note and summons Densmore by servant. Densmore is shown the note and is furious. In company with a servant he sets out to be avenged. They find Barret at bay and he is attacked by the servant and disarmed by Densmore. The planter will not listen to his wife. The compromising situation explains. He gives the cur a chance for his life by extracting all the cartridges in his revolver but one, then, spinning the cylinder around commands the destroyer of his happiness to shoot. In turn each snaps the hammer until it is Densmore's turn to try the fifth shot, with a certainty of the death of Barret. Barret flinches, proves himself a craven coward and begs for his life. Densmore allows him five minutes start and then with his servant gives chase. Barret runs, but finally falls exhausted just as the faithful servant is about to run him through with his machete. Balfour, the detective, who has followed Barret to Cuba, providentially appears on the scene and saves the life of Barret. He explains that Barret is a forger. The detective is shown the note and, to the satisfaction of the husband, shows the note to Densmore as a forgery. Barret, brought to a sense of realization, confesses, and the husband turns to the wife he has wronged and is forgiven.

Barret is led away, and the story closes with the planter taking his faithful wife in his arms, begging her forgiveness for ever doubting her fidelity.

The drama is embellished with the true Cuban settings, the tobacco plantation and the forest scenes being beautiful.

THE MESSAGE IN THE BOTTLE

Imp Release, March 9

Lieutenant Shannon, a handsome young officer of the United States Army, bids farewell to his sweetheart, Louise Spencer, and takes passage on a battleship to join his regiment. We see him on the deck of the ship waving farewell to his friends as the craft steams majestically away.

The boat is shipwrecked and the young officer drifts ashore on a raft on the southern coast of Africa. Exhausted and almost famished, he manages to beach his frail craft and then, stripping a cloth from the improvised mast which he has used as a signal, he writes on the canvas, puts the message in a bottle and, corking the receptacle, he tosses it into the sea, breathing a prayer that it may be found by friends and that he may be rescued. Staggering ashore with strength almost spent, he falls exhausted on the rocks to be captured hy members of a tribe of eannibals and half carried before their king. His presence among the savages at first provokes curiosity and hostile demonstration, but his life is spared and his coming is hailed with delight.

Later, recognizing his prowess in battle, he is crowned leader. At the head of the tribe he is engaging an invading faction in battle and distinguishes himself, returning to the king with a report of victory, carried on the shoulders of admiring members of the tribe, the fight having been a decisive struggle in which many natives participated.

The young lieutenant has so ingratiated himself into the affections of the ruler that that dignitary wishes to reward him, and offers Shannon the hand of his daughter in marriage. The young white man is averse to any such arrangement, but he consents when the request is accompanied by a stern command.

In the meantime the message in the bottle has been found by some of Shannon's friends while bathing, and they lose no time in fitting out an expedition to search for him. They arrive on the island just as the wedding ceremony is being performed. It is an elaborate affair, the warriors are all in attendance in their wild, fantastic glory, hideously ugly and warlike in their fete costumes. They are dancing the Tango-Africano war dance with Shannon and the dusky maiden kneeling, when the wedding rites are interrupted by the arrival of officers and jackies of a gunboat together with Louise Spencer, who welcomes Shannon as one arisen from the dead. He is overjoyed to see his friends and sweetheart.

As the ship's cutter moves away from the island, bearing the young officer, the dusky maiden, who was to have been his bride, stands immovable, poised on a rock, arms extended, bidding him a sad farewell, heartbroken.

BY THE LIGHT OF THE MOON

Rex Release, March 2

Many times the moon has figured in romance and sentiment and the consternation of irate fathers, a human commodity which seems to be an accessory to the lovelorn thing.

By the light of the old, old moon they are spooning when their blissful occupation is interrupted by an eavesdropping tramp who sees possibilities of blackmail. A tribute is demanded—and awarded—and the lovers resume the sentimental session.

In the way of lovers the talk turns to marriage. They discuss her father's stubborn opposition, the chance of making him consent to their marriage. In the way of modern Romeos and Juliets, they determine to foil the old gentleman and marry in spite of him.

Since Adam wooed Eve, the manner and method of presenting one's suit has undergone many and vast changes. In everything, including love, the old is discarded. So when the lovers decide to elope, they plan to do it in no less startling a manner than by an aeroplane, which they do, only to be seen by the aforementioned irate parent, who pursues the car of the air in his automobile. Straight, fast, steadily, the aeroplane proceeds on its way to a minister, and gets there long enough before the arrival of the father to receive the marital blessing, and afford the old gent a healthy excuse for his wrath.

"Time flies," as six or eight people have already told us, and another years joins those that preceded it. We see the young husband, eager, anxious, worried, 'phoning the doctor that—well, we know what it is about when we glimpse at the medico's face. The doctor at once gets into his car and is off. We see his car racing along and over him a stork flying in the same direction. Then we see the baby, a bouncing baby it is, and just as the father is portraying his happiness with the little stranger, he is presented with another. There is consternation on the face of the father, but genuine amusement on the faces of all who witness it.

THE MUMMY
Thanhouser Release, March 7

Professor Dix has won fame as a scientist and has collected many objects of Egyptian ware, centuries old, that arouse the enthusiasm of his associates. Even Jack Thornton, an active, go-ahead young business man, is interested in the Professor's home, but although he tries to pretend it is Egyptology which attracts him, the Professor's fair young daughter is really the lodestone. Jack decides to win the old man's respect by posing as an Egyptologist himself. To start his collection he purchases a mummy at an auction sale, and takes it home, expecting that later he can make a great hit with his sweetheart's father by presenting it to him as a gift.

While the mummy is in Jack's room a live electric wire is by accident brought in contact with it. The body has been so perfectly mummified that the electric current is all that is necessary to ignite the vital spark, and Jack is amazed to see dancing forth from the case which he thought contained only unattractive rags and bones, a beautiful Egyptian princess. As soon as she is released, the mummy makes violent love to Jack, and causes his sweetheart to quarrel with him. (For how can a plain business man explain the presence in his room of a beautiful barbarian?)

When her love is spurned, the visitor from the distant past avenges herself by having Jack made into a mummy and placed in the case in her stead. Her heart relents, however, in time to save him from being "cut up" by the professor, who with a sharp knife starts to investigate the contents of the mummy case.

But all ends happily when Jack's plain statement of the seemingly impossible facts are proved true by the professor. Jack is reunited to his sweetheart, and the professor, being a widower, also an ardent admirer of everything antique, leads the recreated Egyptian lady to the altar, in spite of the fact that there is a difference of several thousand years in their ages.

ANGEL OF THE BOWERY
Yankee Release, March 6

There's plenty of material for good dramas in the Salvation Army. Almost every soldier in this vast organization could tell a story of heart-throbs, of hopes and ambitions, of storms and distress, which would suffice to make a drama dramatic. "The Angel of the Bowery" is famous in song and story all over America.

She was a Salvation Army lass whose father had died a drunkard. She loved a chap in their home town, but the boy's mother would not countenance a union between her son and a drunkard's daughter; so the girl went to New York and became a Salvationist.

Little did she know she would later meet her old sweetheart in a low Bowery dive, where he had finally drifted after leaving his mother in anger, and started on the downward path. But she never faltered when her duty called.

Just what transpired afterwards must not be told. That there was a wedding at the Barracks may be admitted, however, and it was attended by the rank and file of the army.

THE SENORITA'S SACRIFICE
Yankee Release, March 10

From sunny Spain comes the story of a Senorita's devotion. The story of a love which went for naught, and could only be shown in silence.

It has to do with a young American whose sojourn in Spain was marred by an encounter with brigands who left him for dead. Papinta, a pretty Senorita, while gathering flowers along the mountainside, discovers the wounded Yankee and brings him back to life. The story then becomes exciting. We leave the film to tell what followed.

Suffice to say, there's a surprise in store not only from the standpoint of story but photography as well.

No more picturesque or beautiful scenery could scarcely be imagined while the acting is all Yankee.

A COSTLY PLEDGE
Solax Release, March 3

Lucy Martin waits in her cozy home wearily for her husband. Time creeps on apace. The waiting wife looks anxiously at the clock to find that the hands have crept around to 3:30. Finally John arrives. He has imbibed not wisely but too well. Lucy upbraids him for his weakness, but finally breaks down into a burst of passionate tears. John, repentant and anxious to square himself, tells her that he will never do it again, but Lucy is very doubtful as to the strength of his good resolutions.

Finally John offers to sign a pledge, which he writes at his wife's dictation. The pledge binds John never to take another drink, and provides that should he do so, he will pay to his wife as a forfeit a sum of $500. Softened by John's willingness to atone, Lucy forgives him.

Several weeks pass—poor John, thirsty and weakening, escorts his wife to the station, where she is leaving town for a visit to her folks, and immediately after her departure beats it to the nearest saloon for a longed-for drink.

In the meantime, Lawyer Robbins, one of John's friends, receives an invitation to a masquerade ball and decides to accept. He meets John coming out of a saloon, who tells him of his wife's absence, and the two plan to take in the ball together. They have another drink on it and then seek a costumer from whom John hires a bell-boy outfit and his friend the costume of a Red Cross nurse.

John invites Robbins to make his home their headquarters during his wife's absence, and the two proceed there, stopping on the way for a number of drinks. They reach the house pretty far gone, and John's ludicrous efforts to mix a high ball in a lamp chimney provides comedy. The morning after the ball the two friends are found attired in their respective costumes—with oh, such heads, and well-formed resolutions to "never again."

A ring at the doorbell attracts their attention—they look out of the window—horrors—the wife is there, vigorously ringing the bell and waiting admittance. Consternation reigns. Finally John has an idea. His friend is attired as a nurse, and he will play sick and thereby gain the sympathy of his wife. Hastily hiding all evidences of their debauch John composes himself in what he fondly believes to be a correct invalid's pose, and Robbins, the supposed nurse, admits Mrs. Martin.

Fun fast and furious follows, but the young wife finally detects the imposition and makes John pay the penalty—a cash fine of $500.

THE SPIRIT HAND
Thanhouser Release, March 3

Mrs. Gray, a wealthy widow, mourns continually for the husband who had been separated from her by death. Her grief was so intense that she easily fell a victim to the wiles of a pair of sharpers.

One of the criminals, a woman, had secured employment as the widow's maid. Her confederate posed as a spiritualistic medium. Sue, the maid, stole a photo of Mr. Gray, his seal ring and a love letter that he had written his wife. Then the two laid the plans to separate the grief-stricken woman from her money.

The medium "made up" to look like Grey and, aided by his woman accomplice, appeared to the woman in her home. Then the maid induced her to visit a "famous medium," as she put it, who could interpret for her the message from the spirit world.

Mrs. Gray called on the charlatan and saw the hand of her dead husband pen a message. She thought it was his hand because it wore his signet ring and wrote in his handwriting—a clever forgery process. The spirit ordered her to turn over her fortune to be disposed of by a mandate from the other world, and she meekly obeyed. She brought to the medium all her cash and saw it whisked away by the hand she thought to be that of her husband.

Fortunately for the poor woman she had two daughters. One, the elder, took a practical way to cure her mother and save the fortune. She failed. The other adopted a method all her own, and succeeded.

And the swindlers, who thought that the widow's fortune was safely in their hands, had their hopes dashed at the last moment and were marched off to jail in the bargain.

A DISTINCT NOVELTY

"BY THE LIGHT OF THE MOON"

YOU'LL LIKE IT!
RELEASED THURSDAY, MARCH 2, 1911.

YOU'LL SAY IT'S GREAT!
"Rex" (of course!)

ADVICE TO OPERATORS

Oracle Department

By WM. E. SMITH, E. E.

PRACTICAL ARTICLES FOR ALL

This department has been started with the idea to encourage the operators to obtain the best results with their Projecting Machines Queries and questions pertaining to the Moving Picture arts addressed to the Editor of this department will be published in this department. Only answers to inqueries of general interest will be published here for the benefit of all readers. On account of the large amount of inquiries received it may not be possible to print all the answers in any one issue, as each has to take its turn. Correspondents should bear this in mind when writing. If a quick reply is wanted by mail, a charge of 15 cents is made for each question. Special information requiring a large amount of calculation and labor cannot be furnished without remuneration. The ORACLE has no fixed rate for such work, but will inform the correspondent promptly as to the charges involved. When writing only one side of question sheet must be used; diagrams and drawings must invariably be on a separate sheet. Name and address must always be given in all letters. No attention paid to letters not observing above rules.

OHM'S LAW

The intelligent operation of a moving picture machine requires the knowledge of the application of Ohm's Law.

It is customary when describing the general application of Ohm's Law to use the term, "an electric circuit." An electric circuit consists of a complete conducting path from one terminal of a generator, through a consuming device (the arc lamp), and back to the other terminal of the generator. An electric generator develops electric pressure, termed "volts." This pressure overcomes the resistance or choking effect of the conductors and the consuming device (the arc lamp); and thereby forees what is termed a "current" of electricity through the circuit. The resistance is measured in units called Ohms, and the current flowing through a complete circuit is always of the same strength at any part of the circuit. The pressure is used up, however, in various amounts throughout the circuit depending upon the resistance in each part of the circuit. Obviously, if one part of the circuit has twice as much resistance as another part, and the same circuit of electricity flows through both, the part having twice the resistance will eonsume twice as much pressure. The pressure in volts always forces the greatest amount of current possible through a resistance. This maximum current strength is equal in magnitude to the pressure in volts divided by the resistance in Ohms. This relation, "termed Ohm's Law," is expressed as follows:

$$\text{Current in amperes} = \frac{\text{Pressure in volts.}}{\text{Resistance in Ohms.}}$$

Thus if a resistance of 20 Ohms be connected across a 120-Volt circuit, a current of 6 amperers will flow

$$\frac{120 \text{ Volts}}{20 \text{ Ohms}} = 6 \text{ Amperes.}$$

For convenience, Ohm's Law may be memorized from the following:

"E" stands for the pressure
Which we are taught to use,
Divided by "R," for resistance,
Will give us "C," the juice

$$\frac{E}{R} = C$$

"C" is "E divided by R,"
With this we don't get very far,

$$C = \frac{E}{R}$$

But "E" is "R times C," you see,

$$E = R \times C$$

And "R" is "E divided by C."

$$R = \frac{E}{C}$$

"W," watt, is "Current times
Electromotive force,"
And "seven forty-six" of them
The "Power of a horse."

$$W = C \times E$$

$$746 = \text{H.P.}$$

The application of Ohm's Law to a moving picture lamp circuit may be shown as follows: Consider the electrical circuit of the lamp; it consists of the mains (the supply) coming from the generator at the power house, and terminates in the fused double pole switch.

From one terminal of the switch a wire is connected to one carbon of the arc lamp, the other terminal of the switch being connected to one terminal of the rheostat. With the switch open the other terminal of rheostat is connected to the other carbon of the arc lamp. The switch is then closed and the carbons are brought in contact and separated to form an arc. Assuming that the resistance of the rheostat is sueh that a current of 25 amperes is flowing through the circuit. Assuming that the pressure at the switch is 120 Volts. Under ordinary operating conditions an arc requires a pressure of 40 volts across its terminal for proper operation. If the arc consumes 40 volts and the pressure is 120 volts at the switch, we must insert a deviee such as a rheostat that will consume 80 volts. Recalling Ohm's Law, if a current of 25 amperes flows through a rheostat and the pressure (volts) consumed in it is 80 volts, what will the resistance of the rheostat be? The answer is 3.20 Ohms, obtained by dividing 80 volts by 25 amperes. If we were to measure the voltage across the arc by means of a voltmeter it would be 40 volts, while the voltage across the rheostat would be 80 volts. It must be remembered that the arc usually consumes 40 volts and this must be subtracted from the total voltage to obtain the voltage consumed in the rheostat. Thus on a 220 volt circuit, 180 volts must be consumed in the rheostat, and on a 500 volt circuit 460 volts must be consumed by the rheostat.

Having determined the voltage which must be consumed in any case, the proper resistance to limit the flow of a given current can be obtained directly from Ohm's Law. Thus an arc lamp fed through a resistance from a 120 volt circuit, what resistance is necessary to pass eurrents of 15, 18, 20 and 25 amperes, we proceed thus:

Total pressure	120 Volts
Lamp pressure	40 Volts
Remaining pressure	80 Volts
For 15 amperes, 80/15=5.30 ohms	Resistance of Rheostat
For 18 amperes, 80/18=4.44 ohms
For 20 amperes, 80/20=4.00 ohms
For 25 amperes, 80/25=3.20 ohms

Now to find the resistance of the arc, we will proceed as follows:

Total pressure	120 Volts
Lamp pressure	40 Volts
Rheostat pressure	80 Volts
For 15 amperes 40/15=2.666 ohms	Resistance of Arc
For 18 amperes 40/18=2.222 ohms
For 20 amperes 40/20=2. ohms
For 25 amperes 40/25=1.6 ohms

Other conditions may be worked out in a similar manner.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Operators Take Notice

Some time ago a number of Brooklyn operators wrote me saying that the Police Department was stopping all operators from working who did not have cards dated 1911 in violation of the clause that all cards were good for one (1) year from date of issue. I communicated at once with the Police Commissioner and received the following reply:

POLICE DEPARTMENT of the City of New York
269 State Street
Borough of Brooklyn
Office of the Borough Inspector
February 10, 1911.

The Police Commissioner,
"Through official channels."

Sir:—In reply to the attached communication signed by William E. Smith, E. E., relative to moving picture operators' cards, I would respectfully report that I have forwarded copies of the said communication to the commanding officers of the various inspection districts within the Borough of Brooklyn, calling their attention to the law governing the licensing of moving picture operators, with instructions to strictly comply therewith. They report that they have forwarded copies of said communication to the commanding officers of precincts within their respective inspection districts, and that none of the operators of moving picture machines within their districts have been ordered to cease working and no arrests have been made for not having "1911" cards.

I assume responsibility for the accuracy of the above report.

Respectfully,
JAMES E. DILLON,
Borough Inspeetor, Brooklyn and Queens.

I. A. T. S. E., 154, M. P. P. M. O. U.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 8, 1911.

Dear Sir and Bro.:—The following officers were elected by Seattle Local, No. 154, I. A. T. S. E., for the ensuing term: H. E. Cawthon, president; Harry Clark, vice-president; C. C. Farmer, treasurer; Thos. Kennedy, recording and financial secretary; Chas. Doyle, business agent; G. A. Smith, sergeant-at-arms; L. L. Goldsmith, press agent; L. L. Goldsmith and H. E. Cawthon, delegates to labor council; A. H. McQuestin, Jay Hass and Harry Clark, trustees; Harry Bennett, C. C. Farmer, Thos. Kennedy and Harry Clark, examining board.

Fraternally Yours,
THOS. KENNEDY, Secretary,
Odeon Theater.

Thank you, Bro. Goldsmith, for your best wishes. Would ask you to give my compliments to the boys of 154, and ask them to drop me a line, as I am always pleased to hear from them at any time. Would also ask Bro. Kennedy to send me a copy of the minutes of the coming meetings of 154.

E. L. Stephens, Martinsville, Va., Writes:

Please tell me what kind of a curtain or screen to use to get the best results from a picture. I have also had some trouble with my wires burning in half where they connect with carbon holders. I have a tight connection and use heavy wire and I can find no cause for them burning in half, which they do very often.

Answer:—Well Martinsville, Va., I would advise you to make your curtain or screen of unbleached muslin, and, after you have put it in place, to give it a coat of glue size and after the glue sizing has dried give it a coat of white calsomine with just a slight tinge of blue in it, and if possible have a black border of say 10 inches around it as it will help to make the picture stand out better.

In regard to the wires burning in half at the carbon holders, it may be that there is a poor or high resistance contact between the wire and the lug, which is caused by the wire being loose in the lug or that the wire and lug has become oxidized at the point of contact. Scrape the wire and the interior of the lug until you have a bright surface, then tighten up on them. If this don't help, write me again, letting me know the size of wire and type of lugs you are using.

G. I. D., Baltimore, Md.:—Writes me saying he is using a Powers No. 6 machine, which was giving him fine results, but lately there seems to be ghost in the picture. Can you tell me what causes this and how can I get rid of it.

Answer:—Baltimore, your trouble seems to be in the setting of the revolving shutter.

If the ghost appears at the top of the picture, turn your shutter down, or in the direction which it turns when running, until you eliminate the ghost in the picture.

If it is at the bottom of the picture, turn your shutter in the opposite direction to which it turns when running. Also have the shutter as near the lens as possible.

From Auckland, New Zealand,—Comes the following: Can you tell me how to find the size lens needed for a moving picture machine, the throw to be about 60 feet?

Answer:—Auckland, you do not say what size picture you wish to project at 60 feet, therefore, I cannot figure it out for you. But you may do it yourself by the following rule: Multiply the distance of the throw by the size of the aperture opening, "which is usually about seven-eighths of an inch," and divide the result by the size of the picture wanted on the screen. If you want a picture 12 feet wide, a 4.37-inch or 4.50-inch lens would be about right.

Arc Lamp Resistances

A. Clarke writes asking for advice with reference to his arc lamps. The voltage of his installation is being changed from 200 volts to 100 volts. There are at present four lamps in series on 200 volts, each lamp having an arc voltage of 45 volts. The balance is taken up with resistance. "Will the same resistance do for 100 volts if half the wires are cut out?" he asks, also "Are new resistances really needful or can old ones be adapted?"

Answer: As you are now running, the lamps require 180 volts, and 20 volts is absorbed in the resistance. On 100 volts your lamps will run two in series, thus taking 90 volts, the remaining 10 volts being for the resistance. The 20 volt resistance will do for this if half the wire is taken out or "shorted." You will, however, require one resistance for each pair of lamps. The age of a resistance has absolutely no bearing on its electrical efficiency.

A Large Small Resistance!

Jim Elliott writes: "When selecting an adjustable resistance should the size of same be based on minimum or maximum amperes required. For instance, let 20 amps. be the minimum and 50 amps. the maximum on 100 volt circuit. Assuming a 45 volt arc, then C equals $\frac{E}{R}$, 20 equals $\frac{100-45}{R}$. Therefore R equals $\frac{55}{20}$ equals 2¼ ohms. This is the minimum resistance. Maximum would require 50 equals $\frac{55}{R}$, R equals $\frac{55}{50}$ equals 1 1-10 ohm. From the above it seems that a larger resistance would be required for 20 amps. than for 50 amps., which is contrary to usual practice.

Answer: You have misinterpreted the expressions "large resistance" and "small resistance." This refers to the number of ohms of the resistance. A large ohmic resistance is often small in size and vice versa. Your reasoning is otherwise quite correct.

Rainbow Colors on Screen

Fred Zral, Gosport, N. Y., says: "Working at about 35 amps. D.C. with ⅝ inch cored carbons in perfect alignment, with a well formed crater in correct position, the lamp set at an angle of about 30 degrees, the light rays properly centered on the film in the gate and a fine light on the screen, I notice sections of rainbow-like colors for which I could not account. Can you assist me to ascertain the cause for the appearance of these colors?"

Answer: The circle of light thrown on to the gate from the condensing lenses is usually surrounded with a ring of rainbow colors. It is possible you are getting some of these on to the screen. Re-adjust your arc relative to its distance from the condenser. The cause of these colors is the prismatic effect of the lenses. When light passes through a prism it is split up into its primary colors. A lens is like a prism in its effect on rays of light. Unless a lens is specially corrected for this property there will be always a certain amount of edge colors. This phenomenon is known as "chromatic aberration."

NICKELODIA NEWS IN BRIEF

Fullerton, Cal.—Mrs. Browning is having plans and specifications drawn for the erecting of a new moving picture theater here.

Pueblo, Col.—W. E. Lent is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Ocheyedan, Ia.—Mr. Beckwith has purchased the interest of his partner, Mr. Cleveland, in the moving picture theater business here and is now sole owner.

Cleveland, O.—C. F. Sehroeder is having plans drawn for the erection of a new theater to be located at 7700 Lake avenue.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Architect P. M. Christianson is preparing plans for the erection of a new moving picture theater to be located at the corner of Greenfield and Eleventh avenues.

Denver, Col.—The Iris Amusement Company has purchased the property at 1716 Curtis street, as a site for a new moving picture theater.

Two Harbors, Minn.—J. H. F. Free, of Duluth, is contemplating the erection of a new $25,000 theater here.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Louis Becker has secured a permit for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 909 Jefferson street.

A DISTINCT NOVELTY
"BY THE LIGHT OF THE MOON"
YOU'LL LIKE IT!
RELEASED THURSDAY, MARCH 2d, 1911
YOU'LL SAY IT'S GREAT!
"Rex" (of course!)

Vaudeville
Music

VARIETIES IN MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

BY FRA.

Illustrated
Songs

FAMOUS PUBLISHERS OF POPULAR MUSIC

One of the busiest men in the trade and one whom the representative of this paper found the easiest to approach was Mr. Chas. K. Harris. Seated in his richly furnished private office in the Columbia Theater Building at Forty-seventh Street and Broadway (at which place they have recently located), surrounded by an able force of trained assistants, Mr. Harris modestly, but enthusiastically, told the story of his early successes, how, when a poor boy, he composed his famous "After the Ball," which had a record sale of 1,550,000 copies. "I'm Wearing My Heart Away for You" is another characteristic song of Mr. Harris and one that had an enormous sale. These were followed by other successes, all of which were money-makers for him, and brought cheer and gladness to the hearts of all who heard them. Mr. Harris deserves credit for giving us a class of songs that, besides being a success to him financially, are, as well, a success musically—he has created a standard of ballads that have character and are, therefore, "Harris" in quality.

CHAS. K. HARRIS

If space would permit, we would like to write more, but the intent of these articles are only to make our readers better acquainted with the famous publishers and composers, so for the present this must suffice.

Mr. Harris' latest compositions are: "Forgotten Love," "I Want to Buy a Little Love" (a unique little child plaint), "It's Always June When You're in Love," "Suppose I Met You Face to Face?" "He Kissed and Rode Away," "Some Day Your Heart Will Yearn for Me," "Don't Give Me Diamonds, All I Want Is You," "Lindy, Why Can't You Love Your Joe?" "I'm Trying So Hard to Forget You," "I Never Knew Till Now," and "Will the Roses Bloom in Heaven?"

THE OLD FOURTEENTH STREET SHOWS UP IN BROOKLYN

THE NEW OLYMPIC

There isn't a soul, except a fried sole, that gets loose on Fourteenth Street that has not struck a crowd on the sidewalk west of Sixth Avenue. A great, big four and six deep conglomeration of women and men waiting to get into James Wesley Rosenquest's show at the Old Fourteenth Street Theater. A theater rich in memories and yet not a dead one, because today's show is an honor to the old-time shows.

James Wesley Rosenquest, for over twenty-five years, has been an honored and honorable figure in theatrical circles. He gives a clean and up-to-date show for ten cents, and thousands who never miss a weekly turn will bear me out in this.

Now he's come to my own burgh, Brooklyn, the old Hyde & Behman house, the Court, on Adams Street, next Monday, will be James Wesley Rosenquest's Olympic. What he's done in Manhattan he's going to do in Brooklyn. The next time I meet an auto coming off the bridge at a 70-mile gait I'll know that's Bert or Jack Driscoll.

James Wesley Rosenquest is an old Brooklynite, and he's got to make the Olympic as good as the Fourteenth Street, and if I know James Wesley Rosenquest, and I think I do, his Brooklyn house will be as great, big, rattling success as the Manhattan one. "Here's how, boys!"

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATER

Collins & Riley. Costume and straight—good.

Dave Lubin & Co. in the Southern skit, "A Humming Coon." Black-face with their own scenery that "got over."

Hazel & Hazel. Comediennes. Two women in a hobble skirt stunt. Liked by the audience.

Woodford's Educated Animals. Dogs, monkeys and pony presenting Consul II, the Man Monkey. Upon return the hit of the bill and get the "big hand."

Gertrude Dion-Magill, in the comedy sketch, "Oh! You Steve." Cast: Mr. Baker, Jas. Ryan; Mrs. Baker, Gertrude Dion-Magill; The Boarder, Frank Sargent. Place—New York City. Time—Present. Along the ordinary lines.

LaMaize Quirl & Tom. Comedy acrobats. Three men in slap-stick who get their stunt over the lights.

KEITH & PROCTOR'S UNION SQUARE THEATER

May Wentworth. Piano and singing. Just as welcome and just as good as ever, and that's going some. A fine presence and a stylish dresser. Her piano arrangement introducing "The Lost Chord" good; her rendition of "In the Garden of My Heart" with "Without You" got over.

Dreano and Goodwin. Man and woman, jokes and antics. The woman is well-dressed and dances to please. Three bows.

Eddie Foyer. Topical songs and conversations. His rendering, in costume, of "The Black Sheep," struck home—hard.

Harrigan, Giles & Co. Comedy sketch. Man—Helven—and two women. Laughs and applause.

Mayer & Hyde. A well-dressed pair, man and woman. Jokes and singing. Bow.

LaSalle & Lind. Clubs. Two young fellows well appearing in their white flannels. The club work was well and cleanly done and got lots of applause.

Perkins, Barker & Fanning. Singing and piano. Three well and tastily dressed young girls who all sing, one playing the piano. The turn was a dainty one and pleased the audience.

Williams & Rogers. A man and a woman in a sketch which I dubbed "A Pair of Them." Enter young lady into room, looks around, hears a noise, skips behind a screen. Enter burglar, who discovers girl. He demands money; she says her husband has lost every cent. Burglar is touched and wants to help her. She so wheedles him that she gets his pistol and then, exhorting him to lead a better life, she turns out his pockets and he is glad to go. She then proceeds to loot the room, querying, "Wonder who lives in this joint?" The sketch has the germ of possibilities. General presentation satisfied the audience.

UNIQUE

Frances Scott. High-class vocalist. Went good.

Brown & Brown. Two kids in an act which "got over" with a hurrah.

Hyland & Farmer. Two sisters in character changes who got all sorts of applause.

Jack Hallahan. Eccentric comedian; all right.

Howard & Alono. Novelty character changes. Rounded out an all-feature bill.

Rhoda Bernard. Character singing comedienne; featured; good.

Hunter & Chappell. Colored entertainers. Flat and flabby.

The Silbers. Singers, operatic selections; miserere, good.

Ritter & Bovey. Singing and dancing.

Peter McLeod. Impersonator. Song and dance. The "big hand" of the bill.

THE DEWEY

Wells & Williams. A pair that "got over."

Marie Tyler. A singer.

Gladys Wilbur. She is just as good as she was the last time I heard her sing.

Sam Edwards & Co. Featured.

Laurie & Alleane. Singing, talking and dancing; all worth seeing and hearing.

The Lyric Four. Three chappies and a black face. Pleased the audience.

The Gallaties. A couple of Italians, man and a woman, in selections. I've seen them before; as to their Italian I suppose they thought we didn't understand; their singing was, as before, a yelp fortissimo, a quarter of a tone out. Sing piano, and keep time and then—passable. This turn, till musically improved, must not insult any audience.

Dwhar and Sommetiery. A couple of colored folk.

THE CITY THEATER, 14th STREET

"The people know we're here," said Ben Leo, the manager, to me as we stood chatting in the theater. He spoke in the bright, cheery way that a man does when things are humming. "You bet your life they do," quoth me, as I looked at that, architecturally, fine house, with a big crowd in the seats and a well-staged and cleverly acted turn. My vaudeville criticism began with Lottie Collins and "Tarara-boom-de-ay" in London a few years ago. Since then seen a few things in Paris, Petersburg, Dresden, etc., and wish to remark this theater for vaudy is A-1.

Rogers' Ariel Dogs. The stage settings A-1, the man well dressed. The whole turn with his tiny doggies and their stunts is clean, clever and capable.

Walter Percival & Co.

Hallett & Stack.

Florence Modena & Co.

Dave Lynn.

Spiegel & Dunn. Pass it on—to the ladies.

Bell Boy Trio. A good stunt.

Bartholdi's Cockatoos. A good, clean first act.

Poole and Lane. Sharpshooters. Clean and striking act.

John F. O'Reilly. Quiet gentleman monologue and singing. Very good.

Kelly & Curtis. Man and woman, singing. Three changes. Stunning dresses and "all to the merry."

Budd's Inferno. This is clear out of the rut. There is a gay young spark who makes up and finds himself dead and in inferno. There Mephistopheles and Peaches, a charming young lady, and aforesaid "spark," keep the house laughing. The eye-opener at the end brought down the house and was of the novelty kind that just fills and rounds out a rattling good bill. Curtains 1-2-3-4, etc.

KEENEY'S THEATER

That the monster vaudeville bill is a success at Keeney's Third Avenue was seen by the jammed houses all this week, and Manager Edward J. McMahon is using every endeavor to keep the bill in the A-1 rank. Among the main attractions were the following:

The Keeneyscope. Four reels of the latest pictures.

Buckley and Anderson. Comedy musicians.

Dick and Dolly Merriman. The clever laugh-makers.

The Royos & Loring Co. In their merry farce, "The Jokers."

Lucille Savoy. Original Parisian art posing and singing novelty, with very beautiful and clever electrical effects, under the expert manipulation of Mr. Walter E. Newport.

McPhee and Hill. The clown and the lazy man.

Leona & Dale in "A Lesson in Opera."

Lewis Sisters. Singers, dancers and musicians.

Empire State Four. Clever comedians.

Gilmore & Castle. Blackface comedians.

King & King. Comedy bicyclists.

FIFTH AVENUE

Amongst the attractions is a man that laid in the bygone around Los Angeles. The scenery has been made for this production and the whole thing, from surroundings, ought to be a "hit." The playlet is entitled "In Old California," by Mrs. Elmer Woodbury."

MANHATTAN OPERA HOUSE

Frank Fogarty, an old favorite, is the headliner. Howard & North; Stepp, Medlinger and King; Nicholas Sisters; George B. Reno & Co.; Hal Merritt; A. O. Duncan and Benson and others.

THE BRONX

The blackface comedy stars, McIntyre & Heath, in their latest sketches. "Props," by Billy Van and the Beaumont Sisters, is another headliner; Kelly & Keni; Leon Rogee; Brown & Blyler; Claude & Fannie Usher and the Diaz Monkeys.

HAMMERSTEIN'S VICTORIA

The first appearance of Harry Kelly, a one-time comedy musical star, in a first appearance on the vaudeville stage; Elita Proctor Otis in one-act comedy sketch; Al. Johnson & Co.; Ellie & McKenna; Mr. & Mrs. Mark Murphy; Phina & Co.; the Three Dolce Sisters; the Three Ravens and the Juggling De Lysie Sisters.

EDEN MUSEE

Besides the moving pictures, a new group entitled, "Washington Entering Trenton," will be shown to add a patriotic touch to a strong bill.

BROOKLYN

THE GRAND

McMahon's "Watermelon Girls" in plantation pastimes; Monte O'Brien; Johnson, Davenport & Lorella; Aldert & Evans; McHugh & Tyrons; the Yashomite Japs, a very clean, clever and taking turn; Wilson & Ford and the Marvellous Fords, etc. Manager Springer feels that his big bill is making a hit and he's going to keep it going.

FULTON

The popularity of this house is unflagging; good comedy and music are what people demand, and are the house's slogan. John C. Rice & Sally Cohen in "The Path of the Primrose" and Earl Flynn, with bis American Beautics, are the headliners; Axtell, Lee & Heine in "Two Men, a Girl and a Dog;" the Banjo Fiends; the Musical Stoddards, good; Dill & Ward, singing and dancing; Blair & Blair, character change artists and others.

GREENPOINT

A new sketch, "He Tried to Be Nice," by Edward Abeles, well known as "Monty" in "Brewster's Millions;" "On a Side Street," a New York sketch by Homer Miles & Co.; the Chadwick Trio; Bernard & Dorothy Granville and the Avon Comedy Four in "The New Teacher," and others.

EMPIRE

"The Passing Parade" is the feature. Sam Sidman, master of fun makers, is rollicking along as usual. The house is crowded and Brooklynites in the neighborhood say things are humming.

JONES' THEATER

Under the Loew regime this well-known theater known as "the crowded" house, keeps up a long and ever varying bill which, with the pictures, please our folks.

PAYTON'S BIJOU THEATER

Since the change the house seems to have become even more popular amongst the folks round the Borough Hall section. A rattling good vaudeville bill and the pictures count for dollars at the box office.

FOX'S FOLLY

The bill here is just what suits that section off Broadway. There are "no flics" on that house. Somebody is watching public opinion pretty closely down there, as the bill shows.

OUT OF TOWN

BOSTON

Keith's. Maclyn Arbuckle in "The Welcher," a laughing hit; the Courtiers; Bert Levy, good; Felix Adler, joyous; T. H. Davies & Co., satisfactory; Wentworth, Vesta & Teddy, two acrobats and a dog, filled the bill; Tempest and Sunshine, all right; Three Livingstons in bar work, excellent.

Orpheum. Barrons & Mile; Clara Nelson; Franklin Ardell & Co.; Kline & Clifton, and Mason & Bart.

PHILADELPHIA

Keith's. Bill got over A to Z. Carrie De Mar made a hit in "Three Days on the Ocean;" Lonesome Flossie in clever "Chantecler" turn; Marion Murny & Co. in the playlet "The Prima Donna's Honeymoon," made good in a well-dressed presentation.

Victoria. Amgozo, the African Tricking, featured, amongst the support the Bartons, singing and talking, got over; Crowley & Crowley, singing and dancing, fair; Gere & Delaney, well dressed, roller skating act, good; Farlo & Farlo, nothing doing; Whitely & Bell, talking and singing, got the hand, and Bolo, good juggling.

MUSIC

SHAPIRO

Cristo Columbo. Thomas J. Gray and Fred Fischer. This is a poor "Guinea" worked to death with alarming results.

That's Going Some for You. Alfred Bryan and Fred Fischer. A pair of us have laid our heads together and all we can say is let it pass.

M. WITMARK & SONS, NEW YORK

"Naughty Marietta"

Victor Herbert's sparkling opera, "Naughty Marietta," the book of which is by Rida Johnson Young, reached the century mark of its run at the New York Theater on Friday of last week, when Mr. Herbert conducted the orchestra in celebration of the event. The house was crowded. "Naughty Marietta" is one of the season's triumphs. It is a work of dignity, beauty, richness and imaginative powers. A word of praise is due the vivacious little prima donna, Emma Trentini, who puts into her work so much of the personal and sympathietic that it has endeared her to New York playgoers; Orville Harold, the favorite tenor, in his solo, "I'm Falling in Love With Someone," is one of the hits of the opera. The numbers atracting attention are "Naughty Marietta," "Sweet Mystery of Life," "'Neath the Southern Moon," "It Never, Never Can Be Love," "Italian Street Song," "Live for To-day," "The Sweet By-and-by," "If I Were Anybody Else But Me," "You Marry a Marionette," "It's Pretty Soft for Simon." The instrumental numbers are "Dream Melody," (Intermezzo), a set of waltzes, selections and score. The music of the complete production is published by M. Witmark & Sons.

OUT OF TOWN

PORTLAND, MAINE

Next fall the Keith's Theater will be given over to vaudeville. This season the stock policy was tried. Popular prices will prevail next season, the scade running from ten to thirty cents.

ALTOONA, PA.

New house will open March devoted to moving pictures and vaudeville.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

There are now about five picture houses playing stock here. (In view of what has been said in these columns anent cognate subjects this small item must be given its full value.)

HARRISBURG, PA.

Orpheum. Here are daylight pictures; Lew & Welch, got over; Herman Meyers got the laugh; Pauline Perry & Co., the hit.

HARTFORD, CONN.

Hartford. Lew Welch & Co., the thing; Marie Laurent, good, and Young Bros. got the applause.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

Grand. Here DeVere & Roth were IT; Kroneman Bros. pleased, and Lawrence & Edwards raised Cain.

NEWARK, N. J.

Proctor's. Things are going good. Conlon, Steele & Carr made a hit; the Devlin Sisters were "muchly" good; Tom Mahoney got the laugh, and the Dagwell Sisters filled the bill.

MUSICAL NOTES

A dancing trio becoming very popular is the act billed under the name of Young Brothers and Veronica. The clever dancing, charming personalities and beautiful costumes of the trio always please their audience. They are featuring Henry and Branen's new flirtation song, "I'm Looking for a Nice Young Fellow."

Burns and Lawrence, known as the Rathskeller Duo, are presenting a singing specialty. Bennett and Lewis' "spotlight" number, "My! What a Funny Little World This Is," is one of the features of their act. Tommy Ward, the eccentric dancing comedian, is featuring Jeff T. Branen's comic song, "If I Could See as Far Ahead as I Can Behind."

Miss Agnes Truesdale is a very busy girl these days. She presents a kid act of the extra good sort and opens her act with Henry and Branen's "I'm Looking for a Nice Young Fellow."

Messrs. LeMaire and Fisher. "My! What a Funny Little World This Is" is one of the features of their act. They have been singing this number for over two months. Hello, Sterns!

Ever think of installing a pipe organ in your theatre? If so you should read

The RECENT REVOLUTION IN ORGAN BUILDING

By George L. Miller, F. R. C. O.

A non-technical description of all the modern inventions in this line.

Price 25c., postpaid, from

CHARLES FRANCIS PRESS,
30 West 13th St., New York.

SALES COMPANY

The following films have been released week of February 27th by Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.:

Feb. 27	Manly Man (Imp.)
Feb. 27	Sheriff's Sweetheart (American)	772
Feb. 27	Silence System (American)	228
Feb. 27	All for Gold (Yankee)
Feb. 27	Punch (Eclair)	595
Feb. 27	Beware of the Bomb (Eclair)	370
Feb. 28	A Warrior's Faith (Bison)
Feb. 28	Little Mother (Thanhouser)
Feb. 28	The Call of the Heart (Powers)
Mar. 1	Tweedle Dum Aviator (Ambrosio)
Mar. 1	War of the Cossacks (Ambrosio)
Mar. 1	The Professor's Romance (Nestor)
Mar. 1	A Western Girl's Choice (Champ.)
Mar. 1	The Trump Card (Reliance)
Mar. 2	The Dynamiters
Mar. 2	Cuban Army Manoeuvres
Mar. 2	College Chums (American)	1000
Mar. 2	Nini's Doll (Itala)
Mar. 2	By the Light of the Moon (Rex)
Mar. 3	A Costly Pledge (Solax)
Mar. 3	Jack's Lucky Horseshoe (Lux)
Mar. 3	On Their Honeymoon (Lux)
Mar. 3	Owanee's Great Love (Bison)
Mar. 3	Stage Struck (Thanhouser)
Mar. 4	His Rival Servant (Gt. Nor.)	987
Mar. 4	Home, Sweet Home (Powers)
Mar. 4	From the Valley of Shadows (Reliance)
Mar. 4	Cato and the Flag (Itala)
Mar. 4	Foolshead More than Usual (Itala)

INDEPENDENT FILMS

The following films have been released week of February 20th by the Empire Film Co., 150 East 14th Street, New York:

Feb. 20	Pictureland (Imp)	999
Feb. 20	Heart of a Warrior (Eclair)	700
Feb. 20	Hospital for Small Animals (Eclair)	262
Feb. 20	A Lifetime for Penance (Yankee)	910
Feb. 20	The College Spendthrift (Amer.)	1000
Feb. 21	A Mexican Centennial (Powers)	361
Feb. 21	What Would You Do? (Powers)	609
Feb. 21	For Washington (Thanhouser)	1000
Feb. 22	Tweedledum is Shy (Ambrosio)	426
Feb. 22	Redeeming Angel (Ambrosio)	424
Feb. 22	The Old Man and Jim (Champion)	983
Feb. 22	His Father's House (Nestor)	998
Feb. 22	Plain Tale (Reliance)	975
Feb. 23	Strategy (American)	990
Feb. 23	Artful Kate (Imp)	1000
Feb. 23	Little Souls (Itala)	770
Feb. 23	Story of a Prayer Day (Rex)	895
Feb. 24	The Fate of Jo Dorr (Bison)	990
Feb. 24	A Child's Prayer	950
Feb. 24	Love's Test (Solax)	1000
Feb. 24	A Newsboy Hero (Thanhouser)	1000
Feb. 24	The Woman Who Dared (Yankee)	1000
Feb. 25	His Great Duty (Gt. Northern)	900
Feb. 25	Foolshead's Present (Itala)	500
Feb. 25	The Havana Cigar (Itala)	500
Feb. 25	Across the Mexican Border (Pow.)	975
Feb. 25	Reliance	985

In writing to Advertisers please mention

THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS

GREAT REDUCTIONS

Motion Picture Machines $35 Up.
Accessories, Supplies, etc.
Pathe's Passion Play (as new). Low price.
Send for Supplement 33 containing many Bargains.

HARBACH & CO.,
809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

A DISTINCT NOVELTY

"BY THE LIGHT OF THE MOON"

YOU'LL LIKE IT!
RELEASED THURSDAY, MARCH 2d, 1911

YOU'LL SAY IT'S GREAT!
"Rex" (of course!)

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

		Feet
Dec.	28—Drama of the Engine Driver and Grandfather's Pipe
Jan.	4—The Wall Partition	500
Jan.	4—Trials of Tweedledum as a Policeman	500
Jan.	18—Blue Domino's Disguise and Tailor's Queer Ad
Jan.	25—A Wife Calvary and Tweedledum Cash
Feb.	1—Return from Seaside Bathing
Feb.	1—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports
Feb.	8—Tweedledum as a Detective
Feb.	15—The Demon	900

AMERICAN.

Jan.	30—The Genius (Com.-Dr.)	965
Feb.	2—The Mission in the Desert (Dr.)	985
Feb.	6—A Pittsburg Millionaire (Dr.)	985
Feb.	9—On the Installment Plan (Com.)	560
Feb.	9—Too Much Aunt (Com.)	430
Feb.	13—Quiet Evening at Home (Com.)	985
Feb.	16—In the Land of Cactus (Dr.)	980
Feb.	20—The College Spendthrift (Dr.)	990
Feb.	23—Strategy (Com.-Dr.)	980
Feb.	27—The Sheriff's Sweetheart (Dr.)	800
Feb.	27—The Silence System (Com.)	200
Mar.	2—College Chums	975
Mar.	6—Hypnotizing a Hypnotist (Com.)	615
Mar.	6—Memories (Dr.)	375
Mar.	9—The Rich and the Poor (Dr.)	1000

ATLAS FILM CO.

Nov.	30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.)
Dec.	7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.)
Dec.	14—Brothers (Dec.)
Dec.	21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.)
Dec.	28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)
Jan.	4—A Straw Ride (Dr.)
Jan.	11—A Letter to the Stork (Dr.)
Jan.	18—A City Wolf (Dr.)
Jan.	25—Irish Hearts
Feb.	1—The Surgeon and the Girl
Feb.	1—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.)
Feb.	8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.)
Feb.	15—Coals of Fire

CAPITOL FILM CO.

Sept.	10—The Messenger Boy's Sweetheart.
Sept.	17—Round Trip $5.98
Sept.	24—Bill Mason's Ride	700
Oct.	8—All's Fair in Love and War
Oct.	15—A Shot in the Night
Oct.	22—The Locket (Dr.)

CHAMPION.

Dec.	21—His Mother (Dr.)	950
Dec.	28—The Golden Gates (Dr.)	950
Jan.	4—Days of the Early West (Dr.)	950
Jan.	11—Bill's Widow (Dr.)	950
Jan.	18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.).
Jan.	18—Why He Went West (Dr.)	950
Feb.	1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.)
Feb.	8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.)	950
Feb.	15—Her Three Proposals (Com.)	950
Feb.	22—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.)	950
Mar.	1—A Western Girl's Choice (Dr.)	950
Mar.	8—The Vindication of John	950

CINES.
Eclair.

Oct.	21—The Last of the Savelli Dr.)	800
Oct.	28—Tontolini in Love (Com.)	480
Oct.	28—The Pretty Dairy Maid (Dr.)	480
Nov.	4—A Wooden Sword (Dr.)	800

COLUMBIA

Oct.	29—In the Web (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.)
Nov.	19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	26—Stage Coach Tom (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	3—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.)
Dec.	31—Trapped (Dr.)
Jan.	7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.)

ECLAIR

Dec.	26—The Lock-Keeper (Dr.)	537
Dec.	26—The Fear of Fire (Com.)	390
Jan.	2—The Great Medal Competition (Com.)	485
Jan.	2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.)	480
Jan.	9—Mother's Portrait (Dr.)	930
Jan.	16—The Jealousy of Sosthenes Ramulot (Com.)	478
Jan.	16—My Wife's Hat (Com.)	482
Jan.	30—The European Lunch
Jan.	30—The Elusive Robber
Feb.	6—Doctor Against His Will (Dr.)	984
Feb.	13—Mr. Faddleaway is on Strike (Com.)	522
Feb.	13—The Elixir of Bravery	424
Feb.	20—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.)	683
Feb.	20—Hospital for Small Animals (Spec.)	286
Feb.	27—Punch	595
Feb.	27—Beware of the Bomb (Com.)	370
Mar.	6—King Phillip the Fair and the Templars	975

GREAT NORTHERN.

		Feet
Dec.	17—Dickey's Courtship (Com.)
Dec.	24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.)
Dec.	31—The Scarecrow (Dr.)
Dec.	31—Bear Hunting (Sc.)
Jan.	7—The Red Light (Dr.)
Jan.	14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.)
Jan.	21—The Trunk Mystery
Jan.	28—Triumph of Intelligence	391
Jan.	28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done (Com.)
Feb.	4—The Criminal Chief's Capture
Feb.	11—Found Again (Dr.)
Feb.	18—The Life of a Muschik
Feb.	18—The False Alarm
Feb.	25—His Great Duty (Dr.)

IMP.
Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Dec.	29—Unreasonable Jealousy (Dr.)	990
Jan.	2—The Wise Druggist (Dr.)	995
Jan.	5—Reunited (Dr.)	995
Jan.	9—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.)	998
Jan.	12—The Empty Shell (Dr.)	995
Jan.	16—Melody	995
Jan.	19—His First Patient (Dr.)	500
Jan.	19—The Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship (Dr.)	500
Jan.	30—Maid or Man
Feb.	2—The Mix-up
Feb.	2—An Imaginary Elopement
Feb.	6—At the Duke's Command (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	9—The Mirror (Com.)	500
Feb.	9—When the Cat's Away (Com.)	500
Feb.	13—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	16—The Convert (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	20—Pictureland	1000
Feb.	23—Artful Kate (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	27—A Manly Man (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	2—Army Manoeuvres in Cuba (Edu.)	500
Mar.	2—The Dynamiters (Com.)	500

ITALA

Dec.	22—Who Was the Culprit? (Com.)
Dec.	24—Greediness Spoiled Foolshead's Christmas (Com.)
Dec.	29—The Rustic
Dec.	31—Norwegian Water Falls	500
Dec.	31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day	500
Jan.	5—Antonio Toscarino	900
Jan.	7—Foolshead as Inspector of Hygiene	900
Jan.	12—Joanna of Braganza	900
Jan.	14—The Recall	900
Jan.	19—A Sad Fascination
Jan.	21—Visit of a Friend
Jan.	26—The Revenging Picture
Jan.	28—My Son Is Guilty
Feb.	2—The Village Coachman
Feb.	4—The Feast of Foolshead
Feb.	9—John Milton	900
Feb.	11—Foolshead at the Kinematograph	900
Feb.	16—The Fatal Charm	900
Feb.	18—Who Will Eat the Turkey	900
Feb.	23—Little Souls	770
Feb.	25—Foolshead Present
Feb.	25—Havana Cigar

LUX.
By Prieur.

Dec.	30—Aunt Julia's Portrait (Com.)	547
Dec.	30—Tim Writes a Poem (Com.)	375
Jan.	6—How They Tricked Father (Com.)	498
Jan.	6—The Rival Engine Drivers (Dr.)	367
Jan.	13—Bill as a Jockey (Com.)	465
Jan.	13—That Is My Name (Com.)	438
Jan.	22—A Dilemna
Jan.	22—Faithful Furniture
Jan.	27—Willie Goes Cycling
Jan.	27—Infamous Son
Feb.	3—Back to the Old Homestead
Feb.	10—The Orphan's Friend (Dr.)	711
Feb.	10—That Horse Did Run (Com.)	272
Feb.	17—Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Dr.)	639
Feb.	17—Matilda Lovestruck (Com.)	321
Feb.	24—A Child's Prayer (Dr.)	534
Feb.	24—Matilda Chased (Com.)	354
Mar.	3—Jack's Lucky Horseshoe (Dr.)	530
Mar.	3—On Their Honeymoon (Com.)	440

NESTOR FILM CO.

Nov.	16—The Ranchman's Bride (Dr.)
Nov.	23—A Deal in Indians	1000
Nov.	30—Valley Folks
Dec.	7—The Conquering Hero
Dec.	14—The Pilgrim (Dr.)
Dec.	21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.)
Dec.	28—Elda of the Mountains (Dr.)
Jan.	4—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.)
Jan.	11—Sleepy Hollow (Dr.)	950
Jan.	18—Their New Minister (Dr.)
Jan.	25—The Man in 23
Jan.	25—New Minister
Feb.	1—The Bridal Trail
Feb.	8—The Transgressor
Feb.	15—The Light Beyond
Feb.	22—His Father's House (Dr.)
Mar.	1—The Professor's Romance (C.-D.)	990
Mar.	8—In the Commissioned Ranks

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
("Bison")

		Feet
Jan.	6—A Savage Girl's Devotion	900
Jan.	10—An Indian Trapper's Prize	900
Jan.	13—The Creek Claim	900
Jan.	17—Texas Ted's Defense	900
Jan.	20—The Redskin's Secret	950
Jan.	24—Red Man's Wrath	900
Jan.	27—Trials of Bud Brown	900
Jan.	30—A Tough Tenderfoot
Feb.	3—A Squaw's Bravery
Feb.	7—The Half Breed's Plan
Feb.	9—John Milton (Dr.)
Feb.	10—The Salted Mine (Dr.)
Feb.	14—The Deputy's Honor	900
Feb.	17—The Warrior's Squaw	900
Feb.	21—The Way of a Red Man (Dr.)
Feb.	24—The Fate of Joe Dorr (Dr.)

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Jan.	17—A Montana Love Story (Com.)
Jan.	17—Lovers' Trials (Com.)
Jan.	21—A Noble Heart (Dr.)
Jan.	24—Wife's Love and Little Dorothy	980
Jan.	28—Masquerader	960
Jan.	31—For My Pal
Feb.	4—His First Case
Feb.	4—The Cattle King of Arizona (Dr.)
Feb.	7—Freddie's New Shoes (Com.)
Feb.	11—A Trip Through Mexico (Sc.)
Feb.	14—An Unforseen Complication (Com.)
Feb.	18—Under Southern Skies (Dr.)
Feb.	21—What Would You Do (Com.)
Feb.	25—Across the Mexican Border (Dr.)
Feb.	28—The Call of the Heart (Dr.)	950
Mar.	4—Home Sweet Home (Dr.)	950

RELIANCE

Jan.	28—The Last Laugh	975
Feb.	1—A Brass Button
Feb.	4—The Command from Galilee
Feb.	8—The School Ma'am's Courage (C.-D.)
Feb.	11—The Little Avenger
Feb.	15—Three Men (Dr.)
Feb.	18—Souls Courageous	900
Feb.	22—A Plain Tale
Feb.	25—Ever the Accuser

REVIER

Jan.	4—For Better Or Worse (Dr.)
Jan.	11—The Goosecreek Claim (Dr.)
Jan.	18—For the Child's Sake (Dr.)	500
Jan.	18—You Try It (Com.)	500

REX

Feb.	16—A Heroine of '76 (Dr.)	910
Feb.	23—The Story of a Prayer Rug (Dr.)

SOLAX COMPANY

Jan.	20—A Reporter's Romance (Dr.)
Jan.	27—His Best Friend (Dr.)
Feb.	3—Ring of Love
Feb.	10—Mixed Pets (Com.)
Feb.	17—Corinne in Dollyland (Com.)
Feb.	24—Love's Test (Dr.)
Mar.	3—A Costly Pledge (Com.)
Mar.	8—Out of the Arctic (Dr.)

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Jan.	3—The Pasha's Daughter
Jan.	6—Baseball and Bloomers
Jan.	10—Everybody Saves Father (Com.)
Jan.	10—The Only Girl in Camp (Com.)
Jan.	13—The Vote that Counts (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	24—When Love Was Blind	900
Jan.	27—Prompt Payment
Jan.	27—Stealing a Ride	900
Jan.	31—Only in the Way
Feb.	3—Adrift
Feb.	7—Westerner and the Earl
Feb.	10—The Norwood Necklace
Feb.	14—For Her Sake (Dr.)
Feb.	17—Checkmate (Dr.)
Feb.	21—The Patriot Maid of '76 (Dr.)
Feb.	21—For Washington
Feb.	24—A Newsboy Hero
Feb.	28—The Litle Mother (Dr.)
Mar.	3—Stage Struck (Dr.)

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Dec.	30—The Missing Bridegroom (Dr.)
Jan.	6—The Royal Wishbone (Dr.)
Jan.	2—Mrs. Danver's Divorce
Jan.	9—An Erring Son's Awakening (Dr.)
Jan.	16—The Folks Back Home (Dr.)
Jan.	20—Returned to the Fold (Dr.)
Jan.	30—Taxicab Mystery
Feb.	3—Counting House Mystery
Feb.	6—Foiling the Camorra (Dr.)
Feb.	10—Was She Justified (Dr.)
Feb.	13—Condemned to Death (Dr.)
Feb.	17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.)
Feb.	20—A Life-Time Repentance (Dr.)
Feb.	24—The Woman Who Dared (Dr.)
Feb.	27—All for Gold (Dr.)
Mar.	3—The Abduction of Parson Jones (Com.)

(Continued from page 15)

return. He gets into all kinds of scrapes, but, showing the telegram, makes even "cops" and bankers help him. The back of the telegram form only is shown each time—watch the fingers that hold it, especially the square nails and how it gets more and more dilapidated—a little something his wife had in her hands before he went told what we're not supposed to know. The cause of all the racket appears at the last—a first born baby. A good, clean, laugh-getting film that "got over" good and hard.

An Imitator of Blondin—(Pathe).—A lazy fellow reads of a prize for tight rope walking and proceeds to experiment on everything that looks like a rope, with the inevitable "chaser."

Max Has the Boxing Fever—(Pathe).—The marvelous Max goes to a fight and determines to be a boxer. His own fun is shown as he practices. But the big hit is when he and a friend box in a café on roller skates. This is one long scream.

Jean Rescues—(Vitagraph).—Jean is splendid. The first engaged man a surly brute; that a gentleman should act thus is a film fancy. However, it affords opportunity for the pickled emotion business. The last scene where the girl asserts herself and is happy with a dog, lover and good, old Jean suited the audience.

The Try Out—(Edison).—The synopsis says "this unusual story." After a good many years mixed up with vaudeville folk I think it nothing of the sort. I do think the dressing rooms where the two young folk bewail their failure very unusual. I'll grant that—after sitting in a few dozen. Now I leave the synopsis because after the manner of its kind, it doesn't know what it's writing about. A young fellow writes a sketch, engages a young lady to act with him, who knows as little about the "biz" as he does. He gets it "booked" and that scene is altogether to "the merry." Two people so infatuated as to get in the scene shifters' way on the stage may be fun, it isn't life. At the try out the "audience" in the film showed care in arrangement, and talent in the actors. (By the way, did each one sit in the same place at the success as at the failure?) That the burlesque succeeded is a neat hit at conditions. To criticize Edison is high treason, I know, but I care not. The photography is good, the acting is better; as to the story, somebody better step down from the throne, and if ever vaudeville is again honored by this firm, the said somebody might get "tips" from somebody who knows what the aforesaid somebody most emphatically did not. I presume I must now await my death warrant, No. 000,000. I calmly abide its arrival. This I wrote in my nervousness, not warrant, but "lettre de cachet," that's the proper term, is it not, when somebody extinguishes nobody?

The Sheriff's Sister—(Kalem).—The settings are to be admired. A deserted Mexican wife and her baby find a home in a clergyman's house. The Mexican husband, posing as a bachelor, makes love to the sheriff's sister. The sheriff, who has charge of the girl, objects, and shows it. The Mexican vows vengeance and persuades the girl to elope. They go to be married (sic) at the very clergyman's house, where he meets his deserted wife. The girl flies to home and brother. Pretty story of family love, and foiled villainy.

Hearts, Hunger and Happiness—(Pathe).—A right good comedy. A young fellow feels blue. The doctor sees what's the matter but orders him to fast three days. His sweetheart demands his attendance at a birthday feast, where all sorts of fun come about as he slyly puts his food into his neighbor's pockets. This brings about a series of comic happenings, the cause of the sickness is explained—just plain love. The young fellow is a funny fellow and Keith & Proctor's audience thoroughly enjoyed a truly comic reel.

Practical Brook Trout Breeding—(Pathe).—Very full subtitles elucidate the matter. Useful, but not for indiscriminate display.

The Strongest Tie—(Gaumont).—Beautifully staged and produced. A wealthy pair, who have lost a child, wish to adopt one of the children of a couple of poverty stricken fisher folk. Mother love keeps the child; the wealthy mother in her own heart understands it all. The realism of the acting and its vivid touches are of the highest.

Jiggers' Moving Day—(Gaumont).—Luck, photography and a "chaser." Altogether unworthy of Gaumont.

A Woman's Voice—(Essanay).—An artist paints a society lady's picture; they fall in love and are engaged. One morning the lady, feeling herself neglected, calls her lover on the 'phone—early. He is not up and his colored housekeeper answers the call. A woman's voice! Then there is a tempest and the fair lady breaks the engagement. The bewildered artist gets a clue and drags his housekeeper off with him to his charmer's home. Lo! then is all well. Fun well carried out.

Ten Words for Twenty-five Cents—(Essanay).—Founded upon one of the yarns that float around telegraph offices. An excitable lady wants her husband to come, as she's "dying to see" him. Incidentally a most delightful, unspoilt, childish child is introduced. The wire is received, the husband tears off, goes through all manner of happenings, getting out of each by showing the "wire," almost a duplicate of Selig's "Too Much Mother-In-Law" on this point. The man arrives at home, with a doctor, expecting to find a dying wife and, behold, she's placidly happy with the child. You see—the operator, in order to make the necessary ten words, cut out the last three words from the sentence, "I am dying to see you." Now will you fellows at the key in the Western Union and Postal be good! The moving picture firms have got after your fairy tales. Was it a C. N. D. man who wickedly deluded an innocent scenario expert? Fie upon you! It makes an amusing film, though, and it's well done. As to the Selig end, pure telepathy.

When the Cat's Away—(Imp).—By the way, the film reads "when the cat's away," neither sense nor grammar. The story about a janitor sub-letting rooms when the owner is away is threadbare, had an almost identical release some months ago. Of course, the owners return and find their rooms occupied. The acting is good, especially of the wife, and the way the end is handled possibly justifies the means.

BEGINNING WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8th

2-Solax-EVERY WEEK-2

WE WILL RELEASE

WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY

AND WHEN IT'S A Solax THAT'S ALL YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT OUR NEW WEDNESDAY RELEASE "OUT OF THE ARCTIC"—March 8th

We have chosen this timely subject for our new Wednesday Release, well knowing that this will be just the sort of picture that the exhibitor will ask for AND---ONCE HE USES Solax we are from that time on assured of his patronage

NOW COME STRONG FOR THIS ARCTIC PICTURE
'TWILL BE THE BEST PRODUCTION OF THE WEEK

RELEASE MARCH 3d—"A COSTLY PLEDGE"—(Comedy)

Solax Company

147 FOURTH AVENUE, NEW YORK

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH.

		Feet
Jan.	5—When a Man Loves	998
Jan.	9—The Italian Barber (Com.)	993
Jan.	12—The Midnight Marauder (Dr.)	392
Jan.	12—Help Wanted (Com.)	605
Jan.	16—His Trust (Dr.)	996
Jan.	19—His Trust Fulfilled (Dr.)	999
Jan.	23—Fate's Turning (Dr.)	998
Jan.	26—The Poor Sick Men (Com.)	991
Jan.	30—A Wreath of Orange Blossoms (Dr.)	993
Feb.	2—Three Sisters (Dr.)	997
Feb.	6—Heart Beats of Long Ago (Dr.)	997
Feb.	9—Priscilla's Engagement Kiss (Com.)	997
Feb.	13—What Shall We Do With Our Old (Dr.)	994
Feb.	16—Fisher Folks (Dr.)	998
Feb.	20—The Diamond Star (Dr.)	996
Feb.	23—His Daughter (Dr.)	997

EDISON

Dec.	23—A Christmas Carol	1000
Dec.	27—Eldora, the Fruit Girl (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	28—A Family of Vegetarians (Com.)	990
Dec.	30—The Romance of Hefty Burke (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	3—In the Days of Chivalry	1000
Jan.	4—Sleep, Gentle Sleep	990
Jan.	6—The Fire Department of New York City	400
Jan.	6—A Western Night	600
Jan.	10—The Test of Friendship (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	11—The Home of the Seal (Educational)	300
Jan.	11—The Gardener's Ladder (Com.)	700
Jan.	13—The Link that Held (Dr.)	960
Jan.	17—With Interest to Date (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Jan.	18—Uncle's Birthday Gift (Com.)	995
Jan.	20—Mike the Miser (Dr.)	990
Jan.	24—An Eventful Evening (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	25—The Lover and the Count (Com.)	995
Jan.	27—The Black Bordered Letter (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	1—Bumptious as Romeo (Com.)	975
Feb.	3—Selling Old Master (Dr.)	990
Feb.	7—The Doctor (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	8—Two Valentines (Com.)	1000
Feb.	10—His First Commission (Dr.)	990
Feb.	14—The Rajah (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	15—The Ransom of Red Chief (Com.)	975
Feb.	24—The Price of Victory	1000
Feb.	17—A Stage Romance	1000
Feb.	21—The Rival Sculptors	990
Feb.	22—Mr. Bumptious, Detective	990
Feb.	28—The Iron Master	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Dec.	21—The Bad Man's Christmas Gift	975
Dec.	27—Girls Will Be Boys (Com.)	1000
Dec.	31—A Gambler of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	3—The Redeemed Criminal	1000
Jan.	7—The Count and the Cowboys	1000
Jan.	10—The Sophmore's Romance (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	14—The Girl of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	17—His Master's Son (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	21—The Border Ranger (Dr.)	985
Jan.	24—A Sin Unpardonable (Dr.)	998
Jan.	28—The Two Reformations (Dr.)	996
Jan.	31—The Jilted Joker (Com.)	640
Jan.	31—Hank and Lank (Com.)	366
Feb.	4—Carmenita, the Faithful (Dr.)	995
Feb.	7—A Woman's Voice (Com.)	566
Feb.	7—Ten Words for Twenty-five Cents (Com.)	425
Feb.	11—The Bad Man's Downfall (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	14—Getting Sister Married (Com.)	1000
Feb.	18—The Cattleman's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	21—Their Wedding Gift (Com.)	580
Feb.	21—Just as the Clock Struck Nine (C.)	412
Feb.	25—The Outlaw and the Child (Dr.)	1000

GAUMONT

G. Kleine

Dec.	20—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical)	220
Dec.	24—The Old Home (Dr.)	732
Dec.	24—Cain and Abel Biblical)	279
Dec.	27—The Adventuress (Dr.)	995
Dec.	31—The Doctor's Secretary (Dr.)	981
Jan.	3—The Artist's Pay Day	969
Jan.	7—The Woman Wins	945
Jan.	10—A Child's Plea (Dr.)	758
Jan.	10—The Hills of Corsica (Travelogue)	243
Jan.	14—A Simple Rustic Tale (Dr.)	958
Jan.	17—The Sealed Letter (Dr.)	837
Jan.	17—A Water Contest (Educational)	168
Jan.	21—The Kleptomaniac's Repentance (Dr.)	965
Jan.	24—Twilight of a Soldier's Life (Dr.)	945
Jan.	28—The Baby Fortune Hunters (Dr.)	682
Jan.	28—Gorges of the Bourne, France (Travelogue)	293
Jan.	31—At Eventide (Scenic)	173
Jan.	31—The Last Curtain	823
Feb.	4—Jiggers Looks for a Job	537
Feb.	4—Krimmel Waterfalls (Scenic)	435
Feb.	7—Jiggers' Moving Day (Com.)	395
Feb.	11—Napoleon in 1814 (Dr.)	797
Feb.	11—Autumn Leaves (Edu.)	185
Feb.	7—The Strongest Tie	605
Feb.	14—The Reformation of the Suffragettes	665
Feb.	14—Land Marks of Avignon, France	338
Feb.	18—Saul and David	128
Feb.	18—At the End of the Road	838
Feb.	21—The Plot That Failed	815
Feb.	21—Pictures in Chemistry	175
Feb.	25—Paganini and the Countess Beatrice	998
Feb.	28—Matrimonial Epidemic (Com.)	813
Feb.	28—Lafont and Pola's Last Flight	185
Mar.	4—The Tramp's Find	680
Mar.	4—Forbidden Cigarettes	335

KALEM CO.

Dec.	30—The Stranger (Dr.)	1005
Jan.	4—The Bolted Door	975
Jan.	6—The Runaway Engine	955
Jan.	11—For Love of an Enemy (Dr.)	995
Jan.	13—The Heart of an Indian Mother (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	18—Her Chum's Brother (Com.-Dr.)	980
Jan.	20—Robbie and the Redskins (Dr.)	850
Jan.	20—Modern Light Battery in Action	95
Jan.	25—The Secret of the Still (Dr.)	950
Jan.	27—Puritans and Indians (Dr.)	970
Feb.	1—The Sheriff's Sister (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	3—The Trail of the Pomas Charm (Dr.)	1005
Feb.	8—Little Sister (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Feb.	10—The Broken Trail (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	15—Grandmother's War Story (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	17—The Lost Ribbon (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	22—The Open Road (Dr.)	995
Feb.	24—Priscilla and the Pequot (Dr.)	925

LUBIN.

Jan.	2—Art and the Legacy	950
Jan.	5—His Last Parade	390
Jan.	5—A Mix in Masks	600
Jan.	5—The Crimson Scars	980
Jan.	5—Fire! Fire! Fire!	980
Jan.	9—Tag Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.)	935
Jan.	12—The Widow's Choice (Com.)	950
Jan.	16—Will It Ever Come to This? (Com.)	715
Jan.	16—Easy Coin (Com.)	250
Jan.	19—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	23—Father Makes Himself Useful (Com.)	975
Jan.	26—Father Love (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	30—His Bogus Uncle (Com.)	1000
Feb.	2—Age vs. Youth (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	6—A Double Elopement (Com.)	990
Feb.	9—The Petticoat Sheriff (Com.)	1000
Feb.	13—The Show Girl's Strategem (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	16—Getting Even (Com.)	600
Feb.	16—Schultz Has the Smallpox (Com.)	400
Feb.	20—The Test (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	23—Dobbs, the Dauber (Com.)	1000

G. MELIES.

Dec.	1—Pais (Dr.)
Dec.	8—What Great Bear Learned
Dec.	15—Old Norris' Gal
Dec.	22—A Western Welcome	980
Dec.	29—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.)	980
Jan.	12—The Owner of the "L. L." Ranch (Dr.)	980
Jan.	19—Changing Cooks (Com.)	980
Jan.	26—How Mary Met the Cowpunchers (Western Dr.)	980
Feb.	2—Only a Sister (Dr.)	980
Feb.	9—Tony, the Greaser (Dr.)	980
Feb.	16—Billy and His Pal (Dr.)
Feb.	23—My Prairie Flower (Dr.)	980
Mar.	2—In the Hot Lands	960

PATHE.

Jan.	23—Gasoline for a Tonic (Com.)	361
Jan.	25—Saved by Telegraphy (Dr.)	720
Jan.	25—Whiffels' New Sleeves (Com.)	282
Jan.	27—Il Trovatore (Dr.)	964
Jan.	28—Father Against His Will (Com.)	720
Jan.	28—Betty Rolls Along (Com.)	289
Jan.	30—The Escape from the Tuileries (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	1—Hearts, Hunger, Happiness (C.-D.)	722
Feb.	1—Practical Brook Trout Breeding (Edu.)	279
Feb.	3—The Slave's Revolt (Dr.)	722
Feb.	3—Rice Industry in Japan (Edu.)	256
Feb.	4—A Cowboy's Devotedness (Dr.)	922
Feb.	6—Max Has the Boxing Fever (Com.)	561
Feb.	6—An Imitator of Blondin (Com.)	400
Feb.	8—Legally Dead (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	10—The Missing Bride (Dr.)	800
Feb.	10—Review of Chilian Troops (Edu.)	180
Feb.	11—Silver Leaf's Heart (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	13—Betty's Apprenticeship (Com.)	689
Feb.	13—Pineapple Cannery in China (Ind.)	315
Feb.	15—A Western Courtship (Dr.)	715
Feb.	15—The Axoloti (Edu.)	266
Feb.	17—Whiffle's Double (Com.)	499
Feb.	17—A Boy's Wit (Dr.)	462
Feb.	18—Lieut. Scott's Narrow Escape (Dr.)	984
Feb.	4—A Cowboy's Devotedness (Dr.)	922
Feb.	6—Max Has the Boxing Fever (Com.)	561
Feb.	6—An Imitator of Blondin (Com.)	400
Feb.	8—Legally Dead (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	10—The Missing Bride (Dr.)	800
Feb.	10—Review of Chilian Troops (Edu.)	180
Feb.	11—Silver Leaf's Heart (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	20—A Soldier (Dr.)	761
Feb.	20—A Buffalo Hunt (Edu.)	236
Feb.	22—Hubby's Troubles (Com.)	671
Feb.	22—Indo-China Province of Laos (Sc.)	321
Feb.	24—Who Killed Max? (Com.)	689
Feb.	24—An Escape of Gas (Com.)	302
Feb.	25—The Changeling (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	27—Max Makes Music	403
Feb.	27—Pots, Pans and Poetry	531
Mar.	1—Oh! You Clubman	905
Mar.	3—Satan Defeated	750
Mar.	3—Around Constantina, Algeria	200
Mar.	4—Jealousy Foiled	1000

SELIG

Dec.	15—County Fair (Dr.)	1000
Dec.	19—John Dough and the Cherub (Mystical)	1000
Dec.	22—Overland to Fremont	1000
Dec.	26—The Rustlers (Dr.)	990
Dec.	29—Justinian and Theodora (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	2—The Argonauts	1000
Jan.	5—Ramona's Father	1000
Jan.	9—Shadows of the Past (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	12—The Rival Dramatist	1000
Jan.	16—Buddy, the Little Guardian (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	19—An Englishman's Honor (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	23—A Robust Patient (Com.)	1000
Jan.	26—The Spy (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	30—The Little Circus Rider
Feb.	2—The Curse of the Red Man
Feb.	6—Too Much Mother-in-Law
Feb.	9—Thelma
Feb.	12—The Survival of the Fittest
Feb.	16—The Buccaneers
Feb.	20—The Padre
Feb.	27—The Eye of Conscience

URBAN-ECLIPSE

G. Kleine

Nov.	9—Secret of the Cellar (Dr.)	788
Nov.	9—A Trip Through Scotland (Scenic)	217
Nov.	16—The Rival Barons (Dr.)	860
Nov.	16—An Alpine Retreat (Scenic)	142
Nov.	23—Behind a Mask (Dr.)	516
Nov.	23—Nantes (Scenic)	450
Nov.	30—The Return at Midnight	634
Nov.	30—Ramble Through Ceylon	319
Dec.	7—Death of Admiral Coligny	992
Dec.	5—On the Mexican Border
Dec.	8—Reggie's Engagement
Dec.	14—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.)	749
Dec.	14—Scenes in British India (Sc.)	253
Dec.	21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.)	676
Dec.	21—A Chamois Hunt	332
Dec.	28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.)	650
Dec.	28—Coaching in Devonshire, England (Travelogue)	348
Jan.	4—A Lock of Hair	978
Jan.	11—Washed Ashore (Dr.)	670
Jan.	11—Woodcarving in Brienz	320
Jan.	18—By the King's Order (Dr.)	991
Jan.	25—The Sailor's Return (Dr.)	689
Jan.	25—Scenes in Jersey (Travelogue)	296
Feb.	1—Disinherited	990
Feb.	8—On the Border of the Forest (Dr.)	895
Feb.	8—Canadian Iron Center, Port Arthur (Educational)	110
Feb.	15—Catherine Howard	1005
Feb.	22—The Golden Sickle	882
Feb.	22—Felling a Smoke-stack	113
Feb.	22—The Golden Sickle	882
Feb.	22—Felling a Smoke-Stack	113
Mar.	1—Comrades	638
Mar.	1—Beauties of Sans Souci	362

VITAGRAPH

Nov.	25—The Statue Dog
Nov.	26—Love, Luck and Gasoline (Dr.)
Nov.	29—A Woman's Love (Dr.)
Dec.	2—Jack Fat and Jim Slim at Coney Island (Com.)	951
Dec.	3—The Poacher's Wife (Dr.)	1001
Dec.	6—A Tin-Type Romance (Com.)	996
Dec.	9—He Who Laughs Last (Com.)	927
Dec.	10—The Color Sergeant's Horse (Dr.)	978
Dec.	13—The Law and the Man (Dr.)	1010
Dec.	16—Playing at Divorce (Dr.)
Dec.	16—The International Motor Boat Race (Sc.)
Dec.	17—A Dixie Mother (Dr.)
Dec.	20—The Light in the Window	997
Dec.	23—Clancy	995
Dec.	24—Jean and the Waif	989
Dec.	27—In Neighboring Kingdoms (Dr.)	995
Dec.	30—Crazy Apples (Com.)	988
Dec.	31—Where the Wind Blows (Dr.)	987
Jan.	3—All Is Fair In Love and War	973
Jan.	6—The Misses Finch and Nephew Billy	979
Jan.	7—The Old Water Jar	984
Jan.	10—Doctor Cupid (Com.)	987
Jan.	13—Water Lilies (Dr.)	991
Jan.	14—Coward or Hero (Dr.)	975
Jan.	17—Three Men and a Maid (Com.)	1000
Jan.	20—The Girl in the Film (Com.)	963
Jan.	21—Cast Up by the Deep (Dr.)	1001
Jan.	24—It Did Look Suspicious (Dr.)	617
Jan.	24—The Fireman's Parade (Edu.)	383
Jan.	27—Girl of the Mountains (Dr.)	999
Jan.	28—Davy Jones in the South Seas (Com.)	995
Feb.	4—A Queen for a Day	1000
Feb.	7—The Deluge	978
Jan.	31—Jean Rescues	976
Feb.	3—Society and the Man	981
Feb.	10—The League of Mercy (Dr.)	991
Feb.	11—At the White Man's Door (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	14—Consuming Love	975
Feb.	17—When the Light Waned	994
Feb.	18—The New Stenographer (Com.)	994
Feb.	21—A Tale of Two Cities, Part I	1014
Feb.	24—A Tale of Two Cities. Part II	1013
Feb.	25—A Tale of Two Cities, Part III	994

Clean your Films with
THE MORTIMER FILM CLEANER
It does the work while the operator is re-winding the Film.
Send for the BOOKLET.
FIDELITY BLDG., PORTLAND MAINE

Announcement, Advertising, Travelogue, Recitation
and slides for every purpose made to order
GEO. J. GOLDTHORPE & CO.
244 West 14th Street New York

HALLBERG
THE "ECONOMIZER MAN"
SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.
I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.
Free Catalogue No. N 1

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.

PATENTS
"BE INDEPENDENT."
Moving Picture Devices a Specialty.
Charles Lowell Howard
PATENT ATTORNEY
706-707-708 M'Gill Bldg., WASHINGTON D. C.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
REPAIRED
by skilled mechanics at short notice and reasonable prices. Work guaranteed.
Supplies of All Kinds.
CHAS. E. DRESSLER,
388 2nd Ave., City, near 23rd St.
Take elevator.

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars. ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS, 908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., Chicago.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR
Sanitary, Space-saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W
HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

AMERICAN STANDARD DOUBLE DISSOLVING MOVING PICTURE MACHINE. ALL COMPLETE, $200.00
A POWERS No. 5, SLIGHTLY USED,
$100.00
MANHATTAN SLIDE CO.
124 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Here's the Truth in a Nutshell:--

I honestly believe that I have the BEST, the VERY BEST film service organization today in existence. I KNOW that no other concern continues to grow as steadily as I do. I have given the problem how to please exhibitors closer study than anyone else I know of. Everybody in the Laemmle offices, from the office boy up, is working with me hand in hand to make this business still more successful.

Buying more than others — giving closer attention than others— being absolutely on the square with each and every one of you—looking after the little details as much as the big ones all the time— wouldn't it be mighty strange if I weren't the BIGGEST and BEST film renter in the World? Slip me that letter.

CARL LAEMMLE, President
The Laemmle Film Service
HEADQUARTERS:
196-198 Lake Street, CHICAGO
4th Floor, Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnum Street Omaha, Nebr.

FOR SALE—A number of Moving Picture Houses at bargain prices. Write direct to my Minneapolis office.

The Fall of the "Mighty" is an interesting chapter in the history of progress. These fallen "mighties" are usually self-constituted, self-appointed. They never consider that they must ultimately be subjected to the workings of the inexorable law of Rise and Fall, Growth and Decay. The courts of America are powerful influences, and they have told the self-appointed "mighties" of the picture business that they have shaped the destinies of the industry to the benefit of their own pockets long enough. It means INDEPENDENCE for the exhibitor. The bugaboo of patents has been given a severe jolt by the judiciary, and we now again pursue our peaceful task of striving for still better quality. We have several more body blows for the tottering old Scarecrow, which we shall deliver if occasion demands.

To enjoy real INDEPENDENCE you must get this UNEXCELLED PROGRAM.

OUR PROGRAM

MONDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Eclair—Eclair Film Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

TUESDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.

WEDNESDAY
Ambrosio—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Atlas—Atlas Film Co.
Champion—The Champion Film Co.
Nestor—David Horsley.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

THURSDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Rex—Rex M. P. Mfg. Co.

FRIDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Lux—R. Prieur
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.
Solax—Solax Company
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

SATURDAY
Capital—Capital Film Co.
Gt. Northern—Gt. Northern Film Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

111 East 14th Street, New York City

CAUTION

INVESTIGATE BEFORE YOU BUY—NOT AFTER. Examine carefully construction—quality of material—workmanship—finish—and last—pictures. Pictures to continue perfect must be projected perfectly at all times by a Perfect Machine.

THERE IS NO LIMIT TO THE LIFE OF THE MOTIOGRAPH.

IF YOU COULD GO THROUGH OUR FACTORY and see how carefully each part of the MOTIOGRAPH is made you could no longer wonder at the fast growing popularity—among PARTICULAR Users—of the MOTIOGRAPH.

THE MOTIOGRAPH IS ECONOMICAL—The big saving comes after you buy.

THE MOTIOGRAPH CONSTRUCTION—Is superior—You can prove it.

THE MOTIOGRAPH WORKMANSHIP—Is the best—Results prove it.

THE MOTIOGRAPH PICTURE—Is the best—The Pictures prove it.

ENTHUSIASTIC USERS in all parts of the World—Attest to the SUPERIOR QUALITY OF PICTURES AND WORKMANSHIP AND CONSTRUCTION

THE MOTIOGRAPH

MANUFACTURED AND JOBBED BY

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564 West Randolph St., CHICAGO

AGENTS IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES

POWER'S—THE MAGIC NAME

Real, hard, practical advantages for the exhibitor are revealed in Power's Cameragraph No. 6. This may sound like fiction, but the experience of fifteen hundred exhibitors proves beyond contradiction that Power's No. 6

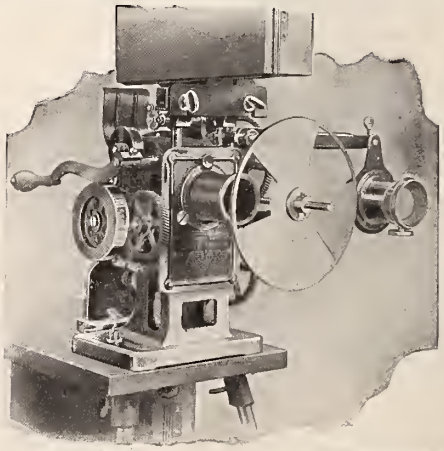
Projects an absolutely steady picture without a trace of flicker

Is the most substantially constructed projecting machine in the world (the only one absolutely guaranteed)

It runs smoother, quieter and longer than any other machine.

There are other reasons why you should use it, but aren't these enough?

Just think it over and you'll agree with us that it "Pays to Purchase a Power's." Full information cheerfully given. Write us for Catalogue D.



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

For thirteen years the leading makers of moving picture machines.

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

American Releases

TWO REELS EACH WEEK

MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS

THE SHERIFF'S SWEETHEART

Release of Monday, February 27th.

A Western story equal if not superior to our recent Western success, "The Mission in the Desert." An extremely original story—astoundingly realistic background—and acting second to none. A masterpiece of the best Western producer in the moving picture business

Release of Thursday, March 2nd.

A college story of friendship, love, and jealousy. Original in plot, treatment, and production. Photography that is clear—flawless—perfect. A Feature film in all that the name implies.

COLLEGE CHUMS

$200.00 IN COLD CASH

There is still time for every Independent exhibitor in America to extend to his patrons an opportunity of winning this $200.00. The biggest advertising proposition for the exhibitor ever promulgated.

Write the Contest Editor at address below for particulars.

Coming--"THE HAREM SKIRT" A Topical Comedy—Guaranteed a Screech From Start to Finish

ALL Independent Exchanges buy American Films.

AMERICAN FILM MFG. COMPANY

BANK FLOOR - ASHLAND BLOCK

CHICAGO, ILL.

Mr. Exhibitor, You've Got To Use Your Power!

You haven't the slightest idea how powerful you really are! You simply cannot imagine how much pressure you can bring to bear upon any film exchange you are dealing with.

FOR INSTANCE:

Suppose you are dealing with an exchange that does not give you TWO IMPS EVERY WEEK. You know in your heart that the Imp is head and shoulders above all other brands of films. You know you make more money with Imps than with any other kind. Very well, then! Instead of taking any old thing your exchange wants to hand you, why in the name of heaven don't you

Write To Your Exchange and Demand Two IMPS Every Week

Yes, "demand" is the word! After getting half a dozen such letters from you—AND FROM SCORES OF OTHER EXHIBITORS—your exchange will be COMPELLED to give you what you are paying for! Don't forget to do your part. It is easy enough. Write today and demand TWO IMPS EVERY WEEK. Write tomorrow, next day, next day and next day till you get what you demand.

Is There Any Reason Why You Shouldn't Have Two IMPS Every Week?

Find out! Investigate! Use your thinking apparatus! Use your power!

"The Message in the Bottle"

(Release of March 9th) "Made in Cuba"

Take our word for it—and do as we tell you—book this picture right off—book it for at least two days—if possible for three—"nuff ced."

Message placed in bottle by shipwrecked officer and cast into the sea—his capture by Cannibals—made chief of the tribe—battle of the black hordes and the victorious return—finding of message floating in the sea by friends—wedding with Cannibal princess interrupted by arrival of rescuing party—officer mourned as dead restored to his sweetheart—departure from the island and grief of the dusky princess—thrilling story of land and sea—faithful scenic effects—with a tribe of genuine savages in cast.

"TRACKED"

(Release of March 6th)

Another Cuban story that you cannot afford to miss. A highly fascinating and interesting picture with tropical coloring. Forger from the States is cared for by Cuban tobacco planter while ill, and betrays his benefactor by abducting his wife, leaving a forged letter for the husband compromising the wife. The magnanimous manner in which the indignant planter gives the craven coward satisfaction—the sensational chase through the canebrakes and the subsequent intervention of the detective who rights the wrong—the reconciliation of husband and wife—combine to make a strong and gripping drama with unique situations. Make a note of the date of the release on your calendar and follow this up with a letter to your exchange ordering "Tracked."

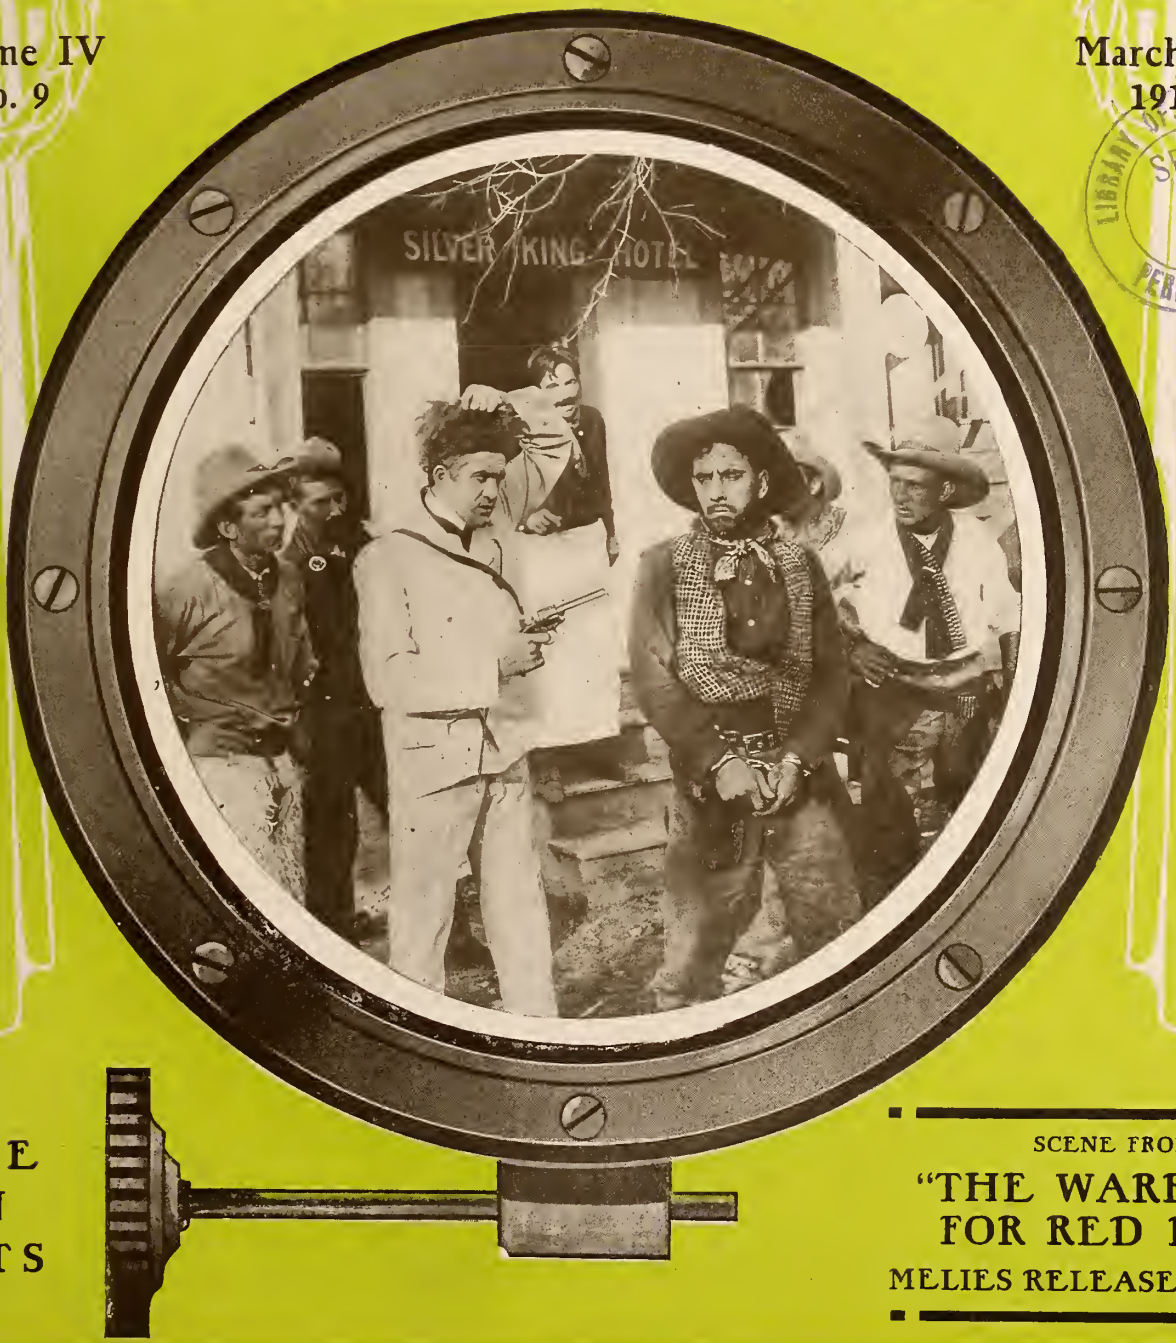
Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 9

March 4th
1911

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
SEP 20 1911
PERIODICAL DIV.



PRICE
TEN
CENTS

SCENE FROM
"THE WARRANT FOR RED RUBE"
MELIES RELEASE, March 30th

OUR FILMS

REACH EVERY PART OF THE WORLD!—ARE THEY REACHING YOU? IF NOT—TELL US WHY

Release for Saturday, March 4th

THE RIVAL SERVANTS

A strong dramatic production that will not fail to make a vivid impression because of its clever and realistic portrayal.

Release for Saturday, March 11th

The Son of the Executioner

A beautiful feature film with a wealth of detail that will win the admiration of every audience. Many thrilling scenes—magnificent costumes—perfect photography and effective tinting and toning.

EXHIBITORS: You cannot possibly afford to miss a single Great Northern release as they are drawing cards—everyone of them. See synopsis in this issue.

ALL FIRST CLASS INDEPENDENT EXHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 East 14th Street, New York

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH SALES CO.

BISON FILMS

FIVE REELS A WEEK

TUESDAY---BISON. WEDNESDAY---AMBROSIO. THURSDAY---ITALA. FRIDAY---BISON. SATURDAY---ITALA

"DICK FARRELL'S PRIZE"

Released Tuesday, March 7

The exciting experiences of two young men camping in the west. At first they are treated as a joke but soon make friends and help capture a band of desperadoes.

ITALA RELEASES

"NOBILITY"
Thursday, March 9

"FOOLSHEAD SHOOTING"
Saturday, March 11

"HER PRISONER"

Released Friday, March 10

A plucky girl gallops after the man who has wounded her sweetheart, captures him at the point of a gun and turns him over to the sheriff.

AMBROSIO RELEASE

"THE PRISONER OF THE CAUCASUS"

Wednesday, March 8

Sold Exclusively Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO., 1 Union Square, New York City

All Over the World

There is nightfall, but never
"The Fall of a Knight" like this

"The Fall of a Knight"

Released Thursday, March 9th

Will bring a laugh from a hearse driver

Because it's a "Rex"

STILL Insisting STILL Insisting STILL Insisting

THE THANHOUSER TWO-A-WEEK ON ?

Released Tuesday, March 14
See the "Thanhouser Twist!"

His Younger Brother

is the story of the artifice a girl employed in her brother's behalf, and the twist comes when you find that her efforts weren't needed. For the brother was not the spotless man his sister presumed him to be, but the discovery came at the wind-up of her struggle to place the blame elsewhere. Her sense of devotion to him leads her to try hard to fasten the guilt on a man of stainless character and when she learns how mistaken and misguided was the effort, she makes reparation by taking the man's name for her own and joining with him to save the erring brother from further sin. No. 193. Code Word, Hither.

Released Friday, March 17
A Splendid "Thanhouser Classic"

ROBERT EMMET

makes a subject of actual historical importance, one that stamps the motion picture as an absolute educational force. As such it will add tone to your place and go far to refute the local Picture Pounders. You have in this a reel that will teach more about the momentous Emmet period in Irish history than hours among the text books. This fifteen-minutes-of-film really describes Emmet's part in Ireland's great fight better than all the lengthy discourses of the Patrick's Day orators. It is remarkable for its wide appeal. Not only will the Irish-American enthuse over the stirring tale it tells, but the lover of liberty everywhere will feel its appeal, the student of history (we all are, nowadays) will like it for the history in it, and the lover of love stories will like it for the entrancing love story that it is. No. 194. Code Word, Emmet.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone: 3790 Oxford

YANKEE WEST INDIES FILMS

STEINER'S WORLD-TOUR SERIES

MONDAY, MARCH 13TH
"THE TEST OF LOVE"
A story of woman's loyalty

FRIDAY, MARCH 17TH
"HIS DOUBLE TREASURE"
A tale of two great finds

YANKEE FILM COMPANY
344 East 32d St., New York, N. Y.

EVERY EXHIBITOR reads the Moving Picture News.
ADVERTISEMENTS BRING RESULTS

Bing!

Another victory for the INDEPENDENTS.

Swaab is made Sole Agent in Philadelphia for Genre Motion Slides. Special slide carriers accommodate all song slides. Send for price list. Be first in the field.

SWAAB FILM SERVICE CO.
Not in the Trust
338 SPRUCE ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

RELIANCE PICTORIAL PLAYS

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

ACTED BY AN ALL-STAR STOCK COMPANY

"EVER THE ACCUSER"

Released Saturday, March 11

Remorse and fear conjure up accusing visions of the dead man until the weakened mind breaks, ending in confession and death. Sensational court room scene.

"COME UNTO ME"

Released Wednesday, March 15

The story of a minister, misjudged and condemned, who regains his pulpit after a battle with the sordid world.

A touching act of self-sacrifice by a woman is dramatically shown.

COMING: MARCH 18, A BIG FEATURE, "AT SWORDS' POINTS"

TWO REELS PER WEEK—WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY

Place your order with your Exchange

CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES, 1 Union Square, New York City

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

European Agents: INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., Breams Building, Chancery Lane, London, E. C.

Chicago Representative: J. J. Sullivan, 866 Graceland Ave. 'Phone Graceland 5053

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV March 4, 1911 Number 9

Notes of the Week

"THE WARRANT FOR RED RUBE"

Our Front Page Illustration

This week we place before our readers a picture from Melies Mfg. Co.'s production, "The Warrant for Red Rube."

When is a warrant not a warrant? Answer: When there is no one to serve it. But if a Texas sheriff gets a warrant, there is some one to serve it, and it's going to be served or bust.

Bill Sanders, sheriff of Alkali County, gets a warrant for Red Rube, the tough. He gives it to his deputies to serve, but Rube gets busy with the strong arm and makes them look like monkeys. When several instalments of deputies have failed, Bill Sanders gets on the job himself. Bill not only knows how to juggle the 44 Colts, but he keeps gray matter in his skull. In going after Red Rube, he decides to rely on his brains instead of his hardware. He disguises himself as a tenderfoot, arms himself with a camera, and gets on Rube's trail.

Things are warm and lively thereafter, but Sanders gets his man, and the honor of Alkali County is preserved.

This film will be released March 30th.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS

In connection with the importance and adequacy of the use of moving pictures as illustrators at public school lectures, which subject was touched upon in a recent issue of this magazine, an interview was obtained by Miss MacDonald and ourselves, representing the Moving Picture News, with a prominent member of the educational body in New York.

"The great difficulty always is, to get some one to take the initiative, who is earnest and sincere in purpose. One is invariably met with 'How much is there in it?'"

These opening words of the interview are, alas! too true, and the fact of existence of such a truth is due not entirely to selfish penuriousness, but to a condition brought about by the customary exchange of money for work and wares, and the forced necessity for the reception of such reward in order that the body may be kept in a fit state to generate mental and physical energy.

The honorable gentleman with whom the matter was discussed is of the opinion that the motion picture could be used in connection with the Public School lectures with great efficacy. "In each lecture center," said he, "a moving picture plant would require to be installed. The amount to cover that expense, at a minimum, would be somewhere in the neighborhood of $25,000 or $30,000. These lectures are not always given in the school buildings, and all the buildings are not fireproof, therefore the question arises, how shall plants be installed in these buildings and the rules and regulations of the fire authorities be adhered to?

The suggestion was made by us that booths be substituted to overcome that difficulty. The answer given was that the lecture halls were not large enough to admit of space being given them.

The limited supply of films suited to educational purposes would also be a drawback, as well as the obtaining of films at a nominal price, was one objection made, which was met by the interviewer with the proposition of forming a company at a capitalization of probably $50,000 for the purpose of obtaining and sustaining an adequate stock of educational films of all kinds, which could be rented out at a nominal rental to the educational authorities of the city for use at the public school lectures.

The suggestion was well taken, and commented upon as being a point worthy of discussion and consideration.

"We do not wish to go into the moving picture show business," remarked the gentleman; "we do not wish even to hold the people always in anticipation of the seeing of moving pictures when they come to hear a lecture. There are some subjects, such as music, art, sociology, and a number of other subjects, which are not possible of illustration by moving pictures. In our enthusiasm for the use of moving pictures as educators we must not lose sight of the importance and power of oratory."

In answer to the question, "What kind of pictures do you consider the proper kind for use at these lectures," he said, "Travel, history, mining, agriculture, pictures illustrating the habits of different animals and insects, the illustrations of the operations of different industries, and various other educational subjects."

There are many pictures which do not at the present time get past the Board of Censorship, and which it may be are rightfully suppressed, so far as their use in the regular moving picture house is concerned, which might be very effectively used in connection with a lecture which would provide explanatory notes making the subject a matter of education rather than merely a gruesome picture of unwholesome influence. This is the case particularly with regard to scenes illustrating certain periods of history, just as, in the words of the gentleman in question, "The Passion Play would be nothing without the crucifixion, or the story of Mary Queen of Scots with the block and axe left out." Robespierre also was a subject of vital interest mentioned.

The question in hand we feel is worthy of deep thought and serious consideration. We are deeply interested in the subject, and having obtained the favorable opinion of one worthy and representative member of the educational authorities of the city, we are desirous in our keen interest in the matter in connection with the progress of humanity, to bring before the notice of the entire body of representatives entrusted with things educational in this great educational center, a point which is of vital importance in aiding the diffusion of useful knowledge through the public school lectures.

Another important point is that of Public Schools using the motion pictures to illustrate their daily studies. There is no reason, other than the extra initial cost of installing the apparatus. By the way, this once installed would cover the whole field as above outlined. The News would be glad indeed to see every Public School equipped with the means of showing motion pictures and an exchange working only on educational lines.

THE INTERPRETATION OF MUSIC BY THE AID OF PANTOMIMIC DANCING AND MOTION PICTURES.

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

There is a charm in sounds of sweet quality which soothes; there is a power in personality to attract or repel; there is in rhythmic motion a beauty akin to that of poetry, and there is a point where all three blend, which makes a movement similar to the effect of the motion picture, namely, the pantomimic interpretation of music.

What we call classical music is left in a little word world all to itself, with the exception of the meagre few who really care to delve in that world of sweet and wondrous mystery.

True, this is an age of melody, but, in the majority of instances what kind of melody? The answer will be left to the reader to think out according to his intelligence.

The average listener has not the power of imagination with the genius who wrote. He is looking for a simple little melody to tickle the senses. Wagner is to him a bunch of discords, Beethoven is a musty old has-been, and the music of Chopin or Grieg is but an unintelligible jargon. The song without words, the tone poem, unintelligible except to the few who deem it worth while to learn, and who seek to intelligently interpret the tone language, is a most uninteresting muddle of sounds.

It is a well-known fact that American music and American art are not appreciated in America, and as "A prophet hath no honor in his own country," it must be left for future generations to hang the laurels on the inanimate necks of cold marble statues, or erect monuments to the glory of the genius after his material self has crumbled away in the dust.

We would like to be able to determine just what characteristic will follow American music down the aisles of history. Shall it be the meaningless hitch step of the rag-time and the insipid sentimentality of the average popular melody which shall mark this age of progression in other avenues of art and invention? Or, will there soon be a reaction which will stamp on the outgoing sands of time something which will indicate not the ruthless frivolity of the American people, but the advancement which is in keeping with the intelligent and progressive age in which we live. We must give to posterity a nucleus upon which to build.

Not long ago I visited a presentation of pantomimic dancing by one of our most celebrated pantomimic artists. Puzzling compositions from the great masters were interpreted in the motions of this wonderful artist. The dancer, attired in the soft clinging garments of the ancient Greeks, dancing in a half right against a background of shadowy draperies, reminded one of a beautiful old painting with the central figure come to life. Every emotion was displayed in the expression and rhythmic motion of the body, from the delirium of love to the dark clutch of despair.

In connection with this pantomimic work a thought has come to me. Why can not a great deal be done toward the musical education of the public by means of moving pictures? The posing for moving pictures consists entirely of pantomimic work. Why not have interpretations of some of the standard musical works, not only of European composers, but of our American composers as well, thrown upon the canvas. To be sure, there is but one Maud Allan, one Isadora Duncan, one Gertrude Hoffman, but there must be many more ready to enter that field who have the talent without the opportunity.

A short synopsis of the intention of the work to be interpreted could first be given, so as to acquaint the audience with what was about to be shown them. Each separate movement of the composition should be explained, whether an allegretto, a largo, a prestissimo movement, and the emotion or sentiment intended to be portrayed.

No more admirable way could be found to illustrate a lecture on the compositions of different composers.

To make it the success it should be, three intelligent units must be at work apart from the photographer: the artist who poses for the picture, the lecturer, and the individual, or individuals in combination, whose work it is to execute the music. All of these must be past masters of each individual art in order that the performance be made an entire success.

EDUCATIONAL LECTURES IN THE KEITH & PROCTOR THEATERS

Interview with U. Grant Blackford by "Fra."

It has always been the policy of both Messrs. Keith and Proctor to make a feature of the illustrated lectures on the different countries of the globe. Even away back in 1901, when Mr. F. F. Proctor was operating a stock company in the various theaters of his circuit, which comprised the Fifth Avenue, Twenty-third Street, Fifty-Eighth Street, 125th Street theaters, in New York, also Albany and Montreal, I was stage manager of Section E (there was one company for each house changing each week), I carried slides in my trunk to throw on the sheet in the various houses. Mr. Keith also used them in his houses in Boston, where they have reached a very high stage of development, also I have seen them at the Providence House, I think, while playing there in vaudeville.

Educational lectures are always interesting and instructive, they are used in all our public schools, and many a profitable and pleasant evening may be spent in this way. As yet, the Keith & Proctor Theaters are the only places of amusement where they may be found in Greater New York.

The lectures now in use at these houses are not the usual dry and uninteresting ones generally on view, however, but brand new material interestingly written by expert authors and copyrighted at Washington. They are especially written for Mr. Keith's Boston theater, the Bijou on Washington street, and it is only through the indefatigable efforts of Mr. U. Grant Blackford, the general manager of the Keith & Proctor circuit of theaters, to whom great credit is due in placing them on the high plane on which they are today, at great trouble and expense, he succeeded after much negotiation in obtaining these special lectures.

For instance we are now running a beautiful series called "Camera Chats with the Yankee Traveler," written by Julian Mortimer Cochrane, descriptive of the different phases of Life in Old Japan. These proved very interesting and timely, in view of the great interest being taken in that quaint kingdom: life was shown in all its phases, the farmers, the militia, the charming geisha girls, the many curious forms of religious worship, and other interesting facts. We followed that with a series on "The Philippines," which proved very timely, "Central America" came next, and then "The Montreal Mid-Winter Ice Carnival," and "Old Quebec" came next, and now we are taking up "Northwestern Canada" and that wonderful range of mountains known as the Canadian Alps. For those interested in art subjects we have had Burne-Jones, the wonderful English artist, and beautiful examples of his work, also a series of the masterpieces of Greek sculpture.

And now a word as to the lecturers themselves. They are all able men especially chosen for this work; one of the best is Dr. Aaron Burr, who is now located at the 58th Street House, covering also the 125th Street Theater. He has been a lecturer for nearly forty years, so you can judge for yourself that he is especially qualified to carry on this interesting work. He brings to it the ripe experience of years of close and careful study of mankind as he has lectured in pretty nearly every city in the United States.

Mr. Sol Levoy, who is the lecturer at Harlem Opera House, has been connected with the firm for over three years, he having had full charge of the illustrated song singers when they were a feature of the programs. Now that they have been dispensed with, he is meeting with as great success as a lecturer as he formerly did as a singer.

Mr. Frank Rathborne, the lecturer at the Jersey City house, is a young man of promise, a Harvard graduate. He shows in his work careful and intelligent reading which enables the audiences to grasp his subject very clearly.

The remaining two houses are taken care of by myself, Union Square and 23rd Street. Union Square is the headquarters from which all the lectures are handled. I have charge of the distribution of the lectures; they are used first at Union Square, then they go to East 125th Street, 58th Street, 23rd Street, Harlem Opera House, and Jersey City, and I then ship them back to Boston. Each set of slides are carefully examined on their return from every house for breakage, and if there is any it is charged to that house, so you see there is quite a system to keep each house straight. I usually keep three days ahead on the lectures, that insures there always being a lecture ready for use on a Monday and Thursday without danger of disappointment, also it gives the lecturers ample time to thoroughly familiarize themselves with their subject before its rendition.

I have lectured in every Keith & Proctor theater in New York and played most of the out-of-town houses. I was an actor ten or twelve years before taking up this work which I have been at now over a year and a half. I was in the old stock company at the different houses, as I mentioned before, and also at the Fifth Avenue, but I like lecturing better than acting.

Chicago Letter

The Independents won one of the greatest victories in their career last week when the Orpheum Circuit decided to go Independent.

C. E. Bray, general manager of the Western Vaudeville Managers Association and the Orpheum Circuit, after seeing the junk service being supplied by the General Film Company at the Academy Theater, registered a complaint and was told that it was the best he could get unless he wanted to pay more money. He therefore decided by changing to Independent service he could get better film and ordered the manager of the Academy to discontinue Trust service and make arrangements with the Laemmle Film Service and he at the same time issued orders that all houses on the Orpheum circuit should at once contract for Independent film as soon as possible.

The Orpheum Circuit is the largest chain of theaters in the United States, so this means a great blow to Gen. Flimco as well as a big feather in the Independent's hat.

The new Columbia Theater, at Madison and Clark streets, opened Saturday with high-class burlesque. At the present time the Columbia is the only burlesque house in the loop.

The Hotel Planters, consisting of 400 rooms, occupies the upper stories of the new Columbia.

The union wrangle between the I. A. T. S. E. and Local 145, the operators' union, as to under whose jurisdiction the operators shall work still goes on. I attach hereto an article that appeared in the Chicago Tribune last Saturday.

PICTURE SHOW MEN OUSTED FROM FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Charges Against Operators are Sustained by Governing Body —Sluggers are Reported at Work.

The Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union was ousted yesterday from the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Three principal charges were brought against the officials of the union and all were sustained by the executive board of the central body, which took the action.

One of the charges, a unique one, was that the officials allowed the union to incorporate under the state laws, in violation of "trades union principles." The others were that payment of per capita tax to the international union was refused, and that assessments were levied against the members without giving an accounting.

The ousted organization has a membership of 400 and its affairs are conducted by a board of directors, of which William F. Menzel is chairman. Lee M. Hart, secretary of the Theatrical Stage Employees' International Alliance, with which the ousted union originally was affiliated, declared his life had been threatened by sluggers because he revoked the union's charter.

An operator who refused to join the ousted union was slugged Wednesday evening at Clark and Van Buren streets. Secretary Hart declared that a system of organized slugging is being carried on by an "inner circle" wrecking crew, whose emblem is a small button bearing a skull and crossbones.

After reading the above article I called Business Manager Menzel on the 'phone and was told that Local 145, I. A. T. S. E., Inc., were preparing to institute injunction proceedings against Local No. 2, I. A. T. S. E., to restrain them from using the name of International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees

We made a tour of Halsted street from Madison to Jackson Boulevard one day last week and were surprised to see so many Independent houses. The first place we stopped was the Virginia Theater, running vaudeville and moving pictures. The next stop was a few doors south, the Academy of Music, the historic playhouse where so many of our old-time stage celebrities won their laurels, and what do you think met my gaze as I entered? An Independent picture demonstrating the Herbst daylight pictures. After seeing several good vaudeville acts and two reels of good Independent film we wended our way southward once more. The next stop was the Lyric, a five-cent theater a block away from the Academy. This house was also showing Independent pictures and good service, too, as in picture land an Imp of recent release was on when I entered. It was about 2:30 p.m. and the house, like the ones previously mentioned, was well filled with people. We did not tarry long here, much as I would have liked to, the picture was so well projected, but there were other places to be seen so we again began to pedal south on the busy thoroughfare. The next house of importance was the Boulevard Theater, corner Halsted and Jackson. This is one of the oldest picture houses on Halsted street and the one in which Ivan Van Ronkel started in the business, but when Van Ronkel was running this house you could have seen a good show there at all times which is more than I could say when I visited it the other afternoon.

Our next and last stop was the Bijou Theater, another landmark of the old Kohl and Middleton days. This house changed from stock drama to vaudeville and Independent moving pictures last week and is doing a land office business under McDonald's clever management. Another surprise was in store for me. C. J. McGarry, an old-time kinodrome operator, is the man at the crank, so we sat down and had a heart-to-heart talk about the good old days of the operating biz.

J. J. SULLIVAN.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., March 1.—Two weeks ago I took occasion in my letter to call attention to the political campaign that was being waged between four candidates for the Democratic Mayoralty nomination. The result of that fight furnished an excellent reflex as to the state of the public mind regarding the policy for this resort—whether they wanted the town to be wide open, but under strict police regulation, or whether they desired it to be closed, with gambling eliminated, a strict interpretation of the Sunday observance law and this, of course, to include the closing of the picture shows and all other forms of amusement.

The gentleman who publicly advocated permitting the gambling houses be allowed to do business but placed under the watchful eye of the police, W. W. Waters, will be the next Mayor of Hot Springs, for he was nominated over the present encumbent, Mayor Martin Jodd, by forty-three votes, and it is not likely that there will be any opposition to him, while the candidate who ran on the reform ticket, who declared that he would close the gambling houses, was third in the race, polling an even 200 votes.

You who read that particular communication will recall that I stated the Mayor had, in the last two weeks of the campaign, closed the gambling houses; such, brethren, was the case, but after the returns were in, some one kicked the "lid" a wallop in the left side facing north and we haven't heard of it since.

I want to give you the condition of things in this city the past Sunday, just for the benefit of those who run picture shows in other cities and are fortunate enough in not being in the same business here. You recall, too, don't you? that Judge Wood had closed the moving picture places here for several months? that he would not permit any one to work on Sunday? Well, I took a walk along Central Avenue today and noted that there were several places of business enjoying a good day's trade. The cigar, ice cream and book stores, in the latter place novels being for sale of the "Nick Carter" and "Deadwood Dick" variety, and, on reliable authority of men who "hit one," I learned that the saloons also had a good day's business. The gambling houses have been opened, as I stated, since election night, and the only legitimate business that was closed and on which a fight is being waged is the picture shows, and every one of them was shut tighter than wax. How do you like that, Mr. Manager, for a "square deal"? Looks pretty bum, doesn't it? Well, the proprietors of the picture houses are good and sore—and I don't blame them. I hope they will do what they threatened today—open next Sunday and fight this case to a crisp finish, for if ever there was discrimination shown, it is manifested in this city against the picture houses. The thing that made a hit with me was the sight of a would-be astronomer with a telescope, right in the very heart of the business district, plying his trade as if Sunday laboring laws had never been heard of. Three doors below the Orpheum Theater was closed because to run harmless moving pictures would be laboring on the Sabbath. It's all right to try and discover the population of Mars through a telescope on the public streets, but you dare not look at a religious picture or any other clean exemplification of motion photography on Sunday. It sure is the limit.

And here's another hot one. The Governor of the State decided long, long ago when the white man's hopes went down to defeat in Reno, last Independence Day, that motion pictures of this fistic encounter would never be exhibited in Arkansas as long as he was its chief executive. "Fine and dandy," yelled the good people. "Soak it to 'em, Governor," they reiterated.

Now, along comes the Arkansas Amusement Company with a big advertisement that pictures of this historic battle will be shown in the Lyceum Theater, and I guess that isn't going some. I am anxiously awaiting what his excellency will say when he hears this. I bet there will be something doing, unless some one has converted him to the fact that the pictures will not incite a race riot and are perfectly proper. Hot Springs, as I stated months ago in previous communications, wants these pictures and it is to be hoped that those who have the negotiations in charge can put this one over and give them to us.

The moving picture men of Little Rock are making an awful kick to have their license reduced a couple of hundred dollars. I hear that they have to pay something like $600 a year to do business there and, believe me, it's too much. Just what the city fathers will do with their request, I know not, but I understand that they are favorably inclined toward a reduction.

"Madam X" was the real dramatic treat of the week and the Auditorium was packed to the doors. And who should come along the line by my old friend, William Macauley, who is starring in "Classmates." It has been over ten years since I last saw William, and at that time I was a member of the Macauley and Patton Company, playing "rep" through the New England States. It was the last season "Billy" Patton was appearing in productions of this nature. Now, Macauley has branched out and is making good as a star of his own company. He had a very nice play and gave a good interpretation of Robert Edeson's former success.

The Scenic Theater ran this week the moving pictures of the Pawnee Bill and Buffalo Bill Wild West and Far East Show. The pictures are by far the best of their kind I have ever seen. It seemed the entire production was given. The reels were not as new as they possibly could have been, but, fortunately, the interesting events were clear and the pictures made a great hit.

A man came here the past week to open up a five-cent picture house. There isn't one in the city—all charge ten cents. He looked about, noted the number of theaters, was told that he couldn't open on Sunday and then got out his pencil and did a little figuring.

"What is a conservative estimate of Sunday business in this city?" he asked.

"One hundred dollars on the day is a conservative figure," he was told.

"And they've got you closed on Sunday, have they?"

"Tighter than Heaven," he was informed.

"Well, that's one hundred plunks a week that I lose because I don't get it. I do get, however, fifty-two Sundays like that, and I don't get then $5,200 that I should get when everything else is wide open. I like your city, but that Sunday business gives me heart failure. Ta, ta."

Wise old geek, that.

I wonder how those who read these letters like the baseball dope I have been sending in. If I thought they liked it, I'd keep it up, for goodness knows I could fill four columns of the Moving Picture News with stories about the players. However, until Mr. Saunders tells me to cut it out I'm going to pass it along in the hope that some one in the moving picture business who reads those columns may enjoy it and recognize in the names mentioned players they have implored during the heat of a fiercely contested ball game to "knock it over the fence."

A great deal has been written concerning the new and improved drainage system that has been installed by Doc Owens, superintendent of Whittington Park, but I doubt if the public generally knows the real cause as to why this improvement was made necessary. It was only when out at the park an evening or two ago, walking over the diamond where Bill Dahlen and his cohorts are now chasing the horsehide during the day, Doc Owens told me the actual facts.

Nature Butted In

"One morning I came on the diamond rather early to see how certain minor improvements I had ordered the night before were coming along, and as I walked toward the home plate I noticed that it was swimming in about two feet of water. Down the third base line was a stretch of water, the third sack was submerged, while out in the left field were some of the cutest little duck ponds one would care to take a snap-shot of," said Doc.

"I couldn't understand it, because when I left the night before everything was fine and dandy. The only thing that passed my lips in the intervening time was water, so I pinched myself to see if I was awake. It wasn't a dream—I soon found that out. I started to investigate and discovered that Nature had decided to take a hand in the baseball situation, and during the night had sent up through the ground a series of natural springs, and these were bubbling all over the lot. No, the springs were not those of hot water, but cold as ice. It was up to me to get busy and back nature off the boards, so we had to install a drainage system. The public may not know it, but it was mighty hard work, and we hustled night and day. It was necessary to purchase a carload of drain pipes and an equal amount of charcoal. The diamond and outfield were cut up regardless of appearances until, to a stranger, looked as if we were experimenting on the water system of a miniature municipality. We sunk the pipes in charcoal to a depth of five feet. We followed the natural flow of water, but directed it finally to one large drain sewer, which, extending from back of home plate, runs out through the diamond into rightfield and empties in the little run back of the rightfield wall."

And that's the story of the new drainage system at Whittington Park, an improvement that has made this field the finest in the great southwest.

More Players Here

Jack Powell, pitcher of the St. Louis Americans, got in yesterday afternoon and is registered at the Eastman. Jack is considered one of the real gentlemen of the great national game and has a host of friends on teams in both big leagues. Jack still feels the loss of his two bright children, who died last summer in the very heart of the playing season. The blow was a hard one and completely took the ginger and heart out of the big fellow. He is looking forward to a great season this summer and was busy circulating among the fraternity yesterday.

Ed Willits, one of Detroit's boxmen, has joined the colony of ball tossers at the Park, where Bush, Crawford, Strange and Donovan and Washington players are located. It is also possible that Lafitte, a young recruit, may join the Tigers here later. Lafitte took the trip south with Jennings' men last year, but later was turned over to one of the Eastern League teams, where he was a positive sensation. Jennings recalled him and is going to give him a thorough tryout this year and looks for the lad to make good.

Dahlen and others of the Brooklyn team have started their road work and today passed considerable time at Whittington Park in easy practice. When the twenty-six other members of this team get in next week, things sure will hum at Doc Owens' establishment.

[Our Western correspondent is going a little out of his way in handing us so much of the baseball stuff. We submitted it to one of our staff (he is a football "gawk," that's his word) his reply was, "good dope," every M. P. man wants to know about these items. We don't know, we want more about the pictures, how they are received, what the audiences think about them. What do our readers think?

—Ed., M. P. N.

"Ye will see
"The very persons of our noble story,
"As they were living."

Prologue Henry VIII

SCENES FROM SHAKESPEARE'S "KING HENRY VIII." AS GIVEN BY SIR HERBERT TREE AT HIS MAJESTY'S THEATER, HAYMARKET, LONDON, W., ENGLAND

A Short Introductory by Will G. Barker

Introduction

In attempting to give a short description of this epoch-making picture, I eagerly seize the opportunity of publicly thanking Sir Herbert Tree, Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh, together with the whole of Sir Herbert Tree's Company and Staff of His Majesty's Theater, for enabling me to immortalize, by means of a narrow band of light-sensitive film, the wonderful production of Shakespeare's "King Henry VIII." The courtesy, patience and valuable help I have received from all concerned has made an otherwise arduous task, with all its attendant worries, a labor of love.

Hundreds of gorgeous and costly dresses were cheerfully and carefully folded, checked and packed into huge vans late at night after the regular performance. And oh! the colors of these magnificent silks and stuffs! The indescribable scenes of splendor on the stage of His Majesty's Theater will never be forgotten by those lucky enough to have viewed them. The pictures I am privileged to put before you—fine as they are—I must humbly confess give only a partial idea of the delights awaiting the many thousands who visit His Majesty's Theater. Pantechnicons were requisitioned to convey the historically correct "properties" from the theater. This meant all-night work in preparation for the early morning enactment of the scenes in my studio at Ealing Green.

My object in trying to induce Sir Herbert Tree to allow his prodigious success "King Henry VIII" to be kinematographed was not only to interest, amuse and educate the myriads of picture theatergoers, but also to enable me to hand down to posterity a faithful, silent and permanent record of the wonderful life-like portrayal and representation of some of the most important personages and incidents in the eventful history of England.

I am proud to have had the honor to present the picture for a further reason. It is the first permanent record of the great English actors' art. Garrick, Kean, Phelps, Kemble, Mrs. Siddons, to mention only a few, are but names in the minds of the people. Tree, Bourchier, Miss Violet Vanbrugh will, by means of kinematography, live for all time in this wonderful representation of their art.

The reign of King Henry VIII (1509-1547) was noted for the sowing of the seed of many things that are yet bearing fruit in our national life to-day. First and foremost, Henry's desire to obtain a divorce from Queen Katherine and so enable him to marry Anne Boleyn was without doubt one of the causes of Luther's Protestantism making headway in this land. It must also be remembered that the illustrious Queen Elizabeth (1558-1603) was the daughter of Henry and Anne. In Queen Elizabeth we can trace some of the masterfulness, persistency and tenacity of Henry, her father. To Elizabeth we owe the foundation of our world-wide empire. Henry was the founder of a permanent British navy, which his daughter, Queen Elizabeth, used with such marked success to repulse and utterly destroy the Spanish Armada. This Armada was undoubtedly fitted out as a result of Henry's having divorced Queen Katherine, the daughter of the King of Spain. What if Henry could see our navy to-day?

Cardinal Wolsey, one of the figures that stand out by themselves from the pages of British history, was born in St. Nicholas street, Ipswich, about 1472. Made Chancellor of England in 1515, his rapid rise to power was unprecedented in the whole history of England. His influence over Henry was enormous. His lightest wish was granted by the King. He carried power of life and death in his hand. A divine, a soldier and a statesman; fearless, impartial and unscrupulous where his power was assailed, Wolsey, like most men, had his weaknesses. As Prime Minister of England he made no distinction between public and private money in his income. His extravagances were only equalled by his high soaring ambitions. He seemed to compete with the King in his possessions. His palace, stables, choir, gold and silver plate, lavish entertainment, retinue, etc., etc., were beyond compare in the land.

Still he used vast sums from his own purse to found Ipswich and Cardinal College at Oxford (now called Christ Church College) as a part of a splendid national scheme of education, which scheme the greed of Henry eventually ruined.

But Wolsey's extravagances were his own undoing. Wolsey's favor with Henry, founded on success, fell by failure. The King wanted everything sacrificed to the accomplishment of the divorce from Queen Katherine. Wolsey, although opposed to the King's designs, in fear of losing his position, stooped to despicable and unworthy means to bring about the divorce. Wolsey's power, however, failed to force the Pope to comply with the King's desires. Henry had no use for anyone who failed. Accidentally discovering that the Cardinal had amassed a fortune of something like five to six millions sterling (a fabulous sum in the 16th century) Henry used the knowledge to dismiss Wolsey and confiscate his property (1529). This able stateman, who by his ingenious statecraft, amazing diplomacy, and far-seeing foreign policy, lifted England from "a state of little account into the highest circle of European politics," died penniless at Leicester Abbey, September 29, 1530.

Cast

King Henry VIII, Arthur Bourchier; Cardinal Wolsey, Sir Herbert Tree; Cardinal Campeius (Legate from the Pope), S. A. Cookson; Cranmer (Archbishop of Canterbury), Charles Fuller; Duke of Norfolk, A. E. George; Duke of Buckingham, Basil Gill; Duke of Suffolk, Edward O'Neill; Earl of Surrey, Gerald Lawrence; Lord Chamberlain, Edward Sass; Capucius, Francis Chamier; Lord Abergavenny, Clarence Derwent; Lord Sands, Walter R. Creighton; Sir Henry Guildford, Edmund Gurney; Sir Thomas Lovell, Henry C. Hewitt; Sir Nicholas Vaux, Charles James; Thomas Cromwell (Secretary to Cardinal Wolsey), Reginald Owen; Griffith (Usher to Queen Katharine), Henry Morrell; 1st Gentleman, Cyril Sworder; 2nd Gentleman, Charles Howard; Garter King at Arms, Clifford Heatherley; Surveyor to the Duke of Buckingham, Acton Bond; Sergeant-at-Arms, Arthur Gaskill; Servant, W. B. Abingdon; A Crier, Edmund Goulding; A Scribe, James Smythson; Jester, Ross Shore; Queen Katharine, Miss Violet Vanbrugh; Anne Boleyn, Miss Laura Cowie; An Old Lady, Mrs. Charles Calvert; Patience (Waiting Maid to Queen Katharine), Miss Lila Barclay.

Scenes

The Cloisters. The Banqueting Hall, Wolsey's Palace. Blackfriars Hall. Ante Chamber, with adjoining chapel. Westminster Abbey.

Blackfriars Hall—The Consistory of Rome Ordains a Trial for the Divorce of Queen Katharine from the King

In this scene is depicted the first omen of Wolsey's coming downfall, and the collapse of the power of Rome in England. Katharine, in an impassioned speech, appeals to the King:

"I have been to you a true and humble wife."

She endeavors to get the trial adjourned for her to communicate with her friends in Spain. The Cardinal will not agree,and orders the trial to proceed. Katharine continues her speech, and growing every moment more heated and incensed against the Cardinal, turns on him:

"It is you that have blown this coal betwixt my Lord and me."

The Cardinal denies it:

"Madam, you do me wrong."

Katharine takes up the thread of her defence once again, and with highly dramatic fervor says:

"I refuse you for my judge, and appeal to the Pope."

Whereupon she leaves the court. The King, beside himself with rage, turns upon Wolsey:

"I abhor this dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome. Break up the court."

and leaves also.

Banqueting Hall, Wolsey's Palace—King Henry VIII is Ensnared by the Charms of Anne Boleyn

Here is shown the sumptuous apartment in Wolsey's Palace, and one gets some idea of the magnificent gold plate, valued at 1½ millions sterling—with which the tables are laden. The Cardinal enters.

"You are welcome—and to you all—Good health."

Dancing follows feasting. The King, always one for a jest, joins the masked dancers, in a weird head-dress portraying a sheep. Wolsey suspects the King's presence amongst them, and enquires whether

"There should be one amongst them by his person

"More worthy this place than myself?"

He is informed that such is the case, and the Cardinal endeavors to select such a one.

"Here I'll take my Royal choice."

and his choice is that of the King. The King's glance has fallen on Anne Boleyn, and her charms quickly captivate him. The Cardinal's anger is aroused, and he makes vain attempts to part the twain; eventually Wolsey suggests the King's adjournment to the next chamber. The King will have none of it. He is too enamored of Anne, and says to her:

"Sweet Partner, I must not yet forsake you."

The Cloisters—Cardinal Wolsey at the Zenith of His Power

Buckingham is surrounded by his friends. They are endeavoring to deter him from openly quarreling with Wolsey. At this moment the Cardinal passes with his entourage. Buckingham fixes his eyes on the Cardinal, and the Cardinal on him, both full of disdain. Buckingham assumes that the Cardinal has gone to the King and wishes to follow him. The Duke of Norfolk remarks:

"I advise you to consider that the Cardinal is all powerful."

Buckingham's surmise proved correct. The Cardinal obtains a mandamus for the arrest of Buckingham. Armed with this authority, the sergeant-at-arms addresses Buckingham:

"My Lord, the Duke of Buckingham, I arrest thee of high treason."

Wolsey's Downfall—Ante Chamber to the King's Apartments

The Nobles are seen discussing the impending fall of Wolsey. The Duke of Suffolk tells them:

"The Cardinal's letter to the Pope miscarried, and came to the eye o' the King."

The King enters reading the inventory of Wolsey's wealth, put by mistake into a packet sent to him by Wolsey.

"What piles of wealth hath he accumulated to his own portion."

The King departs with these words as he hands the papers to Wolsey that completed the Cardinal's ruin:

"Read o'er this, and after this, and then to breakfast with what appetite you have."

Wolsey, rent by his own feelings, gives way to his grief.

"Farewell, farewell, a long farewell to my greatness."

We now see the better side of Wolsey in the love he bears for those of his own household. Cromwell, his servant, enters and is amazed at at seeing his master in such a state.

"Go, get thee from me, Cromwell.
"I am but a poor, fallen man, unworthy now
"To be thy lord and master."

and on Cromwell protesting, the Cardinal bursts forth:

"Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition.
"By that sin fell the angels.
"Be just and fear not.
"O! Cromwell, Cromwell,
"Had I but served my God with half the zeal
"I served my King, He would not in mine age
"Have left me naked to mine enemies.
"Farewell, the Hopes of Court,
"My hopes in Heaven do dwell."

Poor Lo on the Warpath

Let the moving picture man beware! Chief Big Bear and Chief Big Buck are in full war paint. Their Cheyennes and Arapahoes have taken to the scalp dance. At any moment the noble redman may be hard on his trail.

Why? Because Poor Lo has seen a moving picture show.

Of course, we do not mean to say that Chief Big Bear and Chief Big Buck will necessarily take the warpath just because they have seen a moving picture show. They are not that sensitive. Neither are they preachers nor uplifters nor protectors of the legitimate drama.

But Chief Big Bear and Chief Big Buck were in Washington last week to have a little talk with their White Father, President Taft, and in seeing the sights they took in a "photo-play"—a "heap bad" photo-play that hurt their feelings, insulted their dignity and roused their fighting blood.

Chief Big Bear threw savage stoicism to the winds and freed his mind right there in Washington. Translated from English into the well-known jargon that stamps all Indian utterances as authentic, his utterance runs thus:

> Ugh! Me heap big Injun. Me Arapahoe chief. Me Big Bear. This show heap bad. Heap big lie. Pictures show Injun men bad men and do heap bad thing all time. Injun men in pictures heap lie. No Injun man; pale face dressed up like Injun man. Poor Injun get blame for bad pale face. Me got to go home to-day or me go to Great White Father and ask him to stop heap bad show—stop heap big lie. You wait. Big Bear and Big Buck go home. Then Big Bear and Big Buck raise heap fuss. Picture man look out. Ugh!

All of which would seem to indicate that Big Bear and Big Buck do not take kindly to moving pictures in which "fake" Indians figure as the villains; likewise that there is trouble in store for the moving picture man.

Now, we take it for granted that even the moving picture man has a sort of natural affection for his scalp and wants to remain in its immediate vicinity—prefers to keep in touch with it. That being the case, we suggest that he hasten to pay a visit of ceremony to the Cheyennes and Arapahoes and endeavor to appease the wrath of Chief Big Bear and Chief Big Buck.

This does not seem impossible, by any means. Chief Big Bear and Chief Big Buck are smart Indians. It ought to be possible for the moving picture man to convince them that the average patron of a moving picture show is a lot more intelligent than he looks; that he knows "fake" Indians from real ones even in a photo-play, and that no one ever believes anything he sees in a moving picture, anyway.

But even if these representations fail to soothe the savage breast, the effort will not be wholly in vain. For by heroic self-sacrifice the moving picture man may be able to save the moving picture industry from total annihilation. All that is necessary is a moving picture machine in active operation then and there—a machine that will catch every detail of the vengeance of Chief Big Bear and Chief Big Buck and their Arapahoes and Cheyennes upon their traducer and insulter.

For even the Indians will realize that the surest offset to a photo-play which shows "fake" Indians doing a bad thing is a moving picture showing real Indians doing a praiseworthy act.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

ADVERTISING MATTER DUTIABLE IN CANADA

(From Consul John E. Kehl, Sydney, Nova Scotia)

It is not generally known that catalogues, price lists, fly sheets, and other advertising matter (except catalogues and price lists for the wholesale trade) are dutiable in Canada at the rate of 15 cents per pound. This office recently received notice from the collector of customs in Halifax that advertising matter (a retail catalogue weighing 3¾ pounds) was being held, pending the payment of 54 cents duty. The catalogue was addressed to this consulate and is undoubtedly one of many mailed by a Chicago house to various parties in Canada.

For the benefit of interested parties, I quote in part the Canadian customs regulations on advertising matter:

Duty at the rate of 15 cents per pound, under tariff item 126 is to be collected on circulars, fly sheets, and other advertising matter (except catalogues and price lists for wholesale only) when imported by mail addressed to individuals or otherwise. When duty remains unpaid for 60 days, the matter is to be treated as "unclaimed." At the expiration of six months, the inspector may direct the matter to be destroyed in default of payment of duty.

Bona fide trade catalogues and price lists of goods for wholesale, not exceeding three to one address, may be admitted through the mails free of customs duty: Provided, however, That such catalogues and price lists shall not be held to include almanacs or advertising periodicals or printed matter designed to advertise the sale of goods by any person in Canada.

The collector of customs at the port where such printed matter arrives in large quantities usually notifies the sender that it is dutiable and that if a remittance is made to cover the amount due the matter will be released and forwarded to the addressees. In single cases the addressee is notified, and quite frequently refuses to pay the duty. (Daily Consular and Trade Reports.)

Daily Consular and Trade Reports of Feb. 15th has the following:

No. 6259. Moving-picture films.—A trading company in the United States writes to the Bureau of Manufactures that it is desirous of communicating with American manufacturers of moving-picture films with a view to representing them for the sale of such products in Austria-Hungary. Correspondence is desired as soon as possible. Application to the Bureau of Manufactures.

Motion Pictures

There are a great number of motion picture shows in Erie. There are in most cities and towns, from the largest to the smallest. The motion picture business is one of gigantic proportions. Although motion pictures were unheard of a few years ago, large fortunes have been made in the business already, and the various companies supplying films and machines are said to be organized as a "trust." The motion picture is an institution which has come to have a marked influence on society in several ways. It is an institution which deserves attention on that basis.

There are undoubted evils which accompany and are caused by the motion picture shows. There is the question of the character of pictures. Many of the pictures manufactured are of such a nature as can have nothing but a detrimental effect on the minds of those who see them, particularly children. The danger along this line is much greater than in the vaudeville or legitimate theaters since so large a part of motion picture audiences is composed of children.

Then there is the question of the darkened theater. This is perhaps where the greatest danger lies, especially in the larger cities. Men whose business is the luring of young girls to improper walks of life find the motion picture theater their greatest ally. The hour or two of darkness gives them the opportunity they want to form the chance acquaintance which they will try to develop to their advantage.

Lastly, there is the question of expense. Some one has gone so far as to say that the motion picture is the cause of the much-discussed "high cost of living." Of course, this is carrying the matter too far, and it is altogether likely that the statement originally emanated from some one interested in the more costly forms of amusement or entertainment whose business was being damaged by the increasing popularity of the motion pictures. On the other hand, there is no doubt that the motion picture theater gets money from many families that can ill afford even this inexpensive form of entertainment.

These are the possible evils of the motion picture and there are good things to be said about them—so good, in fact, that if the business is properly regulated it becomes a beneficent institution in many respects—one which if lost would mean a severe loss to society.

The motion picture theater, operated along the right lines, affords excellent entertainment at a very small cost. It can be made educational in the highest sense, it can be inspirational in the same degree, and can teach lessons of honesty, faith, faithfulness, courage, sacrifice and any number of virtues. It affords the tired laborer and his family an hour of pleasant mental diversion and physical rest.

The dangers of the motion picture theaters are simple and may be most easily removed by any proprietor who wishes to conduct his business along right lines. All he need do is to carefully censor the films that are offered and have this theater fairly well lighted. Darkness is not necessary to a good showing of the pictures. A theater may be fairly light without any appreciable loss of effect. As a matter of fact there has been recently perfected a system or process by which the pictures may be properly shown in a perfectly lighted theater.

If any of the large number of motion picture shows in Erie is being operated along lines that are detrimental to the public welfare, as there is perhaps reason to believe, it is the business of the police to correct the abuse. But if the police are as inactive in this respect as in many other things which they are supposed to look after, little reliance can be placed upon them.—B. O. in Erie, Pa., Dispatch.

NICKELODIA

Hoisington, Kan.—C. C. Johnson has purchased the interest of Frank Fritscher in the Crystal Theater here.

Manchester, Iowa.—Carl Martin has purchased the Model Theater here from Alton Dunham.

Galesburg, Ill.—A. R. Taylor has opened a new moving picture theater on Main street.

Findlay, Ohio.—A new moving picture theater has been opened here. It is known as the Lyceum.

Maccomb, Ill.—J. D. Bloom, of Monmouth, has sold the Airdome here to Messrs. Nisby Clark and Pete Campbell.

Pekin, Ill.—A. Nachman is planning to open a new moving picture theater here.

Springfield, Mo.—T. E. Hornbeck has disposed of his interest in the Majestic Moving Picture Theater here to S. W. Wilkins.

Forest City, Iowa.—Mr. Bixby has sold the Gem Moving Picture Theater here to Mr. Porterfield, of Hubbard.

Louisiana, Mo.—F. J. Duvall and Dr. E. M. Bartlett are preparing to open a new moving picture theater here.

Salida, Colo.—F. E. Gimlet has commenced the erection of a new theater here.

Iowa City, Iowa.—W. H. Englert is completing arrangements for the erection of a $30,000 theater here.

Topeka, Kans.—Paul Mulvane and J. W. Elliott are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Louis Becker will erect a new moving picture theater at 909 Jefferson street.

Martinez, Cal.—Mr. Joseph A. Kelly is planning the erection of a new vaudeville and moving picture theater here.

Longmont, Colo.—A. H. Buckley is preparing to start a new moving picture theater here.

Gooding, Ill.—Mr. Park has opened the New Vaudette Moving Picture Theater here.

Lima, Ohio.—H. H. Lampe is preparing to open a new moving picture theater here.

Portland, Ore.—H. E. Brouse has secured a permit for the erection of a new moving picture theater at East Sixty-seventh street and Foster avenue.

Ainsworth, Neb.—Schrider Bros. have purchased the Royal Moving Picture Theater here.

EXHIBITORS' PAGE

WHAT THE PUBLIC DEMAND

SUGGESTIONS FOR IMPROVEMENTS

OLYMPIC THEATRE, BROOKLYN

Last Monday morning the sandwich boards throughout the length and breadth of Brooklyn proclaimed the fact that the Rosenquest's Fourteenth Street, New York, had come across to our Borough. I went to their theater and found, although the first day, that everything was bright, light, and in first-class order, good drop scenes and words staring in front of you "Asbestos." Bert Rosenquest was in charge and I don't believe he has slept for the last three or four days because the house bore evidence of a most careful and thorough supervision. The house heretofore in Brooklyn has not been what we could call a success. The Rosenquest work, as is well known to everybody in Fourteenth Street Theater, showed itself at once here.

I am only speaking for the first day, when the machinery is supposed to be a little out of order. It was not so here. Everything went as smoothly and without a jar as though the house had been opened for the last ten years. As to the show itself, it is completely and entirely what the Brooklynite wants. This is not my opinion only, as that would be of little worth in this case, but the opinion of the people who attend it. I heard people from Flatbush, Bushwick, and East New York declare "That is just what we wanted." Clean, clever, well-managed and within the range of our pocket.

The Fourteenth Street Theater, as everybody knows, is one of the greatest successes in New York City in the way of a good show for little money. The old Hyde and Behman Court Theater, now the Olympic, under the Rosenquest management promises to be what I from all my heart wish it to be, a brilliant success. The following was the opening programme:

Walter Percival & Co. presenting "A King for a Night." Abe Washington Lee, valet to Skinner, Walter C. Percival; His Royal Highness, Walter C. Percival; Monte Skinner, Confidence man from the U. S. A., Seymour A. Rose; Mlle. Moncette Du Fieese, a French Heiress, Grace Florence; Lennon, Du Fieese's butler, Joseph Percival. Scene 1—Street in Paris. Scene 2—The Du Fieese Residence. Carline Hoffman, Eccentric comedienne; Carl & Jones, Comedy Instrumentalists, Cornet and Violin; Woodford's Educated Animals, Dogs, Monkeys and Pony, presenting Consul II, the man monkey; Belmont Trio, Sensational Acrobats; Jack Driscoll, King of Illustrated Balladists; Jack's in clover. He has to do two turns now, one at Brooklyn, one at New York, and he has a brand new auto to run him to and fro.

One bright, particular act on the bill was Nice and Lovey, billed as those "entertaining kids," two very clever people. They open with Mr. Lovey as "Buster Brown" and Miss Nice as a kid. Mr. Lovey got away very well singing "Honeymoon Glide." Miss Nice in the Yama Yama number certainly made them sit up singing "Shaky Eyes," as she has the genuine in that respect. They have a whirlwind finish, Mr. Lovey bringing forth roars of laughter in a ballet costume and Miss Nice with her very clever eccentric dancing. They went big.

COMIC FILMS NEEDED

To the Editor of The Moving Picture News:

Dear Sir: In my opinion I think the Comic series in moving pictures is desirous. As it makes one forget his troubles and is compelled to give way to the humor which is created by them. As the saying goes, "Laugh and the world laughs with you," 'tis the same when you go in a moving picture theater, and the comic picture is thrown on the sheet. Some one laughs louder and more heartily than the rest, and that of course makes others see the funny side!

ONE WHO KNOWS.

THE CHESTER BIOGRAPH.

Chester, Pa., February 21, 1911.

Mr. Alfred H. Saunders,
Editor of the Moving Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Mr. Saunders:—It gave me pleasure to read your favor of the 18th inst., referring to the new addition of your valued journal hereafter to be known as the "Exhibitors' Page." Although some other trade papers in our line had some sort of "Exhibitors' Column," I have never steeped a pen in ink to write to any of them, because I thought it would be waste of time, but being impressed by the fact that The News is the "Backbone of the Independent Movement," and consequently the only paper that always fought for the Exhibitors' cause, I faithfully promise to be a frequent contributor to your "Exhibitors' Page." You will receive my first letter in a few days. Wishing you future success, I remain, Yours sincerely, OTTO MILLER.

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports the opening of a new theater in Oswego, N. Y., belonging to George Halsted, for which he furnished a complete outfit consisting of Powers No. 6 Cameragraph with the Hallberg "Economizer."

ONE YEAR'S DEVELOPMENT

There thrives in Butte an enterprise, the Montana Amusement Company, which has linked itself into the daily lives of a greater number of people than any other industry in the state of Montana.

Between January 15, 1910, and the same date in 1911, more than 2,500,000 men, women and children have sought and found wholesome and economical amusement in the pictorial and vaudeville houses now controlled and operated by this phenomenally successful institution.

Astounding, indeed, is the information just given out by this company to the effect that 3,300,000 feet of motion picture films were shown in its theaters during the year, which, if placed end to end, would extend from New York to London and back again and which comprised 49,950,000 separate photographs—figures almost beyond the comprehension of the human mind.

Intimately known to but few of its patrons, the Montana Amusement has developed during the short period of one year into a formidable business industry, and has with giant strides gradually and healthfully passed from a one-theater enterprise to a nine-theater corporation, from employees numbering ten to the little army of one hundred and twenty-five, and from an annual payroll of $8,500 to the gigantic total of $110,000.

The Montana Amusement Company, which began operations in Butte a little more than a year ago, is to-day in control of a chain of profitable houses extending from Billings on the east to Butte on the west and to Great Falls on the north.

In Butte the average weekly attendance at the houses controlled only by this company aggregates 28,000 persons, this figure including the liberal patronage being accorded to the reorganized New Empire Theater, which only seven weeks ago passed into the hands of the Montana Amusement Company, and which, under the Aladdin-like touch of capable management has already become what is undoubtedly the treasure state's foremost vaudeville house.

While the amusement company has recently brought high-class vaudeville within its broad scope of entertainment offerings, the chief source of revenue is derived from its vast motion picture interests. What is one of the handsomest moving picture houses in America is the recently completed Imperial Theater in Butte. Known as "The House of a Thousand Lights and Mirrors," this magnificent theater stands as a monument to the growing popularity of this form of amusement and bespeaks for the Montana Amusement Company and for Butte the high favor in which a superbly appointed motion picture emporium is held by local theatergoers. The Imperial is the only moving picture house in the country equipped with a solid mirror lobby and exclusive leather divan seating facilities.

The Alcazar Theatorium in Anaconda is now being remodeled and in a few days will be similarly arranged. Like the Imperial, the Anaconda house will take first rank among the most costly theaters in the country and will add but another mark of distinction to this rapidly growing enterprise.

No industry in the world is undergoing so rapid an evolution as this marvelous system of visualization, and nothing is becoming more potent as an educational factor in the lives of all classes.

The many thousands of patrons of the Montana Amusement Company have, at an infinitesimal cost, been taken to every country in the world by means of the motion picture. They have visited every city of mentionable size and they have seen every nationality. They have laughed and they have wept at the faithful depiction of life as it existed a thousand years ago and as it is to-day. They have watched the course of the ravages of disease and have learned much concerning medical science. To London, Paris or New York in the twinkling of an eye is but one of the marvelous feats of the motion picture, and the camera does not lie. The people have ceased to marvel, but they have not ceased to be subtly and oftentimes unconsciously influenced, educated or amused.

The Montana Amusement Company, with a capital stock of $200,000, is a close corporation. The stockholders, officers and directors are F. T. Bailey, president; George H. Grombacher, secretary-treasurer, and William Cutts, general manager. These three men have watched carefully over the destinies of the amusement field in Montana and have seen their own enterprise grow out of its swaddling clothes and assume its present proportions.

Gradually but cautiously these local motion picture pioneers have reached out and have grasped many promising sites and locations, until their interests have attained state-wide dimensions. The failure of a motion picture theater is generally a direct result of inefficient management, and even then does one rarely hear of insolvency. That the affairs of the Montana Amusement Company are being efficiently managed is reflected in the present magnitude of the enterprise.

What, in the light of past achievement, the Montana Amusement Company will add to its holdings during the present year will best be written in the history of 1911. It is predicted by the most conservative that the story will be both interesting and one of continued success.

SEEN ON THE CURTAIN

By Walton

The School Ma'am's Courage—(Reliance).—A theme by no means new, yet treated in a way that is new. The photography is good, but the manufacturing end needs attention. The acting is realistic; the "bully" as a serio-comic rôle is a careful study; the school ma'am presented with that tenderness, so full of strength, that marks all this actress' work, by which she is becoming not only a favorite, but an influence wherever these films are shown. The old parents are just a piece of pure home life. The daughter, anxious to help them, secures a school ma'am's position. At first the children, led by the "bully," make her life miserable. She tries to persuade him to help her; he half promises, then betrays her trust. The quiet little body suddenly breaks loose and thrashes him; the beginning of his downfall, which culminates when his father drags him in howling. The girl's influence wins and her birthday is celebrated by presents from her scholars—including the reformed "bully." The last picture with the old folks by the fire and the girl singing an evening hymn of thanksgiving in the "gloaming"; in pose, workmanship and motif, art presented by artists.

The Transgressor—(Nestor).—A sombre story that ends in an act of splendid sacrifice. A man, because of transgression, has to leave wife and child. When the mother is dying she sends for him; he is captured and sent to prison. The daughter is adopted and when grown up has many suitors, amongst them a lawyer—who has a big streak of yellow—and a sailor—the favored one. The father escapes from prison by using the lawyer's coat; this fellow of the skunk tribe finds the old man and demands the daughter or back to prison for him. There's a terrific uproar when the truth becomes known to his daughter; her character does not shine. Then the "transgressor" rises to the sublime when he declares he is not her father, leaving her to comfort while he goes back to prison. The warden takes things pretty calmly. The girl's part serves as a black background to the "transgressor's" light that shines before men.

Savoy Cavalry—(Ambrosio).—Fine examples of the wonderful cavalry drill common in the Italian army. The photography is flawless and the work of the factory that turns out films that are as "steady as a rock," a delight to audiences.

Tweedledum As a Detective—(Ambrosio).—This is a piece of real fun. It is not trick photography and a "chaser." The head and feet of a man stick out of a barrel; a woman sees this and rushes off to the police department. There is immense activity, all funny. Tweedledum is summoned and the crowds, police, everybody, with the volatile pantomime of Italy, sets to work. Tweedledum as Sherlock Holmes is inimitably droll. He measures the foot sticking out of the barrel and then proceeds to upset people and measure their feet. Of course, in true detective style, he arrests an innocent man. The end being, that after all the fuss, it is no murder, but simply a gay dog that is sleeping it off. The last scene is a hilarious riot in which judges, barristers and the rest take part. The reel is really funny, Tweedledum at his best.

The Instalment Plan—(American).—Two young fellows furnish their room from an instalment house. They get behind, so one morning, before they're dressed, Cohen's man comes and strips the place. A wire arrives telling of the coming of aunt and uncle; in desperation they borrow a neighbor's effects—who is out for the day. Just as all are at peace, neighbor returns. Everything is swept out and aunt and uncle depart in high dudgeon. The aunt slips back with some money. I don't think the best has been made of the possibilities of the yarn.

On the Border of the Forest—(Urban-Eclipse).—This is a fine reproduction of a romance from the days "when knights were bold." A Count, secure in his castle, is a rapacious old vagabond, preying upon the peasantry and travelers. The Prince, his overlord, hears of it and, disguised as a monk, enters the Counts castle, sees for himself and denounces him. On his way home, the Count's men set upon him and leave him for dead. He is found by the daughter and retinue of a neighboring Earl, taken home and nursed till he recovers—the battlement wall is an example of what historic background ought to be—meanwhile the Earl is seized and held for ransom—the document shown in Old English is suggestive, but not correct. The ransom is sent and the girl goes with it. The old robber Count, seeing the girl, wants her, not the ransom. Enter the Prince alone, then is shown the power of the overlord in chivalry's law, when the soldiers bow before the Prince and seize the Count. The old rascal gives up his sword, and is sent to a monastery for the rest of his life, in order to meditate and doubtless die "in the odor of sanctity." The Prince declares his love for the girl and they, with the released Earl, march out "under crossed swords." The beauty of the settings and the acting, for instance that of the daughter, faithful in action and spirit, I fail to see why, where this film was posed, it was necessary to paint Norman interiors. In one case a real later Decorated door leads to a Norman hall. I am aware such is quite possible, but when soldiers wear nose plate helms, the architecture, even of doors, must agree. It is not to be forgotten the Count has chain armor. The whole is a fine piece of work, but it might just as well, with the wealth of resource in France, have been archæologically correct.

Only a Sister—(Melies).—This is a wholly commendable film, where a clean heart story is told. There is talk of educational films, here's one. Not how to make things, to make the money, but how a life is saved, and that from my standpoint is more than dollarism. An editor denounces gamblers. The head "squeeze" tries to ruin his son—a young fool—a noble girl, his sister, saves him by giving up her hard earned savings with which she meant to go to college. The girl is not only acting a heroic and splendid part, but she lives it on the screen. Love, of course, is all right, but we get too much of the up-turned eyes, and whimpering coyish slop-over sort that besmears "answers to the love lorn" in the newspaper Weeper columns. Here is strong clean, honest American family love, the foundation of national greatness.

The Two Valentines—(Edison).—As an example of care, just note that the Hebrew gentleman in the boarding-house reads a Hebrew newspaper. Two bashful young folk live in the same boarding-house. Each sends a valentine to the other—identical—which is to be returned if love's proposal is not accepted. Naturally each despairs. As they flee, they meet in the same trolley—curiously enough hugging their valentines. The plot demands that—and all is well. The release is apropos in time. Forgive me, there is no time in "love's sweet dream," it's a film to see. The exhibitor who does not have it makes a mistake. The young lady is one who in all her rôles is welcome to me. She is natural, she has none of that "dying duck" business. She's not an everlasting whimper, nor does her mouth always express supreme discontent with the world at large.

The Three Sisters—(Biograph).—Here a stage girl whirls in sparkling as Mumm, and as true to the vintage. An example of the "loving, loyal hearts" that throb "behind the lights." A pair of sisters don't do much at home. The third, dances in from the stage. She sizes things up; stays home and opens a dancing academy. Here the usual condescending investigating committee comes; a know-nothing crowd from Fifth looking after Third. There are parsons, too, one behind his "dog collar" is a man and spots one of the sisters, May. May, after the manner of her type, fixes it up to "skidoo" with a cigarette consuming decadent. The stage girl is "wise," locks May in her room and makes love to the cigarette fiend. That short skirt killed him. Curate arrives and the stage girl arranges that dishevelled May sees him. May's wrath and the way she gradually finds the curate's vest is a treat. Watch, too, her left hand and how it gets round "his reverence's neck." Rescue is the slogan of this film. By whom? The stage girl with her great, big heart, an eye-opener for "blue" cants. May, the saved, was worth saving—as every woman is.

The Mirror—(Imp).—A young lady cannot make up her mind about two suitors. So she consults a lady seer; one of the young fellows outside the door hears what she has to do in order to see her future husband in a mirror; aforesaid young man gets into her home and hides. The way Miss Pickford went through all the old-time incantations—sacred to All Hallows—even to the coming down stairs backwards holding a lighted candle, shows the careful study which makes for such splendid acting as she did. The mirror scene and the grand finale make up a picture far lifted from the monotonous platitudes so often inflicted upon one. The make-up and doings of the fortune teller are delightful.

The Trail of the Pomos Charm—(Kalem).—This is a truly splendid production. It is full af action and the settings are magnificent. Those scenes amongst the mountains are startling in their vivid realism. One stands amid the glories of the Eternal hills. The love of an Indian maiden for a lonely prospector and how she delivers him from the pursuing Indians afford the theme of the story. The riding of the rescuers amidst the gorges tell of wonderful horsemanship, whilst no less does the chase down the mountainside by the Indians show what fleetness and sure-footedness mean. The acting of the jealous daughter of the Chief is remarkable in its by-play; that of Mawona, tenderly womanly, whilst Blue Day lived his part. But 'tis the scenery, Nature in her majesty that holds and grips. One almost felt the mountain breezes as the reel swept on.

Society and the Man—(Vitagraph).—A forcefully presented story with high-class acting, staging and photographing. A man with his wife and child live happily in the country; he is summoned to the city, where he is a success. Then we see a neglected child, a bridge-playing, fashionable wife, with the inevitable "other" man and the beginning of a scandal. The husband is ruined in a "slump," the wife hears the news amidst her "friends." The sudden frost is mayhap a little over-acted, but it tells the old, old story. In the end the family are brought together once more. Here's another educational film; a real story of real life. A silent preacher more eloquent than a thousand mellifluous highly-paid orators. Well done, Vitagraph, you're living your name and doing the "Vita" end graphically.

Thelma—(Selig).—A presentation of Marie Corelli's picturesque novel. The chief points are taken and a clear and connected story told. It's a tale moving on the uplands of life, such as seen and known in that sternly pure and honorable land, Norway. Many of the pictures are beautiful, none more so than the last one, where Olaf Guildmar, after the manner of his Viking ancestors, feeling death near, seizes his staff and is led to his ship, which is set on fire and thus drifts off to Walhalla. That the whole film is a beautiful and meritorious one I gladly admit, but there are points which one cannot pass. The rocks are not a bit like the fjords, even the beach is different and so are the fields behind. The peasants are not like those I met with Bjorsen or Ibsen. I am aware how difficult such staging is; but as one who has spent many a day in Norwegian homes, it seemed the painted walls were an offence. The English interior is not a bit English. The two letters are in the same hand and that such as no English lady writes. But the one thing that shows utter lack of care and is unpardonable, is in the yacht. A beautiful picture shows the yacht—it is Sir Philip's yacht, an English boat, and yet at the gaff she flies the Stars and Stripes. I admire the film, but one cannot shut one's eyes to blunders, particularly if unnecessary.

The Petticoat Sheriff—(Lubin).—I fear me, this reel is not overly gallant and advise the firm to be careful when militant suffragettes prowl near. A wife opposes her husband in the election for sheriff. She is elected, through the women. Her first case is a "bad man." She disdains help, and is thoroughly humiliated by the "bad man," who completely outwits her. However, "hubby" saves her and nobody knows. A humorous film of the best sort.

Too Much Aunt—(American).—The photography is of the kind that makes watching a picture a pleasure and not a penance. The story deals with a little boy who's getting "one too many" for his parents, due to an aunt. He plays "old soldier" so that he may not go to school. The doctor soon diagnosed his case and he's bundled off with his books, in spite of Auntie's protests. "Auntie" plays now, as she always did, rôles that call for an emphatic lady beautifully. The subject is too near a recent release to be pleasant.

The Heroine of '76—(Rex).—The unfolding of the announcement and its stage setting with the final figure bringing out the trade-mark, the crown, caught the fancy of the audience at once. Clever, striking and effective the film calls for praise—unstinted praise. The acting is good, the photography is what we need and the manufacturing is what we are only too glad to see. I, for my part, gladly welcome the newcomer which from its critical performance promises so much.

Queen for a Day—Vitagraph).—One of the daughters (Sic) of Anak fills the stage physically beyond a doubt. A queen for but a day. She is, in one sense of the word, a queen all the time. Bridget, the colossal cook, raises Cain in the household. She has a fortune left, then she will have none of Heinrich, the German grocer. Through an ad she seeks a title. The "tryouts" are not satisfactory. Heinrich engages some colored men to act as his retinue whilst he poses as the King of Kullaballoo. This fetches Bridget and they're married. Then the dusky guards demand their pay, but are ignominiously expelled by "Her Majesty." Heinrich trembles but Bridget relents. The reel ends with a crash.

The Keith & Proctor audience enjoyed the broad burlesque and laughed all through.

Carmenita, the Faithful—(Essanay).—The photography and the general presentment are satisfactory. The role of Carmenita is true to the life. The theme somewhat stilted and decidedly gray headed. A Mexican determines to have Carmenita and steals her from her helpless husband. In the end the inevitable cowboy rescue. The knife and crucifix episode reveals Carmenita's talent.

His First Commission—(Edison).—A Lincoln tale, and for that, if nothing else, bound to be popular. I didn't admire the make-up of Lincoln; his top hat is outre. Because a soldier is rewarded for bravery Lincoln's son "Tad" demands and gets a commission. Armed with this he enlists the children. The part all through is cleverly acted by the boy. He goes through the grounds and finds a sentry whose place he takes—all on the strength of his commission. The soldier flies to the bedside of a sick wife, is arrested and taken before the President, who hears his tale. The President and the private go out and find a very tired little boy still faithfully keeping watch. The tale is fraught with humor and pathos. The tender heart of Lincoln is an admirable theme and an honor to the screen.

Review of the Chilian Troops—(Pathe).—An interesting military film, excellent in production, with well-chosen viewpoints.

The Missing Bride—(Pathe).—A very beautiful colored production full of life, and interesting in its settings. A bridal party set off to have some fun. The synopsis says the games are amongst the ruins of an "old castle." Pardon me, Mr. Synopsis, but wasn't that "old castle" an abbey, somewhere near where nave and choir meet? They play "hide and seek," and the bride climbs through the ivy and suddenly falls into a secret passage; this she follows, opens a door, only to find herself locked in a vaulted chamber. There she finds another bride seated, but lo! a crumbling skeleton. Her tale of sin is dramatically revealed by visions. Meanwhile there is fruitless search for the missing girl. A cat (not kitten, Mr. Synopsis) gets into the chamber and thus a message is sent to the upper world and she is rescued. (By the way, was it the same cat that ran into that hole which afterwards appears on the table and in the young folk's arms? It ought to be.) The magnificent ruins, the gayly garbed vivacious French folk and the secret vault all go to make an interesting and meritorious reel. I feel certain it is one that will be called for once its beauty is known.

The Norwood Necklace—(Thanhouser).—A film where the lady detective looms large and acts her part succinctly and well. The story moves along smoothly and one does not need to worry as to what it's all about. The kind of film the man not over-endowed with brains likes, because it tells its own story as any well conceived and acted play does. A valuable necklace is stolen, passed on to a confederate, who gets on the train, learns the authorities are wise and hides it in a child's doll. To get it back is the trouble, the detective as a maid gets the clue and the scornful lady is marched to duress hard and plenty.

The Salted Mine—(Bison).—A man "salts" a mine, but the man who was to buy loses his money to a gambler. The fellow who lost waylays the gambler and wounds him; before he can grab the wallet a prospector appears and takes the wounded man to his camp; here the wallet falls out of his pocket and is carelessly thrown into the wagon. The prospector reports a "strike" to his family. The gambler overhears this, which has such an effect upon him that—wounded—he flings himself upon his horse and registers his claim, thus defrauding the man that helped him. However, it is the "salted" mine and the prospector drives off with the wallet in his wagon. Thus is justice done and equity maintained! Fiat Justica ruaf Collum! Collum in this case is the x of the equation.

A Double Elopement—(Lubin).—A young couple are in love; the girl's mother will have none of it. The boy's father, a widower whom experience has not taught, essays to help his son. Result is the widow and he decide to elope. Meanwhile the young folks decide to do likewise. By chance they go to the same cleric; then there is surprise and finally reconciliation. The film abounds in humorous situations which the actors handle well. A work that fills the house with laughs.

Napoleon in 1814—(Gaumont).—Scenes laid in a French village between the crises of 1812 and 1815. An only son of a widow is drafted; on a battlefield he is left for dead. The Emperor rests at the widow's cottage. There he falls asleep and the widow full of the spirit of Wiertz determines to stab him. An Eastern guard saves him. The son returns and is forgiven by Napoleon. The film abounds in stirring events, fine groupings and realistic portraitures. Gaumont handles the theme as a French firm ought to do, with historical exactitude. It is a revealing of the spirit that seethed amongst the people in the days of the Empire's decadence.

Foolshead at the Kinematograph—(Itala).—The comedian's antics at the moving picture show are full of fun. The destruction of the building, amidst dust, beams and wildly waving legs and arms, oddly grotesque.

The Angel of His Dream—(Powers).—The theme is disjointed and the acting, for the most part, stilted. The vision of the angel looks like a girl in a cotta where the draping needs attention. I think 'tis a dream that saves an artist. Somewhat on the lines of the Imp production, but far behind in general conception and execution.

The Little Avenger—(Reliance).—A girl is arrested and saved by the kind-hearted wife of a policeman. Enter the low-down politician, who, as he cannot bribe the policeman, determines to "break" him with the aid of a grafting "cop." Then a "protected" dive which the policeman finds in full blast. As he will not keep silence, perjured witnesses have him dismissed. The girl, wise to such business, goes to the dive, sees the "dough" passed to the "cop," traitor acting for "the man higher up." She loses her life but her friend gets his shield back. A sequence of affairs, as enacted in the "Tenderloins" with which the dwellers in great cities know only too well.

Found Again—(Great Northern).—Whatever this firm produces is marked by magnificent acting and splendid photography; this film is an example of both. The production is full of dramatic situations cleverly handled. Two young people are happily married; as time rolls on the husband's love grows cold, and in order to get rid of his wife he pretends that the marriage was not bona fide. The woman in her agony departs with her child to her parents' home; the mother receives them; from some extraordinary mental twist the father finds such a course dishonorable. She, being an accomplished singer, determines to try grand opera, where she becomes a "star." In her host of admirers a baron is so persistent that she shakes him before the gathering. With the fury of a little villain rebuffed he determines upon revenge. The picture of the home life here introduced is tender and striking. Upon the stage, in the midst of her triumph, the blackguard baron shoots her from a box. He is arrested; she is taken to an hospital. In the doctor she recognizes her lying husband, who kneels in penitence by her side as she "crosses the bourne." The theatrical scenes are real. The story whilst strong, in a way, presents two detestable creatures, almost beyond belief—the supersensitive father and the contemptible, cowardly husband. One hog of that breed is enough at a sitting.

Her Darkest Hour—(Imp).—"Little Mary" adds to her laurels. The story is of a girl's trials and tribulations in trying to live. A school teacher, she loses her place because the village gossip persuades the nincompoop-education board she is incompetent. As a typewriter her employer is of the class that take advantage of defenceless girls. In her despair, through a bottle of milk, she is taken to a widower's home where his obstreperous child falls in love with her. Result she stays there as mistress for life. A film that shows some of the trials of a lonely girl; the actions at all times made good. In the last scene "Little Mary" and the child carried the house. On the holiday a crowd at the Fourteenth Street Theater did not only laugh, but gusts of laughter swept the house all through. At its release this reel spelt another Imp success.

The Demon—(Ambrosio).—A fantastic, mystery tale belonging to the Faust cycle, so popular as teachers in the middle ages. The laying of the scenes with Khurdish surroundings affords fine opportunities for picturesque costumes and effective backgrounds. The drama founded upon Lermontof opens with Satan cast out of heaven and then as a voice attacking a beautiful girl drawing water. She is betrothed to a neighboring chief and she, her family and maidens make merry awaiting his coming. The chief and his followers are shown at bivouac; the enemies attack and the chief is slain. A wonderfully realistic knife dance is shown, whilst the girl and friends wait and an equally vivid scene when the corpse of the chief arrives. The girl retires to a convent. Behind all is the recurring Satanic appearances. In the convent the climax comes when evil is finally defeated by good. That the whole production is beautiful and that the teaching is high is beyond cavil. But the miserable translation in the subtitles and the misuse of English words that have varying meanings misleads an audience and destroys the effect of an, otherwise, laudable release.

The "outliving" instead of "surviving" is one of the examples of carelessness (?) in Ambrosio's fine production, "The Demon." How under the sun anyone in Turin allowed

(Continued on page 23.)

MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

THE FISHER MAID
Imp Release, March 16

The love of the daughter of a poor fisherman for a young man far above her in social station forms the plot of a highly interesting love story, which terminates happily with a marriage.

The story opens with Paula, the fisher maid, meeting her father as he returns from a fishing voyage, the simple fisher folk welcoming the coming of the relatives.

Ambrose Fenton, the sweetheart of Paula, arrives and is greeted affectionately by the loving, trusting girl. Their little affair appears to be running smoothly when jealousy enters the story and the heart of the maid is broken.

Ambrose asks the girl to be his wife, and she consents. Happy, in the exuberance of her joy, she tells her father. The honest old fisherman is doubtful of the sincerity of Ambrose, and his suspicions are confirmed when he sees his daughter's lover in the company of a woman of his own social set. The daughter is hurriedly summoned, and looking through a gate they see Ambrose kiss the girl. Paula is borne away by her indignant father, who swears to be avenged for the supposed wronging of his daughter. The young woman with Ambrose is his sister, who has journeyed far to see him, and has not met his sweetheart as yet.

Paula, unable to bear her grief, resolves to end her life, and chooses a death in solitude. She staggers to the beach, throws the oars out of a fishing dory and, seating herself in the boat, is washed out to sea. Her father, noting her absence, prosecutes a search, aided by the villagers. They discover the missing boat and the oars on the sand, and the mystery is explained. The father is frantic in his grief.

Ambrose, missing his sweetheart, calls at the humble home of her father. The fisherman denounces him for a trifler and a betrayer of the affections of his child, and Ambrose is attacked by the indignant friends of the girl. He finally gathers from them that Paula, thinking him false, has gone to sea to end her life. He explains to the father, who falls unconscious.

Ambrose, frantic with grief, starts to find the girl if possible, and is successful. Stumbling over rocks on an island, with the spray dashing over him, he finds Paula lying at the water's edge, the body rising and falling with the waves. Breathing a prayer of thankfulness, he takes her in his arms and swims for the mainland, arriving at the home of the griefstricken father, exhausted. Paula is revived. The face of Ambrose is the first one she sees when regaining consciousness. He tells her the supposed rival is his sister, and she is overjoyed.

The finale is a pretty scene with Ambrose and Paula on the seashore. The fisher maid has been transformed into a stylishly garbed woman and is comely to look upon. Ambrose draws her to him and with her parasol writes on the sand, "My Wife."

THE SECRET OF THE PALM
Imp Release, March 13

Cecil Abbott is the foreman of the Canby fruit ranch in Cuba and also a favorite suitor for the hand of Edna, the handsome daughter of the ranchman.

The mother of Don Alvarez, an old-time friend of Canby, sends her son to Cuba to enjoy the hospitality of her schoolmate of years ago, and the intriguing Spaniard makes trouble for all concerned. Don Alvarez sees Edna, and is smitten by her charms. He also notes her love for the handsome foreman and plots his ruin. Cecil is entrusted with the mailbag and rides away to the postoffice. Don Alvarez takes advantage of his absence to declare his love for Edna and is repulsed in a decisive manner. Don Alvarez, accustomed to fascinating women, is chagrined and enraged.

Cecil meets Edna is a pretty spot while returning from the postoffice and they engage in a little tete-a-tete. The romantic scene is broken in upon by the Spaniard, who steals forth stealthily and takes the mail pouch from Cecil's horse. The young couple, happy in their great love, walk to the ranch house. The rancher comes out for his mail, to find it gone. Cecil is nonplussed. He is accused of having robbed the mail pouch, and is in disgrace. The girl sympathizes with him, but the faith of Canby is shaken.

Don Alvarez, once in possession of the pouch, is at a loss as to the most effectual way to dispose of it. He finally decides to secrete it in the topmost branches of a palm tree. He makes the perilous ascent and, fatigued and frightened, reaches the top and hides the bag, exultant. He returns to the ranch and secretly rejoices at the downfall of his rival.

Later, Don Alvarez receives a letter from his mother conveying the intelligence that she has sent him money by a former mail, and the villain discovers that it is in the sack that he has secreted in the tree.

He is in favor with the ranchman and has been entrusted with the carrying of the mail. Leaving hurriedly, he climbs the tree, to look down and discover a clandestine meeting between Edna and Cecil. Enraged, he shakes his fist at the lovers. They move away, and in his eagerness to regain possession of the pouch, he loses his hold and falls, carrying with him the bag. He is found, bruised and dying, at the foot of the tree by Edna and Cecil. The honest young fellow carries his rival to the ranch and Canby is summoned. Edna has picked up the mail bag and follows, mystified. Her entrance with the bag rouses the Spaniard and, with his dying breath, he confesses his crime, absolving Cecil from all blame.

It is needless to remark that Cecil is restored to the favor of Canby and Edna—she has never doubted him—is taken in his arms. Don Alvarez dies, and the inference is that Cecil is promoted from ranch manager to son-in-law.

ROBERT EMMET
Thanhouser Release, March 17

Robert Emmet, although he died at the age of 25, made a record that will always keep his memory green among his countrymen. From his boyhood his heart was set on freeing Ireland from English rule. He entered Trinity College and made a brilliant name for himself there, but was expelled through the discovery of his affiliation with the United Irishmen.

He spent several years in exile, during which period he was received by Napoleon, whom he tried unsuccessfully to interest in the Irish cause. Returning to his native land, he headed an uprising that failed.

He escaped with several of his followers, but despite their protests returned to see his sweetheart, Sarah Curran, and was captured by the British soldiers.

While in prison he shielded Sarah from the prying authorities, and offered to plead guilty if she was not subject to official annoyance. Despite all efforts to save him, he was executed in Dublin.

The pathetic love story of Emmet and Sarah Curran is a page in history that will never be forgotten by their countrymen.

"He had lived for his love, for his country he died,
They were all that to life entwined him;
Nor soon shall the tears of his country be dried,
Nor long will his love stay behind him."
—Tom Moore.

HIS YOUNGER BROTHER
Thanhouser Release, March 14

A young clerk, employed by a wealthy broker, weakly yields to the temptations of city life, and embezzles some of the money entrusted to his care. He found out, of course, and is about to fly when an officer arrives at his home and places him under arrest. In a last effort to hide his disgrace from his loving sister and mother he tells them that he is the victim of a plot and is being railroaded to prison for the sins of his employer.

The sister believes him, as sisters will, and forms a daring plan to save him. She decides to disguise herself as a boy, secure employment with the broker, and discover his secrets. Then she will free her darling brother.

Part of her scheme is successful. She lands the job, and wins the broker's confidence. Against her will, she day by day finds it harder to keep on hating him. He is kind-hearted, charitable and considerate, not at all what she had expected him to be.

The broker even goes so far as to decide to free the young embezzler. He pleads with the judge, urges him to give the young man a chance to retrieve his folly, and the clerk leaves prison. Full of gratitude, he accompanies his employer to his office, and there frankly admits all his wrongdoing. The new "clerk" listens with horror. She realizes that the broker was unjustly accused and that her brother had lied to her. Overpowered by emotion, her condition finally attracts the guilty man. He looks up to see the sister he loves gazing sorrowfully at him, and realizes the sacrifices she has made in a misguided effort to "clear" a name that deserved to be bad.

The brother's cry of recognition gives the broker his first inkling of the truth. He realizes that the bright boy who has recently come into his employ was no other than the sister of his former clerk. Too astonished for words, the broker allows the brother and sister to leave the office without further explanation. When they have gone, he sends after them a note informing the boy that he is to have a fresh start as the broker's agent in Brazil, and that if his "younger brother" will consent, she can fill his old position. For the broker has realized that the supposed boy had found a place in the heart he never thought would be pierced by Cupid's arrow.

THE GIRL AND THE OATH
Champion Release, March 15

Amy and Helene are sisters, between whom more than the ordinary sisterly affection exists, and more so, since the death of their mother, Amy's care for her baby sister had grown into worship.

The boys on their father's ranch are about to commence the regular round-up, and are to be gone for almost a half year, for the boundaries of the old ranchman's lands are far between, and his cattle number hundreds of thousands. Favorite among the boys is Tom, and this is true with the girls also, who are actually in love with him. However, Tom's love is bestowed on Helene, but his friendship for Amy misleads her into believing that her love is returned.

As the boys on this day are bidding good-bye, Tom is upstairs being secretly married to Helene by the parson, who had entered through the window.

Not long after the boys had left, the ranchman is mortally stricken. Before passing away, he confides to Amy that Helene is not her sister, but is a child of his own sister, born out of wedlock. Amy gives her fervid promise to never tell Helene the awful truth, and as her father closes his eyes, she repeats her solemn oath to ever retain the secret, and to always love and protect her "baby Helene."

With the return of the cowboys eight months later, the house is gaily decorated by the girls and preparations made for a rousing welcome. Then does Amy realize that in the deep embrace of Tom and Helene her love is ill spent, and with the fire of jealous hate and predominating evil, she enters the festooned room alone, destroying everything her hands clutch, and cursing aloud the sister who had succeeded.

Hastening within, the guests are startled at the scene. With evil mind, the frenzied Amy has gripped the frail throat of the younger girl, and e'er the onlookers sufficiently recover, Helene is lying senseless at her assailant's feet, who then proclaims to the crowd that Helene is not her sister, and that she is a child of shame. Tom then acknowledges his secret marriage, whereupon Amy utters a piercing shriek and falls back into the arms of the boys.

Weeks after, upon recovering from her illness, Amy attempts to leave, but is intercepted by Helene, who imparts a bit of news which turns her sorrow into joy. She will stay and help care for the coming child. With the entrance of the beauty and grandeur of motherhood into the home flees the evil from Amy's soul, and as she cuddles the tiny mite to her breast, love is again awakened to her.

HIS DOUBLE TREASURE

Yankee Release, March 17

Imagine befriending an injured seaman and hearing from his lips the strange story of a buried treasure which had laid hidden for a great many years where even the old seaman who possessed a map of the location had not been able to find it. Then you begin to see an interesting plot with possibilities for many novel situations.

Upon the death of the seaman, the map was carefully gone over and sent to the nephew of the man to whom it was bequeathed by the dead seaman with minute instructions how to proceed with the search.

The nephew, fresh from college, was cruising about for his health, finally stopping off at Bermuda, where, fortunately, the map indicated the treasure might be found. Receiving his uncle's letter and instructions, he entered into the spirit of the quest for the excitement of the venture rather than in the belief that he would really find the hidden gold; but he little dreamed that a pretty girl and two murderous brigands would add to the excitement.

His experiences before locating the treasure were rather thrilling for a young college chap, and the film is made to show them. That he lost the treasure the moment it reached his hands is also a part of the narrative, but the pretty girl through cleverness and bravery not only saved his life but restored the treasure to him, and you can guess what followed.

The film was staged and photographed in Bermuda, where superb scenic environment abounds in plenty.

THE TEST OF LOVE

Yankee Release, March 13

Carmencita, wild, care-free daughter of Spain, fair of face and with voluptuous form; the favorite dancer of Madrid's wine gardens, was fascinated by an American tourist, and just to tease her lover, kept up a continuous flirtation which brought about an almost tragedy.

Just how she contrived to save the American's life at the risk of her own, and then proved her love for her Spanish sweetheart, forms an excellent story which has been conveyed to the film in a striking and original manner.

Scenic possibilities have been drawn on to a great extent in beautifying the subject, and the photography quality is really unusual.

THE FALL OF A KNIGHT

Rex Release, March 9

All over the world there is nightfall; but never the fall of a night like this. Many times since knighthood was in flower, and even after it withered, many errant and erring knights have fallen from the pedestal whereon they fain would climb down to the dust of earth—dust which they have bitten.

Her parents desire her to marry a nobleman, but she and a certain he do not agree with the old folks' ultimatum. The father inserts an advertisement in the newspapers inviting noblemen to call at his home for matrimonial and monetary purposes. An impecunious waiter reads the ad and at once determines to enter the lists in' the role of a nobleman. He writes that he will call; and the two young people forthwith arrange for his fall. The he gets the butler to permit him to don his clothes and assume his stoic position in life; the she engages Biddy, the cook, to impersonate herself, the heiress.

The Count makes his entrance and is entranced by the elevated Biddy. Things go well, when Biddy's lover, the traditional policeman, passing the window, sees the love-scene and makes a hasty and formidable appearance. After a strenuous little while, the Count finds himself on the cold, unsympathetic pavement where, a little later, the girl's parents, returning home, find him. With profuse apologies they escort him back to the house—where suddenly the girl's lover recognizes him as a waiter at a favorite restaurant. That settles it. For the second time, and with worse results, through the window we see a "knight-fall."

OUT OF THE ARCTIC

Solax Release, March 8

Helen Morris is loved by Dr. Hartley, and while she does not care for the doctor she is so urgently begged by her father to accept him that she frankly consents to do so. Later she meets Walter Hughes and the young couple fall violently in love. The doctor surprises them during a scene where the young lovers are oblivious to all the world and starts to upbraid Helen for her faithlessness.

Helen promptly tells the doctor that she cannot become his wife, and returns his ring. The doctor conceals his rage, but determines upon a subtle revenge. An Arctic expedition is being quietly organized, of which he is the head, and he contrives so that Walter is cajoled into signing on for the voyage.

When Helen hears the news she realizes that the doctor means no good to her lover, and begs Walter not to go. Walter, who has been taunted and ridiculed for his backwardness, tells her that it would be impossible for him to back out now. Helen then seeks Dr. Hartley and begs him to release her lover. The doctor consents, knowing full well that Walter will not now withdraw. Helen finally swears him upon a crucifix that she wears that he will return her lover to her unharmed. The doctor takes this oath and the expedition departs.

We next find the members of the expedition in a box house on the edge of the Northern wilds. They depart for their ship, and the next scene is in the cabin of their ship. The ship is crushed by the ice and an explosion occurs. The doctor and Walter, by some strange fatality, are the only ones of all the ship's company that are left alive. They remain around the ship's wreck for several weeks, the doctor's hatred for his successful rival increasing daily.

Finally they depart in a hazardous effort to get South. Walter is helped along by the doctor until they get to the snow house, within which they seek shelter. Walter, in a delirium, murmurs Helen's name, which so infuriates the doctor that he raises an axe to strike the fatal blow. Helen appears as a vision to him, her extended hand holding the crucifix, her lips murmuring a reminder of his oath. Panic-stricken, Hartley drops the axe, renews his oath and, taking Walter on his back, starts on his desperate effort to gain civilization.

Far south a fete is in progress. Among the fair we see Helen. Suddenly she stops—a look of horror passes over her face—the scene in the box house now being enacted in the Northern wilds is before her gaze. Wildly she turns to her father and requests him to take her away. The family, acting upon Helen's insistence that they go, depart for the North, and we see them, as the drama draws to a close, in the box house. A cry is heard from the outside, they look and find Hartley and Walter—the former having carried the sick boy on his back the whole distance. He staggers in with his burden—sees Helen, points feebly to his charge, says "I have kept my oath," and falls prone upon the floor.

PUT OUT

Solax Release, March 10

Going away upon business, Scroggins bids his wife a fond good-bye. Returning to the room after her husband's departure, Mrs. Scroggins finds Mary, the maid, engaged in a flirtation from the window. The masher with whom Mary has been flirting determines to see the fair lady who has invited his attention, and so securing a ladder he climbs in through a window.

Mrs. Scroggins, coming into the room, is amazed and alarmed to find an intruder in the room. The masher, supposing that Mrs. Scroggins is the girl with whom he has been flirting, begins to make love to her. Beating a hasty retreat, Mrs. Scroggins runs frantically through the house and, coming finally to the kitchen, finds Nora engaged in a quiet tete-a-tete with a husky plumber who has come to fix the pipes.

The plumber readily consents to come to the assistance of Mrs. Scroggins. The two women remain in the kitchen while the plumber goes to dispose of the intruder. In the meantime Scroggins, who has missed his train, returns to his house. The masher, hearing his approach, secretes himself. Scroggins and the plumber, entering the room at the same time, collide. The plumber, thinking that Scroggins is the one to be evicted, promptly proceeds to throw him out of the window.

The scenes are depicted in a most interesting and amusing manner, and the series of side-splitting complications that follow keep the house in an uproar.

On the same film is

CARIBOU HUNTING

This film shows the great Northern wilderness in all its autumn beauty. The scenic views in this film are absolutely without a peer, the tinting and toning is wonderful, and the beautiful scenes depicted give an accurate portrayal of the grandeur and beauty of the virgin forests.

This film is also of great educational value and such a picture will be greatly appreciated by the city audiences.

THE SON OF THE EXECUTIONER

Great Northern, Release March 11

This is an unusual subject, cleverly conceived and well acted, the plot turning on the dislike which everyone feels for the grim human instruments of capital punishment. The old executioner, nevertheless, feels a professional pride in his occupation, and designs that his son shall succeed him. Accordingly on the crown of his head is branded a cross such as his father wears. The young man, however, has a strong antipathy to this grim occupation, and he runs away to seek his fortune. However, no one will have anything to do with the man who bears the hated brand on his head, and the young man is at his wit's end to know what to do until a witch, to whom he renders some service, gives him a magic sword, with which he performs many deeds of valor and rescues a princess who is beset by highwaymen. He is received at the palace and made much of. A devastating fire occurs there, accompanied by many thrilling scenes. The queen, deserted by her craven maids, is in danger of losing her life in the flames. The executioner's son goes to the rescue, but as he emerges bearing his unconscious burden, his hat comes off and the hideous cross is revealed. There are immediately cries of execration at the thought that this "unclean" person has been in the confidence of the king, and the young man's life is in danger until the queen and princess plead for him. The king gets over the difficulty of his ignoble origin by making him a knight and he weds the princess.

NICKELODIA

Sun Prairie, Wis.—E. A. Kleiner and B. B. Cobb are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Lima, O.—L. G. Berger is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater on North Main street, to be known as the Lyric.

Dixon, Ill.—Messrs. Henry Clopine and Arthur Angelmier are making arrangements to open a new theater here.

Schuylerville, N. Y.—The Wonderland moving picture theater here, owned by Cholakis Matthews, was destroyed by fire.

Patterson, N. J.—Joseph M. and William A. Daly, are making plans for the erection of a new theater at 298 Main street.

Scranton, Pa.—Architect Harvey J. Blackwood is drawing plans for a new nickelette at 308 Lackawanna avenue for Thenon & Co.

Allentown, Pa.—S. B. Walker, of Coplay, has purchased the Lyric Theater here from Mark Sanderowitz, of Siegfried.

ADVICE TO OPERATORS ORACLE PRACTICAL ARTICLES FOR ALL DEPARTMENT

By WM. E. SMITH, E. E.

RHEOSTAT

The function of a rheostat is to limit the supply of electrical energy furnished to the arc lamp, and also to help maintain a steady light.

It has been found impractical to operate an arc lamp directly upon the source of supply without some steadying resistance in its circuit, since the resistance of the arc varies over a very wide range of value, due to the different grades of carbons being used.

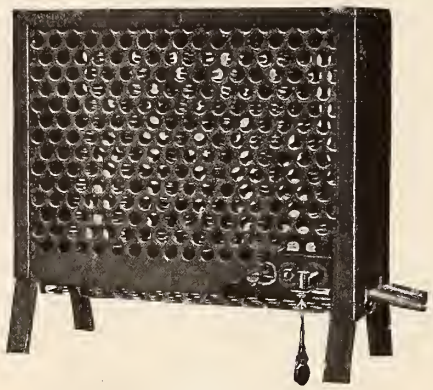

Fig. 2

When the carbons are in contact the resistance of the arc is practically at zero, except that which is due to the structure of the carbons. If we were to connect up the arc lamp in this condition without a rheostat or resistance of some kind in circuit to a low voltage supply, say a 120-volt circuit, we would be liable to pass as much as 300 amperes across the arc which would result in a general burn out.

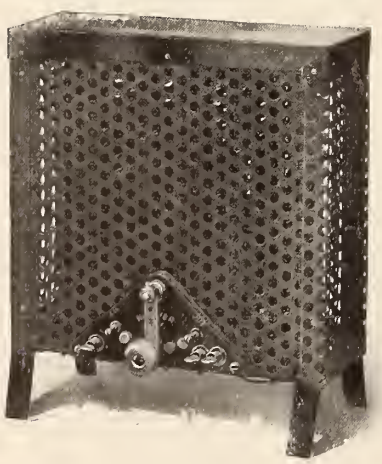

Fig. 3

Figure 2 shows the type of rheostat for 25 amperes at 120 volts furnished by the N. Power Company, of New York, to comply with the requirements of National Board of Fire Underwriters for New York City and the city of Chicago. (This rheostat is of the non-adjustable type.)

A rheostat for an arc lamp is usually made up of a number of coils of resistance wire wound in the form of helix. This wire must have sufficient carrying capacity so that it will not become heated to excess. Its temperature should not rise above 550 deg. F., and the whole structure must be mounted in a sheet iron enclosing frame.

Fig. 4

Figure 3 is a 25-ampere adjustable rheostat. The most practical form of rheostats for projecting work are made variable, so as to increase or decrease the amperage according to the conditions arising.

The resistance wires of the rheostat should be insulated from the frame work of the rheostat at the points at which they are supported so that the frame work will not cause a short circuit of the resistance coils.

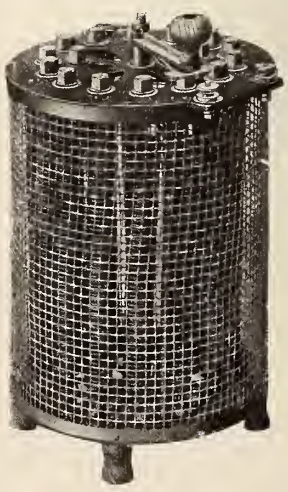

Fig. 5

Figure 4 illustrates a 120-volt circular rheostat and has heavier resistance wire than the 25-ampere rheostat, and is adjustable for use on voltages up to 120 volts. It will safely carry 30 amperes of current.

A 220-volt adjustable rheostat is illustrated in Figure 5 and is similar in design to the 120-volt circular rheostat, but has heavier coils of resistance wire which are longer and it is adjustable for use on any voltage up to 220 volts. It will safely carry 35 amperes of current and is so arranged that it can be completely divided and the two halves used separately or in multiple.

There are many patented forms of rheostats; the most common form of resistor material for rheostat construction is wire.

Wire can be wound in coils, stretched over insulated frames or imbedded in porcelain. Wires larger than No. 6 B. & S. are difficult to wind in spiral form. When it is desired to increase the current capacity of a coil resistor beyond that of a No. 6 B. & S. several coils must be connected in multiple.

The finished coils are generally mounted in an iron frame. They are suspended vertically from insulated supports and interconnected so as to give the proper current capacity and resistance.

The total resistance should be divided into units containing a sufficient number of coils in multiple to give the required current capacity and then enough of these units in series to give the required resistance.

The kind of wire generally used for rheostats is nickel steel, as it has a resistance of 517 ohms per cir-mil foot (that is a nickel steel wire 1/1000 of an inch in diameter and one foot long has a resistance of 517 ohms).

Louis Goodman, N. Y. writes:—Allow me to trouble you with a few questions:

1. Does the Edison Company only put in 220-volt meters on the A. C. circuits in the Bronx?

2. If there is a 220-volt meter, does it mean that the arc lamp must be hooked up on 220 volts or can't be hooked up on 110 volts?

3. Is there any M. P. lamp in the Bronx that is hooked up on 220 volts; is it allowed by the city department?

4. Does the city department allow the Standard or any other picture machine to be run by motor.

5. Can I use a 60-cycle Hallberg economizer on 125 cycles?

Answer:—1. The Edison Company make it a practice to install a three-wire circuit, 220 volts between the outside wires and 110 volts between the outside and the neutral wires. On a three-wire circuit, the two outside wires enter the meter and the neutral wire is tapped so as to place the armature of the meter across one side of the circuit. 2. If there is only a two-wire 220-volt circuit, the lamp must be connected across the 220-volt circuit.

3. From the report of the New York Edison Company they do not specify any motion picture house in the Bronx as being supplied with a two-wire 220-volt service. The city department code does not say what the service voltage may be so long as the arc lamp voltage is 45 so long as the device for reducing the voltage is of the approved type.

4. The only motor driven picture machine that is approved of as yet by the city department is the American Standard. I understand the Powers, Motiograph and Edenagraph companies have submitted motor driven machines for approval; any machine that is driven by a makeshift motor device is in direct violation of the city department and underwriters' rulings.

5. Yes, you can use a 60-cycle economizer on a 125-cycle circuit; it will hum a little louder than on 60 cycles, but will be just as efficient on 125 cycles.

Rush L. Carey, Albion, N. Y., writes and asks as follows:—Would you kindly let me know if I can run a moving picture arc lamp on a 25-cycle current; which would be the better to use alternating current at 25 cycles or direct current? How can I obtain direct current from alternating current? I have heard such a thing is possible? What make of picture machine would you recommend?

Answer:—Yes, Albion, you can run your arc lamp on a 25-cycle current, but why do you wish to run your arc lamp on 25-cycle current when there is a 60-cycle line running through Albion; you would get a much better and steadier light from 60-cycle current than you will from 25-cycle current.

I presume you do not know that there is a 60-cycle line in Albion. If you will get in touch with the Chas. L. Sweet Power Co., at Medina, N. Y., they have a 60-cycle line going to Albion.

In regards to changing from alternating to direct current, there are two ways in which it may be done. 1. By using a motor generator set. If you will write to the Fort Wayne Electric Works, at Fort Wayne, Ind., they make a special machine for motion picture arc lamps.

2. By using a Mercury Arc Rectifier. If you will communicate with the General Electric Co., 30 Church street, New York City, they would be pleased to send you a circular of their mercury arc rectifiers as made for motion picture arc lamps.

I would advise you to communicate with the advertisers of machines in our columns. Such machines as the Powers No. 6. The motiograph, the Standard and the Edison are all A-1 machines.

Newark, N. J., asks if he can alter his rheostat coils so that he can run in series with another resistance which is outside the operator's coop, and get a range of 25 to 45 amperes.

Answer:—Without knowing the exact gauges, material and lengths used for these resistance spirals I cannot give any definite advice. I think it would be best for you to get an ammeter in circuit. You can then easily figure out the exact resistance in ohms on each stop of the rheostat. In calculating care must be taken to deduct the arc voltage from the supply voltage, as the electric arc itself is not to be regarded as a resistance

If: Supply voltage=220 volts.
Arc voltage=50 volts.
Amperes on first stop=20 amp.

Then from Ohm's law:—

$$\text{Resistance} = \frac{\text{Volts.}}{\text{Current}} = \frac{220-50}{20} = \frac{170}{20} = 8\tfrac{1}{2} \text{ ohms.}$$

If you make a series of tests as indicated with switch on each contact in turn you will then know the exact resistance at each contact. From these tests it will be easy to calculate the effect of removing part of the resistance or altering connections to contacts. You will then know where to put your third terminal for other voltages.

Gasoline Electric Generating Sets.—Alfred Doyle Mont., writes saying he is using a gasoline driven generating set for running his arc lamp and lighting ten 16-candlepower lamps and two flaming arc lamps. The dynamo is running with every satisfaction, but the engine has lately developed some peculiarities. The engine, when cold, starts up quite nicely, and previously I have been able to adjust the speed, within certain limits, by advancing or retarding the spark. Lately, however, after the engine has been running for a little while, movements of the spark lever apparently have no effect on the running, and after switching off engine it continues to run with nasty thuds for quite a number of revolutions. The engine runs considerably noisier than previously, and the water in circulation tank gets very hot. I shall be very pleased if you can help me.

Answer:—Brother Doyle, your trouble is clearly caused by pre-ignition, due to overheating of certain parts. Sometimes it is caused by a sharp edge or points of sparking plug reaching incandescence, and so igniting the charge of gas too early. If your trouble dates from the changing of a sparking plug, this may account for it; but I am more inclined to believe that the tops of pistons and cylinder head are fouled with carbon. This is caused, primarily, by an improper and over-rich mixture of gas, due to too little air in the carburetor. The heat from each explosion is retained by this carbon (which is a very bad conductor), and soon reaches a temperature sufficiently high to explode the charges of gas before the spark takes place. This accounts for engine running after being switched off, and also explains the overheating of your cooling water. Your remedy will be to remove cylinder heads and scrape off the carbonous matter from both inside of cylinder top and piston crown. This should right matters and you might try, if you have the means, giving more air to carburetor.

I. A. T. S. E., Local 160, M. P. P. M. O.

Cleveland, Ohio.

The following were elected to office for the ensuing year: Joseph Scheiver, president; C. Gleichman, vice-president; Joseph Swartz, financial secretary; Howard W. Codding, recording and corresponding secretary; Harland Holmden, business agent; S. M. Hulbert and R. W. Mullen, delegates to convention; H. W. Codding and Harland Holmden, delegates to central body; Ernst Widler, sergeant-at-arms; H. W. Codding, Raymond Ray and A. Jay Smith, trustees; A. J. Smith, Elmer Cox, H. W. Codding, Max Rosenfeild and Harland Holmden, executive board; Elmer Cox, August Maier, Raymond Ray, R. W. Mullen and J. A. Steinhoff, examining board.

VARIETIES IN MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

VAUDEVILLE MUSIC

ILLUSTRATED SONGS

By FRA

FAMOUS PUBLISHERS OF POPULAR MUSIC

The publishing house of Jerome H. Remick & Co., of New York and Detroit, is meeting with flattering success, and they report the sales of their new productions as being very satisfactory.

Their New York offices, situated at 131 West Forty-first Street, where the entire building is taken up with their offices, studios, and sales departments, is a veritable bee hive, and the enthusiasm shown by all stamps the concern as a "live wire" one, with every reason to be proud of its record for producing songs and music that have met with popular favor by a discriminating public.

Jerome H. Remick

At the present time their new song, "Winter," the music by Albert Gumble, and words by Alfred Bryan, is having a large sale, and keeping the presses busy supplying the demand, but this is only one, and orders for others are coming in at a rate that is all that can be expected.

We are pleased to present with this article a portrait of Mr. Jerome H. Remick, the president of the music concern bearing his name. The name of Remick has been so prominently brought forward to our readers who are using their music that to become better acquainted with him, through the medium of our publication, will no doubt be welcomed.

The songs as published are reviewed or noted in the regular column of the News, and our readers should keep in close touch each week as they appear.

Just a few of the recent ones include: "We've Kept the Golden Rule," "Old Grey Bonnet," "The Vale of Dreams," "The Garden of Roses," "If You Believe in Dreams, Sweetheart," "Just a Chain of Daisies," "Dixie," "Let's Make Love Among the Roses," "Who Are You With, Tonight?" "They're All Good American Names," "Alamo Rag," "My Irish Dearie."

WOMAN AND THE STAGE

That woman is the chief factor in history needs no proving, history declares it, and when one turns to one's own home, no word is more sacred than "my mother," with her silvern locks and youth beaming out of childhood's days; or mayhap one's children's mother, framed in a life of supreme self-sacrifice. I stand 'twixt the two, my mother on the edge of the grave and my children's mother, a woman who in sunshine and shadow has taught me what God means, on the stage and off.

My standpoint is this: the stage is a preacher as much as the pulpit; more. Churches are empty, shows are full; in both cases one has to pay; neither are free.

Who rules the church? Let truth speak: the women. (In some cases men that have fooled women into believing they are saints.) In church we men would be only too glad that mother and children's mother ruled.

I take this standpoint: what I believe on the stage is the same as I believe is in church, and that is: woman is the thing. That being so, and nobody can deny it, listen to the New York World's thoughts:

"The census of Frohman Theater audiences shows the proportion of women playgoers to be larger than had been supposed. Women constituted 72 per cent of Maude Adams' audience in 'Chantecler;" 63 per cent of that at the Garrick, where a French farce is on the boards, and averaged above 68 per cent for the five houses at which the count was taken. The overwhelming representation of women indicates how completely the regulation of the drama is nowadays in their hands. Composing, as they do, the great majority of theatergoers, they determine the fate of plays and the vogue of actors. They are the real dramatic censors and the New York stage to-day is what they have made it. If it is below the standards of Daly and Wallack the women are to blame, and if it has deteriorated artistically or morally the fault is theirs. It is due to them that the 'star' system has superseded the stock company, and it is out

KEITH & PROCTOR'S UNION SQUARE THEATER

DeVeaux Twins. Couple of well-dressed girls in dance and song. They go as well now as last time.

Galanti. Clay modelling. Good.

Blount Brothers. Went along.

The Aeroplane Girl. Her songs suited the audience. The eerie, spooky ship sailing in the dark, with the slipper stunt, was just what we wanted. Didn't we yell, and laugh to beat the band?

THE DEWEY

Joe Paris. An accordeon stunt that "got over."

Cameron & Devlin. Two boys in topical work. Good.

Houston & Olmsted. Man and woman who pleased.

Dawson & Edward. A couple who took up comic German yarns and pleased.

Madge Wood. Singing and dancing.

Gidfords & Earle. A yarn about a female doctor's office that got the "big hand" going and coming.

BROOKLYN

COLUMBIA THEATER

I just enjoyed things here. Marcus Loew is doing what Marcus Loew ought to do, and does, when he feels like it. Your Spanish Troubadours fill the bill.

LOEW'S BIJOU

Arthur Kirk. Xylophonist. Good.

Piottis. The Italian and his sweetheart. Liked.

The Great Fulgora. Transfigurator.

Chas. H. Vedder & Co. in "A Cry in the Night."

Bell Boy Trio. Comedy singing, talking and dancing. Liked.

Three Shorties. Gymnasts. All right.

Newest motion pictures.

Pictorial Ballads.

EMPIRE THEATER

Miss New York, Jr., the famous $10,000 Beauty Show; Will H. Cohan in "Jolly, Jestful, Jingle of Joy," A-1; Mr. Ira Kessner in illustrated song novelties, "got over;" Miss Ada Corbett, imitations and impersonation of Harry Lauder, excellent.

The Dancing Mitchells. The greatest Parisian Apache Dance entitled "Paying the Penalty." Time—Midnight. Scene—Cafe Du Sourie. Place—Paris. Zluer-De-Marie, Lulu Mitchell; Antonin Chevrnevr, Senorita's sweetheart, Bennett Mitchell; Senorita Petrecineo, a girl of the streets, Helen Lawton; Petre Sicaso, a ruffian, James Fairburn; Mother Ponisse, keeper of a den, Helen Reilly; Gen. Darme Marc'ie, officer, Chester Guyer; Ine Castno, a guide, Leo Franks. One of the best things ever seen in Brooklyn.

Frozini, wizard of the accordeon; Slowtown Junction.

THE STAR

Moving pictures; Odiva; Eugene Kelly and Violet Rio, novelty singing and dancing; Kip and Kippy, comedy juggling; Harry Holden and Lucy Harron in "The Messenger Boy and the Show Girl." Next week Trocadero Burlesquers, Frank Finney in his new song play, "The North Pole."

GREATER COLUMBIA THEATER

Columbiascope; Cody, singing cartoonist; Tiller Sisters, character changes, singing and dancing; Josephine Isleil, singing comedienne; Automatic Band; Kline and Clifton in "A Dummy's Holiday;" Savoys & Co., novelty entertainers, with their kennel of acrobatic bull terriers; Harry Moore, illustrated songs.

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATER

Now splits with Olympic, at Brooklyn, for programme. See another page.

FIFTH AVENUE

Isabelle D'Armond has been doing all sorts of clever things here. She is just the sort of girl that dances her way over the lights. Hello! George Moore, you do the backing up all rightie.

William Short

William Short. Lecturer Keith & Proctor's Union Square and Twenty-third Street Theaters; been with the firm nearly two years, now in 86th week; before that an actor was with the Proctor Stock nine year ago in 1901, when the circuit of houses was all stock and included Albany and Montreal. Also played the Fifth Avenue and Harlem Opera Houses, when in stock. Was the first lecturer to go into the Harlem Opera House when that house went into pictures three years ago. Was three seasons with Donnelly Stock at the Murray Hill Theater, New York; also played a season at the Greenwall Stock, at the Grand Opera House, New Orleans, and Phelan Stock, Portland, Me.

Lucille Savoy. Original Parisian art posing and singing artist who is appearing on the Keeney vaudeville circuit with very beautiful and clever electrical effects under the manipulation of her own electrician, Walter E. Newport, who is an expert in this line.

Lucille Savoy

KEENEY'S THEATER

The popularity of tbis house is unflagging as the box office shows the result of the monster vaudeville bill.

The Keeneyscope. Four reels latest pictures.
Waugher & Patterson. Clever colored entertainers.
Columbia Musical Four. Those classy musical girls.
Scottie Provan. Scotcb comedian.
Terry Elmer & Co. A laughing hit.
Les Alexanders. European acrobatic girls.
Fagan, Merrick, Thurston. Laughing comedy.
Mlle. Sire. Shadowgraphist.
Mr. & Mrs. Curtis. A merry skit, "Tbe Tamer."
Von Lear & Rowe. Burlesque magicians.
Gertie Le Clare and Pickaninnies. Singing and dancing.
Servillo & Pipo. Comedy jugglers.

INDEPENDENT FILMS

The following films have been released week of February 27th hy the Empire Film Exchange, 150 East 14th Street, New York:

Feh. 27—Manly Man (Imp).....1000
Feh. 27—Punch (Eclair) 580
Feh. 27—Beware of the Bomb (Eclair)..... 371
Feb. 27—All for Gold (Yankee)..... 950
Feh. 27—The Sheriff's Sweetheart (Amer.). 773
Feh. 27—The Silence System (American)... 231
Feh. 28—Warrior's Faith (Bison)..... 985
Feh. 28—Call of the Heart (Powers)..... 955
Feb. 28—The Little Mother (Thanhouser)... 990
Mar. 1—Tweedledum Aviator (Amhrosio).. 441
Mar. 1—War of the Cossa (Ambrosio)..... 410
Mar. 1—A Western Girl's Choice (Champ.).1000
Mar. 1—A Professor's Romance (Nestor)..1000
Mar. 1—The Trump Card (Reliance)..... 975
Mar. 2—College Chums (American).....1000
Mar. 2—Army Manœuvres in Cuha (Imp).. 500
Mar. 2—The Dynamiters (Imp)..... 500
Mar. 2—Nobility (Itala) 975
Mar. 2—By the Light of the Moon (Rex)..1000
Mar. 3—Owanee's Great Love (Bison)..... 995
Mar. 3—Jack's Lucky Horseshoe (Lux)..... 500
Mar. 3—On Their Honeymoon (Lux)..... 500
Mar. 3—A Costly Pledge (Solax).....1000
Mar. 3—The Spirit Hand (Thanhouser)....1000
Mar. 3—Abduction of Parson Jones (Yank) 985
Mar. 4—The Rival Servants (Gt. Nor.).... 990
Mar. 4—Coto and the Flag (Itala)..... 500
Mar. 4—Foolshead More than Usual (Itala) 500
Mar. 4—Home Sweet Heart (Powers).....1000
Mar. 4—From the Valley of Shadows (Reliance) 998

SALES COMPANY

The following films have heen released week of March 6th hy the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.:

Mar. 6—Tracked (Imp) .....
Mar. 6—Hypnotizing a Hypnotist (Amer.)..
Mar. 6—Angel of the Bowery (Yankee)....
Mar. 6—King Phillip the Fair and the Templars (Eclair) .....
Mar. 7—Dick Farrell's Prize (Bison).....
Mar. 7—The Mummy (Thanhouser).....
Mar. 7—When Masons Meet (Powers).....
Mar. 7—Bandit's Surprise (Powers).....
Mar. 8—A Trick of Fortune (Reliance)....
Mar. 8—Prisoner of Caucasus (Ambrosio).
Mar. 8—In the Commissioned Ranks (Nestor) .....
Mar. 8—The Vindication of John (Champ).
Mar. 8—Out of the Arctic (Solax).....
Mar. 9—Message in the Bottle (Imp).....
Mar. 9—The Rich and the Poor (American)
Mar. 9—Nohility (Itala) .....
Mar. 9—Fall of a Knight (Rex)..... 958
Mar. 10—Senorita's Sacrifice (Yankee).....
Mar. 10—Her Prisoner (Bison).....
Mar. 10—The Spirit Hand (Thanhouser)....
Mar. 10—Put Out (Solax).....
Mar. 10—Caribou Hunting (Solax).....
Mar. 10—Bill in Love Again (Lux).....
Mar. 10—Jones' Remedy (Lux)..... 956
Mar. 11—The Gamhle with Love (Powers)..
Mar. 11—Ever the Accuser (Reliance).....
Mar. 11—Foolshead Shooting etc. (Itala)....
Mar. 11—Son of the Executioner (Gt. Nor.).. 890

Old Sprockets Repaired

first time $2.25, thereafter $1.00 and $1.50. New sprockets, above design, Feed $2.50. Intermittents $3.50. Write for other money-saving repairs.

E. W. LAVEZZI
3042 N. ASHLAND AVE., CHICAGO.

The Forum of Freemasonry

An International Monthly Magazine For Thinking Masons

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor

30 WEST THIRTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK, U. S. A.

Believing the time opportune for a magazine of advanced ideas, interesting to Masons who desire to abandon mere records of Lodges, Banquets, etc. (which are only of local or personal interest), we solicit your co-operation. The fullest freedom will be allowed in the discussion of all matters worth recording, such as History, Jurisprudence, Symbolism, Occult, Mystic or other truths relating to our beloved Order.

Research along Highways and Byways of Atlantis, Egypt, India, Mexico and other Old Wisdom Religion Centres will be welcomed. Bv such means the craft will be vindicated in its claims to enlightenment in this 20th Century.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $1.00 U. S. A. (6/6 BRITISH)

SUBSCRIPTION BLANK

Please send "The Forum of Freemasonry" for one year commencing No. 1 Vol. 1 for which I enclose / I promise to pay _____

Name_____

Address_____

_____

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS
30 W. 13th St.
New York, U. S. A.

In writing to Advertisers please mention

THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS

PATENTS

"BE INDEPENDENT."

Moving Picture Devices a Specialty.

Charles Lowell Howard

PATENT ATTORNEY

706-707-708 M'Gill Bldg., WASHINGTON, D. C.

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

	Feet
Dec. 28—Drama of the Engine Driver and Grandfather's Pipe
Jan. 4—The Wall Partition	500
Jan. 4—Trials of Tweedledum as a Policeman	500
Jan. 18—Blue Domino's Disguise and Tailor's Queer Ad
Jan. 25—A Wife Calvary and Tweedledum Cash
Feb. 1—Return from Seaside Bathing
Feb. 1—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports
Feb. 8—Tweedledum as a Detective
Feb. 15—The Demon	900
Feb. 22—Redeeming Angel
Mar. 1—Tweedledum, Aviator
Mar. 1—War of the Cossacks

AMERICAN.

Jan. 30—The Genius (Com.-Dr.)	965
Feb. 2—The Mission in the Desert (Dr.)	985
Feb. 6—A Pittsburg Millionaire (Dr.)	985
Feb. 9—On the Installment Plan (Com.)	560
Feb. 9—Too Much Aunt (Com.)	430
Feb. 13—Quiet Evening at Home (Com.)	985
Feb. 16—In the Land of Cactus (Dr.)	980
Feb. 20—The College Spendthrift (Dr.)	990
Feb. 23—Strategy (Com.-Dr.)	980
Feb. 27—The Sheriff's Sweetheart (Dr.)	800
Feb. 27—The Silence System (Com.)	200
Mar. 2—College Chums	975
Mar. 6—Hypnotizing a Hypnotist (Com.)	615
Mar. 6—Memories (Dr.)	375
Mar. 9—The Rich and the Poor (Dr.)	1000

ATLAS FILM CO.

Nov. 30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.)
Dec. 7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.)
Dec. 14—Brothers (Dec.)
Dec. 21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.)
Dec. 28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)
Jan. 4—A Straw Ride (Dr.)
Jan. 11—A Letter to the Stork (Dr.)
Jan. 18—A City Wolf (Dr.)
Jan. 25—Irish Hearts
Feb. 1—The Surgeon and the Girl
Feb. 1—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.)
Feb. 8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.)
Feb. 15—Coals of Fire

CHAMPION.

Dec. 21—His Mother (Dr.)	950
Dec. 28—The Golden Gates (Dr.)	950
Jan. 4—Days of the Early West (Dr.)	950
Jan. 11—Bill's Widow (Dr.)	950
Jan. 18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.)
Jan. 18—Why He Went West (Dr.)	950
Feb. 1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.)
Feb. 8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.)	950
Feb. 15—Her Three Proposals (Com.)	950
Feb. 22—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.)	950
Mar. 1—A Western Girl's Choice (Dr.)	950
Mar. 8—The Vindication of John	950

ECLAIR

Dec. 26—The Lock-Keeper (Dr.)	537
Dec. 26—The Fear of Fire (Com.)	390
Jan. 2—The Great Medal Competition (Com.)	485
Jan. 2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.)	480
Jan. 9—Mother's Portrait (Dr.)	930
Jan. 16—The Jealousy of Sosthenes Ramulot (Com.)	478
Jan. 16—My Wife's Hat (Com.)	482
Jan. 30—The European Lunch
Jan. 30—The Elusive Robber
Feb. 6—Doctor Against His Will (Dr.)	984
Feb. 13—Mr. Faddleaway is on Strike (Com.)	522
Feb. 13—The Elixir of Bravery	424
Feb. 20—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.)	683
Feb. 20—Hospital for Small Animals (Spec.)	286
Feb. 27—Punch	595
Feb. 27—Beware of the Bomb (Com.)	370
Mar. 6—King Phillip the Fair and the Templars	975

GREAT NORTHERN.

Dec. 17—Dickey's Courtship (Com.)
Dec. 24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.)
Dec. 31—The Scarecrow (Dr.)
Dec. 31—Bear Hunting (Sc.)
Jan. 7—The Red Light (Dr.)
Jan. 14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.)
Jan. 21—The Trunk Mystery
Jan. 28—Triumph of Intelligence	391
Jan. 28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done (Com.)
Feb. 4—The Criminal Chief's Capture
Feb. 11—Found Again (Dr.)
Feb. 18—The Life of a Muschik
Feb. 18—The False Alarm
Feb. 25—His Great Duty (Dr.)
Mar. 4—The Rival Servants (Dr.)

IMP.
Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

	Feet
Dec. 29—Unreasonable Jealousy (Dr.)	990
Jan. 2—The Wise Druggist (Dr.)	995
Jan. 5—Reunited (Dr.)	995
Jan. 9—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.)	998
Jan. 12—The Empty Shell (Dr.)	995
Jan. 16—Melody	995
Jan. 19—His First Patient (Dr.)	500
Jan. 19—The Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship (Dr.)	500
Jan. 30—Maid or Man
Feb. 2—The Mix-up
Feb. 2—An Imaginary Elopement
Feb. 6—At the Duke's Command (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 9—The Mirror (Com.)	500
Feb. 9—When the Cat's Away (Com.)	500
Feb. 13—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 16—The Convert (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 20—Pictureland	1000
Feb. 23—Artful Kate (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 27—A Manly Man (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 2—Army Manoeuvres in Cuba (Edu.)	500
Mar. 2—The Dynamiters (Com.)	500
Mar. 6—Tracked (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 9—The Message in the Bottle (Dr.)	1000

ITALA

Dec. 22—Who Was the Culprit? (Com.)
Dec. 24—Greediness Spoiled Foolshead's Christmas (Com.)
Dec. 29—The Rustic
Dec. 31—Norwegian Water Falls	500
Dec. 31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day	500
Jan. 5—Antonio Toscarino	900
Jan. 7—Foolshead as Inspector of Hygiene	900
Jan. 12—Joanna of Braganza	900
Jan. 14—The Recall	900
Jan. 19—A Sad Fascination
Jan. 21—Visit of a Friend
Jan. 26—The Revenging Picture
Jan. 28—My Son Is Guilty
Feb. 2—The Village Coachman
Feb. 4—The Feast of Foolshead
Feb. 9—John Milton	900
Feb. 11—Foolshead at the Kinematograph	900
Feb. 16—The Fatal Charm	900
Feb. 18—Who Will Eat the Turkey	900
Feb. 23—Little Souls	770
Feb. 25—Foolshead Present
Feb. 25—Havana Cigar
Mar. 2—Nini's Doll
Mar. 4—Cato and the Flag
Mar. 4—Foolshead More than Usual

LUX.
By Prieur.

Dec. 30—Aunt Julia's Portrait (Com.)	547
Dec. 30—Tim Writes a Poem (Com.)	375
Jan. 6—How They Tricked Father (Com.)	498
Jan. 6—The Rival Engine Drivers (Dr.)	367
Jan. 13—Bill as a Jockey (Com.)	465
Jan. 13—That Is My Name (Com.)	438
Jan. 22—A Dilemna
Jan. 22—Faithful Furniture
Jan. 27—Willie Goes Cycling
Jan. 27—Infamous Son
Feb. 3—Back to the Old Homestead
Feb. 10—The Orphan's Friend (Dr.)	711
Feb. 10—That Horse Did Run (Com.)	272
Feb. 17—Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Dr.)	639
Feb. 17—Matilda Lovestruck (Com.)	321
Feb. 24—A Child's Prayer (Dr.)	534
Feb. 24—Matilda Chased (Com.)	354
Mar. 3—Jack's Lucky Horseshoe (Dr.)	530
Mar. 3—On Their Honeymoon (Com.)	440
Mar. 6—Angel of the Bowery (Dr.)
Mar. 10—The Senorita's Sacrifice (Dr.)

NESTOR FILM CO.

Nov. 16—The Ranchman's Bride (Dr.)
Nov. 23—A Deal in Indians	1000
Nov. 30—Valley Folks
Dec. 7—The Conquering Hero
Dec. 14—The Pilgrim (Dr.)
Dec. 21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.)
Dec. 28—Elda of the Mountains (Dr.)
Jan. 4—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.)
Jan. 11—Sleepy Hollow (Dr.)	950
Jan. 18—Their New Minister (Dr.)
Jan. 25—The Man in 23
Jan. 25—New Minister
Feb. 1—The Bridal Trail
Feb. 8—The Transgressor
Feb. 15—The Light Beyond
Feb. 22—His Father's House (Dr.)
Mar. 1—The Professor's Romance (C.-D.)	990
Mar. 8—In the Commissioned Ranks

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
("Bison")

Jan. 6—A Savage Girl's Devotion	900
Jan. 10—An Indian Trapper's Prize	900
Jan. 13—The Creek Claim	900
Jan. 17—Texas Ted's Defense	900
Jan. 20—The Redskin's Secret	950
Jan. 24—Red Man's Wrath	900
Jan. 27—Trials of Bud Brown	900
Jan. 30—A Tough Tenderfoot
Feb. 3—A Squaw's Bravery
Feb. 7—The Half Breed's Plan
Feb. 9—John Milton (Dr.)
Feb. 10—The Salted Mine (Dr.)
Feb. 14—The Deputy's Honor	900
Feb. 17—The Warrior's Squaw	900
Feb. 21—The Way of a Red Man (Dr.)
Feb. 24—The Fate of Joe Dorr (Dr.)
Feb. 28—A Warrior's Faith
Mar. 3—Owanee's Great Love

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Jan. 17—A Montana Love Story (Com.)
Jan. 17—Lovers' Trials (Com.)
Jan. 21—A Noble Heart (Dr.)
Jan. 24—Wife's Love and Little Dorothy	980
Jan. 28—Masquerader	960
Jan. 31—For My Pal
Feb. 4—His First Case
Feb. 4—The Cattle King of Arizona (Dr.)
Feb. 7—Freddie's New Shoes (Com.)
Feb. 11—A Trip Through Mexico (Sc.)
Feb. 14—An Unforseen Complication (Com.)
Feb. 18—Under Southern Skies (Dr.)
Feb. 21—What Would You Do (Com.)
Feb. 25—Across the Mexican Border (Dr.)
Feb. 28—The Call of the Heart (Dr.)	950
Mar. 4—Home Sweet Home (Dr.)	950
Mar. 7—When Masons Meet
Mar. 7—The Bandit's Surprise
Mar. 11—A Gamble with Love

RELIANCE

Jan. 28—The Last Laugh	975
Feb. 1—A Brass Button
Feb. 4—The Command from Galilee
Feb. 8—The School Ma'am's Courage (C.-D.)
Feb. 11—The Little Avenger
Feb. 15—Three Men (Dr.)
Feb. 18—Souls Courageous	900
Feb. 22—A Plain Tale
Feb. 25—Ever the Accuser
Mar. 1—The Trump Card
Mar. 4—From the Valley of Shadow
Mar. 8—A Trick of Fortune	900

REX

Feb. 16—A Heroine of '76 (Dr.)	910
Feb. 23—The Story of a Prayer Rug (Dr.)
Mar. 2—By the Light of the Moon

SOLAX COMPANY

Jan. 20—A Reporter's Romance (Dr.)
Jan. 27—His Best Friend (Dr.)
Feb. 3—Ring of Love
Feb. 10—Mixed Pets (Com.)
Feb. 17—Corinne in Dollyland (Com.)
Feb. 24—Love's Test (Dr.)
Mar. 3—A Costly Pledge (Com.)
Mar. 8—Out of the Aretic (Dr.)

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Jan. 3—The Pasha's Daughter
Jan. 6—Baseball and Bloomers
Jan. 10—Everybody Saves Father (Com.)
Jan. 10—The Only Girl in Camp (Com.)
Jan. 13—The Vote that Counts (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 24—When Love Was Blind	900
Jan. 27—Prompt Payment
Jan. 27—Stealing a Ride	900
Jan. 31—Only in the Way
Feb. 3—Adrift
Feb. 7—Westerner and the Earl
Feb. 10—The Norwood Necklace
Feb. 14—For Her Sake (Dr.)
Feb. 17—Checkmate (Dr.)
Feb. 21—The Patriot Maid of '76 (Dr.)
Feb. 21—For Washington
Feb. 24—A Newsboy Hero
Feb. 28—The Litle Mother (Dr.)
Mar. 3—Stage Struck (Dr.)
Mar. 7—The Mummy (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 10—The Spirit Hand (Dr.)	1000

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Dec. 30—The Missing Bridegroom (Dr.)
Jan. 6—The Royal Wishbone (Dr.)
Jan. 2—Mrs. Danver's Divorce
Jan. 9—An Erring Son's Awakening (Dr.)
Jan. 16—The Folks Back Home (Dr.)
Jan. 20—Returned to the Fold (Dr.)
Jan. 30—Taxicab Mystery
Feb. 3—Counting House Mystery
Feb. 6—Foiling the Camorra (Dr.)
Feb. 10—Was She Justified (Dr.)
Feh. 13—Condemned to Death (Dr.)
Feb. 17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.)
Feb. 20—A Life-Time Repentance (Dr.)
Feb. 24—The Woman Who Dared (Dr.)
Feb. 27—All for Gold (Dr.)
Mar. 3—The Abduction of Parson Jones (Com.)

(Continued from page 15)

"His fiance" to pass I know not. Are the French translations as bad as the English? Ambrosio, with an art department so splendid, do please attend to your literary bureau!

Three Men—(Reliance).—Opens in a Western saloon; three men love a girl. There's pistol exploding and so on. She marries one, a drunken gambler, and suffers. An Indian lover sends her money in her distress. The Mexican lover appears and the drunken husband, trying to strangle his wife, is shot. Finale: Mexican takes the widow to other climes and the Indian is last seen as bearing the blame for the murder and the stage set for lynching. The teaching is so self-evident it is not necessary to comment thereon.

Her Three Proposals—(Champion).—Here's the story: A girl by three accidents makes the acquaintance of three men—a traveling salesman, a banker and a cowboy. They all propose, by letter, by one mail. She detests life with each—they're all beasts—and so she accepts none. Last scene, an old maid with memories! Memories of what, how, which or when this scribbler knoweth not.

The Deputy's Honor—(Bison).—A story of a wayward brother who holds up a stage—on the screen—his brother being the deputy sheriff, who by the absence of the sheriff is in full control. The crime is tried; a mother intercedes—the deputy obeys his mother. The criminal fleeing hears the shot that ends his brother's life and then flees back and weeps profusely.

For Her Sake—(Thanhouser).—A story of the South. Two men love a girl. War breaks out and one, an irretrievable skunk in the Union army, gets the accepted lover, a Confederate, in his power; behaves like a blackguard; the girl tries to release her lover and is shot. The Union man, thinking he will catch his "rebel" rival, sets out "with much show and circumstance" to arrest the escaped prisoner and finds him by the side of the slain girl. Horror-stricken that passion has caused all this, the Union officer departs and leaves the "rebel" with his dead.

The Bad Man's Downfall—(Essanay).—A ruffian of the typical sort forces his attentions upon a new girl teacher and is completely foiled by a strong man the girl loves. A clean film people admire.

Whiffle's Double—(Pathe).—The gentleman lover who brings flowers and diamonds has a double who is shown as another that comes to fit madam with shoes. The film is one continuous series of laughs.

Corinne in Dollyland—(Solax).—The photography and staging of this are a delight. Solax stands in a class by itself. The child's dream where she sees the antics of her box of toys made to live is novel and cleverly depicted. Parents ought to take their children to see this film; they will be delighted. No neighborhood theater can afford to miss this fantasy.

The Warrior's Squaw—(Bison).—An Indian row; one, wounded, crawls into the underbrush. A girl of the victorious tribe finds him, loves him and feeds him. This is found out and the pair escape. The man's tribe flay the other gentry.

NICKELODIA

Peoria, Ill.—Messrs. Robinson and Zahler have secured a permit for the remodeling of the Liberty Theater here.

New Leipsig, N. Dak.—Fred Schoensiegel is planning the erection of a new theater here.

Philadelphia, Pa.—J. Fred Zimmerman, Sr., has secured a permit for the erection of a new theater at the corner of Eleventh street and Lehigh avenue.

St. George, Utah.—The St. George Amusement Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $7,000. The incorporators are Charles Whipple, S. C. Hardy and Wm. A. Nielson.

Madison, Iowa.—Mr. Amos Johnson, of Story City, is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Davenport, Ia.—Charles Berkell is preparing to open a new moving picture theater at 428 Brady street.

E. W. Lavezzi, of Chicago, whom our readers are quite familiar with, has a method for putting steel teeth on worn-out sprockets, thereby saving not only the price of a new sprocket, but also the price of a star and arbor on some makes of machines and without increasing its weight. Old worn-out sprockets, he claims, may in many cases be made better than new by his practical method.

Operators should keep in touch with Mr. Lavezzi, and it is interesting to note that he has made an offer of ten dollars to any Chicago operator who can put his repaired sprockets out of order by doubling the speed of the machine.

ENTERPRISE

If the newspaper publicity attendant upon the introduction of the variously termed "Harem Skirt," "Trouser Skirt," etc., augurs anything, it certainly denotes that the American Film Manufacturing Company in their announced release of film entitled "The Harem Skirt" have scored a decided hit. Apropos of this release we quote herewith an item from the Chicago American relative to the popularity of this style of garment:

"Skirtaloon" Girls Driven from Streets

New York, Feb. 28.—Misses Edith Hordlow and Adelaide Bernon, wearing harem skirts on Fifth avenue and Broadway, became the objects of such eager interest that they were forced to take refuge in taxicabs at three different stages of their promenade They hadn't proceeded a block before a procession had formed behind them which grew like a rolling snowball.

It appears to us that this film will prove to be a decided feature and powerful attraction in any theater in which it is projected, as it is consistent to infer from the attention at present being paid this fashion fad that the greater mass of the public undoubtedly are curious to ascertain the reason for its astounding capabilities in the line of blocking traffic and exciting mobs to violence, etc. We compliment the American Film Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, sincerely on their enterprise.

2 - Solax - 2

WEDNESDAY and FRIDAY

THE SUCCESS OF THE FIRST HAS MADE POSSIBLE THIS SECOND RELEASE

Beginning March 8th "OUT OF THE ARCTIC" (Drama)

DON'T FORGET THAT WEDNESDAY IS SOLAX FUNNY DAY

Released Friday March 10th—"PUT OUT" and "CARIBOU HUNTING"
(Comedy)—Split Reel—(Scenic)

HERE'S THE COMBINATION THAT YOU HAVE BEEN DEMANDING

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH.

		Feet
Jan.	12—The Midnight Marauder (Dr.)	392
Jan.	12—Help Wanted (Com.)	605
Jan.	16—His Trust (Dr.)	996
Jan.	19—His Trust Fulfilled (Dr.)	999
Jan.	23—Fate's Turning (Dr.)	998
Jan.	26—The Poor Sick Men (Com.)	991
Jan.	30—A Wreath of Orange Blossoms (Dr.)	993
Feb.	2—Three Sisters (Dr.)	997
Feb.	6—Heart Beats of Long Ago (Dr.)	997
Feb.	9—Priscilla's Engagement Kiss (Com.)	997
Feb.	13—What Shall We Do With Our Old (Dr.)	994
Feb.	16—Fisher Folks (Dr.)	998
Feb.	20—The Diamond Star (Dr.)	996
Feb.	23—His Daughter (Dr.)	997
Feb.	27—The Lily of the Tenements (Dr.)	991
Mar.	2—The Heart of a Savage (Dr.)	995

EDISON

Jan.	11—The Home of the Seal (Educational)	300
Jan.	11—The Gardener's Ladder (Com.)	700
Jan.	13—The Link that Held (Dr.)	960
Jan.	17—With Interest to Date (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Jan.	18—Uncle's Birthday Gift (Com.)	995
Jan.	20—Mike the Miser (Dr.)	990
Jan.	24—An Eventful Evening (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	25—The Lover and the Count (Com.)	995
Jan.	27—The Black Bordered Letter (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	1—Bumptious as Romeo (Com.)	975
Feb.	3—Selling Old Master (Dr.)	990
Feb.	7—The Doctor (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	8—Two Valentines (Com.)	1000
Feb.	10—His First Commission (Dr.)	990
Feb.	14—The Rajah (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	15—The Ransom of Red Chief (Com.)	975
Feb.	24—The Price of Victory	1000
Feb.	17—A Stage Romance	1000
Feb.	21—The Rival Sculptors	990
Feb.	22—Mr. Bumptious, Detective	990
Feb.	28—The Iron Master	1000
Mar.	1—The Rival Candidates (Com. Dr.)	1000
Mar.	3—The Writing on the Blotter (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	7—Love and the Stock Market (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	8—A Night of Terror (Com.)	400
Mar.	8—The Old Family Bible (Dr.)	600
Mar.	10—How Bella Was Won (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	14—All for the Love of a Lady (Dr.)	990
Mar.	15—The Department Store (Com.)	625
Mar.	15—Baby's Fall (Com.)	375
Mar.	17—The Wedding Bell	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Dec.	31—A Gambler of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	3—The Redeemed Criminal	1000
Jan.	7—The Count and the Cowboys	1000
Jan.	10—The Sophmore's Romance (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	14—The Girl of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	17—His Master's Son (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	21—The Border Ranger (Dr.)	985
Jan.	24—A Sin Unpardonable (Dr.)	998
Jan.	28—The Two Reformations (Dr.)	996
Jan.	31—The Jilted Joker (Com.)	640
Jan.	31—Hank and Lank (Com.)	366
Feb.	4—Carmenita, the Faithful (Dr.)	995
Feb.	7—A Woman's Voice (Com.)	566
Feb.	7—Ten Words for Twenty-five Cents (Com.)	425
Feb.	11—The Bad Man's Downfall (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	14—Getting Sister Married (Com.)	1000
Feb.	18—The Cattleman's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	21—Their Wedding Gift (Com.)	580
Feb.	21—Just as the Clock Struck Nine (C.)	412
Feb.	25—The Outlaw and the Child (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	28—Taming a Tyrant (Com.)	1000
Mar.	4—On the Desert's Edge (Dr.)	1000

GAUMONT

G. Kleine

Jan.	10—The Hills of Corsica (Travelogue)	243
Jan.	14—A Simple Rustic Tale (Dr.)	958
Jan.	17—The Sealed Letter (Dr.)	837
Jan.	17—A Water Contest (Educational)	168
Jan.	21—The Kleptomaniac's Repentance (Dr.)	965
Jan.	24—Twilight of a Soldier's Life (Dr.)	945
Jan.	28—The Baby Fortune Hunters (Dr.)	682
Jan.	28—Gorges of the Bourne, France (Travelogue)	293
Jan.	31—At Eventide (Scenic)	173
Jan.	31—The Last Curtain	823
Feb.	4—Jiggers Looks for a Job	537
Feb.	4—Krimmel Waterfalls (Scenic)	435
Feb.	7—Jiggers' Moving Day (Com.)	395
Feb.	11—Napoleon in 1814 (Dr.)	797
Feb.	11—Autumn Leaves (Edu.)	185
Feb.	7—The Strongest Tie	605
Feb.	14—The Reformation of the Suffragettes	665
Feb.	14—Land Marks of Avignon, France	338
Feb.	18—Saul and David	128
Feb.	18—At the End of the Road	838
Feb.	21—The Plot That Failed	815
Feb.	21—Pictures in Chemistry	175
Feb.	25—Paganini and the Countess Beatrice	998
Feb.	28—Matrimonial Epidemic (Com.)	813
Feb.	28—Lafont and Pola's Last Flight	185
Mar.	4—The Tramp's Find	680
Mar.	4—Forbidden Cigarettes	335
Mar.	7—The Barber's Daughter	505
Mar.	7—The Ambitious Bootblack	450
Mar.	11—His First Sweetheart	560
Mar.	11—The Beautiful Gorges of Tarn	415
Mar.	14—The Sword and the Cross	840
Mar.	14—Breakers in the Clouds	155
Mar.	18—The Privateer's Treasure	860
Mar.	18—Rocky Caves of France	110

KALEM CO.

Jan.	6—The Runaway Engine	955
Jan.	11—For Love of an Enemy (Dr.)	995
Jan.	13—The Heart of an Indian Mother (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	18—Her Chum's Brother (Com.-Dr.)	980
Jan.	20—Robbie and the Redskins (Dr.)	850
Jan.	20—Modern Light Battery in Action	95
Jan.	25—The Secret of the Still (Dr.)	950
Jan.	27—Puritans and Indians (Dr.)	970
Feb.	1—The Sheriff's Sister (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	3—The Trail of the Pomas Charm (Dr.)	1005
Feb.	8—Little Sister (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Feb.	10—The Broken Trail (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	15—Grandmother's War Story (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	17—The Lost Ribbon (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	22—The Open Road (Dr.)	995
Feb.	24—Priscilla and the Pequot (Dr.)	925
Mar.	1—Sailor Jack's Reformation (Dr.)	1005
Mar.	3—Mexican Filibusters (Dr.)	1005

LUBIN.

Jan.	5—The Crimson Scars	980
Jan.	5—Fire! Fire! Fire!	980
Jan.	9—Tag Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.)	935
Jan.	12—The Widow's Choice (Com.)	950
Jan.	16—Will It Ever Come to This? (Com.)	715
Jan.	16—Easy Coin (Com.)	250
Jan.	19—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	23—Father Makes Himself Useful (Com.)	975
Jan.	26—Father Love (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	30—His Bogus Uncle (Com.)	1000
Feb.	2—Age vs. Youth (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	6—A Double Elopement (Com.)	990
Feb.	9—The Petticoat Sheriff (Com.)	1000
Feb.	13—The Show Girl's Strategem (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	16—Getting Even (Com.)	600
Feb.	16—Schultz Has the Smallpox (Com.)	400
Feb.	20—The Test (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	23—Dobbs, the Dauber (Com.)	1000
Feb.	27—Nan's Diplomacy (Com.)	1000
Mar.	2—Father's Birthday Ring (Com.)	600
Mar.	2—Woman's Curiosity (Com.)	400

G. MELIES.

Dec.	1—Pais (Dr.)
Dec.	8—What Great Bear Learned
Dec.	15—Old Norris' Gal
Dec.	22—A Western Welcome	980
Dec.	29—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.)	980
Jan.	12—The Owner of the "L. L." Ranch (Dr.)	980
Jan.	19—Changing Cooks (Com.)	980
Jan.	26—How Mary Met the Cowpunchers (Western Dr.)	980
Feb.	2—Only a Sister (Dr.)	980
Feb.	9—Tony, the Greaser (Dr.)	980
Feb.	16—Billy and His Pal (Dr.)
Feb.	23—My Prairie Flower (Dr.)	980
Mar.	2—In the Hot Lands	960

PATHE.

Jan.	28—Betty Rolls Along (Com.)	289
Jan.	30—The Escape from the Tuileries (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	1—Hearts, Hunger, Happiness (C.-D.)	722
Feb.	1—Practical Brook Trout Breeding (Edu.)	279
Feb.	3—The Slave's Revolt (Dr.)	722
Feb.	3—Rice Industry in Japan (Edu.)	256
Feb.	4—A Cowboy's Devotedness (Dr.)	922
Feb.	6—Max Has the Boxing Fever (Com.)	561
Feb.	6—An Imitator of Blondin (Com.)	400
Feb.	8—Legally Dead (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	10—The Missing Bride (Dr.)	800
Feb.	10—Review of Chilian Troops (Edu.)	180
Feb.	11—Silver Leaf's Heart (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	13—Betty's Apprenticeship (Com.)	689
Feb.	13—Pineapple Cannery in China (Ind.)	315
Feb.	15—A Western Courtship (Dr.)	715
Feb.	15—The Axoloti (Edu.)	266
Feb.	17—Whiffle's Double (Com.)	499
Feb.	17—A Boy's Wit (Dr.)	462
Feb.	18—Lieut. Scott's Narrow Escape (Dr.)	984
Feb.	4—A Cowboy's Devotedness (Dr.)	922
Feb.	6—Max Has the Boxing Fever (Com.)	561
Feb.	6—An Imitator of Blondin (Com.)	400
Feb.	8—Legally Dead (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	10—The Missing Bride (Dr.)	800
Feb.	10—Review of Chilian Troops (Edu.)	180
Feb.	11—Silver Leaf's Heart (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	20—A Soldier (Dr.)	761
Feb.	20—A Buffalo Hunt (Edu.)	236
Feb.	22—Hubby's Troubles (Com.)	671
Feb.	22—Indo-China Province of Laos (Sc.)	321
Feb.	24—Who Killed Max? (Com.)	689
Feb.	24—An Escape of Gas (Com.)	302
Feb.	25—The Changeling (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	27—Max Makes Music	403
Feb.	27—Pots, Pans and Poetry	531
Mar.	1—Oh! You Clubman	905
Mar.	3—Satan Defeated	750
Mar.	3—Around Constantina, Algeria	200
Mar.	4—Jealousy Foiled	1000
Mar.	6—Max Embarrassed	600
Mar.	6—After the Boxing Bout	375
Mar.	8—Red Deer's Devotion	1000
Mar.	10—Undying Love	740
Mar.	11—A Lonely Little Girl	1000

SELIG

Dec.	29—Justinian and Theodora (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	2—The Argonauts	1000
Jan.	5—Ramona's Father	1000
Jan.	9—Shadows of the Past (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	12—The Rival Dramatist	1000
Jan.	16—Buddy, the Little Guardian (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	19—An Englishman's Honor (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	23—A Robust Patient (Com.)	1000
Jan.	26—The Spy (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	30—The Little Circus Rider
Feb.	2—The Curse of the Red Man
Feb.	6—Too Much Mother-in-Law
Feb.	9—Thelma
Feb.	12—The Survival of the Fittest
Feb.	16—The Buccaneers
Feb.	20—The Padre
Feb.	27—The Eye of Conscience
Mar.	2—The Outbreak
Mar.	6—The Little Shepherdess
Mar.	9—The Medallion
Mar.	13—The Code of Honor
Mar.	13—The Man from the East

URBAN-ECLIPSE

G. Kleine

Nov.	23—Nantes (Scenic)	450
Nov.	30—The Return at Midnight	634
Nov.	30—Ramble Through Ceylon	319
Dec.	7—Death of Admiral Coligny	992
Dec.	5—On the Mexican Border
Dec.	8—Reggie's Engagement
Dec.	14—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.)	749
Dec.	14—Scenes in British India (Sc.)	253
Dec.	21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.)	676
Dec.	21—A Chamois Hunt	332
Dec.	28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.)	650
Dec.	28—Coaching in Devonshire, England (Travelogue)	348
Jan.	4—A Lock of Hair	978
Jan.	11—Washed Ashore (Dr.)	670
Jan.	11—Woodcarving in Brienz	320
Jan.	18—By the King's Order (Dr.)	991
Jan.	25—The Sailor's Return (Dr.)	689
Jan.	25—Scenes in Jersey (Travelogue)	296
Feb.	1—Disinherited	990
Feb.	8—On the Border of the Forest (Dr.)	895
Feb.	8—Canadian Iron Center, Port Arthur (Educational)	110
Feb.	15—Catherine Howard	1005
Feb.	22—The Golden Sickle	882
Feb.	22—Felling a Smoke-stack	113
Feb.	22—The Golden Sickle	882
Feb.	22—Felling a Smoke-Stack	113
Mar.	1—Comrades	638
Mar.	1—Beauties of Sans Souci	362
Mar.	8—The Fury of a Woman Scorned	720
Mar.	8—Beautiful Wye Valley, England	300
Mar.	15—Redemption	508
Mar.	15—The Thames, from Oxford to Richmond	472

VITAGRAPH

Dec.	3—The Poacher's Wife (Dr.)	1001
Dec.	6—A Tin-Type Romance (Com.)	996
Dec.	9—He Who Laughs Last (Com.)	927
Dec.	10—The Color Sergeant's Horse (Dr.)	978
Dec.	13—The Law and the Man (Dr.)	1010
Dec.	16—Playing at Divorce (Dr.)
Dec.	16—The International Motor Boat Race (Sc.)
Dec.	17—A Dixie Mother (Dr.)
Dec.	20—The Light in the Window	997
Dec.	23—Clancy	995
Dec.	24—Jean and the Waif	989
Dec.	27—In Neighboring Kingdoms (Dr.)	995
Dec.	30—Crazy Apples (Com.)	988
Dec.	31—Where the Wind Blows (Dr.)	987
Jan.	3—All Is Fair In Love and War	973
Jan.	6—The Misses Finch and Nephew Billy	979
Jan.	7—The Old Water Jar	984
Jan.	10—Doctor Cupid (Com.)	987
Jan.	13—Water Lilies (Dr.)	991
Jan.	14—Coward or Hero (Dr.)	975
Jan.	17—Three Men and a Maid (Com.)	1000
Jan.	20—The Girl in the Film (Com.)	963
Jan.	21—Cast Up by the Deep (Dr.)	1001
Jan.	24—It Did Look Suspicious (Dr.)	617
Jan.	24—The Fireman's Parade (Edu.)	383
Jan.	27—Girl of the Mountains (Dr.)	999
Jan.	28—Davy Jones in the South Seas (Com.)	995
Feb.	4—A Queen for a Day	1000
Feb.	7—The Deluge	978
Jan.	31—Jean Rescues	976
Feb.	3—Society and the Man	981
Feb.	10—The League of Mercy (Dr.)	991
Feb.	11—At the White Man's Door (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	14—Consuming Love	975
Feb.	17—When the Light Waned	994
Feb.	18JThe New Stenographer (Com.)	994
Feb.	21—A Tale of Two Cities, Part I	1014
Feb.	24—A Tale of Two Cities, Part II	1013
Feb.	25—A Tale of Two Cities, Part III	994
Feb.	28—Captain Barnacle's Courtship (Com.)	998
Mar.	3—Bertha's Mission (Dr.)	988
Mar.	4—Mammy's Ghost (Dr.)	985
Mar.	7—The Wild Cat Well	960

THE PROOF

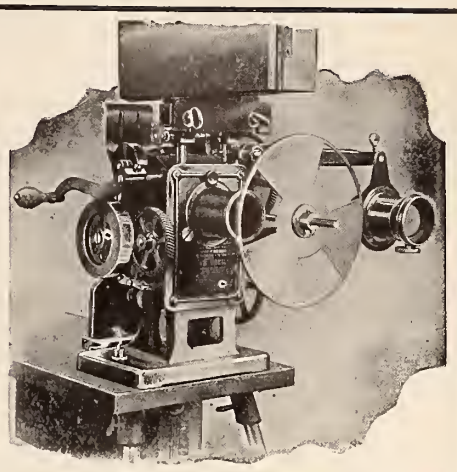
Fifteen hundred users have sent us enthusiastic endorsements of our No. 6 Cameragraph. What better evidence can you ask that it "Pays to Purchase a Power's?"

Every user is a "rooter" for the most reliable moving-picture machine on the market—Power's No. 6. Why? Because

It gives an absolutely steady picture.
Is the most substantially constructed projecting machine made.
It runs smoother, quieter and longer than any other machine.

And a few other good why's.

Send for Catalog D which tells all about our picture machines and current-savers.



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

For thirteen years leading makers of moving picture machines

Over ten thousand
MORTIMER FILM CLEANING PADS
now being used by the exchanges and Moving Picture Theatres (our books are open for inspection).
Send for the free booklet giving you full description of
THE MORTIMER FILM CLEANER
Fidelity Bldg., Portland, Maine.

Announcement, Advertising, Travelogue, Recitation
and slides for every purpose made to order
GEO. J. GOLDTHORPE & CO.
244 West 14th Street New York

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
REPAIRED
by skilled mechanics at short notice and reasonable prices. Work guaranteed.
Supplies of All Kinds.
CHAS. E. DRESSLER,
388 2nd Ave., City, near 23rd St.
Take elevator.

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars. ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS, 908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., Chicago.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST
THEATRE CHAIR
Sanitary, Space-saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W
HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

AMERICAN STANDARD DOUBLE DISSOLVING MOVING PICTURE MACHINE. ALL COMPLETE, $200.00

A POWERS No. 5, SLIGHTLY USED,
$100.00

MANHATTAN SLIDE CO.
124 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

HALLBERG
THE "ECONOMIZER MAN"

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

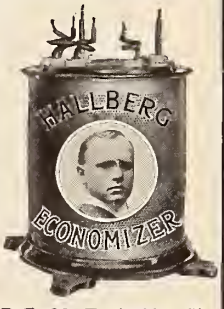
I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. N 1



J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.

Start on a Sound Basis

Get a machine that can DO the work—and do it now—and to-morrow—and for a good long time to come.

Let the idea about the original machine go.

BE MODERN—UP-TO-DATE—GET MACHINE WISE by installing the modern machine—THE MOTIOGRAPH.

This is the day of progress—Time keeps on coming and going—and old-fashioned machines must be replaced with the Motiograph—the most durable — simple — accessible motion picture machine on the market—and the machine that projects the best picture. Manufactured and jobbed by

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 571 West Randolph St., CHICAGO
FOR SALE BY DEALERS EVERYWHERE

Put This in Your Pipe

There are several film exchanges which would rather drink poison than patronize the "Imp" Company. It is a matter of personal spite, envy, bitterness, jealousy, hatred. Your exchange may be one of those. If it is not giving you

Two Imps Every Week

there's a nigger in the woodpile somewhere. Find out! If your exchange is not giving you TWO IMPS EVERY WEEK, do one of two things:

(1)—Write to them every day till you get what you want. Or—

(2)—Try another exchange.

"The Secret of the Palm"

(IMP Release of March 13.) "Made in Cuba."

Here's a thriller—full of action—exciting from start to finish—get it for your next "IMP night" and notice results.

A Spaniard, goaded to desperation, attempts to ruin a rival on account of unrequited love.

He fastens a crime on the ranch foreman and then brings about his own death in a sensational manner by a fall from the topmost branches of a palm tree.

The wrong is righted—but—see the film.

"The Fisher-Maid"

(IMP Release of March 16.) "Made in Cuba."

Mr. Exhibitor:—

Nine hundred and ninety-six feet of thrilling drama with "Little Mary" in nearly every foot of it. (Do your booking right now.)

One of the greatest fishermen's stories ever attempted.

The fisher maid, jealous of the sister of her sweetheart, drifts away to the open sea seeking to end her life in solitude.

Her lover discovers the mistake and goes to the rescue, finding her body tossed by the waves. The thrilling rescue, the resuscitation of the girl, and the subsequent reconciliation has heart gripping interest all the way through. But what's the use?

COLD TYPE CAN NEVER BEGIN TO TELL THIS STORY—GET THE PICTURE.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America, 102 West 101st Street, New York, Carl Laemmle, President. All Imp Films Are Sold Through the Sales Co. Two each week.

It's Neither Bull-Headed Luck Nor Accident

That I am doing the MOST SUCCESSFUL film rental business of the day. No, Siree!! It's because I have gained the absolute confidence of you exhibitors. It's because my square, honest, upright dealing with you for the past five years is bearing fruit. It's because I'm "doing things" all the time—doing them for you—the exhibitor—and for the betterment of the whole moving picture industry, and lastly, it's because I have always given you your money's worth—and sometimes more. I don't want your business unless you honestly believe I deserve it. I don't want it if you are doubting my sincerity. If on the other hand you believe in me—if my word carries any weight with you—then and then only do I ask you to give me a chance to figure with you on your film service—and on the basis of quality only.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:

196-198 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
4th Floor, Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam Street, Omaha, Nebr.

The Biggest and Best Film Renter In the World.

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

American Releases

TWO REELS EACH WEEK

MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS

Release of Monday, March 6th.

"HYPNOTISING A HYPNOTIST" with "MEMORIES"

"Hypnotising a Hypnotist" is undoubtedly as funny a farce comedy as the most discriminating exhibitor could desire. Dott Farley is particularly funny in her characterization of the old maid. The fun is fast and furious—the denouement extremely funny. "Memories" on the same reel is a short subject that is both quaint and original.

Dott Farley and Jack Campbell in "Hypnotising a Hypnotist."

Release of Thursday, March 9th.

"THE RICH AND THE POOR"

A film dealing with the never-ending conflict between capital and labor. The depiction of the tyranny exercised by the scheming and villainous capitalist over his employees is heart-rending, but the eventual victory of the young foreman more than offsets the previous impression. This film will be acclaimed by the workingman as a timely and effective production and will prove a drawing card in any theatre.

Scene from "The Rich and the Poor."

Coming---"THE HAREM SKIRT"

The funniest funny film released in a twelve-month. Write for our lobby display proposition—a display to suit every purse. Get on our Mailing List for "FILM FACTS."

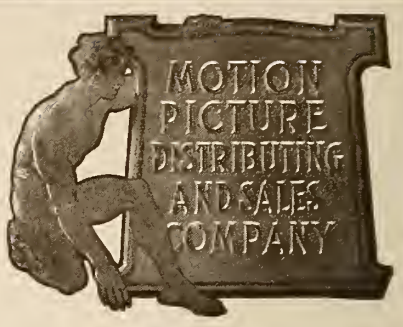
ALL Independent Exchanges buy American Film.

AMERICAN FILM MFG. COMPANY

BANK FLOOR = ASHLAND BLOCK

CHICAGO, ILL.

CONSEQUENCES



They are the final result
The last analysis

In our battle for the right to trade, we have stood by our guns, and each well aimed, carefully-planned shot has brought—consequences.

At this moment we are feeling these consequences in the good healthy condition of the Sales Company. We invite exhibitors to share in it—there's sunshine enough for all, no toll exacted. The portal to real independence is through this UNEXCELLED PROGRAM.

PROGRAM

MONDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Eclair—Eclair Film Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

TUESDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.

WEDNESDAY
Ambrosio—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Atlas—Atlas Film Co.
Champion—The Champion Film Co.
Nestor—David Horsley.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories
Solax—Solax Co.

THURSDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Rex—Rex M. P. Mfg. Co.

FRIDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Lux—R. Prieur
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.
Solax—Solax Company
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

SATURDAY
Capital—Capital Film Co.
Gt. Northern—Gt. Northern Film Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

List of BUYING EXCHANGES, March 4th, 1911

All others offering these brands for rent can supply only dupes or worn-out subjects.

CANADA

Applegath, L. J., & Sons	145 Yonge St.	Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange	Calgary	Alberta
Gaumont Co.	154 St. Catherine St.	Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co.	Winnipeg	Man.

ALABAMA

Dixie Film Co.	503 Chamber of Com. Bldg.	Birm'ham

CALIFORNIA

California Film Exchange	1065 Mission St.	San Francisco
Miles Bros.	790 Turk St.	San Francisco

COLORADO

Co-operative Ind. Film Co.	Barclay Block	Denver
W. H. Swanson Film Exch.	301 Railroad Bldg.	Denver

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

B. & W. Film Exchange	22 La Droit Bldg.	Washington
Paramount Film Exchange	428 9th St., N. W.	Washington

GEORGIA

Consolidated Film Exchange	Rhodes Bldg.	Atlanta, Ga.

ILLINOIS

Anti Trust Film Co.	79 So. Clark St.	Chicago
Globe Film Service	107 E. Madison St.	Chicago
H. & H. Film Service Co.	98 Jackson Blvd.	Chicago
Laemmle Film Service	196 Lake St.	Chicago
Standard Film Exchange	155 E. Washington St.	Chicago

INDIANA

Central Film Service Co.	119 N. Illinois St.	Indianapolis

KANSAS

Wichita Film & Supply Co.	122 N. Market St.	Wichita

LOUISIANA

Dixie Film Company	720 Maison Blanche Bldg.	New Orleans

MASSACHUSETTS

Boston Film Rental Co.	665 Washington St.	Boston
W. E. Green Film Exchange	228 Tremont St.	Boston

MARYLAND

B. & W. Film Exchange	412 East Baltimore St.	Baltimore
Consolidated Amusement Co.	28 W. Lexington St.	Baltimore

MINNESOTA

Laemmle Film Service	400 Sykes Block	Minneapolis

MICHIGAN

Michigan Film & Supply Co.	1106 Union Trust Bldg.	Detroit

MISSOURI

J. W. Morgan	1310 Walnut St.	Kansas City
Swanson-Crawford Film Co.	Century Bldg.	St. Louis

NEBRASKA

Laemmle Film Service	1517 Farnam St.	Omaha

NEW YORK STATE

Albany Film Exchange	418 Broadway	Albany
Victor Film Service	39 Church St.	Buffalo

NEW YORK CITY

Empire Film Exchange	150 East 14th St.	New York City
Great Eastern Film Exchange	21 East 14th St.	New York City
Hudson Film Company	138 East 14th St.	New York City
Peerless Film Exchange	52 14th St.	New York City
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange	110 Fourth Ave.	New York City

OHIO

Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co.	309 Arcade Bldg.	Dayton
Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co.	315 West 4th St.	Cincinnati
Toledo Film Service	319 Superior St.	Toledo
Victor Film Service	Prospect & Huron Sts.	Cleveland

OREGON

Independent West. F. Ex.	Swetland Bldg.	Portland

OKLAHOMA

United Motion Picture Co.	112 Main St.	Oklahoma City

PENNSYLVANIA

Eagle Film Exchange	143 N. 8th St.	Philadelphia
Independent Film Exchange	415 Ferry St.	Pittsburg
Philadelphia Projection Co.	44 North 9th St.	Philadelphia
Philadelphia Film Exchange	934 Arch St.	Philadelphia
Pittsburg Photoplay Co.	412 Ferry St.	Pittsburg
Swaab Film Service Co.	338 Spruce St.	Philadelphia
Exhibitors Film Service Co.	23 N. 9th St.	Philadelphia

TEXAS

Texas Film Exchange	311 Elm St.	Dallas

UTAH

Co-operative Ind. Film Co.	320 Atlas Block	Salt Lake City

WASHINGTON

Pacific Film Exchange	Globe Bldg.	Seattle

WISCONSIN

Western Film Exchange	307 Enterprise Bldg.	Milwaukee

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

111 East 14th Street NEW YORK CITY

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 10

March 11th
1911

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
SEP 6 1911
PERIODICAL

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

SCENE FROM
"SON OF THE EXECUTIONER"
GREAT NORTHERN RELEASE
March 11th

ALWAYS
Forging Ahead
WITH A HIGH STANDARD OF QUALITY FILMS

THE ONE BEST BET

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, MARCH 11TH

THE SON OF THE EXECUTIONER

A beautiful feature film with a wealth of detail that will win the admiration of every audience. Many thrilling scenes—magnificent costumes—perfect photography and effective tinting and toning.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, MARCH 18TH

BETWEEN LOVE AND DUTY

A powerful dramatic film—splendidly enacted.

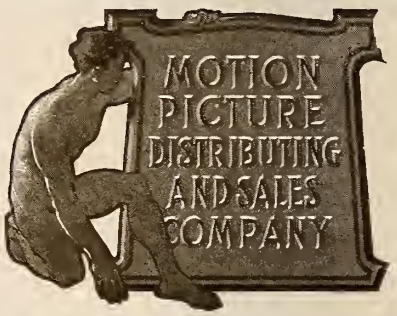
Life and People Below the Equator

A charming travel picture of nomadic tribes in the torrid zone.

Exhibitors: You cannot possibly afford to miss a single Great Northern release as they are drawing cards—every one of them.
ALL FIRST CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK
All Films Sold Through Sales Co.

Retrenchment



At the beginning of the struggle our adversaries gained temporary victories. They shouted these from the housetops and published them from one end of the land to the other.

But Now--

They are frantically importuning the exhibitor not to give attention to the most recent events in the patent litigation!

The shoe is on the other foot! They meekly acknowledge that it is they who are on the defensive.

The SALES COMPANY, however, pursues the even tenor of its way. Instead of neglecting quality in a fruitless quest for monopoly, we are pleasing our customers more and more every day with this UNEXCELLED PROGRAM.

OUR PROGRAM

MONDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Eclair—Eclair Film Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

TUESDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.

WEDNESDAY
Ambrosio—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Atlas—Atlas Film Co.
Champion—The Champion Film Co.
Nestor—David Horsley.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories
Solax—Solax Co.

THURSDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Rex—Rex M. P. Mfg. Co.

FRIDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Lux—R. Prieur
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.
Solax—Solax Company
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

SATURDAY
Gt. Northern—Gt. Northern Film Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

111 East 14th Street, New York City

Rex Films
WHERE THE SHAMROCK GROWS
In the land "Where the Shamrock Grows,"
Where hearts are as pure as the snows,
Where are romance and love
With the bright stars above,
And the song of the bird could be heard.
In the land "Where the Shamrock Grows,"
Where the River Shannon flows,
Is the scene of this film,
And will certainly thrill 'em,
For Danny's the fellow that knows.
It's a Great IRISH Drama
Well Enacted, Admirably Executed. For it's a Rex
SEE THE GREAT FORGE SCENE
Released by Rex Thursday, March 16th, 1911
P. S. Ask the Sales Co. about the S. R. O. Film
Rex Films

BISON FILMS

FIVE REELS A WEEK

TUESDAY---BISON. WEDNESDAY---AMBROSIO. THURSDAY---ITALA. FRIDAY---BISON. SATURDAY---ITALA

"STARLIGHT THE SQUAW"

Released Tuesday, March 14

An exciting story, well acted, showing the capture of an unruly soldier, who has wounded an officer and fought the Indians.

ITALA RELEASES

"A DOG AND TWO MISTRESSES"
Thursday, March 16
"FOOLSHEAD IN SOIREE"
Saturday, March 18

"SACRIFICE OF SILVER CLOUD"

Released Friday, March 17

An Indian girl warns the soldiers of a secret attack planned by her tribe, and loses her life. Thrilling battle scenes.

AMBROSIO RELEASE

"A COWARD"

Wednesday, March 15

Sold Exclusively Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO., 1 Union Square, New York City

"SILAS MARNER" IS COMING!

STILL Asking STILL Asking STILL Asking

THE THANHOUSER TWO-A-WEEK

FOR

?

RELEASED TUESDAY, MARCH 21,
Another "Thanhouser 2-on-1"

DIVORCE

is a well-plotted picture and a well-directed blow at the divorce evil. You will be gratified and surprised when you see how the home was saved. A doll did it! This may not sound reasonable, but it all looks logical on the screen and, indeed, the incident is taken from real life.

—And On the Same Reel—

Waiting at the Church

As a humorous description of a man's efforts to find the right wife, this will command laughs aplenty when it hits your screen.

No. 195. Code Word, Vorce.

RELEASED FRIDAY, MARCH 24
A Noble Heart Beat Under His Ragged Shirt!

THE TRAMP

is a new thing in "Hobo" stories, one that throws aside the theory stamping him an out-and-out marauder and shows him a man of honor who likes to rove but hasn't the money to do it in Pullmans. At least this holds good of one-half the knights of the road. Favored with wealth, they would be called globe-trotters. Minus gold (often because of motives that were too pure and too lofty to sanction the illicit, worldly ways of getting it) they are "bums," "hobos," outcasts whom "honest" men must shun, as, indeed, our hero was shunned.

No. 196. Code Word, Kniad.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

"SILAS MARNER" IS COMING!

RELIANCE PICTORIAL PLAYS

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

ACTED BY AN ALL-STAR STOCK COMPANY

"At Sword's Point"

Released Saturday, March 18

Sensational battle scene, 100 men engaged with swords. Stirring rescue of the young king from the very jaws of death. Thrilling duel in the dark between the queen and soldier with wonderful electrical spark effects from the clashing steel. Magnificent settings. Beautiful costumes.

"When Red Turned Gray"

Released Wednesday, March 22

After a spree, Ross sees things. Hair-raising visions appear. A beautiful girl stands before him and when he tries to embrace her she vanishes. She appears again and turns into a devil. Chairs move away when he attempts to sit down. After many similar incidents cracked ice and cold water bring relief.

TWO REELS PER WEEK—WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY

Place your order with your Exchange

CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES, 1 Union Square, New York City

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

European Agents: INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., Breams Building, Chancery Lane, London, E. C.

Chicago Representative: J. J. Sullivan. 866 Graceland Ave. 'Phone Graceland 5053

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV March 11, 1911 Number 10

Notes of the Week

OUR FRONT COVER ILLUSTRATION.

This week we illustrate a scene from a Great Northern release of even date, entitled "The Son of the Executioner." Full particulars will be found in our advertising columns and the synopses in last week's issue.

THE FALL OF TROY

This great subject of the Itala Company, shortly to be released in America by the New York Motion Picture Company was run through the machine for our edification, and when we say we believe it to be a masterpiece in cinematography, we think every one who has had the pleasure of seeing this film will agree with us, that nothing in the whole realm of the art has ever been attempted on so magnificent a scale as this film. The New York Motion Picture Company are to be congratulated that they are able to distribute it to the trade in America. We hope the success they deserve will be theirs.

The magnificence of the staging and what Itala was attempting reached this office some weeks ago, and our worthy henchman, Jeanval, has had the matter in hand for some weeks. He will no doubt write his views at the proper time. We were therefore somewhat prepared for the scale and scope of the film. We expected great things, and certainly we have not been disappointed. To say this only gives our readers a very faint conception of the expression which an inspection of this subject conveyed to our mind. It is undoubtedly one of the greatest feats accomplished in the trade, and we understand that some 2,000 people were employed in all. With the wonderful settings, the magnificent scenery, the grand productions, cost, we understand, the Itala Company something like $30,000 of our money. We sincerely hope that the result throughout the world will more than compensate them for their outlay.

The story is divided into two parts, its total length being over 2,000 feet. The opening gives a fine prologue, in which Homer, the Greek poet, is seen reciting, or singing, to a gathering of his countrymen the celebrated victories of the heroes of the Trojan War. The story itself begins with a scene of magnificent depth of subject in which Menelaus, King of Sparta, is seen parting from his beautiful wife, the renowned of the Gods, the beautiful Helen. The magnificent stereoscopic effect of the Palace of the Greek King is beautifully photographed and the costumes are full worthy of the settings. We wish they could have been produced in their natural colors by Kinemacolor, as, by so doing, the grandeur and beauty would have been rendered as the subject deserves. Following the departure of Menelaus, there appears to Helen, introduced in the usual courteous manner of the Greeks, Paris, son of Priamus, King of Troy, who arrives as ambassador to the court of Menelaus. In the absence of this King, Paris is greeted with all the honors due to his high and exalted state by Helen, and in following the course of the story, it is not long before love springs up between the pair. Paris declares his passion in the garden of the palace to which Helen responds. They are not aware that their privacy was being intruded upon in the form of a servant, who hastens to carry the news to Menelaus that his wife had proved faithless to him. There is introduced just here a beautiful scenic effect so beautifully rendered that it almost takes away the breath of the spectator. Venus, the Goddess of Love, favors the suit of Paris for Helen, and is (by some occult manner known to the Gods and Goddesses of old), wafted away in a beautiful shell through the air, attended by cupids and nymphs, servants of Venus. The next scene shows the servant appearing before Menelaus with his message, and the return of the King to his court, where he, finding his wife is lost to him, calls his friends around him, tells his story, and they swear allegiance to him, and to follow him in the war he intends to wage upon Troy, in revenge upon Paris and Helen. The next scene shows the Grecian army making the assault upon the walls of Troy, and it is in this scene that those interested in the art will gain some idea of the unprecedented magnificence of the stage settings. The towers and walls of Troy seem to tower hundreds of feet above the warriors assembled around the foot of the wall, and it is here that hundreds of warriors assemble. Towers for siege purposes are pushed up to the walls, scaling ladders are reared, which are mounted by intrepid soldiers who are immediately killed on putting foot over the battlements, stones are hurled upon the soldiers beneath, and in scenes of almost indescribable confusion the Greeks meet a seemingly ignominious defeat, the news of which is brought to Paris and Helen, who have been watching the struggle, to their great and inexpressible joy.

An interval takes place to allow a change of reel, and a notice to that effect explains to the audience that there is an interval of two minutes. When the second part of the picture opens, the Greek army outside the walls shows the generals of the Greek army consulting together, they realizing that the siege and conditions in which they have worked will not be successful, resort to a ruse, and to the great relief of the watching Trojans they rush from the walls of Troy in seemingly complete disorganization. The faces of the Greek soldiers as they run, show that they are well schooled for the part they are taking, by the panic-stricken look upon the face of every one who passes in view. This ruse proves very successful. The Trojans, believing that the Greeks have been vanquished, and are totally demoralized, leave their place of safety, and discovering the horse, known in mythological history as "Troy's Wooden Horse," seize upon it and bring it into the town amidst the exultation of the Trojans, who believe that in capturing this horse, dedicated to the Greek Gods, they have obtained a complete mastery over their enemies. The capture of the horse is witnessed by Secheus, a Greek spy, who was left behind for this purpose. He immediately makes his way to the fleet, swimming along the banks of the Zanthus until he reaches the camp of Menelaus, who, on receipt of the information given him by the spy, immediately embarks in the vessels to return to Troy. Our next scene opens with the City of Troy at sleep. Darkness has covered the whole city, and with the exception of a few braziers left burning to guide the belated wayfarers to their homes, we suddenly see the great horse open a trap door in the stomach, and from thence descends a numerous troop of Green soldiers, who had hid themselves therein. They gather up torches, braziers, and every available instrument which will take fire and rush brandishing them, round the city, setting fire to the buildings. Troy is soon wrapt in flames, and the inhabitants, panic-stricken, rush hither and thither, being met by the Greek warriors, who have been admitted inside the walls by their spies and allies. This magnificent scene must be seen to realize its full perfection, beauty and startling effect. Its realism is great, and to see the scenes in the streets of Troy, with the irresistible march of the Greek troops, rushing in good order to the palace, which they ultimately destroy. Then to see Paris and Helen watching the flames. Paris takes Helen in his arms and rushes to escape, but finds it altogether too late. The Greek troops surround him on every side, the Trojans are being beaten down at every point, and the finale shows Menelaus and Paris in mortal combat amidst the conflagration of the palace. Menelaus slays Paris, and Helen falls prostrate on his body, midst the falling pillars of the huge palace and temple, bringing to a fitting close one of the greatest attempts to depict history ever produced in a cinematograph film.

Salem, Ill.—C. Morrow has purchased the moving picture theater of J. H. Brinkerhoff, and taken possession.

Altoona, Pa.—Mr. J. C. Keith is making arrangements to start a new moving picture show here.

Elizabeth City, N. C.—H. T. Greenleaf, Jr., is considering the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Hamilton, O.—William Gordon is making arrangements to erect a $50,000 theater at the corner of Third street and Broadway.

THE AMENITIES OF EDITORS

Quite a number of letters have reached this office, concerning one or two skits about us, written in other papers. They have been very amusing, and, when the readers know the writers as well as we do, they will understand our attitude of silence. Reading the Young People's Weekly, our boys brought home from Sunday School, we came across the following article, which puts the matter in good shape and answers our correspondents at the same time:

DO NOT NOTICE THE BARKING DOGS

By Joseph Kennard Wilson, D.D.

It is very annoying, of course, when you are quietly driving along the road, attending strictly to your own business, to have a little snarling, ill-natured dog come running out at you in a perfect frenzy of barking. It is an altogether natural impulse to reach for the whip and to cut at him savagely, and to keep striking at him with increased vigor of arm and heat of temper as you miss him—as you surely will!—again and again. But stop a minute! Do you think it really pays? Don't you suppose that that is just what the little rascal wants? That it is part of the game to put you in a rage and make you go through all sorts of undignified stunts? Put the whip back in its socket. Straighten up, and look about you at the scenery along the roadside or the people on the street, just as if there wasn't a yellow dog this side of Mars. And see how soon that yapping nuisance will tire of his sport, and will leave you for more interesting victims—more interesting because more interested. If it doesn't annoy you, it doesn't amuse him. Depend upon it, the very best way to treat barking dogs is not to notice them in the least.

Perhaps it isn't a dog, though. It may be something quite different that annoys you. It is some uncomfortable circumstance of your life; it is the malice of some neighbor or fellow-workman; it is some disappointment in your plans; it is some failure to attain to what you desire. But oh! how it barks, as it runs by the side of the wagon of your life! And oh! how you long to hit it a good sharp crack, and to send it off about its business! But the trouble is, that isn't the best way to send it off about its business; that only intensifies its conviction that its business is to follow and annoy you. The troubles that you notice grow like Jack of the Beanstalk. Keep your mind upon that sore finger of yours; allow yourself to note every sharp twinge of pain or ache in it; and by and by you can hardly get through the doorway without hitting that finger against both door posts. Quit thinking about it; make up your mind that you have something to do that is of greater consequence than coddling sore fingers, and see how long it will be before you have forgotten that there's anything the matter with it. The dog that you won't notice enough to get out your whip for will soon take so little notice of you that he won't bark as you go by.

One of the most annoying of these snappy curs is the little, petty, "no-account" criticisms to which nearly every one becomes subject when he strikes out in any degree from the ordinary and begins to "make things go" in any department. Of a score of people who notice you three or four will be apt to tell you that the wheel that is turning is not turning in the right way; three or four more will treat your most serious plans and purposes with flippant ridicule; still another three or four will insinuate that you have a "swelled head," and so on. If you succeed in your undertaking, they will give you no credit, but will talk of your "luck";

if you fail, they will join the "I-told-you-so" brigade, and will gloat over your failure. It is pretty hard not to take the whip out, sometimes—pretty hard to drive straight along on your chosen road without taking any notice of these petty critics and criticisms; but that is just what you must do. Answering back only aggravates the trouble and prolongs it. Each snap of the whiplash means a new bark. Criticism fattens upon the restiveness of its victim, and dies of starvation if it is not noticed. Never undervalue the sober, thoughtful criticism of any one, friend or enemy. Turn it over in your mind; look at it on all sides; see what there is in it; make it help you. But these trifling little flings, these objections for the sake of objecting, these querulous complaints—what's the use of bothering with them? Drive on! Don't waste your time and strength and whip by striking at a barking dog—Young People's Weekly, Feb. 25, 1911.

MR. ENGEL, THE "REX" MAN

In our issue of the 25th of February, writing of our visit to Rex we made mention in a very special manner of Ed. Porter, whom we consider the premier cinematographer in the States. The question came to us, "Who is the other man?" and in this issue we want to introduce to our readers the other dog, Joseph W. Engel. It has been our pleasure to know Mr. Engel for some years. We had a passage of arms with him in Chicago that we both well remember, but in the proverbial French manner, we kissed and made up, and to-day we hope we are good friends.

In introducing Mr. Engel to our readers as one of the directors of the Rex Company we want to say of him, in his own words that "he has worked hard for Rex." He says that he has hardly had any sleep, or what "sleeps" he has had, have been filled with dreams of the "Right Royal Rex," so that we may say, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, he is a king (using the word Rex as king) in the Rex Film Company. We don't know how Ed. Porter, whom we consider the "King" will take a rival. We think he may invite him out to a duel, or to a passage of arms, or a wordy war. We will leave it to them to get out of it as best they can. While Ed. Porter has been devoting his time to the production, Mr. Engel has been equally persistent in bringing the sales end before the buying public, and from what we can hear on the street he has proved himself a marvel among the members of the Sales Company, for the phenomenal manner in which Rex sprang to the front.

By the number of sales they made of their first issues and judging from the last picture they have put out, "By the Light of the Moon," it should be an easy matter for Mr. Engel to double or treble what he has already accomplished. At any rate he has the good wishes of the News for success.

Speaking of success, we understand that nearly every exchange in the country is purchasing the Rex releases, and in looking for larger fields and pastures Mr. Engel is contemplating a trip to Europe with a view of establishing an European agency or agencies, and is wondering if he will meet with as good success in Europe as he has met here. Mentioning agencies, they have a large correspondence from abroad, asking particulars of their film, and for circulars and other printed matter to be sent to the vaious correspondents. We think it would not be a bad plan if some of those foreign correspondents who have written to us, asking our intervention to obtain agencies, would write to Rex asking for terms and stating what they can do.

THE OBJECT OF MOVING PICTURES

By Herbert Quarless

The end and object of moving pictures viewed in its highest sphere, as a branch of arts, is to convey delight by means of the power of imitation, and the pleasures we derive from the contemplation of whatever is beautiful, not confined to the most pleasing objects in scenery alone, but what embodies whatever ideas the mind is capable in forming in beauty, in its most extended meaning—and is equally qualified to record with powerful impressions however important or delightful, arising from contemplating of the varied scenes of animate and inanimate nature, that cannot be equally roused by the exhibition of moving pictures, these placing in our hands a valuable and very fascinating means of instruction, and elevating the study far above the merit of merely elegant and pleasing art.

We may describe with all the beauty of language, or all the fascination of poetry such incidents as act most powerfully on our feelings, the horrors arising from frantic passions, sympathy with distress and sorrow or the delight excited by an amiable action; but how feeble is the effect like to prove, when brought in parallel with the instantaneous impression which the actual sight and presence of the scene is capable of rousing!

A person may give way to the bitterest expressions of anger and revenge; if we only hear the words, we may take time to consider their import, and reason at our leisure on the consequences likely to ensue; but present to our view, a picture inflamed by all the vindictive workings of rage, the participation becomes instantaneous; like the basilisk, it rivets our attention with an intensity beyond the power of description to excite.

"IT IS TO LAUGH"

By Margaret I. MacDonald

Joy is a lubricator. Sorrow clogs the machinery which joy, in its turn, liberates. Joy rejuvenates; it puts a new face on everything; it colors life anew—even the ash barrel shares in the rosy tint which joy diffuses.

Joy in a hilarious sense is sought by every man, woman and child. The world pays out a great deal of money to people who can make it laugh. When the circulation of money ceases the entertainer must needs find happiness in his work, else it will be a sad and sorry old world, with not a thing to make it blink its eyes, or shake its sides. We fancy indigestion and long faces will prevail.

The other day I was wandering about the center of the city, looking about for something which would furnish a thought for this week's article. We passed several large moving picture theaters. My friend said, "I don't believe you would find anything out of place in any of these—I don't think there is much use going in, is there?"

"Why, certainly," I replied, "I should be glad to find something which would not call forth adverse criticism; I should be glad to tell my readers that I had found something that savored of good; and at least something that if it did not savor of good to speak of, savored of no bad."

I entered when a picture had well begun. I peered down the aisles, and over the heads of the people, but no seat was to be had, and an usher stood in the center aisle holding a rope across to prevent more people from coming in. The public were as usual on their joy quest, and the manager of the house was happy as the coin flowed in. The people who were being entertained were happy, too—at least as happy as a momentary diversion could make them.

In the absence of seating accommodation, I was content to stand at the back. The two chaps whose reflex flitted nimbly about on the canvas, seemed to be permeated with a desire for eternal boxing; heaven would be their home if they could but have untrammelled freedom, regardless of time or place, to box, box, box, "forever, Amen." They boxed on the boulevard until the policeman stepped between, just in the nick of time to get a punch in the wind which doubled him up at their feet. They quarreled in attempting to relate the story to their friends, at the club, and in attempting, in terrible earnest, to finish the bout there, a catastrophe of tables and chairs and glasses occurred. Eventually they were thrown together on a board raft, on the river—they were still boxing, 'mid the dangers of bone smashing, and skull cracking, on the slippery boards, until Dame Fortune, in one of her relentless moods, with one swift touch, brushed them both off into the water, where their heads bobbed up and down for a few minutes, like a couple of seals, and would you believe it? they still continued to box. Though the wild waves played about them, they were set as adamant in their purpose, and they were still boxing with undaunted ardor when the curtain dropped.

The audience was delighted, and apparently satisfied with this ridiculously unnatural picture. Perhaps it was because it was unnatural that it appeared so funny to every one. I laughed with the rest, and it did me no harm. We are looking for something to tickle our several bumps of mirth. What do we care whether it is natural or unnatural, so long as it makes us laugh?

There was no harm in this picture; it had none of the prize-fighting atmosphere about it. It was no incentive to any one to do anything in particular but to laugh. It provoked good, hearty, wholesome laughter. We forgot for the moment that little Mary was sick at home, or that little Johnnie had failed in his examination at school, and the thousand other ills, greater and lesser, that harass the thousand-odd human hearts. And so this ridiculously foolish picture had its mission, after all, and so has everything in this world which does not savor of grossness.

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," so they say. Therefore, we would not relinquish our hold on the joy inspiring films, no matter how unreal they may be, providing the subject matter and its treatment are clean. The latter attribute we demand to find in each picture in predominating measure.

EDUCATION AND MOTION PICTURES

A Straight Talk to the Teachers

By Lindsay Bancroft

I have written some generalisms on the matter before (and I am egoist enough to use the first person singular), and lest my papers should be judged worthy of a place among the periodical platitudes, I will state without fear of contradiction that all this talk of making pictures that will fit the school curriculum is beside the mark. No manufacturer, or set of manufacturers (the Patents and Sales Companies will please excuse this, because it is true) can turn out educational pictures that will fit the present school regime. The demand would be too diversified to justify the enormous cost; and there are other reasons.

But it is a case of Mahomet and the mountain. The educational program as at present carried out in our schools is NOT admirably suited to the introduction of the motion picture. The magnitude of this new thing, this appeal to the first of the five senses, has been entirely underestimated even by those teachers and professors and lecturers who are most desirous of seeing motion pictures in the schools.

The Froebel system of teaching the tiny ones, the Naas and other "Sloyd" methods of training the young in the use of common tools, and the legion of "manual training" and "physical (torture)" courses have forced themselves into the schools, the time-table of studies being modified and altered to make room for them.

Teachers who are trying to use motion pictures as a pastime, or a "recreative study," or as a reward, forget it. The motion picture is no small thing in education, but the films you can at present obtain are entirely insufficient and very few are suitable.

You cannot take ten minutes off the history lesson, curtail the reading exercise and make recess shorter, to make room for the motion pictures. That is not fair to the pictures, and it is not safe for the child.

You must find some way of "infusing" the cinematograph into the regular studies, as an essential part thereof.

This means that the whole system of present-day school teaching must be somewhat remodeled to FIT THE NEW CONDITIONS that the advent of the motion picture has created. It is not merely a juggling of time-tables that is needed, but a sweeping reform all round.

This reform (the word is used advisedly) has many aspects, every one of which will have to be carefully considered before the ultimate good can be achieved.

First of all, are your schools structurally suitable to the introduction of the cinematograph Have you considered the attitude of your local civic authorities and how this may affect you in the future? Do you really know anything about cinematographic possibilities outside of having attended a picture show?

Go to your local theater once in a while, and ask the manager to talk to you on the subject, and about his troubles and triumphs; think just how you would use motion pictures in your own classes.

The local manager will be only too pleased at any interest you evince in the technical and practical side of the business.

Have you considered just how your school or institution can raise the money that will be needed?

Then, too, have you thought of the technical differences between motion pictures and text-book or chart illustrations There is a place both in simple art and everyday science that you are teaching, or pictures of motion, as there is for the "specimen" in an object lesson. Do you know where this place is? Should the motion picture of, say, cutting sugar cane, come before or after the exhibition of the cane itself to your class? Your normal training text-book will tell you one thing, your better judgment will tell you another.

And this is because, when the system under which you are now teaching was being evolved, motion pictures were non-existent.

It is now up to the professors of our normal and high schools to take measure of this new element that has arisen, and devote some deep thought to putting the moving picture where it belongs in the program. There is no doubt about it, the pictures cannot be adapted to the schools, but the school system must make itself adaptable to the pictures that will be certainly forthcoming when they are really wanted.

EDUCATIONAL LECTURES

Under the head of this caption in last week's issue, Mr. U. Grant Blackford gave an interview regarding the Keith & Proctor theaters. As soon as the paper was off the press Miss Bernyce Childs called us up on the 'phone and told us that was what she did in the year 1906 on the Pacific Coast. She lectured principally upon various cities and towns and noted popular resorts. Asking her to come down and see us she ran in the other afternoon and further exemplified the above by telling us her experiences, as follows: "I took my views, had my negatives made into lantern slides, and through the Entertainment Bureau on the Coast, delivered my own lecture in schools, churches, drawing rooms, etc." That is all very well as far as it goes. Short and sweet, but we want to know more than that. First of all, where did you take the views? "I started in Nome, Alaska, among the miners, when the gold fever was at its highest craze. I met all sorts and conditions of men, from all parts of the world, and when I say men, I mean women, too, for they got the fever just as bad as did the sterner sex. They also underwent the hardships that the men did, in their grasping after what the Good Book declares to be the root of all evil. Many of the photographs taken here were unique, showing the life and conditions at that time, although it had become pretty well civilized that year. From there I went all the way down the Coast to San Diego, using my camera on every special bit of life or magnificent scenery that I could see, more especially getting pictures of those wonderful monasteries with which the whole country is dotted. The life and habits of these people were caught by me as true to nature as I could get them. From San Diego I went into Arizona to study the growth and cultivation of the cacti, of which I took many pictures, keeping body and soul together, getting bread and cheese, by giving lectures to the inhabitants en route.

The five cent theaters were only just commencing to open up, rather few and far between, in these localities. Still I got the craze there, and in opposition to them I distributed hand bills and made myself well acquainted with the inhabitants, lecturing in their Town Halls, and had good audiences, making money on these travelogues or lectures. Working my way round the various towns, in the course of time I struck the motion picture people, and lectured in the various theaters where these were shown. From this it was an easy stage to advance to talking to the pictures behind the screen, and I obtained, with my own company, quite a good success in this period. Coming to New York and getting back into the "Legitimate," I sold my negatives and slides to Charles Besler Company, who now have them in their possession, and they should be available for any one desiring to give a lecture, or lectures, on these subjects."

We thanked Miss Childs for her interview, and were very glad to meet one of the pioneers of the talking pictures, following the travelogues, and our impression is now, as we have mentioned in several back issues, that the time is ripe, when such ladies as Miss Childs' services can be secured to give educational talks to the various motion picture houses. Miss Childs is a versatile scenario writer, and we expect to hear more of her when she returns from a visit she is making to the West.

BILL STEINER AND NICHOLAS POWERS.

Now, here is a combination. Who would ever have imagined Mr. Nicholas Powers of "Cameragraph" fame, would become an actor and make himself doubly immortalized in the films. Well, that is just what he has been and gone and done. He will delight the thousands of Nickelodia by the wonderfully versatile manner in which he has filled several heavy parts—as though to the manor born—and in the immediate releases of Yankee Film he will be shown. We congratulate Bill Steiner in coralling Mr. Powers while he is on his holiday tour through Bermuda, and anxiously anticipate the pictures.

CHAMPION FILMS.

As announced in their advertising space of this issue, the Champion Film Co. will in the future issue two releases each week, Monday and Wednesday. The Monday releases will be of the historical order while the Wednesday release will be, as usual, one of those famous Western ones.

Chicago Letter

Things in and around Chicago concerning the moving picture industry are pursuing an even tenor, regardless of the flurries about "open market," "moving picture convention," and the fact that we have not an "ideal" moving picture show in Chicago and a lot of that bum rubbish that is being dished out to us of late.

The various independent film manufacturers deserve a little flattery for some of the very good pictures that have found their way into our midst during the past week or two.

The Reliance Company have eliminated those provoking jumps from their recent releases, and, take it from me, I am not saying a word too strong when I call the last four Reliance films masterpieces—"A Plain Tale," "Tangled Lines," "The Trump Card" and "From the Valley of the Shadows." Look over any of these and dispute me if you can.

The Cuban Imps are also in line for a little praise. "Artful Kate" was a winner as a high-class comedy story.

"Tracked" won instant recognition as a dramatic triumph. Baggot and Miss Rhea should work together more, as we will never tire of their efforts.

The Bison Company, on whom we depend for our real Western pictures, have been outdoing themselves of late. Just glimpse back and take "A Warrior's Faith," "Owanee's Great Love," "Dick Farrell's Prize" and several others, and in each you will find true Indian and Western spirit.

The Thanhouser Company have also contributed several which, like all Thanhousers, took well. "The Mummy," "Stage Struck," "The Little Mother" and "A Newsboy Hero" were all exceptionally good as to photography, acting, staging, etc. We impatiently await "Robert Emmet."

I also wish to take this opportunity of thanking B. Adler and the Thanhouser Company for the neat "lobby display" advance photos in the Thanhouser News.

Managers are all hoping other manufacturers take up this idea, as it is a good method of advertising your pictures ahead.

Had a letter from Julius Singer, Laemmle's confidential man, to-day. Singer is in Des Moines, Ia., where he opened a Branch Exchange for Laemmle a week ago and he tells me he is getting on famously. Naturally he would, for what exhibitor could resist Singer's jovial manner and illuminating smile, especially the smile? If I can get what I have been searching for I will have that smile in the next issue of the News.

Singer is one of those little fellows, who is bound to be a big man in the moving picture business.

The American Film Manufacturing Company's plant on Orleans street is about one of the busiest places you can find these days. Everything is hustle and bustle, and it certainly shows results, as the late releases of the Flying "A" are the real old time essence of photography.

"College Chums," which I had the pleasure of seeing the other evening, impressed me very much, as it did those seated about me, especially the sub-titles made up from verse-lines of different authors.

The Bijou Dream Theater on State street is still packing them in with Independent pictures, as is also the Boston on Madison street, in spite of the competition.

While we are hearing so much talk about silver coated curtains, mirror screens, mirror curtains, etc., it would pay some exhibitors a big return to whitewash their screens so the audience could appreciate the generous merits of the Picture Manufacturers' Product.

J. J. SULLIVAN.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., March 8.—Well, we have had quite a jolly time with the fight pictures of the Jefferies-Johnson scrap at Reno, July 4th of last year, and, after waiting patiently for their appearance, the reels came to town, and all sportdom, as well as society and every one else with an ounce of real live gore in them, turned out; and it was some show, believe me. It was just what we had been waiting for, and all this noise that has been created on account of the pictures must have been started by those who were sore because they were left out of the "pickings."

There is nothing in the pictures to cause a riot, unless one wants to start something out of pure cussedness. It is true that we hated to see old Jeff get the walloping he did; but if he was fool enough to fight the negro he got what he deserved. The best man won—that's all there is to that argument, and, black though Johnson is, you've got to hand it to him, for he is sure some scrapper.

The Lyceum Theater showed these pictures for two days, after which the Majestic took them for Saturday and Monday. The Majestic, you know, is the only house that caters to colored talent and sets aside a great number of seats for colored patronage. When the pictures were on at the Lyceum a request was made of the directors of the Arkansas Amusement Association to permit the colored people to witness the reels from eleven o'clock to midnight, which was refused, for the Lyceum is in the heart of the business district and the only "gentlemen of color" ever seen in the theater is the porter, and he "beats" it with much speed when his day's work is over. Mr. J. W. Millmine, who runs the Majestic, gave the negroes what they were looking for, paid $250 for the six reels for two days, and last Saturday night I went down there to see how the colored people accepted the show. I was surprised at the mild manner in which they took the pictures. A more orderly audience I have never seen. Only at the end of the fifteenth round, when Jeff is battered through the ropes, did they cut loose, and the applause at that point was terrific. Trouble? Why, bless you, there never was a sign of it.

Opposite the Lyceum, while the pictures were on there, stood a group of negroes watching the white patronage entering the theater. I walked over to listen to them "cackle."

"I sho would give all my interest in H—— jest to see dem pictures," said one big "buck."

"Man, ef de white folks would let me inside dat theater to see dat show, I'd be willin' to work for nothin' for de remainder ob my life," responded another.

Both houses played to capacity business and the Majestic patronage was composed of every "coon" in town, and they all paid their "two bits" and half dollar most willingly.

It doesn't pay in this part of the country to permit negroes to run moving picture shows on the main street, as witness the race riot in Fort Worth, Tex., last week. A man leased a building on the main street for a colored picture show. All the white girls who sold tickets in that city's other picture houses struck. The managers went to the mayor and city solicitor and tried to have the colored place closed, but they couldn't do it unless there was some violation of the city ordinance. The first night the show opened the trouble started, for a crowd of boys gathered and hooted the colored people as they came from the theater. And a "cop" stood by and looked on. Finally one of the youngsters seized the electric sign; others swung on it; there was a ripping tearing noise and down came the illuminated advertisement. A moment later a brick crashed through the window on the temple of thought of the colored cashier. And the "cop" still looked on. The man who leased the building came forward as the crowd was moving the electric piano into the street and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I apologize to the people of Fort Worth for leasing this property for a colored theater, and it won't happen again."

"I move we accept the apology and adjourn," cried a man, and it was all over. No, there's no "nigger show" on Main street in that town.

Figuring prominently among the news of interest throughout the state the past week were three items in which the moving picture shows were more or less involved. They comprised murder, marriage and a red-hot denunciation by a reverend bishop. The wise man who once scribbled that "Variety is the spice of life" is now permitted to toss his hat in the air and yell "I told you so."

Taking the events in the order named brings forward the little town of Paragould, where Miss Amy Wilson, daughter of the "village blacksmith," lives. While papa is busy readjusting the covering for pedal extremities of horses, his daughter sells tickets in a moving picture house there. Miss Wilson is a typical Southern girl; being so, she believes that a negro should know his place. A colored bootblack in one of the barber shops of her town made insulting remarks to her on two different occasions. The young lady did not tell her father or friends, else there would have been a "necktie party" instanter. Instead, she went home, got her little magazine revolver, put it in her muff and passed by the barber shop for the third time, not to tempt the negro, but on an errand. The "dinge" spied her and this time seized the young lady and drew her into a nearby hallway. Then she got busy—real busy—and there was work for the undertaker. Miss Wilson placed the muzzle of her revolver against the stomach of the "coon," pressed the trigger and fairly riddled him. After this little pleasantry had been completed, she walked across the street to where the sheriff was starting towards her, handed him the smoking revolver and informed him what had happened.

"Did you kill the nigger?" the sheriff asked.

"I hope to God I did," calmly replied the young lady.

She was taken to the sheriff's home for dinner that night and every business man in town came forward to go her bail. Miss Wilson is still selling tickets at the same old stand and business has picked up in great shape.

The marriage. A fifteen-year-old school girl meets her seventeen-year-old beau. They decide to get married and the event takes place. Did they run away on their honeymoon? Not these wise ones. That costs money, so the happy husband took his bride to see the picture shows, where they passed the entire afternoon and later received paternal blessing.

The denunciation: Rev. Bishop Moore, of Little Rock, in a circular letter, takes a crack at theatricals in general and the moving pictures in particular. The good man says:

"Nothing grieves us so much as to see, day after day, hundreds of children issuing from theaters and picture shows, which are conducted for the sole purpose of money-getting, without any regard to their pernicious influence on the minds of the young. We honestly believe that the stream of innocent life is being frightfully polluted by unrestrictedly permitting children to attend theaters and picture shows which are not above suspicion."

Does it hurt, Mr. Manager? While the bishop means well enough, I am inclined to take issue with him in a mild way. I don't think that the picture shows are in business for the money that is in it any more than any other legitimate business conducted, and I do know that managers DO NOT run their houses without regard for the minds of the little ones. They are not in the business for charity, any more than the reverend bishop; and I cannot imagine that he would consent to preach or perform the duties of his high office for nothing. I wonder, in closing, when the bishop was in a moving picture house last. I wonder if he has really made a study of motion photography. I wonder if he has fortified himself with convicting evidence that motion pictures as a whole are rotten for children. Oh, I wonder if—but what's the use.

And right here I want to place a nice club in the hands of Bishop Moore for his next denunciation of picture shows. Selig you've got it coming to you and I hope he rips the everlasting lining out of you. My only regret is that motion photography in general must suffer for your wanton boldness. I saw your reel, "Too Much Mother-in-Law," at the Scenic, and I am more convinced than ever that if this thing keeps up my prediction made some weeks ago concerning "wet nurses" being an important factor in the future in making pictures will be verified. It was a good comedy, but that last scene could have been eliminated and brought just as good results. Behind me sat a mother and her little son. Here's what little Willie Want-to-Know-It-All asked his mamma:

"Ma'ma, what must the lady be in bed with the baby for?"

Nice, isn't it, Selig? Aren't you ashamed of yourself? The mother could not answer. Women in the theater condemned the ending of that picture, and no wonder. Why it is necessary to show a mother depicting the result of confinement and make it so rotten plain on the curtain is beyond me; and why in the name of Heaven that angelic board of censors let such oneryness—for that's all one can call it—get by is an equal mystery. I claim that a picture dealing with sexual relations should not be permitted to be placed before children. They learn that soon enough, and it is mighty embarrassing for a mother to be asked questions concerning a picture that she cannot explain to her little ones. I hope the day will come when the good woman who poses for pictures will tell the director to go straight to H—— when he asks her to portray anything of this character. And the plainer she told him the more I'd bless her and the profanity she used, for she would be none the less noble.

Had the pleasure this week of witnessing two reels of Trust and Independent make in which "Little Mary" was the leading lady. It's a pleasure to watch anything and everything that this talented little artiste does, for she always gets away with it better than a majority of the ladies before the camera. "A Man and a Maid," an Imp production, was at the Princess. The little "Missie" didn't have so much to do in this picture, a greater part of the work going to Owen Moore, and I was pleasantly surprised at his interpretation, for I always considered Owen such a clumsy hulk of humanity that I didn't believe him capable of the acting he did in this reel. The other picture was a later Biograph, one in which the three sisters took a prominent part and Mary was finally captured by the reverend gentlemen, a la "Gloria Quayle" and "John Storm," late of ye "Christian." There was as much difference between these two makes as there is between day and night. The Imp lacked the finesse that characterizes a majority of the Biograph products. Mary, Mary, why did you do it? Was it because you needed the money? I hated to see you leave the Biograph, and alll over the theater when you came trooping on that Independent curtain I heard people exclaim: "Why, see, there's the little Biograph girl." That's what we knew you by out in these parts before Carl blazoned your picture and the press agent got busy when the Imp enticed you away. You may add dignity and art to your new employer, but just the same we liked you best with Biograph, for they surrounded you in a manner that left nothing to be desired. We have a deep rooted opinion that will have to take a powerful lot of sight evidence and argument to convince us that other firms are in it with Biograph, for we believe that they are not. And this isn't any "boost" for Trust product, either. It's just a plain statement of facts as we believe them to be.

There's a new operator at the Princess Theater, or at least there will be one in a very short time. He arrived at the home of Preston Chew, chief operator, weighed on his début nine pounds and is just about the cutest thing in the line of babies that has been seen here in many days. Was "Papa" Preston proud? Hush, brother, hush. He thinks it's too good to be true. Preston asked the baby the other day what pictures he preferred and the kid replied: "Shoot me the Independent product, daddy." Preston states that he's one destined to be "Greater than Edison."

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

Armat Stockholders Demand Accounting.

A receiver for the Armat Moving Picture Company of Washington, leading competitor of the Edison Company, is asked in a petition filed in the District Supreme Court by minority stockholders, asserting their dissatisfaction with the management of the concern.

President Thomas Armat, Vice-President Harry T. Marvin and Treasurer Jeremiah J. Kennedy are made co-defendants in the suit, being charged with voting themselves exorbitant salaries and buying patent rights at exorbitant prices.

The minority stockholders who are plaintiffs are E. Quincey Smith, Samuel L. Jones, William S. Minnex, Lester A. Barry, Franklin T. Sanner, T. Janney Brown and Maurice Philips, all of Washington and vicinity. They are presented by Attorney J. J. Darlington and secured from the court a rule to show cause why their prayers should not be granted.

It is recited in the petition that the Armat Moving Picture Company was organized in 1900 under the laws of West Virginia, with the principal offices in Washington. For some years the business was unprofitable, owing to litigation over alleged patent infringements with the Edison Company.

In 1906, it is charged, President Thomas Armat made a contract with Charles E. Wood to manage the business and prosecute the litigation. Wood was to receive $10,000 a year and half of the profits of the company, but died in 1908.

At the last annual meeting of the corporation, it is charged that Armat, who controlled 26,000 shares of the entire capital stock of 50,000 shares, voted himself $40,000 under the contract with Wood.

It is also charged that Armat and the other officers, controlling the board of directors, voted salaries of $7,500 a year to Armat, and $3,750 a year each to Marvin and Kennedy. That their services are not worth such sums is declared by the minority stockholders, who say their protests were given a harsh quietus when Armat voted his majority of the stock.

Purchase of a new moving picture device, known as the Macklyne patent, for $50,000 in annual installments of $10,000, is also a complaint made by the plaintiffs. A discovery is asked if Armat and his colleagues are the real inventors of the patent and are selling to the company at an exorbitant price.

The court is asked to appoint a receiver to ascertain the profits of the corporation since 1909, inquire how much President Armat has received under the contract with Charles Wood, and conduct the affairs of the company.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—H. B. Calder and associates are planning the erection of a new theater at Vernal.

Siloam Springs, Ark.—Ed. C. McCulloh is planning the erection of a new theater here.

Sterling, Ill.—Messrs. Lagrille and Middleton, of Muscatine, Iowa, are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Harriman, Tenn.—Leon Evans has commenced the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

River Falls, Wis.—C. P. Andrews, of St. Paul, is preparing to open a new moving picture show here.

EXHIBITORS' PAGE

WHAT THE PUBLIC DEMAND

SUGGESTIONS FOR IMPROVEMENTS

THE EXHIBITOR AND THE EDUCATIONAL TREND.

Editor Moving Picture News.

Dear Sir:—I am an exhibitor "within the meaning of the act," and I have a kick. That is what I am writing you about. So far as I can see, the average exhibitor is about as wide-awake as a dead onion. I was the same myself, but I reformed. I had to, or deserve the opprobrium of some of my intimate friends who speak of the exhibitor as "only a moving picture man."

I have read things in the Moving Picture News about Education and all that, but they don't touch the education I mean, that is, the education of the exhibitor. "Education" is what is "led out" of a person, isn't it? Well, circumstances "led it out" of me all right. I have always had pretty good houses, run fairly good films, etc., but there was not one thing by which you could have distinguished my theater from a hundred others, until a friend told me so.

I began to look around at other houses, and I had stopped counting at seventeen when I found not one original idea among the lot, my own included.

Then I got busy on the self-education stunt. First I insisted on knowing at least a day or two in advance what my "special" reel was to be. The exchange said they couldn't, or wouldn't do it. I said they would, and remember I am paying the bills. They do it now. Next, I sent a printed synopsis of any special or educational reel to the homes. My distribution didn't cost much, as I gave these notices to the audience in my theater during the interval.

I read in your columns about one of your subscribers using an automatic card printing press. Unless the said writer has used such an adjunct for over two years, he is behind me. If I had to part with any of my theater equipment I think I would sell the opera chairs rather than give up the little press. Since reading the article referred to, I have taken up the idea of the linotype slugs as named, and it works like a charm. But that is not all. I use my press for printing announcement slides, etc., on celluloid sheets. (My operator is a worse writer than I am, so "there's a reason.")

And the theater front. Did you ever see a lobby crowded out with one-sheet boards and Trust posters of films; with "Special To-day" and all the rest of the Bowery stunts presenting the appearance of the ribbon counter at a bargain store? Such, alas, was mine.

Every small town has its budding artist. Ours has, and I nipped the bud. A couple of hand-made posters, if they be at all good, posters I mean with some real artistic merit, and not all words and no design, are worth a dozen lithographs. Not that I use no lithos. I do, but not every one the exchange sends me.

Ours being a small town, we do not run continuous shows as you do in New York, but our evening performance begins at seven. It used to be the usual thing to start about 7.30 or 8, but we have changed all that. When I had got educated to the punctuality idea, I came out with a newspaper notice and a box-office sign framed and displayed, "Set your watch by us, we start prompt to the minute, 7 p.m." The first night we ran the first reel to the ushers and the Chinese janitor. That was a few months ago. Now we have a house three-fourths full before the lights go down.

My operator is an electrician o' parts, and I am some tinker. The combination has evolved a novelty in the form of a program billboard hung outside the box office, with every film title clearly displayed, and a white index finger that moves automatically and shows at a glance the film then being run, and, of course, how far from complete is the first show. I would send you the design of this contrivance, only we built the blamed thing first and made the design after; that is, we WILL make the design some day and sell it to the General Company.

Education has got us all going I tell you. Only last night our sound effect man educated the Salvation Army into the loan of their drum. Of course, the Army didn't know about the education until this morning.

Will you put me in touch with some one who makes "give away" monthly calendars in the form of post-card size blotters?

Yours truly,
G—— S——,
San Antonio, Texas.

EXHIBITORS AND READERS.

Here is a problem for you: What town in North America east of Chicago, with a population of over 50,000, has NO PICTURE SHOW?

Imperial Theater, Coney Island, Refitted

Mr. Henry Connors is refitting the old Imperial Theater at Coney Island, N. Y., and changing it over into an up-to-date moving picture theater. Mr. Connors will make an especial feature of daylight pictures and has ordered a complete equipment of Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," consisting of one motiograph, one No. 6 Powers with double dissolver attachment, and one specially built Hallberg direct current economizer.

Compton, Ill.—Henry Clopine and Arthur Anglemeier are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Iowa City, Iowa.—William Englert is planning the erection of a new theater here.

MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

THE PENNILESS PRINCE
Imp Release, March 23

Prince Gustave, a young German nobleman, with blue blood, but a bankrupt, alights from a vessel at Havana, Cuba, to earn a livelihood.

He is unaccustomed to manual labor and casts about to secure work. He reads an advertisement in a paper that hands are wanted on a tobacco plantation, and he applies in person for the job at the office of the tobacco planter.

Inez, the daughter of the grower, is in the office and is immediately infatuated with the handsome young foreigner, whom she tries to impress. Prince Gustave is indifferent to her charms, and the fury of a scorned woman is aroused. Again she endeavors to interest him, but to no avail.

Prince Gustave is given a clerical position in the office and is getting on famously when the titled bookkeeper sees Dolores, who is employed on the plantation. The prince recognizes in her all the womanly charms that excite his admiration. The jealousy of Inez is displayed and she induces her father to remove him from the office and put him to menial work on the plantation among the tobacco stalks. There he again meets Dolores and there is a mutual attachment which is pleasing.

Inez mails Gustave a letter informing him that his presence is required at the office of the German consul. He is all expectation, hoping to learn good news from his ancestral home. He is not fitted to visit the embassy by reason by his shabby clothing. There is a pretty scene between the prince and Dolores in the tobacco field. He sorrowfully tells her he needs funds.

Dolores, in her great love for Gustave, finds a way. She visits the office of a dealer in hair and sacrifices her luxuriant tresses, emerging from the shop with cropped head. She gives the money to Gustave, and he is surprised, hurt and grateful. He thrusts the money in her lap, but she bids him keep it.

Gustave visits the consul only to learn that nothing can be done for him, and retires humiliated. His grief and disappointment is witnessed by Inez, who rejoices in his disappointment. He is, however, cheered by the comforting assurances of Dolores, which give him hope.

He returns to the tobacco fields but later receives a visit from the representative of Germany, who informs him of the death of his older brother, and that he has come into his own as heir to the estate of his father. Gustave proudly points to the medal on his breast and tells them that he is a titled nobleman with vast estates. Inez, is all attention. She turns to him with a smile calculated to win the prince, but he holds out his arms to the faithful Dolores and takes her to him. The consul congratulates the prince, and the girl he has chosen, and they walk away leaving Inez, the intriguer, disappointed and desperate.

IN OLD MADRID
Imp Release, March 20

A pretty love story of Old Spain in which an impetuous young man wins, despite the objection of discriminating parents.

Don Gomez writes a letter to the parents of Zelda, a beautiful young Spanish girl, regretting his inability to pay them a promised visit, but sends his son, Jose, instead.

Jose arrives and is immediately smitten by the charms of Zelda. His ardor is by no means cooled by the frigid glances of the parents, who immediately discern that their guest is altogether too precipitate. Zelda, although a dutiful daughter, is not indifferent to the homage paid her, and resolves to disregard the conventional custom prevalent, and indulge in a little flirtation. Her mother inaugurates a system of espionage that is very inconvenient for the lovers. They are surprised on the eve of tete-a-tetes by the duenna-like mother, and are driven to desperation.

Zelda has a girl friend about her age who resembles her very much, and she takes the companion into her confidence. There is a conspiracy that results to the advantage of the lovers. Rosa, the friend, is attired to represent a clever counterpart of Zelda and the girl awaits results. The mother, her suspicions thoroughly aroused, resolves to redouble her vigilance and walks in the garden accompanied by Zelda. Seating herself on a bench she commands the girl to repose beside her. Finding the vigil rather tiresome, the elder woman lapses into a state of drowsiness, and the companions of Zelda beckon her to join them, but the opportunity is not propitious.

So clever is the disguise of Rosa that Jose is deceived and he kisses her. The father of Zelda discovers the act, and hastens to the mother to inform her of the fact, only to see Zelda yawning besides his wife on the bench. The husband is informed the mother is competent to protect the girl and he leaves, chagrined. Exhausted, the guardian falls asleep, and Rosa exchanges places with Zelda, who joins her lover.

Jose proves himself to be a young man of resources. He induces Zelda to accompany him to the sea shore. Throwing off his shoes, he gathers the girl in his arms, and wades across a stretch of water, and they take a perilous position on the rocks. Their absence is noticed by the mother, who discovers that Rosa has been substituted for Zelda, and the father is summoned.

A search is instituted, and Zelda and Jose are discovered on the rocks with the spray dashing over them. Jose has a scheme which he quickly imparts to Zelda, and she acquiesces. The irate parents see the daughter and her lover and resort to threats, then cajoling. Jose is firm, and dramatically threatens to throw Zelda into the roaring torrent, unless the parents consent to their immediate marriage. The agonized parents relent. Jose takes the girl in his arms and wades ashore. Then out of sight of the parents he sets the girl on her feet and their lips meet in a prolonged kiss. The obdurate parents have been outwitted by the scheming lovers.

DIVORCE
Thanhouser Release, March 21

Mr. and Mrs. Gray are a young married couple who have everything to live for: health, wealth and two lovely children. But they have unconsciously drifted into the bad habit of quarreling. Their children are greatly distressed by it, and lead an unhappy existence because of the continual wrangles of their parents. Matters finally come to a crisis, and Mr. and Mrs. Gray decide to separate. An agreement is reached, satisfactory to both parties, and Mr. Gray returns to the home he has left in anger, in order to take away with him his personal belongings.

Before he leaves for the last time he steals upstairs to take a look at the children. There he finds his wife, a horrified witness of a scene that is being enacted by the children. They are playing "divorce," and go through the various quarrels and misunderstandings which they have seen their parents enact. They divide their various belongings to their mutual satisfaction until they come to the dollies, "their children." The little girl refuses to be separated from her dollies, and rather than wound her the little boy decides that divorce is a horrid game, because it makes her cry, and they won't play it any more. The parents, who have witnessed this little comedy, unknown to the children, realize the sorrow that separation would mean to the children as well as themselves. They decide not to play at divorce, and become reunited, with the determination that no quarrel will ever occur to mar their happiness in the future.

WAITING AT THE CHURCH

Tommy found his fate in a boarding house, but fate was unkind to him. Tommy was one of a number of unhappy men and women who managed to drag out an existence in the establishment of Mrs. Miggs, where the company was bad and the food was worse. So it can be understood that the advent of a new boarder, in the person of one Flossie Footlights, who elevated the drama by song and dance, pleased Tommy very much.

It was love at first sight, excusable on the part of Tommy, but hard to explain so far as Flossie was concerned. But Flossie had never seen anyone like Tommy before, and that may be the answer.

In his wooing, Tommy showed himself a hero, although it hurt. He went on the stage once, and he dared the perils of a bargain-counter rush, to win a smile from the one he adored.

He proposed to her verbally, and was interrupted. Then he tried to express his affection by letter. He proposed an elopement, and it came off on schedule time. But—

Well, Tommy won a bride, but it was not the one he wanted. And when he took his pen in hand to explain, he only made a bad matter worse.

Tommy lost his beloved Flossie Footlights, but he still has his boarding house. And the thing that causes him sorrow is that his meal ticket in that unpleasant place is marked "For Life."

It is a terrible thing to be the husband of a boarding house keeper, particularly when you didn't have any idea of applying for the job. And that was the fate of poor Bertie.

THE TRAMP
Thanhouser Release, March 24

The hobo did not care for money. All he wanted was a chance to live happily, easily and without work. He took a friendly view toward society, and really hated to see anyone suffer. That was why when he met a runaway convict he did not surrender him to the authorities, but did what he could in his humble way to aid him.

Some years later the hobo again met the convict, well dressed and seemingly prosperous. Not recognizing his former benefactor, he gruffly refused him alms, but the hobo did not bear him a grudge on that account. He had met with many rebuffs in his lifetime.

In the course of his journey the hobo met a little girl, the tiny granddaughter of a farmer, and she gave him food. Then he repaid the favor by saving her from death under the wheels of an auto. He was injured himself, and it was natural that the farmer and the child should take him in and nurse him back to health.

The former convict was selling wildcat mining stock, and it was unfortunate for him that he sold some of it to this particular farmer. He was also unlucky because the swindle was exposed before the hobo left town. For the hobo knew him, and while the hobo was willing to aid a convict to escape from prison, he objected to allowing him to rob persons who had done him (the hobo) favors.

The swindler got the farmer's money, but the hobo made him put it back. And to be sure it got back, the hobo acted as the messenger boy. He didn't give the farmer a chance to offer a reward, but departed in secret to avoid being thanked. Perhaps he should have stayed and tried to make a new man of himself, and the chance was there waiting for him. But he heard the "call of the road," and he preferred that to being a "respected citizen" or a "rising man."

(Continued on page 17.)

ADVICE TO OPERATORS ORACLE PRACTICAL ARTICLES FOR ALL DEPARTMENT

By WM. E. SMITH, E. E.]

TRANSFORMERS.

As ordinarily applied, the terms Transformer, Inductors, Compensarc, and Economizers refer to an apparatus for changing the voltage and current in an alternating circuit from one value to another with an inverse change in the value of the current and voltage. Transformers, Inductors, Compensarcs, and Economizers, as used for moving picture arc lamps are known as step down transformers, as the delivered voltage is less than the supplied, but the current is greater than the supplied.

These transformers consist of two coils, the primary and secondary coils, which have well-laminated iron cores made of stripes or "stampings" of thin wrought iron laid together in such a manner that they make for the coils a core with closed ends, thus affording a complete magnetic circuit for the magnetism set up by a current in the coils.

The primary coil consists of many turns of small wire, while the secondary coil consists of fewer turns of larger wire.

The coils are carefully insulated with mica, rubber insulating tape, and other insulating materials, and the core is then built up by slipping the stampings into position.

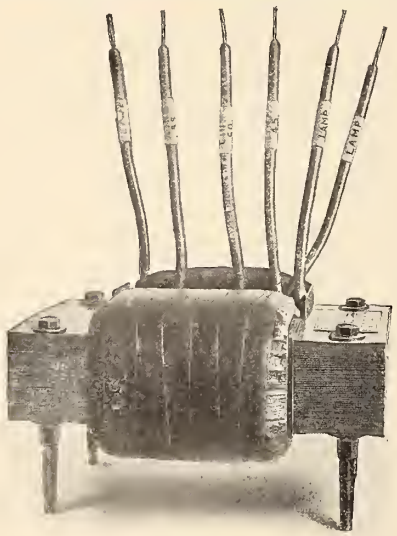

Fig. 6

Figure 6 shows the position of the core and coils in a clear manner. Figure 7 shows the same transformer mounted in an iron case, and is known as the Bowers Inductor.

The various manufacturers make differences in the number and shape of the iron plates used in the cores, the sizes of wires and number of turns composing the coils, and in other details, but the greatest difference apparent to the sight are the differences in the shapes of the iron cases. But though the real differences between them are very small, even these small differences affect their usefulness very much.

Figure 8 shows the Fort Wayne Electric Company's type A, Form 4, Compensarc and is rated at 2 Kw. for 110 Volts or 2½ Kw. for 220 Volts and is wound for either 60 Cycles or 133 Cycles, as may be desired.

Figure 9 shows the Hallberg Economizer, which is made for 110 Volts and 220 Volts and wound for either 60 cycles or 133 cycles.

Fig. 7

In nearly all of the moving picture houses the voltage is either 110 Volts or 220 Volts, while the pressure indicated at the arc lamp is about 35 to 50 Volts. The transformer coils must be wound so that the number of primary turns has the same relation to the number of secondary turns as the primary pressure has to the desired secondary pressure.

If the pressure is reduced from 220 Volts to 55 Volts, there must be one-quarter (¼) as many turns in the secondary winding as in the primary, and if the pressure is reduced from 110 Volts to 55 Volts, the secondary winding must have one-half (½ as many turns as the primary. Since the power given out by a transformer is nearly as great as that given to it, the current in the secondary coil is nearly as many times greater than the primary current as the secondary pressure is smaller than the primary pressure.

We have in transformers a most striking and wonderful example of the transfer of power from one electrical circuit (the primary circuit) to another circuit (the secondary circuit) without the circuits being in any way electrically connected with each other.

The inductive action goes on just as well if the two coils of the transformer are separated by glass or mica, as if they are wound close together. It is only necessary for the magnetic circuit to be properly arranged so that the magnetism which is set up by the primary coil shall all pass through the secondary coil.

Reactors, also called choke coils, reactance coils, and various other names, are used in alternating circuits for adjustment of voltage, to the arc lamp, in place of the transformers but they are not as economical as a transformer, as the following will show.

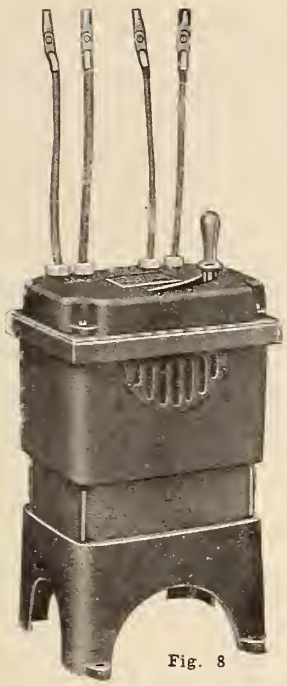

Fig. 8

	Transformer	Rheostat	Reactance
Volts on line	110	110	110
Amperes at arc	40	40	40
Volts across arc	35	35	35
Watts from line	1400	4400	1520
Watts saved by Transformer in place of rheostat	3000
Watts saved by transformer in place of reactance	120
Hourly cost at 10c. for Kw.	14	.44	.152
Yearly cost operating 5 hours per day	245.50	803.00	277.00

Fig. 9

When installing a transformer, one of the most important considerations is the amount of energy loss which will be incurred at no load. A highly efficient transformer at full load is of little value as a current saver if its loss at no load is high. It is for this reason always desirable to specify that transformers be made with the best alloyed iron having low magnetic loss, that is, iron of high electrical resistance. Heating of the iron is thus reduced to a minimum, and with correctly designed windings of liberal gauge, a low temperature rise results, which is so important in transformers. Terminals should be completely insulated, and yet be easy of access. The question of fixing the apparatus deserves full consideration, for nothing is more annoying to an electrician than to have to handle devices designed by the unpractical.

The Moving Picture Operators' Benevolent Association will hold their Annual Entertainment and Ball on Friday evening, April 21, 1911, at Arlington Hall, 19-23 St. Marks Place, N. Y. C. Tickets admitting lady and gent (including wardrobe) fifty cents. Single tickets for ladies twenty-five cents. The vaudeville entertainment will commence at 8.30. Dancing at 11.30. This Association, which started November 4, 1910, has done remarkably well. At the present time it has a membership of 200 strong.

At the last meeting there were forty-two applications for membership given to the Investigating Committee. The meetings are held the second and fourth Thursdays of the month at Arlington Hall (basement), 19-23 St. Marks Place.

Stop, Look, Listen, a New Cement

I have a number of samples of a new cement sent me for test by a well-known manufacturer.

This is a duplex cement as it mends both the non-inflammable and the inflammable film.

If the New York City operators would like to secure one of these sample bottles for test, they can get same by applying at the office of the Moving Picture News, 30 W. 13th street, New York City.

I should like them to try it out and let me have a written report as to what they think of it.

New Organization

Sixty odd moving picture workers have organized a union and have secured admission into the "Industrial Workers of the World." They will be known as the "Motion Pictures Theater Workers," and this initial organization as Local No. 402.

A meeting of the organization was held on Thursday evening, March 9th, at 196 Grand street, New York, and a general call and invitation was issued to all workers connected with any branch of the moving picture trade to attend.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: S. Solomon, financial secretary; E. Scoppa, treasurer; Abram Klein, recording secretary; Harry Tremont sergeant-at-arms; Jacob Gold, Harry Marks and Joseph Seiden, trustees; S. Solomon, organizer and member ex officio on all committees; Chas. E. Trainor, Herman Richter, Robt. McLane, Frank Kuctek and Harry B. Simpson, general executive board. General offices at Hamtramck, Mich.

Outside arc lamps seem to give some managers a lot of trouble. There is no more brilliant light than a flame arc lamp for illuminating purposes, and its warm rays are a great attraction to the public. Badly kept lamps and those of inferior design are detractive as far as advertising is concerned.

The modern flame arc lamp is usually of the clockwork mechanism type and, therefore, requires careful handling. From the moment of their installation the lamps must have careful and regular attention in order to minimize future work and worry. Once let arc lamps be neglected and it is certain unending troubles will ensue unless the lamps are overhauled and rebuilt by the makers.

When trimming flame lamps, care should be taken to keep the guide rods scrupulously clean. Metal polish is very good for this, or a rag slightly moistened with paraffin. Test the mechanism with a delicate hand to see that the carbon holders run down freely without the carbons. The small extra weight of a pair of carbons will then give additional assurance of the proper feeding of the lamp.

Reflected Pictures.—"A. B. Cole" writes to know whether he can arrange his projector to face the audience, so that by hanging a mirror in a suitable position in the body of the hall the picture may be reflected on to the screen, which is hung in the usual position.

Answer:—No, you will not get good results by doing this. The difficulty rests with the mirror. The ordinary plate glass mirror has two reflecting surfaces—one being the top surface of the glass, and the other the ordinary silvered back. This gives a double image. The only way to get over it would be to have the top surface of the glass silvered, but I am afraid he would find this too delicate for practical use.

Mercury Vapor Lamps.—"M. Cary" would like to know the amount of current taken by a four-foot mercury vapor lamp.

Answer:—The mercury vapor arc requires a current of 3½ amperes to operate it with the best result. The tube is made of a length suitable for the voltage on which the lamp is to run. The four-foot lamp requires 100 to 130 volts. This size will, therefore, consume 350 to 400 watts per hour, that is, a little over 1-3 k.w. per hour, and will give about 1,000 candlepower.

VARIETIES IN MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

VAUDEVILLE MUSIC

ILLUSTRATED SONGS

By FRA

FAMOUS PUBLISHERS OF POPULAR MUSIC

The name of Harry Von Tilzer has appeared on popular song hits for the past twenty years and really he needs no introduction. His firm has commanded the attention of the musical world, and justly so, for Mr. Von Tilzer has kept before the public by the composing and publishing of his tuneful and popular melodies for these many years. Song writers come and go but his efforts have been constantly appreciated and a new Von Tilzer ballad when launched out for public consideration means success.

Harry Von Tilzer

At the present writing they are meeting with much success with Mr. Von Tilzer's latest ballad, "In the Evening by the Moonlight, Dear Louise," which they report as having a big sale both in this country and England. "All Aboard for Blanket Bay" is considered his masterpiece, and the firm is most enthusiastic with the outlook for this being equal to their biggest hits. The words are by Andrew B. Sterling, and he has painted a word picture that leads us straight to nursery land.

Among their best known compositions the firm reports the following as big sellers:

"My Old New Hampshire Home," "Where the Sweet Magnolias Bloom," "Where the Morning Glories Twine Around the Door," "I Wonder If She's Waiting," "I Love It," "The Cubanola Glide," "Under the Yum Yum Tree."

The Von Tilzer songs and publications are reviewed each week in the regular department as they are published, and we would suggest that our readers keep in close touch with this column, as this popular firm is always on the alert to give the public the kind of music they want.

CANADA
MONTREAL

My good old friend of many years standing, I mean "The Francais," with its vaudeville and pictures is playing to as crowded houses today, as it ever has done. The old theater is as vigorous under the new regime as it was long years ago. A votre sante, camarade. I would like to come in as I used to do.

HAMILTON, ONT.

Andy Rice, Carl and Victor Pedersen, and the Village Choir made up with pictures a bill that just smiled the Canucks.

GEORGE SCHENCK

He's my yarn this time. Who is he? Who asks that, argues himself unknown in the life that lives and moves and has its being amidst the folk whose lives are spent behind the lights. No fellow, who is a theatrical fellow, doesn't know the Bijou in Brooklyn; it is a "bijou," honest, clean and true. A theater that presents such a show as a man can take his wife and children to see, without a tremor. Why? Because George Schenck is there.

I went into his office, even if things are changing, that makes no difference; it's a mighty good time to catch a man; my experience has been that to see a soldier in the comfort of a department office is not the time to judge him; it's when "he's up against it;" bugles blowing and bullets whizzing; the moment when how to do is what is needed—at once—that's the psychologic moment.

I caught George Schenck in the midst of change and I am glad I did not in the midst of "stately calm", but as a hurried, breathless business man, with a duty to perform and a conscience—live and real.

I gripped George Schenck by the hand—I knew him not—and in a moment I knew here's a man! That's all. Now follow criticisms:

Mr. Schenck is manager of Loew's Bijou, formerly he had charge of the Royal. This house is being renovated and will re-open under the old policy of pictures and "vaudy", and Brother Schenck takes charge of both.

Mr. Schenck has been with Marcus Loew for some six years. This house runs three shows, six acts, and four reels, nearly three hours, in my opinion too long. Mr. Schenck positively believes that real comedy is what is wanted. This is not for vaudeville, we get that often; it is meant for the rotten senseless bosh that slops over the screen as "chasers" and so forth.

Every show should end with comedy is the manager's belief: "Don't send your people away weeping."

Good vaudeville and good pictures are what George Schenck believes in, "a clean family show," as he expresses it. Well, he's got it. I saw the show; wife, children and friends saw it; not at one time and not known in any sense—here's the verdict, not mine, but I heartily agree with it:

A good, clean, enjoyable show.

Marcus Loew, give us a few more fellows in your theaters like the kindly, genial and manly George Schenck.

BROOKLYN
THE GRAND

Manager Springer continues to offer his big vaudeville bill. For the seventh week of the new policy he has engaged May Ward, the well known "Dresden Doll," and also Carrie Ford & Co., McCabe & Washburn in "A Night on the Bowery"; Four Musical Misses, Raymond & Hill and others.

FULTON

This theater is making a big hit at the comedy end and is headlining sketches of the comic order. Press Eldridge entertained with his funny monologue and songs; Carlton Macy and Maud Hall in the howling farce "The Timely Awakening;" Roberts, Hays and Roberts in their laughing sketch "The Cowboy, the Swell and the Lady;" Wilson & Stone, "The Eccentric Sailors;" Gummer, the juggler; The Florenz Family and others together with pictures.

GREENPOINT

The headliners at this popular theater are of the usual high order. Valeska Suratt with her "Pony Chorus" and four costume changes, a turn already well known for its beauty; Odiva, the famous diver, does as she always does; Howard & North in a rural sketch; Jack and Violet Kelly, in an expert lariat trick; The Van Bros., funny musicians, and others make up a strong bill.

OUT OF TOWN
CHICAGO

Plaza—Bert Howard and Effie Lawrence, in the "Stage Manager," scored; Diana Bonnar carried the audience, whilst Barnes and King with their comedy magic went big.

BOSTON

Keith's—Dennis Bros. and Nederveld, with his monkey, were good; Van Hoven and Murray and Lane excellent; Gertrude Hoffman, of course, crowded the house.

The Orpheum—Bronco Busters, good; The Telegraph Four, all right; Faust Bros., Gould Sisters and Ito Japs went fine.

Bowdoin Square—Torrelli's dog and pony act, fine; American Singing Four, good; Page and Morency, pleased. Pictures went in great shape.

PHILADELPHIA

Keith's—All new acts that went exceedingly well and pleased the folks. Rice, Sully and Scott, in their comedy bar act, carried all before them.

The Palace—The Three Madcaps, in "Bonney & Freeman," went well, but the big draw was Valarie, a young girl in songs and imitations. The Five Jewels, well dressed English girls, in their club juggling, stood well.

Victoria—Glen Roy and Russel's singing act; Benjamin Moran and Henry have a new act with great possibilities. This house had a very good bill this week.

DAVENPORT, IOWA

Three new picture houses are being opened in this town.

DES MOINES, IOWA

Majestic—Kate Fowler and Bob and Alice Longley were clever, Linton's "Tropical Maids" excellent, and Homer Davis was very good.

NEW BRITAIN, CT.

Keeney's—The success of this house as a picture and vaudeville has been and is phenomenal. They are playing to S. R. O. all the time.

HAVANA, CUBA

Actualidades LaGatita Madrilena—The well-known singer and Spanish dancer has been the feature at this house.

KANSAS, TOPEKA

The Grand—Besides good vaudeville, the pictures satisfied the audience.

PATERSON, N. J.

Majestic—A rattling good bill with Eva Fay as the headliner.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y.

Pontiac—This place of amusement gives three acts and two songs besides four reels and certainly gets there all the time.

PALMYRA

The Opera House—Prince Mundree and his dog were it. Algrossman, the "Black Face comedian," and Ira Davis, the soloist, made up a fine bill.

NEW YORK
Hammerstein's Victoria

Marshal Montgomery, ventriloquist; Henry E. Dixey and William H. Thompson, in the playlet "The Wise Rabbi," are amongst the headliners. "Knock-out Brown" also scored big.

BRONX

Ethel Green and Barry First, in the sketch "The Strongest Link," went well; also Maclyn Arbuckle and his company in "The Welcher," got over the lights. "The Strongest Link" is a heart story that made a hit from the first.

FIFTH AVENUE

This theater lives up to its high reputation. Beyond this it is unnecessary to say anything. The last bill included such "Stars" as Amelia Stone and Armand Kalish in their latest act "Mon amour." Nor must I forget Kathleen Clifford, Paul LeCroix and Harry Tighe. The pictures are projected in A1 style.

MANHATTAN OPERA HOUSE

Maggie Cline, "the Irish Queen," is just as dandy as ever. Al Von Tilzer (don't forget who this is), James Thornton, the monologist, and Roberts's trained rats and cats are a few of the good things offered in this popular house.

EDEN MUSEE

Howes, the "White Yogi," and an Italian orchestra rendering Lenten music are the added attractions of the week.

THE CASINO

Manager Daniels has got Alice DeGarmo, aerialist, and the "Cherry Blossoms" on a good bill.

BROADWAY

The weekly concert and pictures still attract the crowds, whilst the big hit of the week was Otis Skinner in "Sire."

EMPIRE

Frorzini, "The Accordion Player," got the "big hand and had four recalls which he fully deserved, his playing being exquisite. The Kentucky Belles Co.; Joe Opp, the comedian, with about twenty girls; Browne Carroll is the soubrette, and La Belle Helene supplies the dancing turn.

THE STAR

Pilakoff, the Finnish wrestler, and Demetrai, the Greek, will appear in the show. Both these men have made good in their own lands, also the Carnival of Fruits and Flowers and other popular offerings.

THE GAYETY

This place of amusement still keeps up its popularity and amongst the other things on a good entertainment bill I would like to call attention to the Columbia Burlesquers, Nellie Florede, singer, and Miss Chauhauty in impersonations.

INDEPENDENT FILMS

The following films have been released week of March 6th by the Empire Film Co., 150 East 14th St., New York:

Mar. 6	Memories (American)	460
Mar. 6	Hypnotizing a Hypnotist (Amer.)	531
Mar. 6	King Phillip (Eclair)	915
Mar. 6	Tracked (Imp)	993
Mar. 6	Angel of the Bowery (Yankee)	950
Mar. 7	Dick Farrell's Prize (Bison)	978
Mar. 7	Bandit's Surprise (Powers)	391
Mar. 7	When Masons Meet (Powers)	501
Mar. 7	The Mummy (Thanhouser)	995
Mar. 8	Prisoner of the Caucasus (Amb.)	985
Mar. 8	The Vindication of John (Champ.)	1000
Mar. 8	In the Commissioned Ranks (Nes.)	1000
Mar. 8	Out of the Arctic (Solax)	1000
Mar. 8	A Trick of Fortune (Reliance)	965
Mar. 9	The Message in the Bottle (Imp)	1000
Mar. 9	Nobility (Itala)	700
Mar. 9	Fall of a Knight (Rex)	958
Mar. 9	The Rich and the Poor (American)	1000
Mar. 10	Lux	900
Mar. 10	Her Prisoner (Bison)	975
Mar. 10	Put Out (Solax)	500
Mar. 10	Caribou Hunting (Solax)	500
Mar. 10	The Spirit Hand (Thanhouser)	1000
Mar. 10	The Senorita's Sacrifice (Yankee)	995
Mar. 11	Son of the Executioner (Gt. Nor.)	990
Mar. 11	Foolshead Shooting (Itala)	950
Mar. 11	A Gamble with Love (Powers)	1000
Mar. 11	Ever the Accuser (Reliance)	995

SALES COMPANY

The following films have been released week of March 13th by the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.:

Mar. 13	Secret of the Palm (Imp)
Mar. 13	The Penalty (American)	1000
Mar. 13	The Test of Love (Yankee)
Mar. 13	An Unforeseen Introduction (Ecl.)
Mar. 13	A Day of Storms (Eclair)
Mar. 14	Starlight the Squaw (Bison)
Mar. 14	His Younger Brother (Thanhouser)
Mar. 14	Come Back to Erin (Powers)
Mar. 15	Come Unto Me (Reliance)
Mar. 15	A Coward (Ambrosio)
Mar. 15	Was It Worth While (Nestor)
Mar. 15	The Girl and the Oath (Champion)
Mar. 15	A Midnight Visitor (Solax)
Mar. 16	The Fishermaid (Imp)
Mar. 16	A Dog and Two Mistresses (Itala)	986
Mar. 16	Where the Shamrock Grows (Rex)	950
Mar. 17	His Double Treasure (Yankee)
Mar. 17	Sacrifice of Silver Cloud (Bison)
Mar. 17	Robert Emmett (Thanhouser)
Mar. 17	A Hindoo Prince (Solax)
Mar. 17	Dogs Not Admitted (Lux)	534
Mar. 18	His Mind's Tragedy (Powers)
Mar. 18	At Sword's Point (Reliance)
Mar. 18	Foolshead in Soiree (Itala)
Mar. 18	Toto on the State (Itala)
Mar. 18	Between Love and Duty (Gt. Nor.)
Mar. 18	Life and People Below the Equator (Great Northern)
Mar. 21	Just Kids (Powers)
Mar. 21	A Trip Through Christiania (Pow.)
Mar. 22	When Red Turned Gray (Reliance)
Mar. 22	The Payroll (Champion)
Mar. 22	Cupid's Victory (Solax)
Mar. 24	Out of the Depths (Solax)

(Continued from page 13)

THE HINDU PRINCE

Solax Release, March 17

Mr. Aug. Jones writes his wife while traveling abroad for his health that he is bringing home with him as a guest Prince Seika, a Hindu hypnotist, whom he met while in India.

At the entrance of the Jones' household the Prince becomes infatuated with Mrs. Jones, but being aware of the great love and devotion that she holds for her husband, he realizes that whatever love he may have for her is hopeless.

At a hypnotic seance given by the Prince, it falls his lot through persuasion to put Mrs. Jones under the influence of hypnotism. Upon finding that she is an easy and susceptible subject, he lays a hazardous plan to poison her husband with a poison that he furnishes, which causes the victim to become an imbecile, but of a curable state.

After the husband becomes insane the Prince advises Mrs. Jones that he be placed in an asylum. He then compels her to apply for a divorce on the grounds of insanity. He arranges with a clergyman to marry them, the ceremony is about to be performed, but is intercepted by the return of the husband who has been cured after remaining in the sanitorium for several months.

On the day set for the wedding of the Hindu Prince and Mrs. Jones a final examination of Mr. Jones, who has been convalescent for some weeks past, is made, and he is pronounced cured. A letter is written to Mrs. Jones by the physician stating that she had better come and take her husband home.

Upon the departure of the doctors Mr. Jones finds a newspaper left by the doctors, and sees the announcement of the wedding of the Hindu Prince and his wife. He makes his escape from the sanitorium and arrives at his home just in time to stop the ceremony and denounce the affair as a nefarious plot and scheme on the part of Prince Scika.

Upon entering the room where the wedding is taking place Mr. Jones discovers that his wife is in a strange mood or condition, and realizing that the Prince has her under the hypnotic influence, he commands the Prince to release her from the terrible spell. The Prince refuses. Struggle ensues. Mr. Jones chokes the Prince into submission and compels him to bring Mrs. Jones out of it.

The butler is called and Prince Seika and all his followers are forcibly expelled from the house with instructions to leave the city within twenty-four hours, and all ends happily.

BETWEEN LOVE AND DUTY

Great Northern, Release March 18

A dramatic subject dealing with a doctor's infatuation for a dancer, his wife's discovery of the intrigue, and the startling episode resulting. The doctor, on being discovered by his wife, in his remorse attempts suicide, but is saved by his wife, and at the sick bed of a patient the doctor and wife are brought together again. The last scene sees them commencing their lives anew. The incidents are absorbing, and the various characters are excellently delineated.

LIFE AND PEOPLE SOUTH OF THE EQUATOR

A charming travel subject depicting the life of nomadic tribes in the Torrid Zone.

A MIDNIGHT VISITOR

Solax—Release March 15th

John Brown and his wife, Mrs. Brown, are asleep in bed. Mrs. Brown, awakening suddenly with a start, hears a noise in the next room. She endeavors to awaken Mr. Brown, but Brown, the foxy old owl, fears there are burglars in the house and feigns sleep. She finally succeeds in getting Brown out of bed, however, and directs him to ascertain the cause of the rumpus.

The next scene shows the dining room with Wabbles the pup in the midst of broken dishes, enjoying the remainder of the late dinner, knocking the dishes from the table and wrecking the place generally.

We see Brown enter the room adjoining in his pajamas. As he enters he hears a terrific crash in the next room. Thoroughly frightened he makes a break for the door, but on the way out he spies a bottle of good old rye and to steady himself in his fearful undertaking he takes a good nip at the bottle.

He again starts for the dining room door, and again he hears a terrible crash (Wabbles is finishing the dishes). Gracious, thinks Brown, there must be a room full of them, and to get up the necessary spunk to meet such an army of crooks he again takes a good dose of the Dutch courage. This preliminary over he again advances unsteadily but determinedly toward the fatal door, prepared to meet and vanquish a dozen burglars if necessary, when, lo, from out the chaos of crashing dishes and rending wood, he hears Wabbles running up and down the keyboard of the piano, the soft strains of a musical melody issuing from the dining room. Ha, ha, thinks Brown, the burglars must be a jolly lot of fellows indeed, and Brown—helped a great deal by the copious draughts of the rye, begins to feel real rougish himself, and proceeds to give vent to his feelings by executing a little fancy step all by himself.

But this is not catching the burglars, thinks Brown, and so, taking the bottle with him and imbibing freely on the way, he takes his uncertain route towards the general direction of the dining room door, but arriving at the door he no longer sees one but several, and making for the one nearest him he enters (so he thinks) and slips comfortably into an easy position on the floor the bottle clasped tightly to his bosom.

Meantime, Mrs. Brown, becoming impatient as to the outcome of the conflict between her husband and the burglars, starts for the scene of battle. She hears terific crashes and, thinking her husband is in need of assistance, calls the police captain and his trusty assistants. They tiptoe cautiously toward the door, but they do not find a burglar in active operation, but, instead, Wabbles sleeping on the table and Brown doing the same on the floor. The climax is a scream. Brown has to subscribe towards the Poor Fund and gives the money to the Captain to be distributed(?) among the poor, and we leave Brown facing his wife with a sheepish expression on his face preparing to meet —— Well, go and see the picture.

"THE PAYROLL"

Champion Release, March 22nd

Charles Wilson, on his way back to the ranch with the payroll for the boys, never dreams of danger until he is suddenly stopped by a band of highwaymen. Before he can comply with their demand to "hand over," the cowboys of Circle "C" Ranch, returning from a spree, dash upon the surprised outlaws.

Headed by Wilson, they give chase to the outwitted bandits up to their very home, both sides maintaining a running fire, until in an effort to defend her husband, in one fusillade, the bandit leader's wife is mortally felled by a shot from Wilson's gun. In the impending confusion, resultant from the attention given the stricken woman by the cowboys, the highwaymen make good their escape.

Bearing the responsibility for the death of the mother, Wilson promises to adopt and care for her baby girl, and together with his wife, who clasps the child to her breast, both solemnly vow to rear it rightly.

Sixteen years later, Kate, the adopted girl, on starting out for a canter through the woods, is warned by her guardian father to be guarded against infesting highwaymen, reported to be in the neighborhood. Full of the vigor of girlhood, fearing nothing, Kate dashes off for her daily ride.

Remounting after having tightened her pony's girth, she is surprised at the sudden appearance of a stranger. Refusing his proffered aid, she gallops rapidly away. The man quickly overtakes her, and leaning over his saddle, lifts the frightened girl from her horse to his, and dashes off through the woods.

Upon Kate's failure to return home at the accustomed hour, Wilson goes in search. Coming upon the riderless horse, he picks up the trail which quickly leads him to the kidnapper's cabin. Stealing within, he not only saves his adopted daughter from the bandit's embrace, but is horrified in discovering that the man is Kate's father. He makes known the truth to both, and gives the girl her privilege to choose, which she instantly does, in favor of Wilson, and under whose protection she leaves.

Conscience stricken and filled with remorse, the bandit staggers towards the window for a last glimpse at his child, when a shot rings out and he falls dead by the hand of his own lieutenant, to whim he had given orders to shoot the first one attempting to escape by the window.

(Continued on page 19)

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

	Feet
Jan. 4—The Wall Partition	500
Jan. 4—Trials of Tweedledum as a Policeman	500
Jan. 18—Blue Domino's Disguise and Tailor's Queer Ad
Jan. 25—A Wife Calvary and Tweedledum Cash
Feb. 1—Return from Seaside Bathing
Feb. 1—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports
Feb. 8—Tweedledum as a Detective
Feb. 15—The Demon	900
Feb. 22—Redeeming Angel
Mar. 1—Tweedledum, Aviator
Mar. 1—War of the Cossacks
Mar. 8—Prisoner of Caucasus (Dr.)	900

AMERICAN.

Jan. 30—The Genius (Com.-Dr.)	965
Feb. 2—The Mission in the Desert (Dr.)	985
Feb. 6—A Pittsburg Millionaire (Dr.)	985
Feb. 9—On the Installment Plan (Com.)	560
Feb. 9—Too Much Aunt (Com.)	430
Feb. 13—Quiet Evening at Home (Com.)	985
Feb. 16—In the Land of Cactus (Dr.)	980
Feb. 20—The College Spendthrift (Dr.)	990
Feb. 23—Strategy (Com.-Dr.)	980
Feb. 27—The Sheriff's Sweetheart (Dr.)	800
Feb. 27—The Silence System (Com.)	200
Mar. 2—College Chums	975
Mar. 6—Hypnotizing a Hypnotist (Com.)	615
Mar. 6—Memories (Dr.)	375
Mar. 9—The Rich and the Poor (Dr.)	1000

ATLAS FILM CO.

Nov. 30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.)
Dec. 7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.)
Dec. 14—Brothers (Dec.)
Dec. 21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.)
Dec. 28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)
Jan. 4—A Straw Ride (Dr.)
Jan. 11—A Letter to the Stork (Dr.)
Jan. 18—A City Wolf (Dr.)
Jan. 25—Irish Hearts
Feb. 1—The Surgeon and the Girl
Feb. 1—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.)
Feb. 8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.)
Feb. 15—Coals of Fire

CHAMPION.

Dec. 21—His Mother (Dr.)	950
Dec. 28—The Golden Gates (Dr.)	950
Jan. 4—Days of the Early West (Dr.)	950
Jan. 11—Bill's Widow (Dr.)	950
Jan. 18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.)
Jan. 18—Why He Went West (Dr.)	950
Feb. 1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.)
Feb. 8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.)	950
Feb. 15—Her Three Proposals (Com.)	950
Feb. 22—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.)	950
Mar. 1—A Western Girl's Choice (Dr.)	950
Mar. 8—The Vindication of John	950

ECLAIR

Dec. 26—The Lock-Keeper (Dr.)	537
Dec. 26—The Fear of Fire (Com.)	390
Jan. 2—The Great Medal Competition (Com.)	485
Jan. 2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.)	480
Jan. 9—Mother's Portrait (Dr.)	930
Jan. 16—The Jealousy of Sosthenes Ramulot (Com.)	478
Jan. 16—My Wife's Hat (Com.)	482
Jan. 30—The European Lunch
Jan. 30—The Elusive Robber
Feb. 6—Doctor Against His Will (Dr.)	984
Feb. 13—Mr. Faddleaway is on Strike (Com.)	522
Feb. 13—The Elixir of Bravery	424
Feb. 20—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.)	683
Feb. 20—Hospital for Small Animals (Spec.)	286
Feb. 27—Punch	595
Feb. 27—Beware of the Bomb (Com.)	370
Mar. 6—King Phillip the Fair and the Templars	975

GREAT NORTHERN.

Dec. 24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.)
Dec. 31—The Scarecrow (Dr.)
Dec. 31—Bear Hunting (Sc.)
Jan. 7—The Red Light (Dr.)
Jan. 14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.)
Jan. 21—The Trunk Mystery
Jan. 28—Triumph of Intelligence	391
Jan. 28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done (Com.)
Feb. 4—The Criminal Chief's Capture
Feb. 11—Found Again (Dr.)
Feb. 18—The Life of a Muschik
Feb. 18—The False Alarm
Feb. 25—His Great Duty (Dr.)
Mar. 4—The Rival Servants (Dr.)
Mar. 11—The Son of the Executioner (Dr.)

IMP.

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

	Feet
Jan. 5—Reunited (Dr.)	995
Jan. 9—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.)	998
Jan. 12—The Empty Shell (Dr.)	995
Jan. 16—Melody	995
Jan. 19—His First Patient (Dr.)	500
Jan. 19—The Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship (Dr.)	500
Jan. 30—Maid or Man
Feb. 2—The Mix-up
Feb. 2—An Imaginary Elopement
Feb. 6—At the Duke's Command (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 9—The Mirror (Com.)	500
Feb. 9—When the Cat's Away (Com.)	500
Feb. 13—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 16—The Convert (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 20—Pictureland	1000
Feb. 23—Artful Kate (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 27—A Manly Man (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 2—Army Manoeuvres in Cuba (Edu.)	500
Mar. 2—The Dynamiters (Com.)	500
Mar. 6—Tracked (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 9—The Message in the Bottle (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 13—The Secret of the Palm (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 16—The Fishermaid (Dr.)	1000

ITALA

Dec. 29—The Rustic
Dec. 31—Norwegian Water Falls	500
Dec. 31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day	500
Jan. 5—Antonio Toscarino	900
Jan. 7—Foolshead as Inspector of Hygiene	900
Jan. 12—Joanna of Braganza	900
Jan. 14—The Recall	900
Jan. 19—A Sad Fascination
Jan. 21—Visit of a Friend
Jan. 26—The Revenging Picture
Jan. 28—My Son Is Guilty
Feb. 2—The Village Coachman
Feb. 4—The Feast of Foolshead
Feb. 9—John Milton	900
Feb. 11—Foolshead at the Kinematograph	900
Feb. 16—The Fatal Charm	900
Feb. 18—Who Will Eat the Turkey	900
Feb. 23—Little Souls	770
Feb. 25—Foolshead Present
Feb. 25—Havana Cigar
Mar. 2—Nini's Doll
Mar. 4—Cato and the Flag
Mar. 4—Foolshead More than Usual
Mar. 9—Nobility (Dr.)	900
Mar. 11—Foolshead Shooting (Com.)	900

LUX.

By Prieur.

Jan. 6—How They Tricked Father (Com.)	498
Jan. 6—The Rival Engine Drivers (Dr.)	367
Jan. 13—Bill as a Jockey (Com.)	465
Jan. 13—That Is My Name (Com.)	438
Jan. 22—A Dilemna
Jan. 22—Faithful Furniture
Jan. 27—Willie Goes Cycling
Jan. 27—Infamous Son
Feb. 3—Back to the Old Homestead
Feb. 10—The Orphan's Friend (Dr.)	711
Feb. 10—That Horse Did Run (Com.)	272
Feb. 17—Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Dr.)	639
Feb. 17—Matilda Lovestruck (Com.)	321
Feb. 24—A Child's Prayer (Dr.)	534
Feb. 24—Matilda Chased (Com.)	354
Mar. 3—Jack's Lucky Horseshoe (Dr.)	530
Mar. 3—On Their Honeymoon (Com.)	440
Mar. 6—Angel of the Bowery (Dr.)
Mar. 10—The Senorita's Sacrifice (Dr.)
Mar. 10—Bill in Love Again (Com.)	432
Mar. 10—Jones' Remedy (Com.)	524

NESTOR FILM CO.

Nov. 30—Valley Folks
Dec. 7—The Conquering Hero
Dec. 14—The Pilgrim (Dr.)
Dec. 21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.)
Dec. 28—Elda of the Mountains (Dr.)
Jan. 4—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.)
Jan. 11—Sleepy Hollow (Dr.)	950
Jan. 18—Their New Minister (Dr.)
Jan. 25—The Man in 23
Jan. 25—New Minister
Feb. 1—The Bridal Trail
Feb. 8—The Transgressor
Feb. 15—The Light Beyond
Feb. 22—His Father's House (Dr.)
Mar. 1—The Professor's Romance (C.-D.)	990
Mar. 8—In the Commissioned Ranks
Mar. 8—In the Commissioned Ranks (Dr.)
Mar. 15—Was It Worth While? (Dr.)

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

("Bison")

Jan. 6—A Savage Girl's Devotion	900
Jan. 10—An Indian Trapper's Prize	900
Jan. 13—The Creek Claim	900
Jan. 17—Texas Ted's Defense	900
Jan. 20—The Redskin's Secret	950
Jan. 24—Red Man's Wrath	900
Jan. 27—Trials of Bud Brown	900
Jan. 30—A Tough Tenderfoot
Feb. 3—A Squaw's Bravery
Feb. 7—The Half Breed's Plan
Feb. 9—John Milton (Dr.)
Feb. 10—The Salted Mine (Dr.)
Feb. 14—The Deputy's Honor	900
Feb. 17—The Warrior's Squaw	900
Feb. 21—The Way of a Red Man (Dr.)
Feb. 24—The Fate of Joe Dorr (Dr.)
Feb. 28—A Warrior's Faith
Mar. 3—Owanee's Great Love
Mar. 7—Dick Farrell's Prize
Mar. 10—Her Prisoner (Dr.)

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Jan. 21—A Noble Heart (Dr.)
Jan. 24—Wife's Love and Little Dorothy	980
Jan. 28—Masquerader	960
Jan. 31—For My Pal
Feb. 4—His First Case
Feb. 4—The Cattle King of Arizona (Dr.)
Feb. 7—Freddie's New Shoes (Com.)
Feb. 11—A Trip Through Mexico (Sc.)
Feb. 14—An Unforseen Complication (Com.)
Feb. 18—Under Southern Skies (Dr.)
Feb. 21—What Would You Do (Com.)
Feb. 25—Across the Mexican Border (Dr.)
Feb. 28—The Call of the Heart (Dr.)	950
Mar. 4—Home Sweet Home (Dr.)	950
Mar. 7—When Masons Meet
Mar. 7—The Bandit's Surprise
Mar. 11—A Gamble with Love
Mar. 14—Come Back to Erin
Mar. 18—His Mind's Tragedy

RELIANCE

Feb. 4—The Command from Galilee
Feb. 8—The School Ma'am's Courage (C.-D.)
Feb. 11—The Little Avenger
Feb. 15—Three Men (Dr.)
Feb. 18—Souls Courageous	900
Feb. 22—A Plain Tale
Feb. 25—Ever the Accuser
Mar. 1—The Trump Card
Mar. 4—From the Valley of Shadow
Mar. 8—A Trick of Fortune	900
Mar. 11—Ever the Accuser
Mar. 14—Come Unto Me	900

REX

Feb. 23—The Story of a Prayer Rug (Dr.)
Mar. 2—By the Light of the Moon
Mar. 9—The Fall of a Knight (Dr.)	958

SOLAX COMPANY

Feb. 3—Ring of Love
Feb. 10—Mixed Pets (Com.)
Feb. 17—Corinne in Dollyland (Com.)
Feb. 24—Love's Test (Dr.)
Mar. 3—A Costly Pledge (Com.)
Mar. 8—Out of the Arctic (Dr.)
Mar. 10—Put Out
Mar. 10—Caribou Hunting

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Jan. 10—Everybody Saves Father (Com.)
Jan. 10—The Only Girl in Camp (Com.)
Jan. 13—The Vote that Counts (Dr.)	1000
Jan. 24—When Love Was Blind	900
Jan. 27—Prompt Payment
Jan. 27—Stealing a Ride	900
Jan. 31—Only in the Way
Feb. 3—Adrift
Feb. 7—Westerner and the Earl
Feb. 10—The Norwood Necklace
Feb. 14—For Her Sake (Dr.)
Feb. 17—Checkmate (Dr.)
Feb. 21—The Patriot Maid of '76 (Dr.)
Feb. 21—For Washington
Feb. 24—A Newsboy Hero
Feb. 28—The Litle Mother (Dr.)
Mar. 3—Stage Struck (Dr.)
Mar. 7—The Mummy (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 10—The Spirit Hand (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 14—His Younger Brother
Mar. 17—Robert Emmett

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Jan. 16—The Folks Back Home (Dr.)
Jan. 20—Returned to the Fold (Dr.)
Jan. 30—Taxicab Mystery
Feb. 3—Counting House Mystery
Feb. 6—Foiling the Camorra (Dr.)
Feb. 10—Was She Justified (Dr.)
Feb. 13—Condemned to Death (Dr.)
Feb. 17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.)
Feb. 20—A Life-Time Repentance (Dr.)
Feb. 24—The Woman Who Dared (Dr.)
Feb. 27—All for Gold (Dr.)
Mar. 3—The Abduction of Parson Jones (Com.)
Mar. 6—Angel of the Bowery (Dr.)
Mar. 10—The Senorita's Sacrifice (Dr.)
Mar. 13—The Test of Love (Dr.)
Mar. 17—His Double Treasure (Dr.)

(Continued from page 17)

WHERE THE SHAMROCKS GROW

Rex Release, Thursday, March 16, 1911

A story of love, strong love and hate—hate intense and real. Her foster father died, leaving his money to the girl, in the event that she married within six months after his death; and if she failed to do so, the money to go to the old man's nephew. The nephew is avaricious, and longs for the money. So when a romance springs up between the girl and the sturdy blacksmith who saves her live, it is up to him to intrude upon the scene, and nip the bloom of love in the bud. He forces unwelcome attentions upon the girl, and when he learns that the marriage of the two has already been announced for an early date, his desire to interfere with and intercept their plan becomes desperation, and he bends all his will to the defeat of the two.

He abducts the girl, and Little Danny, the faithful Friday of the blacksmith, sees, and understands and resolves to foil the daring villain. So disguised as an old hag, he ventures into the tower where she is held prisoner, intoxicates the keeper with whiskey, and makes his way to Nora. At once a plan is devised and put into execution. They change clothes, the girl effecting an escape and Danny staying behind in the role of prisoner.

To the cell comes the nephew, determined to force her to consent to a marriage. At last the sobbing and veiled Danny consents by a curt nod of his head, and the nephew immediately escorts him to the church, only to be astounded upon their arrival at the church, to see Nora and the sturdy blacksmith leaving, already made one, with the townsfolks in the vanguard, throwing flowers upon the happy couple. And of all the joyous throng, only the nephew has been foiled.

LOVE'S EBB AND FLOW

Yankee—Release March 24th

Neglected and abused by her husband, May Sommers has submitted to the indignities heaped upon her, as only a good and loyal wife can; when he brutally drove her from home—brokenhearted she sought peace and happiness in the waters of the bay.

But fate had other designs for her future, and she is rescued by the son and daughter of a wealthy planter. In this family she is cared for, and after a long convalescence is induced to remain as a companion and governess to the eldest daughter.

Her past was forgotten, care and tenderness restored the girlish beauty that she possessed at the time of her marriage.

Thrown into daily companionship with the son of her benefactors, there could be but one outcome—love—and he very soon told her of his affection and asked her to become his wife. May dare not confess her terrible secret and allowed her suitor to think that his love was not reciprocated.

So time passes, until May's husband appears upon the scene as a suitor for the hand of the daughter of the family in which his wife has found a home.

May waylays her husband and threatens him with exposure unless he takes his departure and, wild with rage at her interference, this brute beats and chokes his wife whose life is perhaps saved by the timely arrival of her admirer.

At bay, May's husband skulks off vowing vengeance, but meets his just deserts; being unfamiliar with the neighborhood he loses his way in the night and falls over a cliff, where his lifeless body is found next morning.

A year later May's lover gains the reward he so long waited for.

THE OPEN GATE

Yankee Release, Monday, March 20th

A sea-faring man of middle age had been paying attention to a young lady for a number of years, and finally musters up enough courage to propose. This is accepted, with the stipulation that he will forsake his convivial companions, his pipe and tobacco. These conditions seem difficult to fulfill. Armed with the best set of resolutions ever adopted, he sallies forth to prepare for a six months' cruise.

Meeting a number of cronies, who congratulate him upon his successful wooing, he is enticed into a saloon, to drink a toast to his fiancee; they load him to the guards, and while in this condition an idea occurs to him that it would be quite proper to pay his sweetheart a final visit and present her with a bouquet of roses—she fires him on the spot and it looks as if "Love's Young Dream" is over.

We see him next day starting for his vessel full of "remorse and regret"—those tuneful companions depicted upon his countenance. His little nephew and the niece of his betrothed were witnesses of the betrothal, which makes his regret more poignant.

Twelve years later the captain returns from his rovings to find that his early love is still true, and has left the "gate open." The young couple have grown up and are engaged to be married—he is timid, however, and afraid to venture near the house—he makes himself known to his nephew, who endeavors to adjust matters and assures him that his sweetheart of yore is only longing to forgive him. After several laughable incidents the old couple are seen coming from church, as the young couple are about to enter upon the sea of matrimony—they sail down life's stream together.

Jack Binns May Get $12,500.

Jack Binns, wireless telegrapher, whose "C. Q. D." message saved the passengers of the steamer Republic, won his suit against the Vitagraph Company of America. He received a verdict of $12,500 in Justice Greenbaum's court.

Binns asserted the company used without authority moving picture films portraying the Republic in collision with the Baltic, the rescue of passengers and the sending of the famous "C. Q. D." message by Binns. When the verdict was granted the Vitagraph Company moved to have it set aside. Justice Greenbaum reserved decision.

An interesting feature of the trial was the display of the films on a screen in a darkened room of the courthouse. Justice Greenbaum, the jury and other persons saw the pictures. It was the first moving picture show ever given in the County Court House.

Edison $2,000,000 Companies' Merger.

The recent filing in Trenton by the National Phonograph Company of an amended certificate changing the name of the company to Thomas A. Edison, Incorporated, is the first step of a movement to combine under one head all the companies now engaged here in the manufacture and sale of Edison phonographs and moving pictures. With the new incorporation the Edison Business Phonograph Company, a concern which was among the newest of the many fathered by the inventor, is absorbed, and later on the larger concern will take in the Edison Manufacturing Company, which makes and sells moving pictures and films, and the Edison Phonograph works.

The Edison Portland Cement Company and the Edison Storage Battery Company, along with other smaller companies which have to do with marketing the several products of Mr. Edison's inventive genius, will continue as they now are.

Mr. Edison does not figure as a stockholder in the new company, Mrs. Edison holding the control. The names of the stockholders are given as Mina M. Edison (Mrs. Edison), Ernest J. Berggren, Frank L. Dyer, who has been president of the Edison companies for the last three years; Carl H. Wilson, secretary; William Pelser and Harry F. Miller, the last named private secretary to Mr. Edison.

2 A WEEK Solax 2 A WEEK

WHY is Solax Booming

WHY ARE EXHIBITORS WILD OVER
WEDNESDAY THE FUNNY DAY
FRIDAY THE FEATURE DAY

BECAUSE OF SOLAX QUALITY—ACTING—IDEAS
BECAUSE OF MECHANICAL PERFECTION
BECAUSE SOLAX IS A WELL MADE, BEAUTIFUL FILM—TINTED AND TONED THROUGHOUT.

WEDNESDAY	MARCH 15th "A MIDNIGHT VISITOR" (Comedy)	Split Reel
	"HIGHLANDS OF NEW BRUNSWICK, CANADA" (Scenic)
FRIDAY	MARCH 17th "A HINDU PRINCE" (Drama)
WEDNESDAY	MARCH 22nd "CUPID'S VICTORY" (Comedy)
FRIDAY	MARCH 24th "OUT OF THE DEPTHS" (Drama)

SOLAX

Solax Company 147 Fourth Avenue New York

MOTION PICTURE PATENTS CO. AND ALLIED COMPANY

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH.

		Feet
Jan.	16—His Trust (Dr.)	996
Jan.	19—His Trust Fulfilled (Dr.)	999
Jan.	23—Fate's Turning (Dr.)	998
Jan.	26—The Poor Sick Men (Com.)	991
Jan.	30—A Wreath of Orange Blossoms (Dr.)	993
Feb.	2—Three Sisters (Dr.)	997
Feb.	6—Heart Beats of Long Ago (Dr.)	997
Feb.	9—Priscilla's Engagement Kiss (Com.)	997
Feb.	13—What Shall We Do With Our Old (Dr.)	994
Feb.	16—Fisher Folks (Dr.)	998
Feb.	20—The Diamond Star (Dr.)	996
Feb.	23—His Daughter (Dr.)	997
Feb.	27—The Lily of the Tenements (Dr.)	991
Mar.	2—The Heart of a Savage (Dr.)	995
Mar.	6—A Decree of Destiny (Dr.)	995
Mar.	9—Conscience (Dr.)	995

EDISON

Jan.	11—The Home of the Seal (Educational)	300
Jan.	11—The Gardener's Ladder (Com.)	700
Jan.	13—The Link that Held (Dr.)	960
Jan.	17—With Interest to Date (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Jan.	18—Uncle's Birthday Gift (Com.)	995
Jan.	20—Mike the Miser (Dr.)	990
Jan.	24—An Eventful Evening (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	25—The Lover and the Count (Com.)	995
Jan.	27—The Black Bordered Letter (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	1—Bumptious as Romeo (Com.)	975
Feb.	3—Selling Old Master (Dr.)	990
Feb.	7—The Doctor (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	8—Two Valentines (Com.)	1000
Feb.	10—His First Commission (Dr.)	990
Feb.	14—The Rajah (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	15—The Ransom of Red Chief (Com.)	975
Feb.	24—The Price of Victory	1000
Feb.	17—A Stage Romance	1000
Feb.	21—The Rival Sculptors	990
Feb.	22—Mr. Bumptious, Detective	990
Feb.	28—The Iron Master	1000
Mar.	1—The Rival Candidates (Com. Dr.)	1000
Mar.	3—The Writing on the Blotter (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	7—Love and the Stock Market (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	8—A Night of Terror (Com.)	400
Mar.	8—The Old Family Bible (Dr.)	600
Mar.	10—How Bella Was Won (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	14—All for the Love of a Lady (Dr.)	990
Mar.	15—The Department Store (Com.)	625
Mar.	15—Baby's Fall (Com.)	375
Mar.	17—The Wedding Bell	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Jan.	7—The Count and the Cowboys	1000
Jan.	10—The Sophmore's Romance (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	14—The Girl of the West (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	17—His Master's Son (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	21—The Border Ranger (Dr.)	985
Jan.	24—A Sin Unpardonable (Dr.)	998
Jan.	28—The Two Reformations (Dr.)	996
Jan.	31—The Jilted Joker (Com.)	640
Jan.	31—Hank and Lank (Com.)	366
Feb.	4—Carmenita, the Faithful (Dr.)	995
Feb.	7—A Woman's Voice (Com.)	566
Feb.	7—Ten Words for Twenty-five Cents (Com.)	425
Feb.	11—The Bad Man's Downfall (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	14—Getting Sister Married (Com.)	1000
Feb.	18—The Cattleman's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	21—Their Wedding Gift (Com.)	580
Feb.	21—Just as the Clock Struck Nine (C.)	412
Feb.	25—The Outlaw and the Child (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	28—Taming a Tyrant (Com.)	1000
Mar.	4—On the Desert's Edge (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	7—The Little Drudge (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	11—The Romance of "Bar O"	1000

GAUMONT
G. Kleine

Jan.	31—The Last Curtain	823
Feb.	4—Jiggers Looks for a Job	537
Feb.	4—Krimmel Waterfalls (Scenic)	435
Feb.	7—Jiggers' Moving Day (Com.)	395
Feb.	11—Napoleon in 1814 (Dr.)	797
Feb.	11—Autumn Leaves (Edu.)	185
Feb.	7—The Strongest Tie	605
Feb.	14—The Reformation of the Suffragettes	665
Feb.	14—Land Marks of Avignon, France	338
Feb.	18—Saul and David	128
Feb.	18—At the End of the Road	838
Feb.	21—The Plot That Failed	815
Feb.	21—Pictures in Chemistry	175
Feb.	25—Paganini and the Countess Beatrice	998
Feb.	28—Matrimonial Epidemic (Com.)	813
Feb.	28—Lafont and Pola's Last Flight	185
Mar.	4—The Tramp's Find	680
Mar.	4—Forbidden Cigarettes	335
Mar.	7—The Barber's Daughter	505
Mar.	7—The Ambitious Bootblack	450
Mar.	11—His First Sweetheart	560
Mar.	11—The Beautiful Gorges of Tarn	415
Mar.	14—The Sword and the Cross	840
Mar.	14—Breakers in the Clouds	155
Mar.	18—The Privateer's Treasure	860
Mar.	18—Rocky Caves of France	110
Mar.	21—The Lieutenant's Wild Ride	1002
Mar.	25—Cupid's Conquest	595
Mar.	25—The People of the Arabian Desert	405
Mar.	28—His Image in the Water	575
Mar.	28—Family Troubles	430
Mar.	29—Dr. Charcot's Trip Toward the South Pole	478
Mar.	29—The Cormorants, or Japanese Catching Fish with Birds	528
Apr.	1—The Secret of the Forest (Dr.)	625
Apr.	1—Tribulations of Jiggers	375

KALEM CO.

Jan.	13—The Heart of an Indian Mother (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	18—Her Chum's Brother (Com.-Dr.)	980
Jan.	20—Robbie and the Redskins (Dr.)	850
Jan.	20—Modern Light Battery in Action	95
Jan.	25—The Secret of the Still (Dr.)	950
Jan.	27—Puritans and Indians (Dr.)	970
Feb.	1—The Sheriff's Sister (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	3—The Trail of the Pomas Charm (Dr.)	1005
Feb.	8—Little Sister (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Feb.	10—The Broken Trail (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	15—Grandmother's War Story (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	17—The Lost Ribbon (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	22—The Open Road (Dr.)	995
Feb.	24—Priscilla and the Pequot (Dr.)	925
Mar.	1—Sailor Jack's Reformation (Dr.)	1005
Mar.	3—Mexican Filibusters (Dr.)	1005
Mar.	8—The Irish Honeymoon (Dr.)	950
Mar.	10—The Mission Carrier (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN.

Jan.	9—Tag Day at Silver Gulch (Dr.)	935
Jan.	12—The Widow's Choice (Com.)	950
Jan.	16—Will It Ever Come to This? (Com.)	715
Jan.	16—Easy Coin (Com.)	250
Jan.	19—A Brother's Redemption (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	23—Father Makes Himself Useful (Com.)	975
Jan.	26—Father Love (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	30—His Bogus Uncle (Com.)	1000
Feb.	2—Age vs. Youth (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	6—A Double Elopement (Com.)	990
Feb.	9—The Petticoat Sheriff (Com.)	1000
Feb.	13—The Show Girl's Strategem (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	16—Getting Even (Com.)	600
Feb.	16—Schultz Has the Smallpox (Com.)	400
Feb.	20—The Test (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	23—Dobbs, the Dauber (Com.)	1000
Feb.	27—Nan's Diplomacy (Com.)	1000
Mar.	2—Father's Birthday Ring (Com.)	600
Mar.	2—Woman's Curiosity (Com.)	400
Mar.	6—Vanity and Its Cure (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	9—Her Friend, the Burglar (Com.)	1000

G. MELIES.

Dec.	15—Old Norris' Gal
Dec.	22—A Western Welcome	980
Dec.	29—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.)	980
Jan.	12—The Owner of the "L. L." Ranch (Dr.)	980
Jan.	19—Changing Cooks (Com.)	980
Jan.	26—How Mary Met the Cowpunchers (Western Dr.)	980
Feb.	2—Only a Sister (Dr.)	980
Feb.	9—Tony, the Greaser (Dr.)	980
Feb.	16—Billy and His Pal (Dr.)
Feb.	23—My Prairie Flower (Dr.)	980
Mar.	2—In the Hot Lands	960
Mar.	9—The Snake in the Grass	1000
Mar.	16—The Schoolmarm of Coyote County	1000

PATHE.

Feb.	3—Rice Industry in Japan (Edu.)	256
Feb.	4—A Cowboy's Devotedness (Dr.)	922
Feb.	6—Max Has the Boxing Fever (Com.)	561
Feb.	6—An Imitator of Blondin (Com.)	400
Feb.	8—Legally Dead (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	10—The Missing Bride (Dr.)	800
Feb.	10—Review of Chilian Troops (Edu.)	180
Feb.	11—Silver Leaf's Heart (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	13—Betty's Apprenticeship (Com.)	689
Feb.	13—Pineapple Cannery in China (Ind.)	315
Feb.	15—A Western Courtship (Dr.)	715
Feb.	15—The Axoloti (Edu.)	266
Feb.	17—Whiffle's Double (Com.)	499
Feb.	17—A Boy's Wit (Dr.)	462
Feb.	18—Lieut. Scott's Narrow Escape (Dr.)	984
Feb.	4—A Cowboy's Devotedness (Dr.)	922
Feb.	6—Max Has the Boxing Fever (Com.)	561
Feb.	6—An Imitator of Blondin (Com.)	400
Feb.	8—Legally Dead (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	10—The Missing Bride (Dr.)	800
Feb.	10—Review of Chilian Troops (Edu.)	180
Feb.	11—Silver Leaf's Heart (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	20—A Soldier (Dr.)	761
Feb.	20—A Buffalo Hunt (Edu.)	236
Feb.	22—Hubby's Troubles (Com.)	671
Feb.	22—Indo-China Province of Laos (Sc.)	321
Feb.	24—Who Killed Max? (Com.)	689
Feb.	24—An Escape of Gas (Com.)	302
Feb.	25—The Changeling (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	27—Max Makes Music	403
Feb.	27—Pots, Pans and Poetry	531
Mar.	1—Oh! You Clubman	905
Mar.	3—Satan Defeated	750
Mar.	3—Around Constantina, Algeria	200
Mar.	4—Jealousy Foiled	1000
Mar.	6—Max Embarrassed	600
Mar.	6—After the Boxing Bout	375
Mar.	8—Red Deer's Devotion	1000
Mar.	10—Undying Love	740
Mar.	11—A Lonely Little Girl	1000
Mar.	13—Max's Feet Are Pinched	489
Mar.	13—Whiffles' Courtship	500
Mar.	15—Oh, You Kids..	690
Mar.	15—The Paoli Brothers	295
Mar.	17—The Inventor's Rights	784
Mar.	17—Pepper Industry in the Malay Peninsula	190
Mar.	18—The Sheriff's Daughter	1000

SELIG

Dec.	29—Justinian and Theodora (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	2—The Argonauts	1000
Jan.	5—Ramona's Father	1000
Jan.	9—Shadows of the Past (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	12—The Rival Dramatist	1000
Jan.	16—Buddy, the Little Guardian (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	19—An Englishman's Honor (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	23—A Robust Patient (Com.)	1000
Jan.	26—The Spy (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	30—The Little Circus Rider
Feb.	2—The Curse of the Red Man
Feb.	6—Too Much Mother-in-Law
Feb.	9—Thelma
Feb.	12—The Survival of the Fittest
Feb.	16—The Buccaneers
Feb.	20—The Padre
Feb.	27—The Eye of Conscience
Mar.	2—The Outbreak
Mar.	6—The Little Shepherdess
Mar.	9—The Medallion
Mar.	13—The Code of Honor
Mar.	13—The Man from the East

URBAN-ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

Dec.	7—Death of Admiral Coligny	992
Dec.	5—On the Mexican Border
Dec.	8—Reggie's Engagement
Dec.	14—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.)	749
Dec.	14—Scenes in British India (Sc.)	253
Dec.	21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.)	676
Dec.	21—A Chamois Hunt	332
Dec.	28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.)	650
Dec.	28—Coaching in Devonshire, England (Travelogue)	348
Jan.	4—A Lock of Hair	978
Jan.	11—Washed Ashore (Dr.)	670
Jan.	11—Woodcarving in Brienz	320
Jan.	18—By the King's Order (Dr.)	991
Jan.	25—The Sailor's Return (Dr.)	689
Jan.	25—Scenes in Jersey (Travelogue)	296
Feb.	1—Disinherited	990
Feb.	8—On the Border of the Forest (Dr.)	895
Feb.	8—Canadian Iron Center, Port Arthur (Educational)	110
Feb.	15—Catherine Howard	1005
Feb.	22—The Golden Sickle	882
Feb.	22—Felling a Smoke-stack	113
Feb.	22—The Golden Sickle	882
Feb.	22—Felling a Smoke-Stack	113
Mar.	1—Comrades	638
Mar.	1—Beauties of Sans Souci	362
Mar.	8—The Fury of a Woman Scorned	720
Mar.	8—Beautiful Wye Valley, England	300
Mar.	15—Redemption	508
Mar.	15—The Thames, from Oxford to Richmond	472
Mar.	22—The Money Lender	688
	Nemours and the Banks of the River Loing, France	320

VITAGRAPH

Dec.	13—The Law and the Man (Dr.)	1010
Dec.	16—Playing at Divorce (Dr.)
Dec.	16—The International Motor Boat Race (Sc.)
Dec.	17—A Dixie Mother (Dr.)
Dec.	20—The Light in the Window	997
Dec.	23—Clancy	995
Dec.	24—Jean and the Waif	989
Dec.	27—In Neighboring Kingdoms (Dr.)	995
Dec.	30—Crazy Apples (Com.)	988
Dec.	31—Where the Wind Blows (Dr.)	987
Jan.	3—All Is Fair In Love and War	973
Jan.	6—The Misses Finch and Nephew Billy	979
Jan.	7—The Old Water Jar	984
Jan.	10—Doctor Cupid (Com.)	987
Jan.	13—Water Lilies (Dr.)	991
Jan.	14—Coward or Hero (Dr.)	975
Jan.	17—Three Men and a Maid (Com.)	1000
Jan.	20—The Girl in the Film (Com.)	963
Jan.	21—Cast Up by the Deep (Dr.)	1001
Jan.	24—It Did Look Suspicious (Dr.)	617
Jan.	24—The Fireman's Parade (Edu.)	383
Jan.	27—Girl of the Mountains (Dr.)	999
Jan.	28—Davy Jones in the South Seas (Com.)	995
Feb.	4—A Queen for a Day	1000
Feb.	7—The Deluge	978
Jan.	31—Jean Rescues	976
Feb.	3—Society and the Man	981
Feb.	10—The League of Mercy (Dr.)	991
Feb.	11—At the White Man's Door (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	14—Consuming Love	975
Feb.	17—When the Light Waned	994
Feb.	18—The New Stenographer (Com.)	994
Feb.	21—A Tale of Two Cities, Part I	1014
Feb.	24—A Tale of Two Cities, Part II	1013
Feb.	25—A Tale of Two Cities, Part III	994
Feb.	28—Captain Barnacle's Courtship (Com.)	998
Mar.	3—Bertha's Mission (Dr.)	988
Mar.	4—Mammy's Ghost (Dr.)	985
Mar.	7—The Wild Cat Well	960
Mar.	10—The Bridegroom's Dilemma (Com.)	990
Mar.	11—Red Eagle	960
Mar.	14—Betty Becomes a Maid (Com.)	957
Mar.	17—The Aching Void (Dr.)	990

New York, N. Y.—Architects Harrison & Sackheim are preparing plans and specifications for the erection of a new moving picture theater at Grand and Allen streets for Mr. John Cadwalader.

Wilmington, Del.—A. N. Jones, owner of the Savoy Theater here, will erect an addition to the building.

Cleveland, Ohio.—The Doan Amusement Company is planning the erection of a new theater on St. Clair avenue to cost about $10,000.

Cedar Falls, Ia.—Charles O'Connell and associates have purchased the Majestic moving picture theater here.

Oskaloosa, Iowa.—The Princess Amusement Company is preparing to open a new theater here.

Bayfield, Wis.—Guy Brown, of Ashland, has sold the Princess Theater here to H. Weaver.

Newport, Ky.—John J. Ryan is planning the erection of a new theater here.

Petoskey, Mich.—The Western Theater Construction Company, of Chicago, is planning the erection of a new theater here.

Hillsboro, N. Dak.—Thomas Quamme and Mrs. E. S. Bryant, are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The Northwestern Amusement Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are J. W. Boulet, John T. Lane and others.

Old Sprockets Repaired

first time $2.25, thereafter $1.00 and $1.50. New sprockets, above design, Feed $2.50. Intermittents $3.50. Write for other money-saving repairs.

E. W. LAVEZZI
3042 N. ASHLAND AVENUE, CHICAGO

For the Moving Picture Eye!

We now herald the DEPARTURE OF CHAMPION as a "one release weekly" manufactory, and our debut as a "TWO EVERY 7 DAYS" BRAND.

What prompted us to take this advance step was the enthusiastic and insistent demand, prevailing for MORE CHAMPS, proof of which lies in the hundreds of approving letters from the Trade that heavily laden our Mails.

Now Then—The CHAMP DAYS to be, are MONDAY, and, as of old, WEDNESDAY. Each day will be individually conspicuous, in that our release on each of these days will represent a high form of specialization in Moving Pictures.

Take the MONDAY release—Each picture we release on that day will be a reproduction of some event in American History, and the possibilities are Ideal—Famous Battles, Great Men, Industrial crises—hundreds of events that have made Heroes and Statesmen, whom the Public well knows. No expense will be too great to attain realism.

THE WEDNESDAY CHAMP will continue its GOOD WORK. Westerns—Real Ones—Westerns of Smiles and Westerns of Heart Throbs—the regular now famous CHAMP WESTERNS.

REMEMBER Historics and Westerns are our specialties. The satisfaction of your patrons is yours. SPECIALIZE

Watch Monday April 10th, 1911

A CHAMPION THAT BRISTLES WITH ACTION

"THE PAYROLL"
And Its Rock-Lined Course.
RELEASED MAR. 22nd, 1911

THE CHAMPION FILM CO.
Mark M. Dintenfass, Gen'l Mgr.
12 East 15th Street, N. Y. C.

AMERICAN STANDARD DOUBLE DISSOLVING MOVING PICTURE MACHINE. ALL COMPLETE, $200.00

A POWERS No. 5, SLIGHTLY USED,

$100.00

MANHATTAN SLIDE CO.
124 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars. ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS, 908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., Chicago.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR
Sanitary, Space-saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W
HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

Start on a Sound Basis

Get a machine that can DO the work—and do it now—and to-morrow—and for a good long time to come.

Let the idea about the original machine go.

BE MODERN—UP-TO-DATE—GET MACHINE WISE by installing the modern machine—THE MOTIOGRAPH.

This is the day of progress—Time keeps on coming and going—and old-fashioned machines must be replaced with the Motiograph—the most durable — simple — accessible motion picture machine on the market—and the machine that projects the best picture. Manufactured and jobbed by

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 571 West Randolph St., CHICAGO
FOR SALE BY DEALERS EVERYWHERE

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone: 3790 Oxford

YANKEE FILMS

MONDAY, MARCH 20TH
"THE OPEN GATE"
A story of land and sea

FRIDAY, MARCH 24TH
"Love's Ebb and Flood"
How an abused wife finds the Harbor of Love

YANKEE FILM COMPANY
344 East 32d St., New York, N. Y.

EVERY EXHIBITOR reads the Moving Picture News.
ADVERTISEMENTS BRING RESULTS

Bing!

Another victory for the INDEPENDENTS.

Swaab is made Sole Agent in Philadelphia for Genre Motion Slides. Special slide carriers accommodate all song slides. Send for price list. Be first in the field.

SWAAB FILM SERVICE CO.
Not in the Trust
338 SPRUCE ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Over Six Million Feet of Moving Picture Film has been through the MORTIMER FILM CLEANER
the past month. How do we know? By the number of cleaning pads we have shipped to the exchanges during that time.
If you send for our supplement just off the press you will see who are cleaning their films with the little wonder of the moving picture world.
MORTIMER FILM CLEANING CO.,
Portland, Maine.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
REPAIRED
by skilled mechanics at short notice and reasonable prices. Work guaranteed.
Supplies of All Kinds.
CHAS. E. DRESSLER,
388 2nd Ave., City, near 23rd St.
Take elevator.

HALLBERG
THE "ECONOMIZER MAN"

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. N 1

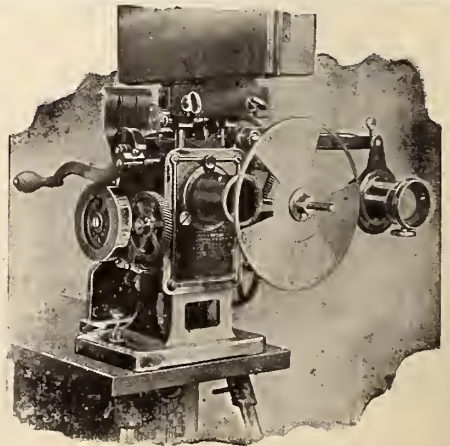
J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.

Announcement, Advertising, Travelogue, Recitation
and slides for every purpose made to order
GEO. J. GOLDTHORPE & CO.
244 West 14th Street New York

Powers Cameragraph No. 6

WHY IT LEADS

Flickerless pictures, steady as if painted on the wall.
Heavy gears, thick spindles, long bearings, insuring long service under a heavy grind.
Rugged intermittent movement, without star wheel or cam.
Accessibility at all parts.
Absence of noise.
Evenly balanced movement, preventing pounding.
Ease of operation, saving labor to the operator.
AN UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE OF THE MECHANISM FOR ONE YEAR.
Write for latest catalog D.



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115 Nassau Street, New York
"For thirteen years the leading makers of moving picture machines"

Paste This in Your Hat!

FIRST—If you are not getting TWO IMPS EVERY WEEK, you are not getting what you pay for!

NEXT—If you are not getting ANY IMP FILMS AT ALL, you are the easiest mark in the business!

"Get TWO IMPS A WEEK or quit your exchange!"

"In Old Madrid"

RELEASE OF MARCH 20

Impetuous Spanish lover finds his affection returned.

The mother establishes an espionage over the daughter.

True love finds a way and girl companion disguised assists in clever deception.

Lover carries sweetheart to rocks in roaring torrent, and consent and blessings of parents is obtained in unique manner.

A pretty love story of old Spain in which "Little Mary" appears in nearly every scene.

Gorgeous settings and splendid photography—the Imp sort.

"The Penniless Prince"

RELEASE OF MARCH 23

A young German nobleman, reduced to poverty, seeks employment on Cuban tobacco ranch.

Is loved by planter's daughter, whom he repulses, and is humiliated in revenge.

Lowly sweetheart sacrifices luxuriant hair to provide him funds. Expected letter arrives announcing he has fallen heir to vast estates.

He rewards girl, who has been faithful, by announcing her as his betrothed.

Cuban scenery that has made Imp films the talk of moving picturedom.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America, 102 West 101st Street, New York, Carl Laemmle, President. All Imp Films Are Sold Through the Sales Co. Two each week.

This is not an Advertisement

MR. MAN:--I'm too busy this week to write ads--too busy putting on new customers. Seems as though several dozen of you exhibitors had conspired--yes, conspired, "to try me out." All right, gentlemen, suits me to a T. The more the merrier. I confess I like this sort of surprise--I'm prepared to take--but hold on, I said this wasn't going to be an advertisement --and you know me. Slip me that letter soon.

CARL LAEMMLE,
The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World.
President

THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE

P. S Don't forget that I carry in stock ready for instant delivery, Powers, Edison and Motiograph Projecting machines.

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

American Releases

TWO REELS EACH WEEK

MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS

Coming---"THE HAREM SKIRT"

THE FUNNIEST FUNNY FILM EVER RELEASED

"THE PENALTY"

RELEASE OF MONDAY, MARCH 13TH.

A sensationally dramatic exposition of the ruinous results of gambling. An extremely interesting picture containing an original situation that will bring your audience out of their seats. The climax is particularly strong and the film points a moral that is more effective than a sermon. You'll be foolish if you do not write your exchange to book you this film "rush." There'll be a big demand for it.

Coming--THE HAREM SKIRT

THE FUNNIEST FUNNY FILM EVER RELEASED.

"THE JOB AND THE GIRL" with "DO YOU KNOW THIS WOMAN?"

RELEASE OF THURSDAY, MARCH 16TH.

"The Job and the Girl" is a pictured comedy of the adventures of a nervy youth. Warren Kerrigan, in the character of the nervy one, is a jay forever. If your audience has never had a real good laugh for a year you can guarantee this film will tickle them into a hearty roar. Get it. For your own good—get it. On the same reel "Do You Know This Women?" is a short comedy that gives Dott Farley an opportunity to show the stuff that laughter is really made of. She does it, too. We honestly believe and know this split reel comedy will be acclaimed as a winner. Make your audience laugh. Get it.

ALL Independent Exchanges buy American Film.

AMERICAN FILM MFG. COMPANY

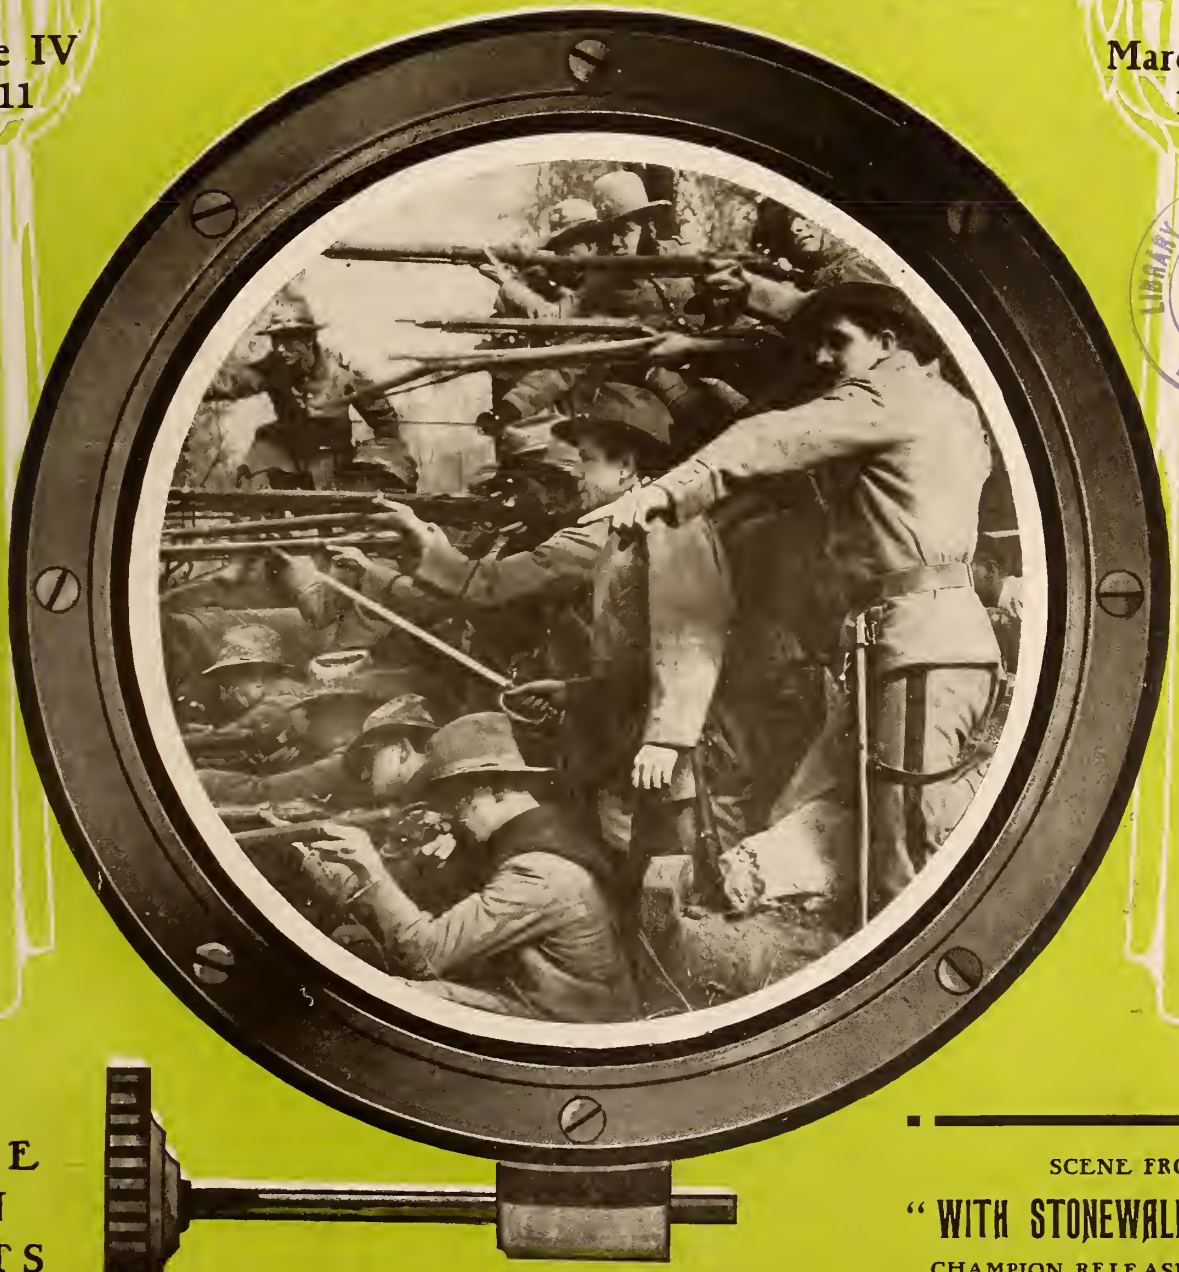
BANK FLOOR - ASHLAND BLOCK

CHICAGO, ILL.

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 11

March 18th
1911



LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
SEP 8 1911
PERIODICAL DIV.

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

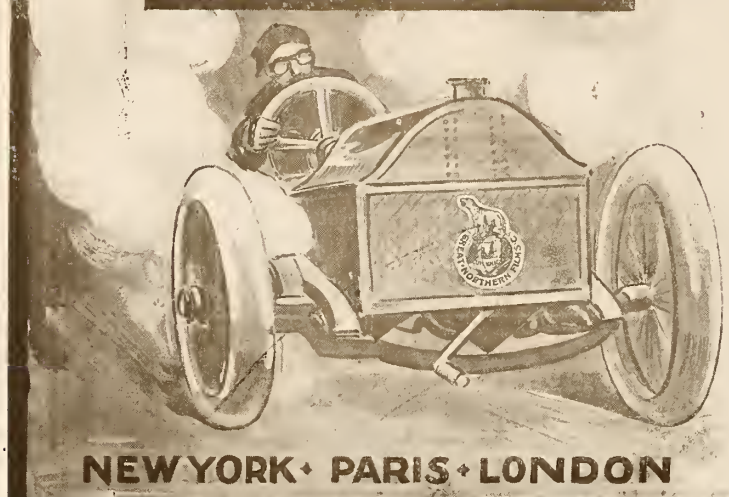
SCENE FROM
"WITH STONEWALL JACKSON"
CHAMPION RELEASE, APRIL 17th

SECOND TO NONE

IN THE FILM

QUALITY RACE

"Supreme in its Field"



NEW YORK · PARIS · LONDON

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, MARCH 18th

Between Love and Duty

A meritorious dramatic production of absorbing interest.

Life and People Below the Equator

A charming travel picture of nomadic tribes in the torrid zone.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, MARCH 25th

The Fakir's New Servant

A trick film of novel and amusing character.

Troubles of a Trip

A very laughable comedy film.

EXHIBITORS: Watch for our next great detective picture. It will eclipse everything to date.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT.

Great Northern Film Co.

7 East 14th Street NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH SALES CO.

Chicanery

THAT'S what the exhibitor must avoid. Sophistry and artifice are the "stock in trade" of those whose object in business is to entirely eliminate competition.

COMPETITION is stimulus. We value it because it has spurred us on in effort—better quality.

To prove it, review our productions for the past year, Messrs. Exhibitors; then ask yourselves whether it is not necessary for the preservation of your business that you go INDEPENDENT—clean, straight, open business methods and this UNEXCELLED PROGRAM.

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

111 East 14th Street, New York City

OUR PROGRAM

MONDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Eclair—Eclair Film Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

TUESDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.

WEDNESDAY
Ambrosio—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Atlas—Atlas Film Co.
Champion—The Champion Film Co.
Nestor—David Horsley.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories
Solax—Solax Co.

THURSDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Rex—Rex M. P. Mfg. Co.

FRIDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Lux—R. Prieur
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.
Solax—Solax Company
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.

SATURDAY
Gt. Northern—Gt. Northern Film Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

IT WON'T TAKE YOU Five Hours

OR FIVE MINUTES TO REALIZE WHAT A GOOD PICTURE

"Five Hours"

IS

THE TIME IS LESS THAN A FOURTH OF A DAY, BUT IT AFFORDS AMPLE TIME FOR JACK HAZARD TO MAKE A WAGER AND WIN IT WITH THE CO-OPERATION OF THE "SINNED AGAINST."

NO MATTER HOW LONG IT TAKES YOU TO MAKE UP YOUR PROGRAM, BE SURE AND TAKE "FIVE HOURS," AND MAKE IT A GOOD ONE!

IT'S A COMEDY DRAMA. IT'S A Rex

Rex Motion Picture Mfg. Co.

573-9 ELEVENTH AVE., N. Y. C.

Sales Co. will sell them all in "FIVE HOURS."

BISON FILMS

FIVE REELS A WEEK

TUESDAY---BISON. WEDNESDAY---AMBROSIO. THURSDAY---ITALA. FRIDAY---BISON. SATURDAY---ITALA

"Was He Justified"

Released Tuesday, March 21

A miner's wife falls over the cliff and is mortally hurt. Medical assistance is 200 miles away. She pleads for death, and the man yields to her entreaties. Exonerated by a jury, he ends his own life on her grave.

ITALA RELEASES

"WAITING FOR THE MIDNIGHT EXPRESS"
Thursday, March 23
"TOTO WANTS TO GET THINNER"
"QUEEN OF THE SEA"
Saturday, March 25

"The Cowboy's Waif"

Released Friday, March 24

A young widow, penniless, leaves her baby at a ranch. George, a cowboy, adopts it. Later the mother secures work as a school teacher. George falls in love with her, and the baby gets its mamma back and a new papa.

AMBROSIO RELEASE

"TWEEDLEDUM'S APRIL FOOL JOKE"
Wednesday, March 22

Sold Exclusively Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO., 1 Union Square, New York City

THE THANHOUSER TWO-A-WEEK

RELEASED TUESDAY, MARCH 28—ANOTHER THANHOUSER WAR STORY

THE IMPOSTOR

is just such a Civil War subject as you'd expect tbe producers of "For Her Sake" to turn out. It presents so faitbful and lifelike a portrait of tbe days it deals with, that you'll think the great Brady took a moving picture camera South with him and we discovered his long-lost reel. Certainly, all the re-discovered Brady Collection of war photos will not surpass this motion film as an accurate picture of Rebellion time. Only the knowledge that moving pictures are a late invention will convince you tbat the reel wasn't done in the actual battle days of '61. The story it tells is a very gem of ingenuity, with a perfect "Thanbouser twist." No. 197. Code Word, Postor.

RELEASED FRIDAY, MARCH 31—THE THANHOUSER CLASSIC is a reel for which you must "Say Thanhouser to tbe Exchange Man" QUICK. There is no hamlet so small but that the wonderful tale of Silas Marner is read and revered there, and all exhibitors who have shown "Thanhouser Classics" to big business are taking extra pains to grab this one. So fire your order at your excbange man before he gets everybody else's. Get up near the head of tbe line! Apropos the story the picture tells, let us tell you tbat it bas enough heart interest to supply any THREE ordinary subjects. No. 198. Code Word, Marner.

SILAS MARNER

The Thanhouser Lobby-Decorator

witb two new decorations for your lobby every week, is now a regular feature of the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with tbe Moving Picture business. Drop a card to Editor, Thanhouser News, New Rochelle, N. Y.

THE THANHOUSER NEWS

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

RELIANCE PICTORIAL PLAYS

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

ACTED BY AN ALL-STAR STOCK COMPANY

"If It Were Ever Thus"

Released Saturday, March 25

A cruel husband gets his just deserts. Planning to discard his faithful wife and marry a rich woman, she turns the tables on him and becomes the protege of the innocent object of her husband's designs.

"Pallid Hues in Clouded Skies"

Released Wednesday, March 29

A strong moral drama showing that the wages of sin is death. Spectacular scene in which an erring woman, trapped in a fire, pays for her faults with her life.

TWO REELS PER WEEK—WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY

Place your order with your Exchange

CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES, 1 Union Square, New York City

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

European Agents: INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., Breams Building, Chancery Lane, London, E. C.

Chicago Representative: J. J. Sullivan. 866 Graceland Ave. 'Phone Graceland 5053

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV — March 18, 1911 — Number 11

Notes of the Week

WITH STONEWALL JACKSON

In making our usual calls this week we happened on friend Mark Dintenfass, of the Champion Film Co. Mr. Dintenfass is always enthusiastic, and has something of a startling nature in store for us, so we were not surprised when he announced the early release of another one of their famous war films, "With Stonewall Jackson," which they are to release on April 17th.

This is an unusual film, and they have departed from the custom of presenting stories of the Union forces, and have presented a Confederate one, depicting Stonewall Jackson at Winchester, Va., into a wonderfully realistic story, portraying scenes from the famous battles of this famous General.

The photography is excellent, and the staging is fully up to the standard of the Champion films. As the full story of this production will be given in the synopsis in next week's issue, we will not present that at this time. The illustration on the front cover of this issue will give an idea of the high character of the production.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS

For practically four and a half years the editor of the Moving Picture News has been advocating the uplifting of the character and calibre of the motion picture film. In looking through our writings since October, 1906, we have been impressed with the fact that all have a tendency to uplift the industry and weed all pernicious influences. Others have followed in our steps, have stolen our thunder and have written on the educational film. This is as it should be. We welcome all and sundry who have any views, or thoughts, or ideas that will tend to make the motion picture the power it ought to be as an educational factor in the public economy. Our inception into cinematography, as we have before stated, commenced in the year 1889, and from this time onward we have watched with interest every advance, and every step of progress made, in what we believe will ultimately be the daily newspaper, illustrating the doings of the people for the people. Many pessimistic writers have declared the motion picture is doomed. They have written sarcastic articles which evidently were suggested when they had the nightmare following a too liberal use of the cup. With all such pessimistic writers we have nothing in common. We are optimistic in every fibre of our body, and we believe the time is rapidly approaching when instead of so many religious, or so-called religious leaders cavilling, they will use the motion picture film to illustrate the story they have to tell.

Rapid progress has been made during the past four and a half years, and we hail with delight every advancement made toward the perfection of the art until it attains the highest standard and holds the position which we think it ultimately will hold, as we have outlined above. To show the rapid advances made prominent papers like the Tribune print leading articles as follows:

Use and Misuse of Films

There may be exaggeration or over-emphasis of statement in saying that there is no more important problem to-day than the suppression of immoral motion pictures, but there can be no doubt that the problem is serious and important, and that the end which is contemplated is greatly to be desired. There are also several other things to be desired in connection with moving pictures, all of which are surely within practical reach.

The matter of protection from fire we discussed the other day. The general sanitation of the places in which the shows are given is also of much importance. At present far too many of them are given in old, ramshackle places, ill smelling and unventilated, veritable breeding grounds for disease. The salutary principles of the health and building codes need to be applied to them with strictness.

In too many places, because of carelessness on the part of the operator, or imperfections in the films, or faulty adjustment of the machinery, there is an incessant vibration of the pictures which is not only unpleasant, but after a little time actually painful, and which may become seriously injurious to the eye. That is surely a fault which mechanical ingenuity or care can obviate, and the correction of which should be demanded by law.

As to the elimination of all pictures of an immoral or debasing nature, the necessity of that goes without saying. So does the necessity of exceptional vigilance in maintaining order and preventing improper conduct at the exhibitions. The darkness of the halls and the almost constantly changing composition of the audience are circumstances which facilitate vicious and criminal conduct and which therefore call for vigilance in guarding against it.

The moving picture is not only a source of great entertainment and amusement. It is a means of instruction the value of which cannot easily be over-estimated. It is far too valuable an invention to be neglected or abused.

We fully agree with the above editorial. The matter of protection from fire is one of the problems that ought to be discussed by every man in the industry, and for the time being, the quarrelings, and bickerings, and litigation between the Patents Company and Sales Company licensees, ought to cease, until the problem of total immunity from fire is solved. We well recollect when we edited the Views and Film Index a conversation we had with William T. Rock, when he said, "Now, Saunders, keep out of the paper all mention of fires, and don't scare the people." It has been our policy since then not to make too glaring a headline of any fire which occurs, and, except in places where the public press was clamoring and full of scare headlines, we have not touched upon this question. We, with others in the industry, know the seriousness of the problem. We meet it every day. We are not blind to the fact that in Russia, and France, and in several States in our own Country, alarming fires have taken place, not only with the inflammable make of film, but also with the so-called non-inflammable. The papers have been very reticent of the fact of a large fire occurring two or three weeks ago in which none but non-inflammable was in use. We have been expecting to hear something said on this question. It simply shows that the solution of the difficulty has not been properly accomplished.

Regarding the ill ventilation of some of the houses, that is a matter for boards of health. The immorality found in the motion picture house is very, very insignificant compared to other sources. If the children's societies would attend to the public schools, to the high schools, and to the places where the mixed sexes are congregating, they would find that it is not the motion picture that is alone to blame. We fully acknowledge that in some instances—very few and far between—immorality has taken place in the motion picture house, but this is becoming a thing of the past, and can be entirely eliminated by a little foresight on part of the exhibitor himself, by making his hall light, and using a little common sense or a screen such as we have given instructions how to make in several issues of this paper.

The Moving Picture News stands for the highest and the best there is in the industry. We have been in the vanguard in the past, and we will still lead both for educational and uplifting pictures. The immoral film is very largely a thing of the past, and it is only in rare instances, such as stag parties, where films, that ought to have been relegated to the crematory long ago, are shown, and we take credit to ourselves for helping along this movement, we know the day will speedily arrive when the educational films will be such a power that Nickelodia will rejoice in the progress attained by the motion picture.

SCENARIOS AND THEIR WRITERS

We do not know if other papers are flooded with scenarios and plots for pictures as we are, but if so, we feel as sorry for them as we do for ourselves. We almost dread to open our mail in the morning owing to the fact that so large a number of scenarios that have been rejected by the manufacturers are dumped in to us with a request that we will read them over and explain why they are not suitable to be made into picture subjects. The reason is very obvious on the face of the scenarios why they are rejected. With a view to help out some of the embryo playwrights we have secured several scenarios with synopses written by an expert playwright which we have copyrighted and have named the Moving Picture News' scenarios. These scenarios are available to any maker in the trade. All we ask is that he give us the credit for the plot, and any further fees payable to be handed over to the authoress. With a view to stimulate earnest effort and bring out the best plots from pictures of an educational nature such as can be produced and shown before the school children, we will open our columns and offer a prize to each writer thereof. The only stipulation we have to make is that the writer must be a subscriber to the Moving Picture News. In this connection we publish an article written by one of our staff in December last, and while we agreed in the main with the article, we felt the time was not ripe to publish it, as it is now; only instead of giving any sort of subject we would prefer that the subjects be educational entirely, and as such we offer it to our readers.

SCENARIO COMPETITION.

All Frequenters of Motion Picture Exhibitions are Eligible.

The busy manufacturer and the aspiring writers are seldom good friends. The amateur writer who sends his scenario to the motion picture manufacturer in most cases never expects a return of his manuscript. When, however, an early mail brings it back marked "unavailable," his spirit cries out in despair against the shameless neglect by the plutocrats of the hard working aspirants for literary honors. We are going to assume the onerous task of establishing a fraternal feeling between manufacturer and writer.

Amateur writers are legion. Some of them with some encouragement and a little experience would make good. Others there are who would not make good were they even given a special training. Some say writing is a talent and others that it is a knack.

But whatever it is, it isn't easy to turn out good acceptable copy. But to turn out good motion picture scenario doesn't require any peculiar talent, ability or training. One must possess a sense of the dramatique. You must "sense" a situation, elucidate it, weave around it a strong, clean and live-wire ruling theme. The sequence of events should follow each other with pistol shot rapidity and logical continuity. Your action should be on the jump from beginning to end. Several good pantomimes interwoven, to cap the climax of good situations, help along wonderfully. When writing your scenario bear in mind that it is to be posed and acted, so don't concoct impossible situations. While writing, visualize your story on the screen, cut down to a minimum the description of characters, scenes, mental agony or psychological studies.

Typewrite your copy on one side of the paper and send it to us. Your scenario should not contain more than a thousand words. We will print three or four scenarios a week, headed by the author's name. We will submit the most acceptable stories to the film manufacturers for their consideration and send back with criticism those that cannot be used. Scenarios accepted by manufacturers will receive ten dollars in addition to the market price the manufacturer pays for his stories. All scenarios that are considered good enough for submission to manufacturers will be published in our columns, regardless of their subsequent acceptance. The competition will continue indefinitely. Watch our columns for additional information. Those desiring further information should address the "Competition Editor," this office.

A CINEMATOGRAPHER'S EXPERIENCES.

I have been asked by my esteemed countryman, Mr. Saunders, to relate a few of my experiences in taking pictures in East Africa. Now I am no journalist or writer, Mr. Saunders, but I will endeavor to describe one or two little incidents. In the first place, let me tell you I saw friend C. Kearton's attempt in the Roosevelt films. Whilst he was preparing these for a show at the Alhambra, London, and seeing that the photography was not exactly Rembrandt style, it set the idea that I should like to have a shot at African photography, so Kearton engaged me at the introduction of another old globe trotter cinematographer. J. Rosenthal, the war man, and so I was booked for British East Africa.

Now, I did not have but forty-eight hours to pack up and see to outfit for this trip, so Kearton and myself had to hustle. I had to have a camera, so, as Kearton was having one built, which was not ready to take with us, I had to get a substitute. Mr. Rosenthal came to the rescue and got me an early type Prestwich camera with the outside film boxes and an ordinary tripod, not a motion picture tripod by any means. Anyway, I got this part of the equipment ready and with 6,000 feet of Austin Edward and Lumiere stock and about eight dozen packets of plates and flash powder, this to go on with as other was to be shipped to us from time to time. We packed and put into the depot at Charing Cross at night. I went to have a farewell dinner with Rosenthal and party, amongst whom was Buffalo Jones. I forgot to mention I had to test the lens of the camera for infinity from Flicker alley on the lamps on the outside of the London Hippodrome. Anyway, this over, a hasty good-bye and off home, as I had some one very dear to me to say good-bye to, as going to Jungle Land is not all honey. Not only are animals dangerous, but there is fever, sun-stroke and other little inconveniences to contend with. Next morning saw me at Charing Cross station and on the 9 o'clock for Paris, which I have traveled quite a lot. I was to break the journey there, so I registered my baggage through to Marseilles, and my films and camera I kept with me as I always make it a rule to keep my outfit under my eye. On reaching Paris I met another old friend. Another farewell dinner and off again.

Next morning I arrived at Marseilles and boarded the steamer, S. S. Admiral, for the rest of the trip. Their Royal Highnesses, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, Prince Arthur and Princess Patricia, were travelling by the same steamer. Anyhow, as they boarded in the evening I could not get any film of them, so waited for another opportunity. We were thirteen hours late leaving Marseilles, as the sea was so terribly rough we could not leave the harbor, and it was rough, too, no mistake. Between Marseilles and Naples we had a very rough time. Arriving at Naples Mr. and Mrs. C. Kearton, who had traveled overland from Paris, joined the ship ,and here we had another rough time, Naples experiencing the worst storm she had seen for twelve years, the vessel breaking from her moorings at least eight or nine times. As I had seen Naples before I hid not trouble much going sightseeing, the weather being too bad. We eventually got under way again and reached the blue Mediterranean, but I think most of the blue, or blues, was amongst the passengers. I was not feeling any too bright myself, I can assure you. We next arrived at Port Said, and here I had an experience that luckily ended smoothly. I had received orders from my chief, Kearton, to get some pictures of the Duke being received by the Governor. I was using a half-plate focal plane Zeiss camera, and was aiming at the Duke when another gentleman that stood beside me, also taking pictures, gave my elbow a jolt and caused me to spoil my plate, but I thought that as perhaps this was an accident due to the crowd pushing to get a glimpse at the distinguished people, I did not take any notice, so I made another shot and again it happened; so I shifted, this party doing the same, coming over beside me and attempting to spoil another plate. So I was a wee bit upset, and I asked him not to do it again or I should have to try and stop him. By this time the Royal party had adjourned to the saloon, so I did not get a plate of that. Anyway Kearton told this party of it later, and this is how we found he was a press man. Kearton told him to be careful, as he might get himself into trouble with his assistant, but he apologized, so we let it drop. Well, nothing happened to get any more pictures for several days.

We arrived at Aden at night; staying for a few hours, we were off again. Things went smoothly until we crossed the Equatorial line, then we had some fun. Now, it is the rule on a British steamer to play Father Neptune, but this being a German boat the custom is somewhat different to initiate people that have not crossed the line before. The method of initiation is as follows: The boat being about a day from Kilindini, the landing for East Africa, a notice is placed in each saloon that as the vessel had made good time and could not get into the harbor a shooting party would be made up and would leave for an island near by in a small steam launch. Those desiring to make the trip could do so by paying—second-class passengers 2 marks, first-class passengers 4 marks. A good many of the passengers fell for it. One party I remember in particular, arraying himself in a new outfit of khaki, a cartridge belt and a new rifle, etc., all the paraphernalia of a big game hunter. He should have known better as land was nowhere in sight. The party made up, and ladies included. The launch on deck, which is ready to be hoisted overboard, steam is up, and everything is ready to start when the first officer gives the signal and about five or six fire hose are turned upon the party and they get a very good soaking, indeed, to the amusement of other passengers. I secured some good films of this, and made for the darkroom with the aid of some ice to cool developer. We developed our sample test piece of film and prepared for landing on the morrow.

Ball of Motion Picture Operators Benevolent Association

There has been so much progress made by the motion picture operators with their Benevolent Association that they have planned to hold an entertainment and ball on Friday, April 21, 1911. The entertainment committee promises that it will be a big success and a surprise to the moving picture at large.

Dayton, Ohio.—W. Edward Hanley has decided to erect a new vaudeville and moving picture theater at the corner of Fifth and Ludlow streets.

MORE TROUBLE

Taking up the New York World for Tuesday, March 14th, we came across the article published in another column on "Two Forces Join to End Evils of Picture Shows." Our editorial on educational subjects can be read in connection with this; in addition, we would like to say we think it is time that every exhibitor should be joined to his fellow in a strong organization to obtain the best legal talent available, so that an end can be put once for all to any further oppressive measures. We have got an expert statistician at work looking up the records of criminality, especially bearing upon the demoralization of young girls, and are trying to get comparative statistics showing what occurred in the year when the age of consent was reduced, and the present conditions as shown by the statistics of the Children's Society. We then hope that some available data will be placed in the hands of the motion picture men to prove that they are not responsible for all the evils blamed to their door. If any of our readers have information available we will be glad for them to send it in to our Statistics Editor, who will handle it in the proper manner.

The suggested conference on the motion picture industry has our full approval and support. Anything that seeks to preserve the industry by improving its character is good. Many exhibitors in the City of New York have had cause to find fault with the laws relating to motion pictures which are undoubtedly responsible for many of the existing evils therein. As the ordinances at present stand, a M. P. house seating less than 300 is licensed as a place of assemblage and subject to a few regulations for which a license fee of $25 per year is paid, and, of course, the smallness of this fee naturally accounts for many of the small houses now in existence which for the benefit of the industry would be well weeded out. If any house has over 300 seats it at once become subject to the ordinances regulating theaters and becomes one of them. It is also subject to the regulations and restrictions ruling a theater, and a fee of $500 per year has to be paid for the privilege.

The absence of any law especially for the motion picture show, as a motion picture show, puts a premium on the $25 house and the few restrictions necessary naturally open up large faults. Of course it is easy to see the result of an excessive number of small places, very often under improper management, and naturally the subject of excessive competition. The Moving Picture News wants to go on record as saying we consider the motion picture exhibition of sufficient importance to be made the subject of a special ordinance, and as such we commend this suggestion to the Exhibitors' Associations, to the Legislators for the State, and trust they will take speedy action in getting class legislation for the motion picture. This legislation should specify the character of each place in which public exhibitions may be permitted. If this were properly specified and restricted and a medium or agreeable fee charged, many of those places which stink in the nostrils of the better class of people would be weeded out, and Nickelodia take its place on its own legalized basis.

V. R. Carrick, the well-known exchange man of Philadelphia, came in Tuesday morning. Mr. Carrick is too well known for us to say anything new about him, but perhaps a great many film men are not aware that he is prominent in Pennsylvania state politics, and has held long terms as alderman in Philadelphia.

EPISODES OF AN EVENING'S RECONNOITERING.

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

Last night I visited a moving picture house on Amsterdam avenue, near 145th street. Upon presenting my card I was received with the utmost courtesy by the manager, a young man—very young, I thought, to have the responsibility of a moving picture theater on his shoulders.

With his pleasant face and courteous manner, I could not help thinking, as I sauntered home, that he was a fit subject upon whom to work in connection with the elimination of things evil, and the introduction of things good, in the moving picture houses—one in whom to inspire deep thought upon the subject and to whom the opportunity placed within his reach to be of use to do unbounded good to humanity would appeal.

The films shown at this theater showed some thought in their selection. The theater contained an orderly and well-satisfied audience of men, women and children. In front of me sat a father with his little child, to whom, I presume, he had given his promise upon leaving home in the morning, to take her to the "picture show" when he returned in the evening. The child and the parent alike were pleased.

The pictures, though not altogether of an educational class, were otherwise well chosen in the way of color and moral sense.

We looked for some time at a representation of a kennel of beautiful St. Bernard dogs, being cared for and trained by their keepers. One cunning little puppy of a particularly hilarious nature pleased the audience insomuch that they laughed aloud at the antics of the little animal. The older dogs, though they elicited not nearly so much attention, were nevertheless a source of great pleasure to the onlooker, with their shaggy, noble looking bodies.

Animal pictures are always pleasing, for, unlike human beings, animals are always natural; and, in this age of paint and powder, puffs and pads, and artifices of all sorts to disguise the work of nature, it does refresh the eye to look at something that really is as nature intended it should be.

We humans have become so subservient to man-made customs that we are no longer as nature would have us be; but as extremes must meet and as the wheel in revolving comes back again to its starting point, so shall nature eventually claim her own.

In departing from my subject, I too traveled in a circle and back to my place of beginning.

After having viewed with pleasure the pictures, to a glimpse of which I was made so welcome by the courteous manager, I walked along uptown three or four blocks farther, where I entered one of the larger theaters.

While I stood to one side, by the radiator in the entrance, awaiting the appearance of the manager, I was suddenly made aware of the presence at my side of a well-dress young "hopeful." Edging up to me and pointing to the card which I held in my hand, he said, "Say, kin you buy passes fer the moving picture show?"

"Oh, I don't think so," I replied.

"Well, ain't that a pass you got there?" he persisted.

"That's my press card," I explained.

"Oh," he said, with a blank stare. Then after a moment's hesitation, "Couldn't you sell me one of them things you git in on?"

Just at that moment the manager appeared, and I was brusquely ordered to the balcony, to peek, on tip-toe, as best I could, over men's shoulders and under women's hats, in the back row of the standers-up.

I moved to take a peep down the aisle, where the space was clear, only to be ordered back by the officious usher who had his eagle eye on all, with a "Don't stand in the aisle, please."

Leaving the balcony I descended to the lower floor with the intention of making a hasty departure. As I came down the stairs I stopped a moment to look at what was happening on the stage, and although I was the one sole creature on that wide stairway, I was again brought to myself by a voice exclaiming, "Don't stand on the stair."

Of course I did not shout in his ear "Press!" else I might have been treated with a little more courtesy; but it is interesting to note the different types of humanity one meets in such places, and their several attitudes toward their fellow creatures—the indiscriminate carrying out to the letter of the abiding law of the place.

My thoughts flitted back with a sense of gratitude to the young manager of the first house I had entered, and his cheery "Glad you came in."

SOLAX COMPANY

Few, if any, of our manufacturers have made comedy reels regularly. The Solax people, who are always on the alert, have been looking over the program very carefully, and have decided to make Wednesday their comedy day. They have rounded a long list of good plays, and have engaged the right kind of people to insure a regular supply of good comedy films.

EDUCATIONAL LECTURES IN KEITH & PROCTOR'S THEATERS.

A slight error crept into our issue of March 4th, page 60. Under the above caption "Fra" attributed the interview to Mr. U. Grant Blackford, the general manager, when it really took place with Wm. Short, the lecturer at both the Union Square and 23rd Street theaters, and who has charge of the distribution of the lectures in the various houses on the circuit.

KINEMACOLOR

In connection with his forthcoming "Kinemacolor" campaign at the Scala (where animated scenes in the actual tints of nature will be exclusively shown twice daily, alternated by musical and other short plays and attractive novelties) Mr. Charles Urban has just concluded a most important engagement. He has secured the services of one of the greatest of modern light-opera composers, Herr Paul Lincke, whose compositions are probably as popular in London as they are on the Continent, and one of the earliest of this gentleman's works to be seen at the Scala—probably at Easter—will be a condensed version of his operetta, "Castles in the Air." This piece, which has already had an enormous success in the United States, will be localized to suit London audiences, the opening scene being on Hampstead Heath. Throughout the operetta, "Kinemacolor" effects of a novel and surprising nature will play a great part ,and quite probably will draw all London.

Winston-Salem, N. C.—Mr. Robert Hancock has let the contract for the erection of a new moving picture theater on Liberty avenue to the Central Construction Company.

Grand Forks, N. Dak.—Joseph H. Singer, of Towner, N. D., has purchased the Royal Theater here, and taken possession.

FRANK WINCH ACHIEVES FURTHER HONORS

From bellboying to the authorship of what appears to be one of the season's best sellers is a long jump—one that few would care to undertake—one that few could do successfully. Frank Winch has just made the leap, at least the last part of it, that apparently places him a distinctive class all his own.

In another two weeks every book store in America will have on sale, the "Thrilling Lives of Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill," from the pen of Franck Winch, one of the best known young men on Broadway. A fitting climax to a long struggle for recognition. Winch is a Californian, coming to New York a few months after the disaster in San Francisco. If things had been hot at home they were equally cold in the East. New York hasn't much patience with the chap that hasn't made good according to its standards. Winch had a rough path to follow, he set an example that might well be followed by others struggling for recognition in the busy metropolis. Without money or friends with nothing to introduce him, without the experience that many think necessary to make good, this youngster set about to make his way.

In California he had done newspaper work, he had walked across Death Valley for a newspaper story, he had ridden the first five record breaking miles with Barney Oldfield, he had ventured down in a submarine boat, the first layman to accomplish the feat, he had exposed the most gigantic smuggling plot ever attempted by officers of the United States navy, those on the U. S. Battleship Oregon, and during the dread days of the fire and earthquake in San Francisco he served as a deputy sheriff—he had written one or two plays which were produced by Frederic Belasco on the Coast—but New York would not accept all this as a criterion of what he might do in the future.

Then he set about to do something else, something that would gain Eastern recognition.

He secured a position with Rowland and Clifford of Chicago, after vainly trying to locate in New York. For a season he managed one of their attractions, afterwards being appointed as their general press representative, and the year following managed one of the biggest melodramas ever sent on the road. By this time his name was getting into New York, a flattering offer came from A. H. Woods to manage one of their best shows, and soon after a contract was offered him to take the New York management of one of the largest theatrical newspapers. Securing his release from Woods, Winch accepted the latter, and for two and a half years was located on Broadway.

Within a few months after his advent to New York, Winch attracted considerable attention by his writings, one story in particular "The Critic," in which he wrote of the dramatic writers as he found them, created a decided sensation, the article was published far and wide, then followed "The Stage of one hundred years ago," reviewing theatrical history and and its people for the past century, this too added to his popularity ,but more than anything it was the column of caustic comment on things and beings, as he found them, that won Winch much favor.

Last Spring he resigned from the paper, accepted an offer from The Buffalo Bill Wild West, Pawnee Bill Far East, to act as press agent. It is common newspaper history that the record he had made for himself in that capacity was the greatest that New York had seen in a good many years. In December last year Mr. Winch, who is a particular friend of Major Lillie, accepted an invitation to the latter's famous Buffalo Ranch at Pawnee, Oklahomai, and was present at the buffalo killing by Colonel Cody. It was there that he was impressed into writing the volume that he has just completed.

Winch retired from Broadway, selected a quiet spot in the mountains and has remained there all winter working on his book, which is now in press and will be issued shortly from the Parsons Press in New York.

We will send the Moving Picture News to any address for trial subscription at the rate of 50c for three months. This will give you 12 issues, and will enable you to keep posted on all matters relating to the trade. Don't delay, send in your name at once. All coming numbers will contain valuable information and you cannot afford to miss a single issue.

The Keeney Vaudeville Enterprises have opened a new house at Schenectady to be known as the Majestic. Only the best pictures and high class vaudeville will be the policy of this house.

Chicago Letter

The Trust has been circulating reports around town that the Independent Film Exchanges were losing customers daily to the Trust so I made a trip around to the various exchanges during the past week to convince myself on the absurdity of such a rumor.

At Laemmle's Mr. Lesseoman and Mr. Fleckels tell me they have never done such an enormous amount of business since the first days of their Independence.

Mitchell, of the Standard Exchange, tells me they are buying twenty-one reels a week and keep these all busy and have never handled as many customers, even during their period with licensed film.

The H. & H. Film Service in the Monadnock is also doing a landoffice business and Father Plough, of the Anti-Trust Exchange, is holding his own with his neighbor Von Ronkel across the hall.

Exhibitors who are using Trust pictures and giving away premiums or souvenirs have been notified to discontinue giving away any premiums or else their service will be discontinued.

Carl Laemmle arrived in town this week on one of his flying expeditions. This past week brought forth a number of good Independent reels. Among the best of these were: "Ever the Accuser," a Reliance drama of great merit, in which is seen several new faces which shows they are enlarging their stock company.

"His Younger Brother," a Thanhouser, is a very good dramatic spectacle. The impersonation by the sister is well done and no details overlooked.

"The Rich and Poor," an American, told a story often seen in picture before. The inevitable struggle between capital and labor as to photography and acting the picture was very good.

"Nobility Xmas Doll" and "Foolshead Shooting" were contributed by the Itala Co.

"Starlight, the Squaw," "Her Prisoner" and "Dick Farrell's Prize" were released by the Bison Co. The latter one failed to pass muster with the Chicago Censorship Board on account of a killing and a stake holdup on which hinged the story.

"The Secret of the Palm," Monday's Imp, was very ordinary. The plot was very commonplace and out of keeping with their recent efforts.

Keep your eyes on the Rex; they are releasing real reels of honest to goodness pictures which are winning a place in the heart of the Independents.

The Solax people are also keeping up the good work.

The Herbst daylight pictures are being demonstrated in a number of Chicago vaudeville houses with little or no success, as every place I have visited the operator has been unable to get enough light on the picture to make it clearly visible and in the condition it is being shown make it very injurious to the eyes.

I have been asked to make a suggestion to the manufacturers in behalf of the German element patronizing pictures. Stories of Irish, Jews, etc., have been plentiful, but we never have a German story, one of the fatherland. My petitioner says a story written around De wach am Rhein (Gee, I hope I spelled that correct) would make a great picture, so some clever scenario writer, hurry up now, there's an original idea.

We notice Harry Fitzpatrick is back at his post managing the Casino on Madison street. Oh, you Fitz, can't get along without you, eh.

J. J. SULLIVAN.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., March 15.—While seated at my desk in the office of the Evening Bulletin last Sunday the telephone rang, and when I took down the receiver a voice called to me over the wire:

"Are you wise to the fact that the picture shows are open and doing a good Sunday business?"

I replied that I had not personally investigated the matter, but would do so immediately; also informed the possessor of the "tip" that I had been told the night before that these places of amusement would open and run in spite of the edict of Prosecuting Attorney Wood, who had kept them closed since last September. When a manager told me this on Saturday night I thought he was "kidding" me, for I have been a witness to several attempts to do business on Sunday on the part of the moving picture houses, all of which resulted in nothing being accomplished of benefit to the managers.

But this time it was "the goods, sure 'nuf," for, take it from me, the machines were singing a merry melody and the dimes were dropping with unfailing regularity. It seemed too good to be true. And you should have seen the look of great joy and appreciation depicted on the face of more than one visitor who had been denied harmless Sunday entertainment for months.

Down at Majestic Park the Cincinnati Reds and the St. Louis Browns were busy with the second game of a series of nine, and up at Whittington Park the All-Stars, composed of American and National League players, were engaged in an exciting contest with Manager William Dahlen's cohorts from that dear city of churches. Didn't know that Judge Wood tried to stop Sunday baseball, did you? Lord bless you, yes. Last Sunday he caused the arrest of "Doc" Owens, superintendent of Whittington Park for "laboring on the Sabbath" and announced that if they played the following Sunday he would take the players from the field under arrest and bring action against them, not for laboring on Sunday, mind you, but for violation of the special baseball law, which was passed March 15, 1885, over twenty-six years ago, and which, so far as this booming and budding resort is concerned, has never been enforced.

Talk about a howl. My friends, the wail that went up when he closed the picture shows the Sunday, two weeks after being inducted into office, was as a gentle echo compared to the roar that emanated from the business men when he announced his baseball crusade. And he intended to make good, too. Don't get the idea that Judge Wood isn't a fighter. He'd tackle a buzz-saw or a pack of wild cats if he thought they were violating a Sunday ordinance or any other law. The trouble with the judge is he's too conscientious, especially where this Sunday problem, in all its ramifications, is concerned. To him law is law; his oath of office he holds sacred, and he has told the people that if they don't like the law as it stands and interferes with business and hurts the town, why in "Sam Hill" don't they hike to Little Rock, where the General Assembly is in session, and get the offending measures repealed? He's here to see that the law is enforced, and he has stated he will enforce it no matter if his policy bankrupts the city. Pretty strong, isn't it? Also, can you beat it?

Every one with one iota of sporting blood looked for large and interesting "doings" Sunday. The fact that contemplated sensations did not materialize is not due to the judge, but rather to the fact that the baseball and amusements interest put one over good and hard. You see, Judge Wood, in order to make good his threat to stop Sunday violation and picture shows had to have the assistance of the sheriff, his deputies and constables. But, gentle reader, do you know that when he came to look for them last Sunday there were none to be found? It was said in all seriousness, too, that every mother's son of 'em had been called out of the city on most important business, and there was Judge Wood, stout of heart and riled in manner, powerless to wreak vengeance on those who, he claims, were openly violating the antique baseball statute and the Sunday laboring law. I called him on the 'phone Sunday and asked him what he was going to do, and I got this reply:

"I can't do anything to-day, for the reason that I cannot locate any officers." Also, in closing this subject, it may be stated that the gambling houses were running and that the old town, free of the last hinge of the "lid," passed a very successful and orderly Sabbath.

Charles Stacy, of the Vitagraph Company, has been here for the past week. Mr. Stacy brought with him a moving picture camera and has been busy taking moving pictures of the Brooklyn players, which, I understand, the Vitagraph Company intends using in later releases. He managed to get some very interesting pictures, but towards the end of the week he became sad of heart, for the reason that the one subject he longed for he could not take, and that was a scene showing the players mobbing the umpire. Everything had been arranged to take this picture, and the Brooklyn players were more than eager to do their part, for, you see, as Dahlen expressed it, "it's something right in our line and for which we don't need any rehearsals." Several were offered the part of the "Ump," but all of them declined with thanks, and as a last resort Stacy inserted an "ad" in the local papers, which read as follows:

"Wanted—A man to portray the part of umpire in baseball game with Brooklyn players at Whittington Park for moving picture. Apply in person to Charles Stacy, Majestic Hotel."

Did they answer? Gee whiz, they came in droves. Could President Lynch, of the National League, or Ben Johnson, of the American organization, ever have looked on the mob of prospective and ambitious "Umps" that sought out Stacy, they would have realized that all cause for future worry concerning the supply of officials of this nature was a joke. A crowd of about 150 met the Vitagraph man in the parlor of the Majestic.

"Now, Mr. Stacy, let us know just what's wanted in this thing so that the man who gets the job won't make any mistakes," said one.

"I suppose all of you have desired to get in a moving picture?" asked Stacy.

"YES!" roared back the applicants.

"Well, the man who is selected for this picture will take his stand behind the pitcher. A runner on first will endeavor to steal second. The umpire will declare him out. The Brooklyn team, with Manager Dahlen in the lead, will object and surround the umpire. They will be real angry. The umpire will be before the camera all the time—don't overlook that bet. One of the players will slam the umpire with his glove; another will toss a bat at him, and he gets a clip back of the right ear. Still another smashes him with a ball and Manager Dahlen reaches over and plants a right hook on the umpire's neck—not hard, you understand, but just to give it good local color. (And let me tell you, lads, It's not every one can say Bill Dahlen hit him.) After this the Brooklyn team picks you up, runs across the diamond with you to the little creek by the side of the rightfield fence, into which they dump you with great glee and glad shouts. It's a cinch and, if you are ambitious to get in a good moving picture, here sure is a golden opportunity."

There was silence, deep meditative silence, for a moment, and then the gentleman who asked the first question at the beginning of this interesting conference arose and said:

"For myself, Mr. Stacy, I haven't the least doubt that all you have mentioned would come to pass in the thrilling and realistic manner in which you have portrayed the same, but my mother never raised any foolish children, and this lad isn't going to bust family traditions at this late day, not if he knows himself, and. believe me, he does."

And as one man the horde made a break for the door. Stacy is still looking for an umpire, as there isn't any one in "the valley of vapors" who wants the job.

The city council of Little Rock gave the theater and moving picture people a wallop the past week when they turned them down in their effort to get the license reduced. One has to pay six hundred "bucks" a year in Little Rock to entertain the populace. Those holding lease on the Kempner Theater have taken the matter into the courts in an effort to declare this license unreasonable.

While standing in the lobby of the Princess Theater one night this week I noticed that a great many of the friends of the cashier, Miss Gertrude Moorman, stopped long enough to put one hand through the grating and I heard them say: "Congratulations, girlie," and "I wish you all the happiness in the world, dear," so I asked her the whyfore and the wherefore of such an outburst of felicity. Her blushes told the story. Yep, Gertrude had gone and got married to Ollie Crosby, one of the resort's leading young business men. One can't blame Ollie, either, for his wife was considered one of the prettiest young ladies in Hot Springs, and we have some real "heart breakers and purse deplenishers" in these diggings, brethren.

Among the pictures witnessed here during the week none more favorably impressed than the Kalem reel, "The Story that Grandmother Told." Kalem, you sure are there on those Southern stories, and this one is a dandy. And, Vitagraph, has some one been feeding you a depressing breakfast food, for two of your reels here this week were about as cheerful as a starving man finding a bunch of stage money. I refer to "When the Light Failed" and your Prussian picture. You seem to have a fondness to produce the picture depicting blindness, near blindness and coming eclipse until we've got the blind staggers looking at them. Your Prussian picture didn't go well in these parts, and the only thing that saved it was the excellent acting of the child. She was exceptionally clever in a most difficult part. I think, too, it would be well the next time you use that detail of Prussian soldiers to have the lieutenant, should he again come in a room where death has laid its hand, to remove his cap. And when your actors write letters, especially blind actors, don't have them make rapidly straight lines over the paper and then produce the next instant a wonderfully correct letter, with all attending punctuation. "Dobbs the Dobber" gave us a good laugh. The Great Northern's "Four Seasons," a colored half reel, was much appreciated. I'll have a better chance now to witness Independent pictures, for Harry Hale has again taken on this service at the Lyric and the Princess is getting a better line of Independent material. I am glad to see local managers awakening to the possibilities of Independent service, and here's hoping they stick. THE MAN IN THE BATH.

Washington Letter

Washington, D. C.

The first house to make use of the crystal screen in the Capitol City is the Crystal, which has recently come under the management of Sydney Julian Jacobson, who has been identified with the motion picture business for the past ten years. This screen produces a much whiter picture and to test the fact that the clearness was not lessened by any other lights the manager opened the doors of his house and the same brightness of the pictures was retained.

Mr. Jacobson will be remembered for his connection with the Edison Co., with Shepard's Road Shows, and with the Interstate Amusement Co., under which he opened the first real moving picture house in this city. He is now general manager of the Crystal Amusement Co., having as his close associate Mrs. Marie Jacobson, who is found to be as efficient as her husband in this business. She holds the distinction of being the only lady manager among the moving picture houses of Washington. The Crystal is an Independent house with a big trade, which promises much increase under its new management.

J. S. Plimpton, studio manager of the Edison Co., was a recent visitor to the city.

At the recent gathering of the Boy Scouts of America in this city, the film of the boy scouts was projected during the banquet at the New Willard and created much enthusiasm and appreciation.

A happening of special interest to the moving picture industry is the combining of the forces of the "B. & W." and the Paramount Film Exchange under the name of the Washington Film Exchange with Arthur Lucas at the helm. The offices are located on Ninth street where the Paramount has been doing business since its conception in the national capital as the representative headquarters of the Independents. Things are going just as before and the present manager wants no flourish made over the union. Former Manager Walker and J. Boyd Dexter continue to be connected with the office force.

Business is excellent at the Washington Film Exchange and everyone has to hustle. Already orders are being filed for that great Itala photoplay, "The Fall of Troy." Although this will not be released for a few weeks, the elaborate production which this is claimed to be as well as its historical value has made a big demand for this special film.

The Independents have recently added to their list the Savoy, which was formerly a licensed house. Manager Cutts is well pleased with the change.

I am told that in Washington the matter of a house being an Independent or an Association often reduces itself to policy. There are excellent films on both sides, good treatment on both sides, and there is no hard feeling really anywhere. Anyway, the Independents are gaining ground and are expanding more than they were a year ago.

TWO FORCES JOIN TO END EVILS OF PICTURE SHOWS

Conference Wants a Fundamental Revision of the Rules Governing These Much-Frequented Places—Girls' Morals in Danger, Says Children's Society

Changes in the regulations covering motion picture shows, which The World has sought, will be made soon, for two organizations announced yesterday that they were waiting only for Commissioner of Accounts Fosdick's report upon the situation before beginning an active campaign to obtain those changes.

Commissioner Fosdick was ill yesterday and away from his office, so his report may be delayed. The Conference on Motion Pictures, through its Secretary, John Collier, said it wanted a fundamental revision of all the rules governing motion picture shows. The Children's Society announced through the Superintendent, Thomas D. Walsh, that it soon would be in a position to ask Governor Dix, Mayor Gaynor and District-Attorney Whitman to take cognizance of "a condition demoralizing to girls from eleven to sixteen years old."

Walsh said the society had had four men gathering evidence against places in Manhattan, and other representatives working through the State.

Pictures Good, Houses Not

The crusade was not directed against the films shown, as they were of a very good standard, but he thought the picture show houses were places where young persons fell into bad company.

"There are in Sing Sing twelve men we sent there for exploiting girls they met at moving picture shows," Walsh said, "and we have a list of about forty girls missing since January whose parents blame picture shows for their disappearance."

The Conference on Motion Pictures, on the other hand, is not so much concerned with the moral aspect of the question as with fundamental changes in the regulation of the whole industry.

"The present laws governing motion picture shows are of about the same vintage as the civil war," said Collier. "The ordinances are very loose, and no one knows just what they are. What we want is to call together the Fire, Building and Water Supply Departments and the Licensing Bureau, which now have separate regulations in granting permits. Together they should determine upon the exact regulations. These would be published, so that the public might know what they have a right to expect and the proprietors know what conditions they must fulfill.

Weeding Out Little Places

"Another thing we want is a revision of the Building Code, which at present limits places of public assemblage to 299 seats. Any greater seating capacity requires the fulfillment of the very stringent laws governing theaters, which are prohibitive for motion picture places. But a theater of intermediate size is the desirable one. It would crowd out the little shows, because it could give a better class show and a longer one, and have a better moral tone than the small show place of the present. At present New York has the worst moving picture shows in the country. The city government is responsible for the bad conditions. Our hope is the new charter, which will let us make the changes necessary.

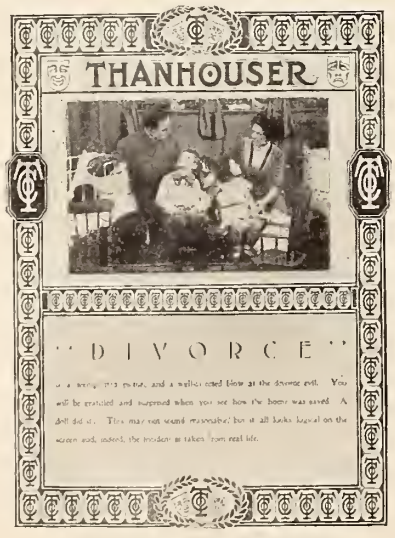
"The third thing we seek is concentration of the licensing power. The present system makes a duplication of effort, because the same work is done over by several departments, and so the city's money is wasted. There is likewise a division of responsibility and a disorganization of the bureau. Shows which are straight motion picture shows without vaudeville are licensed by the Mayor's Office for $25 a year. When vaudeville features are introduced a license of $500 is paid and the theater goes under the police system.

Small Proprietor Suffers

"With the cheaper show the license may be revoked at the Mayor's pleasure, but the theatrical license cannot be taken back except after a hearing in the courts. Thus a hardship is worked on the small proprietor. The tax is on the quality of the show, and it should be on the seating capacity."

Collier said that if the conference was satisfied with Fosdick's report the members would back it up, otherwise they would work independently for a reform in motion picture legislation.

Walsh advocated segregation of the sexes in the show houses, except where a young person is accompanied by a parent.



Thanhouser Enterprise

The Thanhouser Lobby-Decorator, illustrated above, is the latest proof of the film manufacturer's desire to co-operate with the theater man. Every now and then we are reminded of this pleasing "weakness" of the picture maker. Photos, halftones, synopses, bulletins—indeed everything that ingenuity can devise to aid the exhibitor popularize his pictures—are his for the mere asking. This last device to come to our attention is sent on request by the Thanhouser Company, New Rochelle, N. Y., to readers who will state their connection with the moving picture business.

MOVING PICTURE NEWS SCENARIOS
Copyrighted by Alfred H. Saunders

SYNOPSIS OF "THE ETERNAL SAVAGE"

By Miss B. Nemone

During an epidemic of diphtheria in an isolated village near Mandan in North Dakota, the young doctor of the place is called away into the country on a very serious case. Knowing that he will be away for some time, he conceals the nature of the epidemic, to spare his wife anxiety about their baby, lays in plenty of provisions, and warns her that she must not let a single person enter the house, as all the neighbors' children have colds. He departs, and the wife, desperate from loneliness, disobeys him to the extent of admitting one neighbor, who lives outside of the village. The visitor tells her that her little boy has a slight cold, a mere nothing, and after some conversation departs. The wife busies herself at her household duties, sings, plays the parlor organ, catches up the baby and dances about the floor with him, cuddles him, pets him, sees that he is feverish and finally puts him to sleep in the baby carriage, which she wheels into the bedroom. Meanwhile the neighbor has returned home and found her little boy very ill, she is alarmed, looks him over, recognizes diphtheria, and, regardless of the consequences, runs in a panic to the doctor's house, where she pounds on the door until she is admitted by his wife. The doctor's wife tries to soothe her, tells her to use the common home remedies, and says that there is nothing serious the matter with the boy. The mother, unable to contain herself, blurts out that her boy has diphtheria, and is in a desperate state. The doctor's wife is dumbfounded at first and then, realizing that the neighbor has brought the dread disease near her baby, she turns into a raging fury, lays violent hands on the neighbor and drives her from the house. She stands for a minute, nearly distracted, but is aroused from her stupor by the baby crying. She runs toward it, but stops short, afraid to touch him, after touching the neighbor. She stands outside the room and sings in a heartbroken voice till she quiets the child. She looks at the clock in desperation, hoping her husband will return soon. She hears a horse approaching. It passes on. She despairs again. Somebody knocks at the door. The wife, thinking it might be the neighbor again, takes down the doctor's shotgun, looks to see if it is loaded, and then throws open the window, to drive off the intruder. She hears a whistle, drops the gun, opens door, and falls into her husband's arms. She tells him about the visits of the neighbor and that she is afraid that she has brought infection to Baby. Her husband reproaches her for disobeying his orders, she retorts that he ought to have told her the nature of the disease. He ends the dispute by going to the baby and examining it. The wife waits outside until he has finished. She questions him. He cannot tell anything, but is to give him the anti-toxin as a preventive. He looks for a tube in the bookcase, and his wife tells him that it is broken. He then examines the tube in his bag and finds there is only one dose therein. The neighbor returns to the open window and pleads desperately for him to come to her child, as he is dying. He reproaches her for entering his house, tells her that he will be right over, drives her from the window and slams it shut. He takes the tube, puts it in a medicine case with the needle and starts for the door. His wife, desperate at the thought that he is going to give the medicine that baby may need, rushes to the door and bars it with her body. She pleads with him to save the medicine for Baby, he tells her that professional ethics force him to go to the one most in need first, and attempts to pass her. Driven out of her senses by the peril of the baby she tells him that if he won't save his own child, he won't save the other, dashes forward, and before he can guard himself, strikes the medicine case to the ground, crushes it furiously beneath her heel, flings the door open and points to it, indicating that he must go! He looks at her for an instant in horror, and then walks slowly from the room. The baby cries once more. The mother runs to it, grabs it up, rushes from the house and, hailing a passing buggy driven by a boy, makes the boy drive at top speed to Mandan. Meanwhile the doctor has ridden there, and is in the drug store getting a fresh supply of the needed medicine, when she enters. She won't let him touch the child, at first, but he takes it from

(Continued on page 15)

EXHIBITORS' PAGE

WHAT THE PUBLIC DEMAND

SUGGESTIONS FOR IMPROVEMENTS

THE EDUCATIONAL ALLIANCE

East Broadway and Jefferson St.

New York, March 13, 1911.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir:

As a manager of a moving picture show, attempting to be educational, I am interested in trying to organize the educational influences in the moving picture field. As a start in this direction I should like to have a list of all institutions maintaining educational picture shows, and I should be exceedingly grateful for the names of as many of these institutions as you have on file or find it convenient to obtain for me.

Yours very truly,

BOYD FISHER,

Director of Entertainments.

WATCHING THE PICTURES

By H. Jeanval

Where we get our foreign films from:

France	2,759,485	metres
England	382,565	"
Italy	358,151	"
Denmark	330,646	"
Germany	30,675	"

The first official figures have been made public concerning the exportation of European films to the United States, covering a period from August 6, 1909, to June 30, 1910. These figures are of the greatest interest to us, and show a very remarkable condition of affairs. France exported 2,759,485 metres, valued at 3,000,256 francs ($600,000); England, 382,565 metres, 399,605 francs; Italy, 358,151 metres, 355,252 francs; Denmark, 330,646 metres, 353,932 francs; Germany, 30,675 metres, 22,987 francs. It will thus be seen that the United States during a period of eleven months bought for its moving picture shows 3,911,617 metres of foreign films of a value of 4,163,332 francs. It will be seen that amongst the foreign importations to the United States, French films make up more than 75 per cent. of the total. During the five following months from July 13th to the end of November, 1910, there was a slight falling off in the importations, they being 1,530,000 metres, valued at 1,561,896 francs. The foregoing figures will show the enormous consumption of films in this country. The 15,000 moving picture houses consuming not only the output of the native manufacturers but the huge quantities noted above made in foreign lands.

One of the most important points in a good, reliable and successful moving picture house is to have posters to tell the truth about the pictures that are being run inside. We have the flaring, blaring, low class melodramatic thing that yells from the doors of some picture houses having no bearing whatever on the films in question. Let that pass, but there are many firms of the highest standing whose posters are ill-drawn daubs, a disgrace to the firm and the film. I have received from Itala a poster that ought to be hung in every moving picture firm's art department to show what a poster ought to be. It is to be used in connection with the reel entitled "The Fall of Troy." Artistically beautiful, it is worthy of the subject; I commend this poster to the makers who send out illiterate posters for fine films.

When moving pictures began, they were looked upon as a toy; now they are the educator and the guide of hundreds of thousands of people round the world. It is not only in the theater, but in the school; nay, even in the university that they are exerting their influence. At the present moment there is nothing, not even the combination of churches that is exercising such a truly humane influence upon old and young as the moving pictures. Men may preach and talk of brotherhood, but there is no such potent influence in inculcating the real power as these pictures. Why? Because Greek and Russian, Turk and Jap, German and American can see the same picture in its silent beauty understandingly. The story it tells—"Man is man" wherever he lives, and the moving pictures depict the story of universal humanity. The magnificent power of the moving picture is due to the fact that it can speak to the world of men as no other power can, in the silent yet omnipotent power that proclaims a "Man's a man for a' that." In language men try to find a universal tongue; they have failed. Moving pictures have found it—it is shown on the screen every day—everywhere.

By the way, Essanay, how was it in your release about the teacher that the clock was 4 to 4 all the time the school scenes were going on?

Pathe—in the Red Deer's Devotion, isn't it a little peculiar that an Indian girl sends a note upon an arrow written upon French note paper; furthermore, it seemed a bit queer that when she wrote, her handwriting was typically French.

On the cars a friendly Irishman said to me this very morning, "My father was a shoemaker and he had a customer who, when asked the size of his foot, replied, 'The divil a bit I know, make thim as far as three shillings go.'" I am wondering if that is the plan upon which one or two—mayhap three—film makers are going these days. If so, for your pockets' sake cut it out: HARD.

ADVICE TO OPERATORS ORACLE PRACTICAL ARTICLES FOR ALL DEPARTMENT

By WM. E. SMITH, E. E.

ROTARY CONVERTERS, MOTOR GENERATORS

The synchronous or rotary converter is a machine for converting alternating current into direct current; when used for the reverse operation of converting direct current into alternating current the machine is known by the ill-chosen term "inverted converter."

The synchronous converter consists of a synchronous motor and a direct current generator combined in one machine. It resembles a direct current generator with a conspicuously large commutator and an auxiliary set of collector rings.

On the commutator side its performance is that of a direct current generator, while on the collector ring side it operates solely as a synchronous motor. Its design in certain respects is a compromise between alternating current and direct current practise. This is most noticeable with reference to the speed and number of poles; that is, the frequency.

Since central stations and lighting companies are gradually changing their direct current circuits to alternating current, and in order to supply the demand of the moving picture theaters with a device to operate on alternating current and supply direct current to the arc.

J. H. Hallberg and the Fort Wayne Electric Company have designed and constructed machines to meet these requirements.

The following will give an idea of what the machines are like:

The machines consist of an especially designed generator and motor mounted on a cast-iron base, and is arranged to operate on an alternating current circuit and supply direct current to the arc lamp. These machines are constructed for use on 115, 220, or 440-volt, single-phase, two-phase or three-phase circuits.

The generators are equipped with a special winding so as to generate approximately 70 to 80 volts, and operate in conjunction with a rheostat for use when the arc lamp is operating on 50 or 55 volts and 35 amperes.

Motor Generators are revolving transformers for affecting transformations which cannot be effected by stationary apparatus. They are of two sorts: (1) For transforming a continuous current at any voltage into a continuous voltage of any other voltage; (2) For transforming alternating currents (single phase or polypjhase) into continuous currents.

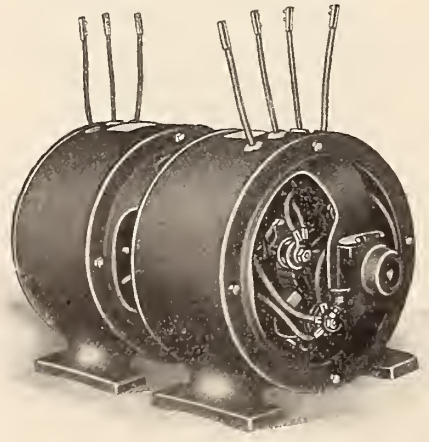


Fig. 10

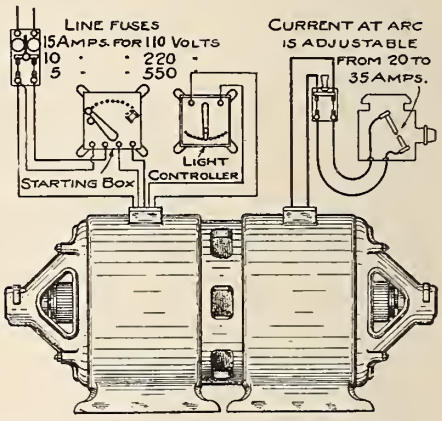

Fig. 11

Figure 10 shows a continuous current transformer constructed by the Fort Wayne Electric Company. This machine is designed to be used on 115, 230 or 500 volts, direct current circuit. It is a two-bearing machine, having two separate magnet frames complete with field windings and two separate armatures mounted on a common shaft. The frames are equipped with special windings so as to give a volt ampere characteristic curve, so that as the current at the arc reduces, the voltage will rise, maintaining stable arc conditions. This result is accomplished without any wasteful lamp steading resistance.

The generator shunt has in circuit a small closed circuit field rheostat. This field rheostat can be adjusted to give different current values at the arc ranging from approximately 20 to 45 amperes, the normal full load rating of the set being 35 amperes and 50 volts. The motor end has three terminals which in installing are treated the same as the ordinary three connections of a standard shunt wound motor; the middle lead being from the field coils, the outside two leads being the main line leads. The generator end has two main leads for connecting to the arc lamp circuit. In addition to these, two smaller leads from the inner bushings are connected direct to the closed circuit rheostat used as above stated for adjusting the current of the arc lamp.

This rheostat is intended to be installed near the operator so the current can be adjusted from time to time for heavy or light films.

This set is so arranged that the mains cannot be short-circuited by putting the carbons of the arc lamp together and holding them there; in fact, this serves to reduce the amount of energy delivered to the motor below the normal full load energy.

Figure 11 shows the Hallberg Economizer for direct current. It is of the motor-generator type and is built to operate a motion picture arc with a current from 20 to 40 amperes, or it will operate a double dissolving lamp with 20 amperes at each arc.

Louis Goodman.—In reply to your query about voltage in the Bronx for the arc lamp of a motion picture machine, I have taken the matter up with the New York Edison Company, and the following is the version of the matter: They prefer to have the arc lamp connected across the two outside wires 220 volt, but it is not compulsory, if you care to connect on the 110-volt wires you may do so.

Long-Life Mercury Arc Rectifier Tube

The serviceability of the mercury arc rectifiers now being extensively used for changing alternating current into direct current for use in moving picture lamps largely depends upon the length of life of the rectifier tubes.

Mr. Sweeney, chief operator of the Five Cent Theater, Market street, San Francisco, Cal., reports an example which is of interest to managers of motion picture theaters. He has been using a mercury arc rectifier for nearly a year, running it thirteen hours a day, beginning at ten o'clock every morning. Up to the last report the rectifier tube has been operated for 4,290 hours without showing any deterioration in the quality of the service.

Mr. Sweeney hopes to break the record with this tube and does not expect to use the extra tube he received with the apparatus for some time to come.

James Williamson, Mexico City, Mexico, writes me saying that they have installed a rotary converter for changing from A. C. to D. C. and asks: How should a rotary converter be started? Are there two windings on the armature, one for alternating and the other for direct current, or is there only one winding for the alternating and direct currents? Why does the direct current ammeter reverse when I start the machine?

Answer:—There are three different methods of starting a rotary converter, according to the nature of the equipment. If a continuous current supply is available, as, for instance, where a storage battery of sufficient size is laid down, or where another rotary converter may be switched on and the machine started up as a continuous current motor, as soon as it is fully up to speed, the alternating current circuit can be closed and the machine synchronized with the supply. With this method of starting it is advisable to have a direct current circuit-breaker connected on the continuous current side, which may be opened at the moment the alternating current circuit is closed so as to prevent a heavy rush of current. Under other circumstances, a small auxiliary motor can be used to speed up the set ready for switching on the alternating current supply. Such a motor would preferably be mounted on the shaft and allowed to run idle under normal conditions. As soon as the set is running up to the required speed, it may be synchronized and the alternating current supply switched on. Of course, if the machine is for working on a polyphase supply, it is a simple matter to start it up through a starter, from the alternating current supply. The continuous current switch must be kept open until the machine is up to speed, so as to start the set on no-load.

The reversing of the ammeter at starting shows that there is a somewhat heavy surge of current on the continuous current side, and the remedy for this is to take care that the set is up to speed and cynchronized before the alternating current switch is closed. There is only one armature winding in a rotary converter, and this is connected both to the alternating current rings and the direct current commutator.

Two Kinds of Business

"What business are you engaged in at present, Smith?"

"Moving pictures."

"Does that pay better than moving furniture and pianos?"

"Much. Only it requires care not to break the glass or injure the frames. And what is yours, pray?"

"Motion pictures. It is a gold mine. You'd better stop moving pictures and tackle motion pictures."

"Guess I will. Strange; most newspapers make no difference between moving pictures and furniture, and motion pictures."

"Ignorance; that is all."

(Continued from page 12.)

her. He looks at it and hands it back to her with a smile. The baby hasn't got diphtheria. Reconcilation.

Curtain.

"THE ETERNAL SAVAGE"

Scene I.

The living room of Doctor Gault, the only physician of the town of Lost Arrow, North Dakota, a few miles from Mandan, during an epidemic of diphtheria. The young Doctor, who is cuddling the baby, is telling his wife that he is called away on a serious case and may be away some time. He tells her that he has found a lot of children in the village with colds, and that she'd better not admit anybody during his absence, as they may be catching, he conceals the true state of affairs, and though he is torn with anxiety, embraces her and the baby cheerfully and departs.

Scene II. The Wife Disobeys Orders.

Mrs. Gault is standing with her baby in her arms watching from the door her husband mount his horse. He waves his hand in adieu and gallops off. Mrs. Gault stands looking after him for some time. She turns to enter the house when a neighbor runs up and begins to talk. Mrs. Gault tells her that her husband has quarantined her against the epidemic of colds in the village. The neighbor says that the quarantine cannot apply to her as she lives out of the reach of infection. They enter the house.

Scene III. The Neighborly Call.

Mrs. Gault and the neighbor sit down in the living room and gossip. They admire the baby, and the neighbor holds it when Mrs. Gault has to leave the room. The neighbor departs, Mrs. G. pets the baby, cuddles it, dances about the room with it in her arms, and finally lays it in a baby carriage, that answers also for a crib. Then she sits at the parlor organ, plays and sings a gay little air. Changes some of the things on the table, primps up a little, admires herself in a small mirror on table, bends over the baby and caresses it as it lies in the carriage.

Scene IV. The Neighbor's Boy is Ill.

The neighbor returns home and finds her boy sitting with his head on the table, very ill, she puts him to bed, covers him and runs back to the Doctor's house.

Scene V. The Fatal Visit.

Mrs. Gault is bending over the carriage. The neighbor enters, enquires anxiously about the Doctor's return, looks at the baby, pats it on the cheek, etc. She admits to Mrs. Gault that her boy has caught the cold that is running through the village. Mrs. Gault suspects no danger, tells her that she will send the Doctor over as soon as he returns. The neighbor departs. Mrs. Gault plays with the baby again and in doing so she discovers he is feverish. She looks very often, anxious for her husband's return, although she doesn't think there is any serious trouble.

Scene VI. The Neighbor's Boy is Worse.

The neighbor returns home and finding her boy desperately ill, becomes alarmed, looks him over carefully, recognizes the dread disease, and careless of the consequences to herself or anybody else, thinking only of her boy, rushes back to the Doctor's house once more.

Scene VII. The Truth.

Mrs. Gault is nursing the baby when the neighbor bursts in, she puts the child in the carriage and wheels him off into another room, behind a large screen. She then turns to the neighbor and tries to quiet her by telling her that colds are never serious, to use home remedies until the Doctor gets home. The neighbor, unable to contain her anxiety any longer, blurts out the epidemic is diphtheria and that her boy has a desperate case of it. Mrs. Gault is stunned for a moment, and then rising to fury at the thought of the danger the neighbor has brought near Baby, she lays violent hands on her and throws her from the room. The baby cries, she goes toward it. She realizes that she has touched the neighbor and halts at the near side of the screen and sings in a heartbroken voice to the baby until it is quiet.

Scene VIII.

The Doctor's patient is better, and he is saying good-bye to the family in the sick room. He starts for home.

Scene IX.

The Doctor is galloping along the prairie road, he catches up with another man on horseback and they ride together, separating at the Doctor's door. The other man keeping on.

Scene X.

The mother, almost mad with anxiety, is watching the clock. She hears the sound of galloping horses, she runs to the window and gazes out into the night. The galloping commences again. She turns from the window in despair. There is a loud knock at the door, she thinks it is the neighbor again. She snatches the Doctor's shotgun from the wall, sees that it is loaded, throws open the window, pokes the gun out and is about to shoot, when the Doctor appears at the window. She drops the gun and staggers back. The Doctor rushes in through the door and catches her in his arms. She tells him the baby is ill and that the neighbor has been in the house. He reproaches her bitterly for disobeying him. She retorts that he ought not to have concealed the real

(Continued on page 20.)

MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

OUT OF THE DEPTHS
Solax Release, March 24

Poor little Harry, left alone in the world by the death of his mother, except for a brutal stepfather who ill treats him, finds himself forced to steal. Having in mind the promise made to his mother that he would lead an honest life, he struggles with the temptation presented to him.

Finally he is forced to participate in a hurglary. The party is interrupted hy the arrival of the police and all make their escape except Harry, who is too small to run so fast. He is caught and sent to the reform school.

Years pass; Harry grows to manhood. He secures a position in the banking house of Henrich Bros., and speedily finds himself rising to the front. Grace Henrich, the daughter of the hanker, falls in love with Harry, and he reciprocates her love.

Having in mind his disgrace, however, Harry feels that he has not the right to press his attentions upon the rich girl. Coming into a saloon one day to collect a check Harry overhears a conversation. He recognizes his stepfather's voice and hears that the members of the gang are planning to rob the very hank that he is employed in.

Rushing from the place, Harry warns the banker. The robbers enter, they are caught, but Harry's stepfather, trying to escape, shoots the banker. Harry interposes and he receives the shot in his own breast.

Later we find Harry convalescent. Grace, accompanied by her father, goes to see him. Joyous to see Grace, Harry quickly lapses into cold silence. Mr. Henrich cannot understand his emotions and asks for an explanation. Harry tells him of his past. The banker is mightily shocked at first, but soon realizes that the boy should not he condemned for the circumstances which forced upon him the position which resulted in his conviction, and he tells Harry that the barrier that he (Harry) has raised in his own mind is no barrier at all.

And all ends happily.

CUPID'S VICTORY
Solax Release, March 22

That the course of true love seldom runs smoothly is well illustrated hy the actions of this release.

Major Calhoun, an aristocratic old Southerner of the now almost defunct type, has a charming young daughter who bears the name of Mada. The Major has been unfortunate in business affairs, and finds himself with a mortgaged estate on his hands, the mortgage being held by old Colonel Brandywine, an apparently sour old gentleman who has loved and lost Cynthia, the Major's sister.

Colonel Brandywine determines to get even with Cynthia by marrying her niece, and forces the old Major to consent by holding the mortgage over his head, which he threatens to foreclose.

The young girl, however, has intentions of her own and she has engaged herself to Fitzhugh whom she is determined to marry. Cynthia overhears the arrangement heing made hetween the Major and the Colonel, and informs Fitzhugh of the Colonel's intentions. The young man promptly proceeds to call upon the Colonel and demand an explanation.

Their interview is interrupted by the arrival of Cynthia, who also has come to remonstrate with him for his lack of manliness. The interview between the Colonel and Cynthia results in a reconciliation, and they determine to help the young lovers out. The next problem is to get the Major, who has forbidden Fitzhugh the house, to give his consent.

They plan that the Colonial will continue his demands for Mada's hand, and that at the marriage ceremony Cynthia will take her place, wearing one of Mada's dresses and her face covered hy a veil.

This is done. The old Major sadly leads his daughter to what he believes to he the sacrifice. After the marriage he lifts the veil for a kiss and to his amazement finds the laughing face of Cynthia before him.

He is so relieved to find that the Colonel has not married his daughter that he readily gives his consent to Fitzhugh, after the deception is explained to him, and all ends happily.

SILAS MARNER
Thanhouser Release, March 31

Silas Marner, in youth, frank and companionable, is driven from his native village because of a false charge against him made by a supposed friend. In bitterness of spirit, he goes away to a section of England where he is unknown, and starts a new life. Being a skillful weaver, he makes money rapidly, and being friendless, hy his own choice, naturally bccomes a miser. He changes his earnings into gold, and keeps the pieces hidden in a cache near the fireplace, so that his treasure is always with him, and can he gloated over in security.

This trait of his led to frcsh trouble, for Dunstan, the worthless son of the Squire, spies upon him one night, and when Silas is out of the house for a few minutcs, Dunstan slips in and takes the one treasure of the friendless weaver. But vengeance overtakes him, and in making his escape in the dark, Dunstan slips and tumhlcs into a nearby stone pit and never has a chance to enjoy his ill-gotten gold.

His loss almost unhinges the reason of Silas. Efforts to find the thief or the money fail, and the old man resumes his daily toil, more unhappy than ever. He falls asleep hefore his fire one night, and dreams that his gold has returned. Opening his eyes he is convinced that his dream is a reality, for there, in the place at the fireside where it should he, is a heap of gold. And he rushes forward to reclaim it.

Again he is doomed to disappointment. The "gold" is the hair of a tiny girl, weakened by hunger and exposure. Her starving mother managed to reach the doorstep of Silas, and there fell dead. Silas finds her too late to aid, and realizes that the child, like him, is alone in the world, despite her "dowry of gold."

Her plight touches the heart of the old weaver, and he welcomes the orphan, determining to devote his life to the care of the child who has so strangely come into his life. And in later years he had occasion to bless his choice. For the little girl, as she grew to womanhood, became a loving and affectionate daughter, and the memory of former sorrow and despair was wiped away.

In the course of time the old stone pit was drained out, and workmen solved the mystery of the robbery that had so long been a matter of gossip and conjecture. Dunstan's skeleton was found, wedged between two rocks, with the bags of money nearby. The adopted daughter brings the money to Silas. For a moment he clutches the coins eagerly. Then he casts them aside, and turns to the girl. He realizes that he is no longer Silas Marner, the miser, but a man who has reason to be happy and grateful. Once he thought that money meant everything in the world, hut now he understands that the shining heap of gold is not worth one strand of his daughter's sunny head. The money is her's, for she is his, and he knows now that love is a treasure no miser can buy.

THE IMPOSTOR
Thanhouser Release, March 28

John Reed, a Northern man who has lived in the South for many years hefore the Civil War, enlisted under the banner of the Confederacy when hostilities hreak out. Outside of his relatives in the North, he is alone in the world except for his daughter, who is just hudding into young womanhood.

May follows her father to the front as a nurse, and when he is mortally wounded, he is brought to the hospital to which she is assigned. A camp follower, a woman, has heen brought there on a charge of being a spy, and hears the dying message of Reed. He leaves his daughter to his cousin, a Northern woman she has never seen, and asks her to be good to May for his sake, as the girl is alone in the world. Later when the two women are alone with the dead, May is struck hy a shell and apparently killed. The spy, seeing a chance to escape, takes the letter from May, disguises herself in the clothing of the supposed dead girl, and goes North, where she is warmly greeted hy the family, who take her for a relative.

May is found hy the Union troops, who have captured the entrenchment, and a doctor discovers that she is not dead. Her recovery is slow, however, and hefore she has a chance to go North, the impostor has firmly settled herself with her cousin, who helieves her implicitly. In fact, she desires to see her married to her son, although he is not inclined to the union.

When May arrives, shabby and pale, she is denounced as an impostor, hoth by her cousin and the usurper. Fortunately for May, however, the child of a neighhor has overheard the impostor offer May a sum of money to go away, and at the same time, helieving herself alone, has sneeringly admitted that she is sailing under false colors, but declares that her victim cannot prove it. May is just about to be turned away a second time, despite the sympathy of John, who is half inclined to helieve her story, when the boy confronts the impostor, and his evidence, together with a severe cross-examination by the indignant John, force her to confess her fraud, and leave the home where she has not right. May kisses the child who has aided her, and is grateful to the man who proved himself a friend when everyone else made haste to disown her.

SWEET MEMORIES
Imp Release, March 27

Edward Jackson, in the exuberance of his joy over his betrothal to Polly Biblett, hrings his hride-to-be to his mother for her blessing. Mrs. Jackson, aged and infirm, is pleased and takes the fair girl in her arms.

The lovers walk away to plan for the future and the venerable woman is lost in thought. Her son has grown to man's estate almost without her knowledge. She has regarded him as a youth. She lapses into reverie and, seated amid the foliage, her mind reverts hack to her youth and it is all recalled.

The story shifts to the scenes of her childhood. She is a babbling infant seated in the sward and heside her is Earl Jackson, who is destined to form a large part of her life. It is a pretty scene. The children are eating sweets, cooing and happy—childish innocence personified.

At fourteen Lettie Terrell gives promise of maturing into a handsome woman, the embodiment of health and happiness. Earl Jackson, now a tall stripling, admires her. She is his first sweetheart, and the old, old story, ever new, is being learned by Lettie. Earl paints her portrait, giving promise of talent as an artist. It is the awakening and Earl musters up courage and kisses her. They walk away happy, oblivious to all else save their great love.

Lettie and Earl are next shown as adults. The course of true love has run smoothly. With others the minuet is danced on the green. The party is a merry one—contented pairs of lovers without a cloud to mar their happiness.

It is quite natural that Earl should have a rival. One develops in the person of Ashton Orcutt, a debonair, handsome, carefree young man who sees Lettie and is smitten. His is the bold impetuous way and he attempts to kiss the girl by force. The opportune arrival on the scene of Earl cools his ardor and a bitter quarrel ensues. In the Colonial days an insult inevitably resulted in a meeting on the field of honor. A challenge is given and accepted. The young men fight and the duello is in accordance with the code. The weapons used are rapiers and Ashton is slightly wounded. Earl is satisfied; the girl being a horrified witness to the affair.

The marriage of Earl and Lettie is a joyous occasion. They go forth from the church with the blessings of their friends—a happy party with a bright future in prospect for the bride and groom. Their union is blessed with a child, Edward, the pride of the doting parents. They are seen walking with the boy and a game is in progress in which the elders are childish in the romp with their offspring.

Sadness comes with the death of the father. The grief of the widow is intense. Edward, a youth of fifteen, is all that is left for the good mother to lean upon. They are led from the bedside by kind friends, bereaved.

The scene reverts to the grove. Mrs. Jackson awakens from her reverie, saddened by the memories. Her face is tearstained and her body convulsed with sobs. Edward and Polly approach and she turns to them joyfully. She again takes the young girl in her arms and clings to her, admonishing Edward to cherish and protect her. Edward is embraced and extolled as a dutiful son. The young people receive the blessings of the parent, the story closing with a pretty tableau.

SO SHALL YE REAP
Imp Release, March 30

Aida Travis, a mother but not a wife, finds her child a burden and, losing her mother's instinct, abandons the infant by secretly placing it on the steps of the dwelling of a wealthy man.

The butler finds it and, fearing to incur the displeasure of his master, carries it to the chapel door of Father Jules, the priest of the parish. The priest, with the assistance of his servant, cares for the little girl, whom he names Vera. The venerable Father is quite awkward in his ministerings to its wants but takes supreme delight and interest in its welfare. The child is christened in due form.

Sixteen years elapse and Vera is a beautiful girl budding into womanhood and is beloved by her companions. She calls on the priest and together they go to service in the chapel.

Aida, who has become a gay woman of the world, has preserved her beauty and she revisits the scenes of her early shame, attired in the height of fashion. She impresses all by her beauty and at a gay party she meets Harlow Ellsworth, a handsome young American, who is touring the country on pleasure bent.

Harlow leaves the party to go on a jaunt and meets Vera as she emerges from the chapel. He is immediately impressed with her beauty and innocence and is interested. He accosts her politely and she is not averse to his well-meant attentions. He walks with her to her home and she poses at the gate for a photograph to add to the collection of the tourist. They part with an implied understanding that they will meet again.

Aida, in her room, is quite overcome with the memories of the past, and her mind reverts to her child, of whom she dare not make inquiries. She produces a shoe worn by Vera and is griefstricken at the sight of a tiny dress which she fondles—all that remain to remind her of the child she abandoned.

Harlow and Vera go rowing and he shows her the proof of her photograph and then tells her he loves her. They halt near Father Jules, who is sleeping. He awakens in time to see them depart, arms entwined, and he is fearful of the consequences, as he has always loved the child.

Father Jules meets Vera and sternly commands the girl to tell him of her love affair. She does so and he is satisfied that the attentions of the young American are honorable, but he is racked with conflicting emotions. He feels the lover should be appraised of the parentage of the girl, and yet he does not wish to ruin her happiness.

Harlow again meets Aida, the mother, with a party of gay companions, and he accidently drops the photograph of Vera. Aida picks it up. She immediately recognizes the likeness of her child and questions Harlow, who does not reply, preferring to keep his secret to himself. She follows him, leaving her companions abruptly, as he goes to join his sweetheart. He finds Father Jules instead, and the venerable man of God conducts him to the chapel and points to the stone on which the child was found sixteen years ago.

As the story is ended Aida approaches and takes in the situation. She intuitively divines that Vera is her daughter. The girl approaches and is sent to Harlow. The mother confesses and the young American is called and presented to her. Harlow denounces her bitterly. She bows her head in assent.

The priest emphatically refuses to allow her to disclose her identity and tells her to seek consolation in God and commends her to the care of two nuns. Vera, not understanding, turns to Harlow, who takes her in his arms. Father Jules enters the chapel following the sorrowing mother.

HER MOTHER'S FIANCEE
Yankee Release, March 31

When a woman, especially a widow, sets her cap for a husband, it's a case of "All is fair in Love and War."

Mrs. Radcliff, a wealthy widow, had been engaged for some years to a titled foreigner. They plighted their troth while the widow was abroad educating her only daughter, and the prospective bridegroom was expected daily to attend his nuptial ceremony.

In honor of his arrival, the widow had prepared a garden fete to introduce her prospective husband to her friends and intimates.

The step from girlhood to womanhood is small—separated only by the difference between short and long dresses and wearing the hair down the back or on top of the head.

When the widow first met the Count her daughter was a little girl in short dresses—now, returning from boarding school with her long skirts she was a very attractive young woman, which the mother with her worldly experience was quick to realize.

A woman may be as old as she looks—but not so when she has a grown up daughter in evidence; therefore, the daughter was requested to temporarily return to her short skirts for the Count's benefit, but when she was also informed that little girls could not attend garden fetes she rebelled, but the mother was obdurate.

The daughter met the Count as a little girl and acted the part, for she played many a kid prank upon the two lovers, much to their embarrassment.

The night of the fete arrived and so did the daughter, but in her proper garb, where she met the Count and where that observant person realized that the daughter was even more attractive than the mother.

Moonlight on the water has been the result of many a romance. That was the result of the Count's and his prospective step-daughter's boat ride on the bay. The Count was a poor oarsman—he lost both oars and the wind and tide did the rest—the couple were marooned on a barren island far from shore and not rescued until next morning. The night was cold. The Count first protected his charge with his coat—then his arms—the result was to be expected, the widow gained a son-in-law instead of a husband.

THE FAKIR'S NEW SERVANT
Great Northern Release, March 25

A trick film of novel character. Our hero becomes the servant of a wonderful magician, and helps him in his entertainments. The magician produces all kinds of astonishing effects with his magic wand. He transforms a rose into a beautiful damsel; he places on the floor two dummy figures which, at his command, become animated and indulge in a boxing and wrestling match. He next produces a table and causes various refreshments to appear on it, and also produces a little party to partake of same, which they lose no time in doing. On the return to the magician's apartment, our hero decides that he would like to see once more the damsel who so recently danced and disappeared. With a few motions of the wand he manages to produce her, but she doesn't like it, and slaps his face. Our friend then thinks he would like to see some boxing, but the boxers pummel him unmercifully. The table cracks him on the head, and then the magician appears. He dismisses him in wrath for interfering with his mysteries after first magically adorning him with a set of donkey ears.

TROUBLES OF A TRIP

The jovial Jones and his wife decide to take a trip to town. Jones makes up his mind to take advantage of the opportunity by having a good time on the sly, and lays his plans accordingly, but unfortunately for him his better half discovers his game, and interferes with a vim, just as he has commenced to enjoy himself in the midst of his hilarious friends.

THE BACHELOR'S OLD MAID
Champion Release, March 29

Because her Uncle Peter never embarked in the matrimonial sea is no argument why she should not do so, opines Mary. So she holds a clandestine meeting with John, a dashing young cowboy, to whom entrance to the house was forbidden.

On coming home unexpectedly, Peter surprises the young couple together, and after dismissing John and forewarning him against repeating the offense on pain of being shot, he tries to please and pacify his wilful niece, whom he really loves, by giving her an agreement, upon her taunt that if he only had a chance he'd marry too, that should Mary ever catch him in a love affair he would grant his consent to her marriage.

Soon the minds of the two young folks set to work planning with the following result: John, who resides in an adjoining town, has a maiden aunt of whom he is very fond, and when he pathetically appeals to her to lend her assistance towards gaining the girl of his heart, the Old Maid acquiesces.

Upon his dictation she pens a love note to old Peter, whom she has never seen, asking him to meet her at a designated hotel, to which John is to take her. Peter receives the note, and becomes all a-flutter in his frantic efforts to dress appropriately and makes off with all speed to the rendezvous.

Soon after his arrival, Peter is badly smitten and falls for the Maid's ardent symptoms of love attack. The affair is capped when she manages to get his ring before he leaves, which is in accordance with the lovers' plans. When John espies the ring, he becomes assured of success, and he has his Aunt taken to Peter's home.

Poor Peter is in a dreadful state when the old maid calls and he attempts a denial of having ever seen her before, but she displays the ring he gave her, which she still wears, and the proof is conclusive. Therefore, in fulfillment of his agreement, he must give his consent to her engagement to John. This he is finally prevailed on to give, and peace is sovereign once more.

(Continued on page 19.)

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

		Feet
Jan.	4—Trials of Tweedledum as a Policeman	500
Jan.	18—Blue Domino's Disguise and Tailor's Queer Ad
Jan.	25—A Wife Calvary and Tweedledum Cash
Feb.	1—Return from Seaside Bathing
Feb.	1—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports
Feb.	8—Tweedledum as a Detective
Feb.	15—The Demon	900
Feb.	22—Redeeming Angel
Mar.	1—Tweedledum, Aviator
Mar.	1—War of the Cossacks
Mar.	8—Prisoner of Caucasus (Dr.)	900
Mar.	15—A Coward (Dr.)

AMERICAN.

Feb.	6—A Pittsburg Millionaire (Dr.)	985
Feb.	9—On the Installment Plan (Com.)	560
Feb.	9—Too Much Aunt (Com.)	430
Feb.	13—Quiet Evening at Home (Com.)	985
Feb.	16—In the Land of Cactus (Dr.)	980
Feb.	20—The College Spendthrift (Dr.)	990
Feb.	23—Strategy (Com.-Dr.)	980
Feb.	27—The Sheriff's Sweetheart (Dr.)	800
Feb.	27—The Silence System (Com.)	200
Mar.	2—College Chums	975
Mar.	6—Hypnotizing a Hypnotist (Com.)	615
Mar.	6—Memories (Dr.)	375
Mar.	9—The Rich and the Poor (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	13—The Penalty (Dr.)
Mar.	16—The Job and the Girl (Com.)
Mar.	16—Do You Know This Woman? (C.)

ATLAS FILM CO.

Nov.	30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.)
Dec.	7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.)
Dec.	14—Brothers (Dec.)
Dec.	21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.)
Dec.	28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)
Jan.	4—A Straw Ride (Dr.)
Jan.	11—A Letter to the Stork (Dr.)
Jan.	18—A City Wolf (Dr.)
Jan.	25—Irish Hearts
Feb.	1—The Surgeon and the Girl
Feb.	1—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.)
Feb.	8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.)
Feb.	15—Coals of Fire

CHAMPION.

Dec.	28—The Golden Gates (Dr.)	950
Jan.	4—Days of the Early West (Dr.)	950
Jan.	11—Bill's Widow (Dr.)	950
Jan.	18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.)
Jan.	18—Why He Went West (Dr.)	950
Feb.	1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.)
Feb.	8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.)	950
Feb.	15—Her Three Proposals (Com.)	950
Feb.	22—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.)	950
Mar.	1—A Western Girl's Choice (Dr.)	950
Mar.	8—The Vindication of John	950
Mar.	15—The Girl and the Oath (Dr.)	950
Mar.	22—The Pay-Roll (Dr.)	950

ECLAIR

Jan.	30—The European Lunch
Jan.	30—The Elusive Robber
Feb.	6—Doctor Against His Will (Dr.)	984
Feb.	13—Mr. Faddleaway is on Strike (Com.)	522
Feb.	13—The Elixir of Bravery	424
Feb.	20—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.)	682
Feb.	20—Hospital for Small Animals (Spec.)	286
Feb.	27—Punch	595
Feh.	27—Beware of the Bomb (Com.)	370
Mar.	6—King Phillip the Fair and the Templars	975
Mar.	13—An Unforeseen Introduction (C.)	470
Mar.	13—A Day of Storms (Com.)	430
Mar.	20—Cain (Dr.)	790
Mar.	20—The Rock Climbers (Scenic)	195
Mar.	27—Hurrah!Hurrah! Let Us Marry!	975
Apr.	3—A Strike in the "Make Young" Business	534
Apr.	3—Mr. Nearsight's Marriage	426

GREAT NORTHERN.

Dec.	31—The Scarecrow (Dr.)
Dec.	31—Bear Hunting (Sc.)
Jan.	7—The Red Light (Dr.)
Jan.	14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.)
Jan.	21—The Trunk Mystery
Jan.	28—Triumph of Intelligence	391
Jan.	28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done (Com.)
Feb.	4—The Criminal Chief's Capture
Feb.	11—Found Again (Dr.)
Feh.	18—The Life of a Muschik
Feb.	18—The False Alarm
Feb.	25—His Great Duty (Dr.)
Mar.	4—The Rival Servants (Dr.)
Mar.	11—The Son of the Executioner (Dr.)
Mar.	18—Between Love and Duty (Dr.)
Mar.	18—Life and People South of the Equator (Scenic)

IMP.

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

		Feet
Jan.	9—Their First Misunderstanding (Dr.)	998
Jan.	12—The Empty Shell (Dr.)	995
Jan.	16—Melody	995
Jan.	19—His First Patient (Dr.)	500
Jan.	19—The Rev. Goodleigh's Courtship (Dr.)	500
Jan.	30—Maid or Man
Feb.	2—The Mix-up
Feb.	2—An Imaginary Elopement
Feb.	6—At the Duke's Command (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	9—The Mirror (Com.)	500
Feb.	9—When the Cat's Away (Com.)	500
Feb.	13—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	16—The Convert (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	20—Pictureland	1000
Feb.	23—Artful Kate (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	27—A Manly Man (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	2—Army Manoeuvres in Cuba (Edu.)	500
Mar.	2—The Dynamiters (Com.)	500
Mar.	6—Tracked (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	9—The Message in the Bottle (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	13—The Secret of the Palm (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	16—The Fishermaid (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	20—In Old Madrid (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	23—The Penniless Prince (Dr.)	1000

ITALA

Dec.	31—A Jealous Wife's New Year Day	500
Jan.	5—Antonio Toscarino	900
Jan.	7—Foolshead as Inspector of Hygiene	900
Jan.	12—Joanna of Braganza	900
Jan.	14—The Recall	900
Jan.	19—A Sad Fascination
Jan.	21—Visit of a Friend
Jan.	26—The Revenging Picture
Jan.	28—My Son Is Guilty
Feb.	2—The Village Coachman
Feb.	4—The Feast of Foolshead
Feb.	9—John Milton	900
Feb.	11—Foolshead at the Kinematograph	900
Feb.	16—The Fatal Charm	900
Feb.	18—Who Will Eat the Turkey	900
Feb.	23—Little Souls	770
Feb.	25—Foolshead Present
Feb.	25—Havana Cigar
Mar.	2—Nini's Doll
Mar.	4—Cato and the Flag
Mar.	4—Foolshead More than Usual
Mar.	9—Nobility (Dr.)	900
Mar.	11—Foolshead Shooting (Com.)	900
Mar.	16—A Dog and Two Mistresses	986
Mar.	18—Foolshead in Soiree (Com.)
Mar.	18—Toto on the State (Com.)

LUX.

By Prieur.

Jan.	13—Bill as a Jockey (Com.)	465
Jan.	13—That Is My Name (Com.)	438
Jan.	22—A Dilemna
Jan.	22—Faithful Furniture
Jan.	27—Willie Goes Cycling
Jan.	27—Infamous Son
Feb.	3—Back to the Old Homestead
Feb.	10—The Orphan's Friend (Dr.)	711
Feb.	10—That Horse Did Run (Com.)	272
Feb.	17—Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Dr.)	639
Feb.	17—Matilda Lovestruck (Com.)	321
Feb.	24—A Child's Prayer (Dr.)	534
Feb.	24—Matilda Chased (Com.)	354
Mar.	3—Jack's Lucky Horseshoe (Dr.)	530
Mar.	3—On Their Honeymoon (Com.)	440
Mar.	6—Angel of the Bowery (Dr.)
Mar.	10—The Senorita's Sacrifice (Dr.)
Mar.	10—Bill in Love Again (Com.)	432
Mar.	10—Jones' Remedy (Com.)	524
Mar.	17—Dogs Not Admitted (Com.)	534
Mar.	17—Bill Has Kleptomania (Com.)	380

NESTOR FILM CO.

Dec.	7—The Conquering Hero
Dec.	14—The Pilgrim (Dr.)
Dec.	21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.)
Dec.	28—Elda of the Mountains (Dr.)
Jan.	4—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.)
Jan.	11—Sleepy Hollow (Dr.)	950
Jan.	18—Their New Minister (Dr.)
Jan.	25—The Man in 23
Jan.	25—New Minister
Feb.	1—The Bridal Trail
Feb.	8—The Transgressor
Feb.	15—The Light Beyond
Feb.	22—His Father's House (Dr.)
Mar.	1—The Professor's Romance (C.-D.)	990
Mar.	8—In the Commissioned Ranks
Mar.	8—In the Commissioned Ranks (Dr.)
Mar.	15—Was It Worth While? (Dr.)
Mar.	22—Could You Blame Him? (Com.)

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

("Bison")

Jan.	6—A Savage Girl's Devotion	900
Jan.	10—An Indian Trapper's Prize	900
Jan.	13—The Creek Claim	900
Jan.	17—Texas Ted's Defense	900
Jan.	20—The Redskin's Secret	950
Jan.	24—Red Man's Wrath	900
Jan.	27—Trials of Bud Brown	900
Jan.	30—A Tough Tenderfoot
Feb.	3—A Squaw's Bravery
Feb.	7—The Half Breed's Plan
Feb.	9—John Milton (Dr.)
Feb.	10—The Salted Mine (Dr.)
Feb.	14—The Deputy's Honor	900
Feb.	17—The Warrior's Squaw	900
Feb.	21—The Way of a Red Man (Dr.)
Feb.	24—The Fate of Joe Dorr (Dr.)
Feb.	28—A Warrior's Faith
Mar.	3—Owanee's Great Love
Mar.	7—Dick Farrell's Prize
Mar.	10—Her Prisoner (Dr.)
Mar.	14—Starlight the Squaw (Dr.)
Mar.	17—Sacrifice of Silver Cloud (Dr.)

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Jan.	31—For My Pal
Feb.	4—His First Case
Feh.	4—The Cattle King of Arizona (Dr.)
Feb.	7—Freddie's New Shoes (Com.)
Feb.	11—A Trip Through Mexico (Sc.)
Feb.	14—An Unforseen Complication (Com.)
Feb.	18—Under Southern Skies (Dr.)
Feb.	21—What Would You Do (Com.)
Feb.	25—Across the Mexican Border (Dr.)
Feb.	28—The Call of the Heart (Dr.)	950
Mar.	4—Home Sweet Home (Dr.)	950
Mar.	7—When Masons Meet
Mar.	7—The Bandit's Surprise
Mar.	11—A Gamble with Love
Mar.	14—Come Back to Erin
Mar.	18—His Mind's Tragedy
Mar.	21—Just Kids (Com.)
Mar.	21—A Trip About Christiana
Mar.	25—Ogallalah (Dr.)

RELIANCE

Feb.	11—The Little Avenger
Feb.	15—Three Men (Dr.)
Feb.	18—Souls Courageous	900
Feb.	22—A Plain Tale
Feb.	25—Ever the Accuser
Mar.	1—The Trump Card
Mar.	4—From the Valley of Shadow
Mar.	8—A Trick of Fortune	900
Mar.	11—Ever the Accuser
Mar.	14—Come Unto Me	900
Mar.	18—At Swords Points (Dr.)
Mar.	22—When Red Turned Gray (Dr.)

REX

Mar.	16—Where the Shamrock Grows (Dr.)	950
Mar.	23—Five Hours
Mar.	30—As Ye Sow

SOLAX COMPANY

Feb.	24—Love's Test (Dr.)
Mar.	3—A Costly Pledge (Com.)
Mar.	8—Out of the Arctic (Dr.)
Mar.	10—Put Out
Mar.	10—Caribou Hunting
Mar.	15—A Midnight Visitor (Com.)
Mar.	17—The Hindu Prince (Dr.)
Mar.	22—Cupid's Victory (Com.)

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Jan.	24—When Love Was Blind	900
Jan.	27—Prompt Payment
Jan.	27—Stealing a Ride	900
Jan.	31—Only in the Way
Feb.	3—Adrift
Feb.	7—Westerner and the Earl
Feb.	10—The Norwood Necklace
Feb.	14—For Her Sake (Dr.)
Feb.	17—Checkmate (Dr.)
Feb.	21—The Patriot Maid of '76 (Dr.)
Feb.	21—For Washington
Feb.	24—A Newsboy Hero
Feb.	28—The Litle Mother (Dr.)
Mar.	3—Stage Struck (Dr.)
Mar.	7—The Mummy (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	10—The Spirit Hand (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	14—His Younger Brother
Mar.	17—Robert Emmett
Mar.	21—Divorce (Dr.)
Mar.	21—Waiting at the Church (Com.)
Mar.	24—The Tramp (Dr.)

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Jan.	30—Taxicab Mystery
Feb.	3—Counting House Mystery
Feb.	6—Foiling the Camorra (Dr.)
Feb.	10—Was She Justified (Dr.)
Feh.	13—Condemned to Death (Dr.)
Feb.	17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.)
Feb.	20—A Life-Time Repentance (Dr.)
Feb.	24—The Woman Who Dared (Dr.)
Feh.	27—All for Gold (Dr.)
Mar.	3—The Abduction of Parson Jones (Com.)
Mar.	6—Angel of the Bowery (Dr.)
Mar.	10—The Senorita's Sacrifice (Dr.)
Mar.	13—The Test of Love (Dr.)
Mar.	17—His Double Treasure (Dr.)
Mar.	20—The Open Gate (Dr.)
Mar.	24—Love's Ebb and Flood (Dr.)

(Continued from page 17.)

The spinster reluctantly returns Peter's ring, but Peter is alive to the occasion and replaces it on ber finger witb a prayer that sbe keep it there and become bis wife. The youngsters strongly urge ber and she is en route at the home of one time single blessedness where we now bid them adieu.

FIVE HOURS

Rex Release, March 23

They sit at the club and talk and chat and discuss and comment, five scions of New York's wealthiest families, and tbe conversation turns to the day's topic, the number of robberies committed by a gentleman burglar wbo bas never been caught. One of the five, Jack Hazard, remarks that it is ratber a simple thing to break into a house and plunder. A heated argument ensues, during the course of which a wager of five hundred dollars is made that Hazard cannot steal anything worth taking within five hours.

Hazard departs upon his mission and pauses at a house close to wbich an officer is serenely snoozing. Jack decides to make tbat particular house the scene of his operations, but he finds it difficult to gain entrance and in his efforts to do so awakens the policeman, who thinks Jack lives there, and Hazard cleverly feigns drunkenness and tbe policeman offers to ring the bell. Jack commands him not to do so as it will awaken his wife, so the obliging officer himself gives Jack a boost througb a window that had been left open. Jack finds himself in the house and at once goes upstairs and slyly enters a room where a girl is slumbering and on the dresser spies ber jewels. Just as be is appropriating them the girl awakens, and for a moment Jack's heart is in his throat, for pointing directly at him is a revolver the girl had drawn from under her pillow. He tries to explain to her that it is only a bet, but she will not listen to him, and insists that he telephone the police that there is a burglar in the house. He is compelled to obey her command at the point of her pistol.

After the unpleasant task is consummated be again attempts to convince her of his identity. He shows her the agreement between him and his fellow clubmen and at last she feels assured that he is really there on a bet, so when the police arrive she tells them that the burglar has escaped and points in the direction he was supposed to have taken, and when she gets back to the room—(now listen, this is interesting)—she finds that Jack has cleverly outwitted her and taken the jewels with him. She realizes that after all he was a burglar and his clever ruse had worked.

In the meantime Jack has returned to the club, shows the jewels, and wins the bet.

The next day he returns the jewels to the puzzled girl and, restoring her possessions, he also offers a little token for the indirect co-operation which aided him to make good—and he is rewarded.

FALL OF TROY

Itala Release, April 15

"Nero and the Burning of Rome" was considered a wonderful subject, but it pales into insignificance when compared with "The Fall of Troy." Imagine, if you can, a colossal staging, with a depth extending to the horizon; thousands of people, splendidly garbed, taking part; settings which fairly take your breath away with their grandeur; the Trojan war, with thousands of armored gladiators on the battlefield; the spectacular attack on the walls of Troy; the ruse of the giant wooden horse, which is captured; the sortie in the dead of night by the soldiers concealed in the animal, and the blood-thrilling, awe-inspiring conflagrations as they set fire to the beautiful city; the terror of the lovely Helen, as her husband, King Menelaus, at the head of the avenging Grecks, destroys the Trojans with fire and sword; the death of Paris, her lover, in a thrilling duel with Menelaus; imagine all this, if you can, and the multitude of accompanying incidents, the chariots, the beautiful women, the artistic statuary and architecture,—all depicted in exquisite photography, tinted and toned beyond compare, and you will secure a faint realization of what this production is.

Helen Is Tempted

Menelaus, king of Sparta, going to join his soldiers, bids an affectionate good-bye to bis wife, Helen, the most beautiful of Greek women. The parting takes place in the gardens of the palace, the imposing structure, witb its massive columns and marble stairs lending a background to a scene of wondrous beauty, with gushing fountains, lovely flowers, strutting peacocks and fluttering birds. Menelaus leaps into his chariot and is seen galloping away through picturesque scenery.

In his absence Paris, the son of Priam, king of Troy, comes on a diplomatic mission to see Menelaus, and falling a victim to her dazzling beauty, devotes his time to impassioned wooing, in which he is assisted by the goddess Venus. A remarkable disappearing vision scene is shown as Venus throws her filmy mantle over the couple, who are next shown being wafted through tbe air in a big shell by the attendants of Venus, the winged nymphs guiding the aerial craft to Troy.

Menelaus Declares War

The flight of Helen is reported to Menelaus by a servant at the palace, who lashes the horses drawing his chariot into frightful speed to reach his master. The grief and rage of Menelaus knows no bounds, and he hastily marshals his army and receives the pledge of his nobles to fight to the death. An immediate march is ordered to the city of Troy.

Helen is being entertained in the palace at Troy by Paris, who has lavished her with attention and has surrounded her by a retinue of beautiful women and singing and dancing girls. A soldier dashes up with news of the attacking forces. The Trojan soldiers advance to meet the Greeks, but are driven behind the walls of Troy—a thrilling scene in which 2,000 fighting men are seen.

The Greeks battle with indomitable fury. Charge after charge is made on the sturdy walls, in the face of an avalanche of huge missiles thrown into their midst by the Trojans. Finally Menelaus, realizing the futility of attempting to storm the massive mounds of stone, plans a ruse. A giant horse is built of wood, inside of which are concealed a score of Greek soldiers. This is left outside the town, and Menelaus withdraws his army.

As the last of the departing Greeks is lost to view, the Trojans venture forth and gaze curiously upon the strange equine. With exultant shouts they take possession, and drag it into the city. To permit its entrance through the gates it is necessary to tear down a portion of the wall. General rejoicing at the lifting of the siege takes place, and the horse is regarded as a trophy of war.

Wearied with the conflict of many days, the town, secure in the departure of its enemies, is wrapped in the arms of Morpheus. Night has cast its darkening mantle upon the earth, through which the moonbeams struggle and weirdly cast their rays upon the gorgeous splendor of Troy. The city sleeps, unmindful that the Greeks are rushing back with murderous hate in their hearts.

Suddenly a trapdoor in the wooden horse opens and a Greek drops to the ground. Another and another follow, till all are assembled. Torches are quickly lighted, and the band separates, a blaze of fire following each one as he wields the flaming brand. Simultaneously the Greeks rush into the city.

A Wonderful Scene

The eyes of the awakening Trojans open upon a most terrifying spectacle. Surprised and scattered, they are met on all sides by fiery flame and relentless sword. The rout is complete. Though fighting valiantly they are no match for the Greeks, and many flee ignominously to save their lives.

The consuming flames burn fiercely, mounting higher and higher, casting a lurid glare upon the awful scene of carnage. In the palace Helen clings tremblingly to Paris, who seeks in vain for means of egress. The royal guards, making a last stand in the reception chamber, are ruthlessly cut down.

The intense heat disintegrates the stone buildings and they crumble to the earth. Immense columns sway majestically and come crashing down. Groping and stumbling through the smoke-filled corridors, Paris, supporting Helen, makes his way to the ground floor, and instantly a hundred swords seek his heart. Menelaus utters a sharp command, staying every hand, and himself engages Paris. The duel is spectacular, the men moving with lightning-like rapidity, their short, heavy swords falling in quick succession on each other's shields. At last Paris falls, and with a beseeching cry Helen, the faithless, leaps to her husband's arms. Disdainfully he thrusts her from him, and the picture ends with Helen weeping at the side of her slain lover, while Menelaus gazes upon her contemptuously.

2 EVERY WEEK

Solax

2 EVERY WEEK

GOOD COMEDY EVERY WEDNESDAY — WEDNESDAY and FRIDAY — BIG FEATURES EVERY FRIDAY

EXCHANGE MEN AND EXHIBITORS ARE NOW AWAKENING TO THE SUPERIOR QUALITY OF THE SOLAX FILM AND ARE RAPIDLY GETTING ON THE LIST OF
THE BEST FILM MADE
ARE YOU GETTING TWO SOLAX EVERY WEEK?
REMEMBER--All Our Films Are Tinted and Toned Throughout

RELEASES
WED., MARCH 22 "CUPID'S VICTORY"—(Comedy)
FRI., MARCH 24 "OUT OF THE DEPTH"—(Drama)
WED., MARCH 29 "A PACKAGE OF TROUBLE" (Comedy) and "SHE WAS NOT AFRAID" } Split Reel
FRI., MARCH 31 "THE MILL OF THE GODS"—(Drama)

Solax Company 147 Fourth Avenue New York

(Continued from page 15)

nature of the disease. He leaves her and examines baby; returns looking grave. The neighbor appears at the open window, and pleads desperately for him to come to her boy. He scolds her, tells her that he'll come, drives her away from the window and slams it shut. He looks in the medicine case, sees that there is only one dose of the antitoxin in the tube. Looks in the bureau where he keeps his reserve. The wife tells him that the extra tube is broken. He puts his pocket tube in his small case and makes for the door. The mother throws herself before it and pleads with him not to take the last dose of medicine to another child while baby is in danger. He insists that he must and attempts to pass her. She dashes the case from his hand and crushes it under her foot, then she flings open the door and motions for him to go. He looks at her in horror for a second and goes slowly out. Mrs. Gault stands for a second, then runs to the baby, picks it up and rushes out with it.

Scene XI. She Goes to Mandan.

Mrs. Gault comes to the door with the baby in her arms in time to see the doctor gallop furiously away. She is in despair. A buggy driven by a boy passes; she runs in front of it, stops it and, in spite of the terror-stricken boy, climbs into it and forces him to drive her to Mandan at top speed.

Scene XII. Mandan. Reconciliation.

The drug store. The doctor is about to leave with a fresh supply of the medicine. He is covered with mud and the horse is terribly blown. The buggy drives up and Mrs. Gault runs into the store. The doctor takes the child from her and looks at it closely as does another doctor who is in the store. After a minute they smile and return the baby to the mother. "It hasn't got diphtheria." Reconciliation. Curtain.

This will be followed the next three issues with copyrighted scenarios entitled

"A Moving Picture Romance"
"A Pipe Dream"
"A Colonial Romance"

SEEN ON THE CURTAIN

Walton

The releases of the last month or so have been marvels of beauty, works of art in every sense of the word. Details attended to, clean stories cleverly staged and presented by actors and actresses of the highest merit. The manufacturers are rising to the occasion; the whole industry advancing by bounds. The bud is opening as a perfect flower, a thing of beauty and a joy. The American makers are simply turning out wonderful pictures. The films noted below will show what I mean.

Who Killed Max?—(Pathe).—As delightful a piece of nonsense as Max has achieved of late. I, only I, don't like death—mockery, even if a genius, like Max, does it.

Remorseful Son—(J. P. Morgan Co).—Show better work; you are capable; this is not one of your best.

The Two Pigeons—(Lux).—There is no "lux" in this.

The Price of Victory—(Edison).—One of Wierty's series of pictures copied.

Love's Test—(Solax).—A very old story, very well photographed and very well acted.

A Newsboy Hero—(Thanhouser).—A story out of the common life that made the people weep. A simple story but a strong one; a story man, without thought of race, will call it a "Heart" yarn.

Checkmate—(Thanhouser).—Two men love a girl, one a baron the aunt favors. The baron with the aunt's connivance arranges an assault, and so the other man is convicted. Girl picks up a man off the street and secures lover's release, and baron's conviction. Good teaching as to woman's "class," but as to details sadly lax.

The Fatal Charm—(Itala).—A man abandons his wife and child and follows an actress who turns him down afterwards, as usual, hard. He returns to his home repentant and a child tries to make peace. The actress who acts the mother has not scope for her splendid talents. The finale is "up in the air."

The Convent—(Imp).—I have no use for sectarian films. With the profoundest respect for any man's religious opinions, be he Jew, Mohammedan, Buddhist, Shintoist, or any of the variegated group called Christians—of which I am one—I do not believe in trying to down an audience's version that conversion means adherence to a faction.

The League of Mercy—(Vitagraph).—A band of women supposed to do good. So far as the film is concerned the result is that one of them finds her fiance is a seducer. According to our present state of morality that would appear not to need proving by a "League."

Getting Even—(Lubin).—Man is served with the ordinary café chop, uneatable. Gets his revenge by sending—through a sandwich man—a crowd of toughs to a free meal at that café. The situation is full of merriment.

Schultz Has Small Pox—(Lubin).—Schultz is a German with the usual idiosyncrasies of pronunciation as to box, This, with a newspaper scare about small pox, is the subject of this laughable and well-acted endeavor.

The Buccaneers—(Selig).—Man and wife, etc., are captured by pirates. He, through a mate of the pirates, gets free and a warship spells deliverance. As to vigor and action the film is A-1, but 'tween decks is simply straight "punk." After seeing the film I read the synopsis and that is a string of utter balderdash. Historically and in every other way.

The Broken Trail—(Kalem).—For mountain scenery beyond praise. The story is of two boys separated by an Indian raid, who afterwards love the same girl. One unwittingly lures the other to "a broken trail." In the end one goes mad in the desert, whilst the other gets the girl. Scenery superb; story weakly weak. Kalem so far as scenario is concerned had better recognize the whole round world is not a capital I.

An Unforeseen Complication—(Powers).—Turns upon the idea that hypnotism may cause souls to change bodies—when the two souls are a college boy and a college professor the complications are self-evident and bring out shouts of laughter.

The Reformation of the Suffragettes—(Gaumont).—A purely delightful piece of drollery—but not to be shown when militant hermaphrodites rage.

Getting Sister Married—(Essanay).—Just about as clean and true a piece of fun as I've met lately. The old-maidenly inclined sister, who is to be married first, is just a peach. I can't describe this film without writing the story. This I can say, the exhibitor who runs this knows his business.

Legally Dead—(Pathe).—A story of storm and duress. On the film there is volcanic eruption and earth eructations. The ordinary man and woman. She expects to get, he's dead and so no "get." Meanwhile he gets out, marries another girl and then recovers his memory—first wife says—not much, "Where's your dough." Goes back to the other one, married whilst unconscious and there you are! Dope it out. Moral on the top geratum.

Under Southern Skies—(Powers).—One of the very worst things it has been my ill luck to endure. The staging is a disgrace; the acting puerile. For a firm like Powers to allow such "rot" to appear is a mystery.

Who Will Eat the Turkey?—(Itala).—Just one big, long laugh. The staging and the photography is Itala's and that's praise not to be beaten.

Saul and David—(Gaumont).—A stupid ill-staged scrap. Such a travesty ought never to have been allowed to disgrace the name of Gaumont. The vilely painted background is not Hebraic, but mock early Arosyrian. As to the David see.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE SALES

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports along with the sale of many of the Standard Hallberg Economizers during the past week, he is selling a number of ventilating fans. He shipped Motiograph M. P. Machines to the Olympic Theater, Cincinnati, O., and to Bennet & Bryant, Lawrence, Mass. Powers No. 5 to Star Theater, Meriden, Conn., and to N. B. Kalli, New Brunswick, N. J. The Bijou Circuit Co. are replacing rheostats and other current savers in all their houses with the Hallberg Economizer.

Sioux City, Iowa.—O. E. Dunn is preparing to open a new vaudeville and moving picture theater at 310 Jackson street.

Wabasha, Minn.—W. R. Chamberlain has decided to open a new moving picture theater here.

Batavia, O.—Mr. G. Tallman has leased the Wonderland Theater here, and is now in possession.

Clarksville, Mo.—Charles Fern is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

WANTED TO BUY OR LEASE MOTION PICTURE THEATRE

in or near New York. Must show returns and be reasonable. Give full particulars. Principals only. Address "Motion Theatre," care of Moving Picture News, 30 West 13th Street, New York City.

SALES COMPANY

The following films have been released from March 20th to April 5th inclusive hy the Motion Picture Distrihuting & Sales Co.:

Mar. 20—In Old Madrid (Imp).....
Mar. 20—Field of Honor (American).....
Mar. 20—The Open Letter (Yankee).....
Mar. 21—Was He Justified (Bison).....
Mar. 21—Divorce (Thanhouser) .....
Mar. 21—Waiting at the Church (Than.)...
Mar. 21—Just Kids (Powers).....
Mar. 22—Tweedledum's April Fool Joke (Amhrosio) .....
Mar. 22—Could You Blame Him? (Nestor)..
Mar. 22—The Payroll (Champion).....
Mar. 23—The Penniless Prince (Imp).....
Mar. 23—The Talesman (American).....
Mar. 23—Waiting for Midnight Express (Itala) .....
Mar. 23—Five Hours (Rex).....
Mar. 24—Love's Ehh and Flood (Yankee)..
Mar. 24—The Cowhoys Waif (Bison).....
Mar. 24—The Tramp (Thanhouser).....
Mar. 24—Out of the Depths (Solax).....
Mar. 24—Cowboy's Friendship (Lux).....
Mar. 24—Edith has Some Sport (Lux).....
Mar. 25—Trip Through Christiania (Powers)
Mar. 25—If It Ever Were Thus (Reliance).
Mar. 25—Toto Wants to Get Thinner (Itala)
Mar. 25—Queen of the Sea (Itala).....
Mar. 25—Faker's New Servant (Com.) (Gt. Northern) .....
Mar. 25—Troubles of a Trip (Great Nor.)..
Mar. 27—Sweet Memories (Imp).....
Mar. 28—An Indian Nemesis (Bison).....
Mar. 28—The Imposter (Thanhouser).....
Mar. 29—Pallid Hues in Clouded Skies (Rel.)
Mar. 29—A Glimpse of Neapolitan Camorra (Amhrosio) .....
Mar. 29—The Bachelor's Old Maid (Champ.)
Mar. 30—So Shall Ye Reap (Imp).....
Mar. 31—The Red Avenger (Bison).....
Mar. 31—Silas Marner (Thanhouser).....
Apr. 1—Till Death Do Part (Reliance)....
Apr. 1—Foolshead Goes to See a Cockfight
Apr. 3—A Strike in the "Make-Young" Business (Eclair) .....
Apr. 3—Mr. Nearsight's Marriage (Eclair).
Apr. 5—Rickshaw the Detective (Reliance).
Apr. 5—Summer Skies (Reliance).....
Apr. 5—The Price He Paid (Champion)...

INDEPENDENT FILMS

The following films have been released week of March 13th hy the Empire Film Co., 150 East 14th Street, New York:

Mar. 13—Secret of the Palm (Imp)..... 994
Mar. 13—The Penalty (American).....1000
Mar. 13—A Stormy Day (Eclair)..... 428
Mar. 13—An Unforeseen Introduction (Ecl.) 467
Mar. 13—Test of Love (Yankee)..... 945
Mar. 14—Starlight the Squaw (Bison)..... 965
Mar. 14—Come Back to Erin (Powers).... 898
Mar. 14—His Younger Brother (Than.)..... 985
Mar. 15—A Coward (Ambrosio)..... 599
Mar. 15—A Country Man's Adventures (Ambrosio) 321
Mar. 15—The Girl and the Oath (Champ.).. 985
Mar. 15—Was It Worth While (Nestor)... 995
Mar. 15—Come Unto Me (Reliance).....1000
Mar. 15—A Midnight Visitor (Solax)..... 767
Mar. 15—Highlands of New Brunswick (Solax) 147
Mar. 16—Do You Know This Woman? (Am.) 500
Mar. 16—The Job and the Girl (American) 500
Mar. 16—The Fisher Maid (Imp)..... 990
Mar. 16—The Dog and Two Mistresses (Itala) 950
Mar. 16—Where the Shamrock Grows (Rex).1000
Mar. 17—A Sacrifice of Silver Cloud (Bison) 995
Mar. 17—Bill Has Kleptomania (Lux)..... 500
Mar. 17—Dogs Not Admitted (Lux)..... 500
Mar. 17—A Hindu Prince (Solax)..... 975
Mar. 17—Robert Emmet (Thanhouser).....1000
Mar. 17—His Double Treasure (Yankee)... 990
Mar. 18—Between Love and Duty (Gt. Nor.) 600
Mar. 18—Life and People South of Equator (Gt. Northern) 400
Mar. 18—Foolshead in Soiree (Itala)..... 925
Mar. 18—His Mind's Tragedy (Powers)....1000
Mar. 18—At Sword's Point (Reliance).....1000

PATENTS

"BE INDEPENDENT."

Moving Picture Devices a Specialty.

Charles Lowell Howard

PATENT ATTORNEY

706-707-708 M'Gill Bldg., WASHINGTON, D. C.

Over Six Million Feet of Moving Picture Film has heen through the MORTIMER FILM CLEANER
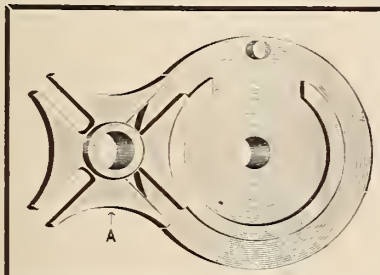
the past month. How do we know? By the numher of cleaning pads we have shipped to the exchanges during that time.
If you send for our supplement just off the press you will see who are cleaning their films with the little wonder of the moving picture world.
MORTIMER FILM CLEANING CO.,
Portland, Maine.

Announcement, Advertising, Travelogue, Recitation
and slides for every purpose made to order
GEO. J. GOLDTHORPE & CO.
244 West 14th Street New York

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
REPAIRED
by skilled mechanics at short notice and reasonable prices. Work guaranteed.
Supplies of All Kinds.
CHAS. E. DRESSLER,
388 2nd Ave., City, near 23rd St.
Take elevator.



Machines Repaired
For a clear, sharp and flickerless Picture get Lavezzi's Improved Star Cam and Sprocket, $12.00.
Satisfaction guaranteed.
Testimonials.
E. W. LAVEZZI
3042 N. Ashland Ave., CHICAGO

THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR
Sanitary, Space-saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W
HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

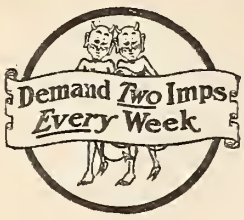
NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, pays up to $50 a week for good work. Men and women. We teach you and help sell plots. Demand unlimited. Send for particulars. ASS'D M. P. SCHOOLS, 908 Chicago Opera House Bldg., Chicago.

HALLBERG
THE "ECONOMIZER MAN"
SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.
I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.
Free Catalogue No. N 1

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.

Start on a Sound Basis

Get a machine that can DO the work—and do it now—and to-morrow—and for a good long time to come.
Let the idea about the original machine go.
BE MODERN—UP-TO-DATE—GET MACHINE WISE by installing the modern machine—THE MOTIOGRAPH.
This is the day of progress—Time keeps on coming and going—and old-fashioned machines must be replaced with the Motiograph—the most durable — simple — accessible motion picture machine on the market—and the machine that projects the best picture. Manufactured and jobbed by
THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 571 West Randolph St., CHICAGO
FOR SALE BY DEALERS EVERYWHERE



For the "Steenth" Time We Say You Can't Go Wrong

By demanding as regularly as clock work TWO IMPS EACH WEEK. Don't let your exchange feed you any longer with promises—make it either "put up" or "shut up." And if you succeed in getting what you're paying for—then work your "Imp Day" for all it is worth.

"Sweet Memories"

Release of Monday, March 27.

One of the most fascinating pictures you have yet seen. Announcement of plighted troth recalls life story of mother. who lapses into a reverie, and her past is vividly portrayed from the cradle to old age. A pretty romance is enacted with all its attendant features. The painting of the portrait—the betrothal—the dancing of the minuet—the duel —the marriage—happy motherhood—illness and death, and love and devotion of dutiful son—all combine to tell a story replete with pathos and incidents. It is a romance that appeals and your patrons will like it.

"So Shall Ye Reap"

Release of Thursday, March 30.

Unnatural mother abandons her child in its infancy. It is cared for by a kind priest, its identity being unknown. Later the foundling develops into beautiful womanhood. She is loved by a worthy young man who takes her photograph. The mother is dissipating with gay companions, and discovers the picture. She finds the child. The just priest insists that the mother's identity be kept secret from the daughter. The mother is commanded to seek solace in solitude, and is led away by nuns to the seclusion of the convent to pay the penalty of her sins. A strong story with the daughter happily mated to the man of her choice, ignorant of her parentage.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America, 102 West 101st Street, New York, Carl Laemmle, President. All Imp Films Are Sold Through the Sales Co. Two each week.

Wake Up Mr. Licensed Exhibitor!

Don't Play Rip Van Winkle any longer. See what's doing on the independent side of the fence. Quit feeding Genl. Flimco at $2 per. Look around you. Open your eyes. Wake up, wake up! I hope you're not like the fellow who once said, "I can be convinced all right. but you bring me the man who can do it." I, Carl Laemmle, want to convince you that I can give you better films for the same money than you ever had in your life. I mean it. And I'm dead anxious to "show you." I have the most perfect looking system in America today. And the most perfect shipping system. The best repair department. And the only cleaning department. All this is the result of 5 years' experience — hard work—constant study how to improve. And with all these advantages to begin with I am acknowledged the heaviest buyer in the market to-day. After all this, doesn't it stand to reason that I am your man?

Yours for business,

CARL LAEMMLE.

President,

The BIGGEST and BEST film renter in the World,

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:
196-198 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
4th Floor, Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam Street, Omaha, Nebr.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone: 3790 Oxford

A Comical Western Champ

It's as vigorous as the March Wind. So hilariously boisterous as to fatten the Lean.

Two Champs Every 7 Days

Our Initial Monday Release!

"With 'Stonewall' Jackson"

RELEASED APRIL 17TH, 1911.

A Tale of Historic, Virginian Valour.

This is a subject you can and should feature. Special advertising matter will be mailed free.

THE CHAMPION FILM CO.
MARK M. DINTENFASS, Gen'l Mgr.,
No. 12 East 15th St., N. Y. C.

Bing!

Another victory for the INDEPENDENTS.

Swaab is made Sole Agent in Philadelphia for Genre Motion Slides. Special slide carriers accommodate all song slides. Send for price list. Be first in the field.

SWAAB FILM SERVICE CO.
Not in the Trust
338 SPRUCE ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

TWO BERMUDA YANKEES

MONDAY, MARCH TWENTY-SEVENTH
"TOM & JERRY"
The Friendship of Two Old Men

FRIDAY, MARCH THIRTY-FIRST
"HER MOTHER'S FIANCEE"
How a Mother obtained a Son-in-Law instead of a Husband

YANKEE FILM COMPANY
344 East 32d St., New York, N. Y.

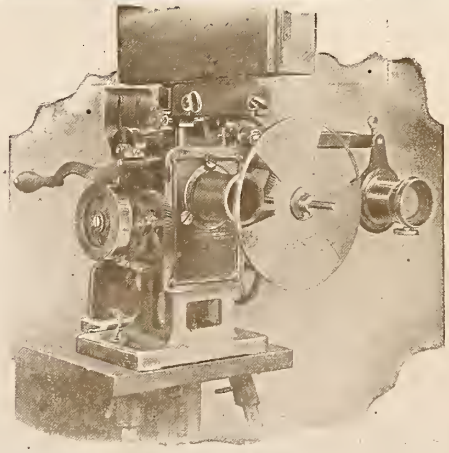
EVERY EXHIBITOR reads the Moving Picture News. ADVERTISEMENTS BRING RESULTS

POWER'S No. 6

When you buy a Moving Picture Machine. or Current Saver

Remember "Power's" Means Perfect in Moving Pictures

Send for Catalog D



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York
"For thirteen years the leading makers of moving picture machines"

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

American Releases

TWO REELS EACH WEEK

MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS

TROUSER SKIRT STIRS 3 CITIES; ONE IN CHICAGO
New York, Feb 25.—The appearance a young blonde on the Brooklyn bri blocked traffic for its entire length
EGGS GREET WEARER OF TROUSERS SKIRT
Paris Mob Pelts Helpless Until Police Aid Her to cape in Automobile.
DEALERS FEAR FOR MODE
MOB PELTS WEARER IN PARIS.
PARIS, Feb. 24.—Riots and disturbances
NEW SKIRT BLOCKS BROOKLYN BRIDGE
First New York Woman to Appear in Bifurcated Garment Stops Traffic.
CAUSE RIOTS IN EURO
HAREM SKIRT JEERED, THEN LAUDED, IN PARIS
Fifty Young Women Cause Much Excitement at Races Wearing Trousers Dress.
SKATERS FAVO
Skirt Riots in Madrid.
MADRID, Feb. 24.—Two women belonging
HAREM SKIRT WHICH BLOCKS N. Y. TRAFFIC AND AMUSES CHICAGO
HAREM APPEARS IN CHICAGO.
A young woman wearing a harem skirt was sent out yesterday afternoon in Chicago to advertise an A attracted a

Warren Kerrigan and Dott Farley in "The Harem Skirt."

The Harem Skirt

TOPICAL COMEDY

The funniest funny film ever released. The biggest crowd-getter possible. Arrange for a two-days' booking—IN ADVANCE. You will not be able to handle the crowds otherwise. Start advertising this American Feature NOW and GET THE MONEY.

RELEASE DATE THURSDAY, MARCH 23RD

The Field of Honor

COMEDY

A full reel comedy of exceptional merit in point of its laugh-making possibilities. Actually there's a laugh in every foot.

RELEASE OF MONDAY, MARCH 20TH

Don't Forget

BOOK—In Advance
ADVERTISE—In Advance
ASK FOR—In Advance

THE HAREM SKIRT

The funniest funny film ever released

American Film Mfg. Co., Bank Floor Ashland Block CHICAGO

2W12

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 13

April 1st
1911

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

SCENE FROM
"THE SCARLET LETTER"
"IMP" COMING RELEASE

GREAT NORTHERN

THE "KING PIN" OF QUALITY FILMS

The Bear-oo-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, APRIL 1st

A VICTIM OF HIS DOUBLE

Season's greatest detective story. A film of exceptional interest and fascination containing many exciting and thrilling scenes.

BOOK THIS FEATURE IN ADVANCE

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, APRIL 8th

A CONFIDENCE TRICK

Another big detective film that will make a strong impression on every audience. Don't miss it.

COMING!! SHAKESPEARE'S "HAMLET." A MASTERPIECE OF CINEMATOGRAPHY

ALL FIRST CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT.

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone: 3790 Oxford

CHAMPION FILM

Two Every Seven Days

"Men of the West"

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 12th, 1911

Charles closes a cattle deal in New York, stopping at the buyer's home. He becomes ensnared in his host's daughter's charms, but Charles already has a little wife and home in Colorado—and

MR. EXHIBITOR—JUST GET IT AND LET YOUR PATRONS SEE THE OUTCOME

MONDAY AND WEDNESDAY

"With 'Stonewall' Jackson"

MONDAY, APRIL 17th, 1911

A Virginian wife's sacrifice inspires her craven husband to dauntless courage. His feats of bravery under the redoubtable "Stonewall" Jackson arouse and fire American patriotism. Convince yourself and then your exchange.

"A Half Breed's Courage"

Wednesday, April 19th, 1911
replete with the dash of the West.

THE CHAMPION FILM CO.

MARK M. DINTENFASS, Gen'l Mgr.,
12 East 15th St., N. Y. C.

Are You Getting a Rex Film Every Week?

YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO MISS A SINGLE ONE!

THEY'RE GREAT! THEY'RE DIFFERENT!

THE HEIRESS

RELEASED, THURSDAY, APRIL 6TH IS A STRONG COMEDY DRAMA

It shows the cleverness of an heiress in discovering true love, and that feigned. It's a crackerjack story and you'll like it.

SALES CO.'S BUSINESS INCREASING—Rex's THE ANSWER

START BOOKING "THE LITTLE MAJOR"

A REAL REEL—RELEASED THURSDAY, APRIL 13TH

REX

Rex Motion Picture Mfg. Co.

573 Eleventh Avenue,
New York City.

TWO MORE WORLD TOUR YANKS

MONDAY, APRIL 10th

"An Adventure in Sicily"

An American Among the Brigands

FRIDAY, APRIL 14th

"Willie's Winning Ways"

A Story of the Bermuda Derby

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

344 East 32d St., New York, N. Y.

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES COMPANY

Motion Slides

A DECIDED NOVELTY AND WE ARE SOLE AGENTS FOR THIS CITY.

Genre Motion Slides

FOR SALE ONLY BY

SWAAB FILM SERVICE CO.

Not in the Trust

338 SPRUCE ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

POWER'S—THE MAGIC NAME

Real, hard, practical advantages for the exhibitor are revealed in Power's Cameragraph No. 6. This may sound like fiction, but the experience of fifteen hundred exhibitors proves beyond contradiction that Power's No. 6

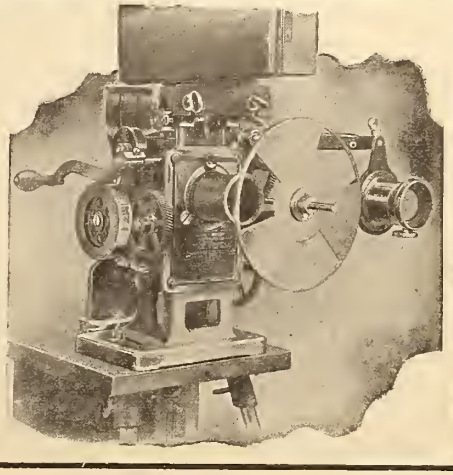
Projects an absolutely steady picture without a trace of flicker

Is the most substantially constructed projecting machine in the world (the only one absolutely guaranteed)

It runs smoother, quieter and longer than any other machine.

There are other reasons why you should use it, but aren't these enough?

Just think it over and you'll agree with us that it "Pays to Purchase a Power's." Full information cheerfully given. Write us for Catalogue D.



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

For thirteen years the leading makers of moving picture machines.

CINES COMPANY OF ROME

STUDIOS AND FACTORIES ROME AND PADOVA

BRANCHES AT THE FOLLOWING CITIES

LONDON	18 Charing Cross Rd.
PARIS	11 Rue St. Augustin
BERLIN	238 Friedrich Strasse
MOSCOW	3 Glenischewsky Pereul
BARCELONA	59 Paseo de Gracia
RIO DE JANEIRO	A. Sestini
BUENOS AYRES	A. Sestini
CARACAS	Levy & Co.

AND THE FOLLOWING AGENCIES

MILAN	ST. PETERSBURG	VIENNA
TURIN	ODESSA	AMSTERDAM
GENOA	KEIFF	COPENHAGEN
NAPLES	VLADIVOSTOCK	STOCKHOLM
BOLOGNA	MARSEILLES	BUDA PESTH
VENICE	BRUSSELS	FRANKFORT
DRESDEN	LILLE	LEIPSIC
TOKIO	SYDNEY	CAPE TOWN
JOHANNESBURG	LIMA	HAVANA

CAPITAL

PREFERRED STOCK - -	Lire 2,000,000
ORDINARY STOCK - -	3,750,000
FULLY PAID UP	Lire 5,750,000

BRANCH FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

TEMPORARY ADDRESS

445 Broome St., Cor. Broadway, NEW YORK CITY

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

European Agents: INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., Breams Building, Chancery Lane, London, E. C.

Chicago Representative: J. J. Sullivan. 866 Graceland Ave. 'Phone Graceland 5053

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV April 1, 1911 Number 13

Notes of the Week

OUR FRONT COVER ILLUSTRATION

"Imp" this week holds the center with a picture from their shortly-to-be-released film "The Scarlet Letter." Who among book lovers has not read Hawthorne's story? It is one of touching pathos, and we offer a suggestion to exhibitors, which we hope they will adopt. Or perhaps the "Imp" Company may do it. Get a lantern slide made with the following wording:

Coming Shortly
Great "Imp" Release,
"Scarlet Letter."
Get a copy of the book from the Free Library and you will better understand the story.

Flash this on between films and an interest will be created that should pack your houses.

While on this subject Messrs. Pathe sent us a sample slide which is unique; it consists of a colored piece of gelatine on which is printed a title and other matter. This, placed between cover glasses and bound, makes a very superior slide.

Imp folk tell us "Scarlet Letter" is going to be a record film subject. They are sparing no pains to make it absolutely perfect in all respects.

OUR SPRING NUMBER.

We have, during the past four years, been frequently urged to bring out special issues of The Moving Picture News, and refused. We now make our first venture with a spring number to be issued April 15th. Special circulars have been sent to every manufacturer who caters to the industry in any shape or form. None have been left out. This is the first time in the history of Cinematography in America that a paper specially devoted to the industry has attempted so bold a move. We have always been in the forefront, and have become known throughout the world as the leading exponent of the art in America. It is our endeavor to make this issue one so representative in character that the whole realm of Cinematography may learn what America is doing, who its manufacturers are, what they have accomplished, and what they desire. Throughout the United States we have some 12,000 interested readers, and the largest list of foreign subscribers. We want every one on this list to get a copy, and therefore ask the support of all. Illustrated articles are desired, and have been requested, from every film maker. The response, so far, to our circular has been very encouraging. Articles from various standpoints are to hand. The main support—Advertisers—give us results more than we anticipated. Like Oliver Twist, we want more. We want every one in, so that every exhibitor, every man interested in Cinematography may know what the industry in America stands for. Our venture is for the whole trade. Will the whole trade give us their support?

MOVING PICTURE HOUSES IN NEW YORK SHOW VAST IMPROVEMENT

The long-looked-for report of Commissioner Fosdick has been presented to the Mayor of New York, and on the whole is very encouraging to the motion picture industry, more especially to those exhibitors who worked so loyally to bring about better results. The Moving Picture News also takes a litt'e of the credit. Four years ago we urged the exhibitors to stand up and demand the withdrawal of films that were in any sense displeasing to their patrons. The New York Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association found their protests were not heeded, that their just demands for clean films were ignored by those manufacturers who thought more of the filthy lucre than the decency of subject. Protest after protest was made to the importers of French films, who were the greatest offenders, but they took no heed, but spread broadcast films that all in the trade acknowledged were indecent. We wrote article after article, and for a time it seemed useless to waste time. Then the exhibitors rose up in their wrath and publicly protested against offending the good taste of Nickelodia. They called to their aid The People's Institute, who, they felt, were a power to influence the press, and enlisting the support of the late Mr. Sprague Smith, who was ever in the forefront of social reform, they voted all their available funds (some $1,000) to rouse public sentiment on their side. Our readers know the result; a private censorship committee was appointed and accomplished good results. The decease of our friend, Mr. Sprague Smith, somewhat crippled the usefulness of this censorship board. The Patents Company got hold of it, to a certain extent, and while it is doing fair work it does not go far enough. The boards of Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco, and other centers, supported by the legislature, are far superior to New York. Many films passed in New York are rejected in other cities. We hope for a State-appointed censorship board, one that will be more far-reaching than a private charity subscription subsidized one can hope to attain to—a commission or board which will take over the seven departments and blend them into one, so that the motion picture industry, as we pointed out recently, may secure just legislation for itself.

We do not want to detract from the present Board any praise that is justly its due; it has done good work, but it has not the power a legislative body would have. Our ideal of a censorship commission is on the lines of Chicago. We commend the suggestion to the members of the New York Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association to act upon at their next meeting, when (after fully discussing Commissioner Fosdick's report) their 190 members should appoint a legislative committee to draw up suggestive measures, and get them before the Assembly at Albany. On another page will be found the full text of the report, which we commend to the careful perusal of all interested, as being one of the most fair, unbiased and analytical statements for moving picture shows we could desire to read. Commissioner Fosdick has done his work well and is to be congratulated on the results, and fully merits the unstinted praise of New York exhibitors.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR.

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

As I walked along the street last evening, near my home, I passed a little boy who was smoking a cigarette. He was a very little boy to be doing anything of that sort. I am sure he was not more than twelve years old, if he was that. His face was pale and thin, and as he saw me giving him more than a passing glance, he hung his head and slunk behind the other boy who was with him, hiding the cigarette down by his side.

Poor little chap! I felt sorry for him. Oh, what a need the little children have of friends—real friends. The children are not responsible for the degenerating habits which prevail among the poorer, uncared-for members of the child world.

Our Creator gave us a beautiful world to live in. He made it a garden of flowers, and shrubs, and fruit-bearing trees. He placed us here on this little fern ball suspended in the heavens, with plenty of sustenance for our physical bodies with just what grows from the soil, and plenty to drink with the little springs of beautiful, running water, and the little streams of clear, crystal flow, in the earth and above the earth—on its surface. Yet, for all of this, man, in his fretful ambition to be doing something, invented a system of exchange for food. He mapped off certain portions of the earth and said, "This is mine—you must pay me something in exchange for what I give you of the fruit of my land!" By-and-by, in the course of events, bright silver and gold coins took the place of other articles of exchange, and as the land continued to bring forth, and the shining piles of coin continued to grow, the love of the garnering in, and the multiplying of the piles corroded much that was good in the heart of man. He has studied the palate, and the senses of his fellow man—studied himself and his requirements, fancied or real, and from his information and knowledge of the subject he has concocted all kinds of ways and means to extricate the coin from the pockets of the unsuspecting slave of the senses.

Back to this point can the bulk of the degeneracy in children be traced—to the feverish desire on the part of adults to bulge out their money bags, and to the growth of artificial appetites which man was never intended by nature to have. The little children suffer for the sins of the parents.

In the moving picture houses children under sixteen are excluded, except when accompanied by parents. This the law requires. Back of this requirement a great deal could be said.

I talked to a manager the other day, gathering a great deal from the conversation of the feeling of managers with regard to the class of picture which they show. I asked, "What kind of pictures do you find the public like best?" He had not evidently given the subject very deep thought; but when asked if they liked educational films, I found that his mind was clear on that point—his answer was very decided.

"No, they don't like them—we can't show many of them, for we notice the people get up and walk out," was his answer.

"And you know," he continued, "when a man invests money in a moving picture house he can't afford to think much about whether he's doing the public any good or not, if he's going to make the thing pay."

"Well, what do you think they like best? Comedy, I suppose?" He shook his head.

"Tragedy, then, I suppose is the favorite?" I concluded.

"No—not exactly," was his reply, "they always seem to like love scenes best."

"What about the children?" I continued. "Do you have a great many?"

"Not so many since our opposition round the corner is letting them in free on Saturday afternoons," he replied.

"They're a nuisance anyway," he continued. "It wouldn't be so bad if there could be an hour, or a couple of hours set aside for the children—say from three to five on Saturdays, or from two to four—then we would know what we were doing, and be able to pick films for those special hours which would be proper to show to children, otherwise we can't suit the grown folks and the children too."

It seemed to me that this was a very good suggestion, and instead of excluding the children, why not have an hour set aside for them. It seems to me a good way out of a menacing evil.

EDUCATION AND THE CINEOGRAM

Editor Moving Picture News.

Dear Sir:—In your issue of March 4th you allude to an interview between Miss MacDonald and a prominent New York educational authority. The ideas advanced at that meeting as recorded in your article are excellent. We none of us know it all, but there are a few points I would like to raise so as to help along the good folks who are educationalists but not picture men, and who do not wish to enter the moving picture business.

To all educationalists interested in the progress of the moving picture idea, I would say, "Get away from that LECTURE thought."

Teaching has, in its various grades, been subjected in America to a so-called "systematizing" process which is not an unmixed good.

The "lecture" and the "textbook" are the two main items in the program of necessities, the teacher or lecturer comes next, and the "adjuncts" and such things as pictures, why, they are simply an "educative form of amusement." The quotation is from a leading American daily. Note, if you please, the difference between this and an "amusing form of education."

Now the educationalists have not yet grasped the full significance of this new aid science has presented to them. The cinematograph demands a place in the curriculum, and it will not be trifled with. The real trouble is, that the American cannot see good in anything that does not figure on the right side of his ledger. He cannot ever explain the difference between a profession and a business, or believe that there can be a profession other than as secondary to a business. And, as your interview shows, the educationalist is met with the question "What is there in it?"

I am no oracle, neither can I legally add the mystic "F. R. P. S." to my cognomen, but I am ready to go on record with the statement that the educational cinematograph régime and the present source of supply of motion pictures will never agree. Film makers are busy men, and they are trying to make money, and are making it, too, along certain well-defined lines that have taken much thought and capital and enterprise to lick into shape, and they simply cannot turn aside and make educational films for the schools. In the first place, not many of them know how, and next, they don't want to know.

So that the proposition of forming a separate and distinct source of supply is both timely and logical. What is NOT logical, however, is the amount of capital suggested. This thing is big enough for a capitalization of $250,000. It should not be started with any less. This educational film supply business will need brain, and brain, and then more brain, and this is a commodity which comes high these days. Not that the present film business is a brainless outfit. No. But this new organization should be more one of MAN-MAKING than MONEY-MAKING.

Next, in the educational cine business, the RELEASE DATE must go. That is absolutely imperative. Even the General Film Co. knows that, and they are finding out some more things, too.

An educational reel is good for as long as it will run over the machine, comparatively speaking, for a film two years old will convey its message to the brain just as well as one straight from the factory.

Possibly the cautious ones who want to know "What is there in it?" have never thought of the time limit of earning power on an educational film. An educational film renting company with a good clientele could probably pay the cost of the film during the first year, and then the profits would begin.

Again, the gentleman you quote believes there are some subjects which cannot be illustrated by moving pictures, such as "music, art, sociology, etc."

Right here, like Pat and the Government, "I'm agin 'im." In the same issue of your paper, Miss MacDonald comes out with a good suggestion for the use of moving pictures in cultivating musical taste. I will go further and say that in the teaching of the technique of music, both vocal and instrumental, the cinematograph can be made more valuable than any other known method of illustration. How about the movements of the larynx and the facial contortions supposed to be necessary for the acquiring of perfect speech in song? If example is worth anything, what is the value of life-like reproductions of Melba's poise, of the infinite grace of violin bowing like that of Sarasate, Neruda and Joachim?

Go even further, and the cineogram can reveal to you the visible effects of the sound waves, and the terms that puzzled you before, the peculiar things about synthetic vibration, nodes, "the wolf," harmony and discord are given real, new, tangible beauty.

And about art? Again in the same issue you refer to Keith and Proctor's delightful little lectures, one of which I was fortunate enough to hear when in New York, on Burne-Jones. I will make a proposition to your educationalist any time he wishes to take it up. I know a little, just a little, about making films for teaching and lecturing. I know just a little more about lecturing, but I do NOT know of any subject that I would not attempt to illustrate by films. And if he wishes to put it to the test, let him send the manuscript or notes of his lecture, on ANY subject, to your office, also provide the raw film stock for a negative and positive of such length as you deem necessary, and I will undertake to make him a film that will give him more pleasure in his oratory than he ever had before, and will be, too, more merciful to his audience.

And now, Mr. Editor, I am going after YOU. Don't ever get it into your head that New York is THE educational center of the Americas.

First thing you know you'll be getting night wires from every little town like Boston and Frisco in protest. Of course, you are very fair in your remarks, for an imported New Yorker, but this is only to warn you that the world is a big place. Yours, etc.,

LINDSAY BANCROFT.

(We intended writing an answer to this correspondent but defer it till next week. We consider the letter important enough to act as Editorial.—Ed. M. P. N.)

MOTION PICTURE THEATERS IN GREATER NEW YORK

Commissioner Raymond B. Fosdick Investigates Conditions —Full Text of His Exhaustive Report to Mayor

City of New York
Office of the Commissioners of Accounts
280 Broadway

March 22, 1911.

HON. WILLIAM J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

Sir: Some months ago, at your suggestion, this office undertook a systematic study of the conditions surrounding the operation of moving picture shows in New York City. In conducting this investigation, we were able to secure the assistance of the representatives of various civic and philanthropic organizations. Through the reports of their investigators, and the efforts of our own inspectors, it was possible to come into touch with nearly every motion picture show in the city. The result of our examination, together with certain recommendations, we beg to submit in this report.

1.

Moving picture shows are of comparatively recent origin. No laws or ordinances of any particular consequence, with the exception of section 484 of the Penal Code, applying to the admission of children under sixteen years of age unaccompanied by a guardian have been passed with special reference to the construction, conduct and operation of such places. In attempting to exercise some form of supervision and control over the rapidly increasing business, the officials of New York City have therefore been obliged, with the aid of the courts, to apply laws and ordinances which were enacted long before motion pictures came into existence. The result is that neither the picture proprietors nor the officials of the various departments that are called upon to deal with the situation have any exact understanding of their rights, duties and obligations in the premises. In the absence of a definite law on the subject, not only are rules made arbitrarily to fit specific cases, but several of the city departments appear to have co-ordinate jurisdiction, with the inevitable result that when a particular duty devolves upon more than one department, there is little or no attempt to carry it out.

That the situation may be fully understood, a detailed explanation of the present methods of control is perhaps necessary.

Motion picture shows in New York City are required to operate under a license. Licenses are of two kinds. Where the entertainment consists of motion pictures coupled with vaudeville acts, a theater or concert license, issued by the Police Department, is required. (Section 1472, 1473 of the City Charter.) For this license, which is revocable only by the Supreme Court, a fee of $500 per annum is charged. Where the entertainment consists of motion pictures, songs and recitations not rendered on the stage, a so-called common show license granted by the Mayor is necessary. (Section 307 of the Revised Ordinances.) For this license, which is revocable, for cause, at the discretion of the mayor, a charge of $25 per annum is made.

It will be seen, therefore, that the kind of license granted is determined not by the capacity of the hall nor by any other factor except the character of the performance. A fully equipped theater could run moving pictures alone under a common show license.

No less than seven departments of the city government are charged with duties respecting moving picture shows:

(1) The Health Department must aid in the enforcement of the laws relating to the sanitary conditions in these places. (Sections 1169 and 1201 of the charter.)

(2) The Police Department is obliged to enforce the laws relating to danger to life and health, and to the admission of children unaccompanied. (Sections 1202 of the charter.) It also issues the so-called concert licenses.

(3) The Fire Department is charged with the duty of keeping the passageways and aisles open and free from obstruction, and of supervising the installation of adequate fire preventives and appliances.

(4) The Bureau of Buildings has jurisdiction in the matter of the construction of the premises in compliance with the ordinances. (Section 406 of the charter; sections 108 and 109 of the building code.)

(5) The Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electrciity is charged with the duty of supervising the electrical appliances in buildings used for public entertainment. It also issues licenses, after examination, to the operators of moving picture machines. (Section 524 of the charter.)

(6) The Mayor's Bureau of Licenses, after due examination, issues licenses to such moving picture shows as do not come within the scope of section 1472 of the charter relative to theaters. These licenses may be revoked by the bureau at any time. (Section 307 of the Revised Ordinanecs.)

(7) The Tenement House Department has jurisdiction in determining whether the proposed picture show is located in a tenement-house, on the theory that the moving film is a combustible material. (Tenement-house Act, Section 40.)

Anyone who wishes to open and operate an ordinary moving picture show must, therefore, deal with seven departments of the city government. The arrangement of his building must first be approved by the Building Department. As the building code makes no reference to moving picture shows, the general plan of the room is dependent largely upon the personal ideas of the superintendent or inspector. The fact that there are five bureaus of buildings in the city of New York, one in each borough, makes it possible for pronounced variations in the views of the different superintendents. In case the Building Department passes upon the plans, the prospective proprietor applies to the Bureau of Licenses for his permit. A thorough inspection of the premises is made and the license is granted or refused at the discretion of the chief of the bureau, who, in the absence of any definite ordinances, is called upon to exercise his own judgment in the approval or disapproval of the application. If he feels that the site of the proposed moving picture show is unfortunately chosen, he may refuse to issue the license. In fact, with the exception that his decision may not be capricious, he has unlimited discretion. As a matter of practice the present chief of the bureau, before issuing a license, secures the approval of the Fire Department, the Tenement-house Department and the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, although these precautionary measures are not required by law. The Fire Department certifies that proper appliances have been installed; the Tenement-house Department certifies that the building in which the show is to be located is not a tenement-house; the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity approves the electrical equipment installed in the picture show. In the absence of any uniform regulations as to the kind of fire appliances or electrical equipment to be installed, the officials who thus certify their approval to the Bureau of Licenses have to be guided by their own best judgment.

In case a license is granted, the moving picture show is visited periodically by the police and fire officials, by the inspectors of the Bureau of Licenses, and, theoretically, at least, by the representatives of the Health Department. Responsibility in the matter of adequate ventilation and general sanitation appears to rest jointly with the police and health officials. Both the Fire and Police Departments are apparently charged with duties in the matter of inadequate passageways and overcrowding. All these functions come also within the purview of the Bureau of Licenses, inasmuch as that bureau has power to revoke a license for cause shown.

II.

Especial attention should be called to section 109 of the building code, which has a vital bearing upon the development of the moving picture industry in New York. This section provides that any building intended for public entertainment and erected for the accommodation of more than three hundred persons, shall be built to comply with certain specific requirements. These requirements are set forth in very minute fashion. They provide for open courts at the rear and side of the building of a varying width, with appropriate exits from each gallery. No portion of the building can be used as a hotel, boarding- or lodging-house, factory, workshop or manufactory. Interior walls, staircases, etc., built of fireproof materials, are required. Detailed provisions are inserted in regard to the construction of the stage and its equipment, the roof of the auditorium, the ceiling under each gallery, the actors' dressing-rooms, the construction of windows and doors, the position of seats, aisles and stairways, the location of steam boilers used for heating and other purpoes; the position of fire hose and other auxiliary fire appliances; the character of lights to be used, etc.

The effect of this provision is at once apparent. The number of houses which can afford to comply with these regulations is comparatively small, with the result that the vast majority of motion picture shows in the city are constructed with a seating capacity of under three hundred. The chief cause of the present condition of moving picture places, along sanitary lines at least, is undoubtedly due to the fact that as a result of this section of the building code the industry is practically confined to the so-called "store front" shows.

Most of the motion picture places in New York, therefore, operate under a common show license, which, as shown above, is determined by the character of the performance, and are constructed with a seating capacity of under three hundred as a result of section 109 of the building code. There are at the present time approximately 450 motion picture shows in Greater New York under a common show license, and 290 under a concert or theatrical license. Of the total number, approximately 600 are constructed with a seating capacity of under three hundred.

III.

Our investigation of moving picture shows in this city confines itself practically to two points:

(1) The character of the pictures;

(2) The conditions surrounding their presentation.

The discussion of this first point may well be brief. As a result of the agitation against moving picture shows in 1909, several of the more progressive firms of film manufacturers secured the co-operation of the People's Institute in organizing a disinterested board of censorship to pass upon all motion pictures presented to the public in New York. This board, which is entirely a voluntary organization, composed of representatives from a large number of civic bodies, has assumed a national character, and at the present time it passes upon practically all films produced or imported into the United States.

As a result of this censorship the character of moving pictures has greatly improved in the last two years. It can now safely be said that there are no obscene pictures publicly exhibited in New York. Occasionally an indecent film, unauthorized by the Board of Censorship, is surreptitiously introduced by a manufacturer. Such a film is, however, immediately run down and eliminated.

It is not claimed, of course, that the pictures exhibited in New York are of the highest class. The members of the Board of Censorship are necessarily influenced by the practical necessities of the moving picture art which call for a policy of steady but gradual improvement rather than uncompromising severity. Many pictures exhibited to-day may be classified as silly. Others, in the course of unrolling a dramatic theme depict the commission of some crime. It is against this latter class that criticism is frequently directed. Pictures of this sort are approved by the Board of Censorship on the theory that the motion picture is a form of dramatic art and, together with the theater, must be allowed a certain liberty in depicting moral problems. The Board of Censorship, however, condemns any sensational representation of crime, or "crime for crime's sake." Some crimes, needless to say, are always debarred, as for instance, pictures of arson, poisoning, etc., together with certain socially forbidden themes.

The attitude of the Board of Censorship toward motion picture shows in general is illustrated by the following paragraph from one of its circulars:

> "In struggling with the moving picture problem the Censorship is dealing with nine-tenths of the total theater problem. Moving pictures are now the most important form of cheap amusement in the country. They reach the young, immigrants, family groups, the formative and impressionable section of our cities, as no other form of amusement, and cannot but be vital influences for ill or good. They are the only theaters which it is possible for the entire family of the wage-worker to attend. In their social and educational possibilities they provide the basis for a neighborhood theater of the people."

We are satisfied from our examination that the intelligent work of the Board of Censorship has largely curtailed the objectionable features of moving picture shows in New York as far as the pictures themselves are concerned. This much cannot be said for the vaudeville which frequently accompanies the motion picture, but which is of a much lower order. It is not possible to extend over the vaudeville the same kind of censorship that holds for motion pictures. Under present conditions, with the industry practically restricted to the small "store front" shows, the low price paid for vaudeville cannot obtain on the average a superior grade.

IV.

Conditions Surrounding the Operation of Moving Picture Shows:

As already stated, we were able to come into touch directly and indirectly, with nearly every motion picture show in the city. A special study was made of fifty shows selected at random in Manhattan, Brooklyn and The Bronx, thirty-two of which operate under a common show license, and eighteen under a concert license. Generally speaking, the conditions found to exist are such as attach to cheap and impermanent places of amusement, to wit: poor sanitation, dangerous overcrowding, and inadequate protection from fire or panic. Of the fifty places examined, thirty-six were crowded to the danger point; in twenty the ventilation was poor, and in seventeen positively bad; in thirty-one, children under the age of sixteen were admitted unaccompanied by a parent or guardian. The lack of definite uniform standards of fire requirements in regard to places of amusement of this class made it difficult to determine the extent to which these shows are inadequately protected. It is entirely possible that a comparative study of the conditions surrounding moving picture shows and other places of congregation, such as churches, department stores, manufactories, etc., would demonstrate that the latter are no more perfectly protected against fatalities from fire or panic than the former. Nevertheless, of the fifty moving picture shows which were the subject of our special examination, it must be said that a portion of them at least, perhaps 15 or 20 per cent, were such as might justly be called dangerous, due large to faulty exits, improper construction, etc.

As stated above, the majority of the fifty places examined were found to be badly overcrowded, in some instances, indeed, with the aisles completely blocked by standing spectators, so that it was impossible for our inspectors to force their way into the hall. The ventilation in most of the places was wretched, no air being admitted except such as came through the front doors. In many places attendants went through the room with an atomizer spraying perfumery on the crowd to allay the odor. Moreover, it appears to be a common practice in most of the shows to admit children under sixteen years of age unaccompanied by a guardian or parent in spite of the provision of section 484 of the Penal Code. Indeed, one important official of the Moving Picture Exhibitors Association stated in his testimony before us that 75 per cent of the moving picture shows of this city would be driven out of business if this law were strictly enforced.

The following comments of our inspectors appearing upon their reports are used to illustrate the conditions which were found to exist:

Third Avenue, Manhattan

This is a vile smelling place, and an attendant went round with a big pump atomizer spraying perfumery to allay the odor.

Fulton Street, Brooklyn

All seats filled and standing in the rear were 61 persons completely blocking the aisles. As a matter of fact, including the persons standing there were 373 people in attendance at the time of inspection and a panic or fire could not but have resulted disastrously.

Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn

All seats filled. Eighty-seven standing in the rear, five in the center aisle and seven in the westerly aisle. A fire or panic at time of inspection would have resulted disastrously.

Graham Avenue, Brooklyn

All seats filled. Eighty-six standing in rear completely blocking aisles and front doors. A dangerous place in case of fire or panic.

Third Avenue, Manhattan

All seats filled and seventeen standing in the rear; thirty-two children apparently unaccompanied by any guardian occupied the front rows.

Pitkin Avenue, Brooklyn

All seats filled, and every available bit of standing room, including the aisles, crowded. In most cases, five, six and seven persons were occupying three seats between them, some sitting in laps of others. Children under sixteen were freely admitted unaccompanied. No attempt was made to maintain order. Quarrels were frequent. An alarm of fire would have resulted in many fatalities. A detailed inspection impossible on account of crowd.

West 125th Street, Manhattan

All seats filled; 46 persons standing in rear, 28 standing in easterly aisle and 22 in the westerly aisle. A fire or panic in this place would have resulted disastrously.

Pitkin Avenue, Brooklyn

Seats full and about 250 standing in the rear and in the aisles. A critical inspection of this place was impossible. The crowd was surging back and forth, pushing and shoving for vantage points of view. Quarrels were frequent. The air was fetid and stifling. Children under sixteen years were admitted unaccompanied. This place is without one single redeeming feature.

While it is true that the facts above are serious and demand the immediate attention of the police and fire authorities, it should not be forgotten that the conditions of moving picture shows in New York have greatly improved within the last two years. In accordance with an order of the chief of the Bureau of Licenses, effective November 20, 1910, approximately all picture shows in the city are now lighted during the performance. The frequent allegations of vice and immorality made possible by the absolute darkness in which the films were formerly presented would today, therefore, be largely unfounded. In this and in other respects the intelligent efforts of the chief of the Bureau of Licenses have secured a steady improvement in moving picture show management, in spite of inadequate laws and the half-hearted assistance of other departments.

V.

Our studying of moving picture shows convinces us that their abuses are largely ascribable to three causes:

(1) The lack of definite laws and ordinances and uniform regulations in regard to the moving picture business.

(2) The lack of centrifugal control by the municipal authorities.

(3) The presence in the building code of a section which virtually restricts the moving picture business to small "store front" shows.

The first two points have been dwelt upon at length in the early part of this report. Our laws have not kept pace with the development of the picture shows, and the city departments have grappled with a new situation with no definite understanding of their duties, and no intelligent cooperation.

It would appear, therefore, that new ordinances are urgently needed to establish the status of the moving picture show in this community. Such ordinances, we believe, should exactly define a motion picture show and the steps necessary to obtain a license, so that uniform regulation may be secured. It would further seem advisable to centralize the supervision of such places of amusement in one department, as, for instance, a department of licenses, or a distinct bureau of the department of licenses, thus eliminating the scattering method of control which now obtains. This department or bureau, while free to secure the expert services of other departments, as, for example, the fire and building departments, would nevertheless be primarily responsible for the condition of moving picture shows. A change of this kind could, of course, be brought about only by a revision of the charter.

Other than the outline above given, we do not attempt in this report to suggest any definite legislation. We are informed that a resolution is now before the Board of Aldermen requesting the Mayor to appoint a committee to co-operate with the board in drafting the necessary ordinances for the control of motion picture shows. We believe that such a committee, representing both the moving picture interests and the various organizations that have studied the problem, should be appointed. In addition to its work of co-operating with the Board of Aldermen, this committee could be empowered to present suggestions for charter revision along the line of a centralized control of all places of amusement.

In case such a committee is appointed, we would desire to submit for its consideration, and the consideration of the Board of Aldermen, the advisability of amending section 109 of the building code. The effect of this section, as was explained in the early part of the report, is to restrict the moving picture industry to small shows seating less than three hundred. Inadequate sanitation, overcrowding, and general cheap character of the performance are logical consequences. A proprietor must comply with the rigid requirements of section 109 in regard to the construction of a regular theater, or must be content with the returns of a small show. If it were possible under the building code for the proprietor to exhibit his pictures in a hall seating perhaps six hundred persons, it is very probable, as has been the case in other cities, that the cheaper and less desirable shows would be eliminated through competition.

The objection to such a change is based upon the idea that moving picture shows seating over three hundred people should be constructed with the same regard for public safety as obtains in the case of regular theaters. It must not be forgotten, however, that the average picture show has no stage, maintains no scenery, and is rarely constructed with balconies. While no one would contend that it should not be forced to adopt all reasonable precautions against fire and panic, at the same time there would seem to be a clear distinction between a theater and a moving picture show of equal capacity. In the city of Boston, public places of amusement are divided into first and second class construction, the first class approximating section 109 of our building code in regard to theaters, and the second class, with less rigid requirements, confined to halls seating from 400 to 800. In this latter class are found most of Boston's moving picture shows.

We venture to suggest this matter at this time because from our examination we are convinced that most of the abuses in New York's motion picture industry are directly ascribable to the small, cramped shows which have developed as the result of this short-sighted section of the building code.

VI.

As indicated above, we believe that a committee should be appointed to co-operate with the Board of Aldermen in drafting ordinances for the adequate regulation of motion picture shows. Pending such action, certain measures appear to be immediately necessary, and we beg leave to make the following suggestions:

(1) That a committee of fire officials be instructed to make a careful examination of all moving picture shows in the city, and that the licenses of such places considered unsafe be revoked.

(2) That the Police Department be instructed rigorously to enforce the law in regard to overcrowding.

(3) That action be taken either to enforce section 484 of the Penal Code, relative to the admission of children under sixteen years of age, or to secure its repeal by the legislature.

Respectfully submitted,
Raymond B. Fosdick,
Commissioner of Accounts.

Champion Film Exchange

Our good friend, Mark M. Dintenfass, is always on the jump, and as full of enterprise as old cheese is of maggots; always on the move, but, surprising to say, his move is generally for improvement. This week we want to heartily commend him upon the lithograph poster that he has got out to advertise Stonewall Jackson film, to be released April 17th. For attractiveness and general appearance we think this poster will add to the bulletin board of every theater in which it is displayed. We congratulate Friend Mark and ask him to give us some more of the same sort.

Chicago Letter

The warm weather and heat and all the other excuses put forth by managers of downtown high-priced shows for their poor houses fade away when you go around to some of the moving picture shows and see the masses packed in lobbies waiting to get in.

I went into a local picture house the other afternoon which was crowded to the door at 3 P. M. The program rendered was a Thanhouser Robert Emmet, a split reel of Powers, Just Kids and a Trip Through Christiana, also a Solax, The Reporter's Romance. As I was coming out I stopped to speak to the manager, who happened to be an old friend. I asked him how he could get such crowds in an outlying district during the afternoon, and he told me I was looking at one of the poorest crowds he had in a week. Well, if that was poor, I would like to see a good day. While we were talking he was complimented several times by people going out about the good pictures, especially the Thanhouser Robert Emmet. It certainly deserved all the praise given it by the audience, and it is just such pictures as this that is putting the big crink in downtown houses.

Memories, by the Cuban Imps, is a memorable affair, so vastly different from the general run of pictures now before the public. It is clean, wholesome and moral and, at least, if it is not sensational, it leaves one in a cheerful frame of mind and better off for having viewed it.

I am appending hereto an article that appeared in a Chicago daily paper about better lighted moving shows in New York City.

Special investigators and agents of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children have completed a survey of all the moving picture show houses and similar amusement places in New York City.

According to a preliminary statement, the society will ask that the system of presenting moving pictures in a darkened place be changed. This is a question for the Board of Aldermen to regulate, and action by that body is expected.

"We do not question the claim that the moving picture playhouses may be an educational institution," says Albert H. Hoeckley, one of the society's managers. "The continued use of the darkened room to present the pictures is objectionable. It is found possible to throw pictures on screens, in well lighted halls, with better success than in the dark rooms."

I want to say if the above stated conditions exist in New York at this advanced stage of the exhibiting business, it is deplorable.

Chicago has done away with the cheap, poorly lighted store show long ago and in their place appear costly structures well equipped as to light, heat, ventilation, etc., as our laws pertaining to theaters here are very rigid, it keeps everything up to snuff. There are still in existence a few halls on the 2nd or 3d floors of buildings, which are considered dangerous. They are used for moving pictures and vaudeville of the cheaper order, but I am informed on good authority the Building Department has already ordered them vacated after a certain date, and it will be a blessing when this comes to pass, as it is always these negligent places who are a sore eye to the trade at large.

Exchanges have often asked that more publicity be given new customers taken on by the Independent, but to show it does not pay to crow, peruse the following from a contemporary:

The Dearborn branch of the G. F. Co. took on last week the bookings for the Grand Theater, Chicago Heights, Ill. The Grand is run by J. Salzweidel. "Independent" service was formerly used, but it proved unsatisfactory. Manager Salzweidel contracted for 16 reels weekly of good quality films.

True, very true, J. Salzweidel & Son who had long been customers of the house of Laemmle switched to G. F. service, but alas and alack, "one should never count their eggs before you have the chickens."

Seven days at the G. F. Co.'s film emporium gave the manager of the Grand Theater and Id's Chicago Heights clientele the jim jams and he was glad to go back to his old film company under the Independent wing at an increased rate of rental.

Hence the moral—"Silence gives ten cents."

Hyman & Hirsch and Herman Bros., owners of the famous Janet Theater, are opening a new house on Milwaukee Avenue, May 1st. It will be called the Drake Theater. First run Independent pictures and high-class vocal talent will constitute the program. A sunlight metallic cloth screen is to be installed. Standard machine and appliances exclusively. It will be under the management of Harry Lindred, one of the owners. The opening of this house eleven miles from the downtown district goes further to prove my argument on Chicago progressiveness in the picture game.

J. J. SULLIVAN.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, March 29.—The gentleman who coined the adage, "It's the unexpected that always happens," is now entitled to come forward and receive his little prize, for, know all ye faithful, the "unexpected" happened in quick order and much thoroughness last Sunday, all of which goes to show that one can't always bank on well regulated families.

Just when we were congratulating ourselves that the Sunday closing question had been settled for all time to come, and just as we were preparing to continue in the "peaceful tenor of our way," along comes that eagle-eyed protector and guardian of the people's rights and enforcer of the law, Judge J. B. Wood, prosecuting attorney, and swooped down on the picture shows, arresting managers and operators who were working and causing consternation in said ranks generally. Gee, but it was some lively doings. Last week I mentioned the fact that Judge Wood could not get the support of county officers, but last Sunday he did manage to have the Sheriff, genial Sid Houpt, who would sooner lose his horse than close the shows; and there were developments instanter. They first visited the Scenic, which they found closed. (And who it was gave my little friend, Morrison, the tip, deponeth sayeth not.) Then they came down to the Lyric and gathered in Harry Hale, the proprietor, who was selling tickets, and Pat Gillen, his operator. The Lyceum was next visited and "Pop" Scheif and the operator there were added to the list. Down Central Avenue marched the conquers and the conquered until the Orpheum was reached, where Dick Baird and the operators were waiting to fall in line. All were taken to Justice of the Peace Joe Alford's office, where bond was arranged for later trial. While the bonds were being made out, one of the other operators at the Orpheum, Leo King, who had been in the audience when the "blow off" came, hopped up in the operating booth and started the show the second time. In a few minutes Leo was also "numbered among those present." When all left the Justice of the Peace's office, Harry Hale opened the second time and was promptly arrested. Ditto the Lyceum. In fact, it began to get funny, for it kept we scribes busy jumping from one picture show to another. Judge Wood stayed on the job all afternoon, running first to the Lyric, then to the Lyceum, then to the Orpheum and back again, followed by a crowd of a hundred or more. He was the target for good-natured jollying.

"Go ahead and open it up," the crowd would yell. Some one at the Lyceum engaged the Judge in conversation for about an hour. In the intervening time Harry Hale, at the Lyceum, did a nice business. The crowd was with the picture people every minute of the day. The main question that will have to be settled by the court is whether the men can be arrested twice for the same cause. Some think they can; others are of the opinion that they cannot. The legal sharps will get an opportunity to orate on this question and the court will later settle it to our satisfaction. But it was rich to watch this unexpected rumpus Sunday.

Harry Hale, of the Lyric, has discovered an excellent way to handle the General Film Company, and we doff our skypiece in recognition of Harry's shrewdness. When the General Film Company laid out its elaborate plans for redistricting territory, it transferred the source of his pictures from Memphis to Birmingham, Ala. This was not satisfactory to Mr. Hale and he promptly jumped to the Independent cause. Then he commenced to get letters from the Memphis branch, stating that they were in a better position than ever before to resume business with him, but that the price would be $5.00 more than before. This letter found its way into the waste basket. Another came. This one was to the effect that, after due deliberation, it was decided that they could handle his booking at the original figure. This, too, reached the discard. Still another. Would he please let them know what he wanted? Sure he would. The same service from the same exchange in Memphis, but at $5.00 less a week than before. It was "the hardest blow of all," but—THEY GRABBED IT. The fact of the matter is this: The Independents in the South are pushing the Trust so hard that the latter are willing to accept almost anything. A gentleman who recently came from a meeting of vaudeville managers in Dallas, Tex., told me the other day that the Independent movement in Texas was fast sweeping the Trust out of that state, and that in Dallas two-thirds of the theaters are using Independent pictures.

Patrons to the Scenic Theater were able to witness a real raid on a gambling house, the oldest and most fashionable establishment of its kind in the city, Saturday evening, for Judge Wood lighted on them like a ton of brick. He got about $20,000 worth of gambling paraphernalia, too, for this club is the real thing. Accompanied by his son, Scott Wood, who is assistant prosecuting attorney (it's great to keep it in the family, you know), together with a couple of deputy sheriffs and private citizens, they visited the Ohio Club, which is over the Scenic Theater, and, brushing by the officer, rushed upstairs.

"Close the doors. The house is pinched," yelled the "lookout.".

"Bang," went the doors. An entrance was soon gained, however, but it is said the doors were closed in order that several ladies who had been flirting with the "goddess of chance" might hike out the back way to places of safety. Roulette wheels, two of them, valued at $2,500 each; all manner of gaming tables, which were of hand-carved mahogany, inlaid with silver, were taken, loaded on a van and carried to the court house. And now, in this connection, I'm going to tell you a little incident, which will show the result of organization. Saturday midnight, Judge Wood thought that someone might want those goods, so he sent deputy sheriff to the court house to guard same. When that official arrived, however, he found that the judge's suspicions were correct, for someone had wanted them, and wanted them powerful bad, for they were gone. The Judge says that some wicked gamblers took them. He don't know who got them or where they are, but the point is this: Twenty thousand dollars' worth of valuable property was not destroyed. Savey?

Louis Mitchell, formerly of this city, later of the Mitchell Film Exchange at Little Rock, and, until a short time ago, head of the General Film Company's branch at Memphis, is no longer dabbling with motion photography. Louis is now a "high flyer" in reality. He is president of the Aviation Association of Memphis and busy booking aeroplanes, biplanes and other flying machines in various sections of the country. He has bids for the appearance of some of his "bird men" in this city at the Elks' state convention, which meets here in May.

The Orpheum has been offered for sale by its managers, who are directors of the Arkansas Amusement Association. Last week they placed a gigantic banner across the theater notifying the public that the house was on the market, but there were no takers.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

Yankee Forging Ahead!

The Yankee Film Company's release of Friday, April 14th, is a story woven into and around the Bermuda Hunt Club Derby. Owing to the long stay that the Yankee companies have made in Bermuda and the acquaintanceship they have formed, they were enabled to utilize all the incidents connected with the Derby and, strange to relate, they selected for their preliminary scenes both Jockey Queen, who rode the winner of the Derby, and the mare, May Amelia, which won the Derby.

NESTOR'S MISFORTUNE.

The Nestor Film Company's storage department, at No. 900 Broadway, Bayonne, N. J., containing raw stock, cold copies and 50,000 posters, together with other valuable goods, was destroyed by fire on the night of March 28th. The main factory building, however, was saved, thus insuring the continuance of the Nestor weekly release. The loss amounts to more than $10,000, and there was no insurance on the place.

ALL ROUND MAN

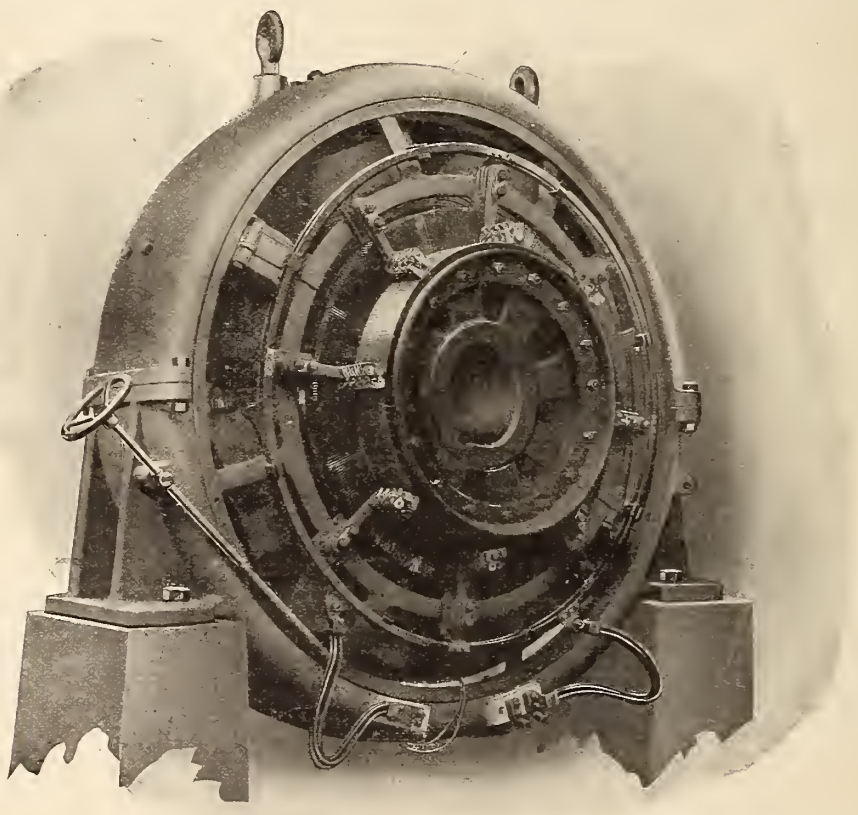
Camera, Darkroom, etc. Seven years' experience, seeks situation. Apply "UTILITY," M. P. News.

ADVICE TO OPERATORS ORACLE PRACTICAL ARTICLES FOR ALL DEPARTMENT

By WM. E. SMITH, E. E.

ELECTRIC GENERATORS, "DIRECT CURRENT DYNAMO"

Electricity is a form of energy. The quantity of energy in the universe is constant, and the process which for convenience we term "Generating" electricity is simply a process by which we transform energy from some other form into electricity.



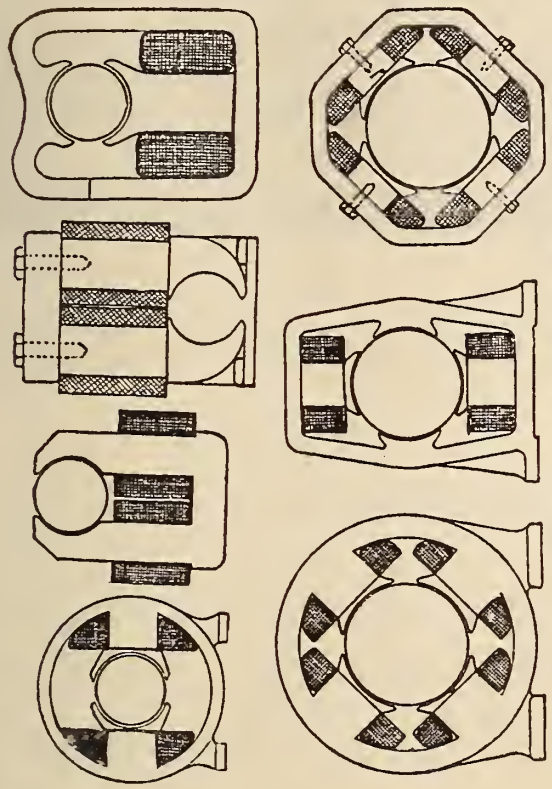
Eight-Pole Direct Current, Westinghouse Generator

More than ninety per cent of all the electricity which we use is "generated" by the use of the dynamo. In the last article we saw how electricity was generated by means of chemicals and dissimilar metals; being called a primary cell. If we were to produce electric currents on a large scale by this way, we should find that the consumption of the elements would cost us more than if we obtained our current in another way, which would be the dynamo. Now let us see what a dynamo is and how it generates electricity.

The reader will probably remember the little horse shoe magnet with which, as a youngster, he has drawn nails and other pieces of iron about. If we take such a magnet and pass a ring of copper wire rapidly at a certain angle before its ends or poles, in close proximity to them, a current of electricity will pass around the wire ring. We have seen a similar arrangement, on a somewhat larger scale, in the shape of the ordinary form of magneto-electric shocking machine. In these we have the horse shoe magnets at one side, while a number of turns of wire wound on a couple of bobbins are passed rapidly before the ends or poles of the magnets, and thereby producing a current of electricity.

A dynamo-electric machine is a device for converting mechanical energy into electrical energy or vice versa. The word dynamo is generally understood to mean a machine for converting mechanical energy into electrical energy, that is, an electric generator. The name dynamo-electric machine, familiarly shortened into dynamo, was originally coined from the "Greek dynamic, which means power," to denote a machine in which dynamic energy (that is to say mechanical energy such as is given by a steam engine or a turbine), is employed to produce electric current. In recent years the term has been used in its general sense to include all machines the action of which depends upon the principle discovered (by Faraday in 1831) of the induction of electric currents by the movement of copper conductors near the poles of magnets in such a way that the conductors cut through the invisible magnetic lines proceeding from the magnet poles.

In most dynamos the copper conductors move, while the magnets are stationary; in some, the magnets revolve while the copper conductors are stationary, but in the case of direct current generators this is rare. It is even possible to design dynamos in which both parts revolve, but in the opposite directions. One of the most important facts about the dynamo is, it is reversible. When driven by mechanical power it generates electricity. But when supplied with electrical energy it generates mechanical power. The very same machine that will serve to convert mechanical energy into electrical energy will also serve to convert electrical energy into mechanical energy as a motor. In fact, it possesses reversibility of function. This is indeed a most precious property, and it is made use of in the electrical transmission of power from place to place.



Figures 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23

Field Magnets and Armature.—Every dynamo consists of two principal parts, one of which stands still while the other is made to revolve. The stationary part is called the field magnet. It consists of one or more magnets, usually electro-magnets firmly fixed in an iron frame, the object of these magnets being to create a magnetic flux, or, in other words, to create a large number of magnetic lines which proceed from its poles. The revolving part is called the armature, and it consists essentially of a number of copper wires, or copper conductors joined up together and grouped in a particular way for the circulation of the currents; these wires, or conductors, being wound upon a core built up of laminated iron. In modern machines the cores are made with projecting teeth, and the copper conductors are sunk in slots between the teeth, and held in tightly by binding wires or by wedges. The core is keyed firmly upon the revolving shaft. So when the armature is set revolving the copper conductors are whirled round at a high speed.

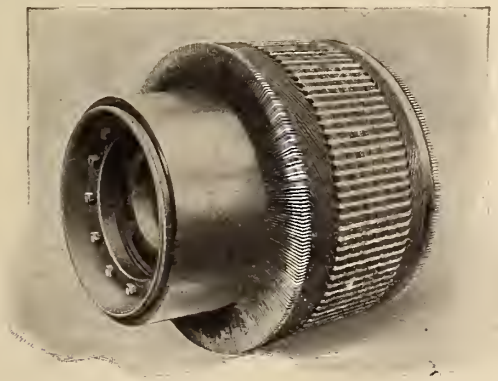


Figure 24—Direct Current Armature

The revolving armature occupies a central position, and is surrounded by the poles of the field magnet, which send their magnetic lines into the iron core across the intervening gap or clearance. The revolving copper conductors as they fly round cut these invisible magnetic lines, and so, according to Faraday's principle, create or induce electromotive forces. These electromotive forces tend to drive currents along the copper conductors, and so, if the revolving conductors are connected to a circuit, currents will be generated.

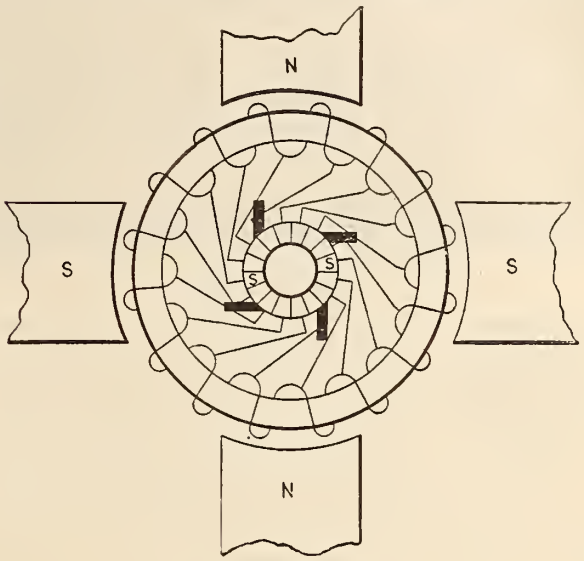

Figure 25

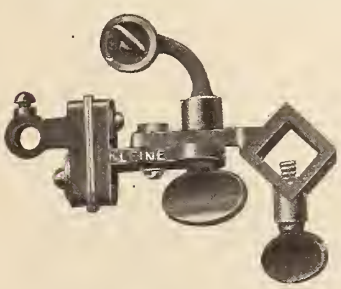
Forms of Field Magnets.—Almost all modern dynamos have four or more poles, but many old generators have but two poles. Figure 17 illustrates a bipolar form, having the pole cores projecting inwardly from the surrounding yoke. Figures 18 and 19 show other bipolar types of field magnets used. Figure 20 is further development in which the whole of the exciting coil is wound upon a single core. Multipolar forms are preferred for all large machines. Figure 21 is a four pole type, practically identical with the magnets in Figure 22. Figure 23 is a more special type in which two of the poles only are wound with exciting coils, the other two being left unwound. Figure 24 is a four pole type made very compact. Figure 25 is a diagram of a ring wound armature of a four pole generator.

(To be continued)

Dear Oracle:

I note there is a new carbon holder on the market. I would like you to tell me about it and its superiority over those in use now. Yours, Geo. Klick.

Answer.—Having received numerous queries of the above type in regard to a carbon holder to take the place of those that have been condemned by the Department of Water, Gas and Electricity, I have investigated and have made tests of the Kleine Carbon Holder (see illustration), with the following results. It has a permanent mica insulation, carbons can be easily adjusted to any angle, and is of such construction that no lugs or terminals are required, it has been approved of by the Department of Water, Gas and Electricity for use on the Powers No. 5, and Edison lamps. It contains 88 per cent of pure copper which gives it a high electrical conductivity. It is a radical departure in carbon holder construction from anything of its kind heretofore.



MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

VELVET AND RAGS
Thanhouser Release, April 11

A wealthy young physician, a widower, lives in a beautiful mansion with his only child, a boy of seven. The Doctor's practice is exacting, and despite his great love for the boy, he is necessarily forced to entrust him to servants, who, while not cruel, are naturally neglectful and indifferent.

Like all children of his age, little Paul has dreams of the future. He does not want to be a milkman or a pirate, but his ambition is to run a peanut stand and twirl the jolly little roaster.

While walking in the park one day, his nurse permits him to wander away while she flirts with a policeman. And then Paul's dreams are realized, for he finds a peanut wagon, presided over by a delightfully dirty little boy who, from Paul's standpoint, should be the happiest child in the world. But strange to say, he isn't.

Paul admires the roaster, and the other boy admires Paul's fine clothes. Childlike, they agree to swap. The poor boy dons fine linen for the first time in his life, while the rich boy is thoroughly happy and gives the peanuts the twirl of their lives.

But trouble quickly follows. The neglectful nurse, missing her charge, suddenly appears, grabs the well-dressed child and hauls him off. It is a good joke for Paul, but when the drunken owner of the stand appears and whacks his "little boy" laughter gives way to tears.

The two youngsters look much alike, and for the time neither guardian notices the substitution. The poor boy in the rich home is scared to death and very uncomfortable, his only joy being the fact that there is an astonishing amount of food. The rich boy finds that peanut venders have brutal ways, and he decides to run away. He fails at first, but finally gets out of the house with the padrone close behind him.

The boy, through terror, and the padrone, because he is half stupefied with liquor, fail to notice that they have run directly into a part of the road where a blast is being set off. The man is killed, and no one mourns him. The child is injured and taken to a hospital, where he is cared for by a sweet faced nurse. There the visiting physician calls, and recognizes his own child, who he had thought was safe at home.

The nursemaid, in the meantime, has discovered the substitution, but is afraid to tell, hoping that she can recover her lost charge before the matter is found out. But her efforts are unavailing, and she is turned out by the indignant father. The rich little boy and the hospital nurse intercede for the poor little chap and the Doctor finds a place in his home for him, while the nurse, who has won the hearts of both children, agrees to act as housekeeper for the home that needs the guiding hand of the loving, self-sacrificing woman. So perhaps Cupid entered the house at the same time as the poor little friendless boy; who knows?

THE STORM
Imp Release, April 13

Jack Herrick and his brother-in-law, Tom Duncan, are fishermen, a part of the crew of the schooner Ariel, commanded by Captain Donald Jessup.

The weather is propitious for a catch, and the sailors are summoned to report for the trip. Jack kisses his wife and baby and leaves, being preceded by Tom. Tom is addicted to strong drink and spends a greater portion of his time at a low saloon near the water front. Jack is apprehensive, and when the brother of his wife does not show up, he goes in search of the recalcitrant tar. He finds him, as he expected, in the groggery, drinking with convivial companions. He tries to induce him to accompany him to the fishing boat, but Tom is crazed with drink and refuses. Jack adopts rather heroic measures and a fight ensues in which he is dropped to the floor, insensible.

In the meantime Captain Jessup is becoming impatient to sail, although the lowering clouds are ominous, presaging a storm. The old captain paces the deck and finally orders his sailors to cast off, leaving Tom and Jack on shore.

The storm breaks forth in all its fury. The ocean is lashed by angry waves which run mountain high, making it perilous for mariners.

Susan, Jack's wife, the daughter of a fisherman, born and reared near the sea, notes the significance of the storm and is apprehensive. She fears for the safety of her husband and brother, and, taking her child in her arms, runs excitedly to the beach and looks out across the water. Her agony is pitiful, she stands on the rocks, clasping her offspring to her breast, and implores the angry waters to return her husband in safety. Kneeling, she offers up a prayer for the mariners on the deep, and then sets out to the wireless station to learn tidings of the fishing boats.

She staggers to the door in the fierce wind, summons the operator only to be told that the Ariel has foundered with all on board. She sinks to the ground and is borne home by kind friends.

Jack is being cared for in the saloon with an ugly cut in his head.

Susan is brought to her home unconscious and a kind neighbor ministers to her sufferings. The woman, instinctively, requires a stimulant and rushes to the nearest place where it is kept for sale, which is the saloon in which Jack is lying on the floor with Tom bending over him, now thoroughly sobered at the sad result of his visit to the place and the injury to his relative.

The neighbor rushes in, sees the sailors, who are supposed to be shipwrecked and she is overjoyed. She emplores them to hasten home. They do so, and, at the sight of the husband and brother, Susan regains consciousness and is supremely happy that they have escaped the fury of the storm. The brother-in-law throws the bottle of whiskey out of the window, resolving to shun drink in the future.

A GOOD CIGAR
Imp Release, April 10

A comedy produced in Cuba in which a "loaded" cigar plays an important part.

Earl Harrington, a young American visiting Cuba, strolls into a cafe and orders prodigiously. He attracts the attention of two Cubans, who rather resent the lofty manners of the stranger. They resolve to humiliate him, and resort to the trick of "loading" a cigar, hoping to insure his downfall in public.

The cigar is duly prepared and the waiter is taken into the scheme. The cigar is proffered the absent-minded patron and he is about to light it as the faces of the plotters are illumined with smiles. He thinks differently and places the dangerous cigar in his pocket and strolls out, followed by the Cubans.

He is trailed on land and water, the natives keeping in the background. Time and again Harrington is about to apply the match and enjoy a smoke when something intervenes to cause him to change his mind. The Cubans are led a merry chase, as women are impressed with the handsome young tourist, ignoring the followers.

At the end of the circuitous trip, Harrington returns to the cafe and the plotters steal in behind him, confident that the time has come for the consummation of their plans. Harrington seats himself at a table, orders a lunch and produces the fatal cigar. The conspirators are jubilant. The match is applied and they move away, awaiting results.

The visitor suddenly tosses the cigar aside and it rolls under the table where they are sitting. The powder-charged-infernal machine explodes and the avengers are hoist by their own petard, their clothing being ruined and their features disfigured. Harrington, who has left the place, is ignorant of the havoc caused, and the pair of Cubans retire crestfallen.

A FAITHLESS MAN
Imp Release, April 10

George Harris, a typical bad man of the West, has committed a murder during a quarrel. John Billings, the sheriff, is summoned, and George takes flight, just as his victim is breathing his last, after naming his assailant to the officer.

Harris seeks a haven of safety in a saloon where Ellen Darrow, his sweetheart, serves drinks. She secretes him and when the officer arrives, sends him away on a false trail. The coast being clear Ellen gives Harris money and aids him in escaping out of the locality.

The story reverts to a boarding house in the country, where Dan Lehman and Mary Weston are sweethearts. Harris arrives and makes violent love to Mary and she forgets her simple country lover and agrees to marry Harris, an announcement of the engagement appearing in the county paper, together with a picture of Harris, the prospective groom.

Ellen Darrow sees the paper and recognizes the picture of her erstwhile lover and informs the sheriff of the whereabouts of the man wanted.

Together they start, and, arriving at the home of Mary, Harris is arrested and charged with the crime.

Dan is restored to favor in the eyes of Mary and the sheriff proposes marriage and is accepted by the barmaid, whom he has loved from girlhood.

The inference is, that justice is meted out to Harris—the result of being unfaithful to the woman who aided him in time of dire distress.

CUPID'S POCKETBOOK
American Release, April 10

Seemingly small and insignificant articles oftimes play a very important part in the world's affairs in general and in love matters particularly.

A young and pretty girl is honorably loved and wooed by a young man, but the disparity in their social positions is the serious stumbling block to the consummation of their life's happiness. The young man is well blessed in worldly possessions, while the girl of his choice is poor and the sole support of an invalid mother, and though she would be only too happy to rest all her burdens on his loving breast, her pride restrains her heart's desire.

On one of his calls the persistent lover finds an opportunity of placing a sum of money, which he knows is sadly needed for necessities, in the girl's pocketbook, but is prevented from restoring the book to its place by her unexpected return to the room. He conceals the book in his overcoat pocket until a more fitting occasion presents itself. He is obliged to leave the house without having found such an opportunity, and on the way to his own rooms drops it on the street and is quite unaware of his loss until the following morning.

The book is found and picked up by an old lawyer, who realizes, when he has examined its contents, that its loss must be a serious one to its owner. He advertises in the morning papers for a claimant. When their loss is discovered consternation naturally suggests the advertising columns of the daily paper, and each in turn applies for the lost article. Being unable to give an accurate description of the contents of the pocketbook, the lawyer becomes suspicious and labors under the impression that he has unearthed a clever pair of crooks. He locks them together in his anteroom and telephones for police aid. A plain clothes man is sent over to arrest the two desperate criminals, who are found, after mutual explanations in each other's arms, having arrived at a perfect understanding. What promises to prove a very serious drama, resolves itself into a hearty laugh.

BUNGALOW CRAZE
American Release, April 13

The prevailing craze for the ownership of a bungalow is the subject matter shown in this film. The four wives of four indulgent and patient husbands are bitten by the "bungalow bug" and contract the bungalow fever.

The disease seems contagious, for the husbands, by contact, are also stricken. The wives have daily conferences, at which they exhibit their plans and discuss their localities.

The husbands, too, unknown to each other and to their wives, each determines to give his wife as a surprise a bungalow.

A dashing, rich widow, preparing to go abroad for a protracted sojourn, wishing to dispose of some of her property before she goes, moves into one of her own houses in a quiet little street, where her rich costumes, automobiles, servants, etc., are looked upon with suspicion by the modest, unpretending women of the neighborhood.

The dashing widow advertises her suburban bungalow. The advertisement meets the gaze of the husbands above referred to and causes them to surreptitiously visit the comely widow.

In an effort to make a sale, the husbands separately are requested to call on the widow, with a view to arranging the price.

Each in turn does so, and they are seen entering the home of the widow and departing mysteriously in her sumptuous car to view the property.

The husbands are finally seen by their wives, and a series of complications ensue, which are excruciatingly funny and cannot fail to cause one continuous laugh.

JIMMY MINDS THE BABY
American Release, April 13

A happy little family is the happiest institution in all the world.

One afternoon father and mother confided the baby to Jimmy's care and set off for the matinee, with explicit instructions that their first born guard the baby with his life. The push cart rolled along, propelled by Jimmy, to the stage door of the very theater where mother and father were watching the show.

The second act was in progress. The property man was having a slight altercation with the stage manager regarding a rag child which the heroine must perforce carry on the stage and suffer in a snowstorm made of paper. Jimmy, loitering near the stage door, was easy prey for the property man, who gave him twenty-five cents and a position in the wings to watch the show. Heroine enters with child, villain enters from opposite side of stage. Heroine exclaims, "My husband!" He scorns her; she pleads; he is heartless. The wife then presents the baby and says, "For the sake of our child." The cruel husband takes the child, throws it in a snow-drift and leaves wife to her fate. Just about this time father and mother recognize their youngest born, leap on the stage and save him from the paper snow. Father sees Jimmy in the entrance. Father exits. Jimmy is placed across father's knee in the traditional way, and warmed up, just because father is bigger than Jimmy.

MEN OF THE WEST
Champion Release, April 12

The bond of brotherly affection is remarkably strong between the brothers and is especially striking as it lasts. At his ranch in Colorado, Charles receives a letter from Robert stating he will stop off for a fortnight on his way East from Montana. Charles and his wife are delighted at this; more so because Charles' wife has never met Robert.

Robert soon arrives and is in the thick of a joyous visit when, unhappily, Charles gets a letter from the buyer of his cattle to reach New York at once in order to effect a large cattle deal, and incidentally to pay him a visit. After urging Robert to consent to stay and await his return, Charles leaves for the East.

The business matter being closed, Charles is introduced to his host's wife and daughter. As he has unconsciously neglected to mention that he is a married man, the young daughter never realizes that there is an obstruction in the matter of falling in love with the handsome young Westerner, and she promptly does so. Unfortunately, Charles is ensnared with enchantment and does not enlighten her as to the futility of the situation. Thus, for the time, he is unable to resist the attraction.

A month later, while his wife and brother wonder at his absence, Charles breaks the attachment and returns home. Shortly after, he again receives a letter from Mr. Coigne wherein he regrets his inability to call in person and is therefore sending a worthy representative to the ranch.

Great is Charles' horror to discover in that worthy representative Mr. Coigne's daughter, and equally great is the lady's rage and anguish to find the man she loved married, and was already married before she knew him. Just when a wordy combat is inevitable between the two, and which is viewed by Robert, the young wife enters.

Realizing the importance of quick means of suppressing a scandal, Robert follows Charles to the smoking room right in time to prevent his brother from committing suicide. Learning the sad truth, Robert consoles him and offers to marry the girl rather than besmirch the family name. The girl, at first reluctant, finally consents to become his wife, and together they entrain for his Montana ranch.

ROSE OF THE CIRCUS
Solax Release, April 7

Rose, the little heroine of our story, has been brought up surrounded by the carefree and gaudy atmosphere of the traveling circus. Trained from early childhood to the perilous and difficult feats of horsemanship and trapeze work, she becomes, as the years roll on, the most daring and handsome of circus performers.

The story opens with the circus giving a performance at a small Western city. In the audience is the young Mayor, Rene Rembrandt, of the city, come for pleasure and relief from his arduous official duties. He is greatly amused at the antics and capers of the clowns and other such preliminaries, and finally the show is in full swing. Event follows event in rapid succession, but throughout all the glitter and gaudy array his eyes have been riveted to a slight, girlish form standing daintily a tip-toe on the bare back of a prancing steed the while he dashes about the enclosed arena.

To the vast audience surrounding the ring the performers have nothing but smiles, but poor little Rose, overcome by the long and fatiguing journey of the night before, and even as she throws a kiss to the assemblage, totters, steadies herself and then falls from her horse from utter exhaustion.

Rene, the young Mayor, is the first at her side and, anxious for her comfort, he directs that she be carried to her dressing room, where he orders everything that may add to her comfort and ease. As he bends anxiously above her couch awaiting for the decision of the consulting physician, the manager makes his appearance upon the scene and demands noisily of Rene who he is and what right he has in the dressing room. The brutal manager commands Rose to arise and go on with her work, but this she is utterly unable to do. His commands change to threats, and finding these to no purpose, he uses his riding whip upon Rose. The young Mayor seeing this remonstrates with the manager and a wrangle follows, which ends with Rene purchasing Rose's freedom from the degrading life of the circus.

He takes Rose home to live with his mother where her gratefulness to Rene for her release is shown in many lovable and winning ways. Maud Jackson, Rene's former sweetheart, arrives at the home and, seeing Rose there, decides to take her away to school and thus separate her from Rene. Before this scheme is consummated the family attend a ball, and while there Rose surprises Rene and Maud in a quiet tete-a-tete on the moonlit veranda. Broken-hearted, Rose again returns to her old life as a circus performer, but Rene, finding his love for her stronger than he supposed, goes in search and finds her at the old work. He arrives just in time to rescue her from another accident and the story closes with Rene and Rose starting on their honeymoon, happy in the knowledge of each other's true love.

A MAID'S REVENGE
Solax Release, April 5

Mr. Ingram, in need of a stenographer, advertises. After interviewing a number of applicants he decides to take a capable-looking young man.

The next scene is laid in Mr. Ingram's home. In the kitchen the maid is engaged in intimate confab with a tradesman. The man has his arm around the maid's waist and is about to kiss her when their little tete-a-tete is interrupted by the appearance of Mrs. Ingram. Shocked and indignant at the treatment that her maid is receiving she orders the man to leave the room. He decamps rather suddenly and after his departure Mrs. Ingram gives her maid a good scolding for her conduct.

The maid shows strong resentment at the way the mistress has talked to her and she decided to get even, which she does in a very novel and original way, by leading Mrs. Ingram to believe, by trick and subterfuge, that her husband (Mr. Ingram) is false to her and that he loves his new stenographer.

Mrs. Ingram, wild with indignation and apprehension, goes to the office, thinking to catch her husband and his affinity in a love scene. As she pushes her way noiselessly into the office she hears her husband dictating to his stenographer behind the screen. Thinking she has surely got them right now she gives the screen a violent push which sends it crashing to the floor. She expects to find her husband with his arms around the girl, but instead she sees two very surprised-looking men staring at her in bewilderment. After explanations are offered and the cause of the tangle ascertained they all have a good laugh at the situation.

THE HEIRESS
Rex Release, April 6

When an heiress and love figure in a plot, love true and feigned, affection sincere and designed, there is enough opportunity for interest ad suspense.

Mrs. Browne has three admirers who have as many stations in life. One is merely a poor man, one aspires to be a fortune hunter, and the third is one of those bogus counts you have heard so much about. How to arrive at a decision is for her a sore and vexing problem, but she masters the situation in a manner unique and successful.

She causes to be inserted in the newspapers that she has met with an accident that will disfigure her for life, and also that her financial standing is swept away by speculation. Then she writes her three admirers informing them that they can consider her double misfortune as a release from their attentions. This happened before, and it will happen again as long as heiresses are. It happens again this time—the usual thing. She receives three replies to her communications, two by letter and one in person. The fortune hunter and the bogus count write of their regrets over her misfortune and thank her for her consideration of them. The humble one, the only man of the three who was one, calls on her with the intention of doing his utmost to diminish her grief, but his mission is at once changed, for he finds her hale and hearty with a bank roll as healthy as herself. Of course the newspaper item at once takes a more romantic shade, that of the engagement notice of Mrs. Browne and the only man who wooed her and not her fortune.

AN ADVENTURE IN SICILY
Yankee Film Company Release, April 10

Bob Strong, a young American in Sicily on business, has been the guest of Don Sebastian, a Sicilian of reputed wealth, for some months. Arriving with letters of introduction, he was received and installed as a member of the family.

The Don was a widower with an only daughter just verging into womanhood, and upon her devolved the duty of entertaining her father's guest. Convent bred, her beauty and intelligence formed a strong impression upon the young American.

The Don's principal source of income was derived from the Sulphur Mines, which had been in his family for generations. Unfortunate investments had forced the Don to mortgage his property, and at the time he required financial assistance money conditions were such that he was obliged to borrow at a ruinous rate of interest and at the same time practically submit his entire property as collateral.

The man he borrowed the money from was presumably a retired banker, but in reality Rizal, the Chief of a band of Brigands from which source he derived his immense fortune.

The mortgage fell due and the Don was much depressed by reason of

(Continued on page 17)

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 1—Return from Seaside Bathing.....
Feb. 1—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports...
Feb. 8—Tweedledum as a Detective.....
Feb. 15—The Demon 900
Feb. 22—Redeeming Angel.....
Mar. 1—Tweedledum, Aviator.....
Mar. 1—War of the Cossacks.....
Mar. 8—Prisoner of Caucasus (Dr.)..... 900
Mar. 15—A Coward (Dr.).....
Mar. 15—Adventures of a Countryman in Town (Com.) 322
Mar. 22—Tweedledum's April Fool Joke (Com.) 900
Mar. 29—A Glimpse of Neapolitan Camorra.

AMERICAN.

Mar. 6—Memories (Dr.) 375
Mar. 9—The Rich and the Poor (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 13—The Fenalty (Dr.).....
Mar. 16—The Job and the Girl (Com.).....
Mar. 16—Do You Know This Woman? (C.)
Mar. 20—The Field of Honor (Com.)..... 985
Mar. 23—The Harem Skirt (Com.) .....
Mar. 27—The Talisman (Dr.) 985
Mar. 30—Osteopathy (Com.) 277
Mar. 30—Two Girls (Dr.) 723
Apr. 3—Oh! You Suffragette (Com.) 460
Apr. 3—A Cure for Laziness (Com.) 540
Apr. 6—Reddy's Redemption (Dr.) 995
Apr. 10—Cupid's Pocketbook (Com.) 1000
Apr. 13—Jim Minds the Baby (Com.) 350
Apr. 13—The Bungalow Craze (Com.)..... 750

ATLAS FILM CO.

Nov. 30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.).....
Dec. 14—Brothers (Dec.) .....
Dec. 21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.).....
Dec. 28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)....
Jan. 4—A Straw Ride (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—A Letter to the Stork (Dr.).....
Jan. 18—A City Wolf (Dr.).....
Jan. 25—Irish Hearts .....
Feb. 1—The Surgeon and the Girl.....
Feb. 1—His Great Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Feb. 8—Kelly, U. S. A. (Dr.).....
Feb. 15—Coals of Fire.....

CHAMPION.

Jan. 11—Bill's Widow (Dr.)..... 950
Jan. 18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.).
Jan. 18—Why He Went West (Dr.)..... 950
Feb. 1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.)....
Feb. 8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.)... 950
Feb. 15—Her Three Proposals (Com.)..... 950
Feb. 22—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.)..... 950
Mar. 1—A Western Girl's Choice (Dr.).... 950
Mar. 8—The Vindication of John..... 950
Mar. 15—The Girl and the Oath (Dr.)..... 950
Mar. 22—The Pay-Roll (Dr.)..... 950
Mar. 29—The Bachelor's Old Maid..... 950
Apr. 5—The Price He Paid..... 950

ECLAIR

Jan. 30—The European Lunch.....
Jan. 30—The Elusive Robber.....
Feb. 6—Doctor Against His Will (Dr.)..... 984
Feb. 13—Mr. Faddleaway is on Strike (Com.).522
Feb. 13—The Elixir of Bravery..... 424
Feb. 20—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.)..... 682
Feb. 20—Hospital for Small Animals (Spec.). 286
Feb. 27—Punch 595
Feb. 27—Beware of the Bomb (Com.)..... 370
Mar. 6—King Phillip the Fair and the Templars 975
Mar. 13—An Unforeseen Introduction (C.). 470
Mar. 13—A Day of Storms (Com.)..... 430
Mar. 20—Cain (Dr.) 790
Mar. 20—The Rock Climbers (Scenic)..... 195
Mar. 27—Hurrah!Hurrah! Let Us Marry!.. 975
Apr. 3—A Strike in the "Make Young" Business 534
Apr. 3—Mr. Nearsight's Marriage..... 426

GREAT NORTHERN.

Jan. 7—The Red Light (Dr.).....
Jan. 14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.).....
Jan. 21—The Trunk Mystery.....
Jan. 28—Triumph of Intelligence..... 391
Jan. 28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done (Com.) .....
Feb. 4—The Criminal Chief's Capture.....
Feb. 11—Found Again (Dr.).....
Feb. 18—The Life of a Muschik.....
Feb. 18—The False Alarm.....
Feb. 25—His Great Duty (Dr.).....
Mar. 4—The Rival Servants (Dr.).....
Mar. 11—The Son of the Executioner (Dr.)
Mar. 18—Between Love and Duty (Dr.)....
Mar. 18—Life and People South of the Equator (Scenic) .....
Mar. 25—The Fakir's New Servant (Com.).
Mar. 25—Troubles of a Trip (Com.).....
Apr. 1—A Victim of His Double (Dr.)....

IMP.

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Feet

Feb. 2—The Mix-up .....
Feb. 2—An Imaginary Elopement.....
Feb. 6—At the Duke's Command (Dr.)....1000
Feb. 9—The Mirror (Com.)..... 500
Feb. 9—When the Cat's Away (Com.).... 500
Feb. 13—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 16—The Convert (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 20—Pictureland 1000
Feb. 23—Artful Kate (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 27—A Manly Man (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 2—Army Manoeuvres in Cuba (Edu.) 500
Mar. 2—The Dynamiters (Com.)..... 500
Mar. 6—Tracked (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 9—The Message in the Bottle (Dr.)...1000
Mar. 13—The Secret of the Palm (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 16—The Fishermaid (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 20—In Old Madrid (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 23—The Penniless Prince (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 27—Sweet Memories (Dr.) 1000
Mar. 30—So Shall Ye Reap (Dr.).....1000
Apr. 3—The Lover's Signal (Dr.) .....
Apr. 6—The Image of Fate (Dr.) 1000
Apr. 10—A Good Cigar .....
Apr. 10—A Faithless Man .....
Apr. 13—The Storm .....

ITALA

Jan. 19—A Sad Fascination.....
Jan. 21—Visit of a Friend.....
Jan. 26—The Revenging Picture.....
Jan. 28—My Son Is Guilty.....
Feb. 2—The Village Coachman.....
Feb. 4—The Feast of Foolshead.....
Feb. 9—John Milton 900
Feb. 11—Foolshead at the Kinematograph... 900
Feb. 16—The Fatal Charm..... 900
Feb. 18—Who Will Eat the Turkey..... 900
Feb. 23—Little Souls 770
Feb. 25—Foolshead Present .....
Feb. 25—Havana Cigar .....
Mar. 2—Nini's Doll.....
Mar. 4—Cato and the Flag.....
Mar. 4—Foolshead More than Usual.....
Mar. 9—Nobility (Dr.)..... 900
Mar. 11—Foolshead Shooting (Com.)..... 900
Mar. 16—A Dog and Two Mistresses..... 986
Mar. 18—Foolshead in Soiree (Com.).....
Mar. 18—Toto on the State (Com.).....
Mar. 23—Waiting for the Midnight Express. 900
Mar. 25—Toto Wants to Get Thinner..... 500
Mar. 25—Queen of the Sea..... 500
Apr. 1—Foolshead Goes to See a Cockfight.
Apr. 15—The Fall of Troy .....

LUX.

By Prieur.

Jan. 27—Willie Goes Cycling.....
Jan. 27—Infamous Son .....
Feb. 3—Back to the Old Homestead.....
Feb. 10—The Orphan's Friend (Dr.)..... 711
Feb. 10—That Horse Did Run (Com.)..... 272
Feb. 17—Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Dr.) 639
Feb. 17—Matilda Lovestruck (Com.)..... 321
Feb. 24—A Child's Prayer (Dr.)..... 534
Feb. 24—Matilda Chased (Com.)..... 354
Mar. 3—Jack's Lucky Horseshoe (Dr.).... 530
Mar. 3—On Their Honeymoon (Com.)..... 440
Mar. 6—Angel of the Bowery (Dr.).....
Mar. 10—The Senorita's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Mar. 10—Bill in Love Again (Com.)..... 432
Mar. 10—Jones' Remedy (Com.)..... 524
Mar. 17—Dogs Not Admitted (Com.)..... 534
Mar. 17—Bill Has Kleptomania (Com.)..... 380
Mar. 24—Cowboy Friendship (Dr.) 636
Mar. 24—Edith Has Some Sport (Com.)..... 322
Mar. 31—The Greed of Gain (Dr.)..... 652
Mar. 31—He Wanted a Hoop (Com.) 281

NESTOR FILM CO.

Dec. 21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.).....
Dec. 28—Elda of the Mountains (Dr.).....
Jan. 4—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—Sleepy Hollow (Dr.)..... 950
Jan. 18—Their New Minister (Dr.).....
Jan. 25—The Man in 23.....
Jan. 25—New Minister .....
Feb. 1—The Bridal Trail.....
Feb. 8—The Transgressor .....
Feb. 15—The Light Beyond.....
Feb. 22—His Father's House (Dr.).....
Mar. 1—The Professor's Romance (C.-D.). 990
Mar. 8—In the Commissioned Ranks.....
Mar. 8—In the Commissioned Ranks (Dr.).
Mar. 15—Was It Worth While? (Dr.).....
Mar. 22—Could You Blame Him? (Com.)...
Mar. 29—The Truth (Dr.) .....
Apr. 5—The Stolen Necklace .....

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

("Bison")

Jan. 20—The Redskin's Secret..... 950
Jan. 24—Red Man's Wrath..... 900
Jan. 27—Trials of Bud Brown..... 900
Jan. 30—A Tough Tenderfoot.....
Feb. 3—A Squaw's Bravery.....
Feb. 7—The Half Breed's Plan.....
Feb. 9—John Milton (Dr.).....

Feet

Feb. 10—The Salted Mine (Dr.).....
Feb. 14—The Deputy's Honor..... 900
Feb. 17—The Warrior's Squaw..... 900
Feb. 21—The Way of a Red Man (Dr.)....
Feb. 24—The Fate of Joe Dorr (Dr.).....
Feb. 28—A Warrior's Faith.....
Mar. 3—Owanee's Great Love.....
Mar. 7—Dick Farrell's Prize.....
Mar. 10—Her Prisoner (Dr.).....
Mar. 14—Starlight the Squaw (Dr.).....
Mar. 17—Sacrifice of Silver Cloud (Dr.)....
Mar. 21—Was He Justified? (Dr.)..... 900
Mar. 24—The Cowboy's Waif (Dr.) 900
Mar. 28—An Indian Nemises (Dr.) .....
Mar. 31—The Red Avenger (Dr.) .....

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Feb. 21—What Would You Do (Com.).....
Feb. 25—Across the Mexican Border (Dr.).
Feb. 28—The Call of the Heart (Dr.)..... 950
Mar. 4—Home Sweet Home (Dr.)..... 950
Mar. 7—When Masons Meet.....
Mar. 7—The Bandit's Surprise.....
Mar. 11—A Gamble with Love.....
Mar. 14—Come Back to Erin.....
Mar. 18—His Mind's Tragedy .....
Mar. 21—Just Kids (Com.).....
Mar. 21—A Trip About Christiana.....
Mar. 25—Ogallalah (Dr.) .....
Mar. 28—The Boy from the East.....
Mar. 28—The Pantaloon Skirt (Com.).....
Mar. 28—A Western Ruse (W. Dr.).....
Apr. 1—Cupid's Monkey Wrench (Com.)..
Apr. 4—Oh! You Mother-in-Law (Com.)..
Apr. 4—Touring Athens (Scenic).....
Apr. 8—A Western Ruse .....

RELIANCE

Mar. 1—The Trump Card.....
Mar. 4—From the Valley of Shadow.....
Mar. 8—A Trick of Fortune..... 900
Mar. 11—Ever the Accuser.....
Mar. 14—Come Unto Me..... 900
Mar. 18—At Swords Points (Dr.).....
Mar. 22—When Red Turned Gray (Dr.)....
Mar. 25—Pall'd Hues in Clouded Skies..... 900
Mar. 29—If It Ever Were Thus (Dr.)..... 900
Apr. 1—Till Death Do Part.....
Apr. 5—Rickshaw the Detective .....
Apr. 5—Summer Skies .....

REX

Mar. 16—Where the Shamrock Grows (Dr.). 950
Mar. 23—Five Hours .....
Mar. 30—As Ye Sow.....

SOLAX COMPANY

Mar. 10—Caribou Hunting .....
Mar. 15—A Midnight Visitor (Com.).....
Mar. 17—The Hindu Prince (Dr.).....
Mar. 22—Cupid's Victory (Com.).....!...
Mar. 24—Out of the Depths (Dr.).....
Mar. 29—A Package of Trouble (Com.)....
Mar. 29—She Was Not Afraid (Com.).....
Mar. 31—The Mill of the Gods (Dr.).....

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Feb. 3—Adrift .....
Feb. 7—Westerner and the Earl.....
Feb. 10—The Norwood Necklace.....
Feb. 14—For Her Sake (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Checkmate (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—The Patriot Maid of '76 (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—For Washington .....
Feb. 24—A Newsboy Hero.....
Feb. 28—The Litle Mother (Dr.).....
Mar. 3—Stage Struck (Dr.).....
Mar. 7—The Mummy (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 10—The Spirit Hand (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 14—His Younger Brother.....
Mar. 17—Robert Emmett .....
Mar. 21—Divorce (Dr.) .....
Mar. 21—Waiting at the Church (Com.)....
Mar. 24—The Tramp (Dr.).....
Mar. 28—The Imposter 1000
Mar. 31—Silas Marner 1000
Apr. 4—Charity of the Poor (Dr.) .....
Apr. 7—Vindicated .....

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Feb. 13—Condemned to Death (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.)....
Feb. 20—A Life-Time Repentance (Dr.).....
Feb. 24—The Woman Who Dared (Dr.)....
Feb. 27—All for Gold (Dr.).....
Mar. 3—The Abduction of Parson Jones (Com.) .....
Mar. 6—Angel of the Bowery (Dr.).....
Mar. 10—The Senorita's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Mar. 13—The Test of Love (Dr.).....
Mar. 17—His Double Treasure (Dr.).....
Mar. 20—The Open Gate (Dr.).....
Mar. 24—Love's Ebb and Flood (Dr.).....
Mar. 27—Tom and Jerry (Dr.).....
Mar. 31—Her Mother's Fiance (Dr.).....
Apr. 4—Secret of the Opal Mine (Dr.)....
Apr. 4—The Girl Stowaway's Heroism (Dr.)

(Continued from page 15)

the fact that he would be obliged to ask for a renewal. To his surprise and mortification Rizal refused to extend the loan except upon the condition that the Don's daughter would consent to become his wife.

Bob Strong learned of his host's difficulties and offered his help, which the Don, in his pride, refused to accept. The Don's daughter, unaware of her father's predicament, refuses Rizal's offer of marriage, and when Rizal observes that the daughter's affections are for the young American, these two men have words and a quarrel in which Bob thrashes Rizal, the unsuspected bandit chief.

Rizal, to be revenged, has his band capture and bring Bob to the bandit stronghold, which is located in a worked-out part of the Sulphur Mines. To complete his revenge he determines to steal the Don's daughter and to marry her in the presence of the captive American.

An English tourist on a hunting expedition sees the proceedings at a distance and interferes by the use of his long-range rifle; one after another of the brigands is killed or wounded, and not knowing from whence the destructive shots are coming, fly in consternation, leaving Bob and the Don's daughter to be released by the padre, whom the Brigand Chief had brought to his stronghold to perform the marriage ceremony.

The young people arrive safely at home without the knowledge as to who their deliverer was, until the British marksman puts in his appearance and explains the mystery.

WHAT'S ON ACROSS THE ATLANTIC

(From Our English Correspondent)

I am informed that in connection with his forthcoming "Kinemacolor" campaign at the Scala Theater, Soho Square W. (where animated scenes in the actual tints of nature will be exclusively shown twice daily, alternated by musical and other short plays and attractive novelties) Mr. Charles Urban has just concluded a most important engagement. He has secured the services of one of the greatest of modern light opera composers—Herr Paul Lincke—whose compositions are probably as popular in London as they are on the Continent; and one of the earliest of this gentleman's works to be seen at the Scala at Easter (April 15th) will be a condensed version of the operetta "Castles in the Air." This piece, which I understand has had an enormous success on your side, will be localized to suit London audiences, the opening scene being on Hampstead Heath. Throughout the operetta "Kinemacolor" effects of a novel and surprising nature will play a great part, and quite probably will draw all London.

"The Fall of Troy," the great Itala masterpiece to be released on April 8th, is eagerly awaited in this country. It is undoubtedly a triumph in cinematograph staging, and the cast—numbering in some cases over eighty—will convey an idea of the colossal expense involved in its production. The subject is presented in two parts; the total length being 2,030 feet. An exceedingly fine incident is the attack of the Grecian army upon the Trojan fortifications, in which hundreds of warriors are seen striving for supremacy.

The latest subject included in the Urban science series is entitled "The Birth of a Flower," and it wonderfully depicts by speed magnification the actual movements of bud and foliage that take place as a new flower is born into the world of nature. Many different species of bloom are shown in the process of development; and the unexpected forms that the process takes give the film, which is 500 feet in length, an infinite charm and variety.

A remarkable series of films were shown by Sir E. Ray Lankester last week during a lecture on "Living Microbes" which he delivered before the National Health Society; the occasion being the first of the Lady Priestley Memorial Lectures.

In the course of his opening remarks the president, Lord Alverstone, said that Lady Priestley was an energetic member of the National Health Society for thirty years, and it had been thought that there should be a series of lectures given year by year in her memory.

Explaining the difficulty of showing living microbes under the microscope, the lecturer said that his object was to bring before his audience what he considered to be one of the most marvelous productions of human ingenuity; the representation by the cinematograph of a series of instantaneous photographs of actual living microbes—magnified about fifty thousand times. Attempts to project pictures of the actual living microbe direct on to a screen had been attended with failure; and it was only quite recently that the use of the cinematograph had become possible, the small and transparent objects being shown against a dark ground like lace against black velvet.

Views of particles of blood were shown (the red and white corpuscles being a foot wide on the screen) and were followed by films of the parasites responsible for various diseases which included that of sleeping sickness.

The blood of a young sucking rat was shown, invaded with trypanosomes (scores of eel-like microbes twisting in all directions), presenting an extraordinary picture.

"They do not do so much harm as you might think," said Sir Ray Lankester, "by knocking the blood corpuscles about. The mischief is done by the production of poison. The creatures I have shown—which were two feet long on the screen—really measure one-thousandth of an inch."

Very interesting films were those of Vincent's spirochæte, which the lecturer informed the audience were present in the mouths of nine persons out of ten. They were thinner than their predecessors, and shot about with a spiral motion, being driven by invisible filaments. One of the thinnest of the microbes (measuring half a thousandth of a millimeter) was yet stated to cause one of the most terrible diseases known. Finally, the lecturer exhibited a picture of the movements of the human stomach, taken with the Rontgen rays. He said that such representations as he had shown were of enormous educational value. France realized this far more than did this country.

Captain Otto Fulton bids fair to revolutionize cinematography with his ingenious non-inflammable films. A private demonstration was given by the inventor recently in this city. By this invention the light does not pass through the film, but on it; and a dark screen is used. Specially treated opaque paper takes the place of celluloid, which greatly minimizes the possibility of a conflagration.

Captain Fulton also demonstrated a method by which ordinary pictorial post-cards, thrown upon the screen, could be depicted in color. He also showed how metallic shades—such as gold and silver, with their attendant luster—could be produced. The captain claimed that his invention would prove invaluable for research work; and illustrated how a portion of flesh, without being previously prepared, could be exhibited on the screen. He claims also that pictures may be taken in fog or rain by his apparatus.

LEONARD DONALDSON,
9 St. James Avenue, Cricklewood, London, N. W., Eng.

AN EXHIBITOR'S OPINION.

Editor Moving Picture News:

Congratulations on the improved appearance of your paper. There are some of your contemporaries that have a few thousand more words in their columns, but space is not all in a paper. The articles by Mr. Smith are the real thing. I guess I know as much about the subject of electrics and projections as most folks, but I nevertheless read all Mr. Smith has to say. I am not going to start any argument with him either, about whether the carbons should be set the same on Tuesday as on Friday, and on a rainy day as on a fine one, because from the look of things, his judgment would be backed by facts. I would like to see The News twice the size, even if it should cost twice the price.

Yours truly,

J. A. CARLTON,
Havana, Cuba.

BALANCE YOUR PROGRAM.

Our exhibitors seldom seem to give much attention to how they arrange their daily show. Frequently several heavy dramas are bunched together, which has a sad effect on an audience. We notice the Solax Company have hit the right idea to help this situation out. They are giving a regular comedy every Wednesday, which can be counted upon, and to offset the heaviness of too much drama it is wonderful how this little leaven of comedy does it. On Friday they are offering big spectacular military pictures again, a pleasing relief from the saddening effect of drama.

It seems to us others would do well to follow suit and help the exhibitor make up a well balanced program.

The Mortimer Film Cleaning Company

Report that they have been receiving some splendid testimonials from people to whom they have sold their cleaners, and they have installed machines in nearly every large exchange in the United States. The Western Film Exchange, of Los Angeles, California, ordered one machine, and before they used it a week they sent in an order for six more, saying that they could not afford to be without same.

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

		Feet
Feb.	9—Priscilla's Engagement Kiss (Com.)	997
Feb.	13—What Shall We Do With Our Old (Dr.)	994
Feb.	16—Fisher Folks (Dr.)	998
Feb.	20—The Diamond Star (Dr.)	996
Feb.	23—His Daughter (Dr.)	997
Feb.	27—The Lily of the Tenements (Dr.)	991
Mar.	2—The Heart of a Savage (Dr.)	995
Mar.	6—A Decree of Destiny (Dr.)	995
Mar.	9—Conscience (Dr.)	995
Mar.	13—Comrades (Dr.)	998
Mar.	16—Was He a Coward? (Dr.)	994
Mar.	20—Teaching Dad to Like Her (Com.)	995
Mar.	23—The Londale Operator (Dr.)	998
Mar.	27—Priscilla's April Fool (Com.)	686
Mar.	27—Cured (Com.)	308
Mar.	30—The Spanish Gypsy (Dr.)	996

EDISON

Feb.	24—The Price of Victory	1000
Feb.	17—A Stage Romance	1000
Feb.	21—The Rival Sculptors	990
Feb.	22—Mr. Bumptious, Detective	990
Feb.	28—The Iron Master	1000
Mar.	1—The Rival Candidates (Com. Dr.)	1000
Mar.	3—The Writing on the Blotter (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	7—Love and the Stock Market (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	8—A Night of Terror (Com.)	400
Mar.	8—The Old Family Bible (Dr.)	600
Mar.	10—How Bella Was Won (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	14—All for the Love of a Lady (Dr.)	990
Mar.	15—The Department Store (Com.)	625
Mar.	15—Baby's Fall (Com.)	375
Mar.	17—The Wedding Bell (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	21—The Test of Love (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	22—Who Gets the Order (Com.)	995
Mar.	24—The Disreputable Mr. Raegen (D.)	1000
Mar.	28—Jim the Mule Boy (Dr.)	975
Mar.	29—April Fool (Com.)	985
Mar.	31—Between Two Fires	1000
Apr.	4—Monsieur (Dr.)	1000
Apr.	5—The Resurrection of John	1000
Apr.	7—Nell's Last Deal (Dr.)	1000
Apr.	11—The Strike at the Mines (Dr.)	995
Apr.	12—Silver Threads Among the Gold (Dr.)	500
Apr.	12—Card of Introduction (Com.)	500
Apr.	14—A Buried Past (Dr.)	1000
Apr.	18—The Haunted Sentinel Tower	1000
Apr.	21—Turned to the Wall	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Jan.	31—The Jilted Joker (Com.)	640
Jan.	31—Hank and Lank (Com.)	366
Feb.	4—Carmenita, the Faithful (Dr.)	995
Feb.	7—A Woman's Voice (Com.)	566
Feb.	7—Ten Words for Twenty-five Cents (Com.)	425
Feb.	11—The Bad Man's Downfall (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	14—Getting Sister Married (Com.)	1000
Feb.	18—The Cattleman's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	21—Their Wedding Gift (Com.)	580
Feb.	21—Just as the Clock Struck Nine (C.)	412
Feb.	25—The Outlaw and the Child (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	28—Taming a Tyrant (Com.)	1000
Mar.	4—On the Desert's Edge (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	7—The Little Drudge (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	11—The Romance of "Bar O"	1000
Mar.	14—Oh, You Teacher! (Com.)	1000
Mar.	18—The Faithful Indian (Dr.)	975
Mar.	21—Hans' Millions (Com.)	1000
Mar.	25—A Thwarted Vengeance (W. Dr.)	1000
Mar.	28—Getting His Own Back (Com.)	600
Mar.	28—Lost: A Baby (Com.)	400
Apr.	1—Across the Plains (Dr.)	1000

GAUMONT
G. Kleine

Feb.	7—The Strongest Tie	605
Feb.	11—Napoleon in 1814 (Dr.)	797
Feb.	11—Autumn Leaves (Edu.)	185
Feb.	14—The Reformation of the Suffragettes	665
Feb.	14—Land Marks of Avignon, France	338
Feb.	18—Saul and David	128
Feb.	18—At the End of the Road	838
Feb.	21—The Plot That Failed	815
Feb.	21—Pictures in Chemistry	175
Feb.	25—Paganini and the Countess Beatrice	998
Feb.	28—Matrimonial Epidemic (Com.)	813
Feb.	28—Lafont and Pola's Last Flight	185
Mar.	4—The Tramp's Find	680
Mar.	4—Forbidden Cigarettes	335
Mar.	7—The Barber's Daughter	505
Mar.	7—The Ambitious Bootblack	450
Mar.	11—His First Sweetheart	560
Mar.	11—The Beautiful Gorges of Tarn	415
Mar.	14—The Sword and the Cross	840
Mar.	14—Breakers in the Clouds	155
Mar.	18—The Privateer's Treasure	860
Mar.	18—Rocky Caves of France	110
Mar.	21—The Lieutenant's Wild Ride	1002
Mar.	25—Cupid's Conquest	595
Mar.	25—The People of the Arabian Desert	405
Mar.	28—His Image in the Water	575
Mar.	28—Family Troubles	430
Mar.	29—Dr. Charcot's Trip Toward the South Pole	478
Mar.	29—The Cormorants, or Japanese Catching Fish with Birds	528
Apr.	1—The Secret of the Forest (Dr.)	625
Apr.	1—Tribulations of Jiggers	375
Apr.	4—The Letter with the Red Seal	865
Apr.	4—The City of Amalfi in Italy	135
Apr.	8—The Atonement of Thais	865
Apr.	8—Italian Coast Scenes	135

KALEM CO.

Jan.	20—Robbie and the Redskins (Dr.)	850
Jan.	20—Modern Light Battery in Action	95
Jan.	25—The Secret of the Still (Dr.)	950
Jan.	27—Puritans and Indians (Dr.)	970
Feb.	1—The Sheriff's Sister (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	3—The Trail of the Pomas Charm (Dr.)	1005
Feb.	8—Little Sister (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Feb.	10—The Broken Trail (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	15—Grandmother's War Story (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	17—The Lost Ribbon (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	22—The Open Road (Dr.)	995
Feb.	24—Priscilla and the Pequot (Dr.)	925
Mar.	1—Sailor Jack's Reformation (Dr.)	1005
Mar.	3—Mexican Filibusters (Dr.)	1005
Mar.	8—The Irish Honeymoon (Dr.)	950
Mar.	10—The Mission Carrier (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	15—The Driver (Educ.)	565
Mar.	15—The Hunter's Dream (Com.)	365
Mar.	17—A War Time Escape (Dr.)	980
Mar.	22—A Saw Mill Hero (Dr.)	960
Mar.	24—Rescued from the Desert (Dr.)	990
Mar.	29—The Lass Who Couldn't Forget (Dr.)	960
Mar.	31—The Hero Trackwalker (Dr.)	950

LUBIN

Feb.	2—Age vs. Youth (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	6—A Double Elopement (Com.)	990
Feb.	9—The Petticoat Sheriff (Com.)	1000
Feb.	13—The Show Girl's Strategem (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	16—Getting Even (Com.)	600
Feb.	16—Schultz Has the Smallpox (Com.)	400
Feb.	20—The Test (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	23—Dobbs, the Dauber (Com.)	1000
Feb.	27—Nan's Diplomacy (Com.)	1000
Mar.	2—Father's Birthday Ring (Com.)	600
Mar.	2—Woman's Curiosity (Com.)	400
Mar.	6—Vanity and Its Cure (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	9—Her Friend, the Burglar (Com.)	1000
Mar.	13—The Actress and the Singer (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Mar.	16—Mandy's Social Whirl (Com.)	1000
Mar.	20—Her Artistic Temperament (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	23—The Spinster's Legacy (Com.)	600
Mar.	23—Bridget and the Egg (Com.)	400
Mar.	27—Her Child's Honor (Dr.)	1000
Mar.	30—When Women Strike (Com.)	1000

G. MELIES.

Feb	2—Only a Sister (Dr.)	980
Feb.	9—Tony, the Greaser (Dr.)	980
Feb.	16—Billy and His Pal (Dr.)
Feb.	23—My Prairie Flower (Dr.)	980
Mar.	2—In the Hot Lands	960
Mar.	9—The Snake in the Grass	1000
Mar.	16—The Schoolmarm of Coyote County	1000
Mar.	23—Sir Percy and the Punchers	1000
Mar.	30—The Warrant for Red Rube	1000
Mar.	24—On the Border Line	600
Mar.	24—Great War Game	950
Apr.	6—Her Faithful Heart	1000
Apr.	13—Jack Mason's Last Deal	1000

PATHE FRERES

Feb.	4—A Cowboy's Devotedness (Dr.)	922
Feb.	6—Max Has the Boxing Fever (Com.)	561
Feb.	6—An Imitator of Blondin (Com.)	400
Feb.	8—Legally Dead (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	10—The Missing Bride (Dr.)	800
Feb.	10—Review of Chilian Troops (Edu.)	180
Feb.	11—Silver Leaf's Heart (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	18—Lieut. Scott's Narrow Escape (Dr.)	984
Feb.	20—A Soldier (Dr.)	761
Feb.	20—A Buffalo Hunt (Edu.)	236
Feb.	22—Hubby's Troubles (Com.)	671
Feb.	22—Indo-China Province of Laos (Sc.)	321
Feb.	24—Who Killed Max? (Com.)	689
Feb.	24—An Escape of Gas (Com.)	302
Feb.	25—The Changeling (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	27—Max Makes Music	403
Feb.	27—Pots, Pans and Poetry	531
Mar.	1—Oh! You Clubman	905
Mar.	3—Satan Defeated	750
Mar.	3—Around Constantina, Algeria	200
Mar.	4—Jealousy Foiled	1000
Mar.	6—Max Embarrassed	600
Mar.	6—After the Boxing Bout	375
Mar.	8—Red Deer's Devotion	1000
Mar.	10—Undying Love	740
Mar.	11—A Lonely Little Girl	1000
Mar.	13—Max's Feet Are Pinched	489
Mar.	13—Whiffles' Courtship	500
Mar.	15—Oh, You Kids	690
Mar.	15—The Paoli Brothers	295
Mar.	17—The Inventor's Rights	784
Mar.	17—Pepper Industry in the Malay Peninsula	190
Mar.	18—The Sheriff's Daughter	1000
Mar.	20—Max is Stuck Up (Com.)	460
Mar.	20—How Tommt's Wit Worked (Com.)	462
Mar.	22—The Cattle Rustlers	1000
Mar.	24—Lieutenantsliebe	1000
Mar.	25—The Kid from Arizona	960
Mar.	31—Athaliah	1000
Mar.	27—Love in Madrid	443
Mar.	27—The Trickster Tricked (Com.)	446
Mar.	29—A Fatal Resemblance (Dr.)	1000
Apr.	1—Their Mother (Dr.)	872
Apr.	1—Fred Sato and His Dog	128
Apr.	3—The Apple of His Eye	1000
Apr.	5—The Trading Stamp Mania (Com.)	990
Apr.	7—The Three Whiffles	655
Apr.	7—Native Industries in Cochin-China	341
Apr.	8—The White Squaw	1000

SELIG

Jan.	16—Buddy, the Little Guardian (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	19—An Englishman's Honor (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	23—A Robust Patient (Com.)	1000
Jan.	26—The Spy (Dr.)	1000
Jan.	30—The Little Circus Rider
Feb.	2—The Curse of the Red Man
Feb.	6—Too Much Mother-in-Law
Feb.	9—Thelma
Feb.	12—The Survival of the Fittest
Feb.	16—The Buccaneers
Feb.	20—The Padre
Feb.	27—The Eye of Conscience
Mar.	2—The Outbreak
Mar.	6—The Little Shepherdess
Mar.	9—The Medallion
Mar.	13—The Code of Honor
Mar.	13—The Man from the East
Mar.	20—Her Words Come True
Mar.	20—After a Hundred Years
Mar.	23—The Way of the Transgressor
Mar.	27—Her Adopted Fathers
Mar.	30—1861

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

Dec.	21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.)	676
Dec.	21—A Chamois Hunt	332
Dec.	28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.)	650
Dec.	28—Coaching in Devonshire, England (Travelogue)	348
Jan.	4—A Lock of Hair	978
Jan.	11—Washed Ashore (Dr.)	670
Jan.	11—Woodcarving in Brienz	320
Jan.	18—By the King's Order (Dr.)	991
Jan.	25—The Sailor's Return (Dr.)	689
Jan.	25—Scenes in Jersey (Travelogue)	296
Feb.	1—Disinherited	990
Feb.	8—On the Border of the Forest (Dr.)	895
Feb.	8—Canadian Iron Center, Port Arthur (Educational)	110
Feb.	15—Catherine Howard	1005
Feb.	22—The Golden Sickle	882
Feb.	22—Felling a Smoke-stack	113
Feb.	22—The Golden Sickle	882
Mar.	1—Comrades	638
Mar.	1—Beauties of Sans Souci	362
Mar.	8—The Fury of a Woman Scorned	720
Mar.	8—Beautiful Wye Valley, England	300
Mar.	15—Redemption	508
Mar.	15—The Thames, from Oxford to Richmond	472
Mar.	22—The Money Lender	688
	Nemours and the Banks of the River Loing, France	320
Mar.	29—Dr. Charcot's Trip Toward the South Pole	478
Mar.	29—The Cormorants, or Japanese Catching Fish with Birds	528
Apr.	5—At the Old Mill (Dr)	675
Apr.	5—Making Bamboo Hats in Java	325

VITAGRAPH

Dec.	23—Clancy	995
Dec.	24—Jean and the Waif	989
Dec.	27—In Neighboring Kingdoms (Dr.)	995
Dec.	30—Crazy Apples (Com.)	988
Dec.	31—Where the Wind Blows (Dr.)	987
Jan.	3—All Is Fair In Love and War	973
Jan.	6—The Misses Finch and Nephew Billy	979
Jan.	7—The Old Water Jar	984
Jan.	10—Doctor Cupid (Com.)	987
Jan.	13—Water Lilies (Dr.)	991
Jan.	14—Coward or Hero (Dr.)	975
Jan.	17—Three Men and a Maid (Com.)	1000
Jan.	20—The Girl in the Film (Com.)	963
Jan.	21—Cast Up by the Deep (Dr.)	1001
Jan.	24—It Did Look Suspicious (Dr.)	617
Jan.	24—The Fireman's Parade (Edu.)	383
Jan.	27—Girl of the Mountains (Dr.)	999
Jan.	28—Davy Jones in the South Seas (Com.)	995
Jan.	31—Jean Rescues	976
Feb.	3—Society and the Man	981
Feb.	4—A Queen for a Day	1000
Feb.	7—The Deluge	978
Feb.	10—The League of Mercy (Dr.)	991
Feb.	11—At the White Man's Door (Dr.)	1000
Feb.	14—Consuming Love	975
Feb.	17—When the Light Waned	994
Feb.	18—The New Stenographer (Com.)	994
Feb.	21—A Tale of Two Cities, Part I	1014
Feb.	24—A Tale of Two Cities, Part II	1013
Feb.	25—A Tale of Two Cities, Part III	994
Feb.	28—Captain Barnacle's Courtship (Com.)	998
Mar.	3—Bertha's Mission (Dr.)	988
Mar.	4—Mammy's Ghost (Dr.)	985
Mar.	7—The Wild Cat Well	960
Mar.	10—The Bridegroom's Dilemma (Com.)	990
Mar.	11—Red Eagle	960
Mar.	14—Betty Becomes a Maid (Com.)	957
Mar.	17—The Aching Void (Dr.)	990
Mar.	18—Davy Jones, or His Wife's Husband (Com.)	977
Mar.	21—Tho' the Seas Divide	968
Mar.	24—The Widow Visits Sprigtown (C.)	985
Mar.	25—A Little Lad in Dixie (Dr.)	999
Mar.	28—Billy's Valentine (Com.)	995
Mar.	31—The Inherited Taint (Dr.)	1000
Apr.	1—A Republican Marriage	996

The Lobby-Decorator Still in Demand

The Thanhouser officers report that their Lobby-Decorator continues in wide demand, requests from some of the best Independent houses in the country being recorded. It is likely that additional requests would have been received had it been clear to all Independents that the Lobby-Decorator is theirs solely for the asking. Reports that it is a proposition with a price have confused many, as the following note to the Thanhouser Company will show:

"Solma, Alabama.

Please send us your Exhibitor's Guide and all the bulletins you issue about your releases. Also send us price and scheme for your Decorator.

E. Bloch & Son."

The Thanhouser people wish to reiterate that the Decorator is merely a handsome half-tone sheet that may supplement the poster display and goes gratis to any one who can show connection with the film business.

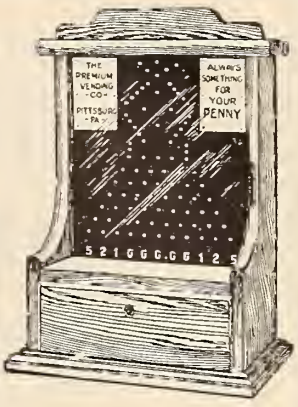
Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," says that he is doing a larger business in equipment of motion picture theaters this spring than ever before. The sales this week include 600 high-class opera chairs for a new theater in New Rochelle, N. Y., one 1911 model Motiograph to Herman Fehrs, Majestic Theater, Milwaukee, Wis.; one 1911 Model Motiograph with Standard Hallberg A. C. Economizer to Unique Theater, International Falls, Minn.; one 1911 model Motiograph and Standard Hallberg A. C. Economizer to Grand Opera House, Keyser, W. Va.; besides numerous orders for Economizers and Flame Arc Lamps for theaters in all parts of the country.

STAG FILMS WANTED—Stag Films suitable for Smokers, Clubs, etc.

PASSION PLAY WANTED—Pathe Passion Play (hand-colored). Must be in first-class condition. State full particulars first letter.

ROSE CITY FILM COMPANY - Portland, Oregon

WE WANT



ONE THOUSAND

Moving Picture Men

to operate PREMIUM pin machines and get rich, or if already so, to get more wealth. Why not you? PREMIUM pin machines have become an institution in every candy store. By placing a machine in your retailer's store you will monopolize his trade and squeeze out competition.

Mr. Flint of Mo. writes: "Kindly accept thanks for introducing me to a gold mine.

Ten machines will support you. Fifty machines operated will prove a mortgage lifter to you.

We make them out of Oak or Metal.

Percentage of winners arranged so that from every twenty dollars deposited in the machine twelve dollars will be your profit. If so advised will make it still more.

Write to-day for exclusive territory to

PREMIUM VENDING COMPANY

5636 WALNUT ST. PITTSBURG, PA.

TWO EVERY WEEK Solax TWO EVERY WEEK

TWO GOOD FEATURES

EVERY WEDNESDAY REGULARLY

THE WORLD'S BEST COMEDY

DEMAND IT—FEATURE IT—TALK ABOUT IT

COMING FOR FRIDAY

BOOK IN ADVANCE -- SPECTACULAR

MILITARY PICTURES

HORSES—SOLDIERS—CAMPS—SAILORS—WARSHIPS

GET OUR LOBBY DISPLAY

RELEASES

WEDNESDAY, Apl. 12—"TRAMP'S STRATEGY" and "THE SCHEME THAT FAILED"—Split Comedy Reel.
FRIDAY, Apl. 14—"THE LITTLE FLOWER GIRL"—Drama.
WEDNESDAY, Apl. 19—"THE OLD EXCUSE"—Comedy.
FRIDAY, Apl. 21—"THE VOICE OF HIS CONSCIENCE"—Drama.

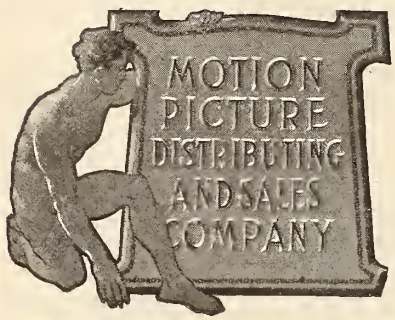
Solax Company 147 Fourth Avenue New York

SPECIAL RELEASE

Uncle Sam Watching the Mexican Border

ONE COMPLETE REEL BOILED DOWN FROM 6,000 FEET, SHOWING UNCLE SAM'S TROOPS ON THE MEXICAN BORDER.

Most interesting mobilization scenes—cavalry—artillery—infantry—manouvering—blanket tossing—mess time and other educational and comedy camp-life scenes—aeroplane views of tented city. First moving picture of aeroplanes in active military service; and all phases of military life as pertains to the preparation for actual warfare.



A MOST ENTERTAINING, AMUSING AND INSTRUCTIVE FILM.

LENGTH ABOUT 1,000 FEET. ORDERS FILLED IN TURN AS RECEIVED. WIRE YOUR ORDER AND SAVE DELAY.

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

111 EAST 14TH STREET :: :: NEW YORK CITY

AROMA FOAM

The Fragrant and Powerful Perfumed Disinfectant

Have YOU tried it?

It is not our fault if you haven't a sweet, sanitary, clean-smelling house.

Mr. Manager, just drop us a postal and ask for our trial offer.

Do it NOW

SANITARY SERVICE CORPORATION

82 Wall Street New York City

Everything in the Disinfectant and Sanitary Supply Line

SALES COMPANY

The following films have been released weeks of April 3d and 10th by the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.:

Apr. 3—Lovers' Signal (Imp).....
Apr. 3—Cure for Laziness (American).....
Apr. 3—Oh! You Suffragette (American)...1000
Apr. 4—Oh! You Mother-in-Law (Powers)..
Apr. 4—Touring Athens (Powers).....
Apr. 5—Maid's Revenge (Solax).....
Apr. 6—Maze of Fate (Imp).....
Apr. 6—Reddy's Redemption (American)...
Apr. 6—The Heiress (Rex)..... 975
Apr. 7—Rose of the Circus (Solax).....
Apr. 7—Bill's Little Plan (Lux).....
Apr. 7—A Desperado (Lux)..... 972
Apr. 8—A Western Ruse (Powers).....
Apr. 10—A Faithless Man (Imp).....
Apr. 10—A Good Cigar (Imp).....
Apr. 10—An Adventure in Sicily (Yankee)..
Apr. 10—Do Not Judge Rashly (Eclair)....
Apr. 11—Velvet and Rags (Thanhouser)....
Apr. 12—Men of the West (Champion).....
Apr. 13—The Storm (Imp).....
Apr. 14—Willie's Winning Ways (Yankee)..
Apr. 14—Old Home Week (Thanhouser)....

PATENTS

"BE INDEPENDENT."

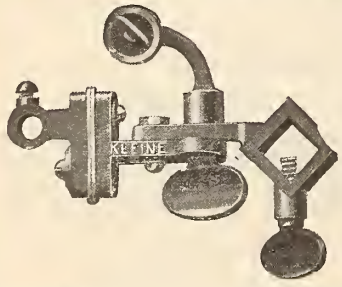
Moving Picture Devices a Specialty.

Charles Lowell Howard

PATENT ATTORNEY

706-707-708 M'Gill Bldg., WASHINGTON D. C.

THE KLEINE



Carbon Holder

APPROVED MARCH 1st, 1911

By the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity of New York City

Manufactured by

C. B. KLEINE

19 East 21st Street New York

Advertisers want results. When writing to them it is our due that you mention The Moving Picture News.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST
THEATRE CHAIR

Sanitary, Space-saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W

HARDESTY MFG. CO.

Canal Dover, Ohio.

How To Write a Motion Picture Play

Our new book in seven parts tells all. How to Write, What to Write, How to Get Ideas and work them up in picture form. First complete work on this subject. Worth $50 to any one. Send a $1 bill or money order for the book, today, and learn to be a motion picture playwright. Edition limited.

AMPS PUBLISHING COMPANY

902 Chicago Opera House Block - - - - - - Chicago

New York Giants at Marlin Springs

A GOOD, QUICK MONEY MAKER

EVERY FAN IS GETTING THE BASEBALL FEVER, AND AT THIS ONE WILL RAISE THEIR TEMPERATURE TO 110 IN THE SHADE

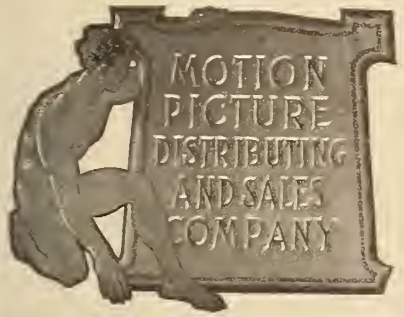
All the old favorites and new recruits at the famous Texas resort limbering up for what promises to be one of the greatest seasons in baseball history—actual game in progress, showing all the baseball stunts. A unique scene shows McGraw's entire new pitching staff lined up before the camera, and at a given signal each makes his own peculiar delivery.

Every man on the team is shown in action and at close range. The PEERLESS MATTY, BUGS RAYMOND, WILTSE, ARLIE LATHAM, BIG CHIEF MEYERS, BENDER and all the old timers frisky and eager for the fray.

After all the feature plays of a regular game the players line up on the diamond and the Mayor of Marlin presents to Manager McGraw a deed for the grounds to be used for permanent training quarters of the famous GIANTS.

The film ends with an enlarged view of the deed with a "Smug" smile and Muggsey McGraw's life-sized "MUG," alongside of the paper.

Insist upon getting this reel and make friends of all the fans. Length 700 feet. Orders filled in turn as received. Wire your order and save delay.



ADDITIONAL FEATURES ON THIS SAME REEL.

As special current topic live wire material one hundred feet of the scene of the great factory fire in New York where there was a loss of 143 lives.

Also 150 feet of the ruins of the Twenty - five - million - dollar ($25,000,000) State Capitol in Albany.

These are right up to the minute and will prove to your patrons that you are "on the job."

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.
111 EAST 14TH STREET :: :: NEW YORK CITY

THE MORTIMER FILM CLEANER

Do you realize how much that name means to you, Mr. Exhibitor? When you receive our supplement to the BOOKLET you will begin to take notice, and we will have you among our list of friends. If you have not received the booklet write for it now.

MORTIMER FILM CLEANING CO.
Portland, Maine.

Announcement, Advertising, Travelogue, Recitation
and slides for every purpose made to order
GEO. J. GOLDTHORPE & CO.
244 West 14th Street New York

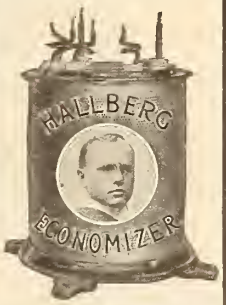
MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
REPAIRED
by skilled mechanics at short notice and reasonable prices. Work guaranteed.
Supplies of All Kinds.
CHAS. E. DRESSLER,
388 2nd Ave., City, near 23rd St.
Take elevator.

HALLBERG
THE "ECONOMIZER MAN"

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. N 1



J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.

THE 1911 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH—NOW READY—"NUF SED"

BRICKBATS AND BOUQUETS

CANNOT STOP THE RAPID ADVANCE in popular favor of the Perfect Motion Picture Machine THE MOTIOGRAPH.

A MARVEL OF SIMPLICITY combining Beauty of Design, Perfect Construction and Accessibility of Parts.

THE MACHINE THAT STANDS COMPARISON, point for point, with all other machines AND IS ALWAYS VICTOR.

THE MOTIOGRAPH projects steady, flickerless PICTURES, THAT PAINTED ON THE WALL SORT that every owner wants.

Manufactured and Jobbed by THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING CO., 564 W. Randolph St., CHICAGO

AGENTS—E. H. KEMP, 833 Market St., San Francisco, Calif. J. H. HALLBERG, 36 E. 23rd St., New York City, N. Y. FRANK BROCKLISS, London, Paris and Berlin.

"My exchange never gives me any Imps."

"My exchange gives me one Imp a week!"

"My exchange gives me TWO Imps a week!!!"

Which class are you in, Mr. Exhibitor? Whose fault is it if you get but one Imp or none? Your exchange's? No! Your own. If you can't get TWO IMPS EVERY WEEK from the exchange you are now doing business with, why on earth don't you switch to another? You know and everybody knows Imps are the best money bringers. You know Imps are better than ever and that the people are fairly going wild over the goods we are producing. Our plans for the near future embrace some of the most wonderfully fine films ever shown. Get started on the TWO-IMPS-A-WEEK plan now and derive all the benefit from the fortunes we are spending to give you the best stuff on earth!

A Double-Header

Monday, April 10, we release a split reel, half comedy and half thriller. "A Good Cigar" is funny as the dickens." "Faithless Man" is a quick, sharp drama. See that you get this reel!

Don't Miss "The Storm"

Our release of April 13 will drag you to your feet with interest and excitement. It's a powerful story in startling settings. Your audience will be demonstrative. Demand it!

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.
102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

Demand Two Imps Every Week

COMING! COMING! COMING!

"THE SCARLET LETTER," soon to be released, will probably be the greatest Imp Film ever made. Make arrangements with your exchange right NOW

All Imp Films are now made on Eastman Stock

Now, Listen One Minute!

I have taken theatres which were losing money, thrown out the attractions they were using, substituted the kind of Independent moving picture program my regular customers are getting, and turned them into money-makers instead of money-losers. If your theatre is not making every penny that it should make, try a little Laemmle service, Laemmle films and "Laemmle Luck." It is a notorious fact that Laemmle customers are the most prosperous. Call it superstition or what you like, the fact remains that it is the truth! When you feel quite ready for a dose of "Laemmle Luck," slide a letter to me ——— quick!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:
196-198 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
4th Floor, Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
209 Fifth St., Des Moines, Iowa.
1517 Farnam St., Omaha, Nebr.
1110 Wyandotte St., Kansas City, Mo.

The BIGGEST and BEST film renter in the World.

THE THANHOUSER TWO-A-WEEK

RELEASED TUESDAY, APRIL 11

A Story of a Double Substitution

VELVET AND RAGS

is the tale of one boy's change from the former to the latter, and of another boy's change vice versa. Neither youth was forced to the change by circumstance or condition, by fortune good or fortune bad, by financial gain or financial loss, but by plain love of adventure! And, through the transformation, they adventured to their heart's content—and more! See the odd finale on the screen.

No. 201. Code Word, Vel.

RELEASED FRIDAY, APRIL 14

A Pretty Pastoral

OLD HOME WEEK

is a comedy drama of the highest motion picture type, and will further advance the good reputation American-made pictures have earned of late. It deals with a man who determined to know if good fortune alone kept him his friends. A ragged suit of clothes solved the problem. He wore them, though his coffers were filled to the bursting with money, and went to see his chums-of-youth in them. The result of the research is interestingly depicted in the reel.

No. 202. Code Word, Week.

THE THANHOUSER LOBBY-DECORATOR with two new decorations for your lobby every week, is now a regular feature of the "Exhibitor's Guide," sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to Editor, Thanhouser News, New Rochelle, N. Y.

THE THANHOUSER NEWS

THANHOUSER CO.

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Our Big Trade Issue

OUT APRIL 15, 1911

Will contain the best information of matters pertaining to the motion picture industry of any publication ever issued. Profusely illustrated.

LIVE ARTICLES
EDUCATIONAL SUBJECTS
EXHIBITORS' DEPARTMENT
FILM REVIEWS
VAUDEVILLE
TRADE NOTES
SYNOPSIS OF FILMS
RELEASES
ELECTRICAL DEPARTMENT

This is a "Special" issue and you cannot afford not to be represented if you want to reach every one interested in the Motion Picture trade.

Copy for this big issue must reach us not later than April 8th to insure insertion in this number.

We have the largest foreign circulation of any Motion Picture trade magazine published in this country.

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

"The Sign of the Flying A"

American Releases

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

Two Western Reels Each Week

MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS

Will be released by the American Film Manufacturing Company, commencing week of April 24th.

Real Western.

Western films made IN the West—OF the West—BY our Western Company.

ALL "Americans" hereafter will be "Western."

Remember "The Squaw and the Man"—"The Tenderfoot's Roundup"—"Bertie's Bandit"—"In the Land of Cactus?" Two such subjects each week will be released by us from now on.

Americans—Nothing but Western—commencing week of April 24th.

Two "AMERICAN WESTERNS" each week. Mondays and Thursdays.

RELEASE OF MONDAY, APRIL 3RD.

"A Cure for Laziness" and "Oh! You Suffragette"

A split reel comedy that guarantees a gale of merriment wherever exhibited.

RELEASE OF THURSDAY, APRIL 6TH.

"Reddy's Redemption"

An exceedingly strong and virile Drama dealing with the reformation of a crook. An original story told in an original manner.

REMEMBER, commencing week of April 24th—TWO AMERICAN WESTERNS EVERY WEEK.

American Film Mfg. Co., Bank Floor Ashland Block CHICAGO, ILLS.

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 14

April 8th
1911

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

SCENE FROM A FORTHCOMING
"REX" RELEASE

HAMLET

PRINCE OF DENMARK

SHAKESPEARE'S WORLD FAMOUS PRODUCTION

Surpasses any previous Shakespearean production in acting natural scenery and ensemble. Although a classical subject, appeals forcibly to EVERY class of audiences!

Produced in the grounds of the original castle of Cronenburg (Elsinore), Denmark

RELEASED SATURDAY, APRIL 15th. START BOOKING AT ONCE!

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, APRIL 8th

A CONFIDENCE TRICK

A detective story full of exciting situations.

COMING—The Stolen Legacy—most powerful and interesting detective film ever produced.

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

7 EAST 14th STREET NEW YORK

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone: 3790 Oxford

CHAMPION FILMS

APRIL THE FAMOUS

MONDAY.

For on the Seventeenth, the CHAMP War Drama will be released.

"With 'Stonewall' Jackson"

The dash of the redoubtable hero is one of History's brightest pages.

ON THE NINETEENTH, WEDNESDAY.

"A Half Breed's Courage"

It's a real CHAMP Western, with a lavish display of horses and cowboys.

COMING COMING COMING

"General Meade's Fighting Days"

The spirit of the War of Rebellion runs riot. The Pennsylvania Boys, the Idols of the North. The Hail of Lead and Steel, but through it all, Love and Justice emerge unscathed.

THE CHAMPION FILM CO.

MARK M. DINTENFASS, Gen'l Mgr.,
12 East 15th St., N. Y. C.

On the 13th Day of April--Thursday

We are going to hurl a real April Thunderbolt, it's going to be a storm all by itself. Not a Zephyr. But a CYCLONE.

"THE LITTLE MAJOR"

RELEASED THURSDAY, APRIL 13, 1911

A Great Child Drama, Probably the Greatest Kid Picture Ever Made

How many Exhibitors are there left in the U. S. that have not yet run

Only 4 Exchanges not getting Rex

IS YOURS ONE OF THEM?

Rex

Rex Motion Picture Mfg. Co.

573 ELEVENTH AVENUE
NEW YORK CITY

Sales Co. proud of Rex

Scene from "THE LITTLE MAJOR"

Two Yankee Doodles

MONDAY, APR. 17

"A Close Call"

A Western Horse-thief's undoing.

FRIDAY, APR. 21

'The Minister's Son"

How a thoughtless boy was saved from ruin.

YANKEE FILM COMPANY
344 East 32d St., New York, N. Y.

Motion Slides

A DECIDED NOVELTY AND WE ARE SOLE AGENTS FOR THIS CITY.

Genre Motion Slides

FOR SALE ONLY BY

SWAAB FILM SERVICE CO.

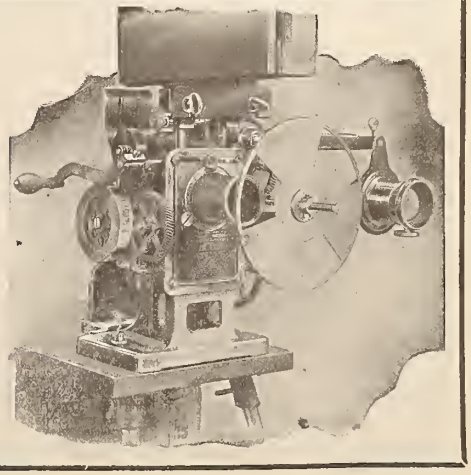
Not in the Trust

338 SPRUCE ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Why

buy another kind of moving picture machine when you cay buy a "POWER'S?" Don't you want the best?

Send for Catalog D and "The Proof of the Pudding."



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

For thirteen years the leading makers of moving picture machines.

Yes!

All Imp Films Are Now Made on Eastman Stock

Why are more Imps sold than any other make? Why does the Imp maintain the supremacy it has enjoyed since the very first day it began making pictures? Why? Simply because Imp films bring bigger crowds into theatres than any other kind. See that you get TWO IMPS EVERY WEEK or you won't make all the profit that you can make! See that you get these next releases:—

"The Stampede"

Released Monday, April 17th. A full reel. And every foot of it is warranted by pure merit. It tells the life story of a cattle thief, the plot hinging on a cattle stampede that is a thriller. If your exchange can't give it to you, you're in wrong!

"Resignation" and "The Hero"

Here's a split reel released Thursday, April 20th. The first half is a sharp bit of drama; the second half is funny as the deuce. Ask your exchange now if it will have this release. Or tell us the name of your exchange and we'll inform you.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.
102 W. 101st St., New York, Carl Laemmle, Pres.
ALL "IMP" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

Notice!
Notice!
Notice!

"The Scarlet Letter," released soon, will be one of the best films and biggest drawing cards ever made in the history of the business. Get your exchange to arrange an early booking for you. It will help a lot if you will write your exchange AT ONCE!

—I never had so many customers in all my moving picture career as I've got right now.

—I never had fewer complaints registered against my films and my service.

—I never sold so many machines and accessories per week as I am selling right now.

—I never saw such a healthy state of affairs as is existing among the independents right now.

—It has been a hard fight, a terrific fight, but we've made good.

—I make no appeal for your trade on the ground that I have been spending fortunes to safeguard your interests. The only ground on which I ask for your patronage is that of pure quality; the best films and the best service you ever dreamed of. If that's what you are looking for, get out your grappling hooks and clamber aboard the good ship Success, piloted by one Carl Laemmle.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:
New number 204 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
209 Fifth St., Des Moines, Iowa.
1110 Wyandotte St., Kansas City, Mo.

The biggest and best film renter in the world.

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

European Agents: INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., Breams Building, Chancery Lane, London, E. C.

Chicago Representative: J. J. Sullivan. 866 Graceland Ave. 'Phone Graceland 5053

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV April 8, 1911 Number 14

Notes of the Week

OUR FRONT COVER ILLUSTRATION

This scene from Rex is a puzzle. We ask our readers to put the picture into the proper film. If they cannot do so write Rex Co.

EDUCATION BY CINEMATOGRAPHY.

The little editorial from Lindsay Bancroft in our last issue is very pertinent and quite to the point. He is an enthusiastic educator, and we agree with him when he says: "Get away from the lecture thought." A film to be any value should tell its story without any titles or sub-titles. It should be so well thought out, so well staged, so well directed, and brought to a climax that carries the audience with it so that they may follow it intelligently from the commencement to the end. The titles are merely the lecture (and sometimes a poor lecture to bolster up a bad film story). The picture story should be again in the words of our correspondent, "An educative form of amusement." And to be thus successfully, it must be true to nature; that is, if it depicts an early settler's story the Puritans must not carry modern firearms, nor must the Indians be armed with Martini-Henry or Lee-Metford rifles as was shown in a film exhibited a short time ago. Again, such a period must not exhibit our modern 20th century appliances. The film must be truthfully educative and instructive. It has been our—well,—ah,—shall we say, misfortune—to witness the most incongruous situations that imagination can call into being in filmdom lately. Scenes that are utterly impossible in reality, conditions shown that could never exist in real life, and if it had not been for the titles we would not have known what it was all about. An actress friend who was witnessing the story with us, remarked, "And they call this acting?—why, good gracious, if we dared to perpetrate such ridiculousness on the stage, our career would be forever at an end. Whatever are the directors thinking about to allow such crudities to pass by? Surely there ought to be a little liberty given to the actress to live her part, even if it is only in pantomime, and silent at that."

To this criticism we could only reply: The rush is too intense to take into consideration such small details, and the scenario must be followed.

"But," persisted our interrogator, "are they not properly rehearsed before the picture is taken? It is only by becoming familiar with the various points that a perfect pantomime can be produced." Yes, we reluctantly replied, that is so; but you see there are so many feet of film to be made in so much time that small details have to be sacrificed for the time being; besides, the film goes so quickly the public fail to notice the faults, it is only critical eyes like yours that notice the lapses. Don't you be so sure of that, was the quick response, the public are keen critics, they came here to be educated not fooled.

There, Lindsay Bancroft, what do you think of that? And not only to you do we put this question, but to every manufacturer, and we hope they will tell their directors to direct, not mis-direct, the subjects placed in their hands. To make every story educative and clear that it may plainly tell its moral and make its meaning clear without the aid of titles to confuse the issue. Taking the higher educational aspect and the question of the needs of the universities and the colleges, the schools both high and public, to say nothing about the popular educational lectures for the evenings. The crying need of the day is a Charles Urban for America to accomplish in the medical schools, science workshops, etc. Such as he has accomplished in England. Who will be the man? Is there in all the United States of America a man who has the patience, the courage, the indomitable will, as well as the integrity to command the wherewithal, to add to what he already possesses, to accomplish so great a work? The field is ripe, the public are sickening with the satiety of some of the monstrosities and incongruities called picture plays, photoplays, or any other name the producers care to call them by.

Of all the hundreds of men we have met in Nickelodia, having the brains (Lindsay Bancroft lays so much stress upon), having the open sesame to unlock doors, break down barriers, and gain the good will, support and encouragement, there is only one, and this is an appeal to him personally. We ask him to free himself from that which binds him to other things and assume the initiative. This man, of whom we speak, can influence capital beyond the dreams of avarice, he can go—come—and—do herculean tasks that no one we know, could by any possible means reach. Will he do it? We cannot yet say. Million dollar (on paper) concerns, with only five hundred dollars to work on are not in his line of vision. This we do know that when he commences the task we set him to do, we can assure him a following—a staff of helpers, brains and willing minds galore. In addition to these we will procure him the most practical workers, scientists who are itching to put their ideas on the films, microscopists who are even now preparing their data for all kinds of subjects. We have quite a large number of letters from educational authorities in all parts of the country. True, these letters are from men of science, and all that. Again true, these men want subjects suitable for their field of work. They are naturally very much interested in the subject because it falls in line with their requirements.

How about the public? Do they want these educational films? That is what we are trying to find out, and wish all our readers to express their ideas in a letter to us stating what would be suitable subjects, in their opinion, to satisfy them. These ideas we want, not for publication but to keep on file so that when the time arrives these subjects may take pre-eminence as coming direct from Nickelodia.

Just one word in conclusion: Science lectures, whether with slides or films, or both, are not necessarily dry-as-dust; we have in mind the Gilchrist lectures for the people in England where the highest scientific minds bend to interest the people in abstruse subjects, these lectures are made popular so that in all our association with them we never knew a vacant seat, even in the largest halls; in some instances seating thousands, they were packed with eager crowds of working people wanting to know—such will, in our opinion, be the result with scientific cinematography made interesting and educative to all audiences. Of course we do not want to do away with dramatic, comedy, love scenes, or such like films which will still be in demand for years to come, only the films must tell the stories in a more lucid manner. At the same time there is too much sameness, everybody copies everybody else. Imitation, we know, is the sincerest of flattery, but too much of it palls, and when it is rank plagarism it's dishonest. Variety adds zest to life, so let us have a little real knowledge sandwiched in between the foolery and the laughs—so say Collefugians.

ONE RAINY NIGHT.

By Margaret I. MacDonald.

The rain was coming down in torrents, the wind had torn the silk from a couple of the ribs of my umbrella, and I was in a generally wet and miserable plight, as the bright lights and glaring signs of a little wayside theater loomed up in front of me.

I stopped, lowered my umbrella, and stepped quickly into the entrance way for shelter. After standing gazing out into the street for a few minutes, I shook my umbrella as free as I could of its numerous rain drops, produced my card, and slipped inside the door in search of the manager. I was followed closely by a young chap, evidently of some authority, who looked askance. Upon finding out my business he quickly produced the manager, a robust looking Italian Jew, I should judge.

"I should like very much to see what kind of pictures you have," I smilingly ventured.

He looked at me, then at the card, and back again at me.

"Oh, sure!" he exclaimed, as his face lighted up with a look of understanding. "Just sit down and enjoy yourself."

"Tell me," I questioned, as he made to move away, "do you let children in free?"

"Oh, sure we do—we lets dem in free—wid dere parents."

"Saturdays or Sundays?" I queried.

"Mondays and Thursday, ma'm—we lets dem in Mondays and Thursdays, wid dere parents."

"Do you make any distinction of films for those days on account of the children?" I continued.

"Oh, yes, ma'm—we give dem comedy, and—and some educational films."

"You give them educational films? Oh, that's nice," I encouraged.

"Yes, ma'am," he replied, with a smile of pleasant pride, "we gives dem pictures from foreign lands."

The man seemed in a hurry to attend to some business, so I did not press him with further questions, but in acquiescence with his final cordial "Just sit down and enjoy yourself," I took a seat near the back of the long, narrow room.

This little motion picture theater was, I found upon observation, one frequented by the poorer class. The pictures which were shown were of a very good class, with the exception of one. It was not, however, children's day.

This picture was gruesome enough to taint a whole performance, and it is a puzzle to me why such pictures are allowed to be shown. A man and a woman are locked in a vault; in time the oxygen in the place becomes consumed; then suffocation commences, and the picture is thrown large upon the canvas as the terrible agony of strangulation progresses. At the crucial moment the lover of the girl enters the room adjoining, hears a sound within the vault, presses his ear to the door and discovers who is within. After many futile attempts to break the door, the combination is at last communicated to him from those within, in the last awful struggle to hold on to the delicate thread of life by feeble taps which are finally understood. The man's hand is shown adjusting the combination, and when the nerves of the audience are keyed up to the snapping point, the door of the vault finally opens.

I have seen many pictures on this same order. What is the use of them? For my part, I want to get up and run out of the theater; they are almost nauseating in effect. Whose fault is it that such pictures are shown? Is it the fault of the film maker, the manager, or the public who applaud such things? Whom have we to thank for these repulsive scenes? Why not get at the bottom of it and "Go after them"? There is not even the shadow of a moral to this kind of a picture, and in this civilization I cannot think they would be missed.

Nevertheless, regardless of the fact that this picture was shown, the remainder of the program was very enjoyable, and I came away with a feeling that to the manager of this little theater some credit was due—in fact, a great deal of credit—for I believe he is striving in his way to do the right thing by humanity is as far as it is possible for him. The fact that he takes the trouble to select special films for the children on children's day, shows that his mind is working in the right direction.

WATCHING THE PICTURES.

H. Jeanval.

For some moons past I have been trying my little best to investigate a question which has troubled the pea-pod of gray matter, that has been given to me as brains—my brain legs wobble, but here goes. My question is humbly submitted to brains. Why do so few people remember the pictures they have seen? For months past I have asked all sorts of theater-goers "What did you see at the show?" The answers have been just such as my own experience has been. The majority of the pictures are of a class and kind that leave no lasting impression. They amuse—or otherwise—for the moment, and that is all. Perhaps it is because folk see, say three reels, and vaudeville between; but my little querying has not been in such houses but in "straight" picture houses, and in each and every case my answers have been the same. People do not remember—save in exceptional cases—what they have seen. Why don't they do so? Scenario "Editors" and other important personages in moving picturedom please condescend to attend.

I am sorry Edison in that fine reel, "All for the Love of a Lady," after all your care as to detail you let slip a very stupid mistake. Lord Howard folds and "sands" his letters correctly, but the motions of his hand which indicate properly the current aristocratic scrawl are spoiled by the letters on the screen. It is not the actor's fault that these appear in commonplace vertical round hand—yclept Smith's method in our public schools.

Pathe in "Oh, You Kids," dubs police, sleuths! Where, how, when and where?

Gaumont shows signs of increasing carelessness in "The Lieutenant's Wild Ride." 'Tis said a "cavalier" brought a message instead of a cavalry man. The man that wrote that knew neither French nor English.

Ambrosio, what do you mean in the "Tweedledum's April Joke" by giving the name of the paper in French, "Le Canard Journal Quoticlieu?"

Champion, in "The Payroll," has a saurce boat on the clock; and also has a rendesrous. What's that?

Why does the Kalem clock never move in "War Time Escape?"

The synopsis of Pathe's Lieutenantsliebe does not agree with the film. What's the use of printing such a concoction? Moreover, may I ask what language is lieutenants liebe? It's not French and it most certainly is not German, nor any other European or Asiatic tongue. It's simply, squarely bosh.

In Gaumont's "Cupid's Conquest," the actress, under the sub-title "Amoroso" does not play the harp properly.

The slides by Scott & Van Altena that are supposed to illustrate Harris' song, "Don't Mind It, Honey." are brilliant examples of how not to do it. There is a complete lack of harmony in the coloring; the whole thing is puerilely amateurish. Even the spelling is stupid, e. g., "every cloud has it's silver &c." Is there no one on Pearl street that knows the difference between it's and its?

That abomination, the claquer, is getting his fine work in on Fourteenth street when certain songs are "tried out." Lynching is too good for these nuisances.

I should have thought that the actress who played the "star" in Lubin's film, "Her Artistic Temperament," would, with her much trumpeted fame, have at least avoided ridiculous vaporizings. In this film she is an unsuccessful, poverty-stricken artist, and yet her hair is "fixed up" magnifically. Oh, ye Goddess of consistency, come and help the fainting dramatic muse.

"I'd love to be loved," sings Witmark, but I beg to remark not with DeWitt Wheeler's slides. I'd rather not; thank you.

LATEST NEWS FROM LONDON

(From our English Correspondent)

Concerning his Majesty's popular appointment of Field Marshal, the Viscount Kitchener of Khartoum to command the troops at the Coronation, the Chas. Urban Trading Co. informs me that they have succeeded in securing a stirring series of "Kinemacolor" scenes of Lord Kitchener reviewing troops at Khartoum. These will be shown for the first time, accompanied by suitable music, at the "Kinemacolor" opening of the Scala Theater in Soho Square W, which is now fixed for Saturday, April 15th.

* * *

The Selig Polyscope Co. have now discontinued their agency with Messrs. Markt & Co. The new offices at Film House—which is a veritable hive of cinematographic industry—are replete with every convenience. Mr. E. H. Montagu has taken over the managerial reins and he is this firm's representative on this side. It is Mr. Montagu's intention to keep open house for both loaning firms and exhibitors, the latter being in his opinion the "real backbone of the trade." There is a large office of typists and clerks at Film House, also a private office, and a spacious projecting room where a Tyler-Ememann Imperator projector is installed. A stock-room, replete with an abundant supply of posters and general advertising matter, is a feature of the new premises.

* * *

The question of the opening of picture theaters on the Sabbath is very much to the fore at the moment of writing. Several deputations have recently waited on the Theaters and Music Hall Committee of the London County Council, when they gave expression to their views on this important question. There are apparently a great many busybodies in the metropolis who are not content that this committee should arrive at an important conclusion in this matter. These busybodies appear to be suffering from an acute impatience, their sole object obviously being to assist in every way possible in perpetuating a dismal Sabbath in this city. The wrath of these busybodies, who are mostly clerics, has been aroused by the opening of a large number of picture theaters on Sunday. The enraged clerics have announced that they will not preach or permit collections in their churches for the Hospital Sunday Fund, if any part of that fund is apportioned to a hospital which accepts charitable aid from the picture theater. The clerics have succeeded into persuading the General Purposes Committee of the Hospital Sunday Fund to pass a resolution that "it is undesirable that picture theaters should continue under the auspices of hospitals participating in the fund." The effect will be that the hospitals accepting aid from cinematograph theaters will have their awards from the Hospital Sunday Fund considerably decreased. Space does not permit of personal criticism, but I am of opinion that the committee has grossly overestimated the influence of the clerics and the apathy of the charitable public.

* * *

Rumors are abroad, as I go to mail, that Mr. Will Barker has successfully filmed Mr. H. B. Irving and Company in "Princess Clemantina" at his Ealing Studios, where the full company was occupied for seven hours. Mr. Irving and his company are leaving England directly, but thanks to Mr. Barker's ever-increasing enterprise we have the play, which has had such a successful run at the Queen's Theater, left with us.

We are in the throes of a Shakesperian revival. Mr. Barker's triumphant filming of "Henry VIII" has inspired fellow manufacturers to similar efforts. On Saturday, last (March 18th), Nordisk's "Hamlet" was released. The whole drama was enacted and produced on the grounds of the original Castle of Cronenburg (Denmark). It is indeed a subject which will appeal to every audience, and there is not a dull moment in the whole 1,200 feet.

The Co-operative Cinematograph Co., Ltd., of Charing Cross Rd., W. C., announces "Julius Caesar and Macbeth." The former is to be released on March 25th, the latter April 8th. Both subjects are replicas of Mr. F. R. Benson's presentations at the Memorial Theater, Stratford-on-Avon. The dramas are superbly acted and produced with wonderful realism; being a subject which is specially adapted to cinematographic reproduction.

* * *

"The Germination of Plants" is an amazing film which Kineto, Ltd., announce for release on March 30th. Amazing revelations of plant development obtained by a speed magnification of 12,000 times, are depicted in this subject, which is 430 feet in length. Here the cinematograph acts as an interpreter, and shows in a few moments actions which have been spread over hours or even days.

* * *

A company has been formed under the title of the Sacred and Educational Company, Ltd. Their offices are in Wardour Street W. and their policy is to issue programs composed only of the two kinds of films stated in the company's title. I have been informed that Mr. Thos. Clegg, for so long associated with Mr. Chas. Urban, and whose premises are almost opposite, is in charge of this new venture.

* * *

Mr. Cherry Kearton left London last week for Singapore. It is his intention to stalk and obtain films of the tiger and man-like orangoutang in their native habitat; and to this end he has equipped himself with a photographic armament valued at over three hundred pounds. I notice that this includes the wonderful Prozniski cinematograph hand camera, which, by means of pneumatically operated gyroscope spinning inside, eliminates vibration, keeps the camera in one place, and so enables pictures to be taken from any position or angle without the use of a triped stand. It may even be used on horseback. The pneumatic power is got by using compressed air, pumped into the camera with a bicycle pump, and the same force automatically exposes the film. The equipment includes many thousand feet of film and a complete canvas dark-room and outfit, as Mr. Kearton will develop his pictures in the jungle and send them home as they are obtained.

ENGLAND.

OUR WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington, D. C.

Another Independent house has opened its doors. This is the Mount Vernon, which has been closed for nearly a year, and is now under the management of Frank Howard. April 1 was children's day, when toy souvenirs were offered to the youngsters attending the performance. This proved quite a treat to the children. Without raising the price, Mr. Howard is offering an exceptional bill on Sunday evenings in the form of four illustrated songs, sung by different singers in various parts of the house. This is something unique and has received hearty approval. The regular performance of the Mount Vernon carries a singer, and this artist is changed frequently during the week.

During the recent visit of Manager Lucas, of the Washington Film Exchange, which controls the Independent interests here, in New York and vicinity, J. Boyd Dexter was in charge of affairs. He was quite in his element, having been the first to risk an Independent film service in the National Capital when it was something of a risk to offer Independent goods and expect to make money on it. Mr. Dexter is now so closely associated with Mr. Lucas that he will frequently be at the wheel of progress in Washington when Mr. Lucas goes on the road and the outlook is that these road trips will come often.

The Washington Film Exchange has established a branch office in Charlotte, N. C., with Harry L. Lucas, formerly in the moving picture business at Savannah, Ga., at the head. This will make it possible to cover more satisfactorily a territory which heretofore had to depend as a rule upon second-hand film shops for its reels. With the present office at Charlotte, a busy town indeed, an exchange midway between Washington and Atlanta has been effected, which will cover grounds for the Independents which have been difficult to reach.

Manager Tom Moore, of the General Film Exchange, is still on his pleasure trip in the South with his wife.

The National Film Manufacturing and Leasing Co., as advertised in the Moving Picture World, again insists that the Capitol Film Company has another release on hand, about which Manager Boernstein of the Capitol knows nothing. This time it has the inspiring title, "In the Shadow of the Monument." We presume the world-renowned Washington Monument is meant, which in real sunshine can cast a mighty big shadow, being the largest shaft of its kind in the world. Relative to this Manager Boernstein remarks that he is greatly in the shadow, aye, even in the dark, about the release credited to the Capitol.

Lyman H. Howe, with his carnival of motion pictures, announces a week's engagement at one of our largest theaters, the Columbia, beginning April 10, having daily matinee and evening performances. This is the most pretentious moving picture offering that has ever been made in the Capital City. The Howe picture travelogues were here in the fall, and this return engagement demonstrates the success of the previous performances, which consisted of five consecutive Sunday evening shows.

The Capitol Film Co. continues to confine itself to commercial film work of a scientific and educational order. Manager Boernstein anticipates branching out into bigger quarters in the near future, even to the securing of a suburban studio if necessary. There are great possibilities for real situations, either war, political or civil, around the National Capital, where its natural scenery can have full play.

Speaking about secrets in the management of a moving picture house, Frank Howard, who has been allied with big dramas with big actors, asserts that one of the main points is to know your people. "This is quite evident in different parts of the Capital City," he remarked. "Some sections want western scenes, others like the classic and costume plays, while a scenic film is quite enjoyable in still other parts. Some people attend a moving picture show purely to be amused, while others wish to be educated. To keep a full house, the spectators must come in for a share of the consideration of the performance presented. The demands of your patrons can be amply met with good financial results within the limitations of healthy pictures. This is something worth considering by the losing manager."

St. Elizabeth's, the national asylum for the insane, is now presenting a weekly hour of moving pictures, furnished by the General Film Exchange. The films used are of a comic and educational nature, omitting anything that might be exciting. The doctors consider this an excellent amusement and claim that it has no injurious effect upon their patients. The fact that they are entertained through sight without exertion of the mind makes the motion picture a favorable entertainment.

The Capitol Film Co. (Independent) is not making any picture for general distribution at present, confining its efforts to the many orders it has received for commercial films for private parties. Among the most noted of the educational films that it has made is one known as "The Sign Language," depicting a lecture for a deaf and dumb institute. This is being used at Kendall Green here before the speechless and hearingless inmates with much success.

The Capitol Film Co. has increased its capital and anticipates placing its factory somewhere on the Potomac River where it can have easy access to some of the beautiful natural scenery that surrounds Washington. Manager Boernstein is preparing to do great things shortly with the Capitol Film Co.

Manager Walker, of the Paramount Film Exchange, continues to keep very busy in his calm, business-like way, gaining new theaters and generally building up the trade for the Independents in this vicinity.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., April 5.—We have passed through a week of bitterness and strife, for the local picture managers and Prosecuting Attorney Wood met in the first of a series of legal bouts that are destined to last until the supreme court of the great State of Arkansas gives the final count and one or the other is declared out. It was "some scrap," believe me, and I am not stretching a point when I say that for genuine bitterness the local justice of the peace courts have seen nothing like it in years. The cause of all the trouble was the trial of Harry Hale and Henry Gillen, of the Lyric Theater, for exhibiting motion pictures in that house, or, in other words, for laboring on the Sabbath. The defense was represented by L. E. Sawyer and W. G. Bouic, and, gents of the moving picture industry, I want to state right here that I have heard some arguments in my years of reporting courts, big and small, but the line of talk these attorneys handed out to the jury had anything beaten a city block.

It is the intention of the local managers to carry these cases from one court to another, so, starting with Justice of the Peace Joe Alford, things began to happen almost the first crack out of the box. The defense was that the pictures were shown Sunday because of public necessity, and could you have been here when the evidence and trial was in progress you would have realized that there is a necessity for the same every day in the week, for conditions here are unlike any other city in the United States. The learned gentlemen, Messrs. Sawyer and Bouic, endeavored to prove that the pictures were needed for the sick who come to Hot Springs for their health, in order to take their minds off their condition, and rather surprised Judge Wood by bringing forward a number of witnesses whose testimony was strong on this point. The case was started with a statement of fact to the effect that the shows were open.

Mr. Hale's attorneys endeavored to show the cause for this necessity, but Judge Wood, who was prosecuting the case in person, objected and was sustained on almost every point. Attorney Sawyer read a decision of the supreme court in which the defendant had a right to show cause for necessity for laboring on the Sabbath, yet in the face of the ruling of the highest tribunal of the state Justice Alford held otherwise. More trouble came when Dr Holland, a physician who has been practicing here for the past nineteen years, was put on the stand for Mr. Hale. No sooner did the attorneys begin questioning him than Judge Wood interposed one objection after another, which, in most cases, were also sustained.

Dr. Holland stated, however, and the fact went before the jury, that he prescribed motion pictures to his patients, men and women, along with medicine, as part of the régime to recover one's health. He stated that looking at innocent motion pictures, a good, clean comedy or an elevating dramatic subject, was beneficial and that in his opinion they were necessary in this city; that there existed an actual necessity for them when one considers the sick who come here for their health, and should be shown on every day of the week.

Mr. Hale was placed on the stand and was NOT ALLOWED—don't forget that—to tell if his pictures were moral; he was not permitted to state whether a board of censors examined his pictures before they were released; in fact, he remained an attentive listener most of the time.

But that argument—oh, gentlemen of the trade, you should have heard it. There was nary a bet overlooked by Messrs. Sawyer and Bouie. And they took occasion to criticize in scathing manner Judge Wood's attitude towards the moving picture shows; they lambasted him for his fanaticism, and they ridiculed his policy towards the city generally in a manner never before heard of. In other words, they trimmed him fine and dandy. But he came back—oh, believe me, he came back. He paid his respects to "two astute attorneys" and then launched forth and went on record, giving his opinion of moving picture shows, whether on week days or Sunday.

"Moving picture shows," he sneered. "What are they, anyway? Holes in the wall; foul smelling, darkly-lighted places where men take their girls and where an opportunity is presented for improper proposals. Moving pictures, indeed. Gentlemen of the jury, these are nothing but breeders of disease and infamy. And these two astute attorneys come before an intelligent jury and try and convince you gentlemen that they would send the sick and the mentally afflicted in places of this kind for their health."

How do you like it? Well, the case finally went to the jury and after deliberating about an hour the judge was notified that they could not agree on a verdict. The case, by mutual consent, was tried with a jury of seven, and the vote stood five for acquittal and two for conviction, and one of the jurors who wanted to convict is a young man who plays pool every Sunday and attends the moving pictures Sunday night. Glory be, that's consistent, isn't it? The jury, you see, was a "hung" one and was discharged.

A few days later Mr. Hale, Mr. Baird and others who had been arrested last Sunday were surprised to receive visits from Sheriff Sid Houpt and his deputies, informing them that Judge Wood had taken their cases before the grand jury, which had indicted them and that they would be tried in circuit court. I also opine that is going some. I asked Judge Wood when he would bring these cases up for trial and he stated that he would try them just as soon as it was possible for him to do so; that he wanted to get the opinion of the supreme court of the state on the same, and that if that high tribunal decided there was a necessity for the picture shows to run on Sunday he would not interfere with them in the future. It is also interesting to note that the indictment rendered by the grand jury was for "breaking the Sabbath," not "laboring on Sunday," and that the former instance entails on conviction a fine of $25 and costs instead of "one buck" for laboring on Sunday. Now will you "labor" or "break"?

Notwithstanding the crusade two weeks ago, the picture men opened their houses again last Sunday and the same state of affairs was gone through with. Judge Wood and his deputies played tag with the managers, for as soon as the officers, with the judge in the lead, were seen coming up Central avenue, scouts stationed along the street would flash the signal to men in front of the respective theaters and down would come the blinds. This time, however, the judge knew the sound of the moving picture machine, so he entered the houses, stopped the shows and carried manager and crew away. Seated 'way down front was another crew, and no sooner did the first wend their way to the office of a justice of the peace than the "relief" would take up the "white man's burden" and the show would go on. By this time crew No. 1 and manager had signed the bail bond and started back for the theater they were taken from. Ahead of them would be the officers, who, by the time the first batch arrived, had arrested the "relief." The second delegation would be taken to the justice court and the first would assume charge. Back would come the officers the second time for the first crew and then the "relief" would take charge again, and so it went all day long, the arrests being witnessed by great crowds of interested spectators, who cheered the martyrs of motion photography. There are about a dozen cases booked for local courts, but all those "pinched" last Sunday expect to be made the recipient of grand jury literature. Yes, this is "some town" and when we do things we try to make it as interesting as possible for all concerned, at the same time providing as much amusement and entertainment for the waiting populace as is possible under the circumstances.

It gave me great pleasure the past week to visit Hot Springs new moving picture house, known as the Photo-Play Theater (George K. Spoor will please smile), which has been opened under the management of Seward Erickson and John Blaschke, two well-known and highly-respected gentlemen of this city. The new theater is situated in the very heart of the business district, is cozy in every sense of the word and has that air of newness and cleanliness that makes it a delight to patrons. The man in charge of the machine is getting a great light on his curtain and the past week both Trust and Independent pictures were used. Business has been very good and the house is due to become popular. It seats a few over 200.

The Princess Theater continues to play to "S. R. O." and the vaudeville there is of the best, especially so since they have the advantage of a "split week." At the Lyric the past week several of my old friends entertained. The Phelps Cullenbine Trio and Al. Mooney, and I was glad to see them, as we had not met since they were booked in at the Princess, Columbus, O., some three seasons ago, where I was managing the house. Harry Hale is doing a big business. His house is a popular one and you can always get your money's worth there, and a little bit more, too.

Among the pictures here this week we liked the Imp's "A Manly Man," and decidedly good was the work of Little Mary. (Honestly, now, could it be otherwise?) The Great Northern also pleased with its "Trunk Mystery" picture, and Bison did itself proud with "John Milton." Yes, Bison, that was some swell work there. Powers took us through Mexico in great shape and his scenic reel was greatly appreciated, especially in view of the unpleasantness now raging there. Reliance, we had your reel, "The Command From Galilee," and I want to state that you have an exceptionally fine leading lady, pretty and accomplished. She is capable of your best efforts and don't make her portray things ordinary. She knows how to act, believe me. Biograph gave us a great laugh with its "Comrades," and Essanay caused us to be sad with its "Oh, You Teacher." This was supposed to be a comedy picture, too, so you can imagine how well we liked it. "Max and His Sore Feet" also came to town and the hose he wore was admired as much as his humor.

Here's a little editorial squib I cut from the Courier Journal, the publication that Mars' Henri Watterson, of Louisville, Ky., presides over in such a distinguished manner. It shows the colonel appreciates the value of motion pictures. It says:

(Continued on page 11)

EXHIBITORS' PAGE

WHAT THE PUBLIC DEMAND

SUGGESTIONS FOR IMPROVEMENTS

DISSOLVING VIEWS.

By Lindsay Bancroft.

It has been more than surprising to me to note how small a number of theaters make use of the dissolving view lanterns. Truly there is no darkness but ignorance, or at least that is the way I figure out the lack of dissolving lanterns.

It is not so much a question of cost, for if the show will not justify the expenditure of a few dollars for a spare lantern and an extra economizer, it doesn't deserve to be called a show at all.

In some of the houses I have attended recently, dissolvers were in use, but in most of these, the possibilities of this double projection were almost entirely overlooked.

I recall one theater in particular, well fitted, well lighted, and running an excellent program. A peep into the operating room disclosed a No. 6 Powers double dissolver outfit complete, and a No. 5 Powers auxiliary machine. The whole plant was as pretty a set-up as one could wish. The pictures were all that could be desired, until the time came for that questionable joy, the "illustrated song." The song was above the average, the slides were some of Wheeler's best, but the projection!

The operator seemed to be using the dissolver under protest, and evidently believed that instantaneous dissolving was the acme of achievement. I believe if Nat Power had been in that house he would have said or thought things not in accordance with his religion.

The double dissolver is not exactly an apparatus that can be run haphazard with one hand whilst the machine is being threaded with the other. And it should not be used indiscriminately either. There are slides that are peculiarly adapted to the soft blending into each other that a careful operator can accomplish. There are others which, having nothing in common, should not be projected in this manner. One great oversight seems to be registration of the images on the screen. With a modern dissolving plant there is no excuse for the slightest variation between the image from the top lantern and that from the lower one. There is no excuse anyhow for any operator worth his salt can rig up a dissolving lantern at a pinch, and make the images register.

In the excellent little travel talks at Keith & Proctor's, it is deplorable to see single lantern projection, and not infrequently thumb-marked slides. I do not know the reason, but speak of facts as I saw them a few weeks ago in New York.

How many operators who are using double dissolvers have constructed a "curtain slide?" This is an almost necessary adjunct to the dissolving lantern, and can be made very simply. None of the makers, so far as I am aware, supply this accessory with their outfit.

The curtain slide of the double lantern is arranged to work up and down in the focal plane, close to the condensers. It consists of a sheet of metal, with two square openings, so arranged that as the sheet travels up or down before the picture, one slide is being uncovered whilst the other is being obscured. The effect on the screen is as if the pictures were actually being rolled up and down. There are some very novel and beautiful effects possible with the curtain and the dissolvers, one or two of which I will describe in detail in an early issue. If I were starting a new theater, one of the first requirements in the specifications for equipment would be double dissolving lanterns with each machine, and brass curtain slides with each, working on rack and pinion.

Lest I be accused of anything original in this, I will say that such specifications appeared in every first class lantern catalog in England twenty years ago, and, like many things English, they have not changed.

Just why our American lanterns were built without this improvement I never could understand.

M. P. POSTERS.

Posters illustrating special scenes from films are now used by every manufacturer. We have commented on many of them, condemned some, faintly praised others, and given good encomiums to a few. Some with their blood-and-thunder scenes adorn the Bowery, and are a reflection of the minds of the makers, and should be suppressed. Others pass just decently through their existence, and others are fair attempts at chromo-lithography. It has waited until now for the trade to be shown how. "Rex" has issued the creme de la creme, the Right Royal Poster de Luxe, and if our readers doubt us, let them send a postal for a copy of the poster showing the Rex leading lady in all her regal beauty, and if they are not satisfied we will refund their money.

BRANDT GOES TO MIRROR

Joe Brandt Brandenburg has resigned from the advertising department of The Player to accept the offer made by the New York Dramatic Mirror to become associated with its business staff.

Brandt was for several years connected with the Hampton Advertising Co., afterwards known as the Biggs, Young, Shone Co., and when that organization was merged with the Frank Seaman office became manager of the New York Office of The Billboard.

Owing to an attack of typhoid fever in September of last year, which kept him closely confined until January of this year, Brandt resigned from The Billboard force and later joined The Player staff.

The Player's loss is The Mirror's gain.

(Continued from page 9)

"They are charging $1,500 for a window to see the coronation ceremonies in London. We are going to save our money, pay a nickel and see the whole show at a moving picture theater."

Sounds great, don't it? Well, yes. But I wonder if the colonel realizes that he has committed "Lese Majesty," for colonel, don't you know you should not enter "Holes in the wall," or go to places that are "breeders of disease and infamy?"

Saw a Bison picture the past week in which one of the leading Indians had a great facial make-up, a typical redskin, but his hands were white as the driven snow. Say, did the grease paint or powder give out, Bison? Also noted that the beautiful set of furs worn by the "Vitagraph Girl," Miss Turner, in "The New Stenographer," and which, by the way, were most becoming, also "doubled" on its society picture. I refer to the one showing the husband and wife so thoroughly discontented, "An Aching Void." But never mind that, Vitagraph. Wardrobe, like actors and "actorines," must double, and I want to say this for you: "An Aching Void" was one of the best things you have handed us in many and many a day. And your "Red Eagle" was no slouch, either. It was fine. Keep it up. Selig, your "Code of Honor" is also entitled to a blue ribbon. It was a dandy.

Say, did any one fool you on April 1?

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

Brothers in Arms Meet On the Island of Bermuda

Sam Long, of the Kalem Company, on his tour of the world, stopped off at Bermuda with his wife and Mr. and Mrs. McQuillin to enjoy the beauties of the land of the lily and the rose.

The first one to greet Mr. Long and his party was jolly Bill Steiner, of the Yankee Film Company, and Pierce Kingsley, Bill's director.

After a delightful drive around the Island Mr. Long and his party attended a ball at the Hamilton Hotel in the evening, and returned to his ship in the wee hours of the morning and set sail for St. Thomas, wishing Bill Steiner and the Yankee Film Company a pleasant and profitable stay on the Island of Bermuda.

Mr. Steiner has two directors and 46 people in his party, who have been turning out four reels per week for the past two months.

The scenery of Bermuda surpasses anything in the world for beauty and surprises are in store for the picture-loving people in America when these subjects are released.

Only "Opening Gun" of Big Fight.

Washington, D. C., March 3.—The suit brought in Cleveland against the General Electric Company is only the opening gun in the government's fight against the so-called "billion-dollar" electrical trust. Officials of the Department of Justice declared that their investigations of the alleged combination have disclosed a situation which overshadows any other anti-trust prosecution the government has ever undertaken, not excepting the case against the Standard Oil Company.

The action against the General Electric is more or less in the nature of a test case, for the courts will be called upon to decide how far the patent laws of the United States may be construed to protect monopolies.

Investigations of the department have disclosed that the electrical business of the country appears to be divided into seventeen or more divisions or sections, each comprising some particular branch. The contention is that it is controlled by the complete organization of these divisions.

Although it was the announced intention of Attorney-General Wickersham not to begin any more anti-trust suits until the Standard Oil and the American Tobacco cases have been adjudicated in the United States Supreme Court, the questions relating to patent law are such as to bring the case now started into an entire different class.

(The above clipping from the Evening Bulletin, Philadelphia. We wonder when the Motion Picture Patents Company will come under this category for investigation on their so-called motion patents. Their methods are certainly a holding-up of an industry that ought to be open to all who can turn out good clean films of an educational and uplifting character. Will some of our many readers write the Secretary of State and call his attention to the state of affairs?—Ed. M. P. N.)

Moving Pictures in Italy.

The religious orders in Italy are trying to frighten their followers into submission to the church by holding up the mythical horrors of Hell as an example of what will happen to them if they do not follow the teachings as expounded by the parsons. As a sample of what is in store for the backsliders, they are showing Dante's Inferno in all the churches and parish halls. The film is now in London, England, running the rounds and is on the way to America to exemplify the fate of the wicked here. The cost, we understand, amounted to about $6,000, and will be shown largely among the religious organizations.

Moving Picture Pianists Becoming More Skillful.

In the early days of the moving picture show there was a great call for "professors" who could "vamp" on the piano, and there were not enough to go around. About the only available material for furnishing the piano "orchestra" for the miniature play houses was the concert hall genius, and it was in most cases hard work to persuade him to leave his favorite beer-flavored haunts for the cleaner and drier atmosphere of the moving picture houses.

The concert hall professional, able as he invariably was, to turn out any sort of an emotional piece was, when sober, an excellent orchestra to furnish the music most adaptable to accompany the movements of the figures on the moving picture screen. There was not enough of him to go around, however, and, consequently, any material was taken and some pretty crude material was seen and heard in the nickeldromes.

With the development of the moving picture show a better class of talent has appeared. Wagner had a chord of music typifying a sword stroke, another picturing musically a stroke of lightning, another illustrative of the tramp of horses' hoofs and notes even denoting the last dying breath of a warrior. Of course, the moving picture artists were not Wagners, but it is remarkable how in their crude way, they have come to acquire the art of accompanying the action of the picture with appropriate "music" or tones at least appropriate enough to convey to the patrons of the moving picture drama, a musical idea of the action of the piece. Some of them manage to give the effect of galloping horses and gunshots in cowboy dramas, imitate the groan of breaking furniture and shouts of the angry husbands in the domestic drama pictures, and go so far at times as to attempt to reproduce the yelps of dogs or the cries of a child upon the piano. Crude as this musical portrayal of the action is, one cannot help but admire the skillful adaptability of the instrumentalist, and, incidentally the best performers at those moving picture shows seem to be young women.—Newark (N. J.) Call.

The Lens Part of Photography.

By R. D. Gray.

A plain and practical discussion of the principles involved in the choice and use of lenses in photography. Written and illustrated for the help of those who buy and use photographic lenses—by a practical lens maker. A book that really answers your lens questions in simple language, with diagrams which tell at a glance. Tables showing the view angle given by different lenses on various sized plates. Table of enlargement and reduction, etc.

We commend this book to every cinematographer who can obtain it from the News by sending a subscription for six months, $1.00; or of Tennant & Ward, New York City, N. Y.

FOR INDEPENDENT THEATRES!

Official Slides of Your Favorite Players!

—"almost given away."
Drop a card today for further information to INDEPENDENT PHOTOSLIDE CO.
Room 207, 147 Fourth Ave., New York City

(Operating by exclusive permission of the Independent Film Manufacturers)

ADVICE TO OPERATORS ORACLE PRACTICAL ARTICLES FOR ALL DEPARTMENT

By WM. E. SMITH, E. E.

ELECTRIC GENERATORS, DIRECT CURRENT DYNAMO

Commutator and Brushes.—The current must be collected from the revolving structure by means of contact pieces, technically called the brushes, which are connected to the mains, and which press against the revolving structure.

The commutator, however, performs a function much more important than acting merely as a means of gliding contact, for, without its aid, the current collected would not be a continuous flow like the current from a battery. The reason for this is as follows: The poles of the field magnet are of two sorts, north poles and south poles, arranged alternately. Since the revolving conductors on the armature are moved first past a north pole, then past a south pole, then past another north pole, and so on in continual succession, it follows that the induction of voltage in the conductors will continually reverse, and reverse back. This process sets up alternating currents in the armature wires; and, unless these currents were commuted, they would be in a perpetual alternation in the mains of the circuit.

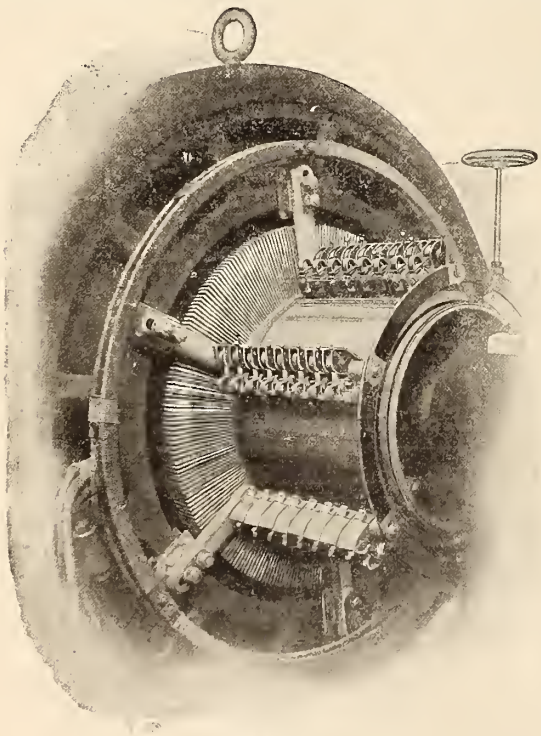

FIGURE 27

It is the function of the commutator to commute, or change, these alternating currents that exist in the armature, and deliver them to the external circuit as a "continuous" current. By continuous is meant flowing steadily in one direction, like the current from a battery. Some engineers call such a current a direct current.

Brush Holder Mechanism.—The brush holder mechanism is carried by brackets mounted on a rocker ring concentric with and carried on a machined seat on the front end of the field frame. The rocker ring shifting device is very simple and is easily operated. Every machine is so arranged that this shifting mechanism may be readily placed on either side; this detail of design is extremely convenient in many cases, especially where space is restricted. The brush holder is of the sliding type, with copper shunts connected directly from a clamp on each brush to the solid part of the holder. This arrangement prevents the transmission of current through the springs and eliminates the consequent heating of these springs and variation in pressure which would result. The brush holder is very simple and has no loose parts which could produce noise by their vibration; they are very quiet in operation. The brushes and moving element are very light and so follow the surface of the commutator with great freedom and with an absence of all chattering and resultant sparking. Ample means are provided for adjustment as the commutator wears and for changing the spring tension on the brushes. Copper-plated carbon brushes are used in all cases.

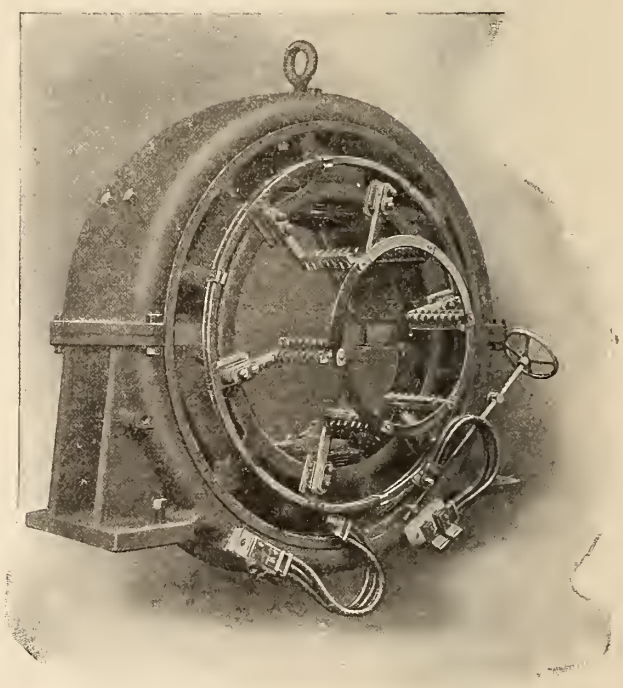

FIGURE 28

As there are several different dynamo field windings we shall take them in the following order:

Series Wound Generators.—In a series wound dynamo the field winding is in series with the armature and the number of ampere-turns therefore varies with every change in the current output. The field is wound with a comparatively small number of turns of coarse wire capable of carrying the full current output. The voltage of a series dynamo is low at light loads and increases rapidly as the load increases, until the field magnet approaches the saturation point.

Shunt Wound Generators.—In a shunt wound dynamo a small portion of the current is shunted through the field winding made of a large number of turns of fine wire. The exciting current varies from about five per cent of the total current in small dynamos to not over one per cent in larger ones; it depends only on the voltage at the terminals of the field winding and the resistance of the field. In a shunt wound dynamo, the voltage decreases considerably as the load increases.

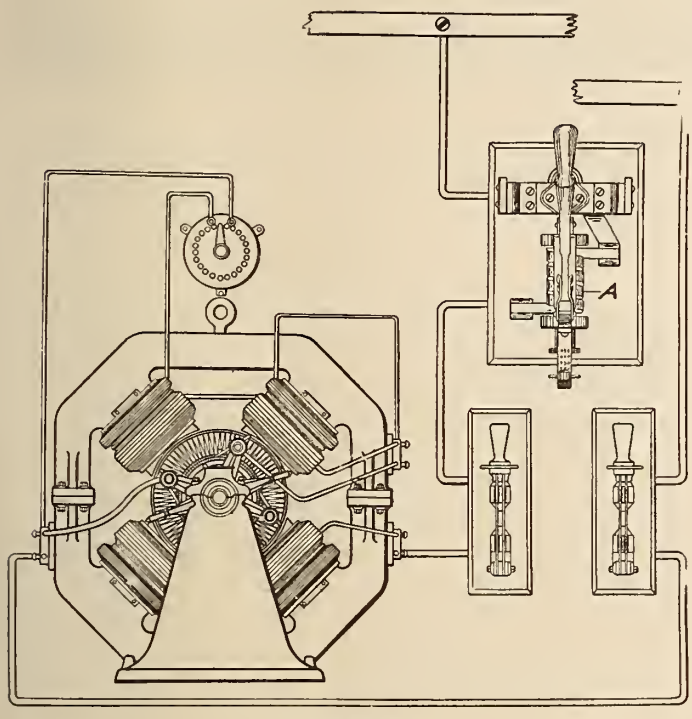

FIGURE 26

Compound Wound Generators.—In a compound wound dynamo the field has two sets of windings—a shunt winding and a series winding. In a compound wound dynamo the shunt winding provides the initial excitation sufficient to generate full voltage at no load. This excitation is approximately constant.

The series windings provide an excitation that increases as the load increases and strengthens the field so as to prevent the falling off in voltage that would otherwise occur.

The series windings may be made sufficiently powerful to make the voltage rise as the load increases, in which case the machine is said to be over compounded.

Figure 26 is a complete diagram of a compound wound generator.

Compound dynamos are usually provided with a field rheostat, to permit an initial adjustment of the voltage and also to compensate for changes in resistance in the shunt winding due to heating. This rheostat is not intended for voltage regulation purposes in the sense that it is used with the shunt wound dynamo, because after the voltage has been once adjusted the strengthening of the field to suit the loads is accomplished automatically by means of the series windings on the fields. The compound dynamo is the type universally used for direct current power and lighting work.

Motion Picture Operator Wanted

I am continually receiving requests for motion picture operators who are familiar with calcium and electric outfits, would ask operators who are out of work to write me stating their qualifications, etc.

Have a request for an operator to go to Middletown, N. Y., one who can operate a calcium light and electric.

DEPARTMENT OF WATER SUPPLY, GAS AND ELECTRICITY

13-21 Park Row, New York

April 3, 1911.

Mr. W. E. Smith,
30 West 13th St., New York City.

Dear Sir:

Responding to your request of April 1st, I beg to advise you that our Commissioner has promulgated the following new rule, to be known as 65-A-j:

> "The leads to the moving picture machine and its rheostat or equivalent device must be protected by a plug cutout or by a knife blade switch with open link fuses, both enclosed in an approved cabinet with self-closing door. Cartridge fuses will not be permitted."

You will observe that this new rule will not render the amount of current unlimited as the size of the wires and the capacity of the machine itself must be considered.

Yours truly,
H. S. WYNKOOP,
Electrical Engineer.

On telephone advice by Chief Inspector Skerrett, I am informed that the amount of current that may be used has been raised from 25 to 45 amperes, if the above is complied with.

E. L. Stephens, Martensville, Va., writes:—Lately I have been having some trouble about getting a focus with my machine, and would be awful glad if you could help me on this subject. I am using Edison's 1910 Model B machine with No. 2½ and No. 3 lens tubes, distance 45 feet to screen from machine. I have put in new condensers and tried my carbons in different positions but could get no better focus. When I get a focus in the middle of the picture about 3 feet in diameter it throws the rest of the picture out of focus and when I get a focus around the edge of the picture it leaves a bad focus about 3 feet in diameter in the middle of picture. Can move my shutter about one-quarter of an inch, caused from wear of cog wheels. I thought I would tell you this as it might have something to cause a bad focus. I have also moved my lamp house in different positions, but still could get no better focus. I will be very much obliged to you if you will help me on this subject. (Will a broken condenser cause a bad focus?) Both of my condensers are new ones not broken.

Answer:—Brother Stephens, your trouble of bad focus in the field of the picture is one which operators have quite often.

I presume that you have taken your lenses apart at some time to clean the interior of them. Well if you have done so you have evidently reversed one of the lenses, most likely the rear one; you will notice that this one is not cemented together like the front one. Well in putting the lens together you have undoubtedly got one of these turned around, most likely the one with the two outwardly curved surfaces. Turn the side with the flattest curved surface out, that is, so that it faces the aperture plate.

In regards to a cracked condenser affecting the focus, there don't seem to be any bad effects if only one of the condenser lenses is cracked. With your shutter being so loose, are you not having a travel ghost or white streaks in your picture? If you are, I would advise you to get some new gears for the shutter.

HARRY A. MACKIE

The projecting machine business under the above energetic man has increased so largely of late that they have taken additional quarters in their present building, 853 Broadway, to facilitate the proper handling of their products. The business will be incorporated and announcement will soon be made of the new company.

MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

THE STAMPEDE
Imp Release, April 17

Jose Almedo is a cattle thief and bandit, having evaded the officers for years, being cunning and bold. Marie, his wife, cognisant of his dishonest practices, endeavors to assist him.

Jose and his band plan a coup to run off with some cattle belonging to a rancher. Marie, being fearful that they will be apprehended goes to warn them, carrying her little girl, Nello. In her desperation, she struggles across the range but is in the path of the cattle, which are being pursued by the thieves. The cattle are running desperately and Marie is appalled at the sight. There is no escape by flight and she employs a trick that is well known to plainsmen. Breathing a prayer to her Maker, she seeks a depression in the prairie and lies down with her child beside her.

The affrighted cattle sweep on, over her, never deviating from their course, wild and terrorized. Marie is trampled to death but the child is unharmed.

Jose and his band, unaware of the fate of the woman, sweep past on their horses. The child arises and wanders away. Jose returns and finds his wife dead and is overcome with grief. Nello, the child, is found by the young son of the rancher, who is amazed to see the girl groping her way about alone. He takes her on his horse to his home.

Years elapse and Nello has grown to be a beautiful woman. She is riding one day with the son of the rancher and becomes lost from him. She is captured by the band of Jose, who has not forsaken his life of crime. She is taken to a cabin and held for ransom. Stationing a guard outside the cabin, Jose orders him to shoot the girl if she should attempt to escape. Jose intimidates Nello and is struck by her beauty. Becoming bolder, he makes improper advances only to discover by a locket she wears that she is his daughter.

The discipline in the band is a rigid one and there is no sentiment. Jose is racked with conflicting emotions. Parental love triumphs and he bids the girl go, and assists in her escape in a most ingenious manner. She goes without knowing the depraved bandit as her father.

Lett alone, Jose is stricken with remorse and fear. Realizing that he will pay the penalty with his life—which is worthless to him—he deliberately goes to the window, thrusts his body out and is shot by the guard and falls dead.

RESIGNATION
Imp Release, April 20

Ned Arling, a prisoner in the penitentiary, sits moodily in his cell, bitter at the world, a broken man, prematurely aged. He rails at his fate and then dreams of the events which sent him to a felon's cell.

The scene reverts to his once happy home. His mother and father are seated in the library, happy and engaged in examining some papers. The maid enters with a card and gives it to Mrs. Arling. She starts, reels and then steals out unobserved. She meets a former lover and a villain in the reception room. He threatens the helpless woman with exposure if she does not purchase his silence, saying he will acquaint her husband with compromising facts and exhibits letters. Mrs. Arling is terrified.

The son saunters into the room and overhears the conversation. He intuitively divines his mother is at the mercy of a designing rascal. Gently pushing her aside, Ned confronts the villain. The mother pleads with the son to go, but he sternly commands her to leave the room.

Ned demands the letters. The villain coolly refuses and with sangfroid inquires his interest in the matter. Ned, exasperated beyond reason, attempts to take the letters by force. The scoundrel draws a revolver and there is a struggle—a shot— and Mr. and Mrs. Arling comes rushing in followed by an officer. The villain is dying, unconscious. The scene is a highly dramatic one. The mother would shield her son but he signals her to keep silence. The visitor has been killed by his own hand. Ned announces himself as the murderer, explaining that it was a quarrel of his own seeking and the father, heartbroken, denounces the son. The mother is led away, prostrated with grief.

Ned awakens, smiles, and is resigned to his fate. He had saved the honor of his mother.

THE HERO
Imp Release, April 10

Maude is a hero worshipper. She loves Artie all right, but he is not just her ideal, being an effeminate-looking lad of the commonplace order.

She has her dream shattered when Artie evinces cowardice over a trivial matter and Maude is indignant. She tells him to get out and do things—to show her he is made of the right sort of stuff.

Artie plans a coup by bribing a prize fighter to allow him to beat him up. He makes the affair entirely too realistic and the "pug" turns in and wallops him good and plenty. Artie is once more in disgrace, but not out of the running. He has another brilliant idea, and to plan is to execute. He visits the home of Maude disguised as a burglar and robs her of her jewels. Quickly changing his attire, he appears in proper person and the girl tells him of her loss, being terrified. By dint of quick changes—thanks to a costumer—Artie chases the burglar about the place and finally ends it by presenting to Maude her jewels and the outer garments of the burglar as proof of his bravery and prowess just as her parents return from the opera and share in his glory.

Artie has made it good and strong by shooting a hole through his hat and Maude is satisfied that he is a real man. She throws herself into his arms, radiantly happy that she has discovered her ideal—a hero who has covered himself with glory.

"WEIGHED IN THE BALANCE"
Thanhouser Release, April 21

To carry out his experiments with high explosives, an old chemist spends all his money and finally mortgages his home, his sole remaining asset. The chemist, like most scientists of ability, is a poor business man, and, when his debt falls due, is unable to meet it. His creditor, a hard-headed banker, refuses any extension of time, and the scientist decides to seek the refuge of the weak, suicide.

He plans to blow himself up with a bomb he has constructed, and hopes that his fate will be regarded as an accident. Fortunately for him, his daughter, the widower's only child, discovers his plan in time to save him, and to excuse himself in her eyes he tearfully tells her of his troubles.

The girl decides to make another appeal to the creditor, and calls upon him, accompanied by her father. He offers them aid, but the condition horrifies the girl, for help will be accorded the father only on condition that the daughter marry the creditor.

The girl is engaged to the man of her choice. She must either break his heart, she thinks, or condemn her father to death—for she knows he will not survive if separated from his beloved laboratory. She chooses, and agrees to marry a man she hates

On the wedding day the rejected suitor makes his appearance unannounced. He confronts the bride, who is in her wedding dress and on her way to the altar. He shows her a revolver, and tells her that when the minister pronounces her the wife of the other man the pistol shot that ends his life will mingle with the congratulations of her wedding guests.

The girl tears the revolver from his grasp. He then tells her that in her father's laboratory he will find other means of death, and that it is appropriate that her family should supply the weapon that ends the life of the man they have ruined. Then he dashes out.

In her wedding dress the bride to be follows. By this time she is half crazed herself. They meet in the laboratory, and she brings forward the bomb that her father has constructed. She tells the young man that as they cannot live together they will die together, lights the fuse and awaits the end.

But the suitor is one of those men who is more interested in the theory of suicide than in the practice of it. His courage fails as the sees death, marked by the burning fuse, creeping slowly toward him. In a panic he runs away, leaving the girl to die alone. She is so weak and faint that she could not follow if she would.

The rejected suitor, while running away, meets the bridegroom. He babbles out the story, and tells him that the girl's death is only a matter of seconds. The other man is not deterred by this; he runs into the laboratory, and throws the bomb from the window in the nick of time.

The girl now has a chance to compare her two suitors. She sees that the man she thought she loved is a weak, pitiful creature unworthy of any good woman's respect, while the man she scorned has the strong, manly traits that compel admiration. He offers her her freedom, but she does not want it. She tells him that love has come into her heart, unexpectedly, and joyfully they go to the altar.

CALLEY'S COMET
Thanhouser Release, Tuesday, April 18

May Deering is the daughter of a celebrated astronomer who is more interested in the heavens than he is in his daughter's sweetheart, Jack Webster. In fact, he holds not a tiny jot of interest in Jack, and shows this by chasing the young chap from the house when the latter calls one evening to see the ideal of his dreams. This ideal takes Jack's ejectment from the house very much to heart, and, with her sweetheart she plans that it shall not happen again—but that Jack shall see her again, for all that.

So next day Jack enters in the costume and make-up of a dignified star gazer, and is heartily welcomed by his "brother astronomer," Prof. Deering, who is proud to see from the visitors card that he is: Graf Heinrich Von Twiller, A. M. B. C., Professor of Astronomy, University of Bauergarten.

Prof. Deering rushes the visitor to his observatory and discusses all the recent discoveries with him, finally inviting him to look through his telescope. The visiting astronomer takes a peep and pretends to find something very unusual. He pulls Prof. Deering to the instrument, but the latter searches in vain for the unusual signs Von Twiller says he noticed. While Prof. Deering is busy at the telescope his visitor becomes busy kissing his daughter, and each time Deering takes an extra peep, the visitor takes an extra kiss.

Prof. Deering leaves his visitor for a moment, and the latter reveals a paint pot and brush that he had "sneaked" in with him. Grabbing the outer lens of the telescope he paints the design of a comet on it, and when old Deering comes back and puts his eye to the instrument again, he dances with joy at what he sees. Then he rushes out to summon his friends to glimpse the marvelous sight. May and the visitor laugh heartily, and the latter pulls off his spectacles and whiskers. Prof. Deering then pops in, to see his "brother astronomer" revealed as Jack Webster, and orders him from the house. At this point the servant brings in the delegation of scientists who have responded to Prof. Deering's invitation to see the comet, but with the aid of a cloth and water Jack has erased it from the lens. Prof. Deering collapses when he finds the comet no longer apparent.

Then Jack does his best work and promises the Professor that he will replace the comet and save him from disgrace at the hands of his fellow scientists if he will consent to May's marrying him. The Professor says "Yes;" his good name is saved to him, and May is saved to Jack.

OLD HOME WEEK

Thanhouser Release, April 14

John Hepburn was raised in a little country village, and went to the city to seek his fortune. His relatives were dead, and he had quarrelled with his childhood sweetheart, so somehow Jayville rather passed out of his mind.

Years later, when he was one of New York's millionaires, it was recalled to his mind by reading an item to the effect that Jayville was to have an "Old Home Week," on which occasion the roving sons of the village were expected to gather and renew old friendships. The article also mentioned, incidentally, that the village could not boast of any millionaires among those who had gone out to seek fame and fortune.

But Hephurn was in the millionaire class, and he determined to show his old townsmen that he had not forgotten them. He wanted to prove, however, that they loved him for himself alone, and that the greed for gold could find no lodging in their sturdy breasts. So he hid all evidences of wealth and went down, to all appearances, a poor man, who had hattled with life and had not achieved much success.

Things did not turn out as he had expected. His shahby clothes caused unfavorahle comment, and everywhere he went he was shunned and snuhbed. The only person who greeted him cordially was his old sweetheart, and the love of childhood was revived.

After a time the villagers began to take notice of Hephurn. There was a reward offered for the capture of a noted hurglar, and it was decided, by unanimous vote, that Hephurn was the man wanted. So he was promptly arrested, and as the village had no jail, was locked up in a barn, and there was a sign over the door reading "Welcome," which made the first time that the village's richest son had received any attention.

The girl promptly freed him, for the country constahles pay little attention to prisoners after they lock them up. And the hoy returns to the city, with the girl's promise that she will wed him as soon as he says the word.

He says the word promptly. The girl meets him under the old tree on which, as children, he has carved their initials, and they are married. Then they start off on their wedding trip in his auto.

The machine, when it draws up at the railroad depot, causes the villagers to gape. Their surprise is intensified when their former townsman, utterly ignoring them, tacks a sign up on the side of the depot. And their grief cannot he expressed when they read the sign.

For he explains, in a few vigorous words, that he has bought the railroad and that after the current day, trains would not stop at Jayville.

If the villagers had been good, they might have been presented with a library. As it is, all they have is the privilege of seeing trains go by and never stop.

And the principal fun at a country station is watching the trains stop.

THE MINISTER'S SON

Yankee Release, April 17

Madge Morton, who after losing her mother, is left alone in the world, leaves the humble home in the country to seek work in the city. Weary and footsore, trudging along, she meets with an accident by heing run down hy a 'hus—the incident happens at the gateway of a minister's home. She is taken into his house and cared for. The kind minister soon learns the girl's story and proposes to adopt her, to which the poor girl gratefully consents.

The minister has a son, Harry, who is attending college. The boy meets a woman of the world who professes to care for him—but only for personal gain.

The boy is at home during vacation time, and one day the minister, who is treasurer of a relief fund, receives an express package containing some three hundred dollars. The hoy being in sore straits for funds to lavish on the woman he is smitten with, resolves to help himself to some of this fund money, which his father has placed in his desk.

Madge, the minister's adopted daughter, has witnessed the boy taking the money, and as she stands transfixed with horror, the boy tears the hand from the hundle of hills and it drops to the ground. She has just picked up the band and is holding it in her tremhling hands as the minister, who has missed the money, rushes from the house. Seeing the hand in her hand, he believes that she is the guilty one and orders her from his sight. The poor girl, who worships the hoy, allows the blame to fall on her to shield the erring one, and, donning her old clothes, leaves the happy home, hroken-hearted and dejected.

In the meantime, the hoy has hastened to the woman and finds her enjoying herself in a lobster palace with another man. The boy flies into a rage and is laughed at hy them. It dawns on the boy that he has heen used as a dupe and he returns home with the money intact, only to learn from this father that Madge was accused of the crime. The hoy sohs out his guilt and hands hack the money to his father and vows to ever walk the straight and narrow path.

Madge must he found, so the boy hastens off to find her and hring her hack, which he succeeds in doing. She receives the minister's humble apology and a new life begins for hoth Harry and Madge as they listen to the good Minister's tale of the children of Israel who hath passed through the fires of Moloch.

The scenery is unsurpassed in tropical beauty, being one of the Yankee famous World series.

WILLIE'S WINNING WAYS

Yankee Film Company Release, April 14

Willie Wynne decided he needed a vacation and took a trip to Bermuda, contrary to his father's wishes.

Arriving at the Island of Charms, he received a wireless from his irate parent that he has heen disowned and cut off without the proverhial shilling, for this piece of insubordination. The news depresses Willie but temporarily, for the delightful climate and the beauty of bis surroundings had that stimulating effect upon Willie that al ltourists soon remark.

Willie's impression that Bermuda produces only potatoes and onions was quickly dispelled, for upon meeting Winnie Whey, a Bermuda miss, and catching a flash of her roguish eyes, he whistled and exclaimed "Gee! hut she's a peach."

Everything thrives and ripens quickly in Bermuda, and so did the affection of these two young people, hut not without some of the usual "course of true love" humps.

Winnie's daily constitutionals were taken in the company of her old colored maid, and the only opportunity the young folks had to develop their love affair was while Mammy took her forty winks. Waking sooner than usual one day, Mammy caught her young charge talking to a strange young man and straightway took her home. With Yankee assurance, Willie interviewed Winnie's parents, and convinced them that he was worthy of their daughter's hand. All would have heen well had Willie not dropped the wireless message received from his father, just where his prospective father-in-law was hound to find it and which caused that gentleman to change his mind as to Willie heing a desirable son-in-law.

Unconscious of this turn of events and elated at his success, Willie hastens to keep an appointment with his friend, Jockey Queen, who is to have a mount in the Bermuda Derhy to he run that day. Jockey Queen informs Willie that he is to ride May Amelia in the Derhy, and that harring accidents she was sure to win. A good judge of horseflesh, Willie visits the paddock and is so pleased with the appearance of the mare that he hacks her for a large sum. The result of the race is a matter of history—May Amelia won with ease and Willie Wynn won a small fortune.

Good luck comes in hunches, for arriving at his hotel, Willie finds a satisfactory reply to a cahlegram he had sent his father earlier in the day. Juhilant, successful and happy Willie hastens to impart the good news to Winnie and her parents. Winnie's parents, however, receive him coolly and her father shows the mischief-making wireless to Willie. Willie pleads his ahility to support a wife now that he has won a fortune, hut Mr. Whey is ohdurate and only relents when Willie produces his father's reply, giving his consent to his son's marriage.

A CLOSE CALL

Yankee Release, April 21

Ranchmen in the vicinity had heen losing their hest horses for some time and had decided that it was ahout time to hunt up the culprit and stop his depredations.

The sheriff and his posse, hot on the heels of the horse-thief, notices a stolen horse tied outside of the general store, but the horse-thief eludes capture, leaving the stolen horse hehind him.

In his escape through the woods he comes upon John Rodgers, a young ranchman, who has dismounted to water his horse and which the horse-thief takes possession of and rides off. John fires after him but merely wounds the desperado.

John has heen away from home for some time and has been hurriedly called hack hy a message from home, and in his anxiety to lose no time he looks for another mount. He visits a nearby farmer for the purpose of horrowing a horse and finds no one home, so decides to temporarily take a horse so that he might proceed on his journey.

The sheriff, hot in pursuit of the horse-thief, whom he knows could not have gone far on foot, runs across John with a strange horse in his possession and naturally assumes that John is the man who has been guilty of the previous thefts and makes haste to mete out speedy Western justice. John tries to explain and pleads with his captors, and it is only after John produces the letter from his wife to the effect that there has heen a new arrival in the family and that she wants him home at the earliest possible moment, that they credit John's story and allow him to depart.

John arrives home. Approaching the house he sees his own horse tied in front of the door, which he cautiously approaches, and recognizes a strange voice. John enters the house quietly and, to his surprise, finds the horse-thief whom he has wounded being made comfortable. John gets a drop on the horse-thief and makes explanations to his wife and immediately departs with the culprit to prove to the sheriff and the posse that they have made no mistake in helieving his story. John delivers the horse-thief over to the sheriff, who takes charge of him.

THE LITTLE MAJOR

Rex Release, April 13

A little boy of great courage and a born fighter, who loves his mother with an intensity that amounts to a veritable passion, has all the resources of his mind and heart called into activity when his mother is brought face to face with death. There is a soul of a man in the little major, but it has only been shown when he puts an awkward squad composed of his two sisters through a military drill or devises an imitation of the Indian-cowboy play. The moment, however, that real danger threatens, he meets it with greater skill and fortitude than any of the grown-ups.

Father, nurse and physicians form a small army of defeuse againist the ruthless invador. Death, when he threatens to take the light of the home, hut the mother sinks into the depths. Major, having uttered his evening prayer, is put to bed, but while the other children sleep, he is restless. He wakes from a dream, a tiny tot in pajamas, and waiks to the lattice window of the nursery where the moonlight streams in. He hegs for aid on high, first in childish invocation, then in prayer. Light comes streaming on his face and into his mind. He steals softly through the house past the watching husband and physicians and makes a tender appeal to his unconscious mother. He calls and calls, never weary, never losing faith, until his loved voice reaches the fluttering soul and hrings it hack from its wandering. It is a triumph of pure love, hut when he has triumphed, the little major takes all the credit and repels the watchers—"She is mine," he declares, "I saved her." So he did, for the story is founded on fact.

A HALF-BREED'S COURAGE

Champion Release, April 19

A wild, harum-scarum cowgirl is the "Rose" of the ranch. We see her first shooting the hats off the heads of the lined-up boys. Though widely sought, she refuses offers of marriage galore, but when handsome young Wilbur Newhurg comes forward, she accepts him and from then on undergoes a complete change.

A few months later she develops into a meek, gentle and loving wife to a hushand who adores her. Charitahle to almost a fault, the entire neighhorhood loves her, and when any of the hoys get wounded hy stray gun-shots, they come to Rose for medical care. In this instance, Mose, the half-hreed, is struck through the hand hy a stray

(Continued on poge 17)

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 1—Return from Seaside Bathing.....
Feb. 1—Tweedledum Tries Winter Sports...
Feb. 8—Tweedledum as a Detective.....
Feb. 15—The Demon 900
Feb. 22—Redeeming Angel.....
Mar. 1—Tweedledum, Aviator.....
Mar. 1—War of the Cossacks.....
Mar. 8—Prisoner of Caucasus (Dr.)..... 900
Mar. 15—A Coward (Dr.).....
Mar. 15—Adventures of a Countryman in Town (Com.) 322
Mar. 22—Tweedledum's April Fool Joke (Com.) 900
Mar. 29—A Glimpse of Neapolitan Camorra.

AMERICAN.

Mar. 6—Memories (Dr.) 375
Mar. 9—The Rich and the Poor (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 13—The Penalty (Dr.).....
Mar. 16—The Job and the Girl (Com.).....
Mar. 16—Do You Know This Woman? (C.)
Mar. 20—The Field of Honor (Com.)..... 985
Mar. 23—The Harem Skirt (Com.) .....
Mar. 27—The Talisman (Dr.) 985
Mar. 30—Osteopathy (Com.) 277
Mar. 30—Two Girls (Dr.) 723
Apr. 3—Oh! You Suffragette (Com.) 460
Apr. 3—A Cure for Laziness (Com.) 540
Apr. 6—Reddy's Redemption (Dr.) 995
Apr. 10—Cupid's Pocketbook (Com.) 1000
Apr. 13—Jim Minds the Baby (Com.) 350
Apr. 13—The Bungalow Craze (Com.)..... 750

CHAMPION.

Jan. 11—Bill's Widow (Dr.)..... 950
Jan. 18—The Will of a Western Maid (Dr.).
Jan. 18—Why He Went West (Dr.)..... 950
Feb. 1—Judged by Higher Power (Dr.)....
Feb. 8—At Double Trouble Ranch (Dr.)... 950
Feb. 15—Her Three Proposals (Com.)..... 950
Feb. 22—The Old Man and Jim (Dr.)..... 950
Mar. 1—A Western Girl's Choice (Dr.).... 950
Mar. 8—The Vindication of John..... 950
Mar. 15—The Girl and the Oath (Dr.)..... 950
Mar. 22—The Pay-Roll (Dr.)..... 950
Mar. 29—The Bachelor's Old Maid..... 950
Apr. 5—The Price He Paid..... 950
Apr. 12—Men of the West (Western).....
Apr. 17—With Stonewall Jackson (Edu.)....
Apr. 19—A Half Breed's Courage (Western)
Apr. 24—Gen. Meade's Fighting Days (Edu.)

ECLAIR

Jan. 30—The European Lunch.....
Jan. 30—The Elusive Robber.....
Feb. 6—Doctor Against His Will (Dr.)..... 984
Feb. 13—Mr. Faddleaway is on Strike (Com.).522
Feb. 13—The Elixir of Bravery..... 424
Feb. 20—The Heart of a Warrior (Dr.)..... 682
Feb. 20—Hospital for Small Animals (Spec.). 286
Feb. 27—Punch 595
Feb. 27—Beware of the Bomb (Com.)..... 370
Mar. 6—King Phillip the Fair and the Templars 975
Mar. 13—An Unforeseen Introduction (C.). 470
Mar. 13—A Day of Storms (Com.)..... 430
Mar. 20—Cain (Dr.) 790
Mar. 20—The Rock Climbers (Scenic)..... 195
Mar. 27—Hurrah!Hurrah! Let Us Marry!.. 975
Apr. 3—A Strike in the "Make Young" Business 534
Apr. 3—Mr. Nearsight's Marriage..... 426

GREAT NORTHERN.

Jan. 7—The Red Light (Dr.).....
Jan. 14—A Homeless Boy (Dr.).....
Jan. 21—The Trunk Mystery.....
Jan. 28—Triumph of Intelligence..... 391
Jan. 28—Mr. Muggins Has His Sewing Done (Com.) .....
Feb. 4—The Criminal Chief's Capture.....
Feb. 11—Found Again (Dr.).....
Feb. 18—The Life of a Muschik.....
Feb. 18—The False Alarm.....
Feb. 25—His Great Duty (Dr.).....
Mar. 4—The Rival Servants (Dr.).....
Mar. 11—The Son of the Executioner (Dr.)
Mar. 18—Between Love and Duty (Dr.)....
Mar. 18—Life and People South of the Equator (Scenic) .....
Mar. 25—The Fakir's New Servant (Com.).
Mar. 25—Troubles of a Trip (Com.).....
Apr. 1—A Victim of His Double (Dr.)....
Apr. 8—A Confidence Trick.....

IMP.

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Feb. 2—The Mix-up .....
Feb. 2—An Imaginary Elopement.....
Feb. 6—At the Duke's Command (Dr.)....1000
Feb. 9—The Mirror (Com.)..... 500
Feb. 9—When the Cat's Away (Com.).... 500
Feb. 13—Her Darkest Hour (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 16—The Convert (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 20—Pictureland 1000
Feb. 23—Artful Kate (Dr.).....1000
Feb. 27—A Manly Man (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 2—Army Manoeuvres in Cuba (Edu.) 500
Mar. 2—The Dynamiters (Com.)..... 500
Mar. 6—Tracked (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 9—The Message in the Bottle (Dr.)...1000
Mar. 13—The Secret of the Palm (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 16—The Fishermaid (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 20—In Old Madrid (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 23—The Penniless Prince (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 27—Sweet Memories (Dr.) 1000
Mar. 30—So Shall Ye Reap (Dr.).....1000
Apr. 3—The Lover's Signal (Dr.) .....
Apr. 6—The Image of Fate (Dr.) 1000
Apr. 10—A Good Cigar .....
Apr. 10—A Faithless Man .....
Apr. 13—The Storm .....

ITALA

Jan. 21—Visit of a Friend.....
Jan. 26—The Revenging Picture.....
Jan. 28—My Son Is Guilty.....
Feb. 2—The Village Coachman.....
Feb. 4—The Feast of Foolshead.....
Feb. 9—John Milton 900
Feb. 11—Foolshead at the Kinematograph... 900
Feb. 16—The Fatal Charm..... 900
Feb. 18—Who Will Eat the Turkey..... 900
Feb. 23—Little Souls 770
Feb. 25—Foolshead Present .....
Feb. 25—Havana Cigar .....
Mar. 2—Nini's Doll.....
Mar. 4—Cato and the Flag.....
Mar. 4—Foolshead More than Usual.....
Mar. 9—Nobility (Dr.)..... 900
Mar. 11—Foolshead Shooting (Com.)..... 900
Mar. 16—A Dog and Two Mistresses..... 986
Mar. 18—Foolshead in Soiree (Com.).....
Mar. 18—Toto on the State (Com.).....
Mar. 23—Waiting for the Midnight Express. 900
Mar. 25—Toto Wants to Get Thinner..... 500
Mar. 25—Queen of the Sea..... 500
Apr. 1—Foolshead Goes to See a Cockfight.
Apr. 15—The Fall of Troy .....
Apr. 8—Foolshead—Lady of Company.....

LUX.

By Prieur.

Feb. 3—Back to the Old Homestead.....
Feb. 10—The Orphan's Friend (Dr.)..... 711
Feb. 10—That Horse Did Run (Com.)..... 272
Feb. 17—Bronco Bill, the Brave Cowboy (Dr.) 639
Feb. 17—Matilda Lovestruck (Com.)..... 321
Feb. 24—A Child's Prayer (Dr.)..... 534
Feb. 24—Matilda Chased (Com.)..... 354
Mar. 3—Jack's Lucky Horseshoe (Dr.).... 530
Mar. 3—On Their Honeymoon (Com.)..... 440
Mar. 6—Angel of the Bowery (Dr.).....
Mar. 10—The Senorita's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Mar. 10—Bill in Love Again (Com.)..... 432
Mar. 10—Jones' Remedy (Com.)..... 524
Mar. 17—Dogs Not Admitted (Com.)..... 534
Mar. 17—Bill Has Kleptomania (Com.)..... 380
Mar. 24—Cowboy Friendship (Dr.) 636
Mar. 24—Edith Has Some Sport (Com.).... 322
Mar. 31—The Greed of Gain (Dr.)..... 652
Mar. 31—He Wanted a Hoop (Com.) 281
Apr. 7—Bill's Little Plan (Com.)..... 386
Apr. 7—A Desperado (Dr.)..... 586

NESTOR FILM CO.

Dec. 28—Elda of the Mountains (Dr.).....
Jan. 4—At Cedar Ridge (Dr.).....
Jan. 11—Sleepy Hollow (Dr.)..... 950
Jan. 18—Their New Minister (Dr.).....
Jan. 25—The Man in 23.....
Jan. 25—New Minister .....
Feb. 1—The Bridal Trail.....
Feb. 8—The Transgressor .....
Feb. 15—The Light Beyond.....
Feb. 22—His Father's House (Dr.).....
Mar. 1—The Professor's Romance (C.-D.). 990
Mar. 8—In the Commissioned Ranks.....
Mar. 8—In the Commissioned Ranks (Dr.).
Mar. 15—Was It Worth While? (Dr.).....
Mar. 22—Could You Blame Him? (Com.)...
Mar. 29—The Truth (Dr.) .....
Apr. 5—The Stolen Necklace .....
Apr. 12—A Midnight Adventure (Com.).....

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

("Bison")

Jan. 27—Trials of Bud Brown..... 900
Jan. 30—A Tough Tenderfoot.....
Feb. 3—A Squaw's Bravery.....
Feb. 7—The Half Breed's Plan.....
Feb. 9—John Milton (Dr.).....
Feb. 10—The Salted Mine (Dr.).....
Feb. 14—The Deputy's Honor..... 900
Feb. 17—The Warrior's Squaw..... 900
Feb. 21—The Way of a Red Man (Dr.)....
Feb. 24—The Fate of Joe Dorr (Dr.).....
Feb. 28—A Warrior's Faith.....
Mar. 3—Owanee's Great Love.....
Mar. 7—Dick Farrell's Prize.....
Mar. 10—Her Prisoner (Dr.).....
Mar. 14—Starlight the Squaw (Dr.).....
Mar. 17—Sacrifice of Silver Cloud (Dr.)....
Mar. 21—Was He Justified? (Dr.)..... 900
Mar. 24—The Cowboy's Waif (Dr.) 900
Mar. 28—An Indian Nemises (Dr.) .....
Mar. 31—The Red Avenger (Dr.) .....
Apr. 4—At Bar U Ranch (Dr.).....
Apr. 7—Avery's Dream (Com.).....

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Feb. 21—What Would You Do (Com.).....
Feb. 25—Across the Mexican Border (Dr.).
Feb. 28—The Call of the Heart (Dr.)..... 950
Mar. 4—Home Sweet Home (Dr.)..... 950
Mar. 7—When Masons Meet.....
Mar. 7—The Bandit's Surprise.....
Mar. 11—A Gamble with Love.....
Mar. 14—Come Back to Erin.....
Mar. 18—His Mind's Tragedy .....
Mar. 21—Just Kids (Com.).....
Mar. 21—A Trip About Christiana.....
Mar. 25—Ogallalah (Dr.) .....
Mar. 28—The Boy from the East.....
Mar. 28—The Pantaloon Skirt (Com.).....
Mar. 28—A Western Ruse (W. Dr.).....
Apr. 1—Cupid's Monkey Wrench (Com.)..
Apr. 4—Oh! You Mother-in-Law (Com.)..
Apr. 4—Touring Athens (Scenic).....
Apr. 8—A Western Ruse .....

RELIANCE

Mar. 8—A Trick of Fortune..... 900
Mar. 11—Ever the Accuser.....
Mar. 14—Come Unto Me..... 900
Mar. 18—At Swords Points (Dr.).....
Mar. 22—When Red Turned Gray (Dr.)....
Mar. 25—Pallid Hues in Clouded Skies..... 900
Mar. 29—If It Ever Were Thus (Dr.)..... 900
Apr. 1—Till Death Do Part.....
Apr. 5—Rickshaw the Detective .....
Apr. 5—Summer Skies .....
Apr. 8—The Gloved Hand (Dr.).....
Apr. 12—Thirty Minutes (Dr.).....

REX

Feb. 16—"A Heroine of '76" (Dr.)..... 875
Feb. 23—"The Story of a Prayer Rug" (Dr.) 895
Mar. 2—"By the Light of the Moon" (Com.) 950
Mar. 9—"The Fall of a Knight" (Com.)..... 958
Mar. 16—Where the Shamrock Grows (Dr.). 950
Mar. 23—Five Hours .....
Mar. 30—As Ye Sow.....
Apr. 5—"The Heiress" (Com.)..... 975
Apr. 13—"The Little Major" (Dr.)..... 960

SOLAX COMPANY

Mar. 10—Caribou Hunting .....
Mar. 15—A Midnight Visitor (Com.).....
Mar. 17—The Hindu Prince (Dr.).....
Mar. 22—Cupid's Victory (Com.).....!...
Mar. 24—Out of the Depths (Dr.).....
Mar. 29—A Package of Trouble (Com.)....
Mar. 29—She Was Not Afraid (Com.).....
Mar. 31—The Mill of the Gods (Dr.).....
Apr. 5—The Maid's Revenge (Com.)..... 992
Apr. 7—The Rose of the Circus (Dr.).....1,000

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Feb. 3—Adrift .....
Feb. 7—Westerner and the Earl.....
Feb. 10—The Norwood Necklace.....
Feb. 14—For Her Sake (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Checkmate (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—The Patriot Maid of '76 (Dr.).....
Feb. 21—For Washington .....
Feb. 24—A Newsboy Hero.....
Feb. 28—The Litle Mother (Dr.).....
Mar. 3—Stage Struck (Dr.).....
Mar. 7—The Mummy (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 10—The Spirit Hand (Dr.).....1000
Mar. 14—His Younger Brother.....
Mar. 17—Robert Emmett .....
Mar. 21—Divorce (Dr.) .....
Mar. 21—Waiting at the Church (Com.)....
Mar. 24—The Tramp (Dr.).....
Mar. 28—The Imposter 1000
Mar. 31—Silas Marner 1000
Apr. 4—Charity of the Poor (Dr.) .....
Apr. 7—Vindicated .....
Apr. 11—Velvet and Rags.....
Apr. 14—Old Home Week (Com. Dr.).....

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Feb. 13—Condemned to Death (Dr.).....
Feb. 17—Her Birthday Surprise (Com.)....
Feb. 20—A Life-Time Repentance (Dr.).....
Feb. 24—The Woman Who Dared (Dr.)....
Feb. 27—All for Gold (Dr.).....
Mar. 3—The Abduction of Parson Jones (Com.) .....
Mar. 6—Angel of the Bowery (Dr.).....
Mar. 10—The Senorita's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Mar. 13—The Test of Love (Dr.).....
Mar. 17—His Double Treasure (Dr.).....
Mar. 20—The Open Gate (Dr.).....
Mar. 24—Love's Ebb and Flood (Dr.).....
Mar. 27—Tom and Jerry (Dr.).....
Mar. 31—Her Mother's Fiance (Dr.).....
Apr. 4—Secret of the Opal Mine (Dr.)....
Apr. 4—The Girl Stowaway's Heroism (Dr.)
Apr. 10—An Adventure in Sicily (Dr.).....
Apr. 14—Willie's Winning Ways (Com.).....

(Continued from page 15)

bullet, and he at once solicits the attendance of the Newburgs, who accept him in their household until the wound is healed.

Tearing off the bandage, the half-breed announces himself cured, and is going to return to his shack in the mountains. For the protection of his still weak hand, Newburg gives him his gauntlets, and Mose, putting one on, tenders promises of grateful service, should they ever require it, and then departs. He stops on the way, however, to let Rancher Coigne's little girl play with his braids. They are interrupted by the irate father of the child, who provokes a quarrel. A gun is drawn in the scuffle, which explodes and causes the death of Coigne, and the disappearance of the half-breed.

The boys start in pursuit of the offender, and in examining the dead body, espy a glove lying nearby. It is one of Newburg's gauntlets. This renders damaging evidence. Despite the earnest protestations of Newburg and his wife, he is led away by the sheriff. Wild with grief, the little woman bethinks herself of the half-breed who received the gauntlet, and concludes that he is the slayer.

Jumping upon her horse, she dashes to the scene of the crime, and then picking up the trail, rides madly off to seek the real murderer and thus save her husband. Mose strongly dissents against returning to justice, but later succumbs to her womanly and tearful appeal for his gratitude and her husband, and then consents to go back. Then commences a race against death—for Newburg has been sentenced by his captors to death by rope.

The wife and half-breed fairly fly over space and their efforts are not in vain to stop the execution of the innocent, as they arrive not a minute too soon. With the explanations exchanged, the men are satisfied to liberate the one for the other, and thereby preserve the law of Justice.

WITH STONEWALL JACKSON
Champion Release, April 17

The pride of the Kosgroves of Virginia is indeed gratified beyond measure when General "Stonewall" Jackson and his staff accepts the proffered hospitality so effusively tendered by them.

The young and the only son of Widow Kosgrove has enlisted and is about to join his company when the General takes a new flag from the hands of his mother, sister and wife, and presents it to the young husband as a memorial of trust.

With a light heart and joyous tread, the pride of Kosgrove Manor marches away with the army. Heavy service is encountered and at the terrible slaughter at Henry House, the deafening din of the cannon's roar, the proximity of the bursting shells from the enemy's works, the deadly havoc wrought and the loss of life utterly unnerve and terrify the lad, who deserts the field at the height of battle and skulks home.

Against the unavailing protests of his family, the boy will not return, and to preserve the untarnished name of Kosgrove, his beautiful young wife dons a uniform and musket and regains the regiment in time to march with them to Winchester, Va. Desperate fighting ensues, and the Blues capture an important position. Their commander mounts the bulwark and seizes the Confederate colors, but for the instant, and is downed by a bullet from the young wife's musket. She saves the flag but falls beneath the avenging bullets of the officer's men.

Her body is brought home and with a last look at the corpse of his courageous wife, Kosgrove undergoes a complete regeneration, and he re-enters the service with a vow to never return without capturing a Union flag as a trophy. "Stonewall Jackson" was routing the Federals and advancing on Winchester. With Jackson's permission the boy heads a body of brave Southerners, and retakes the position lost by the Grays and stoutly maintains it, replacing the Union Stars and Stripes with the Southern Bars that his martyred wife had saved, thereby being commended by Jackson.

Then they brought him home, too, but the war was over. His life, too, was extinct, and with a smile of reverence he entwines the both colors in his stiffening fingers. With a last glimpse at his country's banners, he departs this world, and his soul flees to join that of his wife before the Bar of Righteousness and the Stars of Love.

THE LAST ROSE
Powers Release, April 22

The bivouac! The reconnoitre! The ambush and victory! Are these terms of warfare descriptive of some terrible struggle between armies? Bless you—no! But when the favorite flower girl of Tommy Atkins in Ireland is in danger of being captured by a visiting American captain, all the strategic art of war is called in by the quartette of English soldiers who have long since set their hearts on making the conquest.

Captain Laurence, dashing and handsome, sends a note asking for the last rose, and little Molly Shannon's parents and their clerical advisor agree that she ought to. So she does, and with her own dainty hands brings him the last rose of summer.

The Englishmen soon enough learn of Capt. Laurence's victory, and are quick to hatch the most diabolical plot one ever dreamt of to monopolize her attention, if even for a time. It's a real military manoeuvre, and they succeed. But they never figured on Yankee wit, and before they can realize it the American has not only turned all their efforts to naught, but by a clever movement has caught all four of them off their guard and has outflanked, out-generaled and outmanœuvred them.

Disgruntled, disheartened, but still severely love sick, the "King's finest" must march off the scene in confusion, making way for the spirit of Uncle Sam, which has so completely enveloped little Molly Shannon.

COPPER WIT
Powers Release, April 18

There is two iv thim, two coppers, y' see—Officer O'Toole an' Roundsman McGinnis. And did ye ever hear of a plain cop getting the better of his superior officer in a quest for the hand of some fair chambermaid or other domestic? Sure—ye didn't! But ye will now.

Ye see, it would never have come about only that O'Toole was not smart enough to meet Mary Ellen where the roundsman could not catch them; but he did, and swore dark revenge. For a long time he waited for the chance, until one day, when he was himself bound for a beer-fest in Fritz Krausmeyer's bakery, he saw his rival go down the cellar ahead of him. Now, McGinnis is no fool, so he waited outside of the cellar for the cop to emerge; the rest is easy for a roundsman.

But while on his way for another kettle of beer, Fritz saw him waiting, and on his return told the cop about it. Here is where O'Toole gets in some fine brain-work, for he arranges to make his exit in a big basket together with some loaves of fresh bread; he is loaded onto the wagon right before the roundsman's eyes—that is, the bread is before his eyes, and O'Toole gets away. Wurra! Wurra!

And so it comes to pass that McGinnis thinks he sees the cop's ghost when O'Toole walks triumphantly by him, and the roundsman can't tell you even today just how that divil of an ordinary cop ever got out of the cellar—and McGinnis has been there often enough to know every exit, you can bet!

THE WINE HARVEST

If the man who habitually spills old vintages down his neighbor's neck merely because he has had too much of it to drink, could see the wonderful care that is taken by the peasants of Southern France to bring it to him in perfect condition, perhaps he would value it more. We show here how those patient workers squeeze the costly juice from the grapes that grow around their picturesque mountain homes, and how they put the fluid through all the processes that help bring its bewitching taste to our waiting palates—and ample purses. When finally the oxen are hitched up to carry the huge tank to the depot—the spectator (if he has the price) will hasten to the nearest oasis and imbibe; or if he is more fortunate, hang Gus up for a round.

THE LITTLE FLOWER GIRL
Solax Release, April 14

William Hastings becomes infatuated with a pretty flower girl who delivers flowers to his sister from a neighboring florist. Inquiring of the whereabout of the florist, he makes a number of calls and finally tells the girl that he dearly loves her. After asking her to marry him he finds that his father will not consent to the marriage and after a scene with his father he leaves home. The sister of William hears of his trouble and as she loves her brother dearly she decides to carry out a plan whereby the father's consent will be procured.

She calls to see the flower girl and telling her of her plan she directs her to pose as a college chum and to accept an invitation to visit William's sister, knowing full well that her father would receive any of her old friends with open arms.

The invitation is accepted and during her short stay in the Hastings home she wins her way into the heart of the old gentleman. Her accomplishments as a vocalist and violinist and her winning manners more than places her in the good graces of the father.

Mr. Hastings writes to his son telling him what a lovable girl his sister's friend is and urging him to return and try to win her love. The son replies in the negative, saying that he will never marry any other than the flower girl. The sister sees the letter and writes to her brother, telling him of the subterfuge. The son returns on the next train. After he has told his father his intentions of marrying the little flower girl, they go to the store where the truth is made known to the father. At first he is very angry but finally he relents and the loving young couple are united.

TRAMP STRATEGY
Solax Release, April 12

Dan Wellington objects strenuously to his daughter's marriage with Richard Darlington. The father finds the latter in the arms of his daughter and puts him out of the house. The much-abused lover is followed out of the house by his sweetheart and maid. The latter conceives a brilliant idea whereby the lover is to assume the disguise of a tramp and rescue the sweetheart from being ground beneath the wheels of an automobile.

While the plot is being consummated on one side of a hedge fence, two tramps are asleep on the other side. The excited voices awaken them and while the maid recites the proposed plan, the tramps are working on one of their own.

After leaving the two girls to go in search of a costume, Darlington is overpowered by the two tramps and hustled off to a lonely hut where he is detained. One of the tramps plans to go in Darlington's stead and do the hero work.

The complications that arise from the situations can well be imagined, but everything is arranged so that the unhappy lover gets the girl and the policeman gets the tramps.

A CORRECTION

New York, April 5, 1911.

Moving Picture News,
30 West 13th Street,
New York City.

My dear Saunders:

I presume that you will think it real mean of me to criticise you after the kindness that you have so politely extended me in your valuable columns, but I wish to ask you to please correct Champion Film Exchange to Champion Film Company, because if some of the radical exchanges will read Champion Film Exchange they will be under the impression that I have started a film exchange, and you know how much an exchange man hates a manufacturer to enter into the exchange business.

In your journal of April 1st, on page 10, you have a little article about our beautiful synopses for which kindly accept my thanks, and it is headed "Champion Film Exchange," and this is the thing I wish you would correct.

Thanking you for your attention, I am,

Very sincerely,
MARK M. DINTENFASS,
Gen'l Mgr., The Champion Film Co.

(In the rush the above mistake occurred and herewith publish the letter as an amend for our remissness. Readers please note.—Ed. M. P. N.)

ALL ROUND MAN

Camera, Darkroom, etc. Seven years' experience, seeks situation. Apply "UTILITY," M. P. News.

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

	Feet
Feb. 16—Fisher Folks (Dr.)	998
Feb. 20—The Diamond Star (Dr.)	996
Feb. 23—His Daughter (Dr.)	997
Feb. 27—The Lily of the Tenements (Dr.)	991
Mar. 2—The Heart of a Savage (Dr.)	995
Mar. 6—A Decree of Destiny (Dr.)	995
Mar. 9—Conscience (Dr.)	995
Mar. 13—Comrades (Dr.)	998
Mar. 16—Was He a Coward? (Dr.)	994
Mar. 20—Teaching Dad to Like Her (Com.)	995
Mar. 23—The Londale Operator (Dr.)	998
Mar. 27—Priscilla's April Fool (Com.)	686
Mar. 27—Cured (Com.)	308
Mar. 30—The Spanish Gypsy (Dr.)	996
Apr. 3—Priscilla and the Umbrella (Com.)	997
Apr. 6—The Broken Cross (Dr.)	996

EDISON

Feb. 24—The Price of Victory	1000
Feb. 17—A Stage Romance	1000
Feb. 21—The Rival Sculptors	990
Feb. 22—Mr. Bumptious, Detective	990
Feb. 28—The Iron Master	1000
Mar. 1—The Rival Candidates (Com. Dr.)	1000
Mar. 3—The Writing on the Blotter (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 7—Love and the Stock Market (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 8—A Night of Terror (Com.)	400
Mar. 8—The Old Family Bible (Dr.)	600
Mar. 10—How Bella Was Won (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 14—All for the Love of a Lady (Dr.)	990
Mar. 15—The Department Store (Com.)	625
Mar. 15—Baby's Fall (Com.)	375
Mar. 17—The Wedding Bell (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 21—The Test of Love (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 22—Who Gets the Order (Com.)	995
Mar. 24—The Disreputable Mr. Raegen (D.)	1000
Mar. 28—Jim the Mule Boy (Dr.)	975
Mar. 29—April Fool (Com.)	985
Mar. 31—Between Two Fires	1000
Apr. 4—Monsieur (Dr.)	1000
Apr. 5—The Resurrection of John	1000
Apr. 7—Nell's Last Deal (Dr.)	1000
Apr. 11—The Strike at the Mines (Dr.)	995
Apr. 12—Silver Threads Among the Gold (Dr.)	500
Apr. 12—Card of Introduction (Com.)	500
Apr. 14—A Buried Past (Dr.)	1000
Apr. 18—The Haunted Sentinel Tower	1000
Apr. 21—Turned to the Wall	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Jan. 31—Hank and Lank (Com.)	366
Feb. 4—Carmenita, the Faithful (Dr.)	995
Feb. 7—A Woman's Voice (Com.)	566
Feb. 7—Ten Words for Twenty-five Cents (Com.)	425
Feb. 11—The Bad Man's Downfall (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 14—Getting Sister Married (Com.)	1000
Feb. 18—The Cattleman's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 21—Their Wedding Gift (Com.)	580
Feb. 21—Just as the Clock Struck Nine (C.)	412
Feb. 25—The Outlaw and the Child (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 28—Taming a Tyrant (Com.)	1000
Mar. 4—On the Desert's Edge (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 7—The Little Drudge (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 11—The Romance of "Bar O"	1000
Mar. 14—Oh, You Teacher! (Com.)	1000
Mar. 18—The Faithful Indian (Dr.)	975
Mar. 21—Hans' Millions (Com.)	1000
Mar. 25—A Thwarted Vengeance (W. Dr.)	1000
Mar. 28—Getting His Own Back (Com.)	600
Mar. 28—Lost: A Baby (Com.)	400
Apr. 1—Across the Plains (Dr.)	1000
Apr. 4—Caught with the Goods (Com.)	1,000
Apr. 8—The Sheriff's Chum (Dr.)	1,000

GAUMONT
G. Kleine

Feb. 7—The Strongest Tie	605
Feb. 11—Napoleon in 1814 (Dr.)	797
Feb. 11—Autumn Leaves (Edu.)	185
Feb. 14—The Reformation of the Suffragettes	665
Feb. 14—Land Marks of Avignon, France	338
Feb. 18—Saul and David	128
Feb. 18—At the End of the Road	838
Feb. 21—The Plot That Failed	815
Feb. 21—Pictures in Chemistry	175
Feb. 25—Paganini and the Countess Beatrice	998
Feb. 28—Matrimonial Epidemic (Com.)	813
Feb. 28—Lafont and Pola's Last Flight	185
Mar. 4—The Tramp's Find	680
Mar. 4—Forbidden Cigarettes	335
Mar. 7—The Barber's Daughter	505
Mar. 7—The Ambitious Bootblack	450
Mar. 11—His First Sweetheart	560
Mar. 11—The Beautiful Gorges of Tarn	415
Mar. 14—The Sword and the Cross	840
Mar. 14—Breakers in the Clouds	155
Mar. 18—The Privateer's Treasure	860
Mar. 18—Rocky Caves of France	110
Mar. 21—The Lieutenant's Wild Ride	1002
Mar. 25—Cupid's Conquest	595
Mar. 25—The People of the Arabian Desert	405
Mar. 28—His Image in the Water	575
Mar. 28—Family Troubles	430
Mar. 29—Dr. Charcot's Trip Toward the South Pole	478
Mar. 29—The Cormorants, or Japanese Catching Fish with Birds	528
Apr. 1—The Secret of the Forest (Dr.)	625
Apr. 1—Tribulations of Jiggers	375
Apr. 4—The Letter with the Red Seal	865
Apr. 4—The City of Amalfi in Italy	135
Apr. 8—The Atonement of Thais	865
Apr. 8—Italian Coast Scenes	135

KALEM CO.

Jan. 25—The Secret of the Still (Dr.)	950
Jan. 27—Puritans and Indians (Dr.)	970
Feb. 1—The Sheriff's Sister (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 3—The Trail of the Pomas Charm (Dr.)	1005
Feb. 8—Little Sister (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Feb. 10—The Broken Trail (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 15—Grandmother's War Story (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 17—The Lost Ribbon (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 22—The Open Road (Dr.)	995
Feb. 24—Priscilla and the Pequot (Dr.)	925
Mar. 1—Sailor Jack's Reformation (Dr.)	1005
Mar. 3—Mexican Filibusters (Dr.)	1005
Mar. 8—The Irish Honeymoon (Dr.)	950
Mar. 10—The Mission Carrier (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 15—The Driver (Educ.)	565
Mar. 15—The Hunter's Dream (Com.)	365
Mar. 17—A War Time Escape (Dr.)	980
Mar. 22—A Saw Mill Hero (Dr.)	960
Mar. 24—Rescued from the Desert (Dr.)	990
Mar. 29—The Lass Who Couldn't Forget (Dr.)	960
Mar. 31—The Hero Trackwalker (Dr.)	950
Apr. 5—By a Woman's Wit (Dr.)	995
Apr. 7—Big-hearted Jim (Dr.)	1,000

LUBIN

Feb. 13—The Show Girl's Strategem (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 16—Getting Even (Com.)	600
Feb. 16—Schultz Has the Smallpox (Com.)	400
Feb. 20—The Test (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 23—Dobbs, the Dauber (Com.)	1000
Feb. 27—Nan's Diplomacy (Com.)	1000
Mar. 2—Father's Birthday Ring (Com.)	600
Mar. 2—Woman's Curiosity (Com.)	400
Mar. 6—Vanity and Its Cure (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 9—Her Friend, the Burglar (Com.)	1000
Mar. 13—The Actress and the Singer (Com.-Dr.)	1000
Mar. 16—Mandy's Social Whirl (Com.)	1000
Mar. 20—Her Artistic Temperament (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 23—The Spinster's Legacy (Com.)	600
Mar. 23—Bridget and the Egg (Com.)	400
Mar. 27—Her Child's Honor (Dr.)	1000
Mar. 30—When Women Strike (Com.)	1000
Apr. 3—The Wife's Awakening (Dr.)	1,000
Apr. 6—His Best Girl After All (Dr.)	600
Apr. 6—A Visit to Nassau, Bahama (Travel)	400

G. MELIES.

Feb 2—Only a Sister (Dr.)	980
Feb. 9—Tony, the Greaser (Dr.)	980
Feb. 16—Billy and His Pal (Dr.)
Feb. 23—My Prairie Flower (Dr.)	980
Mar. 2—In the Hot Lands	960
Mar. 9—The Snake in the Grass	1000
Mar. 16—The Schoolmarm of Coyote County	1000
Mar. 23—Sir Percy and the Punchers	1000
Mar. 30—The Warrant for Red Rube	1000
Mar. 24—On the Border Line	600
Mar. 24—Great War Game	950
Apr. 6—Her Faithful Heart	1000
Apr. 13—Jack Mason's Last Deal	1000

PATHE FRERES

Feb. 11—Silver Leaf's Heart (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 18—Lieut. Scott's Narrow Escape (Dr.)	984
Feb. 20—A Soldier (Dr.)	761
Feb. 20—A Buffalo Hunt (Edu.)	236
Feb. 22—Hubby's Troubles (Com.)	671
Feb. 22—Indo-China Province of Laos (Sc.)	321
Feb. 24—Who Killed Max? (Com.)	689
Feb. 24—An Escape of Gas (Com.)	302
Feb. 25—The Changeling (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 27—Max Makes Music	403
Feb. 27—Pots, Pans and Poetry	531
Mar. 1—Oh! You Clubman	905
Mar. 3—Satan Defeated	750
Mar. 3—Around Constantina, Algeria	200
Mar. 4—Jealousy Foiled	1000
Mar. 6—Max Embarrassed	600
Mar. 6—After the Boxing Bout	375
Mar. 8—Red Deer's Devotion	1000
Mar. 10—Undying Love	740
Mar. 11—A Lonely Little Girl	1000
Mar. 13—Max's Feet Are Pinched	489
Mar. 13—Whiffles' Courtship	500
Mar. 15—Oh, You Kids	690
Mar. 15—The Paoli Brothers	295
Mar. 17—The Inventor's Rights	784
Mar. 17—Pepper Industry in the Malay Peninsula	190
Mar. 18—The Sheriff's Daughter	1000
Mar. 20—Max is Stuck Up (Com.)	460
Mar. 20—How Tommt's Wit Worked (Com.)	462
Mar. 22—The Cattle Rustlers	1000
Mar. 24—Lieutenantsliebe	1000
Mar. 25—The Kid from Arizona	960
Mar. 31—Athaliah	1000
Mar. 27—Love in Madrid	443
Mar. 27—The Trickster Tricked (Com.)	446
Mar. 29—A Fatal Resemblance (Dr.)	1000
Apr. 1—Their Mother (Dr.)	872
Apr. 1—Fred Sato and His Dog	128
Apr. 3—The Apple of His Eye	1000
Apr. 5—The Trading Stamp Mania (Com.)	990
Apr. 7—The Three Whiffles	655
Apr. 7—Native Industries in Cochin-China	341
Apr. 8—The White Squaw	1000
Apr. 10—The Justice of Claudius	260
Apr. 12—A Cowboy's Adventure (Western)	364
Apr. 14—Wiffles' Home Troubles	440
Apr. 14—How Edam Cheese Is Made	480
Apr. 15—Burglar's Fee (Com.)	1,000
Apr. 21—Boil Your Water

SELIG

Feb. 12—The Survival of the Fittest
Feb. 16—The Buccaneers
Feb. 20—The Padre
Feb. 27—The Eye of Conscience
Mar. 2—The Outbreak
Mar. 6—The Little Shepherdess
Mar. 9—The Medallion
Mar. 13—The Code of Honor
Mar. 13—The Man from the East
Mar. 20—Her Words Come True
Mar. 20—After a Hundred Years
Mar. 23—The Way of the Transgressor
Mar. 27—Her Adopted Fathers
Mar. 30—1861
Apr. 3—The Fortune Hunters
Apr. 6—Red's Conquest
Apr. 10—The Cowboy and the Shrew
Apr. 10—His Best Girl's Little Brother (Com.)
Apr. 13—Zulu-land
Apr. 17—The Haven of Refuge
Apr. 20—The Mother
Apr. 24—Unto Us a Child Is Born

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

Jan. 11—Washed Ashore (Dr.)	670
Jan. 11—Woodcarving in Brienz	320
Jan. 18—By the King's Order (Dr.)	991
Jan. 25—The Sailor's Return (Dr.)	689
Jan. 25—Scenes in Jersey (Travelogue)	296
Feb. 1—Disinherited	990
Feb. 8—On the Border of the Forest (Dr.)	895
Feb. 8—Canadian Iron Center, Port Arthur (Educational)	110
Feb. 15—Catherine Howard	1005
Feb. 22—The Golden Sickle	882
Feb. 22—Felling a Smoke-stack	113
Feb. 22—The Golden Sickle	882
Mar. 1—Comrades	638
Mar. 1—Beauties of Sans Souci	362
Mar. 8—The Fury of a Woman Scorned	720
Mar. 8—Beautiful Wye Valley, England	300
Mar. 15—Redemption	508
Mar. 15—The Thames, from Oxford to Richmond	472
Mar. 22—The Money Lender	688
Nemours and the Banks of the River Loing, France	320
Mar. 29—Dr. Charcot's Trip Toward the South Pole	478
Mar. 29—The Cormorants, or Japanese Catching Fish with Birds	528
Apr. 5—At the Old Mill (Dr)	675
Apr. 5—Making Bamboo Hats in Java	325
Apr. 10—Do Not Judge Rashly (Dr.)	955
Apr. 17—Dog and Wolf	660
Apr. 17—Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives	315
Apr. 24—Herodias	955
May 1—For Their Mother (Dr. Com.)	695
May 1—The Blue Nile	290

VITAGRAPH

Jan. 6—The Misses Finch and Nephew Billy	979
Jan. 7—The Old Water Jar	984
Jan. 10—Doctor Cupid (Com.)	987
Jan. 13—Water Lilies (Dr.)	991
Jan. 14—Coward or Hero (Dr.)	975
Jan. 17—Three Men and a Maid (Com.)	1000
Jan. 20—The Girl in the Film (Com.)	963
Jan. 21—Cast Up by the Deep (Dr.)	1001
Jan. 24—It Did Look Suspicious (Dr.)	617
Jan. 24—The Fireman's Parade (Edu.)	383
Jan. 27—Girl of the Mountains (Dr.)	999
Jan. 28—Davy Jones in the South Seas (Com.)	995
Jan. 31—Jean Rescues	976
Feb. 3—Society and the Man	981
Feb. 4—A Queen for a Day	1000
Feb. 7—The Deluge	978
Feb. 10—The League of Mercy (Dr.)	991
Feb. 11—At the White Man's Door (Dr.)	1000
Feb. 14—Consuming Love	975
Feb. 17—When the Light Waned	994
Feb. 18—The New Stenographer (Com.)	994
Feb. 21—A Tale of Two Cities, Part I	1014
Feb. 24—A Tale of Two Cities, Part II	1013
Feb. 25—A Tale of Two Cities, Part III	994
Feb. 28—Captain Barnacle's Courtship (Com.)	998
Mar. 3—Bertha's Mission (Dr.)	988
Mar. 4—Mammy's Ghost (Dr.)	985
Mar. 7—The Wild Cat Well	960
Mar. 10—The Bridegroom's Dilemma (Com.)	990
Mar. 11—Red Eagle	960
Mar. 14—Betty Becomes a Maid (Com.)	957
Mar. 17—The Aching Void (Dr.)	990
Mar. 18—Davy Jones, or His Wife's Husband (Com.)	977
Mar. 21—Tho' the Seas Divide	968
Mar. 24—The Widow Visits Sprigtown (C.)	985
Mar. 25—A Little Lad in Dixie (Dr.)	999
Mar. 28—Billy's Valentine (Com.)	995
Mar. 31—The Inherited Taint (Dr.)	1000
Apr. 1—A Republican Marriage	996
Apr. 4—Unexpected Review (Com.)	660
Apr. 4—Hop Picking (Indust.)	335
Apr. 7—The Winning of the Stepchildren (Dr.)	965
Apr. 8—Winsor McCay (Com.)	650
Apr. 8—Bob Sledding	350

AND NOW "THE KID" TAKES THE STUMP

Another Thanhouser player succumbed to the lures of picture-house-talking when Marie Eline, "The Thanhouser Kid," journeyed to West Hoboken, N. J., one evening last week and told her admirers 'mongst the patrons of Heflich's Theater that she was a really, truly kid and furthermore let them see it.

The hall was taxed to its 1,200 capacity by the Hobokenites who wanted to see Marie as she is, and when the tot said "Good evening" there was a perfect chorus of welcome. The way to her generous reception had been paved, in a sense, by the running of "Old Curiosity Shop," a dramatic reel, and "The Little Fire Chief," a comedy reel, a happy selection of subjects, in that they showed well Marie's wide range of versatility. As a stage vehicle the youngster employed an imitation of Fanny Ward, and though following a pretentious school act she easily held her own. Manager Kutler of Heflich's paid this tribute to "the Kid's" powers in a letter to the Thanhouser people, dated March 27:

"We wish to extend many thanks for the great attendance at our house last Friday evening, as little Marie was indeed a marvelous drawing card. I never before had as big a house as that evening. The official attendance records that I have sent Mr. Heflich show the best business the box office could possibly do under our present seating capacity, and this with no advance billing, no circulars, no slides, no lobby display and merely my singer's announcement on the preceding Wednesday and Thursday that 'the Kid' would appear."

Arrangements are now being made whereby Marie may appear at every Independent theater in and around New York.

STAG FILMS WANTED—Stag Films suitable for Smokers, Clubs, etc.

PASSION PLAY WANTED—Pathe Passion Play (hand-colored). Must be in first-class condition. State full particulars first letter.

ROSE CITY FILM COMPANY - Portland, Oregon

WE WANT

ONE THOUSAND

Moving Picture Men

to operate PREMIUM pin machines and get rich, or if already so, to get more wealth. Why not you? PREMIUM pin machines have become an institution in every candy store. By placing a machine in your retailer's store you will monopolize his trade and squeeze out competition.

Mr. Flint of Mo. writes: "Kindly accept thanks for introducing me to a gold mine.

Ten machines will support you. Fifty machines operated will prove a mortgage lifter to you.

We make them out of Oak or Metal.

Percentage of winners arranged so that from every twenty dollars deposited in the machine twelve dollars will be your profit. If so advised will make it still more.

Write to-day for exclusive territory to

PREMIUM VENDING COMPANY
5636 WALNUT ST. PITTSBURG, PA.

Solax

TWO FEATURES

EVERY WEEK

WEDNESDAY—GOOD COMEDY

ORIGINAL, HILARIOUS, SPONTANEOUS, WITH A LAUGH IN EVERY FOOT

FRIDAY—Spectacular Military Pictures

ALL THE PARAPHERNALIA OF WAR—CANNON, ARTILLERY, HORSES, SOLDIERS, BATTLEFIELD SCENES, WARSHIPS, BIVOUAC; SOUL-STIRRING, PATRIOTIC PRODUCTIONS

GET OUR LOBBY DISPLAY!

RELEASES
WEDNESDAY, APRIL 19—"THE OLD EXCUSE" AND "THE SCHEME THAT FAILED" (Comedy Split Reel)
FRIDAY, APRIL 21—"THE VOICE OF HIS CONSCIENCE" (Drama)
WEDNESDAY, APRIL 26—"THE COUNT OF NO ACCOUNT" (Comedy)
FRIDAY, APRIL 28—"ACROSS THE MEXICAN LINE" (Drama)

Solax Company 147 Fourth Avenue New York City

THE THANHOUSER WO-A-WEEK

RELEASED TUESDAY, APRIL 18

The Best Novelty-Comedy of the Month

CALLY'S COMET

will make your business soar the day you run it, if you advertise it properly a day or two BEFORE you run it. Remember, you have the Thanhouser guarantee that the reel will back up anything the synopsis leads you to say of it. You are perfectly safe in billing it to your patrons as WE will bill it to you—"The Best Novelty-Comedy of the Month." Now, see the synopsis for some ideas for a strong, business-pulling circular.

No. 203. Code Word, Cal.

RELEASED, FRIDAY, APRIL 21

A Reelful of Thrill

Weighed in the Balance

is a great spectacular reel that we're glad to stick our trade-mark on to, for its supreme merit will redound to that trade-mark's credit. Still, it may harm us by making you look for a run of like subjects, and it's difficult to "do" a "Weighed in the Balance" every week. Likely it's our best effort in the spectacular line since "Governor's Daughter." While we can't guarantee a weekly prototype, we can say that 1911 will see many more pictures as good as this, and a few even better.

No. 204. Code Word, Bal.

JUST OUT! THE THANHOUSER LOBBY PHOTOS.

consisting of five splendid individual photographs (11x14) of Thanhouser principals, sent postage prepaid for $1.00 with order.

THE THANHOUSER NEWS, "The Exhibitor's Guide," containing the Thanhouser Lobby-Decorator, sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Drop a card to Editor, Thanhouser News, New Rochelle, N. Y.

THANHOUSER CO.

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Solax Military Releases

We notice with a great deal of pleasure and satisfaction the announcement of the Solax Company regarding their Friday release.

Beginning April 28th they will start to release their regular Friday military pictures, the first subject of which is entitled "Across the Mexican Line." This wide-awake company seem always to be on the alert for an idea that is novel, new and of topical interest. Now what could be more acceptable to the exchangeman and exhibitor than these military pictures dealing with a controversy of current and national importance.

Topics that are before the general public always prove to be big money-getters for the exhibitor, and this is the sole aim of the Solax Company—to turn out pictures that will redound to the profit of their patrons, the exchangeman and exhibitor in greatest measure.

Quite aside from the merely entertaining purposes of these pictures they have the added virtue of being of exceptional educational value as many of the productions will be taken at places that are of historical interest.

This enterprising company will deserve the support and co-operation of all those who are in favor of raising the standard of the picture and making it a medium of not only wholesome entertainment but practical and useful instruction.

M. P. Benevolent Association

The Moving Picture Operators' Benevolent Association will hold a monster vaudeville entertainment and ball at Arlington Hall, on Friday evening, April 21, 1911. A large attendance is expected, possibly 2,000 people, seventy-five per cent of which are interested in the moving picture industry.

A souvenir journal will be distributed to those attending the ball and all connected with the moving picture industry throughout the country. This journal will be complete with live advertising matter from live manufacturers, renters and others connected with the picture industry.

Further information may be obtained from:

A. L. ROSE,
263 West 152d street.

R. GOLDBLATT,
care of M. Berkowitz,
210 East 14th street.

NICKELODIA NEWS IN BRIEF

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—Wm. Hemsky has purchased an interest from E. Henle, in the Amuse U Theater, at 310 First avenue.

Fort Worth, Texas.—The Orpheum Moving Picture Theater, owned by Louis Cummings, was destroyed by fire.

Iowa City, Iowa.—Fred Dever has leased the Miller Building on Dubuque street, and will convert it into a moving picture show.

Macon, Ga.—The Palace Amusement Company has been incorporated with capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are J. B. Melton, W. E. Gould and L. A. Mitchell.

Carthage, Ill.—M. L. Weiser has sold the moving picture theater here to Ralph Foulds.

Burlington, Iowa.—John Cort has purchased the Grand Opera House here and took possession.

Toledo, Ohio.—The Empress Amusement Company is preparing to open a new theater on Summit street.

New Orleans, La.—H. W. Lamb has purchased the Winter Garden here and will conduct a firstclass moving picture theater.

Jacksonville, Fla.—Mr. A. B. Vance is contemplating the establishment of a new moving picture theater here.

Bowman, N. Da.—The Dreamland Opera House, owned by Mr. Shaw, was completely destroyed by fire.

Topeka, Kas.—Dr. G. J. Mulvane is considering the advisability of establishing a new moving picture theater here.

Anaconda, Mont.—Paul Noble has leased the Imperial and Alcazar Moving Picture Theaters here and took possession.

Covington, Ind.—L. C. Parker, of Indianapolis, has purchased the Family and Globe Moving Pictures theaters here.

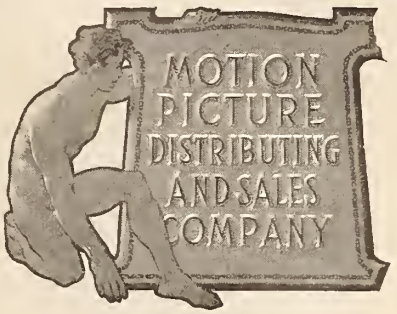
San Diego, Cal.—Seth Hartley is making arrangements to open a new theater at Grand avenue and Lime street.

NORDICK FILM TIDNING

The first trade paper in Scandinavia.
Best advertising medium in North Europe.
Subscription 6 shillings.
Sample copy free upon request.

Editor, A. SEABURY, Post Box 163, Stockholm, Sweden.

Subterfuge



The SALES COMPANY is anxious and willing to discuss the situations that arise in the fight for independent trade.

DIRECT WITH THE EXHIBITOR.

We want the exhibitor to ask us just how and why we make our every move that concerns him; we solicit his interest.

ON THE OTHER HAND—The interests that seek to monopolize the market also seek to present a policy which they term "Conservatism." It is only a sham. The men at executive desks do not deal with the exhibitor direct, but agents and representatives, who are under instructions, are every day carrying on their campaign of threat and intimidation. EVERY MAN WHO OWNS A SHOW KNOWS IT.

IS THAT "CONSERVATISM?"

There is only one road to relief—that is Independence and this UNEXCELLED PROGRAM:

OUR PROGRAM

MONDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Eclair—Eclair Film Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.
TUESDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.
WEDNESDAY
Ambrosio—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Atlas—Atlas Film Co.
Champion—The Champion Film Co.
Nestor—David Horsley.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories
Solax—Solax Co.
THURSDAY
American—Amer. Film Mfg. Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Imp—Independent M. P. Co.
Rex—Rex M. P. Mfg. Co.
FRIDAY
Bison—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Lux—R. Prieur
Thanhouser—Thanhouser Co.
Solax—Solax Company
Yankee—Yankee Film Co.
SATURDAY
Gt. Northern—Gt. Northern Film Co.
Itala—N. Y. Motion Picture Co.
Powers—The Powers Co.
Reliance—Carlton M. P. Laboratories

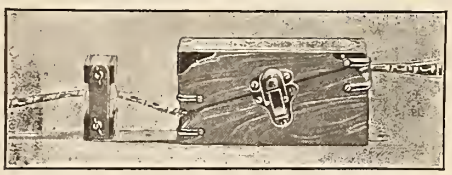
Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

111 East 14th Street, New York City

SALES COMPANY

The following films have been released from April 8th to 21st, inclusive, by the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.:

Apr. 8—A Confidence Trick (Gt. Northern) 852
Apr. 8—Foolshead—Lady of Company (Itala)
Apr. 8—Toto and the Egg for Easter Day (Itala) .....
Apr. 10—Cupid's Pocketbook (American) ....
Apr. 10—A Faithless Man (Imp) .....
Apr. 10—A Good Cigar (Imp) .....
Apr. 11—Indian's Mistake (Bison) .....
Apr. 11—Reclamation and How the Doctor Made Good (Powers) .....
Apr. 12—The Necklace Affair (Ambrosio) ...
Apr. 12—Men of the West (Champion) .....
Apr. 12—A Midnight Adventure (Nestor) ....
Apr. 12—Tramp's Strategy (Solax) .....
Apr. 12—Scheme that Failed (Solax) .....
Apr. 13—Jim Minds Baby (American) .....
Apr. 13—Bungalow (American) .....
Apr. 13—The Storm (Imp) .....
Apr. 13—At the Window (Powers) .....
Apr. 13—Little Major (Dr.) (Rex) 950
Apr. 14—A Man of Honor (Bison) .....
Apr. 14—Bill and the Greasy Pole (Lux.) ....
Apr. 14—They Did Not Budge (Lux.) .....
Apr. 14—They Did Not Budge (Lux.) .....
Apr. 14—Little Flower Girl (Solax) .....
Apr. 15—Hamlet (Great Northern) .....
Apr. 15—The Fall of Troy (Itala) .....
Apr. 15—Her Mother's Sons (Reliance) .....
Apr. 17—Do Not Judge Rashly (Eclair) .....
Apr. 17—A Close Call (Yankee) .....
Apr. 18—Cally's Comet (Thanhouser) .....
Apr. 21—Weighed in the Balance (Thanhouser) .....
Apr. 21—The Minister's Son (Yankee) .....



Here it is, the little machine that cleans your films, makes old films look like new, endorsed by the largest exchanges in the world, the

Mortimer Film Cleaner

Send for our booklet—the supplement soon off the press.

MORTIMER FILM CLEANING CO.

Fidelity Bldg., Portland, Maine

PATENTS

"BE INDEPENDENT."

Moving Picture Devices a Specialty.

Charles Lowell Howard

PATENT ATTORNEY

706-707-708 M'Gill Bldg., WASHINGTON, D. C.

Film Titles

MADE TO ORDER

3 Feet, 25c

ANNOUNCEMENTS FROM YOUR OWN COPY

8c Per Foot

Gunby Bros.

199 3D AVE., NEW YORK CITY

THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR

Sanitary, Space-saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving. To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.

Write Today for Circular W

HARDESTY MFG. CO.

Canal Dover, Ohio.

DER KINEMATOGRAPH, DUSSELDORF

The leading Organ for the Motion Picture Trade in Germany.

Special Supplement for Talking Machines, &c.

Published every Wednesday. Annual Subscription 11/- Post Free. Advertisements (4 columns to page); 2s. 6d. per inch. Situations Wanted, 1½d. per line.

Reduced Price for a Series of Insertions.

Publisher—Ed. LINTZ. Chief Editor—EMIL PERLMANN.

"La Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera"

IS ITALY'S LEADING PAPER FOR THE ANIMATED PICTURE BUSINESS,

PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY.

28 Large Pages. Eight Shillings per annum.

Editor-Proprietor: Prof. GUALTIERO I. FABBRI, 1a, Via Arcivescovado Turin (Italy).

"La Cinematografia Italiana" is the official organ of the Universal Exhibition of 1911 at Turin.

The Lake Shore Film & Supply Co.

CLEVELAND COLUMBUS

32 REELS 32

In order to serve our present and prospective patrons with a positive, prompt and perfect service, have opened a branch office at Columbus with a competent and efficient force in charge. We are ready for business with 14 reels weekly of brand new films to be increased as patronage warrants. Between our Cleveland and Columbus office we will handle the entire output and duplicates of the M. P. D. & S. CO. with a few features added of our own importations. Shipments will be made from office nearest destination. We have some choice service open, write for quotations.

All standard projection machines and supplies in stock at each office.

The Lake Shore Film & Supply Co.

E. MANDELBAUM, President and Manager

Columbus Office
W. D. WARD, Manager

Cincinnati Supply Office
A. DRESNER, Manager

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

REPAIRED

by skilled mechanics at short notice and reasonable prices. Work guaranteed.

Supplies of All Kinds.

CHAS. E. DRESSLER,
388 2nd Ave., City, near 23rd St.
Take elevator.

HALLBERG

THE "ECONOMIZER MAN"

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. N 1

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.

AROMA FOAM

The Fragrant and Powerful Perfumed Disinfectant

Have YOU tried it?

It is not our fault if you haven't a sweet, sanitary, clean-smelling house.

Mr. Manager, just drop us a postal and ask for our trial offer.

Do it NOW

SANITARY SERVICE CORPORATION
82 Wall Street New York City

Everything in the Disinfectant and Sanitary Supply Line

Announcement, Advertising, Travelogue, Recitation

and slides for every purpose made to order

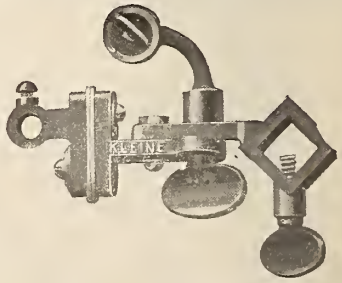
GEO. J. GOLDTHORPE & CO.
244 West 14th Street New York

EXTRA
N. Y. Factory Fire

SCENES SHOWING RUINS, ETC.
PLAIN $3.00 COLORED $4.00
SET OF 12 SLIDES

GUNBY BROS., 199 3d Ave., N.Y.

THE KLEINE



Carbon Holder

APPROVED MARCH 1st, 1911

By the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity of New York City

Manufactured by

C. B. KLEINE

19 East 21st Street New York

Advertisers want results. When writing to them it is our due that you mention The Moving Picture News

How To Write a Motion Picture Play

Our new book in seven parts tells all. How to Write, What to Write, How to Get Ideas and work them up in picture form. First complete work on this subject. Worth $50 to any one. Send a $1 bill or money order for the book, today, and learn to be a motion picture playwright. Edition limited.

AMPS PUBLISHING COMPANY
902 Chicago Opera House Block - - - - - - Chicago

"At the Sign of the Flying A"

American Releases

"T'ell With Bad Advice"

Join the TELL Club

TELL:—Your exchange you want two Americans ("Flying A") films each and every week.

TELL:—Your patrons you are showing two Americans each week, and tell them the day you show them.

TELL:—Everybody you meet that "American" after April 24th means TWO WESTERNS EACH WEEK—Western pictures made IN the West—Of the West—By the Best Western Company West of the Rockies.

Two "Flying A" Cowboy Films

EACH WEEK—MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS

RELEASE OF APRIL 10, MONDAY

"Cupid's Pocketbook"

A laugh-getting money-getter.

RELEASE OF APRIL 13, THURSDAY

"The Bungalow Craze" and "Jimmy Minds the Baby"

Both guaranteed to make a grouch laugh his head off.

Got our $1.50 Lobby Display proposition yet? Nearly everybody else has. Come on in.

Get on our Mailing List. Our publication, "Film Facts," (mailed every two weeks) tells the story of those "Flying A" Western Films we are releasing.

ALL WISE INDEPENDENTS BOOST AND BUY "FLYING A" COWBOY PICTURES

American Film Mfg. Co., Bank Floor Ashland Block CHICAGO, ILLS.

CINES COMPANY OF ROME

STUDIOS AND FACTORIES ROME AND PADOVA

BRANCHES AT THE FOLLOWING CITIES

LONDON	18 Charing Cross Rd.
PARIS	11 Rue St. Augustin
BERLIN	238 Friedrich Strasse
MOSCOW	3 Glenischewsky Pereul
BARCELONA	59 Paseo de Gracia
RIO DE JANEIRO	A. Sestini
BUENOS AYRES	A. Sestini
CARACAS	Levy & Co.

AND THE FOLLOWING AGENCIES

MILAN	ST. PETERSBURG	VIENNA
TURIN	ODESSA	AMSTERDAM
GENOA	KEIFF	COPENHAGEN
NAPLES	VLADIVOSTOCK	STOCKHOLM
BOLOGNA	MARSEILLES	BUDA PESTH
VENICE	BRUSSELS	FRANKFORT
DRESDEN	LILLE	LEIPSIC
TOKIO	SYDNEY	CAPE TOWN
JOHANNESBURG	LIMA	HAVANA

CAPITAL

PREFERRED STOCK	- -	Lire 2,000,000
ORDINARY STOCK	- -	3,750,000
FULLY PAID UP	-	Lire 5.750,000

BRANCH FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

TEMPORARY ADDRESS

445 Broome St., Cor. Broadway, NEW YORK CITY

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 15

April 15th
1911

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATRE, NEW YORK CITY

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

SPECIAL TRADE ISSUE

GREAT NORTHERN

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, APRIL 15th

HAMLET

PRINCE OF DENMARK

This beautiful feature film of Shakespeare's world famous production should be included in every exhibitor's programme.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, APRIL 22nd

THE STOLEN LEGACY

A feature detective film, brimfull of exciting and thrilling scenes.

All Up-to-Date Independent Exchanges Handle Our Product

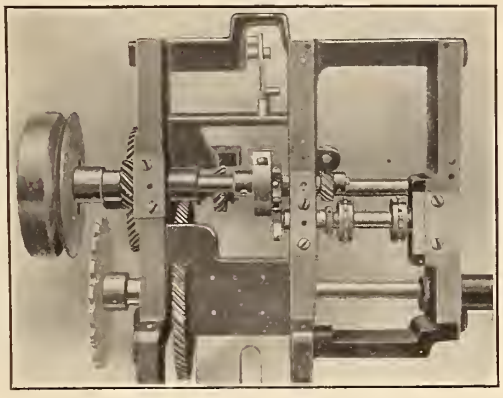
Great Northern Film Co., 7 E. 14th St., New York

IS YOUR MACHINE A RELIC OR AN UP-TO-DATE

"STANDARD"

THE MACHINE WITHOUT AN EQUAL
THE MACHINE THAT WILL GIVE YOU RESULTS

Owing to an absolute fire-proof device, this machine is the only one on the market that is approved for use with motor in New York.



Note the simplicity of our intermittent movement. The vital parts are all made of case hardened steel, something no other manufacturer can truthfully state.

Covered by an absolute guarantee in writing, the exhibitor takes no risk whatever in putting in a "Standard." If the machine is not all that we claim it to be, your money will be refunded in full.

American Moving Picture Machine Co.
101 BEEKMAN STREET NEW YORK

ADVERTISERS GET RESULTS
FROM THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS The Only Educational Paper in the Industry

One of the Largest European (German) Film Dealers visiting the United States between 10th and last of April, is open to BUY for Europe.

ALL SORTS OF INTERESTING FILM SUBJECTS AND SOLE RIGHTS THEREOF.

Would also take over some AGENCIES for EUROPE. At the same time he is ready to sell in the states:

SOLE RIGHTS FOR SOME SENSATIONAL EUROPEAN FILMS.

AMERICAN MANUFACTURERS AND FILM DEALERS please address correspondence to European Film Buyer, c/o Nelson Chesman & Co., 225 Fifth Ave., New York; also state day for personal appointment.

SUPERIOR SLIDES

Steady now, don't faint. We know the price is low, but we are bound to have your business. Don't for one minute believe because of this special offer to you that the goods are of an inferior quality. We are looking for a reputation as creators of high-class slides, and can't afford to ship you a poor article, but in answer to this, accompanied by $1.00 and 10c. postage, will bring you any five of our Announcement slides, if you have our catalog. If you haven't send at once for same to make your selection. Come now! Wake up!

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY
LOCKPORT, N. Y.
Colonial Amusement Co., St. Catharines, Ont., sole Canadian agents for our slides.

Announcement, Advertising, Travelogue, Recitation
and slides for every purpose made to order
GEO. J. GOLDTHORPE & CO.
244 West 14th Street New York

An "Imp" de Luxe!

"The Scarlet Letter"

RELEASED THURSDAY, APRIL 27TH

At last we are able to fix a definite release date on this, the first of a series of Imp Films de Luxe, which we believe will give Imp Films a stronger grip on your affection and a firmer hold on supremacy than ever before. "The Scarlet Letter" is an ultra fine dramatization of Nathaniel Hawthorne's world-known novel. The treatment of the plot is delicate—in fact, this feature has caused us to take, retake and re-take many of the more powerful scenes. We have avoided improper suggestion. We have staged each scene more elaborately than anything we have produced before. The acting will delight you. The photography will astonish you. And it will all come to you on Eastman stock, insuring the highest degree of moving picture perfection in every detail. Now that we have brought out such an Imp de Luxe as this, the point is—

Will You See That You Get It?

Will you ask your exchange for the earliest possible booking? Will you demand, insist, fight if necessary till you get it? Will you keep hammering at your exchange with letter after letter till you get what you are paying for? We've done our part. Will you do yours—beginning this instant?

Here's Another You Must Get:

Our release of Monday, April 24th, is peculiar in plot, so much so that it will create no end of comment on the part of your audiences. It is entitled "While There's Life There's Hope," and deals with two men and their interrupted attempts at suicide. If your exchange can't give it to you, there are other exchanges that can and will. Ask us.

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP AMERICA

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.
102 W. 101st St., New York; Carl Laemmle, Pres.
All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.
All "Imp" Films Now Made on Eastman Stock.

Demand Two Imps Every Week

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

European Agents: INTERNATIONAL NEWS CO., Breams Building, Chancery Lane, London, E. C.

Chicago Representative: J. J. Sullivan, 866 Graceland Ave. 'Phone Graceland 5053

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV April 15, 1911 Number 15

Our Special Issue—Greeting

When we started the Moving Picture News on March 9th, 1907 (it went under a different name, it is true, but,); the same principles expounded then, have been carried out since that date, viz, "the best the Cinematographic Art can give to its patrons." Since this date no special issue of a Moving Picture Journal has been attempted in America, and in this first attempt we tender our thanks to those whom we now know are our friends. Those who have so well responded to our request to tell the people of Nickelodia, who, and what they are. While we were not able to command the success we deserve, we offer to our readers the creme-de-la-creme of the Independent section of the industry. It is not our fault that every manufacturer is not represented, it is their misfortune.

This issue goes all over the world as representing the best element of the trade in America. If every exhibitor in the United States does not get a copy of this issue, ours is not the blame, we believe we have printed and circulated the largest edition of a moving picture paper ever known in the history of cinematography.

We introduce our readers to the men best fitted to cater to their interests, men of tried sterling courage, who tell their own story. Men who are trying to uplift the industry and give picture stories of an educational and amusing character. To manufacturers in other branches of the industry whose accessories have been tried and not found wanting. Again we thank those advertisers for their loyal support and ask our readers to recompense them as they deserve—by patronizing them.

The Moving Picture News is the friend of the men who are trying to get justice, and to be allowed to gain a livelihood making pictures, distributing them and exhibiting them to the public without unjust restrictions; also of the operator who makes or mars success.

NOTES OF THE WEEK

OUR FRONT COVER ILLUSTRATION

This week we depart from our usual custom and show the pioneer Independent Theater in New York, an old, historic theater whose fame is worldwide. On another page will be found the full story, of interest to old theatergoers, as well as to the modern patrons of the Motion Pictures.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS

This theme seems to be growing in vast importance, judging from the letters we have on file and the visitors who call upon us to expound their views. A well-known financier told us he is ready to place a quarter of a million of dollars to the cause of educational films if we could show him a return of 6 per cent on the outlay or investment. We showed him some of the letters on file, which so convinced him that we may soon hear from him in such a fashion that educational films of a high order may soon be an accomplished fact. He is looking the field over, with the assistance of one of the foremost men in the industry, and when his survey is complete we feel sure the industry will be immensely enriched by his activity therein. This gentleman has been approached by some wily stockjobbers whose main object is to part him from his capital, leaving him high and dry, but the guile was so transparent, after a little explanation, that "Brer Rabbitt" decided to lie low and watch. In this same category of watching we want to put our readers. Within the next few weeks schemes will be propounded with the object of parting good money from innocent victims, and unless unequivocally endorsed by the Moving Picture News, and backed on the directorate of the concerns, by men of unblemished integrity and honesty, we trust our readers will leave such so-called educational film promoters severely alone. We will have nothing to do with wildcat schemes tending to deceive our readers. We make a careful selection of our advertisers. We have rejected many and if they do not appear in our columns "there's a reason" for it. We know we have lost money by our policy, but the interest of our readers who give us their confidence is of more value to us than a few fleeting dollars and cents. When the right kind of educational promoters, with the films, come along we will be the first to tell the people of Nickelodia who and what they are, what they can do, and how they propose to do it. In conclusion, to use a slang school days' term, "'Ware 'awks! 'Ware 'awks!"

SCENARIOS AND WRITERS

It has come to our notice that several scenarios have been submitted to a prominent director of a studio, who has kept them for a time, then returned them with "Declined with thanks" stamped thereon. There is nothing unusual in this, but—and again, but—when a few weeks pass by, and this same plot is exploited as coming from the brains of the director, with a slight variation from the original, and the film is issued, what are we to think? We say, and say it most emphatically, that director is a thief, and a thief of the deepest dye, worse, ten times over, than a pickpocket, because it is hard to catch him. We propose unless this practise stops at once and the scenario writers are given full credit for their labor (including the pay), to publish the original scenarios, with the fac-simile handwriting, date of rejection, and the after-product of this thief director, with synopsis of film. To aid us in this endeavor, if any other of our readers have complaints of like nature and will send them to us with verifications, we will endeavor to get the dismissal of such dishonest men as well as see that every manufacturer in the industry is warned against them.

THE MOTION PICTURE FROM THE STANDPOINT OF THE LECTURER

By Margaret I. MacDonald

To stand before an audience and speak of the things of which you know so well, of the scenes which are mirrored in the cells of memory, or facts, a knowledge of which has sunk deep into the understanding; to tell your story in such a way as to transmit it to the mind of the listener with as clear an outline as the original has in your own mind, is a task of gigantic proportions, inasmuch as the minds to which you are attempting to transmit are of various grades of conception, no two having exactly the same degree of alertness in grasping a point.

If you are limited to word pictures as a means of illustration, then you are obliged to select from an extensive vocabulary, words of the simplest type, of tints to suit the coloring of your story, and intelligible not only to the educated listener, but to the uneducated listener as well. In order that the lighter quality of mind shall go away feeling that it has had its pennies' worth, and has been sufficiently entertained, you are obliged to insert anecdotes with a touch of comedy, to lend a stroke of a brighter shade to the situation.

Previous to the introduction of the lantern slide, which has been later superseded by the motion picture, the lecture was looked upon as a dry discourse; a necessary evil in some cases, and in other cases something to be scrupulously avoided by those in quest of entertainment. It was a mode of entertainment quite unpopular except to the meager few who were athirst for knowledge.

To-day the lecture has become, through the use of the motion picture, a popular source, not only of education, but of amusement as well. Even in the vaudeville houses has it been tried with success. I have seen an audience held in a vaudeville house for the space of an hour, the lecturer receiving vociferous applause at the conclusion of the lecture.

The lecturer has hailed the advent of the motion picture with a great deal of satisfaction and joy, his only regret being the added expense of obtaining the necessary films for illustrating his subject, which is, however, found to be quickly covered by the increased revenue from his work. He has found the responsibility of his labor much reduced. The mental fatigue attached to the giving of the lecture is much reduced. The tension of the nerves has become relaxed with the lessening of the responsibility. His satisfaction in his work is increased through the excellence of the illustrative method employed. He feels his audience with him; naturally he is spurred on to greater efforts. There is a filling in of the corners; what may have been indistinct in his explanation, he is relieved to find standing out in bas-relief in the picture. What the eye of a normal human being sees, the brain can more readily understand, and the result of the use of the motion picture in lecturing is a mutual satisfaction to both lecturer and audience.

The motion picture is a strong incentive to the lecturer. It is a new toy that never grows old. With its use he feels the power of his work redoubled; he feels himself the educator that he is. He visits foreign lands with a new impetus to gather together scenes of educational and recreative value; he delves deeper into his science; he hugs closer to his art, culling choice bits for representation in the motion picture.

It is a great thing to feel that you really have something to give—that you can give largely. There is a proud satisfaction in knowing that you are able to give of the knowledge of which you are the fortunate possessor, not only to a passing few, but to thousands.

The things with which we come in daily contact soon become an old story to us. We are surrounded by moving picture theaters, great and small. For the small amount of ten cents we can sit comfortably and screw our imagination to a fancied transition to foreign lands, where for lack of the needful we have never been able to transfer our physical selves. Could our dead ancestors, departed from this life some twenty or thirty years ago but come to life again, what a paradise would this earth be, in contrast with that upon which their eyes had closed. They would scarcely be able to realize that this was the planet from whence they had so recently departed.

Professor Frederick Starr, of the University of Chicago, an enthusiastic supporter of the motion picture, has said: "The motion picture is making for us volumes of history and action—it is not only the greatest impulse of entertainment, but the mightiest force of instruction. We do not analyze the fact that when we read of an English wreck we at once see an English train before us, or, when we learn of a battle, that an altogether different panorama is visualized than our former erroneous impression of a hand-to-hand conflict—we are familiar with the geography of Europe—we are well acquainted with how the Frenchman dresses, in what sort of a home he lives, and from what sort of a shop he buys his meat and greens.

"We take so much for granted—we are so thoroughly spoiled by our multiple luxuries—that we do not bestow more than a passing thought upon our advantages, because the moving picture machine has an advantage—a tremendous, vital force of culture as well as amusement. An economy, not only of money, but of experiences—it brings the world to us—it delivers the universe to our theater seat."

Is not this a mighty tribute paid to this wonderful and comparatively new innovation? If the motion picture can thus stand alone in the front row of educational contrivances, it cannot, therefore, be wondered at if the lecturer looks upon it as his best friend.

AMONG THE MOVING PICTURE HOUSES ON FOURTEENTH STREET.

By Walton

THE FOURTEENTH STREET THEATER

James Wesley Rosenquest, the manager, supreme head and guide of this historic house, is not only a capable, shrewd and intensely practical theatrical and business—never forget that—man, but one who has ever a new story to tell, or a valuable suggestion to make, drawn from a long and successful career.

The other day we sat in Mr. Rosenquest's solidly practical den, the walls hung with pictures that showed the temperament of the man, the artistic side of his nature—that absolute necessity in the make-up of a manager—that is one.

He spake, I listened and his opening was one of the most delightful stories that, in an interviewing career of some twenty years, I have come across.

"The very first time I ever entered a theater was when I was some nine or ten years old and I never forgot

JAMES WESLEY ROSENQUEST

the deep impression made upon me," said Mr. Rosenquest. "It was in 1868 in the old French Opera House under the management of Grau, uncle of our friend, Maurice Grau. It was opera, and it was French, and it was 'Genevieve de Brabant.' You remember the big and the little gendarme? Well, that was my first kid experience, and it is an utterly unforgettable one."

James Wesley Rosenquest, who told that story about the old French Opera House where he went as a boy, is the owner of the present Fourteenth Street Theater, which was in those days the French Opera House. There's as fine a story as ever struck a man. It clenches the point I set out with; the reason of "Old Fourteenth's" success.

Going back in those strenuous times of the Civil War, the site was occupied by a hall used for all kinds of social festivities; but it was used for a grander and nobler purpose—a fair to help the wounded and forlorn ones of the war.

This was the grandfather of the Fourteenth Street Theater. Then afterwards the French Opera House was remodeled by the famous Charles Fechter, whose ideas as to scenery accounts for the fact that the "gridirons" in this house are ninety-two feet high, two feet higher than the Metropolitan Opera House, and so the highest in the United States. Then J. H. McVicker—who knows him not argues himself unknown—took hold; next J. H. Haverly, of Mastodon minstrel fame. In 1883 Samuel Colville, whose face hangs in the lobby, took hold, with his brother-in-law, Mr. Rosenquest, as business manager. Of the crowd of stars such as Edwin Booth, Fanny Davenport, Joseph Jefferson, J. K. Emmet, Chauncey Olcott and Andrew Mack, that appeared here, I wrote last October, nor must I forget 'twas here "The Old Homestead." "The Village Postmaster" and a dozen other world-famed plays were born.

No better example of the art instinct of Mr. Rosenquest can be found than on the walls outside his office door; here is hung a series of fine engravings including: "Dejanira Carried Off by the Centaur," engraved by the well-known Bernic from a painting by Guido Reni in the Louvre, and another of Bernic's works, "Achilles Educated by a Centaur," painted by Regnault, also in the Louvre. Then there is the world-famed "Jupiter and Europa," by Sir Benjamin West, engraved in London in 1797; also Francesco Petrarca, Torquata Tasso and Napoleon, engraved by Raphael Morghen; "Poesy," an artist's proof, 1848, of Raphael's fresco in the Vatican and a Tosci of Coreggio's fresco in Parma. A group of engravings an art lover would gaze at so long he might easily lose many of the good things on the stage. This gallery is well worth a visit; it's a gem.

I wonder how many of the thousands who pass ever notice them and yet they are more than worthy of notice. In the days when Mr. Rosenquest was manager of the Bijou Theater on Broadway, as well as the Fourteenth Street, the wide foyer of the former called for decoration, so he, aided, abetted, and I have not the slightest doubt, gently commanded by his sister, Mrs. Colville, set to work to gather engravings fit for the purpose. Those in the present Fourteenth Street Theater are part of the collection.

This house is naturally of great interest to those who love Independent moving pictures because every day the first releases are shown and projected by one of the best operators in New York City, Tony Pierson. The new daylight curtain not only improves the pictures, giving a depth impossible before, but it enables pictures to be shown in a fully lighted house and so gives a body blow to the puritanic fanatics who, out of their own inner consciousness, evolve weird and strange stories of dark houses. Everyone who goes to a darkened house is not a blackguard, any more than everyone who goes to church is a saint. I guess the proportion is about equal.

The value of the music in such a house is beyond compare. Harry Lawrence, lord of the piano at eventide, is master of the situation, whilst Gus Lang, who plays in the day, is a wonder to me, as he instantly catches the changes in the pictures and "plays" them.

Of the success of the house no word need be said beyond pointing to the crowds day in and day out, patiently waiting for a chance to get in.

It must not be forgotten that a new "Fourteenth Street" has sprung up in Brooklyn in the Olympic—the old Hyde and Behman house. Here my good friend, Bert Rosenquest, snappy, vigorous, all-over-the-place-at-once and yet as courteous as ever, is packing that house and making it a duplicate of the New York house, a worthy representative of his father—what could be better!

CHATS WITH PEOPLE WELL KNOWN IN MOVING PICTUREDOM

By Walton

William F. Schork

William F. Schork, manager of the Crystal Hall on Fourteenth street, is what he looks—a mighty good fellow to talk with and a business man that knows his business. I meekly sat beside his desk, flanked by a giant safe; bills and coin to the right of me, bills and coin in front of me volleyed whilst a regiment of messengers thundered; success written all over the place. Outside I ran the blockade of a selection of all conceivable forms of music, shot downstairs, pulled up short in front of some ducks that invited me to shoot them; dived round a dial that invited me to hit it—for a consideration, and, breathless with much endeavor, reached the fair haven where Friend Schork sat, surrounded with such an embarass de richesse (Uncle Sam's Vintage) as made a poor newspaper man squirm and turn pale.

Mr. Schork has been with the Automatic Vaudeville Company over seven years, and if I am any judge of mine friend on the upper floor who guides and rules therein, the man who lasts the mystic seven years not only knows his business, but knows it in the A1 class. Outside, strange music tinkled and clanged; inside, William F. Schork, perfectly placid, talked to me, and gave some score of orders. He's a man that can give a dozen orders and still go on courteously with his visitor—I guess that some moons ago as we chatted at the top of the stairs, where the crystal waters flow he told me so much I didn't know—that I, with terrible terror for my ruler in the office simply select.

WILLIAM F. SCHORK

Crystal Hall opened seven years ago as a penny arcade, but prides itself upon being The First Straight Moving Picture Show on Fourteenth Street setting out with the Johnstown Flood. The show runs from 8 a. m. till 11 p. m., and, as I personally know, has audiences and big ones, all day; three Independent reels and an illustrated song is the show.

Mr. Schork says he believes in drama because the people demand it, and he features all dramas; always giving comedy as a closer. Like all managers, he believes in sending an audience away in a good humor.

Whilst such reels were not positively named, I feel certain that as to drama I might quote: Reliance, "Tangled Lines"; Thanhouser, "Norwood Necklace," and Bison, "Indian Trapper's Prize," whilst Tweedledum gives the fun.

Mr. Schork spoke emphatically upon a point that must come more to the front. He said Imp's "Fruit and Flowers" was an everlasting scream, and had no hesitation in repeating and repeating. I hugged myself because I've never seen that a first run was the thing; moreover, I remembered Shakespeare, Moliere and Sophocles have had a few repeats.

The ever-changing audience of such a house as this ought to give value to the manager's opinions, and Mr. Schork's are: Moving pictures draw, draw, draw; a reel that hits is never old, and so long as folk want it they shall have it. The moving picture man talking the same talk as the vaudeville and "legit" man and—don't you forget it—for the same reason.

H. Reinecker is the capable and courteous assistant manager, who is ever to be found amidst the strains of music on the lower floor. A man who knows what's what and shows it. The songs are rendered by Miss Tucker, whose sweet voice is so well known on Fourteenth street.

In conclusion, I wish to give it as my own emphatic opinion that William F. Schork is in charge of a house that demands peculiar ability to deal with ever-changing audiences, and this he has shown, and does show, he is eminently fitted to cope with.

OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT

The Latest from London

The New Agency Film Co., the agents for Ambrosio on this side, are moving on April 1 to commodious premises at 81-83 Shaftesbury Avenue W. There will be considerably greater accommodation for show purposes than obtained in this company's old home in Sherwood St., Piccadilly, W.

* * *

It is only three years ago since the first successful attempt to transmit ordinary photographs by telegraph was made, and the results, imperfect as they were, excited the liveliest interest among all who saw them. Great improvements have since been made in the process adopted, but the newest development is sending films by wire, and an experimental trial is to be made with the Coronation pictures. If the experiment proves successful, the films depicting the principal scenes in the great ceremony will be reproduced in Paris practically as soon as the originals are developed in London, but in order to obviate any chance of failure, other films will be taken over by the afternoon boat, and developed en route.

* * *

I notice that Mr. Jack Binns, the English "wireless" operator, who rose to fame by his action on occasion of disaster to the liner Republic in January, 1909, has been awarded £2,500 damages against the Vitagraph Company for publicly exhibiting a film representing him sending his famous C. Q. D. message from the wrecked liner. The pictures were shown nearly two years ago. As you may have noticed, Binns brought an action for £5,000 damages in the New York State Supreme Court, but the verdict was given against him on the ground that the fame which he achieved was "merely of a temporary nature." and that it had "decreased so much through lapse of time" that the action of the film company caused him no material damage. However Mr. Binns was not satisfied and went to the Court of Appeals, where the case was reconstructed and a new trial was ordered.

* * *

I am informed that four of the leading London film houses, viz., Barker's, Hepworth, Clarendon, and Cricks & Martin have combined to bring, by the aid of two travelers who will constantly traverse the length and breadth of the United Kingdom, the productions of their houses before the notice of exhibitors. By this means it is hoped to bring the all-British product before showmen in a more convincing manner; to stimulate them to insist on their hiring houses supplying films representative of the British industry.

Mr. Oliver G. Pike, whose investigations into and pictures of the lives of wild birds in their native haunts have added new and valuable chapters both to natural history and photography, was the lecturer at the Leeds Institute last week, when he provided a crowded audience with new wonders of a beautiful and surprising camera. From ordinary snapshots to cinematograph pictures of birds at home, is about as big a step as from stuffed birds to living ones; but Mr. Pike, who was the pioneer with the bioscope in birdland, has made another remarkable advance upon his former work by giving us, for the first time, bioscope pictures of bird life in their natural colors and amidst all their natural surroundings.

* * *

London is to have open air cinematograph shows in the summer. Although this form of outdoor exhibition is new to us, I believe it has met with great success on your side. Arrangements have been made by Mr. Glück, who is bringing the idea to London, to show motion pictures nightly during the summer months on the grounds of the Fulham & Clapton Orient Football Clubs, as well as at grounds in Kilburn (northwest London) and at some of the most popular seaside resorts.

* * * * *

No copies of the great Grand National film are being supplied for exhibition in London. Mr. Barker has done even better with the subject this year than last, the demand greatly exceeding his expectations.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, April 12.—Strike up the band! Sound the glad tidings! Aye, shout it from the housetops, for verily, brethren, great has been our victory! Motion pictures have at last come into their own. They are a necessity to health and comfort. Sure, they are. Why, there can be doubt no longer on this subject, for a jury of twelve good and true men so decided here this week, and one of the most important cases ever affecting Sunday shows was won by the managers.

In my last week's letter I detailed at considerable length the fact that Harry Hale and Henry Gillen, proprietor and operator, respectively, of the Lyric, had been on trial, charged with laboring on Sunday by showing motion pictures, and stated then that the defense of these gentlemen was that the same were a necessity for the comfort and health of their patrons. The first trial resulted in a "hung jury," and the case had to be argued all over again. Prosecuting Attorney Wood was unable to be present at the second hearing, as he was busy with a murder trial in circuit court, but his son, Scott Wood, who is assistant to the venerable official, took charge of the state's case, and what he, too, said on the question of pictures being necessary for the comfort of visitors here is honestly not fit for publication. His remarks were so vulgar that L. E. Sawyer, who represented Mr. Hale and Mr. Gillen, stated that it was only for the respect he had for his clients that he remained in the court room, and he criticised Justice Alford for permitting such remarks to be made in his court without imposing a heavy fine for contempt.

Attorney Sawyer again took up the question before the new jury, and, in the vernacular of the street, "he burned 'em up." Talk about oratory! Why, gentlemen, he had Patrick Henry looking like a fish peddler. There was simply nothing to it. He presented the case in a manner most convincing, and when Scott Wood in his argument sprung the rotten remark first alluded to, which out of respect for the ladies who read "the Moving Picture News," enhanced by the further fact that I know Mr. Saunders would "can" me for submitting copy of that nature, I dare not repeat, and because the postal laws would jail me for sending it through the mails if they ever got wise, the jury concluded that, between the argument presented by the state and that advanced in the refined, well chosen diction of the defendant's counsel, that the said defendants were not guilty and rendered a verdict of this nature.

This verdict sort of put a crimp in the charges made by Judge Wood against Dick Baird of the Orpheum; E. Scheff of the Lyceum, and J. W. Morrison of the Scenic, and since that time no effort has been made to bring these cases to trial. It was a great victory for the managers in Hot Springs, and was also an excellent criterion regarding the manner in which the public regards motion pictures. There can be no doubt that public sentiment favors the picture shown on Sunday, and this sentiment is due to discrimination as much as anything else, for the prosecuting attorney has made no effort to arrest others who violate in an even more flagrant manner the Sunday law. Everything else is wide open. There are clairvoyants and fortune tellers doing business in apartments and in tents, and they are never molested. Gambling is on in full swing. Livery stables do a great Sunday business. Book stores are open. One can get their fill of ice cream and other delicacies, but the motion picture houses were made the "goat" of this ribald crusade, with the result that the jurors who tried this game must have reached the conclusion that the city has had enough of this alleged reformation and declared those arrested not guilty.

Since my last letter a great change has taken place in the office of sheriff, and the sheriff, my friends, has much to do with carrying out the orders of Judge Wood regarding the motion picture houses. The grand jury handed down two indictments against Sheriff Sid Houpt for the technical escape of two prisoners charged with the foulest murder that was ever committed in Arkansas. These prisoners, former deputy sheriffs under Sheriff Houpt, did not actually escape, but Sheriff Houpt permitted them to enjoy such great liberty that they could have "beat it" had they so desired. When the indictments were handed down Circuit Judge Calvin T. Cotham immediately removed Sheriff Houpt from office and appointed Charles C. Webb, a well known business man, sheriff of this dear county of Garland. The indictments were expected, but Webb's appointment was a great surprise. However, the new sheriff is a most popular man. He has taken a great part in the movement to bring about a cleaner condition in the city's affairs, and while he has fought with the reform element, he is not a radical reformer, thank God, but a most conservative man. He likes motion pictures, and he visits the houses on Sunday. He believes that they should be permitted to run Sunday; also he is in favor of Sunday baseball. He has not outlined any definite policy regarding action to be taken by him, and the past Sunday went by without any undue excitement. Sheriff Webb did not "raid" the theatres. He is said to have strolled down Central avenue in company with Judge Wood, noted they were open, but no arrests were made, all of which is a good sign, for, honest Injun, we sure have had enough of this Sunday crusade business, and the excitement that followed each and every arrest made heretofore by Judge Wood did more to crimp the peace and quiet of the Sabbath and puncture the respect for that holy day than anything the moving picture managers combined have done since the first picture was thrown on a curtain years ago.

Manager Morrison of the Scenic informs me that he has closed negotiations with parties having the moving pictures of "Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch," and that the same will be seen in this theatre in the very near future. I understand that these pictures are most interesting, and Manager Morrison can surely bank on banner business, for if it is one kind of picture that always receives rapt attention it is the wild western variety.

Met two young men the past week who are here from Alaska. And they actually desire to embark in the show business. They have their eyes on the Orpheum and the other evening I saw one of them standing in front of that house with an indicator in his hand. Every time any one bought a ticket the indicator recorded the sale, and by this means they are getting a line on the business the house does. They have brought with them some of the gold that they accumulated in the far north, too, and if they haven't also carried a little of the cold of that territory and allowed the same to rest around their feet, a sale will likely take place very shortly.

I really believe that if managers would pay more for their pictures in this town that business would be even better than what it is and as summer is fast approaching and the "season" is about over a decrease in receipts is sure to follow. Good, new pictures, however, will do much to keep business up to the standard. The competition, though, is great here, and the different houses are repeating every day on each other. The only way this can be avoided is by some one getting in a line of reels never before seen here, and it don't have to be "first run," either. The managers of this resort are not afflicted with "first runitis," with all due deference to the "Film Index," and about the best we get is from three weeks to commercial "junk." Some of the pictures I have seen here the past week were the limit, owing to the "rain" in them, and the film exchange in Texas is surely due for a reprimand for sending material of this nature out, for it hurts them as much as it does the house in which they appear, considering the fact that the statement is made where the reels come from.

Some of the pictures, both Trust and Independent, were most interesting, and others were full of absurdities. For scenic effects and general worth the Ambrosio reel, "A Prisoner of Caucasus," was immense and much enjoyed. Now, keep a line on when these films were released and you can get an idea of the class of pictures we get here. The Ambrosio reel was put out March 8. "Hospital for Small Animals," Eclair make, released February 20, was also enjoyed, and "Little Mary" came trooping merrily forth in "Her Darkest Hour" after they had sent her out of the factory February 13. I never tire of watching anything this little lady does. To me she is "IT." "Army Maneuvers in Cuba" and "The Dynamiters," out March 2, pleased. In fact, while the former of these two was a little shot up, I enjoyed it as much as the Melies reel, showing the "Revolution in Mexico," and if ever managers were stung on a "special" they got caught on this one from Melies. The people here expected to see a real Mexican war picture, and they got in place of this a reel showing the American soldiers in camp, on the march and regular army life. This could have been taken at any encampment, but bless your heart, it was a "special," and they produced accordingly. "In the Commissioned Ranks," born March 8, was also here and made a big hit. Congratulations, Nestor, for we liked it very much. Also saw the Yankee reel detailing the adventures of "Nell Pierce, Detective." This is the first Yankee I have seen since I followed with rapt interest the gentleman who swam from the Battery to the South Sea Islands, which was here last summer, and I must say that "Nell" has Sherlock Holmes, Nick Carter, Chick, Patsy and Scotland Yard looking like rank outsiders. Oh, you Nell! You sure are some sleuth, but I mildly opine that if you had really gone forth as you did in this reel that it would not have been long ere some one placed you in a padded cell. This reel first saw the light of day several months ago.

